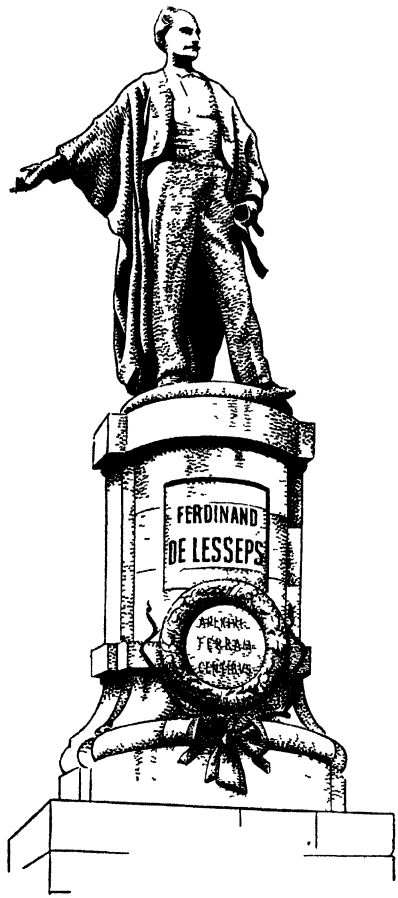
East of Suez

East of Suez! A phrase that quickens the imaginative pulse, evoking images of a strange, exciting world — the mysterious Orient, the exotic East of Stevenson, Kipling's India Life would be dull, indeed, without fiction, and Kipling and Stevenson will always find a welcome from the armchair traveller, but for those concerned with the sterner stuff of eastern commerce, information of a more realistic nature is required This explains why so many businessmen and traders consult the National Bank of India for accurate and dependable information on conditions in the East Through their long-standing associations the National Bank of India have established an unrivalled knowledge of the many problems peculiar to eastern trading, and can supply up-to-date information on the prevailing conditions and trends in your particular market



The statue at Port Said of Ferdinand de Lesseps, diplomat and engineer, who was responsible for the cutting of the Suez Canal

A comprehensive service is available at the Bank's branches in

The glorious wines of South Africa

Quite recently — within less than a dozen years — connoisseurs and admirers of good wine rediscovered something that had long lain dormant, the potentiality of the Union of South Africa for fine Viticulture. The fine wines and brandies specially selected and matured for the British market by the Ko-operatieve Wijnbouwers Vereniging and shipped by the South African Wine Farmers Association (London) Ltd. have a higher reputation and are more eagerly in demand than ever before

Owing to war's aftermath these specially selected wines were temporarily in short supply, but South African sherries, brandies, vermouths and certain types of table wines of real merit are now readily available to wine lovers
