b. In modern use, forming the second element in the name of a group of houses in a town or city, now or formerly possessing some of the characters (positive or negative) of a square, chiefly that of not being properly a street
Often used in the name of a small set more or less built around and lying aside from a street or thoroughfare or of a short cul de sac or byway turning out of a main thoroughfare also more vaguely, given to a short row or terrace of houses which originally stood by themselves on a suburban road being in fact a ready denomination for any aggregation of houses which cannot be more particularly classed.
Employed in 16th c. to render F. plˆce and its Italian, Spanish, and German cognates in referˆence to foreign towns whence introduced in English towns; but in some cases the name 'Place' has arisen out of sense 4, b the site being that of a noble man's or bishop's town residence, which bore the name, e.g. Ely Place in London.

There is no similarity of aspect or nature between the plane-tree and the plantain (a fact noted already by D Acosta in 1590), so that no reason appears for a transfer of the name from the former to the latter It has therefore been suggested that in this sense plátano was a corruption of some native name And, in fact, the plantain or banana appears in Ant Brit s Galibi Dictionary of 1665, and again in that of 1763, as palatana, in Raymond Breton s Carib Dict of 1665 as ' balitana, grosses bananes ', and in the Arawak and poriatan Now there appears to be no material for determining whether these are native words, or merely corruptions of the Spanish The Tupi name of the fruit is pacoba

1 A tree-like tropical herbaceous plant (Musa paradisiaca) closely allied to the Banana (M sapientum), having immense undivided oblong leaves, and bearing its fruit, for which it is extensively cultivated in long densely-clustered spikes.

Musa paradisiaca and M sapientum (the Banana) if really distinct species are very closely allied, and some of their numerous varieties are scarcely distinguishable The names plantain and banana are also imperfectly differentiated In the West Indies, Western Afri a, etc, Musa is applied to the forms with a purple spotted stem and a smaller and more delicate fruit, which is eaten raw while the name plantain is given to those with larger and coarser fruit, which is cooked as a vegetable; but in India this usage is reversed, plantain being the general name see YULE & BURNELL Hobson. In trends, banana is the general name for both so bananier a banana or plantain tree

Plasson (plæ sŏn) Biol [a Ger plasson (Haeckel, a. Gr πλασσων, -ον, pres. pple of πλάσσειν to mould, form] Name for the homogeneous protoplasm of hypothetical primitive organisms, not yet differentiated into nucleus and general cell substance, or for that of non nucleated cells or cytodes

1879 tr Haeckel's Evol Man I viii 182 The vital activities of each cell form a sum of individual processes, which depend reciprocally on movements of the smallest life particles, the molecules of the living substance. If we call this active substance the Plasson and the molecules the Plastidules, we may say that the individual physiological character of each cell depends on the molecular movement of its plastidules. 1905 MINCHIN tr Haeckel's Wond of Life 169 On the first view, which I hold, the plasm, or living matter of the earliest organisms on the earth was a homogeneous plasson or archiplasm—that is to say, a plasm organised that was not yet differentiated into outer cytoplasm and inner cytoplasm

Hence Plasso nity (humorous, after paternity, etc), the quality of being 'plasson'

1882 CO 13 Bi g n (1884) 13 The original arch amœba is as much of a mystery as ever; we know not whether came from how he got there or in what the essence of his plasmonity subsists

The primary senses under each of the following branches were already in OE, and the order of their development is more or less inferential, but all the uses of 'play are seen to arise naturally from oneself, into the natural 'to exercise, bestir, or busily occupy oneself, the line of development having been here determined by the recreative or divertive purpose of the exercise. In the names 'play', the sense of exercise or busy occupation disappears and the word (sense 15; cf. PLAY sb 13) comes to mean to cease work, to be idle. The same notion, developed in quite a different line, accounts for the continental senses of plegen, pflegen, 'to have care of take kindly charge of, cultivate and 'to be in the practice or habit of', notions which evidently imply occupying oneself busily about a thing or person, and habitually exercising oneself in an action.]

†6 intr To be pleased, to like; to have the will or desire, to have the humour, to think proper. (In sense, exactly = the passive in 4, 4 b)

The history of this inverted use of please (observed first in Scottish writers) is obscure. But exactly the same change took place in the 14th c. in the use of the synonymous verb LIKE: where the impersonal 'it liked him him liked' became 'he liked c 1430 It may therefore be assumed that please was similarly developed into 'he pleased' = he pleases (c 1440 in 3 c) Cf also Malory's 'me aught' in alliterative Morte Arthure; 'me aughte' with Wyclif's 'I awite, later 'I ought' in the impersonal use. Possible instances in case of please is that the sense was already logically expressed by the passive to be pleased (sense 4) and that the new idiom was therefore not needed. So I piped with merry cheer. 'Piper, pipe that song again;' So I piped: he wept to hear. 'Drop thy pipe, thy happy pipe, Sing thy songs of happy cheer!' So I sung the same again, While he wept with joy to hear. 'Piper, sit thee down and write In a book, that all may read.' So he vanish'd from my sight. And I pluck'd a hollow reed, And I made a rural pen, And I stain'd the water clear, And I wrote my happy songs Every child may joy to hear. 1793 — Songs Exper 1 Hear the voice of the Bard! The starry floor, The watry shore, Is given thee till the break of day. 1794 — Songs Exper 1 Tyger! Tyger! burning bright In the forests of the night, What immortal hand or eye Could frame thy fearful symmetry? In what distant deeps or skies Burnt the fire of thine eyes? On what wings dare he aspire? What the hand dare seize the fire? And what shoulder, & what art, Could twist the sinews of thy heart? And when thy heart began to beat, What dread hand? & what dread feet? What the hammer? what the chain? In what furnace was thy brain? What the anvil? what dread grasp Dare its deadly terrors clasp! When the stars threw down their spears And water'd heaven with their tears: Did he smile his work to see? Did he who made the Lamb make thee? Tyger! Tyger! burning bright In the forests of the night, What immortal hand or eye Dare frame thy fearful symmetry! 1798 — Songs Exper 1 Little Lamb who made thee Dost thou know who made thee Gave thee life & bid thee feed. Little Lamb who made thee Dost thou know who made thee Little Lamb I'll tell thee, Little Lamb I'll tell thee! He is called by thy name, For he calls himself a Lamb: He is meek & he is mild, He became a little child: I a child & thou a lamb, We are called by his name. Little Lamb God bless thee. Little Lamb God bless thee. 1798 — Songs Exper 1 Nurse's Song When the voices of children are heard on the green And laughing is heard on the hill, My heart is at rest within my breast And everything else is still. 'Then come home my children the sun is gone down And the dews of night arise Come come leave off play and let us away Till the morning appears in the skies.' 'No no let us play for it is yet day And we cannot go to sleep Besides in the sky the little birds fly And the hills are all cover'd with sheep.' 'Well well go & play till the light fades away And then go home to bed.' The little ones leaped & shouted & laugh'd And all the hills ecchoed. 1798 — Songs Exper 1 Infant Joy I have no name I am but two days old. What shall I call thee? I happy am Joy is my name. Sweet joy befall thee! Pretty joy! Sweet joy but two days old. Sweet joy I call thee: Thou dost smile I sing the while Sweet joy befall thee. 1798 — Songs Exper 1 A Dream Once a dream did weave a shade O'er my angel-guarded bed, That an Emmet lost its way Where on grass I methought did play. Troubled wilderd and folorn Dark benighted travel-worn Over many a tangled spray All heart-broke I heard her say: 'O my children! do they cry Do they hear their father sigh Now they look abroad to see Now return and weep for me.' Pitying I dropped a tear But I saw a glow-worm near Who replied What wailing wight Calls the watchful babes by night? I bid them hush & horn & weep Your children are safe asleep. Well they eyed my flaming dress Raind influence & their happiness And they shall smile in desart wild While their comforter hovers mild Then close your eyes & drop your head And think it is your own bed And make your children rest secure Thus said I & uttered my lure Which they quickly answered all And slept in spite of all their fall And when she found her children dear Safely settled round me here She sought me out with thankful voice And rejoiced that I had no choice 1798 — Songs Exper 1 Holy Thursday 'Twas on a Holy Thursday their innocent faces clean The children walking two & two in red & blue & green Grey-headed beadles walkd before with wands as white as snow Till into the high dome of Paul's they like Thames waters flow O what a multitude they seemd these flowers of London town Seated in companies they sit with radiance all their own The hum of multitudes was there but multitudes of lambs Thousands of little boys & girls raising their innocent hands Now like a mighty wind they raise to heaven the voice of song Or like harmonious thunderings the seats of heaven among Beneath them sit the aged men wise guardians of the poor Then cherish pity lest you drive an angel from your door 1798 — Songs Exper 1 Night Thro the sky the moon doth creep Her light doth shine on Thames deep All the fishes are asleep All but Mercy & Pity they Walk abroad in the night & day Pity would be no more If we did not make somebody poor And Mercy no more could be If all were as happy as we And mutual fear brings peace Till the selfish loves increase Then Cursed be the social bands And Holy Thursday be the last day

1. Hist. The name used in the northern and eastern counties of England, after the Norman Conquest, for the unit of assessment of land, based upon the area capable of being tilled by one plough team of eight oxen in the year corresponding to the Hide of the south and south-west (with which it was often equated), and, like it, embracing originally the meadow and pasture-land, and other necessary appurtenances of the holding.

In Domesday Bk and other records in Latin, this unit is expressed by carrucata (=AF carue, ONF carwe, F charrée, Cahucate) a derivative of carruca plough, while the hide is rendered hida It is not possible to say whether plough land was a translation of carrucata or the con verse: but we have no instance of the word before the end of the 13th c, and plo ɣh itself appears first in the 12th The plough land was the unit in which the carrucata was the unit of assessment are precisely those in which Danish influence prevailed; favours the theory that the plough land was of Norse origin The Hide and plough land are difficult to distinguish meant an acre, the normal area ploughed in one day The extent of the normal plough land like that of the hide, is usually given as 120 acres, but there are numerous instances it fell short of or exceeded this; the variations being prob due to attempts to make the areal plough lands correspond with the tradition assessment of the manors to the inci dence or exclusion of the appurtenances and fallow land, and to local differences in the size of the acre

The plough land was divided into 8 ox gangs as against the 4 yard lands or virgates of the hide

[Note In Dioscorides μολυβδαινα f μολυβδος lead, was applied to a mineral substance (v pr, 100), and a plant The former was yellow oxide of lead (PbO), esp the litharge produced in the extraction of gold and silver from ores containing lead By Pliny this is latinized as molybdæna, also once (xxxiv 18 50) by plumbāgo, which, as well as galēna, were applied by him to the yellow oxide, but prob included as an inferior variety the sulphide (PbS), called by Dioscorides μολυβδοειδης λιθος, 'lead like stone, the modern Galena For the plant Pliny always uses plumbago In the French transl (1572) of Matthiolus's Commentary on Dioscorides, μολυβδαινα or plumbago is rendered plombagine, in It piombaggine, and is stated to be identical with litharge, but other oreas may have been included I hence the explanations of the word in Cotgrave and other English writers down to Bailey see Plumbagine, and sense 2 above. In Holland's Pliny, plumbago is rendered litharge In the 16th c, to Agricola and others in Germany practically interested in mining, plumbago mainly meant the sulphide of lead but also included ferrous substances similar to this in appearance, and in the property of staining the fingers and marking paper, esp. the native sulphides of antimony and molybdenum, Stibnite (Sb2S3) and Molybdenite (MoS2), and the mineral graphite In 1567 Christoph Entzel (Encelius) of Saalfeld while identifying Pliny's molybdæna, galena, and plumbago distinguished the 'productive' species (i e. the oxide and sulphide of lead) from the 'barren (sterile), which yielded no lead, and was mainly graphite: the latter was described by Ferrante Imperato in 1599 as employed in the grafio piombino, 'leaden pencil In 1779 Scheele found that certain samples of the 'barren plumbago on being burnt, were dissipated into carbonic acid gas and that in fact they consisted of carbon see quot 1786 in sense a. In 1789 Werner and Karsten proposed the name Graphite instead of the ambiguous 'plumbago But its composition was still disputed An analysis, made by French chemists in 1786 had given, after volatilization a residue of iron, and plumbago was pronounced a carburet of iron (see quot 1795) This view prevailed until Karsten in 1826 and Sefström in 1829 proved that the iron was only an impurity in the specimens analysed and that graphite or plumbago was, as Scheele had said in 1779, really a mineral form of carbon (see paper by Dr John W Evans F L S in Trans Phil Soc 1902)]
