Introduction

THIS GUIDE lists the "know-how" books, pamphlets, government documents and other printed materials relating to the non-vocational, spare-time, recreational and home-making activities of men and women. A first edition was published in 1950. This second edition is a thorough revision of the first. Many new subjects have been added and the listings under old subjects have been reviewed.

As in the former edition, there are extensive listings under cooking, gardening and photography. The heading "money making ideas" is mentioned here because such material is difficult to find listed together in other sources.

Although this guide is primarily a handbook for booksellers and librarians, teachers, dealers in arts and crafts materials and hobbyists should find it a quick guide to information sources. The needs and interests of the typical American family have been kept in mind in selecting subjects to be covered and material to be listed so that this should prove a useful volume for the home reference shelf. This guide emphasizes publications in print and available in the United States. Where prices are not given, the material is presumed to be "out-of-print." These out-of-print items have been included because they are still useful and are to be found in many public libraries.

The guide contains 3500 entries arranged alphabetically under 900 headings, with necessary subdivisions. Within subjects, the arrangement is from the introductory to the advanced or from the general to the specific, with special arrangements as the various subjects warrant. For entries not found in their anticipated alphabetical place, the detailed index in the front should be consulted. Cross references among related subjects are included in the main text.

Each entry consists of title, author, publisher, date, number of pages and price, and frequently a brief description as to content, presentation and use. Certain blocks of material are covered by general notes, usually at the beginning of various subjects. A directory of publishers is included in the back. An author index of listed items follows the directory of publishers.

The compiler welcomes criticism and suggestions from all users as to subjects covered and not covered and material included and not included.

The editor gratefully acknowledges the help he has received from many persons, most particularly Frederic G. and Daniel Melcher, and Anne Richter, all of the Bowker Company; Reginald R. Hawkins, Chief of the Science and Technology Division, The New York Public Library; and his aunt, Mrs. Elva Needham, who gave yeoman service in the checking and double-checking that lies behind such a book.
