BRITISH AND AMERICAN AUTHORS

1261*a*

ADDISON, Joseph (1672–1719)

Pray consider what a figure a man would make in the republic of letters.
Dialogue on Ancient Medals (1721).

It is the fixing of these great periods that gives a man the first rank in the republic of letters and recommendation to the world for a person of various reading and profound erudition. Ib.

It is a great compliment methinks to the sex that your Virtues are generally shown in petticoats. Ib.

ALEXANDER, Canon Sidney Arthur (1866–1948)

Old hearts grow young again,
Young hearts beat high,
When we remember you
Men of the sky.
This England (1939).

ARNOLD, Sir Edwin (1832–1904)

Forgive, Thou Pure One ! Whom we bless,
Of our good deeds the sinfulness
Pearls of the Faith (1882), No. 5.

Lord ! make us just, that we may be
A little justified with Thee. No 47.

ASHFORD, Daisy (20th Century)

Mr. Salteena was an elderly man of 42 and was fond of asking people to stay with him
The Young Visiters (pub. 1919), Ch. 1.

I do hope I shall enjoy myself with you . . . I am parshial to ladies if they are nice. I suppose it is my nature. I am not quite a gentleman but you would hardly notice it Ib.

Ethel was calm but she felt excited inside. Ch. 2.

Oh do lets said Ethel. Ch. 4

Oh I see said the Earl [of Clincham] but my own idear is that these things are as piffle before the wind. Ch. 5.

And now (said Bernard Clarke) what about a little table d'ote followed by a theater. Ch. 7.

My life will be sour grapes and ashes without you. (Mr. Salteena) Ch. 8.

AVEBURY, John Lubbock, 1st Baron (1834–1913)

The most important thing to learn in life is how to live
The Use of Life (1896). Ch. 1.

1261*b*

Most of us throw away more happiness than we enjoy. Ib.

What we teach ourselves becomes much more a part of us than what we learn from others Education does not end when we leave school, it has indeed scarcely begun. Ib.

Our first object should be to make the most and best of ourselves. Ib.

More happiness is to be gained by self-denial than by self-indulgence Be indulgent to others, but not to yourself. Ib.

Many a man is much cleverer than he seems. Ch. 2.

Talking should be an exercise of the brain rather than of the tongue. Ib.

An egg is generally as good as a feast, and sometimes better. Ch. 3.

It is not money, but the love of money, which is the root of all evil. Ib.

Games not only keep a man in health, but give him spirit for his work, they teach him how to get on with other men : to give way in trifles, to play fairly, and to push no advantage to extremity. Ch. 4.

Long meals make short lives. Ch. 5.

It is not every boy that grows into a man. Ch. 6.

Love is the life of a true home. Ch. 12.

A day of worry is more exhausting than a week of work. Ch. 13.

Labour without genius will do more, in the long run, than genius without labour. Ib.

Doubt is indeed the very foundation of philosophy. Ch. 14.

There can be no merit in professing to believe something which you can neither explain nor understand. Ib.

Our duty is to believe that for which we have sufficient evidence, and to suspend our judgment when we have not. Ib.

The world is so arranged that goodness brings joy, and evil sorrow. Ch. 17.

Is it not then astonishing that the so-called Christian nations waste, and worse than waste, millions of money to ruin one another, and fight like beasts for territory, " while the great ocean of truth lies undiscovered before them " ?

A happy disposition is better than an estate of £10,000 a year. Letter. To Joseph Hume.

Lookers-on many times see more than gamesters. 48. Of Followers and Friends.

Medicine is a science which hath been, as we have said, more professed than laboured, and yet more laboured than advanced: the labour having been, in my judgment, rather in circle than in progression.

Proficiencie and Advancement of Learning (1605). Book 2.

Words are but the current tokens or marks of popular notions of things. Ib.

The great sophism of all sophisms being equivocation or ambiguity of words and phrase. Ib.

Words are the tokens current and accepted for conceits, as moneys are for values. Ib.

So hath he [man] sought to come forth of the second general curse, which was the confusion of tongues, by the art of grammar. Ib.

A dance is a measured pace, as a verse is a measured speech. Ib.

There is no man but speaketh more honestly than he can do or think. Ib.

As Plato said elegantly, "That Virtue, if she could be seen, would move great love and affection." Ib.

As it hath been wisely noted the most corrected copies are commonly the least correct. Ib.

We are much beholden to Machiavel and others, that write what men do, and not what they ought to do Ib.

For as the ancient politicians in popular estates were wont to compare the people to the sea, and the orators to the winds; because as the sea would of itself be calm and quiet, if the winds did not move and trouble it, so the people would be peaceable and tractable, if the seditious orators did not set them in work and agitation. Ib.

Did not one of the fathers* in great indignation call poesy, vinum dæmonum? Ib.

All good moral philosophy, as was said, is but a handmaid to religion. Ib.

By aspiring to a similitude of God in goodness, or love, neither man nor angel ever transgressed, or shall transgress. Ib.

States, as great engines, move slowly, and are not so soon put out of frame. Ib

Man seeketh in society comfort, use, and protection. Ib.

* St. Augustine. See Latin, "Poesis est," etc.

1262b

Many are wise in their own ways, that are weak for government or counsel. Ib.

It is as hard and severe a thing to be a true politician as to be truly moral. Ib.

No man's fortune can be an end worthy of his being. Ib.

Liberty of speech inviteth and provoketh liberty to be used again, and so bringeth much to a man's knowledge. Ib.

Surely the continual habit of dissimulation is but a weak and sluggish cunning, and not greatly politic. Ib.

Fortunes . . . come tumbling into some men's laps. Ib.

That other principle of Lysander, "that children are to be deceived with comfits, and men with oaths." Ib.

It is in life, as it is in ways, the shortest way is commonly the foulest, and surely the fairer way is not much about. Ib.

Their discourses are as the stars, which give little light, because they are so high. Ib.

There are in nature certain fountains of justice, whence all civil laws are derived but as streams. Ib.

This writing seemeth to me . . . not much better than that noise or sound which musicians make while they are in tuning their instruments, which is nothing pleasant to hear, but yet is a cause why the music is sweeter afterwards. Ib.

The inseparable propriety of time,* which is ever more and more to disclose truth Ib.

That ancient and patient request, "Verbera, sed audi." ("Strike, but hear.") Ib.

Those which have not sufficiently learned out of Solomon, that "the causeless curse shall not come" Ib.

Generally, music feedeth the disposition of spirit which it findeth

Sylva Sylvarum (1626). Century 2, 114.

They are ill discoverers that think there is no land, when they can see nothing but sea.

Filum Labyrinthi (1734).

It being the nature of the mind of man, to the extreme prejudice of knowledge, to delight in the spacious liberty of generalities. Ib.

I have taken all knowledge to be my province. Letters to Lord Burleigh.

For my name and memory I leave it to men's charitable speeches, and to foreign nations and the next ages.

Will, Dec. 19, 1625.

* "Inseparable propriety"—i.e., invariable property.

1263a

The mystic reverence, the religious allegiance, which are essential to a true monarchy, are imaginative sentiments that no legislators can manufacture in any people.
The English Constitution (1867)

It has been said that England invented the phrase "Her Majesty's Opposition", that it was the first government which made a criticism of administration as much a part of the polity as administration itself Ib.

Of all nations in the world the English are perhaps the least a nation of pure philosophers Ib.

BARBAULD, Anna Letitia (née Aikin) (1743–1825)

Patient hope
Must wait the appointed hour, secure of this,
That never with the indolent and weak
Will freedom deign to dwell, she must be seized
By that bold arm that wrestles for the blessing
Quoted in "The Times" of June 19, 1943, the eve of the two hundredth anniversary of her birth

BARING-GOULD, Rev. Sabine (1834–1924)

Onward, Christian soldiers,
Marching as to war

Letter to Boswell, Sept. 9, 1779.

If you are idle, be not solitary; if you are solitary, be not idle.

Letter to Boswell, Oct. 27, 1779.

A mere antiquarian is a rugged being.

Letter to Boswell, April 23, 1778.

I am willing to love all mankind, except an American.

Remark after dinner, April 15, 1778.

An old Greek has said "He that has friends has no friend."

Ib. (See Greek: Οἱ φίλοι, οὐ φίλος.)

Lawyers know life practically. A bookish man should always have them to converse with.

Remark to Mr. Edwards, a retired solicitor, April 17, 1778.

I have always considered a clergyman as the father of a larger family than he is able to maintain. Ib.

Sir, we are a nest of singing birds.

Said of his companions at Pembroke College, recorded under 1731 but of many years later.

Ignorance, madam, pure ignorance.

Reply to a lady who asked him why he had defined "pastern" as the knee of a horse. c. 1755.

The natural flights of the human mind are not from pleasure to pleasure, but from hope to hope.

The Rambler. No. 2.

I know not, madam, that you have a right, upon moral principles, to make your readers suffer so much.

To Mrs. Sheridan, after publication of her novel, "Memoirs of Miss Sydney Biddulph," recorded under 1763.

Sir, a woman's preaching is like a dog walking on his hinder legs. It is not done well; but you are surprised to find it done at all.

Remark to Boswell, 1763.

Sir, I perceive that you are a vile Whig

Remark to Sir Adam Ferguson, 1772.

I do not care to speak ill of any man behind his back, but I believe the gentleman is an attorney.

VAUGHAN, Henry ("The Silurist") (1622–1695)

Dear beauteous death! the jewel of the just,
Shining no where but in the dark,
What mysteries do lie beyond thy dust,
Could man outlook that mark
Friends Departed.

I saw Eternity the other night,
Like a great ring of pure and endless light,
All calm, as it was bright,
And round beneath it, Time, in hours, days, years,
Driv'n by the spheres
Like a vast shadow moved, in which the world
And all her train were hurled
The World.

Congress, April 2, 1917.

WORDSWORTH, Elizabeth (1840–1932)

If all the good people were clever,
And all clever people were good,
The world would be nicer than ever
We thought that it possibly could.

But somehow, 'tis seldom or never
The two hit it off as they should;
The good are so harsh to the clever,
The clever so rude to the good !

OLD TESTAMENT

Where the Revised Version (1877–1884) differs from the "Authorised Version" (1611), the variations are given with the letters R.V. appended.

1292*a*

The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms.
Deuteronomy. 33, 27.

[The eternal God is thy dwelling-place, and underneath are the everlasting arms.—R.V.]

1292*b*

Where there is no vision, the people perish.
Proverbs. 29, 18.

[Where there is no vision, the people cast off restraint.—R.V.]

APOCRYPHA

The ear of jealousy heareth all things.
Wisdom of Solomon. 1, 10.

He, being made perfect in a short time, fulfilled a long time: For his soul pleased the Lord: therefore hasted he to take him away from among the wicked. 4, 13 and 14.

Even so we, in like manner, as soon as we were born, began to draw to our end.
5, 13.

And some there be which have no memorial.
Ecclesiasticus. 44, 9.

NEW TESTAMENT

But if a woman have long hair it is a glory to her; for her hair is given her for a covering.*
First Epistle to the Corinthians. 11, 15.

* This is often paraphrased: "A woman's glory (or crowning glory) is her hair."

THE APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT (so called) *

Blessed are they who observe the instructions of Jesus Christ; for they shall dwell in eternal light.
Acts of Paul and Thecla. 1, 20.

An insatiable desire of doing good.
First Epistle of Clement to the Corinthians. 1, 10.

Envy and strife have overturned whole cities, and rooted out great nations from off the earth. 3, 19.

Day and night manifest a resurrection to us. The night lies down, and the day arises.
11, 18.

Let the wise man show forth his wisdom, not in words but in good works. 17, 36.

By charity were all the elect of God made perfect: Without it nothing is pleasing and acceptable in the sight of God. 21, 6.

Let us resist all iniquity and hate it.
General Epistle of Barnabas. 3, 10.

Thou shalt not make use of the word of God to any impurity. 14, 8.

I beseech you, therefore, again and again, be as good law-givers to one another; continue faithful counsellors to each other.
15, 11.

He that possesses the word of Jesus is truly able to hear his very silence.
Epistle of Ignatius to the Ephesians. 3, 21.

No longer observing sabbaths, but keeping the Lord's day, in which also our life is sprung up by him.
Epistle of Ignatius to the Magnesians. 3, 3.

Your bishop—whose very look is instructive; and whose mildness powerful: whom I am persuaded the very Atheists themselves cannot but reverence.
Epistle of Ignatius to the Trallians. 1, 10.

Wherefore clothe thyself with cheerfulness, which has always favour with the Lord, and thou shalt rejoice in it. For every cheerful man does well; and relishes those things that are good, and despises sadness. 10, 19.

For the world to come is the summer to the righteous; but to sinners it is the winter.
Third Book of Hermas Similitudes, 4, 2.

For many, when they do what is good, find pleasure in it, and are attracted by the delights of it. 6, 42.

* First edition printed for William Hone, 1820.

1293a

The seventh mountain had delightful pasture, and was wholly fruitful; and all kinds of cattle, and of the birds of heaven, fed upon it; and the more they fed of it, the more and better did the grass grow. 9, 8.

Forbear to be curious; and I will show thee all things. 9, 20.

For all your answers are great and excellent; and which a man can hardly understand. 9, 136.

Holy men, worthy to be loved, and had in wonder. Epistle of Ignatius to the Philadelphians. 2, 4.

Let all things be done to the honour of God. Epistle of Ignatius to Polycarp. 2, 11.

1293b

Especially see that thou speak evil of none, nor willingly hear anyone speak evil of any. Second Book of Hermas. The Commands, 2, 2.

Anger is unprofitable. 5, 7.

There are two angels with man; one of righteousness, the other of iniquity. 6, 7.

Put all sadness from thee; for it is the sister of doubting and of anger. 10, 1.

For sadness is the most mischievous of all spirits, and the worst to the servants of God: It destroys the spirits of all men, and torments the Holy Spirit; and again it saves. 10, 2.

WAIFS AND STRAYS

1. MEDIEVAL AND 16TH CENTURY

1294a 1294b

God be in my head and in my understanding;
God be in my eyes and in my looking;
God be in my mouth and in my speaking;
God be in my heart and in my thinking;
God be at my end and at my departing.
Tr. from Sarum Missal.

2. 17TH CENTURY

Over floods that are deepest,
Which Neptune obey,
Over rocks that are steepest,
Love will find out the way.
Song, "Love will find out the Way." Found in Forbes's "Cantus, Songs and Fancies" (1662) and later compilations.

Landlord, fill the flowing bowl
Until it doth run over;
For to-night we'll merry be,
To-morrow we'll be sober.
Song, derived (with variations) from Fletcher's play, "The Bloody Brother." (1639.)

3. 18TH CENTURY

Two rules the walker must obey,
If he would reach his home to-day:
On Roadway always keep the right,
On Footpath just the op-po-site,
And if it chance he walk at night,
He'd better wear a little white.
The Rule of the Road—and Path. Version pub. 1941, written by Sir George Buckston Browne (1850–1945).

Begone, dull Care! I prithee begone from me;
Begone, dull Care! You and I can never agree.
Song.

4. 19TH AND 20TH CENTURIES

He is a beast, but a just beast.
Said of Frederick Temple, D.D. (1821–1902), who was Headmaster of Rugby (1858–1869) and afterwards Bishop of Exeter, Bishop of London, and finally Archbishop of Canterbury.

It's a long time between drinks.
Alleged to be a reply by a Governor of North Carolina at a banquet where the Governor of South Carolina demanded the handing over of a fugitive slave. The North Carolina Governor desired to avoid this and parried the cross-question with this crooked and humorous answer. The story is without confirmation, but the saying became popular, being used in and out of season in a variety of ways.

I am Jowett.
All that is known, I know it,
I am the Master of this College,
And all I don't know isn't knowledge.
Of Benjamin Jowett (1817–1893), Master of Balliol College, Oxford, as recorded in "Lux Mihi Laus: School Board Memories" (1937), by Thomas Gautrey.

Just before the battle, Mother.*
Song. c. 1855.

---

* The first verse ran:

Just before the battle, Mother,
I am thinking most of you,
While upon the field we're watching,
With the enemy in view.

Written and composed by George F. Root and sung by the Christy Minstrels.

WAIFS AND STRAYS—19th AND 20TH CENTURIES

1295*a*

Old soldiers never die,
They only fade away.
Song. c. 1914–1918.

Every member of the Force
Has a watch and chain, of course;
If you want to know the time
Ask a P'liceman.
Song. (By E. W. Rogers.)

There was a man who had a clock;
His name was Matthew Mears.
He wound it reg'lar every night
For more than forty years
At length this precious timepiece proved
An eight-day clock to be,
And a madder man than Matthew Mears
You could not wish to see.
Quoted in "Truth," July 29, 1936, as a Victorian rhyme.

The Ram, the Bull, the heavenly Twins,
The Crab, and next the Lion shines,
The Virgin, and the Scales;
The Scorpion, Archer, and He-goat,
The Man that bears the Watering Pot,
And the Fish with glittering tails
Mnemonic for the Twelve Signs of the Zodiac.

Her death it brought us bitter woe—
Yea, to the heart it wrung us;
And all because she didn't know
A mushroom from a fungus.
Epigram, quoted in "Truth," Dec. 7, 1938.

Lord, grant this day I catch a fish
So large that even I
In talking of it afterwards
Shall have no need to lie.
Attributed (in America) to Viscount Grey of Fallodon.

Now Barabbas was a publisher.
Attributed to Thomas Campbell.

The sunset of his death tinged the whole world's sky.
Saying (anon.) in reference to death of George V (recorded in "The Times," Feb. 9, 1936).

The answer is a lemon.
American (c. 1910).
"Lemon" is slang for something undesirable. The saying is therefore a scoffing reply.

To talk like a Dutch uncle.
To talk severely, Dutch family discipline being rigorous. Said to date from about 1830.

He who would Bacon place where Shakespeare sits,
Must have unbaken brains or shaken wits.
Epigram by Sir Frederick Pollock.

"It's not a burden, it's my brother."
"A former President of the United States of America [Abraham Lincoln] used to tell of a boy who was carrying an even smaller child up a hill. Asked whether the heavy burden was not too much for him, the boy answered, 'It's not a burden, it's my brother!'"
King George VI in a broadcast from Buckingham Palace, Dec. 25, 1942.

Would you like to see a city given over,
Soul and body, to a tyrannizing game?
If you would, there's little need to be a rover,
For St. Andrews is the abject city's name.
In reference to golf. Lines by R. F. Murray, of St. Andrews University.

Actual evidence I have none,
But my aunt's charwoman's sister's son
Heard a policeman on his beat
Say to a housemaid in Downing Street,
That he had a brother who had a friend,
Who knew when the war was going to end.
Reginald Arkell, "All the Rumours" (1916).

Beware of paper, pens, and ink;
Beware of talking when you drink;
Beware of saying what you think;
For many good fellows have swung in a noose
For letting their pens or their tongues run loose
Quoted in "The Times," Nov. 1, 1939.

* Edmund Plowden (1518–1585) was an eminent lawyer and an M P in Queen Mary's reign He was closely associated with Shropshire Being a devout Roman Catholic, he lost public preferments and his practice when Elizabeth came to the throne in 1558 It is said that some of his neighbours, to entrap him, caused a mass to be said, by a layman in priest's garments, and Plowden was induced to attend For this he was indicted At the trial it is said that a man deposed on oath that he had officiated at the mass "Art thou a priest, then?" said Plowden "No," said the man "Why, then," said Plowden, "the case is altered—no priest, no mass" Another story (less likely) alleged that Plowden, being asked by a neighbour of his what remedy there was in law against his neighbour for some hogs that had trespassed on his ground, answered, he might have a good remedy, but, the other replying that they were his (Plowden's) hogs, "Nay, then, neighbour,' quoth he, "the case is altered." Anyhow, the words became a proverb Ben Jonson wrote a play c 1602, entitled, The Case is Altered (second edition printed in 1609). "The Case is Altered" became a popular inn sign Shakespeare introduced the words, "The case is altered" in Henry VI, Part III, iv 3 (c 1592). It is possible that the saying was a current saying before 1558 and that it may have been used as such by Plowden.

* A cammock is a crooked bit of timber useful in shipbuilding and in other ways. Sometimes the word used is 'gambrel' (i.e., a crooked stick used by butchers in displaying a carcass), or 'crammon'—a crooked stick used in hockey or other games. The proverb may be connected with the common inn sign, "the Crooked Billet."

* St. Anthony (or Antony) the Great, an Egyptian who is reputed to have died A.D. 356, is represented in art with a hog which has a bell attached to its neck. He is regarded as patron of the Hospitallers. The legend is that when an edict was issued prohibiting persons from allowing their pigs to wander in the streets an exception was made in favour of the Hospitallers on condition that their pigs, when in the streets, should each carry a bell round its neck. These pigs followed anyone who would give them food. An early reference to the proverb is in Stow's Survey of London, 1598, which quotes (as a proverb) "Such a one will follow such a one, and whine as it were an Anthonie pig."

Your surety wants a surety. (R.)

PARALLEL PROVERBS

In the main section of Proverbs (pp. 765–928) a valuable feature is the provision, in small type, of parallels (from other languages and periods) to the sayings there appearing. In the course of revision many additional examples have come to light, and the best method of arranging them has appeared to be to add a section of new parallel proverbs. In each case a reference is given to the parent proverb.
