RULE OF THUMB

The expression grew out of the practice of carpenters and tailors in using thumbs as a rough measure for an inch, and has come to mean any rough guide for approximate measure where speed is more important than accuracy. Rule of thumb may be good for many things in life but not for insurance where speed can neither be substituted nor sacrificed for accuracy For instance ....

EVERY TWELVE MINUTES

Day in and day out, week after week, all the year round, there is a motor accident somewhere in India every 12 minutes As a result, roughly 7 people die every day and 61 are injured, 13 drivers are convicted, and the Courts award increasing compensation to the public. So, you can't very well take any chances Our Motor Department issues immediate Cover Notes and Certificates, issues Act policies at minimum tariff rates and effects prompt and equitable settlement of claims

AROUND THE CORNER

Life moves so fast that accidents are just around the corner And they give no warning, but the Oriental Personal Accident Policies, provide for compensation in case of death, loss of limb or sight or temporary total or partial disablement by accident Premiums are low and Oriental Life Policyholders receive 10% reduction in rates.

EXPORT OR IMPORT?

Whether you export or import, or merely do the distribution, our marine policies can help you build up a more profitable business

PREVENTION AND CURE

And then fire Our highly trained technical men can serve you by making suggestions to prevent fires and eliminate hazards through improving construction. But should a fire occur, the reckoning must include not only material losses but also reduced earning power and trading profits So, wherever necessary, we prepare estimates for cover against fire and against loss of profits, so that a proper, profitable programme of insurance can be built up

AND MACHINERY

Despite all precautions in the way of careful selection and maintenance of Plant, machinery is damaged by a variety of causes An ORIENTAL BOILER Policy covers damage to boilers and other property including Third Party Liability arising out of explosion or collapse of boilers and ORIENTAL MACHINERY BREAKDOWN and/or ERECTION Policies cover unforeseen and sudden damage to insured machinery whilst at work or at rest or during erection.

BE WELL ASSURED

The many different kinds of life assurance we provide have virtually written the story of Indian insurance Whatever be your station in life, there is an ORIENTAL policy to meet your very needs Can we help you?

No rule of thumb but expert advice, intelligent co-operation and absolute security as offered by Oriental can alone provide adequate cover.

As all profits of the ORIENTAL FIRE & GENERAL accrue to ORIENTAL LIFE, every with-profit policyholder of ORIENTAL LIFE eventually participates in the profits of the ORIENTAL FIRE & GENERAL. Therefore place all your FIRE, MARINE, MOTOR, ACCIDENT, BOILER and MACHINERY insurance with ORIENTAL FIRE & GENERAL and reap the profits in the shape of increased Bonuses

If you would like to know more about any of these policies or about any insurance problems in general, pray make use of our Information Service at the Head Office, Oriental Buildings Bombay 1

PUBLISHER'S FOREWORD

IN presenting to the public the ninetieth issue of THACKER'S INDIAN DIRECTORY of INDIA and PAKISTAN the Publishers regret the inordinate delay that has occurred in placing this edition at the disposal of their customers. Inspite of numerous handicaps they have pleasure to announce that extensive alterations and additions have been effected rendering the volume of more practical usefulness to subscribers.

In the process of printing the Publishers were unable to keep abreast of the recent changes in the set up of Pakistan Central Govt. And hence this was incorporated in the supplementary section. Certain minor changes in the Indian Cabinet have also been incorporated in the Supplementary Section.

With the sbove amendments the Publishers are confident that the information presented in this edition is up-to-date and as fully correct as time and human ingenuity can make it.

They have to thank all Government Departments, Business Houses, Industrial Undertakings and the General Public once again for having so courteously responded to their requests for information.

The Title and Contents of Thacker's Indian Directory are fully protected by copyright and all information supplied by the General Public, Business Undertakings and Government Departments is regarded as bona fide.

THE INDIAN CONSTITUTION
A STUDY

On the 26th of January 1950 India became a Sovereign Democratic Republic. The word "Sovereign" signifies that within her own sphere she has absolute power and is not subject to any external control By "Republic" is meant she is no longer under monarchial rule A Republic may or may not be democratic, but India decided to be "Democrative," i.e, to be ruled by the representatives of the people

On the day she emerged as a Sovereign Democratic Republic a written Constitution was framed which became the supreme law of the land

A Constitution is the internal governmental machinery of a country In structure the Indian Constitution follows the federal pattern of the Government of India Act 1935 Democratic in form its policy is the establishment of a socialistic order of society Its most prominent feature is the Supremacy of the Executive

SPECIAL FEATURES

The special features of the Constitution are the disappearance of Princely India, sovereignty of the people, adult suffrage, joint electorates, the abolition of Privy Council jurisdiction and the substitution of that of the Supreme Court, the abolition of titles and untouchability, civil equality, irrespective of religion, enumeration of fundamental rights, directive principles of State policy, greater centralization, and the creation of a President and the cabinet system of government

The Constitution fully beats out the assertion of the leaders that India is a secular State, not only is there no ...e religion, but no privilege is given to any religion, and ...pect of civil rights and obligations, no discrimination on the ground of religion Subject to public order, and health, all persons are equally entitled to f conscience and the right freely to profess, l propagate any religion Every denomination stablish and maintain its own religions and ...itutions and to provide religious instructions n short, complete religious toleration is the Constitution, there is no ecclesiastical depart ...overnment chapter in the Constitution enumerates ...ights, corresponding to the Bill of Rights in ...onstitution They are grouped under four equality, rights relating to religion, cultural rights, and rights to property. Many of ...e already to be found scattered over the ...of the land, some are new, the former ...es hebeas corpus, freedom of speech, associa... ement; freedom to reside in any part of India; own property and to carry on any legitimate or trade The latter category includes equality ...unity in matters of public employment and aboli... untouchability and of titles Apart from rights, ...s mentioned above, which are available to citizens, are some broader rights available to citizens and ...ns alike, they may be called human rights, and include protection of life and personal liberty and equality before law.

An interesting chapter in the Constitution is headed "Directive Principles of State Policy" The provisions in this chapter are not enforceable by any court, but the principles laid down are considered to be fundamental in the governance of the country. They deal with economic policies and social services conducive to the establishment of a socialistic order of society The State is enjoined to direct its policy to secure adequate means of livelihood for the citizens, equitable distribution of material resources; prevention of concentration of wealth and means of production to the common cause, equal pay for equal work for both men and women, health and strength of workers, prevention of employment in unsuitable avocations, protection of children against exploitation, organization of village panchayats, right to work, to education and to public assistance in cases of unemployment, old age, sickness and disablement and in other cases of undeserved want humane conditions of work and maternity relief, a living wage, decent standard of life and full enjoyment of leisure and social and cultural opportunities, promotion of cottage industries a uniform civil code for citizens, free and compulsory education up to the age of fourteen, promotion of educational and economic interests of the weaker sections of the people and their protection from social injustice and all forms of exploitation, raising the level of nutrition and the standard of living, improvement of public health; prohibition of the consumption, except for medicinal purposes, of intoxicating drinks and drugs, organization of agriculture and animal husbandry protection of milch cows; protection of ancient monuments separation of executive and judicial functions and lastly, promotion of international peace and settlement of international disputes by arbitration.

Coming to sober realities, the Constitution has tackled the problem of Minorities with wisdom and courage The importance of the protection of Minorities is universally recognized in all civilized countries It is necessary to secure to members of a racial, religious or linguistic minority just and fair conditions of life for two reasons: first, to prevent grievances which may lead to disorder in society secondly, to win confidence so as to weld all communities into a united nation Apart from express general provisions prohibiting discrimination on grounds of religions, caste or race and securing equality before law and equal opportunity in matters of public employment and also securing freedom of religion under fundamental rights, special provisions have been made for the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes and the Anglo-Indian community These relate to reservation of seats in the legislatures, to appointments in services and to educational grants

OFFICIAL LANGUAGE

The official language of the Indian Union will be Hindi in Devanagari script and the form of numerals will be the international form English, however, will continue to be used for official purposes for fifteen years. Subject to this, a State may adopt a regional language for internal use. The language of the Supreme Court and the High Courts and of Act Regulations Rules, Orders, etc, will be English.

The Union of India is divided into States They are the nine old provinces (in some cases enlarged by the accession of the old Indian States), three individual old Indian States, five groups of old Indian States, Centrally administered territories which are widely scattered and the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. The States are the units of the Union and each have its own executive, judiciary and legislature. The constitutional structure of these branches generally follows the pattern of the Government of India Act, 1935 Governors will be appointed by the President Where the old Indian States remain, either singly or in groups, the executive head will be a Rajpramukh whose appointment is regulated by agreements already made between the Government of India and the Rulers concerned The Rajpramukhs correspond to Governors, there will be no hereditary Rajpramukhs

One of the most important changes in the Constitution is the abolition of separate electorates and the substitution of joint territorial electorates

THE PRESIDENT

Under the Constitution, the President is the head of the Executive and the Supreme Commander of the Defence Forces of the Union. He is elected by an electoral college consisting of the elected members of both Houses of Parliament and of the Legislative Assemblies of the States. He will hold office for five years and will be eligible for re-election. Voters in India will have no share in his election, as voters in America have. There is a greater similarity between India and France in the matter not only of election but also the exercise of powers by the President. He is a Constitutional head and is not expected to govern In the French Constitution it is expressly laid down that the President shall exercise his powers on the advice of responsible Ministers The Indian Constitution does not say so in explicit terms, but the Council of Ministers (which is the Indian Cabinet) is enjoined "to aid and advise the President in the exercise of his functions"

Is he bound to accept the advice? In the previous Indian Constitutions, there was either express provision, as in 1919, or an injunction in the Instrument of Instructions, as in 1935 The lacuna may well be filled by convention, as in England The functions of the President are more or less the same as those of the Governor-General in the late regime. He summons, prorogues and dissolves Parliament, he appoints all the higher officials, he grants pardon, he assents to Bills, proclaims emergencies and promulgates Ordinances He is not responsible to Parliament, but can be impeached by either House for violation of the Constitution.

There is a Vice-President under the Constitution. He is ex-officio Chairman of the Council of States He will be elected by the members of both Houses of Parliament and will hold office for five years

THE REAL RULERS

It is the Council of Ministers, with the Prime Minister at the head, who will be the real rulers of India The Prime Minister will be appointed by the President and the other Ministers by the President on the advice of the Prime Minister The Council of Ministers shall be collectively responsible to the House of the People, i.e., the lower House of Parliament The Indian Constitution has adopted the British Parliamentary system in preference to the American Presidential system. The Prime Minister will probably be the leader of the majority party in the Parliament The President will ask him to form the Council of Ministers who must all be members of Parliament, and on his advice the President will allocate portfolios. Policy will be determined by the Council of Ministers and Bills will be framed accordingly As, normally, all the Ministers will be drawn from the majority party in Parliament, the Council of Ministers will naturally control legislative action This is inevitable in any Parliamentary system of Government

The Indian Parliament consist of the President and two Houses, the Council of States and the House of the People The Council of States will have 12 nominated members and not more than 230 representatives of the States. The nominated members will represent literature, science, art and social service The respective numbers of representatives of States are set out in the Schedules The House of the People will be directly elected by voters in the States, on the basis of population, one member for every half to three-quarter lakhs of the population The House of the People will have a life of five years. The Council of States will not be subject to dissolution but one third of the members will retire every second year. The other provisions relating to Parliament are practically the same as in the 1935 Act and need no specific mention.

EXTENSION OF POWER

There is a judicious extension of the Union Government's legislative powers over matters which hitherto had been exclusively provincial This has been done by including new items in the Concurrent List For effective economic development of the country, and also for uniformity, a certain amount of centralization has been found to be necessary For instance, price control, social insurance, unemployment, principles of compensation on compulsory acquisition of private property, adulteration of foodstuffs, joint family and partition are matters which the Union Centre may now take up for legislation and executive action

Residuary power of legislation on unenumerated matters is now vested in the centre Further, Parliament may legislate with respect to a matter in the State List, if the Council of State by a two-thirds majority passes a resolution declaring that it is expedient to do so in the national interest Parliament will also have plenary power of legislation when the President proclaims an emergency Thus it appears that the Union Cabinet may, if necessary, concentrate all unifying power in their own hands Such concentration may also be useful in arresting rapidly growing separatist tendencies in the country.

The most important change in the judiciary is abolition of Privy Council jurisdiction and the establishment of a Supreme Court as the highest court of appeal. This Court will consist of a Chief Justice and seven other judges Appointment will be made by the President, who is also the appointing authority of Judges of the State High Courts The retiring age of a Supreme Court Judge is 65 years and of a High Court Judge 60 years There are two interesting innovations. One is the power to co-opt a retired Judge to act temporarily as a Judge, and the other is the President's power to transfer a judge from one High Court to another All the High Courts have been placed on an equal footing in the matter of issuing prerogative writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto and certiorari

A prominent feature of the Constitution is limitation of the powers of the Courts with regard to legislation which may abridge fundamental rights For instance, in matters of preventive detention and depriving a citizen of his property, the Courts will not be able to give any relief The Executive is Paramount, the Judiciary is the Cinderella of the Constitution.

Some parts of the Constitution are cast in idealistic mould. Adult suffrage is one of them In a democracy, government is supposed to be controlled by the general body of citizens This postulates a certain minimum standard of mental development That standard has yet to be reached It cannot be claimed that the generality of the people have yet the capacity to exercise the franchise intelligently, that capacity will no doubt grow with the spread of education, to-day it is only an ideal

DELHI, CAPITAL CITY

While she must concede seniority to—for example—Rome in point of antiquity, Delhi, nevertheless, stands very high amongst the capital cities of the world. For, from one or another of some fifteen places within the triangle formed by the Ridge and the Jumna, most, if not all of India, has been governed for a period not far short of a thousand years. Here Slave Sultans, Rajput Chieftains, Turkish, Afghan, Moghul, Maratha and British rulers all held their sway.

The earliest of Delhi's capitals, Indraprastha, can be seen only with the eye of faith, though persistent tradition has placed its site on the knoll where Humayun built his citadel, the Purana Qila. The oldest existing centre of Government is believed by some to be that which adjoins the mysterious water-amphitheatre of Suraj Kund, about a dozen miles south of New Delhi. Tradition has it that both the amphitheatre and the city were the work of Raja Anang Pal, a Rajput, who flourished in the eleventh century A.D. Little of the buildings of the ancient city can now be seen except the ruins of rubble walls. There are no signs of fortifications and no signs of craftsmanship save for a few crudely carved stone pillars of uncertain age.

LAL KOT

When we come to the next capital we are on firmer ground, for substantial relics of it remain. This was Lal Kot, the headquarters of Prithvi Raj whose name was preserved by the Muslim conquerors who styled the city Qila Rai Pithora. Its massive walls may still be traced through most of their perimeter, and of the superb baroque carving of its temples many splendid examples have been preserved in the pillars of the mosque adjoining the Qutb Minar. After Prithvi Raj fell in action against the invaders, came the dynasty of Slave Kings. To them and their successors the Khilji Sultans' posterity owes the stupendous Qutb Minar, one of the wonders of the world, as well as the Quwwat-ul-Islam ("Might of Islam") mosque and other edifices which survive in whole or in part.

Of the next capital, Kilokhri, a few miles to the north-east of Lal Kot, nothing is left for us to see; but the succeeding three—Siri, Tughlakabad and Jahanpanah, the 5th, 6th and 7th cities of Delhi—still yield impressive relics. Siri had perhaps grown up as a suburb of Lal Kot and dates from the thirteenth century, and the two were subsequently linked by the creation of Jahanpanah. Before this consolidation was effected, however, the Khilji rulers had given way to Ghiyas-ud-Din, first of the Tughlaks who, in his short reign of five years, constructed the colossal fortress-city of Tughlakabad, lying on a spur of the Ridge at the base of the Delhi triangle. As large as the city of London, its walls rise as high as 70 feet and the blocks of masonry which compose them sometimes weigh as much as six tons each. The whole stupendous task is said to have taken only two years.

A TUGHLAK BUILDER

Ghiyas-ud-Din's eccentric son, Muhammad Bin Tughlak, was mainly responsible for Jahanpanah; but it was another of the line, Firoz Shah, who was the greatest Tughlak builder and next to Shah Jahan, the greatest builder of all Delhi's sovereigns. Of his city of Firozabad little remains save its badly ruined citadel, Kotla, Firoz Shah, but in all parts of the triangle are to be seen relics of his activities.

To his inspiration we owe the fine series of "Khan Jahan" mosques, a set of remarkable and almost unique octagonal tombs, the college and other buildings around Hauz Khas, the two Asoka pillars which he brought to Delhi as trophies and re-erected. Working in crude materials but on a majestic scale, the very profusion of his enterprises has secured the survival around Delhi of much that is significant. This remarkable man was administratively much ahead of his time. For example, the approval of the Finance Department was secured to estimates before a building was put in hand; and as a side-line he even seems to have run a bus service to the Qutb!

After the Tughlaks came the Lodi and then the Saiyyid dynasty. Their court was not continuously situated at Delhi and their empire was often governed from elsewhere, and the principal local evidence of these rulers is to be found in the fine tombs of a few of them, in and near the Lodi Gardens not far from Safdarjang and Delhi's internal airport. For the most part they continued and elaborated the architectural tendencies of the Tughlaks.

THE MOGHULS

The Moghuls had long been encroaching further and further into the lands of the Sultans of Delhi. They had penetrated as far as the capital over three centuries before their dynasty was able to establish itself on the Indian throne. Babar, first of the Moghul emperors, left little mark on Delhi. His successor, Humayun, was responsible for the Purana Qila, the lofty walls of which tower over the Irwin Stadium at the end of New Delhi's Central Vista. How much this capital—the 11th, for we have passed by Khizrabad and Mubarakabad Saiyyid creations of which little or nothing now exists—owes to Humayun and how much to Sher Shah Suri who ousted him from Delhi for some years is a point upon which the experts do not agree. It was in this fort that Humayun met his death by a fall on a staircase, and not far to the southward stands the magnificent mausoleum in which he was interred, perhaps Delhi's most imposing structure.

The Moghul emperors had a special penchant for building. Akbar and Shah Jahan chose for the most part to exercise their talents at Agra and elsewhere rather than in Delhi; but it is to Shah Jahan that we owe the Red Fort, which has one of the most impressive exteriors in the world, a vast sandwich of red sandstone veneers enveloping a cement and rubble filling.

The main entrance into the Fort lies through the huge Lahore Gate and then along a high vaulted approach. The arcades are occupied by a number of fine little shops richly displaying art wares and curios. The Imperial Drum House or Naubatkhana, forming another gateway, leads to the Durbar Hall or Diwan-i-Am, to the west of which stands a splendid pavilion of red sandstone with a series of colonnades. Just behind this is seen the Hall of Private Audience or Diwan-i-Khas. It is a marble pavilion of superb beauty. The gems that shed light therein are no more, nor the majestic "Peacock Throne," but due to the restoration work initiated by the late Lord Curzon, some of the exquisite interior decorations are still preserved. During the Moghul days the ceiling of the pavilion was embossed with gold and silver foliage; it is now merely painted. Even then, what remains is enough to impress the visitor with the miracle of art that found expression in the regime of the Grand Moghuls.

It is fashionable to speak of the years after Aurangzeb as a sort of Moghul twilight, but some good stuff was produced despite the vicissitudes of the imperial house: delicate miniatures, pleasant buildings (e.g. the Sonehri Masjid just south of the Red Fort), beautiful textiles and bijouterie. But on a rapid sweep there is little to catch the eye until we come to the New Delhi of Lutyens and Baker.

NEW DELHI

New Delhi, the Republic of India's 9,000 acre capital, now covers nearly three times as much ground space and accommodates six times as many people as it was originally planned to do some 30 years ago.

The structures at New Delhi show a harmony of the architectural forms of India and Central Asia with those of Italy and England. The stately courtyards, the soaring domes, campaniles and screen or jali works on marble, stately entrances and similar other oriental modes—so manifest in the Fort of Shah Jahan—are sought to be mingled with modern needs and concepts. The Secretariat Buildings, designed mostly by Sir Herbert Baker, are perhaps the largest state office in the world. They have nearly 1,000 rooms and eight miles of corridors. Speaking of these two Blocks, which were in his special charge, Sir Herbert Baker writes: "The principle which has prompted the design, as far as any principle in building is conscious, or can be put into words, has been to weave into the fabric of the more elemental and universal forms of architecture the thread of such Indian traditional shapes and features as may be compatible with the nature and use of the buildings." Government House shows even more of this blend of East and West, specially the great Durbar Hall under the great Dome of the Palace. The three buildings which stand on a platform 32 ft. above the level below spreads over 330 acres, with its mile and a half of corridors, 340 rooms and 227 columns, 35 lobbies and 37 fountains, and looks much like the palace of the Popes on the plain of Avignon. The House of Parliament is a circular structure, recalling the memories of the Colosseum at Rome, with a continuous open colonnade, half a mile in circumference. And the collective impression of the whole view brings home to every mind the evolution of modern government in this ancient country.

The architects and engineers who prepared the blueprint of the seat of Government, on the banks of the Jumna, would have been amazed at the changes which war and partition brought about in the layout of what they had planned to be one of the most beautiful cities of Asia.

The growth and development of New Delhi, which has had to keep pace with the expansion of Governmental machinery, also bears the marks of impact of political events that have occurred during its short history.

Delhi, which since the year 1193 A.D. has had two queens and some 70 kings, now sees its first republican regime. Fifty years ago its population was scarcely more than 200,000; about seven times that number now acclaim the installation of their President.
