THE BRITISH NATIONAL BIBLIOGRAPHY

ANNUAL VOLUME

1950

The British National Bibliography is also published weekly, giving in subject and author order the new publications of the week with a full index of authors, titles and subjects for the month in the last issue of each month. Cumulations are published every three, six, nine and twelve months, providing an up-to-date reference service for British books.

The value of this publication lies in its authority, in the full and accurate description of each book, prepared by qualified bibliographers from actual copies of the books and with the resources of the British Museum at their disposal, and in the detailed subject indexing which not only enables the literature of a subject to be examined as a whole, but also facilitates the finding of books on the most specific subjects.

To obtain maximum usefulness, the hints for tracing information which appear on page ix should be read.

To find details of a book of which the author, title, editor or series is known consult the Author Index which begins on page 547.

To find details of books about a subject consult the Subject Index which begins on page 663. The decimal reference numbers given there against the name of the subject should then be sought in the main Classified Section.

Even though you may be familiar with the arrangement of the Classified Section, it is always advisable to consult the Subject Index first.

PREFACE

This volume of the British National Bibliography has been compiled from the entries which appeared in the Weekly Lists published during 1950. Additional information in regard to authors' names obtained since the original publication of the entries has been included. Errors have also been corrected and an alphabetical index of subjects, not included in the original plan, has been added.

Material Listed in this Bibliography

The entries in this bibliography have been compiled from copies of the books deposited during 1950 at the Copyright Office of the British Museum. In spite of the great quantity of literature which comes from the British presses and the comparatively small staff which faced the task of recording it in the early stages, everything has been included except:

(a) Novelettes costing less than 1s.
(b) Periodicals (except that the first issue of a new periodical and the first issue of a periodical under a new title have been included).
(c) The less significant Government publications.
(d) Musical scores.
(e) Maps.

During the year criticism was made of the policy of excluding some Government publications; it was argued that either all should have been excluded or none. It is true that British Government publications are adequately recorded as such in the Stationery Office's daily and other lists and by means of the card catalogue service introduced by that Office in January 1950. For this reason it did not seem necessary to repeat them all in this bibliography. On the other hand, two factors made it desirable to include Government publications of a more general appeal and particularly those which made an obvious contribution to any subject; in the first place, many general libraries wished to be informed of such Government publications and, in the second place, as the British National Bibliography, through its annual volumes, was intended to provide the much-needed subject approach to British publications, the complete omission of Government publications would have left many subjects inadequately represented. It is felt, therefore, that, in the circumstances, the compromise has proved valuable.

Nature of the Bibliography

This bibliography is arranged on the principle of the classified catalogue, that is to say, the entries for subjects are arranged systematically. The basis of this systematic arrangement is the Dewey Decimal Classification. The systematic arrangement, or Classified Section, is only a part, though the principal part, of the complete bibliography; the Author Index and the Subject Index are indispensable. The Classified Section resembles a series of subject bibliographies in which the most common aspects of a subject are to be found displayed about the same code number. The Subject Index is the dictionary which gives the code number (or class number) for each subject. All subjects, however, may have many aspects and it is inevitable that some of these aspects will themselves form a subject of common interest. For example, the subject Birds will be found at the number 598.2 and at this part of the Classified Section there occur entries for books on the habits of birds, the geographical distribution of birds, and studies of individual birds. They are all matters concerned with the natural history of birds and form part of the larger study zoology, the number for which is appropriately 590. Birds, however, may be shot for sport, bred for table or eggs, kept in cages as pets, encouraged or destroyed by farmers, and used as inspiration for works of art. In these cases the bird is not a subject of natural history and entries for books about any of these aspects will not occur at the number 598.2. Nevertheless, no study of the subject birds could be complete which ignored them. It is an important function of the Subject Index to gather at the name of the subject all those aspects which are otherwise distributed throughout the Classified Section. For example, at the word Birds in the subject index the following entries will be found:

Birds	598.2
Birds: Domestic pets	636.6
Birds: Hunting	799.24

Thus it is always advisable, even when the systematic arrangement of the Classified Section is known, to consult the Subject Index if it is wished to exhaust the possible contributions to the subject which may be listed in this bibliography.

The Classified Section and Subject Index are therefore designed to reveal what books are available on a subject, and in the Classified Section the fullest possible description of a book is given so that its suitability for a specific subject need may be assessed. Some abbreviations and conventions have had to be used in describing books and these are explained in the section Hints for tracing information on page ix.

The Author Index is designed to assist in the tracing of books of which the author, editor, compiler, translator, sponsor, title or series is already known, and to reveal all the works of an author, including works which he has written under other names. In the Author Index, therefore, books are entered under their authors, titles, editors, series, etc., in one alphabetical sequence, but details of each book are given only in the author entry. The instructions at the beginning of the Author Index on page 547 should be read so that the maximum use may be made of it.

Thus this bibliography provides for every approach to the literature published in this country during 1950. The service is continued and kept up to date in the Weekly Classified Lists and the Quarterly Cumulations.

Acknowledgments

Much help was received during the year from the British Museum and it is wished particularly to acknowledge the assistance of its staff which has contributed in no small measure to the bibliographical accuracy to which this publication may lay claim.

The task of building up a new organisation for the production and publication of a national bibliography was not without its difficulties. The first year was inevitably partly experimental, not only for the professional staff but also for the printers. A dispute in the printing trade, a paper shortage and an unprecedented rise in the cost of paper and print all severely tried our resources during the first twelve months. That they were overcome with little inconvenience to subscribers and with no loss in professional efficiency is due to the spirit of the staff of the British National Bibliography and to the ready co-operation of our printers. It is inevitable that the members of a staff remain anonymous though they may be even more responsible than the principal editor himself for the continued accuracy and adequacy of a publication of this character. The many appreciative criticisms which have been made both in the professional press and in personal correspondence concerning the value of the British National Bibliography, and such new virtues which may be in the improved services for 1951, are due to every member of the staff.

HINTS FOR TRACING INFORMATION

This bibliography is in three sections: in the first, or Classified Section, the entries are arranged according to the Dewey Decimal System of subject classification; in the second, or Author Index (which begins on page 547) and in the third, or Subject Index (which begins on page 663) the entries are arranged alphabetically. The fullest information about a book is given in the Classified Section, including the author's name, the full title, the number of pages, the kind of illustrations, the size and the series, as well as the edition, publisher, price and date of publication. In addition, in all cases where it has seemed necessary, notes of previous editions of scientific and technical works, of first editions of literary works and of original editions of translations, and explanatory notes of contents and subject matter have been given. A shorter entry is given in the Author Index under the name of the author, including a short title, edition, publisher and price as well as the name of editor or translator, if there is one.

Author

When the author of a book is known, look under his name in the Author Index. The information given here will be adequate for most purposes. If, on the other hand, the fullest information about a book is required, turn to the entry in the Classified Section. This is easily found from the reference number at the end of the author entry. This reference number has two parts. The first is the part to be noted and is read as a decimal number. Thus, for example, the number 621 will be found after the number 598.2 and before the number 621.384. A very short acquaintance will make the reference numbers simple to follow. The second part of the reference number—the number in round brackets in italics beginning (50-)—is the book's serial number. Serial numbers identify every publication recorded in the British National Bibliography.

In the case of compilations of works by several authors, the entry in the Author Index may be found under the editor or compiler. Sometimes entries are made under the names of countries and cities which are considered to be the authors of their official publications. Anonymous works, periodicals and year books are entered under the first word of the title which is not an article. In any case reference entries are made under any names by which a work may be sought directing to the name chosen as the heading.

Title, Series, Editors and Translators

Entries are made in the Author Index under the titles of all works unless the subject of the work is clear from the title, so that if you do not know the author of a work it can be found by looking up its title in the Author Index or its subject in the Subject Index.

If you do not know the author or the title or the subject it may still be possible to trace the work if the name of its editor or translator or series is known. Full instructions for making the maximum use of the Author Index are given at the beginning of the Author Index on page 547.

Subject

One of the most important aspects of this bibliography is its exhaustive index to the subject matter of books. The Classified Section itself displays the works on a subject in such a way that the whole field of literature on that subject can be easily perused. The Subject Index lists all the subjects in alphabetical order showing by means of the decimal reference number where in the Classified Section books on the subject are listed. For example, in the Subject Index under the word Building is given a full list of the places in the Classified Section where books in any way concerned with building may be found, thus:

Building	690
Building——Geometry for	513 : 690
Building——Hoisting apparatus for	621.86 : 690
Building——Mathematics for	510 : 690
Building——Surveying for	526.9 : 690
Building: Trades: Economics	338.4769
Building: Trades: Labour supply	331.112 : 690
Building: Trades: Management	658.99
Building: Trades: Wages	331.289
Building societies——Valuation for	335.332 : 334.1
Building societies: Economics	334.1
Buildings: Farms: Agriculture	631.2
Buildings: Hygiene	613.5
Buildings: Maintenance: Domestic economy	647.96

If you turn to the Classified Section at the number 690 (which is the decimal reference number given against the first entry word Building) you will find there a list of books dealing with the science of building, including books on building materials, plans and specifications, masonry, bricklaying, plastering, carpentry, plumbing, heating, ventilating, painting and glazing.

Explanation of abbreviations

In order that the fullest description of each book may be given concisely in the Classified Section certain abbreviations and conventions have been used. The chief of these are given below and it will be found that, by means of them, a very precise picture of a work can be formulated, and its suitability to a special need satisfactorily assessed.

Author

The name of the author, which appears at the head of each entry, is not repeated after the title of the work. (In exceptional cases where it differs seriously from the name at the head it is repeated.)

Publisher and Place of Publication

The place of publication is not given when it is only London. When it is any other place it is given before the name of the publisher, thus:

Analgesia for normal childbirth. Oxford, Blackwell.

Where there are two publishers they are shown thus:

The College Board: its first fifty years. New York, Columbia U.P.; London, Oxford U.P.

Date of Publication

Every effort has been made to ascertain the exact month and year of publication of a work, and when ascertained they are shown thus:

Mar 1950

Where the precise date of publication has not been ascertained, the following conventions are used:

Mar [1950] the month and year of publication have been supplied by the publisher but the year does not appear in the imprint of the book itself.

[^{d}Mar] 1950 the month of publication has not been supplied by the publisher but the year of publication appears in the imprint of the book itself. [^{d}Mar] means deposited at the British Museum in March.

Where the actual date of publication differs from the date given in the imprint this is indicated in a specia note.

Collation

The collation is that part of the entry which describes the physical make-up of the book and appears at the end of the entry. The abbreviations used are:

v. . .	volumes.
p. . .	pages. The preliminary pages, if they are separately numbered, are shown separately. For example, vii,222p. means seven preliminary pages numbered with roman numerals and two hundred and twenty-two pages of text.
front.	frontispiece.
front.(port.)	frontispiece which is a portrait.
illus.	illustrations in the text.
col.illus.	coloured illustrations in the text.
plates	illustrations independent of the text and generally on art paper.
facsims.	facsimile reproductions.
diagrs.	diagrams.
bibliog.	list of books or references used by the author or recommended by him for further study.
cm. . .	centimetres—used to give the height of a book.
Sd. . .	sewed, i.e. paper covers.
Pb. . .	paper boards.
Lp. . .	limp covers.

Where no indication is given as to the kind of binding it is presumed to be cloth boards.

For example, the following entry:

720.9
Waterhouse, Percy Leslie
The story of architecture; revised by R. A. Cordingley. 3rd ed. Batsford, 10/6. Aug 1950. xii,228p. col.front., illus., plates, plans, diagrs., bibliog. 19cm. (British art and building series) (50-8156)
Previous ed. 1924.

means:

The story of architecture, by Percy Leslie Waterhouse; revised by R. A. Cordingley. The third edition was published by Batsford at 10/6 in August, 1950. It has 12 preliminary pages and 228 pages of text. It has a coloured frontispiece, illustrations in the text, plates on art paper, plans, diagrams and a list of books for further study. It is 19cm high, that is, crown 8vo, and is one of Batsford's British art and building series. Its serial number in the British National Bibliography is 50-8156. The previous edition of this work was published in 1924.
