Babism (bă'bĭzm), system of doctrines of a Mohammedan sect of 19th-century Persia In 1843 Mirza Ali Mohammed of Shiraz claimed to be a prophet, assuming the title of Bab ed-Din [gate of faith] By his teachings and criticisms he aroused such hostility that he was jailed As the successor of Moses, Christ, and Mohammed, he announced himself to be the point into which all earlier dispensations were gathered up Each revelation had been adapted to man's progress, and truth had been given in the form man was prepared to receive Babism took its beliefs especially from Sufism and Gnosticism and Shiite Islam Upon the accession of a new shah in 1848, the Bab's followers, rising in insurrection, were defeated Many of the leaders were killed, and the Bab was executed at Tabriz in 1850 Two years later, after an attempt had been made on the life of the shah, there were more persecutions In 1863 the Babists were removed to Constantinople and later to Adrianople and Cyprus After 1868 a division had its center in Acre under the leadership of BAHA ULLAH, the originator of Bahaism, which has supplanted Babism See E G Browne, ed and tr , A Traveller's Narrative Written to Illustrate the Episode of the Báb (1891).

Babits, Michael (bŏ'bĭch), Hung. Babits Mihály (mĭ'hī), 1883–1941, Hungarian writer Retiring from public school teaching in 1917, he became editor (1919–41) of the literary weekly Nyugat In his novels of the disillusioned post-war society, he appeals repeatedly for the establishment of a peaceful world He translated Dante, Shakspere, and Baudelaire into Hungarian and wrote a history of European literature (1934–35)

Babol (bäbōl') city (pop c 34,790), N Iran, NE of Teheran and near the Caspian Sea, in former Mazanderan prov The climate is warm and humid in the summer but very pleasant in winter It exports cotton, silk, and rice and was once the chief trading center of N Iran There are ruins of a palace of Abbas I The city was formerly Barfrush

baboon, large, chiefly terrestrial monkey of Africa and Arabia The face is doglike, the canine teeth large, the limbs powerful, and the tail is of medium length and carried in an arch Baboons travel in packs They eat scorpions, insects, and other animals as well as plant food Most true baboons are yellowish or brown The hamadryas or sacred baboon of E Africa and Arabia is gray, with a mantle of long hair and pink callosities The MANDRILL and chacma are large baboons

Babrius (bā'brēŭs), fl 2d or 3d cent ?, Greek fabulist, versifier of the fables of AESOP Many of the medieval prose collections of Aesop were based on Babrius

Babson, Roger Ward, 1875–, American statistician, b Gloucester, Mass , grad Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1898 In 1904 he founded the Babson Statistical Organization, Inc , whose business and financial statistics, published in Babson's Reports, Inc , are widely sold in the United States, England, and Canada Babson Institute, in Babson Park, a suburb of Boston, was founded (1919) by him to train business executives, in 1927 he founded Webber College, in Boston, to give training in business and finance to women He is the author of many books on finance and investment, among the best known of which are Business Barometers (1909, 3d ed., 1945), Investment Fundamentals (1930, 4th ed , 1948), and If Inflation Comes (1937) See his autobiography, Actions and Reactions (1935, rev ed , 1949)

Babur: see BABER.

baby. see INFANT

Babylon (bă'bĭlŭn), ancient city of Mesopotamia, center of the empire of BABYLONIA It was on the Euphrates and was north of the cities that flourished in S Mesopotamia in the 3d millennium B C It was not until HAMMURABI made it the capital of his kingdom of Babylonia that it took on great importance Its city-god, Marduk (identical with Bel), became a leading god of the Near East, and the city became wealthy from commerce It was destroyed by the Assyrians under SENNACHERIB, and its real splendor belongs to the later period of Babylonia after the city was rebuilt, the brilliant color and luxury of Babylon became legendary from the days of Nebuchadnezzar (d 562 B C) The Hanging Gardens were one of the SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD The walls of Babylon, its brick-built palace, and its towered temples were adorned with color, and the city had a name among the Hebrews (who suffered the CAPTIVITY under Nebuchadnezzar) and the later Greeks for abandoned pleasure Under the rule of Nabonidus the city was captured by the Persians under Cyrus the Great in 538 B C , and its glory ended After the conquest of Alexander the Great, its trade and population were largely taken to SELEUCIA.

Babylon, residential and resort village (pop 4,742), on S Long Island, SE N Y , on Great South Bay, inc 1893

Babylonia (bă'bĭlō'nēŭ), ancient empire of Mesopotamia. The name is sometimes given to the whole civilisation of S Mesopotamia, including the states established by the city rulers of Lagash, Akkad (or Agade), Erech, and Ur in the 3d millennium B C Usually it is limited to the civilization of the valley after the fall of SUMER and the rise of the Semitic states with the triumph of Sargon In its narrowest sense it applies only to the state built (c 2100 B C.) by HAMMURABI, with the city of Babylon as its capital One of the greatest of ancient rulers, Hammurabi issued a celebrated code of laws for the management of his large empire—for he controlled most of the Tigris and Euphrates region even before defeating the Elamites He established the Babylonian civilization Babylonian CUNEIFORM writing (derived from the Sumerians), the division of the quasi-feudal society into classes (the wealthy landowners and merchants and the priests, the less wealthy merchants, peasants, and artisans, and the slaves), and Babylonian religion with its hilltop temples (see ZIGGURAT) and the gods and customs inherited from the older Sumerian culture—all these were to influence the civilization of ASSYRIA and so contribute magnificently to all the later history of the Near East and of Western Europe The wealth of Babylonia, based on the farms irrigated by well-controlled canals and on a vast commerce, tempted nomadic and seminomadic neighbors, even under Hammurabi's successor Babylonia was having to stave off assaults. Early in the 18th cent. B C the Hittites captured Babylon and held it briefly The nomadic Cassites or Kassites took the city c 1746 B C and held it precariously for centuries Babylonia was in a decline, which degenerated to anarchy c 580 B C with the fall of the Cassites There were constant wars and conquests until the growingly powerful kings of Assyria asserted their authority As a subsidiary state of the Assyrian Empire, Babylonia once more flourished So important did it become that it was a key area in the attempted uprising against the Assyrian king, Sennacherib (reign 705–687 B C), and Babylon was sacked (c 689 B C.). Again the brother of the last great Assyrian monarch, Assur-bani-pal, tried to use his governorship of Babylonia to form a coalition against the empire After Assur-bani-pal's death (626? B C), the ruler of Babylonia, Nabopolassar, established (625) his independence He allied himself with the Medes and Persians and helped to bring about the capture of Nineveh and the fall of the Assyrian Empire He established what is generally known as the Chaldaean or New Babylonian Empire Under his son, NEBUCHADNEZZAR, the new empire reached its height Babylon was rebuilt with its famous walls and even more famous terraced gardens (the Hanging Gardens) The brick palace with its brilliant tiles and the other colored buildings gave the city a barbaric splendor that was never forgotten The recalcitrant Hebrews were defeated and punished with the Babylonian captivity Egypt had already been defeated by Nebuchadnezzar in the great battle of Carchemish (605 B C) while Nabopolassar was still alive The empire seemed secure, but it was actually transitory The steady growth of Persian power spelled the end of Babylonia, and in 538 B C the last of the Babylonian rulers surrendered to CYRUS THE GREAT (see also BELSHAZZAR) Babylonia became an unimportant region of the Persian Empire See Morris Jastrow, The Civilization of Babylonia and Assyria (1915), R W Rogers, A History of Babylonia and Assyria (6th ed , 1915), L W King, A History of Babylon (1915), H R Hall, The Ancient History of the Near East (8th ed , 1932)

Babylonian captivity see CAPTIVITY and PAPACY

Babylonian religion. The religion of the whole Tigris-Euphrates valley was really one The numerous local gods of the various cities and the mythical legends were taken by other cities Usually some attempt was made to place the particular god of the dominant city at the head of the hierarchy of gods Thus when Babylon was paramount, the special god of Babylon, Marduk, was the king of the gods throughout the Babylonian Empire He was more or less like the god of ASSYRIA, Ashur, who was paramount in the Assyrian days Marduk (also called Amil Marduk) was identical with Bel or BAAL, and he was joined in mythology with the other divinities of the Near East, particularly with the mother goddess, ISHTAR, and with TAMMUZ In well-developed Babylonian mythology Marduk appears as the son of Ea, the god of water and of rain, and was the father of Nebo or Nabu, god of learning and science, who invented writing (he is sometimes also called Borsippa from the seat of his temple near Babylon) An elaborate, but not entirely clear, hierarchy of gods was established and included such gods as Anu (a sky-god), Nergal (god of midsummer and death), and Shamash (a sun-god, who was overshadowed by Marduk, god of light) Notable in Babylonian religion also was the hierarchy of priests, many of the cities were actually ruled by the priests The mythology developed by Babylonia and further elaborated in Assyria was rich and constituted the main bulk of Babylonian and Assyrian literature, which was made permanent in cuneiform writing on clay tablets It included stories of the creation of the world, of the flood that overtook the whole world, of the journey of Ishtar in the underworld, and of the adventures of the great hero, GILGAMESH Just as Assyrian literature and mythology borrowed from Babylon, so Babylon was deeply indebted to Sumerian culture for its religion Prayers were recited in the sacred language, Sumerian, and the temples of the gods (see ZIGGURAT) were made after a pattern familiar to the Sumerians The great towers of later Babylonian temples (suggesting the tower of BABEL) were probably reminiscent of the Sumerian worship of gods of the mountains or high places See Morris Jastrow, Aspects of Religious Belief and Practice in Babylonia and Assyria (1911)

baby's-breath or babies'-breath, name used commonly for Gypsophila paniculata and for some other species of Gypsophila The common species is a perennial native to Europe and Asia but established in parts of North America where it has escaped from cultivation. Growing to a height of about 2 or 3 ft., the plant has a bushy but delicate appearance, the much-branched slender stems bear panicles of small white flowers. (Some species have pink flowers) The lanceolate leaves are about 4 in long near the base of the plant and smaller on the flowering stems The plant is grown in greenhouses for use in mixed bouquets and in gardens to fill in bare places and to give a softening effect. Also sometimes called baby's-breath are white bedstraw (Galium mollugo) and grape hyacinth (Muscari)

Baca (bā'kŭ) [Heb. = weeping], allegorical name of a valley, translated by RV "valley of weeping." The English expression "vale (or valley) of tears" may be a translation of this, through the Vulgate Ps 84 6

Bacau (bäkŏ'), city (pop 34,461), E central Rumania, in Moldavia, on the Bistrita river. It is a commercial center

baccarat (bă'kŭrä, bäkŭrä'), card game introduced into France from Italy in the late 15th cent The game is played by a "banker" and two or more "punters," and the object is to obtain cards whose total value is nearest 8 or 9 with 10's and picture cards counting nothing Two cards are dealt to a hand, with the privilege of a one-card draw

Bacchae (bă'kē) or Bacchantes (bŭkăn'tēz, bŭkănts', bă'kŭnts), in Greek and Roman religion, female worshipers of DIONYSUS or BACCHUS They were remarkable for their frenzied ecstasy, and they gathered in bands for their secret worship of the wine god—a worship that involved the thyrsus, the myrtle, and sweet wild music The Bacchae of Euripides, which is supposed to represent truly the women in their frenzy, tells of the vengeance wreaked on PENTHEUS Orpheus is also supposed to have been slain by maddened Bacchae The women worshipers were also called Maenads

Bacchanalia (bă'kŭnā'lēŭ) [Latin], in Roman religion, festival in honor of Bacchus, god of wine It was originally a religious ceremony, like the LIBERALIA and the Greek DIONYSIA, but it became a drunken orgy and at last was forbidden by law

Bacchantes see BACCHAE

Bacchelli, Riccardo (rēk-kär'dō bäk-kĕl'lē), 1891–, Italian novelist He had been writing for many years somewhat ponderous and mannered novels when he won a degree of popularity with Il diavolo al Pontelungo (1927, Eng tr , The Devil at the Long Bridge, 1929) Also in English is La città degli amanti (1929, Eng tr , Love Town, 1930)

Bacchides (bă'kĭdēz), fl. 160 B.C. governor of Mesopotamia He was sent by Demetrius I of Syria to install Alcimus as priest at Jerusalem, and he was opposed by the Maccabees

Bacchus (bă'kŭs), in Greek and Roman mythology, god of wine, identified with Dionysus He was also a god of vegetation and fertility, and his worship was orgiastic He was the protector of vines Many legends connected with Dionysus were originally those of Bacchus

Bacchylides (băkĭ'lĭdēz), fl c 470 B C , Greek lyric poet, b Ceos, nephew of Simonides of Ceos A contemporary of Pindar, he was patronized by Hiero I His choral lyrics were correct and elegant A number of epinicia and dithyrambs were among the verses fortunately recovered from an Egyptian papyrus (text published by F G Kenyon, The Poems of Bacchylides, 1897) See R C Jebb, Bacchylides the Poems and Fragments (1905)

Bach (bakh), German family whose members were the outstanding musicians of the cities of Thuringia for seven generations Hans Bach (hans) c 1580–1626, a carpet weaver by trade, played the violin at Thuringian festivals and was known as the Player His three sons, Johannes Bach (yōhăn'ŭs), 1604–73, Heinrich Bach (hīn'rĭkh), 1615–92, and Christoph Bach (krīs'tŏf), 1631–61, were all organists in Thuringian cities The descendants of Johannes have been traced into the late 19th cent The most distinguished of this line was Johann Bernhard Bach (yō'hän bĕrn'härt), 1676–1749, organist at Erfurt and later at Eisenach His compositions were performed at Leipzig by J S Bach Two of Heinrich's sons were outstanding composers —Johann Christoph Bach, 1642–1703, organist at Eisenach, and Johann Michael Bach (mĭkh'ä'ĕl), 1648–94, organist at Gehren, instrument maker, and father of Maria Barbara, who became the wife of Johann Sebastian Bach (see separate article) Among the sons of Christoph were identical twins Johann Christoph Bach, 1645–94, whose family line survives in this century, was a violinist and a court musician at Arnstadt, Johann Ambrosius Bach (ämbrō'zēōōs), 1645–95, was a violinist, town musician at Eisenach, and father of J S Bach. His eldest son, Johann Christoph Bach, 1671–1721, was a pupil of the organist Johann Pachelbel He was organist at Ohrdruf when his parents died, and he took into his home his youngest brother, Johann Sebastian, whom he then taught Of Johann Sebastian's sons, three are noteworthy Wilhelm Friedemann Bach (vĭl'hĕlm frē'dŭmän), 1710–84, the eldest, became organist at the Sophienkirche, Dresden, in 1733 and was organist and musical director at the Liebfrauenkirche, Halle, from 1747 to 1764. He had a brilliant reputation for his organ playing, and some of his compositions remain He perhaps had the greatest talent in his family, but his dissolute life prevented his fulfilling his father's hopes for him. Carl Philipp Emmanuel Bach (fē'lĭp ämä'nōōĕl), 1714–88, was cembalist at the court of Frederick the Great from 1738 to 1767 and succeeded his godfather, Georg Philipp Telemann, as musical director at Hamburg. He wrote the first systematic treatise on clavier playing and brought order to the sonata form in his two volumes of sonatas (1642–43). He composed also cantatas, oratorios, symphonies, and Passion music

Johann Christian Bach (krĭs'tyän), 1735–82, went to Italy in 1758 There he became a Roman Catholic, composed Masses and other church music and operas and in 1760 became organist of the Milan Cathedral. In 1762 he went to London, where his operas and his sonatas and concertos for clavier were eminently successful See biography by C S Terry (1929)

Wilhelm Friedrich Ernst Bach (frē'drĭkh ĕrnst'), 1759–1845, became an accomplished and successful pianist He was the last male descendant of J S Bach

Bach, Alexander, 1813–93, Austrian statesman A well-known lawyer and liberal, he took part in the Revolution of 1848 in Vienna, but after its suppression he joined the forces of reaction He became minister of justice (1848) and of the interior (1849–59), and after the death (1852) of Prince Schwarzenberg was the chief figure in the ministry He was created baron in 1854 Bach instituted the Bach system of bureaucratic control of the Hapsburg lands Centralization and Germanization were its chief aims, stringent control by secret police was the method of enforcing them This program was accompanied, however, by measures promoting economic prosperity, notably the abolition of internal tariff barriers, and by agricultural reforms implementing the emancipation of the serfs To the Roman Catholic Church the Concordat of 1855 gave wide powers The Bach system met with opposition, especially in Hungary, and after the Austrian defeat in the Italian War of 1859 its author was dismissed

Bach, Johann Sebastian (sābas'tyän), 1685–1750, German composer, b Eisenach His early teachers were his father, Johann Ambrosius Bach, his brother Johann Christoph, and, possibly, the organist Georg Böhm during Bach's days as a boy soprano at Lüneberg His education was acquired largely through independent studies, he had an insatiable curiosity toward the works of other composers His journeys afoot to hear the organ playing of Johann Adam Reinken at Hamburg and of Buxtehude at Lübeck are famous In 1703 he became violinist in the private orchestra of the prince at Weimar, leaving later the same year to become organist at Arnstadt He went to Mühlhausen as organist in 1707 and there married his cousin Maria Barbara Bach, who bore him seven children In 1708 he became court organist and chamber musician at Weimar, and in 1714 he was made musical director Prince Leopold of Anhalt engaged him as musical director at Cothen (1717) In 1720 his wife died, and he married (1721) Anna Magdalena Wülken, who bore him 13 children In 1723 he assumed the position of cantor at St. Thomas's, Leipzig, where he remained until his death Since few of Bach's works were published during his lifetime, exact dates cannot be fixed for all of them, but most of them can be placed in their proper periods At Arnstadt and Mühlhausen he began the series of organ compositions which culminated in the great works of the Weimar period—the Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor, most of the great preludes and fugues, and the 45 chorale-preludes of Das Orgelbuchlein At Cothen, having neither organ nor choir at his disposal, he produced instrumental compositions, including clavier works—the Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue, the Six English Suites, the Six French Suites, the Two-Part and Three-Part Inventions, composed for the education of his son Wilhelm Friedemann, and The Well-tempered Clavier, Book I—the unaccompanied violin sonatas, and the Brandenburg concertos At Leipzig the St John Passion (1723) was performed while Bach was a candidate for the position there, the Magnificat was performed shortly after he assumed the post The St Matthew Passion (1729), the Christmas Oratorio, the Mass in B Minor, and the six motets followed The principal clavier works of this period were The Well-tempered Clavier, Book II, and the four books of the Clavierübung (1) the Six Partitas (1726–31), (2) the Italian Concerto and the Partita in B Minor (1735), (3) four duets, the Catechism Preludes, and the Prelude and Fugue ("St Anne") in E Flat (1739), and (4) the Aria with Thirty Variations, known as the Goldberg Variations (1742) The Musical Offering for Frederick the Great was composed in 1747 His last work was The Art of the Fugue (1749) In all his positions as choir director, Bach composed sacred cantatas—some 300, of which nearly 200 are extant There are also over 30 secular cantatas, composed at Leipzig, among them Phoebus and Pan (1731). Bach must be regarded primarily, however, as a church composer He made four-part settings of 371 Lutheran chorales, also using many of them as the bases of organ preludes and choral works Fugues are to be found in the motets and larger choral works as well as in his keyboard and instrumental compositions Bach represents the consummation of the fugue form The outstanding study of his life and music is by Albert Schweitzer (Eng tr., 1911) See also biography by C. S. Terry (1928), studies by Philipp Spitta (1899), J. N Forkel (Eng tr., 1920), Andre Pirro (Eng. tr., 1920), C. H. H. Parry (rev. ed., 1934), and A E. F. Dickinson (1936), H. T David and Arthur Mendel, The Bach Reader (1945)

Bach Choir, name of choral organizations producing the music of J S Bach. The Bach Choir of London was organized in 1875 under Otto Goldschmidt's direction The Bach Choir of Bethlehem, Pa., founded in 1900 by Ruth Porter Doster and J F Wolle, suspended its annual festivals in 1905, but resumed them in 1912 Bruce Carey was conductor, 1933–38, and was succeeded by Ifor Jones See Raymond Walters, The Bethlehem Bach Choir (1923)

Bache, Alexander Dallas (bāch), 1806–67, American educator and physicist, b. Philadelphia, grad West Point, 1825; great-grandson of Benjamin Franklin He was professor of natural philosophy at the Univ of Pennsylvania (1828–36, 1842–43) As president-elect (1836–40) of Girard College, he studied (1836–38) educational methods in Europe and produced the influential Report on Education in Europe (1839) As first principal (1839–42) of the Central High School of Philadelphia, he influenced the development of a system of free education in the public schools of Philadelphia He established (1839) at Girard College the first magnetic observatory in North America From 1843 he was superintendent of weights and measures of the United States and of the U S Coast Survey, which he largely reorganized He was an active member of the Franklin Institute, a regent of the Smithsonian Institution (1846–67), president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science (1850–51) and of the American Philosophical Society (1855–57), and a founder and first president (1863–67) of the National Academy of Sciences See biography by M M. Odgers (1947)

Bache, Benjamin Franklin, 1769–98, American journalist, b Philadelphia, son of Richard Bache and grandson of Benjamin Franklin In 1790 he founded the Philadelphia General Advertiser (later the Aurora) As the champion of the Jeffersonians, Bache's paper denounced the Federalists roundly, and he was arrested under the Sedition Act (see ALIEN AND SEDITION ACTS) but was released on parole He died soon afterward of yellow fever

Bache, Franklin, 1792–1864, American physician and chemist, b Philadelphia, grad Univ of Pennsylvania (B A , 1810, M D , 1814), son of Benjamin Franklin Bache He taught at the Franklin Institute (1826–32) and was professor of chemistry at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy (1831–41) and at Jefferson Medical College (from 1841) With George B Wood he prepared the first 11 editions of The Dispensatory of the United States (1st ed , 1833)

Bache, Jules Semon, 1861–1944, American financier and art collector, b New York city He made an immense fortune in Wall St , organized the banking firm of J S Bache and Company, and was director of 12 other firms In 1937 he opened his magnificent art collection to the public, and in 1944 the collection was given permanently to the Metropolitan Museum It includes famous works by Raphael, Titian, Rembrandt, Velázquez, and other masters

Bache, Richard, 1737–1811, American merchant, b Yorkshire, England He came to New York city in 1765 to join an older brother, Theophylact, in the mercantile business but soon moved to Philadelphia in the interest of the firm, which had built up a large West Indian trade In 1767 he married Sarah, daughter of Benjamin Franklin He was a patriot in the American Revolution and served on many committees, including the Board of War He succeeded Franklin as Postmaster General in 1776 and held office until 1782 His wife (1744–1808) is noted for her great activity in the Revolution in collecting food and clothing for the soldiers

Bacheller, Irving, 1859–1950, American novelist, b Pierrepont, N Y , grad St Lawrence Univ , 1882 A newspaperman, he founded in 1884 one of the first newspaper syndicates in the United States Of his many novels, especially popular were Eben Holden (1900), the historical romance D'ri and I (1901), and Keeping Up with Lizzie (1911) His two autobiographical works, Coming up the Road Memories of a North Country Boyhood (1928) and From Stores of Memory (1938), give a good picture of American rural life of the period bachelor's-button, popular name for several plants usually characterized by rounded flowers, such as the CORNFLOWER and GLOBE AMARANTH

Bache Peninsula (bāch), on Ellesmere Island, in the Arctic Archipelago off N Canada From 1926 to 1933 the Royal Canadian Mounted Police had here a post that was the most northerly in the world, within 800 mi of the North Pole

Bacher, Otto Henry (bā'kûr), 1856–1909, American etcher, illustrator, and painter, b Cleveland He illustrated for Century and Harper's and executed many etchings, including his "Danube" series. He was considered one of the best pen-and-ink artists of his time. He wrote With Whistler in Venice (1908)

Bachman, John (bāk'–), 1790–1874, American naturalist, b Rhinebeck, N Y From 1815 he was pastor of a Lutheran church in Charleston, S C , and there studied and collected animals of the South. He collaborated with his friend J J Audubon on The Viviparous Quadrupeds of North America (plates, 30 parts, 1842–45; text, 3 vols , 1846–54)

Bachrites (bāk'rīts), descendants of BECHER 2.

Bach system see BACH, ALEXANDER

Baciccio, Il: see GAULLI, GIOVANNI BATTISTA.

bacillus: see BACTERIA

Back, Sir George, 1796–1878, British explorer in N Canada He accompanied Sir John Franklin on arctic expeditions in 1818, 1819–22, and 1824–27 On an expedition (1833–35) of his own, Back explored the Great Fish river (now Back river) in the present Northwest Territories His narrative of the voyage appeared in 1836 On another journey (1836–37) he explored the arctic coast of Canada

Back, river of the Mackenzie and Keewatin dists , Northwest Territories It flows northerly for 605 mi through the barren grounds to the Arctic Ocean It was named for Sir George Back backache. Low back pain has many causes injuries to the ligaments and muscles of the lumbar spine and pelvis, due to trauma or mechanical strain, bony anomalies of the vertebrae, acquired lesions of the bones of the back caused by tuberculosis, poliomyelitis, and chronic arthritis, lesions of the nervous system such as meningitis or tumors of the spinal cord Rupture of an intervertebral disk or flat feet may also result in low back pain Disorders of the uterus and infections of the bladder may cause pain which is referred to the back. See also LUMBAGO backbone. see SPINAL COLUMN

Backbone Mountain, peak, 3,360 ft high, NW Md., in the Alleghenies, highest elevation in the state backgammon (bāk'gă"mun, bāk'gă'mun), game of chance and skill played by two persons upon a specially marked board divided into two tables, each of which has 12 alternately colored points or spaces. The moves permitted each player are dictated by the throws of dice, and the object is to remove one's 15 pieces, or disks, from the board first according to the rules The game was played by the ancients, a backgammon board with dice and pieces was found in Babylonian excavations Backgammon was also played in Greece and Rome, and after the 10th cent A D it became popular in Europe In England the game was known as "tables" Parcheesi, which probably originated in India, is a form of backgammon and permits four players in the game See W H Walling and W J Hiss, Backgammon Standards (1931), R L Frey, ed, The New Complete Hoyle (1947)

Backhuysen or Bakhuyzen, Ludolf (lōō'dôlf bak'hīzun), 1631–1708, Dutch marine painter In later years he also did some etching and engraving of marine views He is said to have instructed Peter the Great in drawing

Backus, Isaac, 1724–1806, American clergyman, leader among New England Baptists and a champion of religious freedom, b Norwich, Conn Converted in the Great Awakening, he joined the separatists or "New Light" faction He became pastor in 1748 of a Congregational church in Middleboro, Mass , after his conversion to the Baptist faith, he organized and became minister of a Baptist church there, which he served from 1756 until his death According to his calculations, Backus traveled over 68,000 mi on his evangelistic tours, mostly on horseback His History of New England with Particular Reference to the Baptists (3 vols., 1777–96) is a major source for the religious history of the region and the period

Bacon, Anthony, 1558–1601, English diplomat, elder brother of Francis Bacon He was a foreign agent (1579–92) for Lord Burghley and undertook the same service for the earl of Essex in 1593 He was a member of Parliament in 1593 and 1597. He was loyal to Essex, and the execution of Essex seems to have hastened Bacon's death

Bacon, Delia Salter, 1811–59, American author, b Tallmadge, Ohio, sister of Leonard Bacon After literary and lecture work, she became convinced that Shakspere's plays were written by a group of whom Francis Bacon, Sir Walter Ralegh, and Edmund Spenser were the chief figures She wrote The Philosophy of the Plays of Shakespeare Unfolded (1857) See Theodore Bacon, Delia Bacon (1888).

Bacon, Francis, 1561–1626, English philosopher and statesman He was the son of Sir Nicholas Bacon, lord keeper to Queen Elizabeth Educated at Cambridge and Gray's Inn, he became a member of Parliament in 1584 His opposition to Elizabeth's tax program retarded his political advancement, and only because of the efforts of the earl of Essex did Elizabeth accept Bacon as an unofficial member of her Learned Council At Essex's trial Bacon put duty to the state above friendship and assumed an active part in the prosecution—a course for which many have condemned him With the succession of James I, Bacon's fortunes improved He became knight in 1603, attorney general in 1613, lord keeper in 1617, and lord chancellor in 1621, he was created Baron Verulam of Verulam in 1618 and Viscount St Albans in 1621 In 1621, accused of accepting bribes as lord chancellor, he pleaded guilty and was fined £40,000, banished from the court, disqualified from holding office, and sentenced to the Tower The banishment, fine, and imprisonment were remitted He spent the rest of his life writing in retirement Bacon belongs to both philosophy and literature He projected a large philosophical work, the Instauratio Magna, but completed only two parts, The Advancement of Learning (1605), later expanded in Latin as De dignitate et augmentis scientarum (1623), and the Novum Organum (1620) His Historia Naturalis et Experimentalis (1622) is the beginning of the third part of the Instauratio Magna Bacon's contribution to philosophy was his formulation and introduction of the inductive method of modern science as opposed to the a priori method of SCHOLASTICISM He insisted upon the principle of exclusion, and he urged full investigation in all cases, for he avoided theories based on insufficient data Despite the fact that he made no discoveries himself, Bacon exerted a tremendous influence on the experimental science of his own country Macaulay and his followers tended to belittle Bacon's scientific writings, but present-day scientists have restored them to a respectable position The New Atlantis (1627) is a scientific utopia which found partial fulfillment with the organization of the Royal Society in 1660 The Essays (1597) are his best-known writings, and they hold a place in literature for their shrewdness and wisdom and for an epigrammatic style of remarkable concentration and pungency See his works (ed by James Spedding, R L Ellis, and D D Heath, 7 vols , 1857–59), Letters and Life (ed by James Spedding, 7 vols , 1861–74), G W Steeves, Francis Bacon (1910), Benjamin Farrington, Francis Bacon, Philosopher of Industrial Science (1950)

Bacon, Frank, 1864–1922, American actor-manager, b Marysville, Calif He played (1918–21) in Lightnin', written by him with Winchell Smith

Bacon, Henry, 1866–1924, American architect, b Watseka, Ill His professional career was begun in the offices of McKim, Mead, and White, but after 1903 he practiced independently Among the important structures designed by him are the Lincoln Memorial, Washington, the public library, Paterson, N J , the Waterbury (Conn) General Hospital, the Lincoln monument, Lincoln, Nebr , the World War Memorial, Yale Univ , and the monument to Charles Parnell in Dublin, Ireland In 1923 he was awarded the gold medal of the American Institute of Architects

Bacon or Baconthorpe, John, d 1346, English scholastic philosopher, grandnephew of Roger Bacon He was a Carmelite and served (1329–33) as provincial of that order in England Several of his numerous commentaries were long used as theological texts He was most famous for his defense of the doctrines of Averroës

Bacon, John, 1740–99, English sculptor He is best known for his monuments (e g , that of Lord Chatham at Westminster Abbey) and for his portrait busts, which include George III (Christ Church, Oxford) and the Marquess Wellesley and Thomas Gray (both National Portrait Gall , London)

Bacon, Josephine Dodge Daskam, 1876–, American author, b Stamford, Conn Known first for her humorous stories about children—The Madness of Philip (1902), Memoirs of a Baby (1904)—she has written novels and books for girls She was also largely responsible for the Girl Scout magazine, The American Girl, from 1918 to 1923

Bacon, Leonard, 1802–81, American Congregational minister, b Detroit, Mich , grad Yale, 1820, and studied at Andover Theological Seminary He served for 41 years as pastor of the First Church of New Haven, one of the leading Congregational churches in the country Bacon was a noted anti-slavery leader, although not an abolitionist His Slavery Discussed in Occasional Essays (1846) made a great impression upon Lincoln He was a founder and editor of the Independent and author of the widely known Pilgrim Hymn (1833) and The Genesis of the New England Churches (1874) See T D. Bacon, Leonard Bacon, a Statesman in the Church (1931)

Bacon, Nathaniel, 1647–76, leader of BACON'S REBELLION in colonial Virginia. An aristocrat born and bred (he was kin to Francis Bacon, had been educated at Cambridge and Gray's Inn, and was a member of the governor's council), Bacon nevertheless became the champion of the oppressed yeomen When he died suddenly from the effects of malaria, the revolt collapsed

Bacon, Sir Nicholas, 1509–79, English statesman By his second wife his sons were Anthony and Francis Bacon. This wife, Jane Cooke, was the sister of the wife of William Cecil, later Lord Burghley, and through this connection Bacon was appointed lord keeper of the great seal (1558) under Queen Elizabeth Although a Roman Catholic himself, he regarded the Catholic Mary Queen of Scots as a menace to English peace and opposed any leniency suggested for her

Bacon, Peggy, 1895–, American illustrator, caricaturist, and etcher, b Ridgefield, Conn She studied under many of the important American artists of her day and traveled widely In 1920 she married the painter Alexander Brook, from whom she was divorced in 1940. Her illustrations for George Ade, Sandburg, and Louis Untermeyer and for her own poems and her stories for children are noteworthy She is perhaps best known for her brilliant satirical etchings and dry points which have been much reproduced and are to be seen in many important galleries and private collections Socialist Meeting (Metropolitan Mus) is characteristic Among her published works are Off with Their Heads (1934) and Cat-Calls (1935), a volume of light verse

Bacon, Roger, c 1214–1294?, English scholastic philosopher and scientist, a Franciscan, called the Admirable Doctor He studied at Oxford and the Univ of Paris and became one of the most celebrated teachers at Oxford Friar Bacon was not only an eager student but a zealous teacher, somewhat inclined to be overly abusive of contemporary thinkers He was learned in Hebrew and in Greek and stressed the value of knowing the original languages in the study of Aristotle and of the Bible He may possibly have known Arabic since he was acquainted with Arabian Aristotelianism, and his own philosophy drew upon the Arabs as well as upon St Augustine In modern times he has been considered of particular interest because of his interest in natural science, in experiments, and in observation of phenomena "It is the intention of philosophy," he said, "to work out the natures and properties of things" He repudiated custom and popular opinion Mathematics he considered the gateway to science, and experience, or verification, he thought the only basis of certainty This interest in outer experience was to him, however, not in the least divorced from theology but rather one of the means of reaching that truth which is above all recorded in the Bible Wisdom and faith were to him one He was likewise interested in the inner experience, the mystical way to union with God His writings were numerous Three of the most important were all written in one year (1267–68) for Pope Clement IV—the Opus majus (Eng tr , 1928) the Opus minor, and the Opus tertium He was deeply interested in alchemy and wrote upon alchemical subjects as well as various other aspects of the experimental study of nature He was credited by popular legend with great learning in magical practices—a reputation enhanced by the attribution to him of all sorts of treatises on magic and pseudo science He was long credited with the invention of gunpowder A manuscript in cipher discovered in the 20th cent has been attributed to him, and one transcription of it would make Bacon the first man to observe spiral nebulae through a telescope and to examine cells through a microscope, but considerable doubt has been cast on the original date and the authenticity of the manuscript Bacon would seem to have been involved in some obscure trouble with the authorities of the Church, but there is no evidence that his difficulties were caused by his interest in science, and it would seem more likely that they were due to his notoriously pugnacious disposition Earlier editions of his major works were supplemented by an edition of his hitherto unedited works in various fascicles by Robert Steele and others (1909–35) See A G Little, ed , Roger Bacon Essays (1914), biography by F Winthrop Woodruff (1938)

bacon, the flesh of hogs—especially the sides, belly, or back—which has been preserved by being salted or pickled and then dried with or without wood smoke In early agricultural communities the curing of meat was one of the important household industries, the process consisting of soaking the pork in brine or rubbing it in a salt mixture by hand, then smoking the sides or flitches in smoke from an open chimney The process, requiring skill and experience, took sometimes three or four months From ancient times bacon has been an almost indispensable part of the diet of poorer people, and it has entered into games and folkways, given rise to proverbs and phrases, and even acquired, in primitive groups, a vaguely religious significance In ancient Prussia a flitch of bacon was offered to the god of thunder and fertility to invoke good weather for the crops, and traces of this custom still survive in remote communities "To save his bacon" (his person or property), "to bring home the bacon" (win in contest), and "he could bring a flitch from Dunmow" (he is good-natured, see DUNMOW), all indicate the importance of bacon in rustic economy The making of bacon still lingers in some rural communities, but the bulk of its manufacture is carried on in industrial meat-packing plants, which are equipped to slaughter, dress, cure, smoke, and sell on a large scale Canadian bacon is prepared from the boned loin The high fat content of bacon makes it a valuable energy food

Bacon's Rebellion, popular revolt in colonial Virginia in 1676, led by Nathaniel BACON The economic exploitation of the small farmers by England and the tidewater aristocracy was the underlying cause for the uprising, which was precipitated by the failure of the governor, Sir William BERKELEY, to defend the frontier against Indian attacks Bacon commanded two unauthorized but successful expeditions against the Indians and then came to Jamestown as the representative of Henrico co. in the newly elected house of burgesses, which Berkeley had been forced to convene. Shortly thereafter Bacon, bringing many supporters to the capital, coerced Berkeley into granting him a commission to continue his Indian campaigns, and a circumspect assembly passed several reform measures The governor, having failed to raise a force against Bacon, fled to the Eastern Shore on Bacon's approach, and the popular leader returned to his Indian fighting However, the party he had sent to capture Berkeley was itself taken, and the governor, gathering support, returned in triumph to Jamestown, where he proclaimed Bacon and his men rebels and traitors After a sharp skirmish Bacon recaptured Jamestown (Berkeley again took flight), but, fearing that he could not hold it against attack, fired the town His opposition was now disposed of, but Bacon died before he could carry out his sound reforms Without his leadership the rebellion soon collapsed, and after a few months Berkeley returned to wreak a bloody vengeance before he was forced to return to England Berkeley's removal and the end of Indian attacks were the only benefits the yeomen had won in the rebellion, and the tidewater aristocracy long maintained its power See T J Wertenbaker, Torchbearer of the Revolution. the Story of Bacon's Rebellion and Its Leader (1940).

Baconthorpe, John see BACON, JOHN.

bacteria, minute unicellular organisms classified usually as plants of the class Schizomycetes belonging to the division of thallophytes called fungi In some classifications bacteria are grouped with the blue-green algae as a separate division of the plant kingdom A cell wall surrounds the protoplasm of the bacterial cell There is evidence that nuclear material is present either scattered through the cell or gathered to form a more definite nuclear body. Three forms are typical—the rod-shaped or bacillus, the round or coccus, and the spiral or spirillum Different species range in their longest dimension from about $^1/_{250}$ in to about $^1/_{250,000}$ in Among the largest are the sulphur bacteria, found in water and mud containing hydrogen sulphide, and the iron bacteria, found on ground washed by water containing iron Many, chiefly the bacillus and spirillum forms, are motile, progressing by whiplike movements of flagella borne singly or in groups at one or both ends of the cell or completely surrounding it Reproduction is chiefly by transverse fission Under unfavorable conditions some bacteria form spores—thickened round or oval coverings within which the living material remains until conditions improve Some bacteria, those known as aerobic forms, can respire only in the presence of free or atmospheric oxygen, others, called anaerobic bacteria, cannot grow in the presence of free oxygen but obtain oxygen from compounds, a third group, called facultative anaerobes, can grow with or without free oxygen Bacteria which parasitize other living things, thus causing disease are known as pathogenic forms Among the diseases caused by bacteria are tuberculosis, diphtheria, cholera, typhoid fever, pneumonia, tetanus, gangrene, anthrax, and tularemia Some bacteria attack the tissues directly, others produce poisonous secretions called toxins Injections of antitoxin or serum prevent certain diseases, e g , tetanus, diphtheria, and hog cholera VACCINATION is a means of inducing immunity to certain diseases Bacteria cause certain diseases of plants, e g , black rot of cabbage, fire blight of apples and pears, and crown galls Useful bacteria outnumber the harmful ones NITROGEN-FIXING BACTERIA and NITRIFYING BACTERIA help to enrich the soil Bacteria of decay, by decomposing dead organic material, also enrich the soil and aid in ridding the world of debris They are employed in some sewage-disposal plants Bacteria aid in many processes such as the curing of tobacco, retting of flax, and making of vinegar Bacteria are responsible for the flavor of fermented milks and of certain cheeses Methods of food preservation are designed to prevent the growth of bacteria Bacteria were first observed by Leeuwenhoek in the 17th cent , but the science of bacteriology was established by the work of Pasteur and Robert Koch See Otto Rahn, Microbes of Men (1945), A T Henrici, The Biology of Bacteria (3d ed , revised by E J Ordal, 1948)

bacteriophage (băktēr'ĭfāj), substance believed to be composed of ultramicroscopic particles destructive to bacteria F H d'Herelle and his followers believe that it resembles a virus and acts as a parasite Others think that it is similar to an enzyme A number of bacteriophages have been recognized, each of which acts only upon certain species of bacteria Bacteriophages appear to multiply only in the presence of living bacteria They cause lysis, or disintegration, of the bacterial cell. They are found in many places, particularly in the intestines of human beings and in fecal matter and sewage. Bacteriophage was discovered independently by F. W. Twort (1915) and by F. H. d'Herelle (1917).

bacteroid see NITROGEN-FIXING BACTERIA

Bactria (băk'trēă), ancient Greek kingdom of central Asia Its capital was Bactra, the modern BALKH in N Afghanistan The region had been conquered by the Persians and was an eastern province of the Persian Empire It was very prosperous as the region for transmitting Siberian and Indian metals and goods to the Persians When Alexander the Great invaded the Persian Empire, Darius III, after being defeated, fled to Bactria, where he was murdered by the Bactrian satrap, Bessus The Bactrians resisted (330–328 B C) Alexander stoutly, but were subdued Bactria took on Greek culture and became quasi-independent Theoretically it remained part of the Seleucid empire In 256 B C, Diodotus I was made satrap and a little later assumed complete independence His successor, Euthydemus, successfully resisted the attempts (208–206 B C) of Antiochus III to bring Bactria back into the empire His son Demetrius made Bactria a powerful state He was overlord of part of Chinese Turkistan and carried his conquests deep into N India, taking Patna The Seleucid ruler, Antiochus IV, sent Eucratidas into Bactria, and Eucratidas in 167 B C brought about the death of Demetrius, but he was himself slain in 159 B C Menander, Demetrius' general, continued to exercise power until his death in 145 B C A little later (c 130 B C) Bactria fell to the nomadic Sakas and did not rise again as a state See W W Tarn, The Greeks in Bactria and India (1938)

Bacup (bă'kŭp), municipal borough (pop 20,590), Lancashire, England It has cotton mills, shoe factories, coal mines, and iron and brass foundries. The town is known for its cooperative enterprises

Badajoz (bädhähōth'), city (pop 32,604), capital of Badajos prov, W Spain, in Estremadura, on the Guadiana Rising to prominence under the Moors, it was the seat (1022–94) of a vast independent emirate Alfonso IX of Leon liberated it definitively in 1228 In the succeeding years Badajoz was repeatedly attacked by the Portuguese and was consequently strongly fortified In the War of the Spanish Succession it was besieged (1705) by the allies, a century later in the Peninsular War the French failed to take it in a long siege (1808–9) and took it in 1811 only to be driven out by Wellington after bitter fighting (1812) In the civil war of 1936–39 the capture (1936) of Badajoz by the Insurgents after a bloody battle was followed by hundreds of executions Notable landmarks are the massive cathedral (begun in the 13th cent) and remains of the Moorish citadel

Badakhshan (bädakhshan'), province, NE Afghanistan, between the Hindu Kush and the Amu Darya The capital is Faizabad Badakhshan escaped Jenghiz's hordes but was conquered by Tamerlane (c 1400) and Abdullah the Uzbek (1585) It is the world's chief source of fine lapis lazuli and is also noted for its rubies, its pistachio nuts, and its gold

Badakhshan, USSR see MOUNTAIN-BADAKHSHAN

Badalona (bädhalō'nä), city (pop 37,373), Barcelona prov, NE Spain, in Catalonia It is a Mediterranean port and an industrial suburb of Barcelona, with textile, chemical, and glass manufactures Ancient tombs, possibly Phoenician, have been found near by

Bad Axe, city (pop 2,624), co seat of Huron co, N Mich, between Saginaw Bay and Lake Huron, settled c 1860 inc as a village 1885, as a city 1905 It is a farm trade center

Bad Axe, river of SW Wisconsin flowing SW to the Mississippi nearly opposite the Minn–Iowa line Near its mouth Black Hawk was defeated (1832)

Bad Blankenburg (bät' blăng'kunbōork), town (pop 6,601), Thuringia, central Germany During his residence here (1837–45) Froebel founded the first kindergarten

Baddeck (bădĕk'), village, on Cape Breton Island, N S., on the north shore of Big Bras d'Or Lake and W of Sydney It is a summer resort On Feb 23, 1909, it was the scene of the first airplane flight in British territory, made by J A D McCurdy (later lieutenant governor of Nova Scotia) The experimental organization for this was made by Alexander Graham Bell, whose summer home was here

Bad Dürkheim (bät' dürk'hīm), resort (pop 9,680), Rhenish Palatinate, W Germany, W of Mannheim. It is famous for salt baths (frequented since Roman times) and for a cure by a diet of grapes.

Bade, Josse see BADIUS, JODOCUS

Bad Ems see EMS

Baden (bä'dŭn), former German state, SW Germany After 1945 it was divided in two parts—in the south, the state of Baden (3,842 sq mi, pop 1,197,850), occupied by the French, and in the north, the Baden dist (1,984 sq mi, pop c 1,400,000), in the state of Württemberg-Baden, occupied by the Americans Stretching from the Main river in the northeast across the lower Neckar valley and along the right bank of the Rhine to Lake Constance, the former state borders on Bavaria, Hesse, the Rhenish Palatinate, France, Switzerland, and Württemberg The southern section is largely occupied by the BLACK FOREST The American-occupied sector includes the former capital, KARLSRUHE, the industrial and commercial cities of MANNHEIM and Pforsheim, and the university town of HEIDELBERG. The French-occupied state includes the cities of BADEN-BADEN, Freiburg, Constance, Offenburg, Kandern, and Rastatt Farm products and wine are the chief sources of wealth. Until the French Revolution the area was a confusing jigsaw puzzle of petty margraviates and ecclesiastic states (bishoprics of Mainz, Speyer, Strasbourg, and Constance) The BREISGAU belonged to the Hapsburg lands, the Mannheim-Heidelberg area to the Rhenish PALATINATE In 1771 the margraviates of Baden-Baden and Baden-Durlach were united under the same branch of the ancient house of ZÄHRINGEN Margrave Charles Frederick, raised to the rank of elector in 1803, joined the Confederation of the Rhine in 1806 with the title grand duke and between 1803 and 1810 acquired, by grace of Napoleon I, the entire state Despite the liberal constitution of 1818 the grand duchy was severely shaken by the Revolution of 1848, which was suppressed with the help of Prussian troops Among the revolutionary leaders was Friedrich Hecker Baden sided with Austria in the Austro-Prussian War (1866) but joined the German Empire in 1871 It became a republic in 1918 and joined the Weimar Republic

Baden (bä'dun) or Baden-bei-Wien (–bī-vēn'), resort city (pop 20,528), Lower Austria, SSW of Vienna It has famous hot sulphur springs

Baden, town (pop 10,388), Aargau canton, Switzerland Noted for its sulphur baths, it was known to the Romans as Aquae Helveticae The Swiss diet met here from 1424 to 1712 The Treaty of Baden (1714) complemented the Peace of Utrecht (see UTRECHT, PEACE OF) The town was the capital of Baden canton under the Helvetic Republic (1798–1803) The Limmat river divides Baden into the "Old Town" (left bank), with the castle of Stein, which once belonged to the counts of Lenzburg, Kyburg, and Hapsburg, and the "Bath Town," with the popular Kur-Park The city produces electrical machinery and aluminumware

Baden, residential borough (pop 2,135), W Pa, on the Ohio and NW of Pittsburgh, laid out c 1839, inc 1868

Baden-Baden (bä'dun-bä'dun), city (pop 32,434), S Baden, SW Germany, in the Black Forest Surrounded by parks, with a splendid casino, it is one of Germany's most fashionable spas Its mineral springs were used by the Romans, and remains of Roman baths have been found here

Baden-bei-Wien see BADEN, Lower Austria

Badenoch (bad'unŏkh"), highland district, Inverness-shire, Scotland, c 45 mi long and 19 mi wide, traversed by the Spey It is wild and forested Kingussie is the leading town

Baden-Powell of Gilwell, Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell, 1st Baron, (bă'dun-pōŭl), 1857–1941, British soldier, founder of the Boy Scouts He saw much active service in India and Africa prior to the South African War, in which he defended Mafeking for seven months (1899–1900) and subsequently organized the South African constabulary For his enduring work in organizing (1908) the Boy Scout and Girl Guide movements he received a peerage in 1929 His writings include Scouting For Boys (1908), Rovering to Success (1922), and Scouting and Youth Movements (1929) See biography by E E Reynolds (1943)

Badger, Joseph, 1708–65, American painter, b Charlestown, Mass By trade a glazier and house and sign painter, he turned his hand to portraiture His later works rank well with those of our better-known early painters One of Badger's best portraits is that of John Adams, in the Detroit Institute of Art See Cuthbert Lee, Early American Portrait Painters (1929)

badger, carnivorous mammal of the family Mustelidae The badger has a broad, heavy body, rather long snout, sharp claws, and shaggy fur generally gray and brownish with markings of black and white Among the badgers are the true Old World badger of Europe and Asia (Meles), the American badger (Taxidea), found in parts of W, N, and N central North America, and the Asiatic ferret badger (Helictis) and sand or hog badger (Arctonyx)

Bad Godesberg (bät' gō'dusbĕrk), resort town (pop 38,743), in the former Rhine Prov of Prussia, NW Germany, idyllically situated on a height above Bonn on the Rhine It is visited for its radioactive mineral springs The ruined castle dates from 1210 In Sept, 1938, during the Czechoslovak crisis, Adolf Hitler and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain met at Bad Godesberg (see MUNICH PACT)

Badham, Charles (bă'dm), 1813–84, English classical scholar He gained a great contemporary reputation by his editions of several Euripidean dramas and Platonic dialogues

Badía y Leblich, Domingo (dōmēng'gō badē'a ē lĕblēch'), 1766–1818, Spanish traveler, known as Ali Bey He set out from Cádiz (1803) and traveled through N Africa, Syria, and Arabia, reaching Mecca, of which he fixed the position astronomically He wrote Voyage d'Ali Bey en Asie et en Afrique (1814) See D G. Hogarth, The Penetration of Arabia (1904).

Badin (bă'dĭn), unincorporated aluminum-producing "company town" (pop 2,204), central N C, on the Yadkin and NE of Charlotte, founded 1913 A power dam is near by.

Bad Ischl, Austria see ISCHL

Badius, Jodocus (jōdō'kus bā'dēŭs), 1462–1535, French printer in Paris, b. Asche, near Brussels. His original name was Josse Bada (yō'sŭ ba'du), and he is sometimes called for his birthplace Jodocus Badius Ascensius (usĕn'shus) He taught Greek and edited classics in Lyons before he became a printer, and he gained some recognition as a scholar and as an author, his writings included a life of Thomas à Kempis His printer's marks are notable early pictures of a printing press See Alfred Forbes Johnson, French Sixteenth Century Printing (1928)

Bad Kissingen (bät' kĭ'sĭng-un), health resort (pop. 15,006), Lower Franconia, NW Bavaria, on the Franconian Saale Its mineral springs have been frequented since the 16th cent It was the scene of an attempt on Bismarck's life in 1874

Bad Kreuznach (bät' krōnts'nakh), spa (pop 26,557), in the former Rhine Prov of Prussia, W Germany, after 1945 in the French-occupied Rhineland-Palatinate Of Celtic origin, it has salt baths frequented since Roman times

Badlands, arid plateau c 120 mi long and 30 to 50 mi wide, SW S Dak, E of the Black Hills The area is characterized by fantastic scenery, the result of erosion, and by deposits of prehistoric fossils Badlands National Monument (122,972 46 acres), occupying part of the region, was authorized in 1929 and established in 1939

Badminton (băd'mĭntun), estate, Gloucestershire, England, NE of Bristol, the seat of the dukes of Beaufort The game badminton derives its name from the place

badminton (băd'mĭntun), game played by volleying a shuttlecock—a small, cork hemisphere to which feathers are attached—over a net Light, gut-strung rackets are used, and badminton, which is generally similar to tennis, is played by two or four persons The game probably originated in India (where it was called poona) though it may have been known earlier in China It was popular in the 1870s in England, taking its name from the seat of the duke of Beaufort Later the game spread to other countries, and in recent years it has become increasingly popular in the United States David G Freeman has been the outstanding American player

Bad Nauheim (bät' nou'hīm), town (pop 12,909), Hesse-Darmstadt, W Germany, in the Taunus mts With carbon dioxide and salt baths, it is a world-famous health resort for heart diseases

Badoglio, Pietro (pyā'trō bädō'lyō), 1871–, Italian field marshal After serving in the First World War, he was governor of Libya (1929–33) and succeeded Gen Emilio de Bono as commander in chief in the Ethiopian war, which he brought to a victorious end (1936) Created duke of Addis Ababa, he was briefly viceroy of Ethiopia, then chief of the Italian general staff until 1940 After the fall of Mussolini, he was made premier by King Victor Emmanuel III (1943) He negotiated an armistice with the Allies, whom he joined in the war against Germany Meeting with much opposition in Italy, he resigned in 1944 He wrote Italy in the Second World War (Eng tr, 1948)

Bad Pyrmont see PYRMONT

Bad Reichenhall (bät' rī'khunhal), health resort (pop 13,441), Upper Bavaria, on the Saalach. There are large salt mines near by.

Badrinath (bŭd'rĭnat), peak, 23,210 ft high, United Provs, India, in the central axis of the Himalaya. At an elevation of c 10,400 ft is a temple to Vishnu

Badula see TOTILA

Baeda see BEDE

Baedeker, Karl (bä'dukur), 1801–59, German publisher, founder of the Baedeker guidebooks His printing establishment was at Coblenz, but his son Fritz, who continued the business, moved it to Leipzig The guidebooks have run into many editions, especially for European countries

Baekeland, Leo Hendrik (bäk'länd), 1863–1944, American chemist, b Ghent, Belgium, grad Univ of Ghent, 1882 In 1889 he emigrated to the United States He founded (1893) and conducted, until 1899, when he sold the rights to Eastman, a company for producing a photographic paper of his own invention In 1909 he announced his invention of BAKELITE, and from 1910 to 1939 he served as president of the Bakelite Corporation He wrote Some Aspects of Industrial Chemistry (1914)

Baena (baā'na), city (pop 19,787), Córdoba prov, S Spain, in Andalusia It is an agricultural center, with ruins of the ancient Roman market town of Baniana or Banuana

Baer, George Frederick (bâr), 1842–1914, American capitalist, b Somerset co, Pa, educated at Franklin and Marshall College Admitted to the bar in 1864, he became legal adviser to J Pierpont Morgan, and in 1901 was made president of the Morgan-controlled Reading Company He held many other posts and was a key figure in the railroad-and-coal "empire" He is remembered for his refusal to arbitrate and his forthright declarations of the owners' interests in the strike of the anthracite-coal miners in 1902

Baer, Karl Ernst von, 1792–1876, Estonian biologist. He was a professor at Würzburg and Königsberg and from 1834 at St Petersburg. He is considered a founder of modern embryology In 1827 he discovered the mammalian ovum In his History of the Development of Animals (2 vols, 1828–37), he presented the theory of embryonic germ layers (the development of body tissues and organs from definite layers of cells formed in the early embryonic stages) and showed that the development of the embryo in different animals is similar in its early stages

Baer, William Jacob, 1860–1941, American painter, b Cincinnati, studied at the McMicken School of Design, Cincinnati, and at the Munich Royal Academy He painted portraits and genre pictures and later confined himself to miniatures Among his works are Aurora, Nymph, and Phoebe (Walters Art Gall, Baltimore), Daphne (Brooklyn Mus), and Murray Marvin (Montclair, N J, Art Mus)

Baeyer, Adolf von (Johann Friedrich Wilhelm Adolf von Baeyer) (ä'dôlf fŭn bā'yur, yōhan' frē'drĭkh vĭl'hĕlm), 1835–1917, German chemist He taught at Berlin and Strasbourg and in 1875 succeeded Liebig at Munich, where he was professor of chemistry until his death For his work in organic chemistry, especially that on organic dyes and the hydroaromatic compounds, he received the 1905 Nobel Prize in Chemistry His discovery of the molecular structure of indigo, making possible its commercial synthesis, was a great stimulus to the dye industry He also discovered cerulein and eosin A patent of nobility was conferred on him in 1885 His collected works were published in German (2 vols, 1905)

Báez, Buenaventura (bwā"nävāntōō'rä bä' äs), c.1810–1884, president of the Dominican Republic (1849–53, 1856–58, 1865–66, 1868–73) He and his bitter rival, Pedro SANTANA, went in and out of office by revolution and counterrevolution while political and financial conditions fell into chaos Báez negotiated (1869) a treaty with the United States providing for annexation of the Dominican Republic to the Union Though the idea was not popular, it was approved by a Dominican plebiscite in 1870 The annexation was not accomplished, however, because, despite the support of President U S Grant, the treaty was not ratified by the U S Senate

Baeza (bāä'thä), city (pop 16,453), Jaén prov, S Spain, in Andalusia A prosperous Moorish city, it was taken (c 1237) by Ferdinand III Formerly an episcopal see, it contains a cathedral, a ruined Franciscan monastery, and a university founded in 1533 and later discontinued

Baffin, William, c 1584–1622, British arctic explorer He was pilot on two expeditions (1615–16) sent out to search for the NORTHWEST PASSAGE under command of Robert Bylot (formerly with Henry Hudson) The first expedition vainly tried to find a channel in Hudson Bay N of Southampton Island The second attempt, NW through Davis Strait, led to exploration of what was later Baffin Bay and the northeast shore of Baffin Island Baffin's conviction that the Northwest Passage did not exist discouraged arctic exploration for a time His narratives were edited by Sir Clements Markham in 1881

Baffin Bay, arm of the Arctic Ocean, between Greenland and the Arctic Archipelago It connects with the Arctic by Smith Sound and with the Atlantic by Davis Strait The Labrador Current, bringing many icebergs, makes navigation of the deep bay hazardous most of the year It is named for William Baffin.

Baffin Island, off N Canada, in the Arctic Ocean, in the ARCTIC ARCHIPELAGO It is the largest (197,754 sq mi), most easterly, and best known of the islands Geographically it is a continuation of Labrador, from which it is separated by Hudson Strait The interior has many large fresh-water lakes such as Nettilling and Amadjuak, and in the east mountain ranges rise more than 8,000 ft In the north is the huge fjord, Admiralty Inlet There are more than 2,000 Eskimo inhabitants and there are a number of trading posts—Arctic Bay (on Admiralty Inlet) and Pond Inlet in the north, Pangnirtung (on Cumberland Sound), Lake Harbour, and Cape Dorset (on Foxe Peninsula) in the south The posts generally have not only stores but also post offices, Royal Canadian Mounted Police stations, and mission schools, Pangnirtung has a hospital Whaling and fur trading are the chief occupations Martin FROBISHER visited (1576–78) the island. It is named for William Baffin, who explored the north in 1616 It was formerly called Baffin Land See A E Millward, ed, Southern Baffin Island (1930)

Bagby, George William, 1828–83, American author and editor, b. Buckingham co, Va His humorous writings under the pen name MOZIS ADDUMS made him famous in the South. While he was editor (1860–64) of the Southern Literary Messenger he wrote for it many sketches of Southern life See biography by J L King (1927)

Bagdad, Iraq see BAGHDAD

Bagé (bŭshä'), city (pop 31,349), Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil It is a center of a cattle- and sheep-ranching region Near the Uruguayan border, it was important in the wars over Uruguay. The name also appears as Bajé

Bagehot, Walter (bāj'ŭt), 1826–77, English social scientist and literary critic He worked in his father's banking firm and edited, after 1860, the Economist Out of these activities came his noted work on the English banking system, Lombard Street (1873) Other important books by him include The English Constitution (1867), Literary Studies (1879), and Economic Studies (1880) In Physics and Politics (1875) he made a pioneer analysis of the interrelations of natural and social sciences His collected works, edited by Mrs Russell Barrington (10 vols, 1915), include a biography The biography by William Irvine (1939) examines him as a literary figure

Baggesen, Jens (yĕns' bag'usən), 1764–1826, Danish poet and satirist, b Zealand He was influential in his time, a transition period from classicism to romanticism He showed wit and a feeling for language in Comic Tales (1785), poems, The Labyrinth (2 vols, 1792–93), prose, and the satirical The Ghost and Himself, or, Baggesen on Baggesen His literary feud with Oehlenschläger was famous Baggesen lived away from Denmark much of his adult life and died in Hamburg

Baghdad or Bagdad (both bäg'dăd, bägdäd'), city (pop c 400,000), capital of Iraq, on both banks of the Tigris and 25 mi N of the Euphrates From Sumerian times the site was a nodal point of desert travel and trade The present city was founded (A D 762) on the west bank of the river by the Abbasid caliph MANSUR From then on its commercial position generally was unrivaled In a sense of gardens, it justified its claim to be the "Abode of Peace" when under the caliph HARUN-AL-RASHID it rose to be one of the greatest cities of Islam It was the home of eminent scholars and artists, and it enjoyed great wealth through the sale of its silks and tiles This period of its greatest glory is reflected in the Thousand and One Nights, in which many of the tales are set in Baghdad. After the death of Harun the seat of the caliph was moved to Samarra, and when the caliphate did return to Baghdad it was weakened by internecine struggles and could not restore the city entirely The caliphate held on until 1258, when the Mongols sacked the city It rose twice again only to be destroyed by Tamerlane (1400) and by Shah Ismail of Persia (1524) and to fall prey to warring Turks and Persians By 1638, when it became part of the Ottoman Empire, its population was only c 14,000 Few antiquities remain, but the city is still enclosed on three sides by ancient walls, and some of the citadel in the northern frontier survives Baghdad was captured by British forces in 1917 In 1920 it became the capital of the newly constituted kingdom of Iraq The city is the terminus of the BAGHDAD RAILWAY and is connected by rail or by air with many of the major cities of the Near East, including Basra, Jerusalem, and Teheran See Reuben Levy, Baghdad Chronicle (1929)

Baghdad Railway, railroad of international importance linking Europe with Asia Minor and the Middle East With its last link completed in 1940, it connects Haidarpasha, opposite Istanbul, Turkey, with Basra, Iraq With alternate lines and branch lines it connects with N Iran, the USSR, Syria, and Palestine Financed chiefly by German capital, its Anatolian sections were completed in 1896 The ambitious project was then formed to carry the railroad to Baghdad, and a company, backed chiefly by German capital, was organized for the purpose Immediate protests were made to Turkey by France, Russia, and, particularly, Great Britain, which saw in the projected line a direct threat to its empire in India Operations were held up for several years by these international representations and by engineering difficulties, but in 1911 work was resumed By playing on imperialistic rivalries, the construction of the railroad was a factor in bringing about the First World War By the end of the war only a stretch between Mosul and Samarra remained to be completed, it was built largely with British capital Indeed, Britain at that time had virtual control over Arabia See Morris Jastrow, The War and the Bagdad Railway (1917), E M Earle, Turkey, the Great Powers, and the Bagdad Railway (1923)

Bagley, village (pop 1,241), co seat of Clearwater co, NW Minn, W of Bemidji near the source of the Clearwater, in a region of evergreen forest and lakes, settled 1898, inc 1900

Bagnacavallo (bä'nyäkävăl'lō), 1484–1542, Italian painter, whose real name was Bartolomeo Ramenghi He was called Bagnacavallo from the place of his birth He was one of the painters whom Raphael chose to assist him in the decoration of the Vatican

Bagnell Dam, central Mo, in the Osage river, built 1929–31 It is the state's largest power dam (2,543 ft long and 148 ft high) It also forms the Lake of the Ozarks (see OZARKS, LAKE OF THE)

Bagnères-de-Luchon, France see LUCHON

Bagni di Lucca (bä'nyē dē lōōk'kä), watering place, Tuscany, N central Italy Its warm mineral springs have been used since the Middle Ages

Bagot, Sir Charles (bäg'ut), 1781–1843, British diplomat As minister to the United States (1815–20) he negotiated the RUSH-BAGOT CONVENTION (1817), limiting armaments on the Great Lakes. When he was governor general of Canada (1841–43), the reform movement led by Robert Baldwin triumphed as the Canadian ministry became responsible to the Canadian Parliament. See G. P. de T. Glazebrook, Sir Charles Bagot in Canada (1929).

Bagotville (bäg'ŭtvĭl), town (pop 3,248), S Que, on the W shore of Ha Ha Bay, an arm of the Saguenay river; founded 1839 It has a pulp mill and a deepwater harbor.

bagpipe, musical instrument of ancient origin, long known in India and possibly introduced to the West in the 1st cent A D. by Nero Some form of bagpipe was later used in nearly every European country, it was particularly fashionable in 18th-century France, where it was called the musette Its widest use and greatest development was in the British Isles, particularly Northumberland, Ireland, and Scotland (see PIBROCH) The island of Skye was the home of a school for pipers It consists of a leathern bag, which is inflated either by mouth through a tube or by a bellows worked by the arm; one or two chanters or chaunters (melody pipes having finger holes), and one or more drones, which produce one sustained tone each Associated with folk and military music, it has been neglected by composers, possibly because of its short range See W L Manson, The Highland Bagpipe (1901), Gilbert Askew, Bibliography of the Bag-Pipe (1932), W. A Cocks, Northumbrian Bagpipes (1933)

Bagration, Piotr Ivanovich, Prince (pyô'tur ēvä'-nuvĭch bagratēōn'), 1765–1812, Russian general in the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars He fought under Suvarov in the Italian and Swiss campaigns of 1799, and at Austerlitz, Eylau, and Friedland In 1808 he captured the Aland Islands from Sweden, in 1809 he fought against the Turks, and in 1812 he commanded an army against Napoleon and was mortally wounded at Borodino.

Baguio (bä'gō, Sp bägō'), city (1948 pop 29,262), on W Luzon, Philippine Islands, NNW of Manila The summer capital of the republic, it is a resort and a gold-mining center at an elevation of c 5,000 ft The city was planned by Daniel H Burnham The construction of the 28-mile mountain road (completed 1913) connecting Baguio with the main highways was hampered by destructive typhoons During the Second World War, Baguio was severely damaged

bagworm, larva of a family of moths of which several species are destructive to forest and shade trees in the E United States The larva makes a silken covering in which it travels When full grown it fastens this covering or bag to a twig and passes the pupa stage within it Twigs or bits of leaves cover the bags of some species The male forthwee the eggs when the wingless, legless adult female emerges only partly from the pupa case After laying the eggs inside the case, the female dies The evergreen bagworm is destructive to red cedar and arborvitae and to many other trees Spraying foliage with poison when the larvae first appear and burning the cocoons help to reduce their numbers

Bahadur Shah II (bahä'dōōr shä'), 1775–1862, last Mogul emperor of India (1837–57) He was completely controlled by the British East India Company Convicted of complicity in the Sepoy Rebellion, he was exiled to Rangoon for life

Bahaism (bähä'ĭzm, bŭhä'ĭzm), religion founded by BAHA ULLAH and led by his son Sir Abdul Baha Bahai (1844–1921) The system of teaching has affinities closest with Babism, Shiite Islam, and Sufism and remotely with Gnosticism It holds that God can be made known to man through manifestations, which have come at various stages of human progress, the prophets include Abraham, Moses, David, Christ, Mohammed, the Bab, and Baha Ullah Bahaists believe in the unity of all religions, in universal education, in world peace, and in the equality of men and women An international language is advocated Emphasis is laid upon simplicity of living and upon service to suffering fellow men The teachings spread across the world in the 20th cent The center of the faith in the United States is the great house of worship at Wilmette, Ill

Bahama Banks (bŭhä'mu, -hä'-), two shoals, in the Bahama Islands, known as the Great Bahama Bank and the Little Bahama Bank Until the sponges were virtually wiped out by disease, sponge diving was an important activity

Bahama Islands or Bahamas (bŭhä'mŭs, -hä'-), archipelago (4,403 sq mi, pop 68,846), consisting of some 700 islands and islets, beginning c 50 mi. off SE Florida and extending c 760 mi SE almost to Haiti They are administered as a British crown colony, with the capital at NASSAU on New Providence island Other chief islands, known as "out islands," are Grand Bahama, Great and Little Abaco, the Biminis, Andros, Eleuthera, Cat Island, San Salvador, Great and Little Exuma, Long Island, Crooked Island, Acklins Island, Mayaguana, and Great and Little Inagua Although the TURKS AND CAICOS islands farther to the southeast are geographically part of the archipelago, they were separated in administration from the Bahamas in 1848 Most of the islands, rising from submerged limestone bases, are generally low and flat, riverless, with many mangrove swamps, lakes, coral reefs, and shoals. Although occasionally hurricanes cause extensive destruction, the climate is usually pleasant. The rainy season, with an average annual rainfall of 50 in., lasts from May to November. The islands' vivid subtropical atmosphere—brilliant sky and sea, lush vegetation, bright-feathered birds, and submarine gardens where multicolored fish swim among white, rose, yellow, and purple coral—have made the Bahamas a popular winter resort. Pineapples were formerly among the chief products but are not now much grown. Sponge diving declined because disease destroyed the sponges. Sisal is still important, as well as salt, turtles, shells, pearls, ambergris, and tomatoes. There are some valuable forests, but lumbering is limited. The aborigines, the Lucayos, were enslaved and exterminated within 20 years of Columbus's discovery of San Salvador in 1492. The islands were formerly called the Lucayans and the Lucayos. Although the Spanish visited the Bahamas occasionally, the first settlements were made in the 17th cent. by the English, who imported Negroes as slaves. Negroes now comprise some 85 percent of the population. In 1670 the islands were granted to the lords proprietors of Carolina, who did not relinquish their claim until 1787, although Woodes ROGERS, the first royal governor, arrived in 1718. Under Rogers the pirates, notably BLACKBEARD, were driven off. The French disputed the English claim, the Spanish pillaged the islands, and an American force held Nassau for a short time in 1776. After the American Revolution many Loyalists settled in the Bahamas. In 1838 the emancipation of slaves was a step in the destruction of plantation life. Blockade-running into Southern ports in the U.S. Civil War enriched some of the islanders, and during the prohibition era in the United States the Bahamas became a base for rumrunning. The United States leased areas for bases in the Bahamas in the Second World War.

Baharumite (bəhâ'ru-) see BAHURIM

Baha Ullah (bähä' ŏŏ'lä), 1817–92, title of a Persian religious leader, originally named Mirza Hussein Ali. A believer in BABISM, he in 1862 announced himself as the manifestation of God as foretold by the Bab and thus founded BAHAISM. He spent much of his mature life in prison.

Bahawalpur (buhä'wulpōōr", bä'wŭl-), princely state (17,494 sq. mi.; pop. 1,341,209), West Pakistan. It is bordered by India on the south, the east, and the northeast, on the northwest the Sutlej is the boundary. It is mostly a sandy waste with a small fertile irrigated area, where wheat, rice, dates, and cotton are grown. The state was established in the late 18th cent. Bahawalpur, town (pop. 40,015), the capital, is a trade center with light manufactures.

Bahia or Baía (both bəē'u), state (217,688 sq. mi.; 1940 pop. 3,918,112; 1949 estimated pop. 4,729,892), E Brazil. The capital is SALVADOR (also called Bahia or Baía), a great port on Todos os Santos Bay. The narrow plain on the Atlantic coast is tropical and humid. A broad mountain range separates it from the valley of the São Francisco river, and W Bahia is part of the central Brazilian plateau. The region around Salvador produces tropical and subtropical crops—sugar, tobacco, cotton, manioc, and rice. In the southeast is one of the great cacao-growing regions of the world, centered about Ilhéus. The eastern mountains yield industrial diamonds, and the state also produces gold, manganese, and chromite. The interior is stock-raising country and also yields forest products. Bahia was the region of Brazil first seen by Cabral in 1500, and Salvador was long the chief city of Brazil.

Bahía Blanca (bəē'ä blăng'kä) [Span., =white bay], city (pop. 93,122), Buenos Aires prov., SE Argentina, a port on the Atlantic. Near the southern edge of the PAMPA at the head of the deep, well-sheltered Bahía Blanca, it is the metropolis of a vast region, a rail terminus, and the principal shipping point in the south. The city developed with the increasing production of the S Pampa, beginning early in the 20th cent. It offers access to the oil fields of Neuquén and to the Patagonian lakes. A huge import and export business is carried on, the chief exports are grain, wool, hides, and oil. Some minor industries have developed. There are a number of ports (subports) around the estuary which are connected with Bahía Blanca by rail, among them are Puerto Ingeniero White, Puerto Galván, Puerto Arroyo Pareja or Puerto Belgrano, and the naval base, Puerto Militar.

Bahrdt, Karl Friedrich (kärl' frē'drĭkh bärt'), 1741–92, German rationalistic theologian. He was dismissed from professorships at Leipsig and Erfurt because of his immoral life and at Giessen because of the rationalistic nature of his translation (1773–75) of the New Testament. He went in 1779 to Halle, where he lectured and attracted much notice by his controversial writing. Bahrdt in 1789 was imprisoned for his political pamphlets. In prison he wrote his autobiography (4 vols., 1790).

Bahreich (bärīch'), town (pop. 39,963), E central United Provs., India. It is noted for the shrine of Saiyud Salar Masud (d. c 1050), a Moslem warrior and saint. There is much trade with Nepal.

Bahrein Islands (bärān', bû-), archipelago (over 200 sq. mi.; pop. c 120,000), off Arabia, in the Persian Gulf. Though Iran claims the islands, they are ruled by an Arab sheik and have been since 1861 under British protection. The capital and chief port is Manamah (pop. c 30,000) on Bahrein or Aval island (26 mi. long), the largest of the group. Oil was discovered in 1932, and the principal importance of the Bahrein Islands is as a petroleum center. Pearl fishing, once very famous, is still carried on. The islands were ruled from Iran from the time of Abbas I until the late 18th cent. The name is also spelled Bahrain and Bahreyn.

Bahr-el-Abiad: see WHITE NILE.

Bahr-el-Azrak: see BLUE NILE.

Bahr-el-Ghazal (bär'-ĕl-gäzäl'), river rising in S Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and flowing 203 mi. E to the BAHR-EL-JEBEL to form the WHITE NILE.

Bahr el-Huleh (bär' ĕl-hōō'lä), lake, NE Palestine. Through it flow the headwaters of the Jordan. The lake is about at sea level, its shores are marshy. The Bahr el-Huleh is undoubtedly the Waters of Merom, where Joshua had a great victory (Joshua 11).

Bahr-el-Jebel (-jĕ'bĕl), river rising in Albert Nyanza on the border of Belgian Congo and Uganda and flowing 594 mi. N to the BAHR-EL-GHAZAL in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The White Nile rises from the junction of these two rivers. The upper course of the Bahr-el-Jebel is sometimes called the Albert Nile.

Bahurim (bähū'rĭm) [Heb., =young men], town, NE of Jerusalem. 2 Sam. 3:16, 16:5, 17:18, 19:16; 1 Kings 2:8. Azmaveth of Bahurim is called once a Baharumite, once a Barhumite (1 Chron. 11:33, 2 Sam. 23:31).

Baía, Brasil see BAHIA.

Baia (bī'ä), Latin Baiae, village, Campania, S Italy, beautifully situated on the Bay of Naples. It was a celebrated watering place and pleasure resort in Roman times, with sumptuous villas and huge baths, of which remains, erroneously called temples, still stand.

Baia-Mare (bī'ä-mä'rā), Hung. Nagybánya (nŏ'dyubänyŏ), town (pop. 20,959), NW Rumania, in Crisana-Maramures. It is the center for mining copper, gold, and silver and is also a trade center and a mountain resort. More than half the population is Hungarian.

Baie Comeau (bā kô'mō), town (pop. 1,548), E Que., on the north shore of the St. Lawrence near the mouth of the Manicouagan river, 250 mi. below Quebec, inc. 1937. It has a large pulp and paper industry.

Baie de Shawinigan (bā' du shô'ĭnugun), town (pop. 1,255), S Que., on the St. Maurice river and NW of Trois Rivières.

Baie Saint Paul (bā' sănt" pôl', Fr. bā sĕ pôl'), town (pop. 3,500), S Que., on the St. Lawrence opposite Île aux Coudres and NE of Quebec.

Baïf, Jean Antoine de (zhä' ätwän' du bäēf'), 1532–89, French poet of the PLÉIADE, author of many sonnets, mostly amorous.

Baikal or Baykal (both bīkäl'), lake, area 13,180 sq. mi., RSFSR, in SE Siberia. It is the largest freshwater lake of Asia and the deepest lake in the world (5,710 ft.). Up to 50 mi. wide, it stretches for 387 mi. between mountains rich in mineral resources. The Trans-Siberian RR skirts the southern shore. There are numerous feeders, but the ANGARA river is the only outlet. The lake is rich in fish, many of them of unusual species.

Baikie, William Balfour (bā'kē), 1825–64, Scottish naturalist and philologist, explorer in W Africa. A naval surgeon with the expedition up the Niger in the Pleiad, he succeeded (1854) to the command, publishing an account of it later. Returning to the river in 1857, he founded, after his vessel was wrecked, the settlement of Lokoja at the confluence of the Niger and Benue rivers. He opened up the Niger for trade, collected data on the native languages and the natural history of the region, and translated the Scriptures into Hausa. On his way back to Great Britain, he died at Sierra Leone.

bail, in law, release from prison of a person awaiting trial or an appeal, on the deposit of security for his submission at the required time to legal authority. The monetary value of the security is set by the court having jurisdiction of the prisoner. The security may be cash, the papers giving title to property, or the bond of private persons of means or of a professional bondsman or bonding company. Failure of the person released on bail to surrender himself at the appointed time results in forfeiture of the security. Bail is usually granted in all civil arrests. Courts have greater discretion to grant or deny bail in the case of persons under criminal arrest, e.g., it is usually refused when the accused is charged with murder.

Baile Átha Cliath, Ireland: see DUBLIN.

Bailén (bīlān'), city (pop. 9,727), S Spain, in Andalusia. Early in the Peninsular War a French army was surrounded and forced to capitulate here by the Spanish under Castaños, who was created duke of Bailén. In English the name is sometimes spelled Baylen.

Bailey, Ann, 1742–1825, American frontier heroine, b. Liverpool, England. Her maiden name was Ann Hennis. She came to Virginia c.1761. After her first husband, Richard Trotter, was killed at the battle of Point Pleasant (1774), she donned male attire and became a noted scout and messenger. Meanwhile she married John Bailey. In 1791, when Indians besieged Fort Lee, on the present site of Charleston, W.Va., Ann Bailey supposedly rode a hundred miles through the mountain wilderness to Fort Savannah (Lewisburg) and returned with enough ammunition to raise the siege. See biography by Virgil A. Lewis (1891).

Bailey, Florence Merriam: see BAILEY, VERNON.

Bailey, Gamaliel, 1807–59, American abolitionist editor, b. Mt. Holly, N.J., grad. Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, 1827. In 1837 he succeeded James G. BIRNEY as editor and publisher of the Philanthropist at Cincinnati. Three times his office was attacked by proslavery mobs, and once the entire establishment was destroyed. From 1847 until his death Bailey ably edited the influential National Era, published weekly in Washington, D.C., by the American and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society. Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin first appeared in this journal.

Bailey, James Montgomery, 1841–94, American humorist and journalist. He was known as the "Danbury News man" because from 1870 his humorous sketches in the Danbury, Conn., News, of which he was editor and co-owner, were quoted all over America. His books, among them Life in Danbury (1873) and England from a Back Window (1878), sold widely.

Bailey, Joseph Weldon, 1863–1929, U.S. Congressman, b. Crystal Springs, Miss. In 1885 he established himself as a lawyer in Gainesville, Texas. When 27 years old he was elected (1890) to the House of Representatives, and in 1896 he became minority leader. He was a free-silver advocate and opposed imperialism after the Spanish-American War. In the Senate from 1901 to 1913, he became conspicuous as opposition leader and a spokesman of the Southwestern farmers. His increasing conservatism brought him into conflict with the Texas Democratic organization at Wilson's election, but "Silver-tongued Joe" kept power in Texas politics. See biography by S. H. Acheson (1932).

Bailey, Liberty Hyde, 1858–, American botanist and horticulturist, b. South Haven, Mich., grad. Michigan Agricultural College (now Michigan State College of Agriculture and Applied Science), 1882. He was professor of horticulture (1888–1903) and director (1903–13) of the agricultural experiment station at Cornell Univ. He is noted for his basic works on botany and horticulture, he edited The Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture (6 vols., 1914–17, 2d ed., 3 vols., 1925, revised 1928) and Cyclopedia of American Agriculture (4 vols., 1907–9) and compiled (with E. Z. Bailey) Hortus (1930, rev. ed., 1935) and Hortus Second (1941). See biography by A. D. Rodgers (1949).

Bailey, Philip James, 1816–1902, English poet. He was the author of Festus (1839), a long and incoherent poem on the Faust legend, very popular in its day. He also wrote The Angel World (1850), The Mystic (1855), and The Universal Hymn (1867), large portions of all three were incorporated into later editions of Festus.

Bailey, Solon Irving, 1854–1931, American astronomer, b. Lisbon, N.H., educated at Boston Univ. and at Harvard. He taught astronomy at Harvard from 1893 to 1925. In 1889 he selected Arequipa, Peru, to be the site of the Harvard Observatory for the Southern Hemisphere and in 1892 chose the summit of Mt. Misti, Peru, for a meteorological station, the world's highest scientific station (alt. 19,000 ft.). See his History and Work of the Harvard Observatory (1931).

Bailey, Theodorus, 1805–77, American naval officer, b. Chateaugay, N.Y. He was appointed a midshipman in 1818. In the Mexican War, Bailey blockaded and captured San Blas on the Pacific coast of Mexico. He commanded (1853–56) the St. Mary's, visiting a number of Pacific islands in the interests of the United States. In Farragut's attack on New Orleans in the Civil War, Bailey, commanding the first division, led (April, 1862) the fleet in the gunboat Cayuga. Under his efficient direction the East Gulf Blockading Squadron captured (1862–64) some 150 Confederate blockade-runners. He was promoted rear admiral and retired in 1866.

Bailey, Vernon, 1864–1942, American biologist, b. Manchester, Mich. He served the Bureau of Biological Survey as chief field naturalist from 1887 to 1933. He conducted surveys of Texas, New Mexico, North Dakota, and Oregon, writing reports for the bureau and books on the mammals and other animal life of these regions. His wife, Florence Merriam Bailey, 1863–, American ornithologist and writer, b. Locust Grove, N.Y., collaborated with him on Wild Animals of Glacier National Park (1918) and Cave Life of Kentucky (1933). She also wrote a number of books on birds, especially those of the W United States.

Baileyville, town (pop. 2,018), SE Maine, on the St. Croix above Calais, inc. 1828. It includes Woodland village, which produces paper and pulp.

Baillie, Joanna (bā'lē), 1762–1851, Scottish poet and dramatist, descendant of Sir William Wallace. Her Plays on the Passions (which came out in three series, 1798, 1802, and 1812) "attempted to delineate the stronger passions of the mind, each passion being the subject of a tragedy and a comedy" Of these 28 plays, only seven were produced and only one, De Montfort, had sufficient appeal to hold the stage A book of poems, Fugitive Verses, had appeared anonymously in 1790, and three volumes of dramatic poetry were issued in 1836 Joanna Baillie is best known for her many poems in the Scottish dialect, notably "Woo'd and Married an' A'" and "Oh Swiftly Glides the Bonny Boat" Matthew Baillie was her brother See M S Carhart, The Life and Work of Joanna Baillie (1923)

Baillie, Matthew, 1761–1823, English physician, brother of Joanna Baillie He studied medicine under William Hunter, his uncle, and became a noted London practitioner and physician to George III He carried out post-mortem examinations, lectured on pathology and morbid anatomy, and wrote the first systematic text on the subject (1793) See William Macmichael, The Goldheaded Cane (1827, 6th ed , 1932)

Baillie, Robert, 1599–1662, Scottish Presbyterian clergyman, chiefly remembered for his historically valuable Letters and Journals (3 vols , 1841–42)

Baillon, Henri Ernest (ärē' ĕrnĕst' bäyō'), 1827–95, French botanist and physician He was professor at the Faculty of Medicine, Paris, from 1863, and later also at the École centrale des Arts et Manufactures His works include The Natural History of Plants (13 vols , 1867–95, Eng tr of first 8 vols , 1871–88) and Dictionnaire de botanique (4 vols , 1876–92)

Bailly, Jean Sylvain (zhäⁿ' sēlvĕ' bāyĕ'), 1736–93, French astronomer and politician His works on astronomy and on the history of science (notably the Essais sur la théorie des satellites de Jupiter) were distinguished both for scientific interest and literary elegance and earned him membership in the French Academy, the Academy of Sciences, and the Academy of Inscriptions Elected a deputy from Paris to the States-General, Bailly was in 1789 chosen as president of the National Assembly From 1789 to 1791 he was mayor of Paris, but the populace was enraged when he permitted the National Guard to fire upon a demonstrating crowd (July 17, 1791) He retired from Paris, but in 1793 he was seized, taken to Paris, convicted of having contrived the July massacre, and guillotined His lengthy Essai sur l'origine des fables et des religions anciennes was published in 1799

Bailly, Joseph Alexis (bā'lē, bāyĕ'), 1825–83, American sculptor, b Paris The son of a cabinetmaker, he was trained as a wood carver in Paris He was conscripted in the Revolution of 1848, but escaped to the United States and settled in Philadelphia, where he became a sculptor His work, though unimspired, was popular In Philadelphia are statues of Washington and Franklin He long taught at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts

Baily, Edward Hodges, 1788–1867, English sculptor, studied under Flaxman One of his best works is the statue of Nelson in Trafalgar Square, London Other works include decorations for Buckingham Palace, numerous portrait busts and statues, and Eve at the Fountain, Psyche, and Helen and Paris

Baily, Francis, 1774–1844, English astronomer He retired from business (1825) to devote himself to the study of astronomy He was a founder of the Royal Astronomical Society, helped to bring about the reform of the Nautical Almanac, revised and reduced the star catalogues of several earlier astronomers, and wrote a notable biography, An Account of the Revd John Flamsteed, the First Astronomer Royal (1835) He repeated Henry Cavendish's pendulum experiments for determining the mean density of the earth During an annular eclipse of the sun (May 15, 1836) he first observed the phenomenon now known as Baily's beads, a series of spots of light seen on one edge of the sun's disk just before total eclipse and again on the opposite edge just after totality The effect is caused by light shining between elevations on the moon's surface

Bain, Alexander, 1818–1903, Scottish philosopher and psychologist He was educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, where he later taught for three years He taught one year (1845) at Anderson's Univ , Glasgow, but resigned to do free-lance work in London There he joined a brilliant circle including George Grote and John Stuart Mill, with whom he already had close literary relationships From 1860 to 1880 he held the chair of logic and English at the Univ of Aberdeen (which had absorbed Marischal College), where he worked for educational reform After his retirement he was twice elected lord rector of the university He is best known for his work in psychology developed in his courses and in his writings He brought together and systematized the psychology of his time and sought to eliminate metaphysics from its treatment He founded the first psychological journal, Mind, in 1876 His contributions to the field center about four positions, psychophysical parallelism, physiological psychology, associationism, and the problem of the will His works include The Senses and the Intellect (1855), The Emotions and the Will (1859), Mental and Moral Science (1868), Education as a Science (1879), James Mill (1882), John Stuart Mill (1882), and his autobiography (pub posthumously, with a bibliography of his works, 1904)

Bainbridge, William, 1774–1833, American naval officer, b Princeton, N J An experienced sea captain, he joined the navy in 1798 when war with France threatened His ship, the Retaliation, was captured by two French frigates, and he and his crew were for a time imprisoned on Guadeloupe In 1800 as commander of the Washington he carried the tribute money to the dey of Algiers The dey forced him to proceed under the Turkish flag on a mission to Constantinople—an insult that contributed greatly to the American declaration of war against the BARBARY STATES He was sent to the Mediterranean in 1803 in the Philadelphia His ship ran aground when entering the harbor of Tripoli and was captured (its later destruction was one of the most daring exploits of Stephen DECATUR) Bainbridge and his men were imprisoned until the end of the Tripolitan War Bainbridge was in command of the Boston navy yard when the War of 1812 broke out, but he soon had active command of the Constitution and two other vessels With them he captured the British frigate Java off the Brazilian coast in Dec , 1812 In 1815 Commodore Bainbridge was sent in the Independence to aid Decatur in the operations against Algiers but arrived after the fighting was over A biography written by H A S Dearborn in 1816 has been edited by James Barnes and was published in 1931

Bainbridge. 1 City (pop 6,352), co seat of Decatur co , extreme SW Ga , on the Flint river, founded 1823, inc 1829 It is a trade and industrial center in a farm area 2 Village (pop 1,450), S N Y , on the Susquehanna and NE of Binghamton, in a dairy area, settled before 1790, inc 1829 Dairy products are made here

Bainville, Jacques (zhäk' bĕvēl'), 1879–1936, French historian and journalist A nationalist and royalist, he was one of the founders and the foreign editor of the royalist daily, Action française His most popular work is his History of France (1924, Eng tr , 1926) This brilliant and concise account, though highly debatable in its nationalist thesis, is an eloquent apology for the monarchic tradition in France Other books by Bainville include Napoleon (Eng tr , 1934), The French Republic, 1870–1935 (Eng tr , 1936), and Dictators (Eng tr , 1937)

Baird, Absalom, 1824–1905, Union general in the Civil War, b Washington, Pa , grad West Point, 1849 He was made a brigadier general of volunteers (April, 1862), distinguished himself under G H Thomas at Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge (1863), and commanded a division in W T Sherman's campaigns (1864–65) Baird was later inspector general of the U S army with rank of brigadier general

Baird, John Logie, 1888–1946, Scottish inventor In 1926 he gave the first demonstration of true television with a televisor of his own invention He accomplished transatlantic television in 1928 and demonstrated color television in the same year He also invented (1926) the noctovisor, an instrument for making objects visible in the dark

Baird, Spencer Fullerton, 1823–87, American zoologist, b Reading, Pa , grad Dickinson College, 1840 He was professor of natural history at Dickinson from 1846 to 1850 As assistant secretary (1850) of the Smithsonian Institution and then as secretary (from 1878), he was interested in the scientific exploration of the West and amassed a great collection of North American fauna In 1871 he was appointed commissioner of fish and fisheries and was influential in the establishment, in the same year, of the U S Bureau of Fisheries He established the marine biological station at Woods Hole, Mass , organized the expeditions of the Albatross, and initiated studies of high economic value Baird's publications (over 1,000 titles) show a phenomenal range of scientific work His books on birds inaugurated the so-called Baird school of ornithological description, among other major studies were Catalogue of North American Reptiles (with Charles Girard, 1853) and Catalogue of North American Mammals (1857) See biography by W H Dall (1915)

Baird, city (pop 1,810) co seat of Callahan co , W central Texas, ESE of Abilene, settled 1880, inc 1891. It processes and ships cotton, wheat, peanuts, and other crops and refines oil

Bairnsfather, Bruce (bârnz'–), 1888–, English author and illustrator, b Murree, India An engineer, he served with the British forces in the First World War and created the character "Old Bill" to typify the spirit of the British infantryman The London Bystander published his amusing sketches of life in the trenches, later issued as Fragments from France (1916) His other works include Bullets and Billets (1917), his popular play, The Better 'Ole (performed in the United States, 1918–19), and Jeeps and Jests (1943), a book about the American armed forces in Ireland during the Second World War.

Baius (bā'yus) or Bajus (bā'jus), Michael, 1513–89, Flemish Roman Catholic theologian, also known as Michel de Bay. He was chancellor of the Univ of Louvain and was sent to the Council of Trent Baius was the center of a subtle controversy on GRACE, in which he is said to have been the forerunner of JANSENISM His position was peculiar in giving original sin a very important place but making man partly instrumental in his redemption His doctrines were condemned several times (especially by the bull of Pius V, Ex omnibus afflictionibus, 1567), but Baius abjured his errors each time, and he died in the church

Baja (bô'yô), city (pop 32,309), S Hungary, on the Danube Covering an area of 77 sq mi , it is an extreme example of a straggling Hungarian "peasant city," serving as a market center

Baja California ' see LOWER CALIFORNIA.

Bajazet I (bäjŭzĕt'), 1347–1403, Ottoman sultan (1389–1402), son and successor of Murad I He besieged Emperor MANUEL II at Constantinople, conquered E Anatolia, and defeated the army of Sigismund of Hungary (see SIGISMUND, emperor) at NIKOPOL (1396) Turning east to check TAMERLANE, he was routed at Ankara in 1402, most of his troops except the Serbs and the Janizaries having abandoned him The iron cage in which Tamerlane is said to have carried the captive sultan was actually a palanquin He was succeeded by his son, MOHAMMED I The name also appears in other forms, e g , Bayazid, Bayazit, and Bajeset

Bajazet II, 1447–1513, Ottoman sultan (1481–1512), son and successor of Mohammed II He put down the revolt of his brother Djem, who fled to Rhodes and then was held captive, as a threat to Bajazet, first by Pierre d'AUBUSSON, then by Popes INNOCENT VIII and ALEXANDER VI Bajazet offered a fabulous sum to Alexander on condition of Djem's death Transferred to the custody of Charles VIII of France, Djem died (1495) near Naples, possibly from the effects of poison, though the French were blameless in his death A peace-loving monarch, Bajazet did little to advance Ottoman power but much to further Ottoman culture He warred (1485–91) with the Mamelukes of Egypt, to whom he lost Cilicia, and allowed Cyprus to be seized (1489) by Venice A war (1499–1503) with Venice ended to the sultan's disadvantage One of Bajazet's major feats was the speedy rebuilding of Constantinople, which was devastated (1509) by an earthquake In 1512 Bajazet was dethroned by his son, Selim I, who later had him poisoned

Bajazet, d 1638, Ottoman prince; brother of Sultan Murad IV After Murad had taken Baghdad, he sent an order to Constantinople to have Bajazet executed as a dangerous rival Bajazet's death is the subject of Racine's tragedy, Bajazet (1672)

Bajer, Fredrik (frādh'rĭk bī'ur), 1837–1922, Danish pacifist and writer He helped to found the International Peace Bureau at Berne in 1891 and was awarded the 1908 Nobel Peace Prize jointly with K P Arnoldson

Bajith (bā'jĭth) [Heb , =house], term of unknown significance Isa 15 2

Bajpai, Sir Girja Shankar (gēr'jŭ shŭng'kar bŭy'pī), 1891–, Indian statesman He was educated at Muir College, Allahabad, and at Oxford He was the first Indian agent general to the United States (1941–47), and in 1946 he became a delegate to the United Nations Economic and Social Council

Bajus, Michael see BAIUS, MICHAEL

Bakacs, Thomas see BAKOCZ, THOMAS

Bakbakkar (bäkbäk'ur), Levite 1 Chron 9 15

Bakbuk (bäk'bŭk) [Heb , =bottle], family which returned with Zerubbabel Ezra 2 51, Neh 7 53

Bakbukiah (bäk"bŭkī'u) 1 Levite with Zerubbabel Neh 11 17, 12 9 2 Levite Neh 12 25

bakelite (bā'kulīt), trade name for a synthetic resin It is widely used as a substitute for hard rubber, amber, and celluloid, for insulating electrical apparatus (since it is a nonconductor), for manufacturing certain machinery gears, phonograph records, and many other articles both useful and ornamental and as diverse in character as buttons, billiard balls, pipestems, and umbrella handles Bakelite, so named for its inventor, L H Backeland, is produced by subjecting the substance formed by the reaction between formaldehyde and phenol to a special heat treatment under pressure The apparatus used in this process is known as a bakelizer Pure bakelite is colorless or amber-colored, but often during its commercial preparation dyes are added which give it color It is mixed with wood fiber, paper, or asbestos according to the properties—such as great tensile strength—desired in the final manufactured article When applied to wood in the form of varnish it adds hardness

Baker, Sir Benjamin, 1840–1907, English civil engineer He helped build the London underground and metropolitan railway systems and the Aswan Dam in Egypt With Sir John Fowler he designed and built the bridge over the Firth of Forth He also designed the cylindrical ship used to carry Cleopatra's Needle from Egypt to London

Baker, Edward Dickinson, 1811–61, U S. Senator and soldier, b London, England. His family came to the United States in 1815, ultimately moving to Illinois Baker became one of the famous coterie of lawyers practicing at Springfield, Ill., in Lincoln's time In 1844, defeating Lincoln for the Whig nomination, he was elected to Congress. He resigned to lead a regiment in the Mexican War and distinguished himself at Cerro Gordo. After another term in Congress (1849–51), he moved to California, where he practiced law and became a prominent Republican leader Since the state was Democratic, Baker accepted the invitation of Oregon Republicans to move to their state and was promptly elected (1860) to the U S Senate He was prominent in the first months of the Civil War as Lincoln's friend and as the only administration supporter from the Pacific coast He was killed leading a brigade at Balls Bluff in Oct , 1861 As an orator Baker was nationally known His panegyric on David C. BRODERICK is a classic in California history

Baker, George Fisher, 1840–1931, American financier and philanthropist, b Troy, N Y He studied at Seward Univ in Florida and was employed (1858–63) in the New York state banking department After he joined three others in founding (1863) the First National Bank of New York, Baker became (1877) its president and then (1909) chairman of its board of directors Largely through his efforts this bank became one of the strongest financial institutions in the United States Baker was closely associated with the interests of the house of Morgan, he helped finance James J. Hill in building his railroad empire and backed him in the fight to control the Northern Pacific RR In 1882 Baker acquired the Richmond and Danville RR and made it the nucleus of the present Southern Railway system After 1907 he aided in rehabilitating the Central RR of New Jersey and later the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western RR He also gained a commanding influence in insurance and utilities, as well as in the steel and rubber industries His philanthropic bequests were many The most notable were $6,000,000 to found and support the Harvard graduate school of business administration, $2,000,000 to Cornell, $1,000,000 to build the Baker Memorial Library at Dartmouth, and the money for the establishment of Baker Field of Columbia Univ

Baker, George Pierce, 1866–1935, American educator, b Providence, R I , grad Harvard, 1887 He taught (1888–1924) in the English department at Harvard and there conceived and instituted the 47 Workshop, a laboratory of the drama where problems of composition and construction were given realistic treatment Among those who found inspiration in his courses and in the atmosphere of the Workshop were Eugene O'Neill, Philip Barry, Sidney Howard, George Abbott, and Robert Edmond Jones In 1925 he went to Yale, where as professor of the history and technique of drama and director of the university theater he continued his work He was emeritus after 1933 Baker wrote The Development of Shakespeare as a Dramatist (1907) and Dramatic Technique (1919) and edited the works of his students See memorial by John Mason Brown and others (1939)

Baker, Newton Diehl, 1871–1937, U S Secretary of War (1916–21), b Martinsburg, W Va , grad Johns Hopkins, 1892, LL B Washington and Lee Univ , 1894 He practiced law and politics in Cleveland as a protégé of Tom L JOHNSON and later (1912–16) as mayor Woodrow Wilson appointed him to the cabinet in March, 1916, just in time to prepare the punitive expedition to MEXICO A pacifist, Baker had the tremendous war-making task of direction in the First World War Though he was at first mercilessly criticized (notably by Theodore Roosevelt) and though his conduct of the war was subjected to a congressional investigation, he was later praised by all groups He retired (1921) to lucrative practice of law in Cleveland but continued to be a public figure, a warm advocate of peace and of U S entry into the League of Nations, a learned and forceful Democratic party speaker, a conservative candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, and a member (appointed 1928) of the Permanent Court of Arbitration (Hague Tribunal) See Frederick Palmer, Newton D Baker : America at War (1931)

Baker, Oliver Edwin, 1883–1949, American economic geographer, b Tiffin, Ohio, grad Heidelberg College, 1903 He studied forestry at Yale and agriculture and economics at the Univ of Wisconsin (Ph D , 1921) After 1912 he served with the U S Dept of Agriculture, largely in research on land utilization Besides many articles and reports, he wrote, with V C Finch, Geography of the World's Agriculture (1917), and he edited the Atlas of American Agriculture

Baker, Ray Stannard, pseud David Grayson, 1870–1946, American author, b Lansing, Mich , grad Michigan State College, 1889 At first a Chicago newspaper reporter, he joined the staff of McClure's Magazine in 1897 and wrote for it some famous muckraking articles. With other McClure's contributors he purchased the American Magazine in 1906 and helped edit it His first book of amiable rural essays by "David Grayson," Adventures in Contentment, appeared in 1907, although he did not acknowledge his authorship until 1916, and the series continued with Great Possessions (1917), The Countryman's Year (1936), and others. Baker, an intimate of Woodrow Wilson, was sent to Europe in 1918 as one of the President's special agents to study the chances for peace At the peace conference at Versailles, Baker was director of the press bureau of the American peace commission Afterward he wrote Woodrow Wilson and World Settlement (3 vols , 1922), a history of the peace conference based largely on the Wilson papers With W E Dodd he edited Wilson's Public Papers (6 vols , 1925–26) His authoritative biography of Wilson (8 vols , 1927–39), for which he used the President's personal papers, won the Pulitzer Prize for biography in 1940 for the last two volumes See his interesting autobiographical works, Native American the Book of My Youth (1941) and American Chronicle (1945)

Baker, Sir Samuel White, 1821–93, English explorer in Africa He explored the Nile tributaries in Ethiopia in 1861–62 Going up the Nile from Cairo, he reached Gondokoro in 1863 He continued his journey southward in spite of the opposition of Arab slave traders and discovered Albert Nyanza on March 14, 1864 In 1869, with the authority of the khedive of Egypt, he returned to the region and, creating an administration in the LADO ENCLAVE, he suppressed the slave trade and opened up the lake areas to commerce

Baker, Theodore, 1851–1934, American writer on music, b New York city He was educated in the United States and Leipzig and in 1892 became literary editor for the house of G Schirmer His Biographical Dictionary of Musicians (1900, 4th ed , 1940) is outstanding in its field

Baker. 1 City (pop 1,304), co seat of Fallon co , SE Mont , near the N Dak line E of Miles City , inc 1914 A gas field surrounds and enriches the little market city 2 City (pop 9,342), co seat of Baker co , NE Oregon, SSE of Pendleton and in the Powder river valley, laid out 1865 after gold was discovered (1861–62) in the area, inc 1874 The city is the trade and distributing center of an agricultural, stock-raising, lumbering, and mining region

Baker, Mount, peak, 10,750 ft high, N Wash , in the Cascade Range

Baker Island, central Pacific near the equator, 40 mi S of Howland Island, on the air route to Australia The arid coral island (area 1 sq mi) was claimed (1857) by the United States Like JARVIS ISLAND and HOWLAND ISLAND, Baker was worked for guano by both American and British companies In 1935 it was colonized by Americans from Hawaii and a year later was placed under the Dept of the Interior In the Second World War it was captured (1942) by the Japanese, but American forces regained it in 1944 It is now a naval station

Baker Lake, area 1,029 sq mi , Keewatin dist , Northwest Territories, 25 mi W of Chesterfield Inlet of Hudson Bay It has a post of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at its west end

Bakersfield, city (pop 29,252), co seat of Kern co , S central Calif , on the Kern river and N of Los Angeles, at the southern end of the San Joaquin Valley, laid out 1869, inc 1898 Gold was discovered in the region in 1855, and petroleum in 1899 It is the center of a great oil-producing area and a shipping point for citrus fruits and farm products The city has oil refineries and railroad shops, among its varied manufactures are oil-well tools, pumps, paint, aircraft, and food products A junior college (coeducational) is here Gold, silver, borax, and tungsten mines are in the vicinity

Baker University see BALDWIN CITY, Kansas

Bakewell, Robert, 1725–95, British agriculturist He developed the Leicestershire breed of sheep and the Dishley, or New Leicestershire Longhorn, breed of cattle and instituted many improvements in farm management

Bakhchisarai (bäkh"chəsärī') [Turkish,=garden house], city (pop c 10,000), S European RSFSR, in S Crimea From the 15th cent until 1783 it was the capital of the khanate of Crimea or Little Tatary Until the deportation, at the end of the Second World War, of the Crimean Tatars, the population of Bakhchisarai was 70 percent Turko-Tatar The palace of the khans, celebrated by Pushkin and Mickiewicz for its beauty, notably its white marble fountains, was built in the 16th cent Bakhchisarai formerly had more than 30 mosques Near by are the ruins of CHUFUT-KALE

Bakhmut, Ukraine see ARTEMOVSK

Bakhtegan, lake, Iran see NIRIZ

Bakhtiari (bäkh"tēə'rē, -ärē', bäkh"-), region of SW Iran It is mountainous, and the roads connect the scattered villages only poorly The Karun and Zavinda Rud rise here The section is the chief home of the nomadic mountain tribe, the Bakhtiari, who have sometimes been classified among the Great Lurs They live primarily by pastoral pursuits though they raise some crops in the fertile valleys They are famed for their warlike behavior They are commonly said to have two branches, the Haftlang and the Charlang or Cheharlang The region became important in the 1880s when the British wished to put through a rail line After the discovery of oil, the Bakhtiari chiefs were even more courted by the British and were paid to protect the oil pipe lines through the country The Bakhtiari played a decisive part in the revolution of 1908–9. Reza Shah Pahlavi subdued them, but after his deposition they once more set out on aggressive activities against the central government

Bakhuyzen, Ludolf see BACKHUYSEN, LUDOLF

baking powder, mixture containing baking soda (sodium bicarbonate) and acid-producing ingredients which combine when moistened, causing the evolution of carbon dioxide in dough masses It acts more rapidly than YEAST In the early baking powders, used in the United States from c 1850, the ingredients were commonly put up in separate packets Cookbooks called for measurements of cream of tartar and of baking soda Modern baking powders are classed according to whether the acid-producing constituent is a tartrate, a phosphate, or an alum Tartrate powders liberate all the gas evolved at room temperature, phosphate types release a portion of the gas at oven heat Those called double-acting powders contain two or more of these acid-producing substances and produce some carbon dioxide at room temperature and some at oven heat The use of baking powder is properly limited to quick breads, cakes, and pastry

baking soda see SODA

Bakocz or Bakacs, Thomas (bô'kôts, bô'kôch), Hung Bakócz or Bakács Tamás (tô'mush), c 1442–1521, Hungarian statesman, cardinal of the Roman Church He is often called the Hungarian Wolsey Of unbounded ambition, he rose from servile origin, was secretary to King Matthias Corvinus, and under Uladislaus II, whom he dominated, became chancellor, archbishop of Esztergom, and papal legate Though he was expected by many to succeed Julius II as pope, Leo X was elected Leo in 1514 charged him as primate of Hungary with a crusade against the Turks The nobles did not heed Bakocz's call, and the peasants who had volunteered revolted against the aristocracy The rebellion was crushed with great cruelty by John Zapolya (see JOHN I), and the few remaining liberties of the peasants were abolished After Uladislaus's death Bakocz retired to Esztergom, where he died, leaving an enormous fortune

Bakst, Lev Nikolayevich (lyəf' nyĭkůl'uvĭch bäkst'), 1866?–1924, Russian scenic artist and painter His original, imaginative style and rich and brilliant color exerted a wide influence on the costume, stage setting, and decorative arts Through his designs for the stage settings and costumes for Diaghilev's ballets Cleopatra and Scheherazade he gained a wide reputation His principal works were exhibited in the United States in 1913–14

Baku (bäkōō', Rus bůkōō'), capital of Azerbaijan, USSR, on the Caspian Sea Greater Baku (pop 809,347) includes the whole APSHERON peninsula, on which Baku proper is situated The city is the chief petroleum center of the USSR and one of the largest in the world It is also a great Caspian port, the head of oil and kerosene pipe lines to Batum, and the seat of the state university of Azerbaijan, of several technical and medical institutes, and of museums, theaters, and a conservatory The city was first mentioned in the 5th cent A D Its oil and gas wells were long worshiped by Zoroastrians, who made shrines of constantly burning fires. After passing under the rule of Arabs, Turks, and Persians, it was ceded to Russia by Persia in the Treaty of Gulistan (1813) It grew rapidly after the development (late 19th cent) of the oil industry Baku proper rises in an amphitheater from the Baku Bay The center of Baku is the Old City, the fortress of Bad-Kube, which includes quaint medieval streets, several mosques, and the 17th-century palace of the khans of Baku, who were vassals of the Persian shahs The Maiden's Tower, part of an old fortification, dates from the 12th cent The New City is modern and European in aspect It adjoins, in the east, the Black City (Rus Cherny Gorod) and the newer White City (Rus Bely Gorod), where the petroleum refining and cracking plants are situated Numerous industrial suburbs cover the entire area of Greater Baku

Bakunin, Mikhail (mēkhīl' bůkōō'nyĭn), 1814–76, Russian anarchist He was of the aristocracy, but entered upon revolutionary activities as a young man As a result of his part in the German revolutions of 1848–49, he was exiled to Siberia, but escaped In 1868 he became active in the First International where with his militant anarchist doctrines, he had great influence These doctrines, however, brought him into conflict with the Marxists, and he was expelled (1872) He believed that through "anarchism, collectivism, and atheism" men would achieve complete freedom, and he advocated violent overthrow of existing states and institutions as a necessary step to these ends. His writings include God and the State (1882, Eng. tr , 1893) See biography by E H Carr (1937)

Balaam (bā'lăm), prophet hired by Balak, king of Moab, to curse the Jews, encamped in the Jordan valley For the story of the way every curse became a blessing, see Num 22–24 Later, Balaam seduced the Israelites to evil practices, an act for which he was killed. See also Num 31 8,16, Micah 6 5, 2 Peter 2 15,16, Jude 11, Rev. 2.14.

Balac (bā'lăk), Greek form of BALAK.

Baladan see MERODACH-BALADAN

Balah (bā'lŭ), the same as BILHAH 2.

Balak (bā'lăk) [Heb ,=who devastates], king of Moab who hired Balaam to curse Israel Num 22–24 Balac is a Greek form Rev 2 14

Balakirev, Mili Alekseyevich (mē'lyĭ ălyĭksyā'yĭvĭch bălă'kyĭrĭf), 1837–1910, Russian composer and conductor, remembered more for his influence on contemporary nationalist composers, Borodin, Moussorgsky, and Rimsky-Korsakov, than for his own compositions In 1862 he founded the Free School of Music in St Petersburg, he was conductor of the Russian Music Society, 1867–69, succeeding Anton Rubinstein In 1869 he became director of the Imperial Chapel and in 1883 of the Imperial Music Society His compositions, few in number, include the symphonic poems Tamara (1881) and Russia (1882), a piano fantasy, Islamey (1869), incidental music for King Lear (1858–59), and songs See M D Calvocoressi and Gerald Abraham, Masters of Russian Music (1936); V. I. Seroff, The Mighty Five (1948)

Balaklava (bă'lŭklä'vŭ, -klä'vŭ, Rus. bŭlŭklä'vŭ), city (pop 2,323), S European RSFSR, in S Crimea, 8 mi SSE of Sevastopol It is a fishing port and resort on the Black Sea In ancient times it was an important Greek commercial city, and in the Middle Ages it belonged to the Genoese, from whom it was taken (1475) by the Turks There are ruins of a Genoese fortress (14th–15th cent) In the Crimean War, Balaklava became famous for an allied victory (Oct , 1854) over the Russians and particularly for the charge of the Light Brigade, celebrated by Tennyson Owing to a misunderstanding of orders, an English light-cavalry brigade, 670 strong, led by the earl of Cardigan, charged a heavily protected Russian position, with utter disregard for the hopelessness of their task More than two thirds were killed or wounded

balalaika (bălŭlī'kŭ), stringed musical instrument, with triangular body and long, fretted neck, similar to the guitar Its strings, usually numbering three, are plucked Various sizes of balalaikas are often used in ensemble Of uncertain origin, it is now associated with Russia

Balance, the · see LIBRA

balance, instrument designed to measure the MASS or weight of a body The simplest type of balance, the equal-arm or beam balance, is an application of the simple LEVER A uniform bar, the beam, is suspended at its exact center upon a knife-edge set at right angles to it The point of support is called the fulcrum Two pans of equal weight are suspended from the beam, one at each end, at points equidistant from the fulcrum Since the center of gravity of a uniform bar is at its mid-point, the beam supporting the pans will be in equilibrium, i e , will balance upon the knife-edge A long pointer attached at right angles to the beam at the fulcrum indicates zero on a scale when the beam is at rest parallel to a level surface It also shows the extent of swing of the beam on one side or the other, acting somewhat as a pendulum, when the beam is coming to rest The object to be weighed is placed upon one pan and standard weights are added to the other until the balance of the beam is established again One balance of this type, the analytical balance is used for delicate weighing in quantitative analysis in chemistry It is contained in a glass case, since its accuracy is easily affected by dust and moisture The platform balance is a form of equal-arm balance with a small rider mounted upon a bar which is parallel to the beam and connects the supports of the two parts This rider is moved along the bar from left to right, its left edge marking decimal fractions of the unit weight On the unequal-arm balance, the beam is suspended at a point a very short distance from one of its ends The object to be weighed is placed on this end and a small weight is moved out along the longer arm until balance is obtained. One example of this type of balance is the Roman steelyard In the equal-arm and unequal-arm balances, the mass or standard weight of a body is determined, but the spring balance is a machine which records local weight, i e , measures the force of gravity at a certain point on the earth's surface It consists of a coiled spring fastened at one end, with a hook at the other to which the body to be weighed or the force to be measured is applied A pointer fastened to a part of the spring near its attached end records the extent to which the spring is stretched by the body Such balances do not retain their accuracy permanently, for no matter how carefully it is handled, the spring very gradually uncoils even though its limit of elasticity has not been exceeded Although extremely accurate results can be obtained in measuring minute masses, it is physically impossible to construct any balance so perfect mechanically that it will yield directly weighings that are "perfectly" accurate. For ordinary purposes the errors are so small as to be insignificant, but in chemical analysis it has been necessary to work out methods by which they can be corrected Since it is not possible to find the exact center of gravity of a beam or to construct pans of identical weight, the errors can in some degree be overcome by the use of tiny riders and set screws to add extra weight to one side or the other of the beam. Special methods of weighing procedure have also been worked out to minimize error. A so-called TORSION BALANCE depending upon the twisting of a wire or thread has been employed for weighing, but the term is commonly used to indicate a device for measuring minute electrical and magnetic forces It is not strictly a balance balance of power, in international relations, doctrine that the preservation of peace depends upon preventing any nation or coalition of nations from becoming powerful enough to dominate in relations with all other nations In its operation the doctrine usually leads to either of two results a coalition of states intended to resist and confine a powerful state or, where there are rival states or alliances of opposing power, an offer of support to the weaker. The doctrine was espoused in Europe after the 15th cent Many coalitions, such as the GRAND ALLIANCE, were designed to maintain the balance of power, disruption by threats of territorial aggrandizement would justify any intervention, even war The chief modern schemes of international control, the League of Nations and the United Nations, may be, with great restrictions, viewed as practicing a modified version of the balance of power, in that the strength of the entire organization is theoretically available against any power which endangers the peace balance of trade, the difference between the exports and imports of a country Under the economic theory of the 16th and 17th cent the Merchants Adventurers sponsored the idea that a country should have an excess of exports over imports to bring money, which they confused with wealth, into the country They urged legislation to restrict use of foreign goods and exportable domestic goods By 1663 these mercantilists had abolished laws forbidding the export of bullion and regulating individual foreign transactions, but the idea that a "favorable" balance of trade spelled prosperity to a country was believed sound until refuted by Adam Smith and David Hume It is still popularly held Any computation of the balance of trade must include not only exports and imports of goods, but also such "invisibles" as money spent by tourists or sent to relatives and such services as cablegrams, patents, charities, missions, and transportation Foreign loans and their interest must also be included The balance of trade is rather an indication of a country's borrowing than of its prosperity See F W Taussig, International Trade (1927)

Balanchine, George (bă'lŭnchēn), 1904–, Russian-American ballet dancer and choreographer, whose real name is Georgi Balinchinvadse He attended the Imperial Ballet School, Petrograd, and performed (1921–24) in Russia In the Diaghilev Ballet Russe, Paris (1924–28), he was a principal dancer and a choreographer He came to the United States (1933) and was director (1934–37) of ballet for the Metropolitan Opera House and a founder of the School of American Ballet His choreographical works include The Nightingale, Apollon musagète, Prodigal Son, and Cotillon.

Balard, Antoine Jérôme (ătwăn' zhārōm' bălär'), 1802–76, French chemist He discovered bromine (1826), extracted sodium sulphate from sea water, and first recognized the composition of bleaching powder

Balassa, Baron Balint (bŭlŭsh'ŭ), Hung Balassa Bálint (bô'lôsh-shô ba'lĭnt), 1551–94, Hungarian Renaissance poet He was famous as a dancer of the ceremonial dances of old Hungary Fundamentally a religious poet, he had a keen sense of the beauties of nature and was one of the first Hungarian poets to express it His versification was graceful and his diction powerful, so that he far transcends his contemporaries and immediate predecessors. He is regarded as the creator of Hungarian lyric verse In addition to his original works, he left translations of medieval Latin poets

Balaton (bă'lŭtŏn, Hung bô'lôtôn), Ger. Plattensee (plă'tŭnzā), largest lake in Central Europe, area 231 sq mi , 48 mi long There are many tourist and health resorts, the shallow waters abound in fish, and along the shores are fine vineyards

Balbi, Adriano (ădrēä'nō bäl'bē), 1782–1848, Italian geographer, b Venice He published Atlas ethnographique du globe (1826), Abrégé de géographie (1832), and other works, some of which were edited by his son, Eugenio Balbi (āōjā'nyō), 1812–84, who was also a geographer

Balbo, Cesare (chä'zärā bäl'bō), 1789–1853, Italian politician, historian, and author. He held various posts during the Napoleonic occupation of Italy and became involved in the revolution of 1821 in Piedmont King Charles Albert of Sardinia made him premier of his first constitutional cabinet (1848), but Balbo resigned after three months. His works include Sommario della storia d'Italia (1846), Speranze d'Italia [hopes of Italy] (1844), and a life of Dante (1839)

Balbo, Italo (ē'tälō), 1896–1940, Italian Fascist leader and aviator After serving in the First World War, he joined the Fascist movement and was one of the four top leaders of the March on Rome in 1922. A general of the Fascist militia, he held several cabinet posts and became minister of aviation in 1929 He efficiently developed aviation in Italy and led mass flights, the most notable being Rome—Rio de Janeiro and Rome—Chicago (1933) The same year he was sent to Libya as governor general, a post he held until his death in 1940, when his plane was brought down over Tobruk, Libya, supposedly by accident.

Balboa, Vasco Núñez de (bälbō'ŭ, Span. vä'skō nōō'nyăth dā bälbō'ä), c 1475–1519?, Spanish conquistador, discoverer of the Pacific Ocean. After sailing with BASTIDAS in 1501, Balboa probably went to Hispaniola In 1510, fleeing from creditors, he hid on the vessel that took ENCISO to Panama. After reaching DARIEN, Balboa took command, deposed the incompetent Enciso, and sent him to Spain as a prisoner Balboa showed only rarely the rapacity and cruelty characteristic of the conquistador He won the friendship of the Indians, who accompanied him on his epic march across the isthmus Toward the end of Sept , 1513, he discovered the Pacific and claimed it and all shores washed by it for the Spanish crown His discovery came too late to offset Enciso's complaints at the court of Spain Balboa was replaced by Pedro ARIAS DE ÁVILLA, and while preparing an expedition to Peru, he was summarily seized by Pedrarias, accused of treason, and beheaded See Charles L G. Anderson, Life and Letters of Vasco Nuñez de Balboa (1941)

Balboa, town (pop 3,922), Panama Canal Zone, a port on the Pacific It is administrative headquarters of the zone, the canal, and the Panama Railroad Company and the port for Panama city. Balboa dist comprises the Pacific half of the zone

Balbriggan (bälbrĭg'ŭn), town (pop 2,530), Co Dublin, Ireland, on the Irish Sea and N of Dublin It is a fishing port and a textile center (especially hosiery)

Balbus (Lucius Cornelius Balbus) (bäl'bus), 1st cent B C , Roman statesman, b Gades (now Cádiz, Spain) He won notice for brilliant service against Sertorius, and Pompey brought him to Rome and had him made a citizen Balbus helped to bring about the creation of the First Triumvirate (Pompey, Caesar, and Crassus) in 60 B C and thereafter was a friend and protégé of Julius Caesar In 56 B C the conservative party, to embarrass Pompey and Crassus in Caesar's absence, charged Balbus with obtaining citizenship illegally When the case came to trial, CICERO at Pompey's request made a brilliant oration in Balbus' defense and secured an acquittal Balbus at first was neutral, then openly favored Caesar in the struggle with Pompey After Caesar's death he supported Octavian (later Augustus) and in 40 B C was made consul, the first person who was not born a citizen to hold that office

Balch, Emily Greene (bôlch), 1867–, American economist and sociologist, b Jamaica Plain, Mass , grad Bryn Mawr, 1889 She taught economics and social science at Wellesley from 1896 until 1918, when she was dismissed for her activities against the First World War She continued her efforts for peace, being international secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom from 1919 to 1922 and its honorary international president from 1936 With John R Mott she shared the 1946 Nobel Peace Prize Among her writings are Approaches to the Great Settlement (1918), Refugees as Assets (1939), and The Miracle of Living (1941), poems.

Balchen, Bernt (bäl'kun), 1899–, Norwegian-American aviator He studied flying at the Norwegian naval school and had much experience flying in the arctic He headed one of the search expeditions for Amundsen and Ellsworth in 1925 and was a member of their 1926 expedition to the arctic Byrd, meeting Balchen at Spitsbergen in 1926, brought him to the United States, and the Norwegian became a test pilot for the Fokker aircraft concern He was second pilot on Byrd's transatlantic flight in 1927 and was the hero of the forced night landing in the surf on the Norman coast He took part in the rescuing (1928) of the Bremen flyers from Greenly Island near Newfoundland, was chief pilot on Byrd's expedition to Antarctica (1928–30), was a colonel in the U.S Army Air Forces in the Second World War, and was recalled to active service in 1948

bald cypress: see CYPRESS

Baldensperger, Fernand, pseud Fernand Baldenne, 1871–, French literary historian and poet From 1900 to 1936 he taught comparative literature at Nancy, Lyons, Strasbourg, and Paris universities He has been connected with several American universities—Harvard, Princeton, and the Univ of California at Los Angeles With Paul Hasard he founded the Revue de littérature comparée in 1921 Among his important works is Études d'histoire littéraire (4 vols.) Baldensperger has been successful in translating English poetry into French verse, his D' Edmund Spenser à Alan Seeger (1938) is an example.

Balder (bôl'dŭr), Norse god of light, son of Odin and Frigg. His mother had extracted oaths from everything but the mistletoe not to harm her son According to one legend Loki gave a dart of mistletoe to the blind Hoder and aimed it at Balder, who was killed by it.

Bald Knob, farm trade town (pop 1,445), N central Ark., between the White and the Little Red rivers baldness, condition of lack or loss of hair, occurring more frequently in men than in women and usually appearing in later life The cause of baldness has been attributed to a number of factors, including heredity, tension of the scalp resulting in a reduced local blood supply, disease of the nervous system (e g , syphilis), fungus infection, and dandruff Although massage and hair tonics are frequently employed to stimulate growth of hair, most cases fail to respond to such therapy Plastic surgery has been used to loosen the skin of the scalp, thus eliminating skin tension and increasing the local blood supply

Baldoon (–dōōn'), settlement, S Ont , near the present Chatham. It was founded by the 5th earl of Selkirk in 1804 Its failure contributed to the decision of Selkirk to establish Scottish emigrants on the western prairies

Baldovinetti, Alessio (älās'syō bäldōvēnēt'tē), c 1425–1499, painter and decorative artist of the early Florentine Renaissance It is believed that he was a pupil of Uccello and that he assisted Andrea del Castagno and Domenico Veneziano in painting frescoes for Santa Maria Novella, Florence He was one of the first in Italy to experiment with the technique of oil painting Among his surviving works are the Nativity, painted for the cloister of Santa Annunziata, Florence, Madonna with Saints and Annunciation (Uffizi), Madonna (Louvre), and several of the ceiling figures from his decorations for the Portuguese chapel in San Miniato, where he also restored some of the mosaics A portrait of himself (Galleria Morelli, Bergamo) is all that survives of his most ambitious work, a series of frescoes representing scenes from the Old Testament and introducing portraits of famous contemporaries, which he painted for the Church of Santa Trinità, Rome The Trinity, for the altar of the same church, is now in the Academy at Florence Baldovinetti was considered the foremost designer of mosaics of his day and one of the foremost decorative artists He worked also in stained glass, and painted cassoni, shields, and coats of arms His most famous pupil was Domenico Ghirlandaio See biography by R W Kennedy (1939)

Baldung, Hans (hans' bäl'dōōng), c 1480–1545, German painter, sometimes surnamed Grien or Grün because of his predilection for green in his paintings He was probably a pupil of Dürer, and his work shows the influence of Dürer and Grünewald He lived and worked in Strasbourg, where he was court painter to the bishop He painted chiefly religious and mythological subjects His masterpiece is a high altar in the cathedral at Freiburg im Breisgau, depicting the Coronation of the Virgin Also famous are two allegories Luxury and Death (Basel) and Adoration of the Magi Baldung's painting is distinguished for its fine color and luminosity In addition to his religious paintings he produced some portraits and various admirable drawings, woodcuts, and designs for stained glass

Baldwin I, 1171–1205, first Latin emperor of Constantinople (1204–5) As count of Flanders, he was a leader in the Fourth Crusade (see CRUSADES) After the taking of Constantinople (1204), the Crusaders elected him emperor (see CONSTANTINOPLE, LATIN EMPIRE OF) He was captured in battle (1205) by the Bulgarians and died in captivity, probably by poison He was succeeded by his brother, Henry of Flanders

Baldwin II, 1217–73, last Latin emperor of Constantinople (1228–61), brother and successor of ROBERT OF COURTENAY He began his personal rule only after the death (1237) of JOHN OF BRIENNE Baldwin traveled in Western Europe in search of financial and military aid for his tottering throne (see CONSTANTINOPLE, LATIN EMPIRE OF) To obtain funds he sold a large part of the True Cross and other sacred relics to Louis IX of France and at one time pawned his son with the Venetians In 1261 MICHAEL VIII, Greek emperor of Nicaea, stormed Constantinople Baldwin escaped to Italy and ultimately transferred his claims on the throne to CHARLES I of Naples

Baldwin I, 1058?–1118, king of Jerusalem (1100–1118), brother and successor of GODFREY OF BOUILLON, whom he accompanied on the First Crusade (see CRUSADES) Separating from the main army after the siege of Nicaea, Baldwin followed TANCRED into Cilicia and deprived him of Tarsus (1097) He wrested Edessa from the Moslems (1097) and as count of Edessa defended the city until elected ruler of Jerusalem. His election marked the triumph of the military faction of the Crusaders over the ecclesiastical faction Taking the title of king, he consolidated the Latin states of the East With the help of crusading fleets from the West and—more important—of the Genoese and the Venetians, to whom he made large concessions, he gained possession of the chief ports of Palestine. He helped the Latin rulers of Antioch, Edessa, and Tripoli against the Moslems and fought against the Egyptians He died on his return from an expedition into Egypt. His cousin, Baldwin II, succeeded him.

Baldwin II (Baldwin du Bourg), d. 1131, king of Jerusalem (1118–31), count of Edessa (1100–1131), cousin and successor of Baldwin I He accompanied Godfrey of Bouillon on the First Crusade, was captured (1104) by the Moslems, and was released in 1108 As king of Jerusalem, he spent most of his reign fighting the Turks in N Syria He was a prisoner from 1123 to 1124, Eustace Grener, his regent during his captivity, took Tyre In Baldwin's reign the Latin principality of Antioch was reduced to dependence on the kingdom of Jerusalem Baldwin's daughter Melisende married (1129) FULK of Anjou, who succeeded him

Baldwin III, 1130–63, king of Jerusalem (1143–63), son and successor of Fulk In his reign began the decay of the Latin power in the East Edessa fell to the Moslems (1144), the Second Crusade (see CRUSADES) failed, and Sultan NUREDDIN seized (1154) Damascus and N Syria Baldwin in 1153 took Ascalon and foolishly directed his policy against the weak Egyptians rather than the more dangerous Turks His brother succeeded him as Amalric I

Baldwin IV (Baldwin the Leper), c 1161–1185, king of Jerusalem (1174–85), son and successor of Amalric I He was constantly engaged, except for a brief truce (1180–82), in defending his kingdom against SALADIN In 1183 his leprosy made sudden progress, and he lost use of his eyes, hands, and feet He appointed GUY OF LUSIGNAN as his lieutenant, but withdrew the commission the same year and had his five-year-old nephew crowned king as Baldwin V (d 1186) RAYMOND, count of Tripoli, was regent for Baldwin V, who was succeeded as king by Guy of Lusignan

Baldwin, Abraham, 1754–1807, American statesman, b Guilford, Conn , grad Yale, 1772 After service as a chaplain in the American Revolution, he studied law and in 1784 was admitted to practice in Georgia He was a member of the Continental Congress (1785–88) and the leading Georgia delegate to the Federal Constitutional Convention in 1787 His change of vote in that convention on the issue of the mode of representation in Congress brought about a tie between the large and small states The committee appointed to solve the problem, on which Baldwin served, framed the compromise system of representation which was adopted (by population in the House of Representatives and by states in the Senate) Baldwin was elected to the first House of Representatives and served until 1799 He then served in the Senate until his death He was an industrious member of many committees and supported Jeffersonian policies Earlier, while in the Georgia assembly, Baldwin wrote the charter of Franklin College, a state educational institution, which later developed into the Univ of Georgia, and was chairman of its board of trustees from 1801 until he died See biography by H C White (1926)

Baldwin, James Mark, 1861–1934, American psychologist, b Columbia, S C , grad Princeton (B A , 1884, Ph D , 1889) He taught philosophy at the Univ of Toronto (1889–93), psychology at Princeton (1893–1903), and philosophy and psychology at Johns Hopkins (1903–9) and the National Univ of Mexico (1909–13) Internationally known as philosopher and psychologist, he was the author of numerous works in both fields, many of them were translated into European languages Among his books are Elements of Psychology (1893), Story of the Mind (1898), Dictionary of Philosophy and Psychology (1901–6), Thought and Things (1906–11), and Between Two Wars, 1861–1921 (1926)

Baldwin, Loammi (lōă'mī), 1740–1807, American civil engineer, b Woburn, Mass He is known for building the Middlesex Canal (opened 1803) between Somerville and Lowell, Mass , and for originating the Baldwin apple His son, Loammi Baldwin, 1780–1838, was engineer of the Union Canal in Pennsylvania and a builder of dry docks He designed Holworthy Hall at Harvard

Baldwin, Matthias William, 1795–1866, American industrialist and philanthropist, b Elizabethtown (now Elizabeth), N J At first a successful jeweler, Baldwin moved (1825) to Philadelphia and there manufactured tools for bookbinding He became interested in steam-engine production and completed in 1832 the locomotive Old Ironsides—one of the first successful American models—for the Philadelphia and Germantown RR The Baldwin Locomotive Works subsequently prospered and maintained a leading position in the industry Baldwin gave many contributions to the Franklin Institute for the Promotion of Mechanical Arts, of which he was a charter member

Baldwin, Robert, 1804–58, Canadian statesman, leader of the movement for representative government in Canada, b York (now Toronto), Ont His father, William Warren Baldwin (1775–1844), was a leader of the Reform party and a supporter of the principle of responsible government in the colonies In 1836, as a recognized leader of reform in Upper Canada, Robert Baldwin was appointed by Sir Francis Bond Head to the executive council but resigned in a few weeks when it became apparent that the governor had no intention of acceding to the demands of the reformers In England, in 1836, Baldwin sent to the colonial secretary a memorandum which was the first clear enunciation of the tenet of responsible government for Canada Shortly after his return to Canada in 1837, he served as mediator between Head and the rebels, as a moderate reformer, he had not joined the faction of William Lyon Mackenzie in the rebellion of that year Again (1841) he hopefully accepted appointment to the executive council under Lord Sydenham, only to resign when the governor showed no disposition to grant responsible government As a member of the assembly, Baldwin led the opposition group and increased his influence, particularly by effecting an alliance with the French in Lower Canada, whom Sydenham had ignored in forming his council When Sir Charles Bagot became governor, he yielded in 1842 to the Reform party, Baldwin and Louis Hippolyte LAFONTAINE were allowed to form their first coalition government With Bagot's death and the arrival (1843) of Sir Charles Metcalfe, the first Baldwin-LaFontaine government resigned, but in the elections of Dec , 1847, the reformers won an overwhelming vote As a consequence, the second Baldwin-LaFontaine ministry (1848–51) was formed, it is often called "the great ministry" Outstanding among its accomplishments were the Municipal Corporations Act, commonly called the Baldwin Act, for the reformation of local government in Ontario, an act to revise the judicial system, and an act to transform King's College into the nonsectarian Univ of Toronto (over the violent opposition of Bishop Strachan) In 1851 Baldwin retired to private life See biography by G E Wilson (1933), Stephen Leacock, Mackenzie Baldwin, LaFontaine, Hincks (rev ed , 1926), R W Langstone, Responsible Government in Canada (1931)

Baldwin, Simeon Eben, 1840–1927, American jurist, b New Haven, Conn , grad Yale, 1861 He was a member of the Yale teaching staff from 1869 to 1919, serving as a professor of law after 1872 His teaching and financial aid helped to increase the prestige and quality of the law school He was appointed (1893) associate justice of the supreme court of Connecticut and in 1907 became chief justice In the year of his compulsory retirement from judicial office (1910) he was elected governor of Connecticut and was reelected in 1912 His books include Modern Political Institutions (1898), American Railroad Law (1904), and The Young Man and the Law (1919)

Baldwin, Stanley, 1867–1947, British statesman, son of a Worcestershire ironmaster and cousin of Rudyard Kipling After an education at Harrow and at Trinity College, Cambridge, he was himself an ironmaster In 1908 he was elected to Commons from Bewdley in Worcestershire, and he remained in Parliament, becoming the leader of the Conservative party from 1923 to 1937 He was three times prime minister of England His first term of office (1923–24) was ended by his failure to obtain support for a protectionist tariff policy In his second premiership (1924–29) he broke the general strike of 1926 From 1931 to 1935 he was lord president of the council in Ramsay MacDonald's national government While he was prime minister a third time (1935–37), British foreign relations deteriorated with the decline of the League of Nations, the rise of Nazi Germany, the Italian conquest of Ethiopia, and the start of the war in Spain The rearmament of Britain was finally begun Baldwin's management of the crisis over the marriage of Edward VIII (1936) ended with the king's abdication Baldwin retired in 1937 and shortly thereafter was created Earl Baldwin of Bewdley and Viscount Corvedale

Baldwin, town (pop 1,002), N Fla , just W of Jacksonville It is a railroad junction in a timber and livestock area

Baldwin City, city (pop 1,096), NE Kansas, SE of Topeka, laid out 1855, inc 1870 In 1856 it was the scene of a battle between proslavery and Free State settlers Baker Univ (Methodist, coeducational, 1858) is here

Baldwin of Bewdley, Stanley Baldwin, 1st Earl: see BALDWIN, STANLEY

Baldwinsville, village (pop 3,840), central N Y , on the Seneca and NW of Syracuse, in a farm area, settled 1796, inc 1847 It is a shipping center, and makes flour, knives, and paper products

Baldwin-Wallace College see BEREA, Ohio

Baldwyn, town (pop 1,279), NE Miss , N of Tupelo Near by is Brices Cross Roads, a national battlefield site (one acre, est 1929), where Gen N B Forrest routed a force of Union troops, June 10, 1864

Bale, John, 1495–1563, English dramatist and essayist, bishop of Ossory (1552–53), who wrote polemics in the cause of the Reformation. One of his 21 plays is Kynge Johan, published between 1533 and 1536, which shows the transition from the medieval morality play to the Renaissance historical drama He compiled the Illustrium Scriptorum (1548), an early bibliography of English literature See J W Harris, The Life and Works of John Bale (1935)

Bâle see BASEL

Balearic Islands (bălēăr'ĭk), Span Baleares (bälāä'rās), archipelago, off Spain, in the W Mediterranean, forming Baleares prov (1,936 sq. mi ; pop. 407,497) of Spain Palma is the capital The chief islands are MAJORCA, MINORCA, and IVIZA Noted for their scenery and their mild climate, the Baleares are visited by many tourists Agriculture and fishing are the main occupations, fruit, wine, olive oil, majolica ware, and silver filigree are exported Inhabited since prehistoric times—there are numerous Cyclopean remains—the islands were occupied by Iberians, Phoenicians, Greeks, Carthaginians, Romans, and Byzantines Under the Moors, who conquered the Baleares in the 8th cent , an independent kingdom was established (11th cent) It became the seat of powerful pirates, harassing Mediterranean coastal cities and trade JAMES I of Aragon conquered (1229–35) the islands They were included (1276–1343) in the independent kingdom of Majorca and reverted to the Aragonese crown under Peter IV At the outbreak of the Spanish civil war (1936), Majorca and Iviza went over to the Insurgents—Majorca becoming a base of the Italian fleet—while Minorca remained in the hands of the Loyalists until 1939

baleen see WHALE

Balen, Hendrik van (hĕn'drĭk vän bā'lŋ), 1575–1632, Flemish painter He painted portraits and mythological and religious subjects

Bales, Peter, 1547–1610?, English calligrapher and stenographer He was one of the first in modern times to devise a scheme of shorthand writing

Balfe, Michael William, 1808–70, Irish composer Of his 28 operas, very popular in their time and much influenced by the French opéra comique, the most enduring has been The Bohemian Girl (1843)

Balfour, Arthur James (băl'fōōr), 1848–1930, British statesman He entered Parliament as a Conservative in 1874 and had a number of important posts He was first lord of the treasury (1891–92, 1895–1902) before he succeeded his uncle, the 3d marquess of Salisbury, as premier in 1902 The government was hopelessly divided over Joseph Chamberlain's policy of protection, and it was defeated in the general elections of 1905 In the coalition cabinet headed by Asquith (later earl of Oxford and Asquith), Balfour was first lord of the admiralty, and when Lloyd George reconstructed the ministry Balfour became (1916) foreign minister His most notable action was issuing the Balfour Declaration This pledged British support to the Zionist hope for a Jewish national home in Palestine, with the proviso that the rights of non-Jewish communities in Palestine would be respected The carrying out of this pledge (with considerable ambivalence) was one of the main problems of British policy in the ensuing years Balfour exchanged the foreign ministry for the office of lord president of the council in 1919 and represented Britain at the first meeting of the League of Nations in 1920 and at the Washington Conference on limiting naval armaments in 1921–22 He retired from active politics in 1922, was created 1st earl of Balfour, and became leader of the Conservatives in the House of Lords He was known for his devotion to the cause of international peace and his interest in the problems of a modern religion Among his philosophical works were The Foundations of Belief (1900), Theism and Humanism (1915), Theism and Thought (1923), and Opinions and Arguments (1927) See biography by his niece, Blanche Dugdale (1936)

Balfour, Francis Maitland, 1851–82, Scottish embryologist, brother of A J Balfour He did research at Cambridge Univ and at the zoological station at Naples and was appointed (1882) professor of animal morphology at Cambridge Univ He wrote A Monograph on the Development of Elasmobranch Fishes (1878) and A Treatise on Comparative Embryology (2 vols , 1880–81)

Balfour, Sir James, d c 1583, Scottish judge and politician He was educated for the Church He was with his brothers condemned for the murder of Cardinal Beaton, and on his release from the galleys he abjured Protestantism He was secretly disloyal to Mary Queen of Scots and was involved in the murder of Darnley As governor of Edinburgh Castle, he treacherously surrendered it to James Stuart, earl of Murray Balfour repeatedly changed his political allegiance and eventually withdrew to France, whence he returned on the accession of James VI He then secured the conviction of the earl of Morton for Darnley's murder He was long a jurist, but, despite its name, the early law text, Balfour's Practicks of Scots Law, is only partially of his authorship

Bali (bä'lē), island (2,533 sq mi , pop including two offshore islets 1,074,925), East Indonesia, one of the Lesser Sundas It is E of Java, from which it is separated by Bali Strait It is 90 mi long and 55 mi wide and rises to 10,308 ft at the volcanic peak of Mt Agung The Balinese are known for their physical beauty and their high level of culture, which includes advanced forms of music, folk drama, and architecture Copra, rice, coffee, tobacco, and teakwood are the chief products. The capital is Singaraja, near which is Buleleng, the chief port. Klungkung, NE of Denpasar (the largest town), was the capital of the native rulers of Bali from the 17th cent. until 1908. Early converted to Hinduism, the natives of Bali came under Javanese rule, from which they freed themselves in the late 15th cent The Dutch first landed here in 1597, and in the early 17th cent the Dutch East India Company began its trade with the island, Bali was under British rule from 1811 to 1815, and Dutch sovereignty was not firmly established until the conclusion of a series of colonial wars (1846–49) The state of East Indonesia was created at a conference held in 1946 at Denpasar See Miguel Covarrubias, Island of Bali (1937)

Balieff, Nikita (nyĭkē'tŭ bä'lyĕf), 1877–1936, Russian impresario and theater manager He founded the Chauve-Souris, a revue which featured tableau versions of songs and dances and colorful costumes He acted as master of ceremonies in all its productions and had immense success in Russia and Paris (1917–22), in New York (1922–23), and after 1934 in Paris, London, and New York

Balikesir (bä'lĭkĕsĕr'), city (pop 33,894), NW Turkey, NNE of Smyrna A rail junction and an agricultural center, it has a large annual fair

Balikpapan (bä'lēkpä'pän), port (pop 29,843), on E Borneo, Indonesia, on an inlet of Macassar Strait and NE of Banjermasin It exports oil and timber In the Second World War, in a naval battle (Jan , 1942) off Balikpapan, U S and Dutch fleet units inflicted severe damages on the Japanese but did not prevent their occupying the port

Balin and Balan, knights of King Arthur see ARTHURIAN LEGEND

Balinese music represents, to a large extent, a survival of the pre-Islamic music of Java It was taken to Bali by Hindu Javanese in the 15th cent and uses the tonal systems of JAVANESE MUSIC, of which pelog is by far the more important in Bali Balinese music is impetuous and noisy, in contrast to the soft, tranquil music heard in Java today Few gamelans, the orchestras of tuned percussion instruments, are heard in Java today but they flourish, their archaic forms preserved, in modern Bali The gamelans of the princes are no longer important in Bali, but have left their influence on the village societies for music making There are also the ceremonial gamelans of the temples The most important instruments are xylophones, which may be of bronze or of bamboo. Bronze xylophones are of two basic types—gangsa, whose keys are supported over a wooden resonance box, and g'ndér, whose keys have individual bamboo resonators These are sometimes melody instruments and sometimes play a brilliant figuration Gongs, suspended singly, are used for metrical accentuation, there are also gong chimes, which are of two types The trompong, a set of 10, is a solo instrument, and the réyong, a set of 12, is played by four men, supplying figuration Flutes, in two sizes, are of bamboo and are used in theatrical music Though the name of the rebab, a two-string spike fiddle, is Persian-Arabic, the instrument probably originated in S China and is used in the music of the gambuh play Cymbals, bell-rattles, and drums supply the all-important, elaborate rhythmic background The anklung is an archaic, tuned bamboo rattle It is not known in all parts of Bali, but gives its name to the anklung gamelan, a ceremonial gamelan which may once have always included anklungs The instrumentation and the repertory of a particular gamelan depends on its function Each of the various forms of dance and drama has a gamelan which specializes in its music The most recent musical development is kebyar, a restless, explosive music which discards the highly developed, balanced forms of the older music Kebyar clubs compose their own music, often taking themes from older music The wealthier clubs include a dancer,—a youth who performs seated on the ground, dancing from the waist up Balinese notation was invented by the Javanese who brought the music to Bali It gives no indication of the rhythm and is little used Music is learned by rote, it is not an improvised music, however, but a sophisticated, composed art music See Colin McPhee, A House in Bali (1946)

Baliol, John de (bä'lēul), d 1269, English baron, founder of Balliol College, Oxford The name is also spelled Balliol One of the regents for ALEXANDER III of Scotland, he was removed from office (1255) and his lands were forfeited for treason He fought for Henry III of England against the barons, being taken prisoner at Lewes (1264) His third son, John de Baliol, 1249–1315, king of Scotland (1292–96), became head of the family after the death of his elder brothers (1278) At the death of MARGARET MAID OF NORWAY (1290), he claimed the Scottish throne through his grandmother, eldest daughter of David of Huntingdon, brother of WILLIAM THE LION His claim was opposed by ROBERT I (Robert the Bruce), son of David of Huntingdon's second daughter and hence one degree nearer to his royal ancestor, though through a younger line The laws of succession not being firmly established, the question was referred to EDWARD I of England, who first demanded and secured (1291), over the opposition of Commons, recognition as feudal overlord of the kingdom. Edward, influenced, perhaps, by John Comyn, decided in favor of Baliol, who was then crowned king (1292) and did homage to Edward for the kingdom; he was therefore called "empty-jacket" by the Scots. To Edward's insistence on the right of appeal from Scottish to English courts, which the newly defined relationship involved, Baliol, after some hesitation, yielded, and in May, 1294, he attended Parliament at Westminster as Edward's vassal In the course of this visit, however, he quarreled with Edward After his return the Scottish council disregarded the summons to help Edward against France and formed an alliance with Philip IV (Philip the Fair). In 1296 the Scots invaded England As Edward marched north to take Berwick, Baliol renounced his oath of fealty, but defeat in a brief campaign, in which he took no active part, led him to surrender to Edward Imprisoned in England till 1299, he was paroled and ended his days quietly on his estates in France, ignoring the struggle for Scottish independence waged, for a time in his name, by Sir William WALLACE His son Edward de Baliol, d 1363, king of Scotland, visited EDWARD III of England in 1324 In 1332, after the death of Robert the Bruce and the succession to the throne of young DAVID II, he invaded Scotland, defeated David's supporters, and was crowned at Scone Soon driven out, he was restored the next year with English aid, successively ceded Berwick and Lothian to Edward, and was again driven out David, who had been in France, returned in 1341 as king Never thereafter did Baliol have real power He retired on an English pension in 1356

Balkan Entente (antant'), loose alliance formed in 1934 by Yugoslavia, Rumania, Greece, and Turkey to safeguard their territorial integrity against Hungarian and Bulgarian revisionism It thus was in harmony with the Little Entente (Yugoslavia, Rumania, and Czechoslovakia) The events of the Second World War caused the dissolution of the Balkan Entente, whose chief lasting achievement was the resumption of friendly relations between Greece and Turkey

Balkan Peninsula, large peninsula, SE Europe, between the Black Sea (east), the Bosporus, the Sea of Marmara, the Dardanelles, and the Aegean Sea (south), and the Ionian and Adriatic seas (west) The line of the Sava and Danube rivers is commonly considered as the northern limit Thus all of ALBANIA, continental GREECE (including the PELOPONNESUS), BULGARIA, and European TURKEY are comprised in the peninsula, which also occupies most of YUGOSLAVIA and SE RUMANIA. These six countries, successors to the Ottoman Empire, are called the Balkan States The peninsula is very mountainous, the main ranges are the DINARIC ALPS, the Balkans, and the RHODOPE mts

Balkans, Bulgarian Stara Planina (stä'rä plänē'nä), mountain range, N Bulgaria, extending W-E from the Yugoslav border to the Black Sea Its highest peak, the Yumrukchal (7,785 ft high), is in the central portion, it is crossed by the Shipka Pass

Balkan Wars, 1912-13, two short wars for the possession of the European territories of the Ottoman Empire The outbreak of the Italo-Turkish war for the possession of Tripoli (1911) opened an opportunity for the Balkan states to increase their territory at Turkish expense Serbia and Bulgaria accordingly concluded (1912) a treaty of alliance In a secret annex, the treaty provided for joint military action and the division of prospective conquests The outbreak of the war, in which Greece and Montenegro joined the original allies, was followed by the speedy expulsion of the Turks from all Turkey in Europe save the Constantinople area After the conclusion of hostilities Serbia evidenced an intention to annex a large part of Albania, so as to gain an outlet on the Adriatic, but this step toward a "Greater Serbia" was opposed by Austria-Hungary and Italy and by the Albanians, who had proclaimed their independence A conference of the ambassadors of the Great Powers at London (1913) created an independent Albania of fair size, thus cutting Serbia off from the sea Dissatisfied with these terms, Serbia demanded of Bulgaria a greater share of Macedonia Bulgaria thereupon attacked Serbia, only to be attacked by Rumania, Greece, and Turkey As a result of this Second Balkan War, Bulgaria lost territory to all her enemies by the Treaty of Bucharest (1913). The Balkan Wars prepared the way for the First World War by satisfying some of the aspirations of Serbia and thereby giving a great impetus to the Serbian desire to annex parts of Austria-Hungary, by alarming Austria and stiffening her resolution to crush Serbia, and by giving causes of dissatisfaction to Bulgaria and Turkey. See George Young, Nationalism and War in the Near East (1915)

Balkar see KABARDIAN AUTONOMOUS SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.

Balkh (balkh), town, N Afghanistan, on a dried-up tributary of the Amu Darya. Its importance lies in its past One tradition says it was the home of Zoroaster Later it attained great wealth and importance as Bactra, the capital of the independent kingdom of BACTRIA. Still later it was the northern center of Buddhism. It was conquered by the Arabs in 653 and became important in the world of

Islam as the original home of the Barmecides (see HARUN-AL-RASHID). The city was sacked in 1221 by Jenghis Khan and never again regained its old importance The old city is now mostly in ruins, and the new city some distance away is an agricultural and commercial center The population (8,000–10,000) is mostly Uzbek

Balkhash (bŭl-khŭsh'), city (pop c 70,000), Kazakh SSR, on the north shore of Lake Balkhash A railroad terminus, port, and copper-smelting center, it was founded as Bertys in 1929

Balkhash, lake, area 6,680 sq mi , SE Kazakh SSR From 15 to 20 mi wide, it stretches for 375 mi between the Kazakh Hills in the north and desert lands in the south It contains salt water, except in the west, near the mouth of its chief affluent, the Ili There is no outlet There are important copper deposits on the north shore

Balkis (băl'kĭs), name given in the Koran to the queen of Sheba who visited Solomon See SHEBA, region

Ball, Albert, 1835–1927, American inventor of mining and quarrying machinery, b Boylston, Mass He invented a diamond core drill which was used to open the Transvaal gold fields His channeling machines for marble quarrying and coal cutting and his coal-picking machines are as well known See biography by R H Kiernan (1934)

Ball, John, d 1381, English hedge priest He was one of the instigators of the Peasants' Revolt of 1381 under Wat TYLER Little is known of his life He had been preaching for many years, independently of the influence of WYCLIF, advocating ecclesiastical poverty and social equality He incited his listeners with such couplets as

When Adam delved, and Eve span
Who was then the gentleman?

He had been excommunicated in 1376 and was in prison at Maidstone when the rebels released him After the dispersal of the rebels, Ball was hanged, drawn, and quartered William Morris wrote one of his works on utopian socialism under the title The Dream of John Ball See Charles Oman, The Great Revolt of 1381 (1906)

Ball, Mary see WASHINGTON, MARY (BALL)

Ball, Sir Robert Stawell, 1840–1913, British astronomer, b Dublin By his lectures, essays, and books, he did much toward popularizing science He served as royal astronomer of Ireland from 1874 to 1892 In 1892 he became professor of astronomy at Cambridge Univ and director of the observatory there He became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1873 and was knighted in 1886 Among his writings are The Story of the Heavens (1885), The Story of the Sun (1893), The Great Astronomers (1895), Elements of Astronomy (1900), and The Earth's Beginnings (1901)

Ball, Thomas, 1819–1911, American sculptor, b Charlestown, Mass , son of a house and sign painter Thomas Ball was also a singer of reputation, the first in this country to sing the title role in Mendelssohn's Elijah Although he lived many years after middle life in Florence, his work remained distinctly American He made portrait busts and statuettes of many distinguished people Among his works are the mounted figure of Washington, in the Boston Public Gardens, one of the finest equestrian statues in the country, the statue of Edwin Forrest as Coriolanus, Actor's Home near Philadelphia, Eve Stepping into Life, his most ambitious work, and St John the Evangelist, Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston His first life-size portrait bust was of Daniel Webster, from which, years later, he made the statue of Webster now in Central Park, New York Emancipation, in Washington, D C , was made for the Freedman's Memorial Association, a replica is in Boston, as are also his Charles Sumner and Josiah Quincy The Washington monument, Methuen, Mass , undertaken after he was 70 years of age, received highest honors at the Columbian Exposition His autobiography, My Three Score Years and Ten, appeared in 1890

ballad (băl'ŭd), narrative poem of unknown authorship, intended to be sung, preserved by oral tradition among people culturally homogeneous and without great literary sophistication Such ballads are objective, impersonal, and unreflective and abound in conventional epithets and set phrases The familiar stanza form is four lines, with four and three stresses alternating and with the second and fourth lines rhyming For example

It was in and about the Martinmas time,
When the green leaves were a falling,
That Sir John Graeme, in the West Country, Fell in love with Barbara Allan
—Bonny Barbara Allan

Jesse had a wife to mourn for his life,
Three children, they were brave,
But the dirty little coward that shot
Mister Howard
Has laid Jesse James in his grave
—Ballad of Jesse James

A refrain, sometimes meaningless, is a common feature of the ballad, often the same stanza is repeated with slight changes which tell the story—a device named incremental repetition The "communal theory" of authorship is that ballads originated in the collective activity of a group dancing and singing together, with individuals spontaneously contributing to the story It is unlikely that any of the ballads we know can have attained their present form in this way, though their origins may have been in such a process Almost all peoples possess a ballad literature More than 300 English and Scottish ballads are extant, many from the 14th cent Interest in the ballad among cultivated people began with Bishop Percy's Relques of Ancient English Poetry (1765) and was furthered by Sir Walter Scott's Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border (1802) Francis Child made the great and definitive collection, English and Scottish Popular Ballads (5 vols , 1883–98, one-volume abridgment by H C Sargent and G L Kittredge, 1904) English and Scottish ballads fall roughly into four classes—the historical, such as Otterburn and The Bonny Earl o'Moray, the Robin Hood cycle, the romantic, such as Barbara Allan and The Douglas Tragedy; and the supernatural, such as The Wife of Usher's Well This takes no account of the nautical ballad, of which there are fine examples in English Similar subject matters can be found in ballads of other lands, but when such similarity is found in American ballads, it indicates descent from the English Word-of-mouth transmission has sometimes changed the stories Subjects indigenous to American ballads include cowboys, folk heroes such as Casey Jones, outlaws such as Jesse James, the mountain folk of Kentucky and Tennessee, and the Southern Negro The word ballad has long been used popularly for any narrative poem, from the 17th-century political broadsides to ballads on current happenings in newspapers and magazines today The word is also used for the work of serious poets in ballad meter, such as Coleridge's Rime of the Ancient Mariner and Oscar Wilde's Ballad of Reading Gaol In music the term ballad has an additional usage, referring to a simple, often sentimental type of song, not usually a folk song See studies of the ballad by F B Gummere (1894, 1907), Louise Pound (1922), and G H Gerould (1932), W J Entwistle, European Balladry (1940) For excellent collections of American ballads, see J A Lomax and Alan Lomax Our Singing Country (1941) and American Ballads and Folk Songs (reissued 1946), Carl Sandburg, ed , The American Songbag (1927), Dorothy Scarborough, A Song Catcher in the Southern Mountains (1937)

ballad opera, in English a play of comic satiric, or pastoral intent interspersed with songs, most of them to popular airs First and best was The Beggar's Opera (1728) by John GAY, and the vogue for these operas lasted until c 1750 See E M Gagey, Ballad Opera (1937)

Ballantyne, James (băl'tīn), 1772–1833, Scottish editor and publisher Ballantyne and his brother John set up a publishing business in Edinburgh with the aid of Sir Walter SCOTT The firm published Scott's works, beginning in 1802 with Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border

Ballantyne, Robert Michael, 1825–94, Scottish author, nephew of James Ballantyne Between the ages of 16 and 22 he was with the Hudson's Bay Company in Canada Returning to Scotland, he wrote Hudson's Bay, or, Every-Day Life in the Wilds of North America (1848) Later he wrote over 80 books for boys, including Snowflakes and Sunbeams, or, The Young Fur Traders (1855), The Dog Crusoe (1860), and The Gorilla Hunters (1861) See his Personal Reminiscences of Book-Making (1893)

Ballarat (băl'ŭrăt'), municipality (pop 40,181), Victoria, Australia, WNW of Melbourne It is an industrial center with woolen mills and brass foundries There are Anglican and Roman Catholic cathedrals Founded in 1851 with the gold rush, it was once an important mining center

ball bearings see BEARINGS

Balleny Islands (bă'lunē), extreme S Pacific, off Victoria Land, in the Australian Antarctic Territory There are five volcanic islands and some small islets They were discovered in 1839 by Capt John Balleny, a sealer ballet (bă'lā, bălā', bă'lĭ), solo or ensemble dancing of a drama set to music It first appeared as a part of opera, in which it is still used, sometimes as part of the drama, sometimes as mere divertisement The ballet was known in Italy in the 15th cent , but the first ballet to coordinate action, music, and decoration was the Ballet comique de la Reine, at Paris (1581) The first treatise on ballet dancing was the Orchesography of Thoinot Arbeau (Jean Tabouret), published at Langres (1588) Louis XIV founded a dancing academy (1661) in a room in the Louvre, and his court ballet master, Père Manestrier, described some 50 ballets in his Ballets anciens et modernes (1681) The paradigms of the five absolute ballet positions were set down by Rameau in The Dancing Master (1725), and at the debut of Mme Camargo (1726) the short, billowy skirt of the dancer was first introduced. The most important treatise of the 18th cent was Lettres sur la danse et les ballets (1759) by Jean Georges Noverre The early part of the 19th cent saw the ballet flourish in Italy Salvatore Vigano, at Milan, carried out Noverre's reforms in his "choreodrame" (1812), and Carlo Blasis wrote An Elementary Treatise upon .. the Art of Dancing (1820), the basic work of modern ballet The romantic ballet now reigned Maria TAGLIONI won fame in La Sylphide (1832), Fanny ELSSLER followed in Le Diable boiteux, and Carlotta GRISI in Giselle, composed for her by Théophile Gautier The Danish dancer, Adeline Genêt was one of the last great performers of romantic ballet Ballet in the middle of the 19th cent reached a zenith in Russia, where ballet schools were sponsored by the tsars at St Petersburg and Moscow The fruition of the Russian tradition began in the reforms of Michel FOKINE and came to a conclusion in the work of Sergei DIAGHILEV, whose company included Pavlova, Mordkin, Nijinsky, Karsavina, and Massine as dancers, Stravinsky, Ravel, Falla, and Milhaud as composers, and Bakst, Picasso, and Derain as stage designers Later developments in the ballet include the Triadic Ballet at the Bauhaus theater, Germany (1923), the ballet of Kurt Jooss (1933), the founding of the School of American Ballet in New York city (1934), and the performances of the companies of Anthony Tudor and Robert Helpmann in England during and after the Second World War See also DANCE See works of C W Beaumont, especially his History of Ballet in Russia, 1613–1881 (1930) and Complete Book of Ballets (1938), Tamara Karsavina, Theatre Street (1930), Lincoln Kirstein, Dance (1935), A L Haskell, Ballet Panorama (1938), Grace Robert, The Borzoi Book of Ballets (1946), George Amberg, Art in Modern Ballet (1946), Anatole Chujov, The Dance Encyclopedia (1949)

Ballinger, Richard Achilles (băl'ĭnjur), 1858–1922, U S Secretary of the Interior (1909–11), b Boonesboro (now in Boone), Iowa, grad Williams, 1884 A reform mayor of Seattle (1904–6) and the commissioner of the General Land Office (1907–9), he was made Secretary of the Interior by President Taft His administration was charged with trouble L R Glavis of the Land Office, who protested that Ballinger had halted investigation into coal-land claims in Alaska, was dismissed from service Articles by Glavis in Collier's Weekly then roused the conservationists notably Gifford Pinchot and the public A congressional investigation into Ballinger's handling of national resources exonerated him, but he resigned in March 1911 The incident helped to turn the election of 1912 against Taft

Ballinger, city (pop 4 472), co seat of Runnels co , W central Texas, on the Colorado at the mouth of Elm Creek and SSW of Abilene, laid out 1886 with the coming of the railroad, inc 1892 Processing plants handle milk, cheese, oats and wheat, cotton, wool, and truck A reservoir on Elm Creek is part of the Colorado river project

Balliol, John de see BALIOL, JOHN DE

Balliol College see OXFORD UNIVERSITY

ballistics (bŭl'stĭks), the science concerned with the propulsion and motion of projectiles One branch of the science, interior ballistics, deals with the processes and the motion of the projectile within the gun Its problems include the ignition and burning of the propellent powder, the pressure produced by the expanding gases, the movement of the projectile through the bore, and the designing of the barrel to resist the stresses and strains Exterior ballistics treats of the motion of a projectile after it has left the muzzle of the gun, i e , while it is in flight This branch has been extended to include the study of the paths of aerial bombs The two main forces affecting all projectiles traveling through the air are the resistance offered by the air and the force of gravity Under the influence of these forces a projectile follows a curved path known as the trajectory Trajectories vary with the weight and shape of the projectiles, with their initial velocities, and with the direction (up or down) from which they are released

Ballivián, José (hōsā' bayēvyan'), 1805–52, president of Bolivia (1841–47) An able military commander who had served in the war against Spain, Ballivián was proclaimed president after the breakup of the Peru-Bolivia confederation under SANTA CRUZ At Ingavi (1841) he defeated President Gomarra of Peru, who had attempted to seize La Paz Ballivián thus restored the status quo and ended any further possibility of federation Promulgating (1841) a new constitution, he energetically but arbitrarily instituted public reforms Intense opposition forced him to resign balloon, aircraft without a propelling system whose lift results from the inflation of one or more containers with a gas lighter than air or with heated air When in flight, altitude is gained by discarding ballast (e g , bags of sand) and is lost by releasing some of the light gas from its container As early as the 13th cent , schemes were suggested whereby ascent could be accomplished by exhausting the air from vessels In 1766 Henry Cavendish showed that hydrogen was seven times lighter than air The invention of the balloon is attributed to J M and J É MONTGOLFIER of France, who first experimented with inverted paper bags filled with heated air So successful were their experiments that in 1783, before a large gathering, they caused a linen bag about 100 ft. in diameter to rise into the air, burning straw being used to heat the air within it The bag drifted more than a mile before it descended The next year J A C Charles, also of France, successfully raised a balloon, built by the Robert brothers, which was filled with hydrogen gas The first balloon ascent by man was made in 1783 by Pilâtre de Rozier in a hot-air-filled captive balloon (i e , one made fast to prevent free flight) Later Pilâtre de Rozier, accompanied by the marquis d'Arlandes, ascended in a free hot-air balloon which they kept in the air by burning chopped straw in a brazier suspended under the bag Also in 1783 the Robert brothers with J A C Charles ascended and traveled 27 mi in a balloon raised by hydrogen The first ascent in England was made by James Tytler in 1784 In 1793 the French balloonist J P Blanchard made at Philadelphia an ascent which was witnessed by President Washington The first sea voyage by balloon was made across the English channel in 1785 by Dr John Jeffries and Blanchard Shortly after the beginning of the 19th cent , coal gas was used for inflation, and balloons were constructed in many countries To evade the enemy during the siege of Paris in 1870, balloons were used to carry messages to outside authorities In 1879 the Swedish engineer S A ANDREE tried to reach the North Pole by balloon In the First World War kite balloons were used along the whole Western Front to observe the movements of the enemy and to direct gunfire Kite balloons were of the captive type and were fitted with special fins at one end which were effective in keeping them headed into the wind In the Second World War captive kite balloons, raised and lowered on cables by winches, helped protect military installations and other possible targets from enemy dive bombers and fighter planes The helplessness of the balloon in controlling direction led to the development of the dirigible balloon (see AIRSHIP) Ballooning as a sport is, however, still practiced, the international race for the James Gordon Bennett Cup takes place in the country which holds the trophy Alan R Hawley became, in 1910, the holder of the long-distance record for free balloons by his flight of 1,172 mi in this race In 1931 Auguste Piccard ascended in a balloon with a sealed spherical aluminum gondola to a height of nearly 52,000 ft and in 1932 to a height of over 53,000 ft. Jean Piccard, in 1934, reached an altitude of nearly 58,000 ft An altitude record was established by the ascent in 1935 of the Explorer II, commanded by A W Stevens and O A Anderson, to a height of 72,395 ft Scientific information obtained through the use of instruments carried on such flights includes knowledge of temperature variations and air currents at different altitudes, cosmic rays, and the composition of the stratospheric atmosphere Unmanned balloons known as radiosondes are used in meteorological studies These are equipped with radio sets, which at regular intervals during the ascent send to the ground station the readings recorded by the instruments, and with parachutes, which convey the instruments to the earth after the balloon bursts See C. J Hylander, Cruisers of the Air (1931)

ballot, means of voting for candidates for office The choice may be indicated by the ballot forms themselves—e g , colored balls, printed tickets, or mechanical devices—or by the depositories into which the ballots are put The ballot was used in Athens in the 5th cent B C by the popular courts and, on the question of ostracism, by the people as a whole, in India before 300 B C , and in Rome by the popular assemblies and occasionally by the senate The ballot, like other institutions of popular government, was largely abandoned during the Middle Ages Its use reappeared in the Italian communes and in elections to the papacy during the 13th cent In the 16th and the 17th cent the ballot appeared in English borough and university elections The General Court of Massachusetts elected governors by ballot after 1634, corn and beans were occasionally used as ballots, following Indian custom Early American ballots were known as "papers" the name ballot does not occur in America before 1676 The British colonies in America were the first to elect representatives by secret ballot, and its use was made obligatory in all but one of the state constitutions adopted in the United States between 1776 and 1780. In the 19th cent the use of the ballot became widespread in local and national elections in Europe Groups wishing to exert undue influence, intimidation, or force upon the voter have opposed the ballot The effort to reform election abuses has led to the widespread use of the Australian ballot, adopted in Victoria in 1857, in Great Britain in 1872, and in the United States after 1888. In the United States it gradually replaced earlier methods of voting, including the lengthy "tickets" distributed by political parties In the Australian system all candidates' names are placed on a single ballot printed and placed in the polling places at public expense, and the printing, distribution, and marking of the ballot are protected by law. The Australian ballot is now used in many European countries and in 45 states of the United States. Separate ballots are frequently distributed for referendums and constitutional propositions In the United States, the office-group ballot, whereby candidates' names are grouped together with the names of the respective offices to be filled, is less used than the party-column ballot The VOTING MACHINE is increasingly used to insure electoral honesty The institution of official ballots has helped bring political parties under the scope of the law. In Great Britain and Canada, party designations are left off the ballot, elective offices are few, and local and national elections are separated, hence the ballot is a short one, easier to use intelligently Some critics denounce the excessive length of the ballot in the United States and the combination on one ballot of too many items and claim that the voter is thus too much pressed for time in his decisions See S D Albright, The American Ballot (1942)

Ballou, Adin (bălo͞o'), 1803–90, American Universalist clergyman, b Cumberland, R I He was prominent in the movement which resulted in the Massachusetts Association of Universal Restorationists, in existence from 1831 to 1841 In 1841 he organized near Milford, Mass , the Hopedale Community, one of the religious utopian communities of the period He was its president and edited its periodical, the Practical Christian, until he resigned after 1852 and wrote his Practical Christian Socialism (1854) The Hopedale Community, whose dissolution as a communal enterprise began c 1857, merged (1868) with the Unitarian Hopedale Parish, of which Ballou was pastor until 1880 His writings include Primitive Christianity and Its Corruptions (1870) and History of the Hopedale Community (1897)

Ballou, Hosea, 1771–1852, American clergyman, foremost among expositors of Universalism in America, b Cheshire co , N H From 1818 until his death he was pastor of the Second Universalist Society in Boston One of the founders (1819) of the Universalist Magazine, he was its editor until 1828, from 1831 he edited the Universalist Expositor His works include Notes on the Parables (1804), A Treatise on the Atonement (1805), and a number of hymns See J C Adams, Hosea Ballou and the Gospel Renaissance of the Nineteenth Century (1902)

Ballou, Hosea, 2d, 1796–1861, Universalist clergyman, b Guilford, Windham co , Vt , grandnephew of Hosea Ballou (1771–1852) He was one of the founders and the first president (1853–61) of Tufts College His Ancient History of Universalism (1829) was the earliest American monograph dealing with the history of the doctrine

Balls Bluff, hill, near Leesburg, Va , on the south bank of the Potomac river Here in the Civil War on Oct 21, 1861, Union troops who had crossed the river were severely repulsed

Ballston Spa (bôl'stun spā), village (pop 4,443), co seat of Saratoga co , E N Y , SW of Saratoga Springs, in a farm area, settled 1771, inc 1807 Knitting mills and tanneries are here It was formerly a popular resort, with mineral springs

Ballymena (bălēmē'nu), urban district (pop 12,928), Co Antrim, Northern Ireland, on the Braid river and NW of Belfast Linen and woolen goods are produced, and iron is mined here According to tradition, St Patrick worked as a herdsman at Slemish, 8 mi from Ballymena

balm see LEMON BALM, for the bee balm, see OSWEGO TEA

Balmaceda, José (hōsā' bälmäsā'dha), 1840–91, president of Chile (1886–91) A leader of a liberal anticlerical group, he served as foreign minister under Domingo Santa María As president, Balmaceda instituted a wide reform program, particularly fostering internal improvements, but his rule was unparliamentary, he interpreted the constitution as an instrument of strong presidential government A resultant quarrel with congress came to a head when Balmaceda tried to control the election of his successor A revolution began in Jan , 1891, and was soon led by Jorge MONTT After vigorous fighting the revolutionists triumphed Balmaceda took refuge in the Argentine legation Rather than surrender for a trial, he committed suicide

Balmerino, Arthur Elphinstone, 6th Baron: see ELPHINSTONE, ARTHUR

balm of Gilead (gĭl'ĕăd, -ăd), name for several unrelated plants The historic Old World balm of Gilead is a small evergreen tree (Commiphora meccanensis) native to Africa and Asia and the source of the commercial balm of Gilead, it is referred to in Jer 8 22. The Ishmaelites from Gilead were bearing balm when Joseph's brothers sold him to them Balm of Gilead is still in high repute in some countries for healing The American balm of Gilead is a species of POPLAR (Populus candicans) of uncertain origin which has large balsamic and fragrant buds The tree is seldom seen in the wild but was formerly a favorite dooryard tree of the northern states. The buds were used in domestic medicine Thus poplar is closely related to, sometimes considered a variety of, the balsam poplar (P tacamahaca), which has also been called balm of Gilead and tacamahac. The name balm of Gilead has also been used for the balsam fir and for a herbaceous aromatic, shrubby plant (Dracocephalum canariense or Cedronella canariensis) native to the Canary Islands and cultivated in parts of the United States

Balmont, Konstantin Dmitryevich (kŏnstăntyēn' dĭmē'trēvĭch bäl'mônt), 1867–1943, Russian poet and translator After hailing the Bolshevist Revolution, he repudiated it and lived chiefly in France Although his early verse was revolutionary in content, after 1894 he belonged to the symbolist school He translated much poetry from other languages There are good translations of his verse by Babette Deutsch in Russian Poetry (1927), by Charles Coxwell in Russian Poems (1929), in the books of Russian verse edited by C M Bowra (1943, 1948), and in A Treasury of Russian Verse (1949), edited by Avrahm Yarmolinsky and translated in the main by Babette Deutsch

Balmoral Castle (bălmŏr'ul), royal residence in Braemar, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on the right bank of the Dee and W of Ballater Constructed of white granite, with extensive grounds, it was built by Queen Victoria in 1854 On the surrounding hills are memorial cairns to Prince Albert and others

Balmorhea (bălmurā'), unincorporated town (pop c 800), W Texas, SSW of Pecos Farms in the region are irrigated from near-by Lake Balmorhea, a reservoir in the Pecos river system fed by San Solomon Springs A state park around the springs also lies on an approach to the Davis Mts , and Balmorhea is visited by tourists

Balnaves, Henry (bălnāv'ĭs), d 1579, Scottish reformer and statesman, one of the most ardent Protestants in the struggles over religion under Mary of Guise and Mary Queen of Scots He was imprisoned for suspected complicity in the assassination of Cardinal Beaton His Confession of Faith, posthumously published (1584), was written while he was in exile

balsa (bôl'su, bal'sù) or corkwood, deciduous tree of the Bombax family, native to tropical America It has leaves much like those of the catalpa and a very light velvety wood, in appearance like that of the white pine The wood is the lightest known, about one half as heavy as cork, it is very porous, so soft it can be dented with the fingernail, and is often waterproofed to make it more durable It is used in airplane construction and in making model airplanes, in life preservers and floats, and for insulating purposes The balsa is one of the most rapidly growing trees—seedlings appear like weeds around fruited trees balsam (bôl'sum), resin of various trees Among these resins are the commercial balsam of Peru and tolu balsam, also South American, which contain benzoic acid or cinnamic acid, the Mecca balsam or BAIM OF GILEAD, the copaiba balsam, and the CANADA BALSAM For the balsam plant, see TOUCH-ME-NOT balsam fir or balsam, name for a valuable fir, Abies balsamea, growing chiefly in Canada and the NE United States Blisterlike swellings on the smooth bark contain the economically important CANADA BALSAM Balsam needles, usually appearing to be arranged in a flat plane on the branchlets, are gathered for their fragrance The trees are very popular for Christmas trees, but the wood is of little value Also called balsam fir are the she-balsam (A fraseri) of the mountains of Virginia, Tennessee, and North Carolina, and the Alpine fir (A lasiocarpa) of W North America

Balsamo, Giuseppe see CAGLIOSTRO, ALESSANDRO

balsam poplar: see BALM OF GILEAD

Balsas, Río de las (rē'ō dā läs bäl'säs), river rising in the state of Puebla, E central MEXICO, and flowing in a great curve from south to northwest through Puebla and Guerrero to Michoacán Then it turns southwest, forms most of the boundary between Guerrero and Michoacán and empties into the Pacific It is one of the longest rivers of MEXICO Near its source it is called the Atoyac, and in Guerrero, where the valley is important in the production of sesame seed, it is called the Mezcala

Balsham, Hugo de. see HUGO DE BALSHAM.

Balta, José (hōsā' bäl' ta), 1816–72, president of Peru (1868–72) In 1865 he helped Mariano I PRADO to seize the presidency and served in his government, but in 1867 Balta led in overthrowing the dictatorship As president, he reestablished constitutional rule and undertook vast schemes for internal improvement, including railroad construction and harbor construction He granted a monopoly of guano export to a French company and obtained large loans in Europe, yet the lavish expenditures of his administration plunged Peru deep in debt Balta was deposed and shot He was succeeded by Manuel Pardo

Balthazar (bălthā'zŭr) see WISE MEN OF THE EAST

Baltic provinces and Baltic states, the countries bordering on the extreme eastern coast of the Baltic Sea. See COURLAND, INGERMANLAND, LIVONIA, ESTONIA, LATVIA, LITHUANIA Finland is usually classed with the Scandinavian rather than with the Baltic states

Baltic Sea, eastern arm of the Atlantic Ocean, indenting N Europe. It covers c.160,000 sq mi. The ORESUND, the Great BELT, and the Little Belt connect it with the Kattegat and Skagerrak, which lead into the North Sea; the KIEL CANAL is a more direct connection with the North Sea The countries surrounding the Baltic are, counterclockwise and beginning in the west, Denmark, Germany (Holstein, Mecklenburg, Pomerania), Poland, East Prussia (divided in 1945 between Poland and Russia), Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Russia, Finland, and Sweden. The northernmost portion, between Finland and Sweden, is the Gulf of Bothnia, the indentation between Finland and Estonia, receiving the Neva river, is the Gulf of Finland There are numerous other bays, notably the Gulf of Riga Of the many islands the most important are Zealand, Fyn, Lolland, Falster, and Bornholm (Denmark); Rügen (Pomerania), Saaremaa (Estonia), the Aland Islands (Finland), and Gotland (Sweden) Most of the Baltic is shallow, and parts freeze over in winter. Its tides are less pronounced than those of the North Sea, its salinity is reduced by the many rivers that feed it (Oder, Vistula, Niemen, Dvina, Torne, Ume, Angerman, and Dal) The Baltic coast was frequented from ancient times, especially because of its amber In the late Middle Ages its commerce was dominated by the HANSEATIC LEAGUE Its chief modern importance is as a fishing ground Copenhagen, Stettin, Gdynia, Danzig, Riga, Tallinn, Leningrad, Helsinki, and Stockholm are the chief modern ports The Baltic is connected with the White Sea by canal (completed 1933), from Leningrad, through Lake Onega, to Belomorsk, and with the Volga through the MARIINSK SYSTEM

Baltimore, Cecilius Calvert, 2d Baron: see CALVERT, CECILIUS.

Baltimore, Charles Calvert, 3d Baron · see CALVERT, CHARLES

Baltimore, George Calvert, 1st Baron · see CALVERT, GEORGE

Baltimore (bôl'tĭmôr, -mur), city (pop 859,100), N Md , largest city in the state, on the Patapsco river near Chesapeake Bay It is a port of entry, a commercial and industrial center, and an important seaport Among its leading industries are shipbuilding, meat packing, food processing, sugar, petroleum, and copper refining, and the manufacture of steel, tin cans, straw hats, airplanes, clothing, textiles, chemicals, electrical equipment, glass products, and fertilizer. The city is a cultural and educational center, it is the site of JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY, Loyola College (Jesuit, for men, 1852), GOUCHER COLLEGE (being moved to Towson), MORGAN STATE COLLEGE, Notre Dame of Maryland (Catholic, for women, 1848), St Mary's Seminary and Univ (Catholic, Sulpician), the Peabody Institute, the Maryland Institute of Art, the Walters Art Gallery, and the Baltimore Museum of Art The Enoch Pratt Free Library and the municipal symphony orchestra are well known Settlement of the area now occupied by the city took place early in the 17th cent , but the founding date is established as 1729, when the royal governor authorized the building of a town It was incorporated as a town in 1745 and as a city in 1797 Its excellent natural harbor soon made the town an important center for shipping tobacco and grain Shipbuilding, an early industry, flourished during the Revolution with the fitting out of many privateers and culminated with the building of the famous Baltimore clippers in the early 1800s The nation's wars have played a large role in the city's history When the British occupied Philadelphia (1776), Baltimore became the meeting place of Congress In the War of 1812 the gallant defense of Fort McHenry (restored 1933) inspired Francis Scott Key to write the STAR-SPANGLED BANNER Maryland remained in the Union during the Civil War, but Baltimore held violent pro-Southern sympathies, as witnessed by the mob's attack on the 6th Massachusetts Regiment in April, 1861. Baltimore played an important part in the First and Second World Wars as a shipbuilding and supply-shipping center. The city's hold on the trans-Allegheny trade was endangered by the completion of the Erie Canal (1825), making New York an ocean outlet for the West, but this was offset by the construction of the Baltimore & Ohio RR to Ellicott's Mills in 1830 After a disastrous fire (1904) a more beautiful and better-planned metropolis emerged Some of its well-known landmarks include the Washington Monument (designed by Robert Mills), the Roman Catholic cathedral (the first cathedral in the United States, designed by B H Latrobe), St Paul's Cemetery, Westminster Churchyard (where Edgar Allan Poe is buried), and the Pimlico race track Baltimore is known as the Monumental City and the Convention City Logan Field, an army air base, is near See A M L Stoussat, Old Baltimore (1931), Hamilton Owens, Baltimore on the Chesapeake (1941).

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, first railroad in the United States open for public traffic. After the end of the War of 1812 the city of Baltimore experienced a period of phenomenal growth, due largely to the NATIONAL ROAD, but faced a period of rapid decline after trans-Allegheny traffic had gravitated toward the newly opened Erie Canal in New York Construction of the CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO CANAL was not yet begun. In 1827, therefore, a group of Baltimore business leaders petitioned for and received the charter under which the Baltimore & Ohio RR still operates Construction was started in 1828, and the first division was opened in 1830 for traffic from Baltimore to Ellicott's Mills (now Ellicott City), Md., 14 mi away Horses were at first used for motive power, but the successful trial (1830) of the Tom Thumb, built by Peter COOPER, brought a change to steam-driven locomotives The B & O. reached Cumberland, Md , in 1842, Wheeling, Va (now W Va), in 1852, and St Louis, over connecting roads, in 1857 Great exertions were put forth to keep it open during the Civil War for transportation of troops and supplies in the face of Southern raids Connections to Chicago were made in 1874, to Philadelphia in 1886, and to New York city in 1887 Because of its centrally located route, the Baltimore & Ohio RR retained a prominent place among the country's railroad systems See Edward Hungerford, The Story of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, 1827-1927 (1928), F P Summers, The Baltimore and Ohio in the Civil War (1939)

Baltimore oriole. see ORIOLE

Balts, peoples of the east coast of the Baltic Sea They include the Latvians, the Lithuanians, and the now extinct Old Prussians (see LANGUAGE) Conquered and forcibly converted to Christianity by the TEUTONIC KNIGHTS and the LIVONIAN KNIGHTS (13th cent), the Baltic peoples entered a long period of subjection The Teutonic Order lost (15th cent) all but East Prussia, but the descendants of the German knights and settlers retained their hold over the land and the commerce As the "Baltic barons," they held sway over the depressed Baltic populations until the 20th cent The huge empire of LITHUANIA, which arose with the decline of the Teutonic Order, was increasingly absorbed by the Polish crown, its nobility soon became thoroughly Polish in language and political outlook The Estonians, a Finnic, not a Baltic people, came under Swedish rule in 1561 and in 1721 passed under Russia, which by 1795 had acquired all the Baltic provinces The independence won by Lithuania, LATVIA, and ESTONIA in 1918 was lost again in 1940

Baluchi (bŭlōō'chē), Eastern Iranian language of the Indo-Iranian subfamily of Indo-European languages See LANGUAGE (table)

Baluchistan (bŭlōō'chĭstän', -stăn'), province (including the former Baluchistan states agency, 134,002 sq mi, pop 857,835), West Pakistan, on the Arabian Sea Quetta is the capital It is bounded on the west by Iran and on the north by Afghanistan Lying outside the monsoon zone and with few rivers usable for irrigation, Baluchistan is largely desert land with marable hills and mountains Pastoral nomads, who speak Iranian languages, constitute the bulk of the sparse population Some cotton is raised and processed On the coast there is trade in fish and salt

baluchitherium (bŭlōōchĭthēr'ēum), extinct primitive rhinoceros of the Miocene period, fossilized bones of which were found in central Asia It is believed to be the largest land mammal that ever lived, with an estimated shoulder height of nearly 18 ft and a weight of about 10 tons

Balue, Jean (zhän' bălü'), c 1421-1491, French statesman, cardinal of the Roman Church One of the most trusted advisers of LOUIS XI, he saved Paris for the king during the revolt of the League of the Public Weal (1465) Subsequently he conspired with Charles the Bold of Burgundy against Louis and arranged the meeting of the two rulers at Péronne (1468), where Charles made Louis a prisoner Louis had Balue arrested (1469) and kept him in an iron cage till 1480, when the pope intervened Balue went to Rome, but in 1484 returned temporarily to France as a papal legate

Balzac, Honoré de (bäl'zăk, bôl'-, Fr ônôrā' dŭ bälzäk'), 1799-1850, French novelist, b Tours Of a bourgeois family, he himself later added the "de" to his name Neglected in childhood, he was sent to a boarding school at Vendôme and later to the grammar school at Tours Although educated for the law, Balzac turned to authorship, half starving in Paris before he began writing to order sensational novels, pseudonymously published Throughout his life he worked with feverish activity, sleeping a few hours in the evening and writing from midnight until noon or afternoon of the next day He was ridden with debts, which were increased rather than relieved by his business ventures Balzac's first success, Les Chouans (1829, first published as Le dernier Chouan), was followed by La Peau de chagrin (1831) In the next 20 years he produced the vast collection of novels and short stories called "La Comédie humaine" This, his greatest work, is a reproduction of the French society of his time, picturing in precise detail individuals of every class and every profession The chief novels in "La Comédie humaine" are Louis Lambert (1832), Eugénie Grandet (1833), La Recherche de l'absolu (1834), Le Père Goriot (1835), Les Illusions perdues (1837), César Birotteau (1837), La Cousine Bette (1847), and Le Cousin Pons (1847) Balancing Balzac's faults—his lack of literary style, his moralizing, his tendency toward melodrama—are his originality, his great powers of observation, and his vivid imagination. His short stories include some of the best in the language, but his attempts at drama failed His liaisons, an attempt to live the romances of his works, were famous His marriage to Countess Eva Hanska occurred only a few months before his death See The Human Comedy (with introductions by George Saintsbury, 40 vols , 1895-98), Balzac's Letters to His Family, 1809-1850 (ed. by W S Hastings, 1934), biographies by Frederick Wedmore (1890), René Benjamin (Eng tr , 1927), and Stefan Zweig (Eng tr , 1946), bibliography and index comp by W H Royce (1929, 1930, 1946)

Balzac, Jean Louis Guez de (zhän' lwĕ' gä'), 1597?-1654, French writer His Lettres (1st ed , 1624) were of great influence in reforming French prose style The first English translation made its appearance 1634

Bamah (bä'mu) [Heb ,=high place], term elsewhere translated, but in Ezek 20 29 given in the original The word is translated earlier in the same verse There is a pun on the verb "to go" which had in Hebrew a sound much like the word Bamah

Bamako (bamakō') town (pop c 22,000), capital of French Sudan, on the upper Niger river It is connected by rail with Dakar Cotton, peanuts, hides, and skins are exported

Bamberg (bäm'bûrg, Ger bäm'bĕrk), city (pop 74,733), Upper Franconia, Bavaria, on the Regnitz river It has silk mills and metal industries Now an archiepiscopal see, it was (1007-1802) the capital of a powerful ecclesiastic state The bishops of Bamberg were raised to princely rank in the 15th cent. Among the several remarkable buildings of Bamberg are the splendid cathedral (early 13th cent), with the tombs of Emperor Henry II, his wife, St Kunigunde, and Pope Clement II, and the episcopal palaces (16th and 18th cent)

Bamberg (bäm'bûrg), town (pop 3,000), co seat of Bamberg co , S S C , S of Columbia, in a diversified farm area A boys' military school is here

Bamberger, Ludwig (lōōt'vĭkh bäm'bĕrgur), 1823-99, German economist, politician, and journalist An ardent liberal, he took part in the Revolution of 1848 and was forced to live in exile until 1866 He worked for the unification of Germany, and as a leader of the National Liberals he supported Bismarck until he was alienated by the chancellor's turn to protection and state socialism As a member of the Reichstag (1870-93), he was recognized as an authority on currency and was chiefly responsible for the adoption of the gold standard in Germany and for the founding of the Reichsbank

Bamboccio, Il · see LAAR, PIETER VAN

bamboo, any plant of the tribe Bambuseae, grasses chiefly of warm or tropical regions, where they are extremely important Various species of bamboo may be low, climbing, or, more commonly, tall and treelike (sometimes reaching 100 ft) The stalks are round (rarely square), jointed, and hollow or solid with evergreen or deciduous leaves Some kinds die after flowering and some do not flower until they are about 30 years old In many places bamboo is used as wood, for construction work, furniture, utensils, fiber, paper, fuel, and innumerable small articles Bamboo sprouts are eaten as a vegetable, and the grains of some species are also utilized for food The bamboo has long been used for decorative purposes, both in gardens and in art In the United States the native bamboo is a CANE The common bamboo is Bambusa arundinacea See Agnes Arber, The Gramineae a Study of Cereal, Bamboo, and Grass (1934)

Bamford, Samuel, 1788-1872, English weaver and social reformer His first prominence came in 1819 when, favoring repeal of the corn laws, he was jailed for his active though peaceful part in what became known as the Peterloo massacre Bamford loved poetry, and his own mediocre verses were popular among the Lancashire workers Besides his poetry, Bamford is noted for Passages in the Life of a Radical (1840-44)

Bamian (bamyan'), valley, Afghanistan, NW of Kabul Its rocky walls, lined with cave dwellings still in use, display two gigantic carved statues of Buddhist saints They were partly ruined by Aurangzeb c 1645 See Emil Trinkler, Through the Heart of Afghanistan (Eng tr , 1928)

Bamoth (bā'mŏth) [Heb ,=plural of BAMAH], unidentified place, E of the Dead Sea Num 21 19,20 It is probably the same as Bamoth-baal (-bā'l) [Heb ,=high places of Baal], Joshua 13 17 Bamoth-baal is translated at Num 22 41

Bampton, John, d 1751, English clergyman, founder of an Oxford lectureship on religious subjects The Bampton Lectures have frequently given rise to lively controversy

Bampton, Rose, 1909-, American operatic soprano, studied at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia She made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera House in 1932 in the leading contralto role in Ponchielli's La Gioconda and sang contralto and mezzo-soprano roles until 1936, when she first appeared as a soprano in a European tour. She made her soprano debut at the Metropolitan in 1937 Her repertoire includes the leading dramatic soprano roles in Italian opera, and c.1942 she added Elsa in Lohengrin and Sieglinde in Die Walküre.

Banaba: see OCEAN ISLAND.

banana, name for several species of the genus Musa and for the fruits these produce The common banana plant (Musa sapientum or Musa paradisiaca sapientum)—one of the largest herbaceous plants—is said to be native to tropical Asia, but is now cultivated throughout the tropics where it is one of the most important plants economically It is of palm-like aspect and has very large leaves, the overlapping bases of which form the so-called trunk As the plant reaches maturity the true stem rises from the ground and pushes through the center of the false trunk to emerge from the top of the plant, there becoming pendent and bearing the flowers At the tip of the pendent stem are borne the male flowers, above them the female, which develop into bananas Each plant produces only one such bunch, which is formed of clusters of upcurved bananas called "hands," each banana being a "finger " The plants are cut down to harvest the fruit, since they bear only once, but shoots from the rhizome serve to maintain the stand for a number of years New plantations of bananas are started by planting these shoots or pieces of the rhizome, since the seeds are sterile, such plants may reach maturity in about one year The fruit of this common banana (botanically a berry) is edible raw or cooked and is rich in carbohydrates, it is used also in making a banana powder and a dried fruit, both of them useful in cookery (Banana oil is a synthetic product, so named because of its odor) The first regular shipments of bananas to the United States began about the middle of the 19th cent There are several varieties of the common banana, one being red Other important species of the banana genus (many with inedible fruit) include the MANILA HEMP plant, valued for its fiber, and plantain, valued for its fruit—a staple article of food in the tropics where it is cooked and eaten as a vegetable

Banat (bä'nät') The term banat was originally used for several frontier provinces of Hungary and Croatia, which were governed by bans It now applies only to the former Banat of Temesvar (tĕ'mĕshvar), which until 1918 was an integral part of Hungary Its chief city was Temesvar (see TIMIŞOARA) With a population of c 1,500,000, the Banat is a fertile low-lying region bracketed by the Danube, Theiss, and Mures rivers and the Transylvanian Alps After the First World War, the Treaty of Trianon (1919) divided the Banat between Yugoslavia and Rumania

Banbury, municipal borough (1931 pop 13,953, 1943 estimated pop 19 000), Oxfordshire England, in a productive agricultural district The town still produces the cakes for which it has been famous since the 17th cent The Banbury Cross of the nursery rhyme was destroyed by the Puritans in 1602, but a new one was built later Banbury is a farm market with light-metal industries

Bancroft, Edward, 1744-1821, American Revolutionary spy, b Westfield, Mass While living in London, he became the friend of Benjamin Franklin and in the Revolution began to operate as an American secret agent He reported to the American commissioners in France, but, unknown to them, he played the double agent and also reported their movements to the British Bancroft in 1778 gave advance information of the Franco-American alliance to the British Evidence of his duplicity was first revealed by Paul Leicester Ford in 1891 See Carl Van Doren, Secret History of the American Revolution (1941)

Bancroft, George, 1800-1891, American historian and statesman, b Worcester, Mass Educated at Harvard (B A , 1817) and Gottingen (Ph D , 1820), he taught briefly at Harvard and then for eight years at the Round Hill School at Northampton, Mass , of which he was a founder and coproprietor He then turned definitely to writing His article (Jan , 1831) in the North American Review attacking the Bank of the United States delighted Jacksonian Democrats, and in 1834 Bancroft became an avowed apostate from New England Federalism, "a traitor to his class " In that year also appeared the first volume of his monumental work, A History of the United States (10 vols , 1834-74). As a reward for his speeches and writings in the Democratic cause he was appointed (1837) collector of the port of Boston by President Martin Van Buren, and as the dispenser of the patronage of that office Bancroft was the Democratic boss in Massachusetts He was defeated for the governorship in 1844, but another Democratic President, James K Polk, at the earnest prompting of Van Buren, made him Secretary of the Navy In that post (March, 1845–Sept , 1846) he established the U S Naval Academy at Annapolis and issued the standing orders under which Capt John D Sloat, commanding the Pacific squadron, seized California ports on the outbreak of the Mexican War That conflict formally began in May, 1845, when Bancroft, then serving also as acting Secretary of War, gave the order which sent Gen Zachary Taylor into Mexico. While minister to Great Britain (1846–49), he diligently collected materials for his History in British and French archives Bancroft, an antislavery Democrat, came to support Abraham Lincoln in the Civil War and on Feb 12, 1866, delivered the official memorial address on Lincoln before Congress (he had also been the official eulogist of Andrew Jackson in 1845) He wrote President Andrew Johnson's first message to Congress, and in 1867 Johnson appointed him minister to Prussia He held the post until 1874, the year he finished the 10th volume of the History In 1876 he brought out a revised edition of the whole in six volumes, bringing events up to 1782 His History of the Formation of the Constitution of the United States (1882) was incorporated with "the author's last revision" of his History (6 vols , 1883–85), which brought it down to 1789 Although his famous History is little read today, it was an important landmark in American historiography, hitherto burdened with Federalist myths Bancroft always had his eye to the main chance and was doubtless as devious as the next politician, but the History, violently anti-British and intensely patriotic, leaves no doubt that he was passionately sincere in his devotion to democracy Acknowledged partisan that he was, Bancroft, the first American trained in the so-called scientific school of German historical scholarship, nevertheless insisted that his was an objective interpretation, the high praise his work won from the great Leopold von Ranke as the best history ever written from the democratic point of view annoyed as well as gratified him His literary style was sonorous and rather ponderous, though some passages still have a welcome emotional appeal See biographies by M A De Wolfe Howe (1908) and R B Nye (1944), J S Bassett, The Middle Group of American Historians (1917), O W Long, Literary Pioneers Early American Explorers of European Culture (1935), A M Schlesinger, Jr , The Age of Jackson (1945)

Bancroft, Hubert Howe, 1832–1918, American publisher and historian, b Granville, Ohio He so impressed his bookseller brother-in-law of Buffalo, N Y , with his salesmanship that he was sent to San Francisco in 1852 with $5,000 worth of books Soon he had his own firm, the largest book and stationery business west of Chicago In publishing a handbook on California, Bancroft began gathering what reference works existed, and this developed into a passion for collecting material on all W America, from Alaska to Patagonia When completed, his collection ran to some 60,000 volumes, including rare manuscripts, transcripts by copyists he sent to various archives, and personal narratives of early pioneers as recorded by reporters he had also hired The collection, now the Bancroft Library of the Univ of California, is the greatest existing single source for Western history Having acquired it, Bancroft, always the businessman as well as an amateur of history, decided to put it to practical use After toying with the idea of compiling an encyclopedia, he settled on the publication of a prodigious history (39 vols , 1874-90), reissued (1882-90) as The Works of Hubert Howe Bancroft Called "the greatest feat of historiography since Thucydides," it was a cooperative effort under his general editorial supervision About a dozen people, out of some 600 tried out in his "history factory," wrote most of the Works Bancroft personally wrote very little The Works cover the history and to some extent the anthropology of Central America, Mexico, and the Far West of the United States and Canada The first five volumes concern the "native races," the next 28 the "Pacific states," and the last six are "essays" Literary Industries, the 39th volume, contains autobiographical material and an account of Bancroft's historical method Because his assistants were not given credit lines and because a subsequent "who's who of the West" which he published included names for a price (sometimes exorbitant), Bancroft and his Works were at first severely attacked However, his enormous contribution soon received its just due See biography by J W Caughey (1946)

Bancroft, Marie Effie Wilton, Lady, 1839–1921, English actress and manager Miss Wilton made her debut (1856) at the Lyceum Theatre, London, and in 1865 became joint manager of the Prince of Wales's Theatre, London, here Squire Bancroft, 1841 1926, whose real name was Squire Bancroft White Butterfield was her leading man In 1867 they married and were a great success in T W Robertson's Caste From 1880 to 1885 they managed the Haymarket Theatre, London, where they starred in Shakspere's comedies, Sheridan's School for Scandal, Lytton's Money, and Diplomacy by Clement Scott and B C Stephenson They appeared together until 1886, when Mrs Bancroft retired Squire Bancroft was knighted in 1895 See his Empty Chairs (1925) and their joint memoirs, Mr and Mrs Bancroft, on and off the Stage (1888) and Recollections of Sixty Years (1909)

Bancroft, village (pop 1,094), S Ont , on the York river and NNW of Belleville

band, in music, a group of musicians playing principally upon wind instruments, usually out of doors Until late in the 17th cent the term was loosely used for an ensemble playing for the court or the theater The band as known today originated as the military band, to stir the emotions of troops and to signal their attacks Portability and loudness, then, had to be primary considerations in band instrumentation, and the march has always been characteristic of band music A German, Wilhelm Wieprecht (1802–72), was the first to use trumpets and horns with valves in the band, when (c 1830) he reformed the instrumentation of Prussian cavalry and infantry bands A little later Adolphe Sax introduced his saxhorns into French military bands in great numbers, largely replacing the oboes, bassoons, and horns for a time. In the 1860s the sarrusophone became a part of the band, and by this time the wind band had become in most respects the ensemble known today The U S Marine Band, founded in 1798, was the first important band in this country and is still outstanding The concert band is of fairly recent development The first in the United States was that of P S GILMORE, founded in 1859 His successor as the leading American bandmaster was John Philip Sousa In 1911 Edwin Franko Goldman (1878–) organized the Goldman Band, which gives outdoor concerts in New York every summer The instrumentation of bands is often governed by functionality, arbitrary provisions by military authorities, and other nonmusical considerations Consequently, each band must make its own arrangements, and band concerts consist largely of music written for other media Modern bands usually include the PICCOLO, FLUTE, CORNET, TRUMPET, FRENCH HORN, TUBA, TROMBONE, OBOE, CLARINET, ENGLISH HORN, BASSOON, SAXOPHONE, Flügelhorn, euphonium and various PERCUSSION INSTRUMENTS Concert bands also use the cello, bass viol, and harp The instrumentation of dance bands and jazz bands is tremendously varied The term band is also used for an ensemble of any one type of instrument, as brass band, wind band, or marimba band See R F Goldman, The Band's Music (1938) and The Concert Band (1946), A A Clappe, The Wind Band and Its Instruments (1911)

bandage FIRST AID often requires the use of a bandage to protect a wound, to hold dressings and poultices in place, to control bleeding, to serve as a sling for supporting a part of the body, and to limit motion Bandages are made of thin gauze and of heavier material, such as muslin, are from about 1 in to 5 in wide, and are rolled for convenience in handling Various bandages named for the way in which they are wound, e g , circular, spiral, spiral reverse, figure eight, and spica, are used on different parts of the body It is important to place the part in the desired position before the bandage is applied, to prevent interference with circulation, and to tie the ends of the bandage in such a way that it does not cause pressure Elastic bandages are used to support various veins

Banda Islands (bän'du), group of 10 volcanic islands (72 sq mi , pop 13,036), East Indonesia, in the Banda Sea S of Ceram, in the Moluccas Bandalontar is the largest Nutmeg and mace are the chief products Visited by the Dutch in 1599, the group came under the control of the Dutch East India Company in 1619

Banda Oriental (bän'dä ôryäntäl') [Span ,=eastern shore, i e , of the Rio de la Plata], region, S Uruguay It is an alluvial plain where nearly all of Uruguay's agricultural products (wheat, flax, linseed, oats, and barley) are raised and most of the population is concentrated Banda Oriental was the term applied to Uruguay in the Spanish colonial period

Bandar, India see MASULIPATAM

Bandar Abbas (bän'dur äbäs'), town (pop c 14,000), SE Iran, a port on the Strait of Hormuz at the end of the Persian Gulf Practically all imports from India come through Bandar Abbas Chief exports are cotton, rugs, nuts, and gums There was a small settlement here, Gombroon or Gomberun, before Shah Abbas I began (1622) the development of a major port

Bandar Shah (shä'), town, N Iran, a small port on the Caspian Sea It was long a fishing village and now derives its importance from the fact that the Trans-Iranian RR ends here Its name also occurs as Shahi

Bandar Shahpur (shäpōōr'), city (pop c 40,000), SW Iran, between Mohammerah and Bushire It is of increasing importance as the Persian Gulf terminus of the Trans-Iranian RR

Banda Sea (bän'du, bän'dä), bounded by islands of the Malay Archipelago, with the Celebes on the northeast, Ceram on the north, and Timor on the south

Bandel, Ernst von (ĕrnst' fŏn bän'dul), 1800–1876, German sculptor He studied architecture, painting, engraving, and modeling, and spent two years in Italy, giving his whole time to sculpture He was employed in the court of Louis I of Bavaria, and in 1834 he went to Hanover, where he devoted his best years to the monument to Arminius, erected near Detmold Other works include Mars Asleep, Charity, Christ, and busts of Maximilian of Bavaria and Peter von Hess

Bandelier, Adolph Francis Alphonse (băndālēr'), 1840–1914, American archaeologist, b Berne, Switzerland He went to Illinois with his parents in 1848, but returned to the Univ of Berne for his education His first studies, published through the Peabody Museum (1877–79), were scholarly papers on ancient Mexican civilizations. From 1880 to 1889 he carried on field researches in New Mexico under the auspices of the Archaeological Institute of America, in the Papers of which the scientific results are to be found. The Delight Makers (1890) and The Gilded Man (1893) are more popular books based upon the work of this period In 1892 he began a decade of archaeological exploration and study in Peru and Bolivia After 1903 he became a lecturer in the American Museum of Natural History. Upon his work critical scholars of American archaeology have since largely built

Bandelier National Monument: see NATIONAL PARKS AND MONUMENTS (table)

Bandello, Matteo (mät-tā'ō bändĕl'lō), c 1480–1562, Italian novelist, a Dominican priest He is famous for his novelle, short tales in imitation of those of Boccaccio They are often coarse but have considerable vitality and occasional tragic force His version of an earlier author's Romeo and Juliet is probably the source of Shakspere's play An edition of his novelle was translated into English by Sir Geoffrey Fenton in 1567 and reprinted in 1924

Bandera (băndâ'ru), unincorporated town (pop c 1,300), co seat of Bandera co, SW Texas, on the Medina and NW of San Antonio Founded by Mormons in 1854 and later turned into a Polish settlement, this ranching and farm center in the cool hill country keeps some Old West flavor, has a well-known museum stocked with pioneer relics, and attracts vacationers

Bandinelli, Bartolomeo (bärtōlōmā'ō bändēnĕl'lē), or Baccio (bät'chō), 1493?–1560, Florentine sculptor and painter, son of a goldsmith He strove to emulate Michelangelo Among his best-known sculptures are a statue of St Peter and an altar screen in the cathedral at Florence and Hercules and Cacus, also in Florence

bandit. see BRIGANDAGE

Bandjermasin, Indonesia see BANJERMASIN

Bandoeng, Indonesia see BANDUNG

Bandon, resort city (pop 1,004), SW Oregon, SSW of Coos Bay, on the Pacific coast at the mouth of the Coquille, inc 1891 It was rebuilt after a fire in 1936 that destroyed most of the city

Bandung or Bandoeng (both bän'dōōng), town (pop 166,815), on W Java, Indonesia, SE of Batavia, at an altitude of 2,300 ft It was formerly an administrative and a military headquarters of the Netherlands East Indies Among its products are textiles, quinine, soap, cigars, rubber goods, and machinery Bandung has an engineering college and a textile institute It has an airport, and its radio station is the most powerful in Indonesia

baneberry, any plant of the genus Actaea, perennials having compound leaves and a cluster of small white flowers, sometimes cultivated for the handsome (though poisonous) fruits Native species, formerly used medicinally by both Indian and white man and called also cohosh, have a stalk of red berries—red baneberry—or a stalk of white berries on short, swollen red stems—white baneberry Herb Christopher is another name, particularly for the dark-fruited European baneberry

Baner, Johan, Swed Banér (yōō'han bənär'), 1596–1641, Swedish general in the THIRTY YEARS WAR He served in Poland and Russia (1626–29) and, as counselor and general, landed with Gustavus Adolphus in Germany (1630) In 1632 he occupied Magdeburg and, with Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar, held Bavaria and Swabia Chief Swedish general after the death of Gustavus Adolphus at Lützen, he met with signal defeat at Nördlingen (1634) At Wittstock (1636) against the Saxon and imperialist forces, he recovered the military prestige of the Swedes, though forced to retreat for lack of reinforcements In 1638, he recovered Pomerania and Mecklenburg After winning a victory over the Saxons at Chemnitz (1639) and penetrating into Bohemia, he was forced to retreat

Banff (bămf, bänf), town (pop 2,081), SW Alta, on the Bow river in the Rocky Mts A famous tourist center, it is the chief station on the transcontinental line of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the Banff National Park (2,564 sq mi, est 1887), which has hot sulphur springs Banff has also become a winter resort for eastern prairie dwellers, with an annual winter carnival There are a national park museum and a zoological garden

Banff, burgh (pop 3,489), county town of Banffshire, Scotland, at the mouth of the Deveron and near Moray Firth It has a harbor and a fishing industry

Banffshire or Banff, county (630 sq mi, 1931 pop 54,907, 1948 estimated pop 52,482), NE Scotland The county town is Banff Other important towns are Keith, Portsoy, and Buckie The county is bounded on the north by the Firth of Moray and on the east and south by Aberdeenshire. The region is rolling and fertile near the coast, rising to the Grampians in the south It is an agricultural county, with small fishing villages along the coast. There is some quarrying, and large quantities of fine whisky are distilled Associated in history with Aberdeenshire, Banffshire was the scene of many battles between the Scots and the Norse invaders and later was torn by religious strife after the Reformation and through the period of the Puritan Revolution.

Bang, Herman Joachim (hĕr'män yō'ákhĭm bäng'), 1857–1912, Danish novelist, journalist, and critic His first important book was Generations without Hope (1880), a novel subjective and autobiographical In his collection of short stories Quiet Lives (1886) appears what is generally regarded as his masterpiece, "By the Wayside" His later books are impressionistic in style, among them are The White House (1898) and Denied a Country (1906, Eng tr, 1927)

Bangalore (băng-gulôr'), city (pop 248,334), SE Mysore state, India The city was founded in 1537 and there are remains of Tippoo Sahib's palace. Today it is a major rail junction and commercial center of S India Woolen, cotton, and silk textiles are manufactured An airplane factory was opened in 1941

Bangka or Banka (both bäng'kä, bäng'ku), island (4,611 sq mi, pop including offshore islets 205,363), Indonesia, in the Java Sea SE of Sumatra Since c 1710 when tin was discovered here Bangka has become one of the principal tin producers of the world The island also has deposits of iron, manganese, gold, lead, and copper Pangkalpinang is the capital, Muntok the principal port

Bangkok (băng'kŏk'), city (pop 688,832), capital of Thailand, on the Menam river near the Gulf of Siam It is the industrial center of Thailand and is surrounded by the fertile Menam plain, but it is most important as the seat of government and the principal port of the kingdom The chief exports are rice, tin, teak, and rubber Industrial plants include rice mills, sawmills, salt and oil refineries, and shipyards Bangkok is connected by rail with Singapore, Chiang Mai, and Pnom Penh The old city was built on the river and canals and was walled In the late 19th cent, Bangkok underwent modernization, many buildings were constructed in the European or a modified European style Notable buildings include the Grand Palace in the old city and the Dusit Palace in the northern outskirts The Chinese quarter is to the south Bangkok became the administrative center of Siam soon after the fall of AYUTHIA, and in 1782 it became the capital

Bangor (băng'gur), municipal borough (pop 15,769), Co Down, Northern Ireland, on Belfast Lough near its mouth and ENE of Belfast It is a seaport, a resort, and a yachting center, scene of an annual regatta There are remains of an abbey The original missionary abbey was founded c 555 by St Comgall and was destroyed by the Danes in the 9th cent Rebuilt in 1120, it was taken over by Franciscans in 1469 and dissolved in 1542

Bangor. 1 (băng'gôr, băn'-, băng'gur) City (pop 29,822), co seat of Penobscot co, S Maine, on the Penobscot at the head of navigation and at the mouth of the Kenduskeag, opposite Brewer, inc as a town 1791, as a city 1834 A port of entry, it is a commercial center and a gateway to an extensive resort area Its varied industries include printing, food and lumber processing, and the production of shoes and dental supplies Champlain and Monts probably ascended the river this far in 1604 Settlers began to arrive in 1769 The British occupied Bangor in 1814 Bangor Theological Seminary was established in 1814 There are many early-19th-century houses 2 (băng'gôr) Village (pop 1,409), SW Mich, near Lake Michigan W of Kalamazoo, in a fruitgrowing area, settled 1837, inc 1877 3 (băng'gur) Industrial borough (pop 5,687), E Pa, between Easton and Stroudsburg, settled 1773, inc 1875 It is the center of a slate-quarrying area and has textile-products industries

Bangor (băng'gôr), municipal borough (pop 10,960), Caernarvonshire, Wales, at the northern opening of Menai Strait The cathedral, on the site of a 6th-century church, dates from the 15th and 16th cent Bangor is the seat of the University College of North Wales Slate is shipped from adjacent Port Penrhyn

Bangorian Controversy (băng-gô'rēən), in the Church of England in the early part of the reign of George I Benjamin HOADLY, bishop of Bangor, Wales, delivered a sermon (1717) before the king in which he denied the delegation by Jesus Christ of any authority to the church Advocates of ecclesiastical authority (among them William LAW) attacked Hoadly's position, and a sharp controversy ensued, in which some 50 writers participated and about 200 pamphlets were issued The Bangorian Controversy led the king to prorogue convocation in 1717, this great council of the church was rendered inactive for about 135 years

Bangs, John Kendrick, 1862–1922, American humorist, b Yonkers, N Y, grad Columbia, 1883 He was associate editor of Life, 1884–88, joined the staff of Harper's Magazine, 1888, and edited Harper's Weekly, 1899–1901, and Puck, 1904–5 Besides other editorial work, he wrote over 30 books of humorous stories, verse, and plays The best known are Coffee and Repartee (1893), The Idiot (1895), and A House-Boat on the Styx (1896). See biography by his son, F H Bangs (1941).

Bang's disease: see CONTAGIOUS ABORTION.

Bangweolo (băng"wēō'lō) or Bangweulu (-ōō'lōō), lake (area 3,800 sq mi, including swamps), N Northern Rhodesia It is 60 mi long and 25 mi. wide. It empties into the Luapula river, a headstream of the Congo The lake was discovered by David Livingstone in 1868

Bani (bä'nī) [Heb, =built] 1 One of David's mighty men 2 Sam 23 36 2 Musician 1 Chron 6 46 3 Levites Neh 3 17, 9 4, 11 22 4 Family in the return from exile Ezra 2 10, 10 29, Neh 10 14 BINNUI Neh 7 15 5 The same as BINNUI 1 6 Judahite 1 Chron 9 4 7 Jew married to a foreign wife Ezra 10 38

Banim, John (bă'nĭm), 1798–1842, Irish novelist. He studied art, then turned to literature, writing Damon and Pythias, a tragedy, and a long poem, The Celt's Paradise, both in 1821 He and his brother, Michael Banim (1796–1874), wrote a series of novels, Tales by the O'Hara Family (2 series, 1825 26), of which The Nowlans by John was exceptional The Boyne Water (1826), a historical novel also by John, and Father Connell (1842), by both brothers, were notable Irish national tales

banishment see EXILE

Banja Luka (ban'ja lōō'kä), city (pop 33,191), Bosnia, N Yugoslavia First mentioned in the 15th cent, it was (1580–1640) the seat of the Bosnian pashas The city has ruins of Roman baths, a 16th-century mosque, and an Orthodox Eastern cathedral There are textile, beer, tobacco, and dairy industries

Banjermasin or Bandjermasin (both bän"jurmä'sĭn), town (pop 65,698), capital of Borneo, Indonesia It is a port on the Barito where the Martapura enters, 10 mi from the south coast The trade center of the rich Barito basin, it exports oil, timber, rubber, coal, gold, and iron There is a large oil refinery The Dutch settled here in 1711, succeeding the British banjo, small stringed musical instrument Its body consists of a hoop over which parchment is stretched, resembling a tambourine Its neck is like that of a guitar Its five to nine strings are plucked, with either the fingers or a plectrum The Negroes brought it to America from W Africa, where the idea was possibly borrowed from European sources Because of its incisive, metallic quality, the banjo is used sometimes in jazz bands

Banjoewangi, Indonesia see BANYUWANGI

Banka, Indonesia see BANGKA

Bankhead, John Hollis, 1872–1946, U S Senator from Alabama (1930–46), b Lamar co, Ala, grad Univ of Alabama, 1891, and Georgetown Univ law school, 1893 A successful corporation lawyer and coal-mine operator, he defeated James Thomas HEFLIN for the Senate Except on those issues having to do with the civil rights of Negroes in the South, Bankhead supported the New Deal His brother, William B Bankhead, of the House, and he were especially interested in legislation affecting cotton They were chiefly responsible for the passage in 1934 of the Cotton Control Act (repealed in 1936), designed to aid distressed planters and sharecroppers, who were given subsidies to limit production of the crop

Bankhead, William Brockman, 1874–1940, U S Representative from Alabama (1917–40), b Lamar co, Ala, grad Univ of Alabama, 1893, and Georgetown Univ law school, 1895 Chairman of the House rules committee (1934–35), Democratic floor leader (1935–36), and speaker of the House (1936–40), he was one of the outstanding New Deal legislative leaders The Cotton Control Act of 1934 was largely the work of his brother, Senator John H Bankhead, and himself He was also interested in monetary legislation and was considered one of the ablest parlementarians in the House He was the father of the well-known actress Tallulah Brockman Bankhead (1903)

bank holidays, days when the law requires that banks be closed In the United States the list varies from state to state but generally includes, besides the major holidays, many days that are observed only by the banks and such government institutions as post offices In England since 1871 bank holidays have had special significance as secular and perpetual holidays The days include Christmas, Dec 26 (Boxing Day, if a week-day), Good Friday, Easter Monday, Whitmonday, and the special banking day on the first Monday in August banking, primarily the business of dealing in money and instruments of credit Banks are usually differentiated from other financial institutions by their principal functions of accepting deposits—subject to withdrawal or transfer by check—and of making loans In a simple form, banking was practiced by the ancient temples of Egypt, Babylonia, and Greece, which loaned at high rates of interest the gold and silver deposited for safekeeping Private banking existed by 600 B C and was considerably developed by the Greeks, Romans, and Byzantines During the Middle Ages banking was dominated by the Jews because of the prejudice of the Christian Church against interest The forerunners of the modern banks were frequently chartered for a specific purpose, e g, the Bank of Venice (1171) and the Bank of England (1694), in connection with loans to the government, the Bank of Amsterdam (1609), to receive deposits of gold and silver Banking developed rapidly throughout the 18th and 19th cent, accompanying the expansion of industry and trade, with each nation evolving the distinctive forms peculiar to its economic and social life In the United States the first bank was the Bank of North America, established in 1781 in Philadelphia Congress chartered the first BANK OF THE UNITED STATES in 1791 to engage in general commercial banking and to act as fiscal agent of the government, but failed to renew its charter in 1811 A similar fate attended the second Bank of the United States, chartered in 1816 and closed in 1836 Prior to 1838 a bank charter could be obtained only by specific legislative act In 1838 New York state adopted the Free Banking Act, which authorized any one to procure a charter and engage in banking upon compliance with certain conditions Free banking spread rapidly to other states, and from 1837 to 1863 all banking business was done by state-chartered institutions In many Western states it degenerated into "wildcat" banking because of laxity and abuse of state laws Bank notes were issued against little or no security, credit was overexpanded, and depressions brought waves of bank failures In particular, the multiplicity of state bank notes caused great confusion and loss To correct these conditions, there was passed in 1863 the National Bank Act, which provided for a system of banks to be chartered by the Federal government By granting to national banks authority to issue bank notes and by placing a prohibitive tax on state bank notes, the act aimed at bringing all banks under Federal supervision. Most banks in existence did take out national charters, but some, being banks of deposit, were unaffected by the tax and continued under their state charters, thus giving rise to what is generally known as the "dual banking system " The number of state banks expanded rapidly with the increasing use of bank checks and has exceeded the number of national banks since 1892 Recurrent banking panics caused by overexpansion of credit, stringency of bank reserves, and inelastic currency prompted Congress in 1908 to create the National Monetary Commission to investigate the field of banking and currency and recommend legislation Its suggestions were embodied in the Federal Reserve Act (1913), which provided for a central banking organization, the FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM The fact that commercial banks are able to expand their loans and investments or are forced to contract them in accordance with changes in reserves and reserve requirements differentiates them from mutual savings banks, where the volume of loans and investments is governed by changes in customers' deposits Commercial banks include national and state banks, trust companies, stock savings banks, and industrial banks, most of which, in addition to their primary functions of making loans and investments and handling demand as well as savings and other time deposits, render a wide range of services Mutual savings banks, on the other hand, accept only savings and other time deposits, and the types of loans made and services rendered are limited Since the establishment of the Federal Reserve System, Federal banking legislation has been limited largely to detailed amendments of the National Bank and Federal Reserve acts The Banking Act of 1933 was a reform measure designed to correct specific abuses which had been disclosed by events leading to the bank holiday at the beginning of the Roosevelt administration It strengthened the powers of supervisory authorities, increased controls over the volume and use of credit, and provided for the insurance of bank deposits under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) The Banking Act of 1935 strengthened the powers of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors in the field of credit management, tightened existing restrictions on certain banking operations, and enlarged the supervisory powers of the FDIC Membership in the FDIC is compulsory for all Federal Reserve member banks but optional for other banks Types of financial institutions which are not subject to the supervision of state or Federal banking authorities but which perform one or more of the traditional banking functions are building and savings and loan associations, mortgage companies, finance companies, insurance companies, credit agencies owned in whole or in part by the Federal government, credit unions, brokers and dealers in securities, and investment bankers These operate under state or Federal laws and most of them are under the jurisdiction of the Dept. of Agriculture or the Federal Loan Agency Other credit institutions operating under Federal laws include the Postal Savings System, the U S Housing Authority, and the Veterans Administration Building and loan associations, which are state institutions, and savings and loan, which are Federal associations, make loans on real estate with funds obtained by the sale of shares to members. Finance companies make small loans and purchase conditional sales contracts with funds obtained from invested capital, surplus, and borrowings. Credit unions, which are institutions owned cooperatively by groups of persons having a common business, fraternal, or other interest, make small loans to their members out of funds derived from the sale of shares to members. The primary functions of investment bankers are the purchase of new issues of securities from public bodies or corporations and their sale to institutional and individual investors and the distribution of blocks of outstanding securities from large holders to the investing public Investment bankers usually act as intermediaries between the issuers of securities and investors in supplying long-term or capital funds, as distinguished from commercial banks, which primarily make short-term loans to finance the production and distribution of goods In Canada the banking system developed along lines similar to that of Scotland, with branches controlled by a small number of head offices The result has been a remarkable freedom from bank failures, accompanied by a rather heavy dependence of the remoter parts of the country upon Montreal and Toronto for their supply of credit Owing to the centralized nature of the business of each bank in this system, the need for a central bank was not felt in Canada until recently, but the Bank of Canada was established in 1934 and has been wholly owned by the government since 1938 The powers of the chartered banks are granted for periods of 10 years only by the Bank Act See R G Rodkey, The Banking Process (1928), H P Willis and B H Beckhart, Foreign Banking Systems (1929), D R Dewey, Financial History of the United States (12th ed , 1934), H P Willis and J M. Chapman, The Banking Situation (1934), R B Westerfield, Money, Credit, and Banking (1938), Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Banking Studies (1941), J I Bogen, Financial Handbook (1948)

Bank of England, popularly known as the Old lady of Threadneedle Street It stands on the street of that name in London and has a number of branches in England and the British dominions At first a commercial bank, it eventually became the central banking institution of England It was founded (1694) by William PATERSON with a capital of £1,200,000, which was advanced to the government in return for banking privileges, including the right to issue notes up to the amount of its capital A new agreement with the government in 1709 allowed the bank to double its capital, which was then lent to the government The bank renewed its charter in 1742, 1764, 1781, and 1842, when it was divided by the Bank Charter Act into two departments This act placed rigid restrictions on the issue of the bank's notes and formed the basis of its present structure The issue department handles the issuing of bank notes for general circulation, the banking department handles the remaining features of banking service, including the management of the public debt, and serves as the depository of government funds and as the staple bank of England. The affairs of the bank are controlled by a governor, a deputy, and 24 directors It was privately owned until 1945, when an act of Parliament provided for its nationalization The stockholders were recompensed with government bonds to the value of more than £58,000,000 See J H Clapham, The Bank of England a History (1944)

Bank of France, the central bank of France, founded in 1800 at the direction of Napoleon Its original capital was 30,000,000 francs, since 1857 it has been 182,500,000 francs The bank has the sole right to issue notes and is also the depository of government funds It exercises central banking functions by means of its discount rates and by open-market operations In addition it is the largest commercial bank in France Its central office is in Paris, and it maintains branches throughout the country The private owners of the bank elect directors, but actual management is by a governor and two deputies appointed by the government

Bank of the United States. There were two Banks of the United States, the first existing from 1791 to 1811 and the second from 1816 to 1836 The first bank was established by the Federalists as a part of the Hamiltonian system (see HAMILTON, ALEXANDER) and was bitterly opposed by the Anti-Federalists on the ground that it closely allied the government with the commercial and moneyed interests Their opposition was based on the claim that the bank was unconstitutional, the Constitution not having granted the government power to establish a CENTRAL BANK The conservative policies of the bank and its restraining influence on other banks antagonized more exuberant business elements, especially in the West. The bank's field was nation-wide, with a head office in Philadelphia and branches in eight other cities The government subscribed one fifth of the capital of $10,000,000, but a loan of $2,000,000 was immediately made to the government. The bank acted as a fiscal agent for the government and also conducted a general commercial business. It was well managed and paid good dividends, but when its 20-year charter expired in 1811 a new one was refused by the Jeffersonian Democrats then in control. Later, financing the War of 1812 proved difficult because of the lack of a central bank, and the end of the war found the financial system of the country in a chaotic state. Enough support was therefore secured to charter a new bank for 20 years The second bank, capitalised at $35,000,000, operated much as did the first one, 25 branches being established. It became especially prosperous under the management of Nicholas BIDDLE and aroused much criticism on the part of state banks and frontiersmen on the ground that it was too powerful and that it operated in the interests of the commercial classes of the East. The opponents of the bank came into power with Andrew JACKSON He vetoed the bill for its recharter in 1832 and made it one of the leading issues of his fight for reelection Interpreting his victory at the polls as an expression of the popular will on the subject, he did not wait for the expiration of the bank's charter in 1836 but had the government's deposits removed in 1833 to the state banks, known to his opponents as "pet banks " Under Van Buren's administration the INDEPENDENT TREASURY SYSTEM was established to handle the government's funds See D R Dewey, Financial History of the United States (12th ed , 1934), R C H Catterall, The Second Bank of the United States (1903)

bankruptcy, in law, settlement of the liabilities of a debtor who is wholly or partially unable to meet his obligations The purposes of bankruptcy laws are to distribute the bankrupt's assets equitably among his creditors and, in most instances, to discharge him from further liability The U S Constitution authorizes Congress to enact uniform bankruptcy legislation for the entire United States The present law was adopted in 1898 and has been amended several times, especially in 1938 Bankruptcy proceedings may be voluntary (instituted by the debtor) or involuntary (instituted by creditors) Ordinarily the debtor must actually be insolvent, i e , even if the full value of his assets were realized, he would not be able to pay all his debts Bankruptcy is also permitted where the discharge of debts would otherwise be unduly delayed, e g , if the debtor has fraudulently transferred property to put it out of a creditor's reach When a person has been adjudged bankrupt, preferred creditors (e g , workmen and suppliers of materials) are paid in full, and the other creditors, who manage the estate through a committee, share, usually pro rata, in the remaining assets Unless a debtor was discharged from debt by bankruptcy proceedings within the previous six years or was guilty of fraud in becoming bankrupt, the effect of bankruptcy proceedings is to wipe out his indebtedness The law also permits courts, instead of ordering the liquidation of all the assets of a business threatened with insolvency, to reorganize it on a sound basis In the United States the bankrupt receives perhaps more lenient treatment than in any other country, this practice reflects the belief that business initiative should not be stifled by the threat of criminal penalties for unintentional commercial failure

Banks, Sir Joseph, 1743–1820, British naturalist and patron of the sciences He accompanied Captain James Cook on his voyage around the world and made large collections of biological specimens Most of the plants were previously unclassified Botany Bay was named on this voyage In 1772 Banks went on an expedition to Iceland From c 1762 until his death he was the chief influence in inaugurating and directing the policies which made Kew Gardens an important botanical center for encouraging exploration and experimentation In 1766 he was elected to the Royal Society, and he served as its president from 1778 until his death The plant genus Banksia was named for him See studies by J H Maiden (1909) and Edward Smith (1911)

Banks, Nathaniel Prentiss, 1816-94, American politician and Union general in the Civil War, b Waltham, Mass He served (1849–52) in the Massachusetts house of representatives and was (1851–52) speaker Banks entered Congress in 1853 as a Democrat and was returned in 1855 as a Know-Nothing and in 1857 as a Republican In his second term he was an able and impartial speaker of the House. He resigned from Congress in Dec , 1857, to become the Republican candidate for the governorship of Massachusetts, which he held for three successive terms (1858–60) In the Civil War he was made a major general of volunteers (May, 1861) After service in the Dept. of Annapolis, Banks was given a command in the Dept of the Shenandoah, where T J (Stonewall) JACKSON defeated him at Front Royal and Winchester, forcing him to retreat across the Potomac In the maneuvering before the second battle of BULL RUN, Banks led Gen. John Pope's advance but at Cedar Mt. was again defeated by Jackson Late in 1862 Banks replaced B F BUTLER at New Orleans. He cooperated with Grant in opening up the Mississippi by moving against PORT HUDSON, which fell in July, 1863 In the Red River expedition (1864) Banks, defeated by Richard TAYLOR at SABINE CROSSROADS (April 8), retreated to Pleasant Hill, where he repulsed the pursuing Confederates (April 9) before completely withdrawing from that region. After the war Banks was again a Representative from Massachusetts (1865–73, 1875–77, 1889–91). See biography by F. H Harrington (1948)

Banks, Thomas, 1735–1805, English sculptor, studied at the Royal Academy A traveling scholarship enabled him to study in Rome from 1772 to 1779. In 1781 he went to Russia, where Catherine II bought his Cupid Catching a Butterfly and commissioned his Armed Neutrality On his return to England he executed numerous monuments and portrait busts, but he is best known for such imaginative works as Achilles Mourning Briseis (Tate Gall , London)

banksia [for Sir Joseph Banks], Australian honey-bearing evergreen trees and shrubs, also called honeysuckle trees or Australian honeysuckles. It is sometimes cultivated in America

Bankside, locality by the Thames, in Southwark metropolitan borough, London, England, just E of Southwark Bridge In the 16th and 17th cent it was an amusement center, with the Globe Theatre and other places associated with Shakspere Here also were the palace of the bishop of Winchester and the CLINK

Banks Island, off N Canada, in the Arctic Ocean, in the Arctic Archipelago It is the westernmost of the group and is separated from the mainland by Amundsen Gulf Banks Island, c 250 mi long and c 225 mi wide, is a hilly plateau rising to 3,000 ft in the south There is a small Eskimo population Sir Robert McClure discovered that it was an island in 1851 Vilhjalmur Stefannson spent much time (1914–17) here and explored the interior

Bann, river of Northern Ireland, rising as the Upper Bann in the Mourne Mts and flowing 40 mi NW through Counties Down and Armagh to the southern end of Lough Neagh It leaves the lake at its north shore as the Lower Bann and flows 40 mi north, forming the border between Counties Antrim and Londonderry, past Coleraine to the Atlantic. It has important salmon fisheries

Bannack, ghost town, SW Mont , SW of Butte Founded when gold was discovered (1862) along Grasshopper Creek here, Bannack was the first town in Montana, had the first school, and was territorial capital (1864–65) until most of the miners had left the thin deposits for the richer gold of Virginia City It was also called East Bannack and Bannack City

Bannatyne, George (băn'ŭtĭn), 1545–1608?, British anthologist, b Scotland He compiled one of the best collections of Middle Scottish verse, the Bannatyne MS (1568) The Bannatyne Club was founded in his honor by Sir Walter Scott in 1823 for the purpose of publishing old Scottish works

Banner, Peter, fl 1794–1828, American architect Born in England, he probably practiced there before going to Boston in 1794 Besides the Eben Crafts house at Roxbury, Mass (1805), the most important work attributed to Banner is the Park St Church in Boston (1809), its graceful spire resembles the tower of St Bride's Church, London, by Christopher Wren

Banning, resort city (1940 pop 3,874, 1947 special census pop 6,655), S Calif , E of Riverside, laid out 1883, inc 1913 A health resort, it lies in a mountainous fruitgrowing area

Bannockburn, field on the Bannock, a tributary of the Forth, Stirlingshire, Scotland, S of Stirling and near the village of St Ninian's Here was fought the battle of Bannockburn, beginning June 23, 1314, and ending June 24, 1314, in which Robert the Bruce completely defeated the English under Edward II, thereby establishing himself on the Scottish throne

Bannock Indians, tribe of North American Indians, who formerly ranged over wide territory of the N Great Plains and into the foothills of the Rockies They were concentrated in S Idaho Their language was Uto-Aztecan (see LANGUAGE, table), their culture typical of the Plains Indians The Bannock were greatly reduced by hardship following the disappearance of the buffalo They were defeated in Indian wars in 1863 and 1878, and life on a reservation did not help them They were long associated with the Northern Shoshone and were put on a reservation with them The Bannock lost their separate identity They and the Shoshone were sometimes called Snake Indians

banns or bans: see MARRIAGE

banshee (băn'shē) [Gaelic, = woman fairy], in Gaelic Ireland and Scotland, spirit said to warn, by weeping and wailing, of impending death, especially of death by violence Only certain families are said to have a banshee, and only the kin or household of the doomed person may hear her.

Bantam, Conn see LITCHFIELD

bantam fowl: see POULTRY

Banting, Sir Frederick Grant, 1891–1941, Canadian physician, M D Univ of Toronto, 1922. From 1923 he was professor of medical research at Toronto. Working with C H BEST under the direction of J J. R. MACLEOD, he succeeded in isolating (1921) from the pancreas the hormone later called INSULIN. For this he shared with Macleod the 1923 Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine He was knighted in 1934 Besides his work on insulin, he made valuable studies of the cortex of the adrenal glands, of cancer, and of silicosis and stimulated research in aviation medicine. He was killed in a plane crash en route to England on a medical war mission. See Seale Harris, Banting's Miracle (1946).

Bantry Bay, inlet of the Atlantic, 21 mi long and 4 mi wide, on the southwest coast of Co. Cork, Ireland. It is one of Europe's best natural anchorages At the head of the bay is Bantry town In 1689 Bantry Bay was the scene of an indecisive Anglo-French naval battle

Bantu (băn'tōō'), ethnic and linguistic group of Africa, numbering some 40,000,000. The Bantu, a Negro people, inhabit nearly all the continent S of the Congo except the extreme southwestern part The classification is primarily linguistic, and there are several hundred Bantu languages and dialects, including Kafir, Zulu, and Swahili Few cultural generalisations concerning the Bantu may be made Before the European conquest of Africa the Bantu tribes were either pastoral and warlike or agricultural and usually pacific There were some highly developed Bantu states, including Buganda in present-day Uganda Possibly under the fear of white encroachment several additional Bantu confederations developed in the 19th cent , notably the Zulu and the Basuto (in Basutoland) Other well-known Bantu tribes include the Matabele and the Mashona

Banvard, John, 1815–91, American painter, b New York city, self-taught After traveling down the Mississippi in a skiff, he began in 1840 to paint a huge panorama of the river, which was exhibited around the United States and in London The first American chromo was copied from his painting, The Orison

Banville, Théodore Faullain de (tāôdôr' fōlĕ' du bāvēl'), 1823–91, French poet of the Parnassian school His many volumes of verse, including Odes funambulesques (1857) and Occidentales (1869), are characterized by expertness of technique

banyan (băn'yŭ) [Anglo-Indian from Sanskrit, = merchant, used as a trading place], species of FIG (Ficus bengalensis) native to India, where it is venerated Seeds of the banyan usually germinate in the branches of some tree where they have been dropped by birds The young plant puts forth aerial roots, which, on reaching the ground, enlarge to serve as trunks Branches from these ultimately send down more such prop roots until the banyan crowds out the host tree and becomes grovelike in appearance, often covering large areas The seeds frequently germinate on walls and buildings, causing considerable damage Banyans are sometimes grown in Florida

Banyuwangi or Banjoewangi (both băn"yōōwäng'ē), port (pop 25,185), on E Java, Indonesia, opposite Bali on Bali Strait It exports copra, lumber, and rubber It is connected by cable with Australia and Singapore

baobab (bā'ō-), gigantic tree of Senegal, exceeded in size only by the big tree of California The trunks of living trees are often hollowed out for dwellings Ropes and cloth are made from the bark, condiments and medicine from the leaves The fruit is eaten by the natives The baobab is also called monkey bread, sour gourd, and, botanically, Adansonia

Baphomet (băf'ŭmĕt), name of a demon or mystic figure It occurs in the accusations leveled at the Knights Templars when they were persecuted in France Apparently the name was unknown before that time in Western demonology Its origin is disputed, it may have been a distorted form of Mahomet, it may have been of Greek origin, some later students of the occult hold that it is an anagram on the alleged esoteric motto of the Knights Templars In later demonology the Great Baphomet is a buck-headed god of evil and death

baptism [Gr , = dipping], SACRAMENT of the Christian church, conveying, or representing, the grace which removes the taint of previous sin from the soul Those who believe in ORIGINAL SIN hold baptism essential for salvation Many churches encourage the baptism of infants The form of baptism is by immersion, or by the pouring or sprinkling of water over the person to be baptized, accompanied by the recitation of a formula, usually in the name of the Trinity The Baptists do not allow infant baptism and baptize by immersion In the Roman Catholic, Orthodox, and Anglican churches the child baptized must have sponsors—godfather and godmother The name christening [making Christian] is used for baptism The giving of a name at baptism is secondary For the baptism of Jesus see Mat 3, Mark 1 1–11, Luke 3 1-22, John 3 22,23

baptistery (băp'tĭstrē) [from Latin, = place for baptism], part of a church, or a separate building in connection with it, used for administering the sacrament of baptism In the earliest examples it was merely a basin or pool, set into the floor During the persecutions of the Roman Empire, the baptisms could be administered by Christians only in concealed places, such as the catacombs The Christian church set aside a separate structure for the ceremony. The earliest such still extant is in the Lateran basilica at Rome, in which, by tradition, Emperor Constantine was baptized (337) Octagonal in plan, it formed a model for many subsequent baptisteries, most of which were octagonal or circular In the center of the chamber was the sunken pool, often surrounded by columns, with curtains to screen the neophyte during immersion Early baptisteries are chiefly found in Italy and Asia Minor. In Hagia Sophia there is a 6th-century example still extant. When immersion was no longer practiced, a separate structure became unnecessary and was supplanted by a mere space within the church itself, set aside for the purpose The standing fonts of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance were often objects of superb artistry In Italy separate baptisteries continued to be built in the 12th to the 14th cent , notably the beautiful Romanesque structures at Florence, Pisa, Siena, and Parma The baptistery at Florence contains the celebrated bronze doors of Andrea Pisano and of Lorenzo Ghiberti, that at Pisa the pulpit by Nicola Pisano

Baptists, denomination of Christians holding a distinctive belief with regard to the ordinance of baptism Since 1644 the name has been applied to those who maintain that baptism should be administered to none but believers and that immersion is the only mode of administering baptism indicated in the New Testament The doctrine and practices of some earlier bodies, such as the ANABAPTISTS and MENNONITES, were similar In Holland a group of separatists, led by John SMYTH (escaped from persecution in England), came under Mennonite influence and formed in Amsterdam c 1608 the first English Baptist congregation Smyth baptized first himself, then the others In 1611 certain members of this congregation returned to London and established a church there This was the first of the churches afterward known as General Baptists, since they held the Arminian belief that the atonement of Christ is not limited to the elect only but is general Particular Baptists were those whose doctrine was Calvinistic, teaching that atonement is particular or individual The first such church was formed by secession, in 1633, from a separatist congregation in Southwark, London Immersion was not yet insisted upon in these churches, but in 1644 seven Particular Baptist churches issued a confession of faith requiring that form of baptism, and Baptist was thenceforth the name given to those who practiced it In 1891 General and Particular Baptists united It was the Particular type that first took root among the Puritans and Calvinists in America, when Roger Williams and his companions in Rhode Island rejected infant baptism and established a church in 1639 Baptists were later persecuted in New England for opposing infant baptism, and one group emigrated from Maine to Charleston, S C , c 1684 In the Southeast the General Baptist views found acceptance, but the stricter Calvinistic ideas suited the pioneers who settled the Southern mountains after the Revolution Their opposition to mission work gave them the name Anti-Mission They were also called Hard Shell or Primitive Baptists Baptist churches are congregational in matters of government Such general associations as are formed do not have control over the individual churches Early missionary activity extended the Baptist movement to the Continent and elsewhere In the United States the American Baptist Missionary Union (under a longer title) was formed in 1814 to support workers in foreign lands—at that time, Adoniram JUDSON and Luther Rice In 1832 the American Baptist Home Mission Society was organized When the question of slavery became a dividing wall, the Southern Baptist Convention was established (1845), with its various boards for missions and other activities The Northern Baptist Convention, organized in 1907, is a delegated body operating through many agencies Both support a number of educational institutions and periodicals The original national organization of the Negro Baptist churches is the National Baptist Convention of the United States of America Separated from this body is the National Baptist Convention of America The four principal conventions agree in doctrine and ecclesiastical order Other groups have their own associations, among them the American Baptist Association of the Southwest (1905), the National Baptist Evangelical Life and Soul Saving Association, the Seventh-Day Baptists, the Duck River (and Kindred) Baptists, and the Free Will Baptists There are no fewer than 19 bodies The Baptist World Alliance (formed 1905) holds international congresses regularly See Thomas Armitage, A History of the Baptists (2 vols , 1887), H C Vedder, Baptist History (1909), Vol IV of Church History Handbooks bar, the, originally, the rail which enclosed the judge in a court, hence, a court or a system of courts The persons qualified and authorized to conduct the trial of cases are also known collectively as the bar From late medieval times in England the Inns of Court acted as training schools for men who were to plead causes in the courts, and when a student was judged to be trained in competence, he was "called to the bar" of the Inn, automatically he was then judged competent to plead at the bar of the courts England retains the old distinction between the pleader of a cause (advocatus) who conducts the actual trial and the agent who merely represents or advises a client but does not appear before the court (procurator) Those who appear in behalf of clients are barristers (called in Scotland advocates) Formerly the legal agents who plead causes were of three types—attorneys, who represented clients in cases at common law, solicitors, in cases in equity; and proctors, in cases in admiralty and ecclesiastical courts

cases The SOLICITOR is today of outstanding importance in the British legal profession, though the barrister traditionally has the weightier role King's (or queen's, as the case may be) counsel designates a barrister selected as counsel for the crown formerly, such barristers could not plead causes against the crown without special permission Today most senior and distinguished barristers are king's counsel and are privileged to write K C after their names The distinction between the pleader and the agent is retained on the Continent, and formerly in the United States there was some distinction in nomenclature between the counselor at law, who conducted the lawsuit before the court, and the attorney, who did not appear in the actual trial The distinction has now fallen into disuse in the United States See ATTORNEY

Bar, Confederation of, union formed in 1768 at Bar (now in W Ukraine) by a number of Polish nobles to oppose interference of Catherine II of Russia in Polish affairs Its purpose was the defense of Polish independence, of the Polish constitution, and of Catholicism Supported to a minor degree by France and, more effectively, by Turkey, which declared war on Catherine, the confederates fought a bitter war against Russia for several years In 1770 they declared King STANISLAUS II deposed The first partition of Poland (1772) ended the effective resistance of the confederation

Bara, Theda, 1890?–, American moving-picture actress, whose name is Theodosia Goodman, b Cincinnati Films that made her a sensational silent-screen siren or "vamp" include A Fool There Was, The Eternal Sin, Cleopatra, and The Vampire

barabara, semisubterranean dwelling, typical of the Aleutian Islands and found also in NE Siberia and Alaska It is roofed with turf supported by driftwood or by whalebone beams, the floor is excavated, and the walls are partially or wholly sunk into the ground The old type of barabara was sometimes over 200 ft in length, housing 10 to 40 families Today there is only the single-family size, with an entrance from the side wall

Baraba Steppe (bürübä'), agricultural district, RSFSR, in W Siberia, between the Ob and Irtysh rivers Barabinsk (pop c 10,000), a town on the Trans-Siberian RR, is the chief center

Barabbas (burăb'ŭs) [probably an Aramaic surname,=son of the master], bandit held in jail at the time of Jesus' arrest Pilate, who annually released a prisoner at Passover, offered to release Jesus, but the people demanded His death and Barabbas' delivery Mat 27 15–18, Mark 15 6–14, Luke 23 13–25, John 18 39,40

Barabinsk, RSFSR see BARABA STEPPE

Baraboo (băr'ŭbōō), city (pop 6,415), co seat of Sauk co, central Wis, in a hilly region, on the Baraboo and NW of Madison, founded before 1850, inc 1882 It is a manufacturing and farm trade center The Ringling Brothers' circus began here Devils Lake State Park, in the Baraboo Range, and the Dells of the Wisconsin are near by

Barachel (băr'ŭkĕl, burä'k]) [Heb ,=whom God has blessed], father of ELIHU 2 Job 32 2 6

Barachias (bărŭkī'ŭs), the same as BERECHIAH

Baracoa (bärnkō'ä), town (pop 10,395), E Cuba, a port near the eastern extremity of the island Founded c 1512 by Diego de VELÁZQUEZ, it is Cuba's oldest settlement Exported are bananas and cocoa, manufactures include chocolate and coconut oil Overlooking the town is a landmark for navigators, El Yunque de Baracoa (1,932 ft high), which was named for its fancied resemblance to an anvil

Barada see ABANA

Baradla Caves (bô'rŏdlô), three large caves, NE Hungary and S Czechoslovakia, c 25 mi NNW of Miskolc They are noted for their stalactites Two caves are in Hungary, one in Slovakia

Baraga, Frederic (bär'ŭgu), 1797 1868, Roman Catholic missionary to the Indians of Upper Michigan, b Slovenia He received (1821) a law degree from the Univ of Vienna, and after study at the Laibach seminary he was ordained (1823) As a missionary, he reached (1831) Cincinnati, where he later (1853) was consecrated bishop of Upper Michigan The seat of this bishopric was Sault Ste Marie, and in 1865 he was also given authority over the see of Marquette His authoritative grammar and dictionary of the Ojibwa language are still used by scholars See biography by Chrysostomus Verwyst (1900)

Baraga (bär'ugŭ), resort village (pop 1,110), W Upper Peninsula, N Mich, near the head of Keweenaw Bay and near L'Anse, inc 1891 Deep-sea fishing is a sport here The vicinity abounds in Indian relics A state park is near by

Barak (bä'räk) [Heb ,=lightning], leader from N Canaan who fought with DEBORAH, against Jabin and Sisera Judges 4 1–5,31. See also BEDAN.

Baranof Island (bä'rŭnôf, barä'nôf), off SE Alaska, in the ALEXANDER ARCHIPELAGO It is more than 100 mi long and has an area of 1,607 sq. mi On it is SITKA, long the center of the fur trade and administration in the days of Russian ownership. It is named for Aleksandr Baranov.

Baranov, Aleksandr Andreyevich (ülyĭksän'dür ŭndrä'ŭvĭch bürä'nôf), 1746–1819, Russian trader, chief figure in the days of Russian control in Alaska He was a merchant in Siberia, and when his business came on evil days he accepted (1790) an offer to become the managing agent of a Russian fur-trading company at Kodiak and went to present Alaska The organization of the Russian American Company in 1799 made Baranov the virtual governor of all the Russian activities in North America, and he continued to hold that power until 1817, unchallenged except for the brief activities of Rezanov His firm rule in discouraging situations, his keen business sense, and his dogged (if somewhat melancholy) determination kept the little settlements going and brought steady profits to the company He had trouble with the natives The first settlement he planted at Sitka (Novo Arkhangelsk) in 1799 was wiped out by Indians in 1802, but with Russian naval help the company recovered the place and refounded the town He made some efforts to curb British and American trading vessels but also traded with them, obtaining food and supplies Russian activities were extended to California with the founding of Fort Ross (later sold to J A Sutter) and briefly stretched to Hawaii He was supplanted in 1817 and died on his way back to Russia See Hector Chevigny, Lord of Alaska (1942), S R Tompkins, Alaska Promyshlennik and Sourdough (1945)

Baranovichi (burä"nŭvē'chĭ), Pol Baranowicze (baränôvē'chĭ) city (1931 pop 22,848), capital of Baranovichi oblast, Belorussia SW of Minsk This railway center, formerly Polish, was ceded to the USSR in 1945

Barante, Aimable Guillaume Prosper Brugière, baron de (ämä'blu gĕyōm' prôspĕr' brügyĕr' barô' du barät'), 1782–1866, French statesman and historian He held numerous administrative and diplomatic posts but retired with the downfall of the Orleanist monarchy (1848) Of his historical works, the best known is a history of the duchy of Burgundy (1824) His Souvenirs (8 vols, 1890–1901) have considerable charm and some value as historical source material

Barany, Robert (rō'bert bä'ranē), 1876–1936 Austrian physician For his work on the physiology and pathology of the vestibular apparatus of the ear he received the 1914 Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine From 1917 until his death he was professor at the Univ of Upsala

Barataria Bay (bărutär'ēu), SE La, c 40 mi S of New Orleans cut off from the Gulf of Mexico by Grand and Grand Terre islands Former headquarters of the pirates under Jean LAFFITE, it is now a shrimping center

Barbados (bärbā'dōz), island (166 sq mi, pop 192,841), British West Indies It is also Barbados colony, with the capital at BRIDGETOWN The island, E of St Vincent, in the Windward Islands, is largely sandstone and coral overlaid with some volcanic ash deposits from St Vincent Barbados is low and rises gradually toward its highest point at Mt Hillaby (1,104 ft high) Although there is ample rainfall from June to December, there are no rivers, and water must be pumped from subterranean caverns by windmills The porous soil and moderate warmth are excellent for the cultivation of sugar cane, long the island's major occupation, and also for cotton Besides sugar and cotton, exports include molasses, rum, tamarinds, and margarine Barbados, with a population about 93 percent Negro, has a rural population density greater than any other land in Middle or South America It is considered by some to have the finest climate of any of the West Indian islands, and it is a popular tourist resort Although it was probably discovered by the Portuguese and possibly visited by the Spanish in the 16th cent, it was not definitely claimed until an English expedition landed in 1605 While neighboring islands suffered kaleidoscopic changes in sovereignty, Barbados has been steadily under the English flag In 1812 and again in 1902 it was covered with a thick fall of ashes from St Vincent's SOUFRIÈRE volcano See Raymond Savage, The Enchanting Isle (1937), O P Starkey, The Economic Geography of Barbados (1939)

Barbara, Saint, 3d or 4th cent, virgin martyr, whose life is shrouded in contradictory legends Her father is said to have shut her up in a tower and then to have killed her for being a Christian He was struck down by lightning, and by an extended analogy St Barbara became the patroness of makers and users of firearms and fireworks She is invoked for a happy death Feast Dec 4

Barbarelli, Giorgio see GIORGIONE

Barbarossa (barbürô'sŭ) [Ital,=red-beard], surname of the Algerian corsair Khair ad-Din (c 1483–1546) His brother Koruk, or Aruj (c 1474–1518), having seized (1518) Algiers from the Spanish, Barbarossa placed Algeria under Turkish suzerainty and extended his conquests Between 1533 and 1544, as admiral of the Turkish fleet, he twice defeated Andrea DORIA and ravaged the coasts of Greece, Spain, and Italy His able son Hasan (d 1570) succeeded him in Algeria

Barbarossa, Frederick: see FREDERICK I, emperor

Barbaroux, Charles Jean Marie (ahärl' shä' märē' bärbärô'), 1767–94, French revolutionist He led (Aug, 1792) the revolutionary troops from Marseilles on their famous march to Paris A Girondist, he opposed Robespierre in the Convention and finally fled to Caen, there to organize Girondist resistance. He was guillotined at Bordeaux

Barbary Coast, waterfront area of San Francisco, Calif, in the years after the 1849 gold rush Gamblers and gangsters, prostitutes and confidence men flourished, and the brothels, saloons, and disreputable boardinghouses made the Barbary Coast —so called after the pirate coast of North Africa— notorious across the world See Herbert Asbury, The Barbary Coast (1933)

Barbary States, term used for the North African states of TRIPOLITANIA, TUNISIA, and ALGERIA (and usually also MOROCCO), which were semi-independent under Turkish rule from the 16th cent onward Moors who had been expelled from Spain and Turkish corsairs began the large-scale piracy that was to be a main source of revenue for the local rulers for centuries The pirates preyed on the Mediterranean shipping and sporadically attacked coastal towns They took booty, held captives for ransom, and enslaved the unransomed These activities played some part in the Spanish and Portuguese attempts at conquest in Africa and also brought on sporadic punitive expeditions by European rulers, such as the famous attack of Charles V on Algiers For the most part, however, the matter simmered down to regular payment by the European powers of tribute which would guarantee them against piratical attack The young United States joined in this system Trouble arose however, in 1800 beginning with the insult offered William Bainbridge by the dey of Algiers and capped by the demand of the pasha of Tripoli for more U S tribute The TRIPOLITAN WAR resulted; it was closed somewhat ignominiously by negotiation in 1805 In the so-called Algerine War in 1815 Stephen DECATUR forced the dey of Algiers to sign a treaty giving up the tribute The next year Lord Exmouth led a stronger Anglo-Dutch expedition, and after the Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1818 resolved to punish the Barbary States, a concerted naval expedition was sent Piracy was not completely ended, however, until the French captured Algiers in 1830

Barbauld, Anna Laetitia (Aikin) (bar'bôld), 1743 1825, English poet and editor In 1774 she married Rochemont Barbauld and with him opened a boarding school Her Hymns in Prose for children, widely read and translated into several languages, was followed by Early Lessons (both 1781) She edited works of Collins, Akenside, and Richardson and the 50-volume edition of British Novelists with short biographies and critical notes See editions of her works by Lucy Aikin (1826) and G A Ellis (1874), memoir by A L Le Breton (1874)

Barbazan, Arnaud Guilaume, seigneur de (ärnō' gĕyōm' sänyŭr' du barbäzä'), c 1360–1431, French general in the Hundred Years War, called le chevalier sans reproche [the knight without blame] He was a leader of the Armagnacs and a staunch supporter of the dauphin, Charles VII Barbazan defended Melun against the English (1420) and was held prisoner by them from 1420 to 1430 After his release he fought with success against the English and Burgundians, being made governor of Champagne and Brie He died fighting in Lorraine under René I

barbecue (bar'bukū) [West Indian or South American], in the United States, an open-air gathering political or social, where an ox or a hog is roasted whole over a pit of glowing embers and food and drink are liberally enjoyed In the modern barbecue smaller cuts of meat dipped in or basted with a highly seasoned sauce may be used As an American institution it seems to be of Southern origin, the word having been used in Virginia before 1700

barbed wire As the frontier moved westward to the open plains the traditional fence materials, wooden rails and stone, became scarce and expensive, and the cost of fencing (from $2 to $8 an acre) was frequently more than the land was worth An attempt at a solution was the hedge movement which spread from Texas to Iowa, the osage orange was particularly popular, but it, too, was expensive and required several years to grow The invention of barbed wire helped to solve the problem Of many early types of barbed wire, that invented in Illinois in 1873 by Joseph F GLIDDEN proved most popular The advent of barbed wire on the plains transformed the cattle industry, ending the open range to a large extent and making possible the introduction of blooded cattle The transformation was not made without protests which took the form of fence-cutter's wars and often led to bloodshed The battle between fence men and anti-fence men was carried into the legislatures in most Western states, where laws were enacted to cover the subject In the First World War, through its use for entanglements and obstacles, barbed wire gained new importance as a medium of defense

Barbellion, W. N. P, pseud of Bruce Frederick Cummings, 1889–1919, English biologist and author Until 1917 he held a post at the Natural History Museum, South Kensington, London, and despite constant ill-health wrote important scientific papers. He is remembered for a remarkable autobiography, published just before his death, The Journal of a Disappointed Man, with an introduction by H G Wells Posthumously published were Enjoying Life, and Other Literary Remains (1919) and, with a preface by A J Cummings, A Last Diary (1920) See R H Hellyar, W N P Barbellion (1927)

Barbé-Marbois, François, marquis de (frāswä' märbē' du bärbā'-märbwä'), 1745–1837, French statesman After holding a governmental post in Santo Domingo, he joined the Revolution in 1789 but was deported to French Guiana (1797) He was released by Napoleon, who made him councilor of state and director of the treasury (1801) Barbé-Marbois negotiated the treaty by which Louisiana was ceded to the United States He later became minister of justice under Louis XVIII but resigned in 1816 See E W Lyon, The Man Who Sold Louisiana (1942)

Barber, John Warner, 1798–1885, American engraver, b East Windsor, Conn He opened a business in New Haven, where he produced religious and historical books, illustrated with his own wood and steel engravings He is best known for books on state, national, and local history, in which his vivid engravings caught and held the flavor and appearance of city, town, and countryside in his day

Barber, Samuel, 1910–, American composer, b West Chester, Pa , studied at the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia His music is lyrical, revealing a thorough knowledge of counterpoint and of classical form He has experimented with various modern techniques, such as dissonance, polytonality, and irregular rhythms, but his work is on the whole conservative Outstanding works are a setting (1931) of Matthew Arnold's "Dover Beach" for voice and string quartet, an overture (1932) to The School for Scandal, Adagio for Strings (1936), two symphonies (1936, 1944), Essay for Orchestra (1937) and Second Essay for Orchestra (1942), Capricorn Concerto (1944), a ballet, Medea (1946), to which Martha Graham's Cave of the Heart is danced, and Knoxville Summer of 1915, for soprano and orchestra (1947)

Barberini, Francesco (franchās'kō barbärē'nē), 1597–1679, Italian prelate and Orientalist, a cardinal of the Roman Church He was a founder of the library at Rome noted for rare manuscripts, many of these are now in the library of the Vatican

Barberini vase see PORTLAND VASE

barberry, any plant of the genus Berberis, widely distributed spiny shrubs, often cultivated for hedges Some have brilliant fall foliage and some, not hardy, are evergreen The berries are red or blackish and often winter persistent, those of the common or European barberry (Berberis vulgaris) and American barberry (Berberis canadensis) are used for jelly A yellow dye and a medicament have been obtained from the roots, particularly of the common barberry that has been naturalized in North America but is being eradicated because it harbors one stage of the wheat RUST, the Japanese barberry does not harbor this rust See also OREGON GRAPE

Barberton, city (pop 24,028), NE Ohio, on Lake Anna and SW of Akron, laid out 1891 Matches, chemicals, and rubber products are made here

Barbey d'Aurevilly, Jules Amédée (zhül' āmādā' bärbā' dōrvēyē'), 1809–89, French novelist, who long survived the romantics, his true school His novels, of which the best is perhaps Les Diaboliques (1874), have an affinity with those of FLAUBERT in their portrayal of Norman provincial life and in their sordid psychological realism Unlike Flaubert, Barbey d'Aurevilly was a monarchist and an aristocrat who never tired of attacking democracy, materialism, and naturalism His output of critical and polemical articles was enormous See Sir Edmund Gosse's preface to Ernest Boyd's translation of Les Diaboliques (1925)

Barbier, Antoine Alexandre (ätwän' älĕksä'dru bärbyā'), 1765–1825, French bibliographer and government librarian His outstanding work was a great bibliography of anonymous and pseudonymous works in French and Latin (1806–8, 3d ed , 1872–79)

Barbieri, Giovanni Francesco see GUERCINO

Barbirolli, John (–rōl'–), 1899–, English conductor, studied at the Royal Academy of Music After being cellist (1920–24) of the International String Quartet, in 1925 he organized the Barbirolli Chamber Orchestra He was conductor of the Covent Garden Opera (1927–33) and then of both the Leeds Symphony and the Scottish Orchestra (1933–36) He conducted the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra from 1937 to 1942, succeeding Toscanini After 1943 Barbirolli conducted the Hallé Orchestra, Manchester, England

Barbizon school, also called Fontainebleau school, an informal school of French landscape painting which flourished c 1830–1870 Its name derives from the village of Barbizon (Seine-et-Marne dept) near the forest of Fontainebleau, a favorite resort of the painters associated with the school, who are also designated as the "Men of Thirty" Theodore Rousseau, sometimes called the "hermit of Barbizon," was the chief figure of the group, which included Corot and Millet as well as such landscapists as Jules Dupré, Diaz de la Peña, Constant Troyon, Charles Daubigny, and Charles Jacque These men reacted against the conventions of classical and Italianate landscape and advocated a direct study of nature Their approach was in part inspired by English romanticism with its cult for the sublime and picturesque aspects of nature, and their work was strongly influenced by 17th-century Dutch landscape masters such as Ruisdael, Cuyp, and Hobbema The Barbizon painters, with their insistence on a relatively straightforward, unpretentious rendering of landscape, helped pave the way for the subsequent development of the realist and impressionist schools Paintings of the Barbizon school were very popular with American collectors of the late 19th and early 20th cent and influenced American painters of this period The school is well represented in American public collections, notably the Corcoran Gallery, the Metropolitan Museum, and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston See Arthur Hoeber, The Barbizon Painters (1915)

Barbon, Praise-God see BAREBONE, PRAISE-GOD

Barbosa, Ruy or Rui (both rōō'ē bŭrbō'su), 1849–1923, Brazilian philosopher of the law He was a noted jurist and a member of the World Court (the Permanent Court of International Justice) He was largely responsible for the republican constitution of Brazil and was the champion of law and liberty He admired the British system and urged Brazil to adopt a modified form of it He was remarkable as a linguist and as a stylist in his writing

Barbour, John (bär'bur), c 1320–1395, Scottish poet, archdeacon of Aberdeen His poem The Bruce (1375), chronicling the deeds of ROBERT I (Robert the Bruce), is a romance of considerable historical value Many scholars deny Barbour's reputed authorship of a fragmentary Troy-Book, the Scottish Legends of the Saints, and the Buik of Alexander See W W Skeat, ed , The Bruce (1894)

Barboursville, town (pop 1,550), W W Va , at the confluence of the Mud and Guyandot rivers near Huntington, chartered 1813 A state hospital is here

Barbourville, city (pop 2,420), co seat of Knox co , S Ky , in a valley of the Cumberland river and NW of Middlesboro, founded 1800 Union College (Methodist, coeducational, opened 1880) is here The area produces coal, timber, horses, and farm products Near by is Dr Thomas Walker State Park, with a replica of a log cabin built in 1750, the first home of white people in Kentucky

Barbuda, British West Indies see ANTIGUA

Barbusse, Henri (ärē' bärbüs'), 1873–1935, French journalist and author His realistic story of the First World War, Le Feu (1916, Eng tr , Under Fire, 1917), won the Prix Goncourt and gained for Barbusse an international reputation Other works are L'Enfer (1908, Eng tr , The Inferno, 1918), Les Enchaînements (1925, Eng tr , Chains, 1925), and Jésus (1927, Eng tr , 1927) He died in Moscow

Barca, surname given members of a Carthaginian family see HAMILCAR BARCA, HANNIBAL, HASDRUBAL

barcarole or barcarolle (bär'kurōl") [Ital and Fr , = little boat], boat song made popular by Venetian gondoliers or any musical composition which suggests the characteristic manner and rhythm of the Venetian boat song, such as the Barcarolle from Tales of Hoffmann by Jacques Offenbach

Barcelona (barsulō'nu, Span bärthälō'na), city (pop 1,079,601), capital of Barcelona prov and chief city of Catalonia, NE Spain, on the Mediterranean The second largest city of Spain, it is Spain's largest port and chief commercial and industrial center and is the seat of a university (founded 1450) and of many other educational institutions Machinery, locomotives, automobiles, airplanes, and electrical equipment are the chief manufactures The city flourished under the Romans and Visigoths, fell to the Moors (8th cent), and was taken (801) by Charlemagne, who included it in the Spanish March In the 9th to 10th cent the march became independent under the leadership of the powerful counts of Barcelona, who wrested lands to the south from the Moors, thus acquiring all CATALONIA, and also won suzerainty over several fiefs in S France The marriage of Count RAYMOND BERENGAR IV to the heiress of ARAGON united (1137) the two lands under one dynasty, the title count of Barcelona was subsequently borne by the kings of Aragon and later the kings of Spain Under its strong municipal government Barcelona vastly expanded its trade and its cloth industry and flourished as a banking center As the capital of the kings of Aragon it gave the chief impetus to their expansion throughout the Mediterranean, Reaching its peak around 1400, it later shared in the general decline of Catalonia, but enjoyed a period of prosperity as the embarkation point of the armies of Emperor Charles V Barcelona was always the stronghold of Catalan separatism and the scene of many insurrections Later it also became the Spanish center of socialism, syndicalism, anarchism, and other radical creeds It was the capital of the Catalan autonomous government (1932–39) and was the seat of the Spanish Loyalist government from Oct , 1938, until its fall to Franco, Jan. 26, 1939. It was repeatedly bombed during the civil war; several historical buildings were damaged, including the imposing Gothic Cathedral of Santa Eulalia (14th -15th cent) with its fine cloisters A handsome modern city, Barcelona also has many fine ancient buildings, notably the Church of Santa María del Mar, the city hall, and the exchange, all of the 14th cent There also are some Roman remains

Barclay, Alexander (bär'klē), 1475?–1552, English poet and divine A Benedictine and later a Franciscan monk, he became after the suppression of the monasteries (1552) rector of All Hallows, London He is best known for The Ship of Fools (1509), a translation of Sebastian Brant's satirical poem Das Narrenschiff

Barclay, John, 1734–98, minister of the Church of Scotland and founder of the BEREANS or Barclayites His Without Faith, without God (1769) and other works were not acceptable to his presbytery, and he was prohibited from preaching His adherents then united in independent congregations and Barclay became minister of the one at Edinburgh Later he had the foundations for a Berean church in London

Barclay, Robert, 1648–90, Scottish apologist for the Society of Friends He wrote many controversial works but is best known for his great treatise, An Apology for the True Christian Divinity, as . Preached by the People Called in Scorn, Quakers, which appeared in Latin in 1676 and two years later in English The duke of York (later James II) granted a patent of the province of East Jersey to 12 members of the Society of Friends, Barclay was nominal governor (1682–88), but he never went to America His collected works were published in 1692 as Truth Triumphant See biography by M C Cadbury (1912)

Barclay de Tolly, Mikhail, Prince (mēkhŭyĕl', bŭrklē' du tô'lyē), 1761–1818, Russian field marshal, of Scottish descent He achieved prominence in the Napoleonic Wars, was appointed minister of war in 1810, and commanded the Russian forces against Napoleon in 1812 His policy of continuous retreat into the heart of Russia and his defeat at Smolensk (Aug 17–18) resulted in his being replaced by Kutuzov, but his successor, recognizing the soundness of the strategy, followed the same road After Kutuzov's death (1813) he again commanded the Russian forces and distinguished himself at Leipzig and in the capture of Paris

Bar Cochba, Simon see BAR KOKBA, SIMON

Bard, John, 1716–99, American physician, b Burlington, N J He practiced in Philadelphia and in New York city, where he was a leader in establishing on Bedloe's Island the first quarantine station He was the city's first health officer and the first president of the Medical Society of the State of New York His more noted son, Samuel Bard, 1742–1821, b Philadelphia, M D Univ of Edinburgh, 1765 was a founder (1767) and faculty member of the medical school of King's College (later Columbia Univ) and was its dean from 1792 to 1807, in 1813 this school was absorbed by the College of Physicians and Surgeons, of which Bard was president (1811–21) He was also a founder of the New York Hospital and the New York Dispensary His writings include a standard manual on midwifery (1807), as well as valuable contributions on diphtheria and other diseases of humans, on diseases and breeding of sheep, and on medical education See J B Langstaff, Doctor Bard of Hyde Park (1942)

bard, in Wales, a minstrel and poet who served as a national chronicler and enjoyed many of the privileges of the nobility, regardless of his birth The position of bards was formally established in 940 by King Howel Dha The order became hereditary, and its perquisites were fixed in the law, which was probably simply the codification of custom Edward I of England broke the power the bards had, but he allowed them to live on After this they became professional poets and singers, dependent on the people in general but highly regarded for their learning and skill The EISTEDDFOD is a bardic institution In Ireland the poets answered to the bards, having similar perquisites and honors, and they have had a somewhat similar history In Scotland, in the Isle of Man, and in Brittany bards are still to be found, but they probably never held the legally powerful position that was theirs in Wales and Ireland There were Cornish bards until the language died out (18th cent) See Edward Jones, Musical and Poetical Relics of the Welsh Bards (4th ed , 1825); W F Skene, Four Ancient Books of Wales (2 vols , 1868)

Bard College, at Annandale-on-Hudson, N Y ; coeducational, founded 1860 as St Stephen's College for men, rechartered 1935 as Bard College, became coeducational 1944 It was affiliated with Columbia Univ from 1928 to 1944

Bardesanes (bärdŭsā'nēz), 154–222?, heretical Christian philosopher and poet of Syria He attacked GNOSTICISM, although his own writings were dualistic He composed 150 hymns, which made his doctrine, a mystical astrology, popular in Syria until the time of St EPHRAEM

Bardia (bärdē'a, bär'dēa), town (pop 2,370), Libya, on the Mediterranean Sea The town, with its port facilities improved, was in the Second World War the most strongly defended Italian position in the British campaign (Dec , 1940–Feb , 1941) in Libya It was taken by the British on Jan 5 In subsequent fighting the town changed hands several times until its final capture by the British under Gen B L Montgomery on Nov 13, 1942

Bardstown, city (pop 3,152), co seat of Nelson co , central Ky , SSE of Louisville, in a rich farm area; settled 1778, inc 1788 The city has distilleries and a flour mill It was a center for early missionary work in the Mississippi valley and the seat of religious institutions founded by Bishop J B M DAVID The monument to John Fitch, whose grave is in Bardstown was erected by the U S Congress In the Civil War the city was occupied (Sept , 1862) by Bragg's invading Confederate army Near by is "Federal Hill" (built 1795–1818), the manor house of John Rowan, it is said that his cousin, Stephen Foster, wrote My Old Kentucky Home here Other places of interest in the area are the Cathedral of St Joseph (1816–19), which has paintings said to have been given by Louis Philippe of France, the Abbey of Our Lady of Gethsemani, a Trappist monastery founded in 1848, and Nazareth Junior College (est 1814) St Catharine Junior College (est 1820), and Loretto Junior College (founded 1812), all for women The city has wide streets with fine trees and many early-19th-century houses

Bardwan, India see BURDWAN

Bardwell, town (pop 1,218), co seat of Carlisle co (formed 1886), SW Ky , near the Mississippi, SW of Paducah It is the trade center for a fertile farm area Tobacco and cotton are among the region's crops

Barebone or Barbon, Praise-God (both bär'bŏn), 1596?—1679, English lay preacher He was a leather merchant Deeply interested in religion, he was a Baptist, then a Fifth Monarchy man In April, 1653, the army dissolved the Rump Parliament In July, Oliver Cromwell and his provisional council assembled 140 "godly men," from a list nominated by Congregational ministers Barebone was London member in this nominated parliament which was called in derision Barebone's Parliament Actually his part in the proceedings was insignificant. The body was composed largely of reformers who initiated a series of measures regarded as radical by most of their compatriots The Parliament met from July until December, when the moderate members willingly and the radical members under compulsion resigned their powers into Cromwell's hands They had accomplished little

Bareilly (burā'lē), city (pop 192,688), E central United Provs , India It was founded in 1657 and was (1707–20) the capital of the Hindu Rohillas Sugar refining is the principal industry

Barents Island. see SPITSBERGEN

Barents Sea (bä'runts, ba'–), arm of the Arctic Ocean, N of Norway and European RSFSR, partially enclosed by Franz Josef Land on the north, Novaya Zemlya on the east, and Spitsbergen on the west Its waters are shallow and are warmed by the remnants of the North Atlantic Drift It was named for Willem Barentz

Barentz or Barents, Willem (both vĭ'lŭm bä'runts), d 1597, Dutch navigator He made three voyages (1594, 1595, 1596) in search of the Northeast Passage to Asia He reached Novaya Zemlya on the first two expeditions On the third he accidentally discovered Spitsbergen, rounded the north point of Novaya Zemlya, and was caught in the ice After the arctic winter the crew started for the mainland in two small boats Barentz died on the way The extent of his explorations and the accuracy of his charts made him one of the most important of all arctic explorers

Barère de Vieuzac, Bertrand (bĕrträ' bărĕr' du vyŭzăk'), 1755–1841, French revolutionist A prominent member of the National Assembly and of the Convention, he turned from a moderate to a radical stand. He voted for the execution of Louis XVI and became a member of the Committee of Public Safety, but when Robespierre fell on 9 Thermidor, Barère drew up the report outlawing him (1794) Imprisoned for his own part in the Terror, he escaped, remained in hiding for several years, and reappeared as a secret agent of Napoleon Banished (1815) after the Bourbon restoration, he returned in the reign of Louis Philippe

Barfrush, Iran. see BABOL.

barge, large, flat-bottomed boat used for transporting goods on inland waterways Barges on canals are mostly towed, but some river barges are self-propelled There are also sailing barges On the Great Lakes huge steel barges are used for heavy transport Towing, done in the past by men or horses or mules, is now mostly by steam or motor tugboat or by other barges equipped with semi-Diesel engines. Barges have been used since the dawn of history; they were common on the Nile in ancient Egypt Some of them were highly decorated and used for carrying royalty Use of such state barges persisted in Europe until quite recent times See also LIGHTER

Barge Canal see NEW YORK STATE BARGE CANAL

Bargello (bärjĕl'lō), 13th-century palace in Florence, Italy, which houses the national museum Once the residence of the highest city official but later used as a prison and as the office of the chief of police (bargello), it was restored (1857) to receive the art treasures of the city Giotto's frescoes, with the famous portrait of Dante, are in the chapel The Bargello is famous for its courtyard and its Renaissance sculptures, including Michelangelo's David and works by Verocchio, Donatello, Cellini, and others

Barham, Richard Harris (bär'ăm), pseud Thomas Ingoldsby (ĭng'gōldbĭ), 1788–1845, English humorist, educated at St Paul's School and at Oxford In 1824 he became a priest in ordinary of the Chapel Royal He wrote a novel, My Cousin Nicholas (1834), and in 1837 began in Bentley's miscellany, under his pseudonym, a series of parodies of country superstitions, medieval legends, and contemporary foibles, (The Ingoldsby Legends), in fluent colloquial prose or in grotesque verse Barham had a lively invention, a gift of creating suspense, and an unusually discerning sense of the ludicrous See George Saintsbury, "Three Humorists," in Collected Essays (1923)

Bar Harbor, town (pop 4,378), on Mt Desert Island, S Maine, SE of Bangor, inc 1796 The site was not permanently occupied until 1763 Developing as a summer resort in the middle of the 19th cent , the town became one of the most famous on the New England coast It is a port of entry In Oct , 1947 it was ravaged by forest fires but rebuilding started immediately Among the buildings destroyed was the Roscoe B Jackson Laboratory for Cancer Research, which began reconstruction in May, 1948

Bar-Hebraeus, Gregorius (bär-hēbrē'ŭs) [Syriac, = son of a Hebrew] 1226–86, Syrian scholar, catholicos of the Jacobite church, partly Jewish in ancestry His original name was Abu-l-Faraj His most celebrated work is a chronicle in Syriac of the world from Adam down His commentaries (in Arabic and Syriac) on Aristotle were widely known among Arabic-speaking scholars

Barhumite (bärhū'–, bar'hŭ–) see BAHURIM

Bari (bä'rē), city (pop 162,238) capital of Apulia and of Bari prov , S Italy, called in fuller form Bari delle Puglie It is an Adriatic seaport and the center of a fertile agricultural area It has textile, food, and printing industries Probably of Illyrian origin, it was a Roman colony and later passed under the Goths, Lombards, and Byzantines The Normans conquered Bari in 1071 It became the chief city of Apulia, from which many crusaders sailed Enfeoffed to the kingdom of Naples, Bari was during the Middle Ages a duchy ruled by powerful lords The Romanesque basilica, with relics of St NICHOLAS of Bari, is a major place of pilgrimage Bari has a fine cathedral with an ancient baptistery a medieval castle, a museum of antiquities, and a university (founded 1924) The port was heavily bombarded by the Germans in 1943–44

Bariah (bărī'u) [Heb , = bolt], one of the house of David 1 Chron 3 22

Baring, Alexander see ASHBURTON, ALEXANDER BARING, 1ST BARON

Baring, Maurice (bā'rĭng), 1874–1945, English author He was in the diplomatic service (1898–1904), then a war correspondent (1904–12) He is best known for his volumes on Russia, A Year in Russia (1905–6), The Russian People (1911), and An Outline of Russian Literature (1914) His other works include The Green Elephant (1911), a play, C (1924), Daphne Adeane (1926), and Tinker's Leave (1927), novels, Selected Poems (1930), The Puppet Show of Memory (1922), reminiscences, and Have You Anything to Declare (1936), one of his famous notebooks See E M Smyth, Maurice Baring (1938)

Baring-Gould, Sabine (bā'rĭng-gōōld'), 1834–1924, English novelist and folklorist, a clergyman Among his diverse works are the novels John Herring (1883) and The Broom Squire (1896) and folklore studies such as The Book of Were Wolves (1865) and Curious Myths of the Middle Ages (1866–68) He was the author of the well-known hymn Onward, Christian Soldiers (1865), for which Sir Arthur Sullivan later wrote the tune St Gertrude barite (bā'rīt), barytes (burī'tēz) [new Latin from barium], or heavy spar, a white, yellow, blue, red, or colorless mineral It is a sulphate of barium, found in nature in tabular crystals or in granular or massive form It occurs often mixed with other minerals in veins It is insoluble in water, and this property is made use of in testing for the SULPHATE radical It is practically insoluble under ordinary conditions in all the usual chemical reagents Barite is used as a commercial source of barium and many of its compounds, in making white paint, and as a filler in various glazed papers It is a constituent of LITHOPONE The mineral is abundant and is found widely distributed throughout the world.

Barito (bärē'tō), river of S Borneo, rising in the central mountains and flowing c 550 mi generally S to the Java Sea Banjermasin is near its mouth baritone or barytone (both bă'rĭ–), male voice, in range lighter and higher than a BASS but lower than a TENOR. It is also an alternate name for the viola da gamba.

barium (bā'–) [New Latin from Gr , = heavy], silvery-white, active, poisonous metallic element (symbol = Ba, for physical constants, see ELEMENT, table) It oxidizes in the air, ionizes in solution, and reacts with water to form the hydroxide and to liberate hydrogen It belongs to the periodic group of divalent elements which includes also magnesium, calcium, strontium, and radium Barium is classed as a metal of the ALKALINE EARTHS, with calcium and strontium, which it resembles chemically It forms numerous compounds, with oxygen it forms a monoxide (baryta) and a peroxide which is used in removing oxygen from the air (Brin's process) and in the preparation of hydrogen peroxide, with chlorine it forms barium chloride used in testing for sulphuric acid in chemical analysis, with the sulphate radical it forms barium sulphate, called BARITE (or barytes or heavy spar), which, mixed with zinc, constitutes LITHOPONE, and with chromium and oxygen it forms barium chromate, which has limited use as a yellow pigment The metal does not occur free in nature but chiefly in such compounds as the carbonate (called also witherite) and the sulphate Barium metal is obtained by the electrolysis of fused barium chloride Its compounds are prepared usually from either the sulphate or the carbonate Barium salts are poisonous (for treatment, see POISONING, table) and because of this property have limited uses They produce a green flame when held in a Bunsen burner (the FLAME test for barium compounds) and consequently are used in pyrotechny to give green light The spectrum shows orange and green lines The metal was first prepared by Sir Humphry Davy in 1808

barium sulphate see BARITE

Bar-jesus [Gr from Aramaic, = son of Joshua], called Elymas (ĕl'ĭmăs), Jewish sorcerer at Paphos who tried to divert a prospective Christian convert Acts 13 4–12

Bar-jona (–jō'–) [Aramaic, = son of Jonah], patronymic of St Peter Mat 16 17 Peter's father is called Jonas AV and John RV John 21 15,16,17 He is called Jona AV at John 1 42

bark, outer covering of the stems and roots of plants, best developed in woody plants It is composed of an outer portion, called the cork layer in trees, and an inner portion, the BAST It is separated from the WOOD by the CAMBIUM The bark of some trees, particularly hemlock, oak, and acacia, supplies TANNIN used in tanning Latex, a source of rubber and gutta percha, is a secretion of living tissue in the bark Bark also furnishes cork (see CORK OAK), textile fibers from the bast, dyes, cinnamon, and medicinal drugs The white papery bark of the birch was used by the Indians for making canoes

bark or barque (both bärk), sailing vessel with three masts The mainmast and the foremast are square-rigged, the mizzenmast is fore-and-aft-rigged Though once the word was used to mean any small boat, the modern bark may be quite large (up to 6,000 tons) Many large barks were used to carry wheat from Australia to England in the Second World War In 1926 the bark Beatrice sailed from Fremantle, Western Australia, to London in 86 days A four-master bark is a four-masted ship that is fore-and-aft-rigged on the aftermast A barkentine is a three-masted vessel with the foremast square-rigged and the other masts fore-and-aft-rigged

bark cloth, primitive fabric made in tropical and subtropical countries from the soft inner bark of certain trees It has been made and used in parts of Africa and India, the Malay Peninsula, Samoa, the Hawaiian Islands, and the Fiji Islands and perhaps reached its highest perfection in Polynesia and parts of Central America Lengths of branches or of young stems are cut from trees, such as the fig, the breadfruit, or the paper mulberry The outer bark is removed, the inner bark is cut in narrow strips and then alternately soaked and beaten with a grooved or carved wooden mallet, or beetle, until the fibers are well matted and become thin and flexible Gum is sometimes added, and pieces may be joined and beaten together to form large sheets The peeling and beetling are usually done by the men, the decorating, by the women Patterns, often elaborate, may be sketched or may be applied by block printing or by leaves dipped in dye and pressed on the cloth The cloth may be gummed or oiled to make it waterproof Tapa cloth is a fine variety made in the Pacific islands. Bark cloth is used for loincloths, skirts, draperies, and wall hangings, in layers 2 or 3 ft high it makes an excellent bed So ancient is the art of making the cloth that it is deeply involved in religious and ceremonial life. In Borneo a strip of the cloth signifies mourning In Nyasaland it forms the initiation dress of girls In India some sects prescribe either skins or bark cloth as the dress of a religious recluse

Barker, Albert Smith, 1843–1916, U.S naval officer, b Hanson, Mass , grad Annapolis, 1862 In the Civil War he participated in the capture of New Orleans and the reduction of Port Hudson He made (1882–86) extensive deep-sea soundings and later was attached to the Bureau of Navigation.

After he was made a member of the naval board of strategy, he commanded the cruiser Newark in the bombardment of Santiago in the Spanish-American War Barker relieved (1899) Admiral George Dewey as commander of the Asiatic Fleet He became (1903) commander of the Atlantic Fleet, retired (March, 1905) from the navy, and was promoted (Oct , 1905) to the rank of rear admiral See his autobiography, Everyday Life in the Navy (1928)

Barker, Benjamin Fordyce, 1818–91, American physician, b Wilton, Maine, M D Bowdoin College, 1841 He taught midwifery at Bowdoin, was professor of obstetrics at New York Medical College (1850–57) and at Bellevue Hospital Medical College (1860–91), and was a founder of the New York Academy of Medicine and of the American Gynecological Society His Puerperal Diseases (1874) was translated into many languages

Barker, Eugene Campbell, 1874–, American historian, b Walker co , Texas, grad Univ of Texas (B A., 1899, M A , 1900), Ph D Univ of Pennsylvania, 1908 He taught history steadily at the Univ of Texas after 1899 except for a short time He became the outstanding authority on the history of American settlement in Texas and the history of the republic of Texas Notable are his biography of Stephen F Austin (1925), his Mexico and Texas, 1821–1835 (1928), and his edition (with Amelia W. Williams) of the writings of Sam Houston (8 vols , 1938–43)

Barker, Harley Granville- see GRANVILLE-BARKER

Barker, Sir Herbert Atkinson, 1869–, English specialist in manipulative surgery Although his standing was not recognized by the medical profession, he was knighted in 1922 for his successful work in the First World War, particularly in treating cases of joint derangement See his Leaves from My Life (1927)

Barker, James Nelson, 1784–1858, American playwright, b Philadelphia In 1838 Van Buren appointed him comptroller of the Treasury, and with slight interruptions he worked in the Treasury Dept until his death He wrote 10 plays, five of which have survived in print The best were The Indian Princess (1808), The Court of Love (1836, pub in 1817 as How to Try a Lover), and Superstition (1824), a play of colonial New England, possessing unusual tragic power A dramatization (1812) of Scott's Marmion had extraordinary success and held a place in American repertoires for 30 years Aside from his merits as a dramatist, Barker is important for his use of American material and themes, unusual in his period See biography by P H Musser (1929)

Barking, municipal borough (1931 pop 51,270, 1947 estimated pop 78,450), Essex, England, on the Roding It is a suburb of London and is the site of extensive pump works for part of London's water system It manufactures paint and radio parts and has electrical engineering works There are remains of a Benedictine abbey (c 670)

Barkla, Charles Glover (glä'vur bär'klu), 1877–1944, English physicist He was professor of natural philosophy at Edinburgh from 1913 For his discovery of the characteristic X rays of elements he received the 1917 Nobel Prize in Physics He evolved the laws of X-ray scattering and the laws governing the transmission of X rays through matter and excitation of secondary rays

Barkley, Alben William, 1877–, Vice President of the United States (1949–), b Graves co , Ky , grad Marvin College (Ky), 1897, After study (1897–1903) at Emory College law school and the Univ of Virginia law school, he was admitted to the bar (1901) and was prosecuting attorney (1905–9) and judge (1909–13) for McCracken co , Ky. He served as Representative (1913–27) and then as Senator (1927–49) from Kentucky A loyal Democratic party man, he was majority leader (1937–46) in the Senate before he was elected Vice President with President Truman

Bar Kokba, Simon, or Simon Bar Cochba (kōk'bu) [Hebrew, = son of the stars], d 135, Hebrew hero and leader of the third revolt against Rome under Hadrian (131–135) He claimed to be a second Messiah, his personality and the facts of his life are surrounded by legend He is sometimes called Simon the Prince of Israel At first he successfully defeated the Roman armies, but the tide turned against him with the victories of the Roman general Julius Severus, and he was killed at Bether

Barkos (-kŏs), ancestor of a family of Nethinim Ezra 2 53; Neh. 7 55.

Barlaam and Josaphat (bär'läum, jō'sufăt), popular romance found in many languages It is a Christianized version of the Buddha legend, written (c.980) as a Greek tale by Euthymius, a Georgian monk Incorporated in it are bits of fable from many sources, saints' lives, and virtually the entire apology of St Aristides The many Western versions (including that of The Golden Legend) derive from a Latin translation (1048) of the Greek. The story tells of a young Indian prince, Barlaam, who was converted to Christianity by the hermit Josaphat (or Joasaph). The story is sometimes falsely attributed to St. John of Damascus.

Barlach, Ernst (ĕrnst' bar'läkh), 1870–1938, German sculptor and writer After studying at the Dresden Art Academy he lived in Paris (1895–96) and in Berlin, Hamburg, and other German cities Barlach's work is characterized by simplicity of detail and clean, bold line, his subjects are usually common people, treated realistically and sympathetically One of his best-known sculptures is Der Berserker, outstanding for its characterization of strength and movement Another well-known example is the bronze war memorial in the cathedral at Güstrow (head detail in the Mus of Modern Art, New York), where he settled after 1910 He also worked in wood, terra cotta, and porcelain and made portrait busts He illustrated some of his poems and plays, which include Der tote Tag (1912), Der arme Vetter (1918) Die echten Sedemunds (1920), Die Findling (1922), Die Sündflut (1924), and Die gute Zeit (1929)

Bar-le-Duc (bär-lŭ-dük'), town (pop 14,015), capital of Meuse dept , NE France It has textile mills and processes wine and foods, notably jellies and preserves Situated in the picturesque Ornain valley, Bar-le-Duc has preserved many houses built in the 16th, 17th, and 18th cent It was the capital of the county (later duchy) of Bar, an irregularly shaped area stretching from the Marne to the Luxembourg frontier In 1301 Philip IV of France forced Henry, count of Bar, to do homage to France for his lands W of the Meuse (including Bar-le-Duc), the rest remaining a fief of the Holy Roman Empire The duchy passed (15th cent) to RENÉ of Anjou, later also duke of Lorraine Bar from then on shared the history of LORRAINE, with which it passed to France in 1766

Barletta (barlĕt'tä), city (pop 51,597), Apulia, S Italy, a seaport on the Adriatic and an agricultural and commercial center It has a fine cathedral (12th 15th cent), the Church of Santo Sepolcro (with 12th-century frescoes), a medieval castle, and a huge bronze statue of a Byzantine emperor North of Barletta are the largest saltworks in Italy

barley, cereal grass (Hordeum vulgare), cultivated by man probably as early as any cereal It was known to the ancient Greeks, Romans, Chinese, and Egyptians and was the chief bread material in Europe as late as the 16th cent It has a wide range of cultivation and matures even at high altitudes, since its growing period is short It is a valuable stock feed and is used for malting when the grain is of high quality It is a minor source of flour and breakfast foods Varieties, which are usually classified as being six-rowed, four-rowed, or two-rowed, have been developed for specific uses, e g , the six-rowed for feeding and the two-rowed for malting, although some varieties may be grown for either purpose, depending on culture and growing conditions Fields of barley make good winter pasture Barley is attacked by several diseases including smut and rust

Barlow, Francis Channing, 1834–96, Union general in the Civil War, New York state official, b Brooklyn, N Y , grad Harvard, 1855 He served in the Army of the Potomac, attaining the rank of major general of volunteers after conspicuous service at Antietam and in the Gettysburg and Wilderness campaigns Barlow was elected New York secretary of state in 1865 and 1869 and attorney general in 1871 He had charge of the prosecution of the Tweed Ring (see TWEED, WILLIAM MARCY)

Barlow, Jane, 1857–1917, Irish author Her works, chiefly on Irish peasant life, include the tales Irish Idylls (1892) and the poems and stories in Ghostbereft (1901)

Barlow, Joel, 1754–1812, American writer and diplomat, b Redding, Conn , grad Yale, 1778 He served as a chaplain in the Revolutionary army and entered business and journalism at Hartford, Conn He was one of the CONNECTICUT WITS and contributed to their satirical political poem, The Anarchiad (1786–87) His own epic, The Vision of Columbus (1787), brought him fame in America and Europe and was revised later as The Columbiad (1807) In 1788 he went to France as agent for an Ohio land company, the venture failed, but he remained abroad for 17 years, becoming a friend of Thomas Paine and one of the most liberal thinkers of his day His political creed is best seen in his prose Advice to the Privileged Orders (1792), urging that the state must represent not a class but the people and must be responsible for the individual's welfare His Letter to the National Convention of France on the Defects in the Constitution of 1791 was an able critique and won him French citizenship His best-known lighter work is a mock eulogy, The Hasty-Pudding, written in Savoy in 1793 Appointed U S consul to Algiers in 1795, he succeeded in releasing many American prisoners and negotiating treaties with Algiers, Tunis, and Tripoli He returned to Washington in 1805 Sent to Europe in 1811 to negotiate a commercial treaty with Napoleon, he went to Wilno for an interview with the emperor, but was caught in the retreat of the armies from Moscow and died from exposure. See C B. Todd, Life and Letters of Joel Barlow (1886), T A Zunder, The Early Days of Joel Barlow (1934); Leon Howard, The Connecticut Wits (1943).

Barlow, Peter, 1776–1862, English mathematician. He was professor at the Royal Military Academy from 1806 to 1847 He wrote New Mathematical and Philosophical Dictionary (1814), Essay on Magnetic Attractions (1820), and Tables of Squares, Cubes, Square Roots, Cube Roots and Reciprocals of All Integer Numbers up to 12,500 (reissue of 4th ed , 1947)

Barmecides see HARUN-AL-RASHID

Barmen, Germany see WUPPERTAL

Barmouth (bär'muth), urban district (pop 2,489), Merionethshire, Wales, on the estuary of the Mawddach It is a resort on a strip of land between the sea and a hillside Llanaber Church (early 13th cent) is near by barn. American experience of winning a wild land for civilization repeats experience elsewhere and makes some of the beginnings obvious Civilization is based on agriculture The home is supported by the farm, and an adequate barn must be built even when the adequate house must wait until the work symbolized by the barn can build and maintain it The barn comes first and dominates the farm buildings When plowing was done by oxen, the barn was their shelter The width of an ox stall is regularly 4 ft , a "short yoke" of two oxen requires 8 ft. of stall room, a "long yoke" of four oxen requires 16 ft The length of a barn tends to be some multiple of 8 or 16 ft Sixteen feet becomes a normal length for boards, and dimensions of houses tend to be such as will utilize 16-foot boards without waste, as 20 ft or 24 ft An economical way of enlarging the barn is by building a lean-to along each side and another across the rear The barn then takes the form of a Gothic church, with nave, side aisles, choir, and clerestory That the church, like the home, was influenced by the barn has been suggested See S O Addy, The Evolution of the English House (1898, rev ed , 1933) For information as to building barns, see publications of the U S Dept of Agriculture

Barnabas, Saint (bar'nubus) [etymology unclear, see Acts 4 36], apostle a Cypriote, missionary companion of Paul and of Mark, his relative His forename was Joses AV, Joseph RV Acts 4 36,37, 9 27, 11 22–15 41, 1 Cor 9 6, Gal 2 1,9,13, Col 4 10 He is said to have been martyred in Cyprus One of the oldest Christian PSEUDEPIGRAPHA is an epistle attributed to Barnabas He is named in the Canon of the Mass Feast June 11

barnacle, marine crustacean usually found attached to rocks, stones, seaweed, wharf piles, ships, and marine animals The body of the adult barnacle is covered with shell-like plates There are usually six pairs of plumelike legs, with which a current is created for drawing food to the mouth Some forms, such as the goose barnacles, are attached by fleshy stalks to ships or driftwood No stalks are found in the group which includes the acorn or rock barnacle The use on ships of plastic paint and paint containing DDT helps to prevent the attachment of barnacles

Barnard, Edward Emerson (bar'nurd), 1857–1923, American astronomer, b Nashville, Tenn , grad Vanderbilt Univ , 1887 From 1887 to 1895 he was astronomer at Lick Observatory in California, and from 1895 he was professor of practical astronomy at the Univ of Chicago and astronomer at Yerkes Observatory The discoverer of 16 comets and of Jupiter's fifth satellite (1892), he was given distinguished recognition by the Academy of Sciences of France and the Royal Astronomical Society of Great Britain His photographs of comets, planets, nebulae, and the Milky Way are notable contributions to astronomy

Barnard, Frederick Augustus Porter, 1809–89, American educator and mathematician, b Sheffield, Mass , grad Yale, 1828 After tutoring at Yale and teaching in institutions for the deaf and mute, he was professor of mathematics and natural history at the Univ of Alabama from 1837 to 1854 and of mathematics and natural philosophy at the Univ of Mississippi from 1854 He served there as president (1856–58) and chancellor (1858–61), resigning at the outbreak of the Civil War After a period of research in astronomy and after work as head of the map and chart department of the U S Coast Survey, he was selected to succeed Charles King as president of Columbia College (now Columbia Univ) During his long administration (1864–89), he expanded the curriculum, added departments, supported the sciences, and fostered the development of the School of Mines. He extended the elective system and advocated equal educational privileges for men and women Barnard College, the woman's undergraduate unit of Columbia, was named for him and opened shortly after his death Barnard was active in founding the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the National Academy of Sciences He edited Johnson's Universal Cyclopaedia and wrote many addresses, articles, books, and pamphlets in the fields of mathematics, physics, economics, and education. His annual reports on Columbia, outstanding discussions of current educational progress, have been edited by W F Russell in The Rise of a University, Vol. I (1937) See memoirs by John Fulton (1896).

Barnard, George Grey, 1863–1938, American sculptor, b Bellefonte, Pa He studied engraving, then sculpture, first at the Art Institute of Chicago, then in the École des Beaux-Arts, Paris His first exhibition was held in Paris in 1894 Two Natures, exhibited then, is now in the Metropolitan Museum Brotherly Love, another early work, is in Langesund, Norway Several figures for the new state capitol at Harrisburg, Pa , were completed in 1912 A colossal statue of Lincoln in 1917 was the subject of heated controversy because of its rough-hewn features and slouching stance It is now in Manchester, England, and a replica is in Cincinnati Interested in medieval art, Barnard gathered in French villages discarded fragments of Gothic art This collection he established near his home on Washington Heights, New York city, in a building which he called the CLOISTERS Others of Barnard's sculptures are The God Pan (Columbia Univ campus), The Hewer (Cairo, Ill), and Rising Woman and Adam and Eve (both Rockefeller estate, at Pocantico Hills, N Y) At the time of his death he was at work on the 100-foot Rainbow Arch, a memorial to peace

Barnard, Henry, 1811–1900 American educator, b Hartford, Conn , grad Yale, 1830 He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1835 As a member (1837–39) of the Connecticut legislature, he originated and secured the passage in 1838 of an act to provide for the better supervision of the common schools Horace Mann had carried through a similar reform in Massachusetts in 1837, and the two men became leaders in the movement to reform the common schools of the country Barnard was secretary of the Connecticut board of commissioners of common schools from 1838 to 1842 and performed pioneer work in school inspection recommendation of textbooks, organization of teachers' institutes and parents' and teachers' meetings, and the framing of additional legislative measures on education He also edited the Connecticut Common School Journal and made valuable reports, including a survey of the existing school system A political overturn in Connecticut in 1842 abolished his office and entire program In 1843 Barnard was selected to survey the common school system of Rhode Island and instituted similar reforms there, as well as starting school libraries and revising examination methods In 1849 he returned to Connecticut, where his program had been reestablished, to serve as superintendent of schools and principal of the new state normal school at New Britain Ill-health compelled his resignation in 1855 In 1858 he accepted the chancellorship of the Univ of Wisconsin and in two years there did much for the state's common school system Again illness forced him to rest He became president of St John's College, Annapolis, in 1866, but resigned in 1867 to become the first U S commissioner of education Barnard had long urged the establishment of a Federal agency to gather and disseminate educational information and statistics, which had been collected for the first time in the census of 1840 As commissioner he planned and organized the work of this agency and prepared extensive reports on education in this country and abroad and on school legislation The appropriation for his work was cut, however, thus sharply circumscribing his plans, and Barnard resigned in 1870 He continued the publication of the American Journal of Education (31 vols , 1855–81, reissued in 1902 with an additional volume dated 1882) This journal, subsidized by Barnard, included translations of many hitherto unavailable European educational classics Some 50 of these treatises were reprinted as Barnard's "Library of Education " See biography by B C Steiner (U S Bureau of Education, Bul 8, 1919), J S Brubacher, ed , Henry Barnard on Education (1931), R C Jenkins and G C Warner, Henry Barnard an Introduction (1947)

Barnard, John Gross, 1815–82, U S army engineer, Union general in the Civil War, b Sheffield, Mass , grad West Point, 1833, brother of Frederick A P Barnard He was superintending engineer in the reconstruction of several port fortifications, and in the Mexican War he built the fortifications at Tampico At the beginning of the Civil War, Barnard was put in charge of the defenses of Washington He was chief engineer of McDowell's army at the first battle of Bull Run (1861) and of McClellan's army in the Peninsular campaign (1862), was made a brigadier general of volunteers in Sept , 1861, and was again (1862–64) in charge of the defenses of Washington In June, 1864, Grant appointed him chief engineer of the armies in the field attached to his staff, and Barnard served in that capacity for the rest of the war After the war he was actively engaged in various engineering duties till his retirement in 1881

Barnard College. see COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

Barnardo, Thomas John (–närˈdō), 1845–1905, British social reformer, b Ireland Pioneering in the care of destitute children, he founded in London in 1867, with the aid of the 7th earl of Shaftesbury, the first of his famous Dr Barnardo Homes These soon spread to all parts of England. The children were taught a trade, and many of them emigrated to Canada. Barnardo was instrumental in securing parliamentary legislation (1891) for child welfare See biography by J W Bready (1930)

Barnato, Barnett (bärnäˈtō), 1852–97, South African financier, b London He was of Jewish origin, and his name was originally Barney Isaacs, he called himself Barney Barnato first when he performed as a comedian In South Africa, by buying worked-out diamond mines in the Kimberley area and mining the abandoned blue earth he made a fortune He increased it by speculation in diamond and gold mines until he was maneuvered by Cecil Rhodes into merging the Kimberley with Rhodes's De Beers interests He was also plunged into politics, which Barnato did not understand He committed suicide by leaping from the S S Scot See biography by Richard Lewinsohn (Eng tr , 1938)

Barnaul (bŭrnōōlˈ), city (pop 148,129), capital of Altai Territory, RSFSR, in SW Siberia, on the Ob river and the Turksib railroad An important transportation point, it was founded in 1738 as a gold- and silver-refining center There are cotton mills and various other manufactures and a rapidly growing chemical industry Barnaul has a meteorological observatory, a geological museum, and a school of mining

Barnave, Antoine Pierre Joseph Marie (ätwänˈ pyĕrˈ zhōzĕfˈ marēˈ barnavˈ), 1761–93, French revolutionist A member of the States-General of 1789, he was a brilliant spokesman of the extreme left When Louis XVI fled in 1791, Barnave was one of those sent to bring him back from Varennes to Paris This experience awakened royalist sympathies in Barnave and led to conferences with MARIE ANTOINETTE Seeking to establish a constitutional monarchy, he supported his former opponent, Mirabeau, and became a leader of the FEUILLANTS Condemned by the Revolutionary Tribunal, he was guillotined His Introduction à la Révolution française (in Œuvres, 1843) anticipates Marx in explaining the Revolution as the result of the evolution of the industrial bourgeoisie See biography by E D Bradby (1915), O G von Heidenstam, ed , The Letters of Marie Antoinette, Fersen, and Barnave (Eng tr , 1926)

Barnay, Ludwig (lōōdˈvĭk bärˈnī), 1842–1924, German actor and theatrical manager He acted (1870–75) at the Staattheater in Frankfurt-am-Main and acted and directed (1875–80) at the Staattheater in Hamburg In 1871 he inaugurated the stage congress at Weimar, out of which developed the stage association Bühnengenossenschaft, of great value to the German theatrical profession

Barnburners, radical element of the Democratic party in New York state from 1843 to 1848, opposed to the conservative HUNKERS The name arose from the story of the Dutchman who burned his barn to get rid of the rats, the implication being that the Barnburners would destroy the corporations and public works to do away with the abuses connected with them The Barnburners also opposed the extension of slavery When the Hunkers captured the Democratic state convention at Syracuse in 1847, the Barnburners seceded and held their own convention Among their leaders were C C Cambreleng, Azariah C Flagg, and Samuel J Tilden Having failed to get recognition at the Democratic national convention of 1848, they nominated Martin VAN BUREN for President and, uniting with the FREE-SOIL PARTY, Charles Francis ADAMS (1807–86) for Vice President Largely because of this Democratic split, the Whig candidate, Zachary Taylor, defeated the regular Democrat, Lewis Cass Many Barnburners remained Free-Soilers and eventually joined the new Republican party See H D A Donovan, The Barnburners (1925)

Barnby, Sir Joseph, 1838–96, English composer, organist, and conductor, studied at the Royal Academy of Music He held many positions as organist and in 1864 organized his own choir for the performance of oratorios In 1872 he succeeded Gounod as conductor of the Royal Choral Society In this position and as conductor (1878–86) of the London Musical Society, he set a high standard of choral music, making many great works, such as Beethoven's Missa Solemnis and Bach's St Matthew Passion, familiar to the London public In 1875 he became precentor and director of music at Eton, in 1892 principal of the Guildhall School of Music He composed an oratorio, anthems, services, songs, piano pieces, and organ pieces, but is known principally for a few of his 246 hymn tunes —Now the Day Is Over and O Perfect Love, which is part of an anthem composed in 1893 for a royal wedding—and for the lullaby Sweet and Low

Barnegat (bärˈnŭgăt), unincorporated village (pop. 881), E N J It is c 2 mi inland from Barnegat Bay.

Barnegat Bay, arm of the Atlantic, c 30 mi long, E N J , entered through Barnegat Inlet between Long Beach island and Island Beach peninsula Barnegat Lighthouse, 168 ft high, built in 1858 on Long Beach at the inlet, was replaced by a lightship in 1930 The borough of Barnegat City (pop 225, inc 1904) grew up near the lighthouse. F. Hopkinson Smith depicted the lives of the fishermen of Barnegat Bay in painting and novels.

Barnes, Albert, 1798–1870, American Presbyterian clergyman, b Rome, N.Y., grad Hamilton College, 1820, and studied theology at Princeton From 1830 he was pastor of the First Church in Philadelphia, mother church of the Presbyterian denomination in America In the schism (1837–70) in Presbyterianism between the strict Calvinists and those whose views had become tinged with New England liberalism, Barnes's opinions and writings placed him with the liberal wing His commentaries on biblical books, published as Notes Explanatory and Practical (rev ed , 6 vols , 1872), attracted wide attention

Barnes, Barnabe, 1569?–1609, English poet His major work is the highly fanciful Parthenophil and Parthenophe Sonnettes, Madrigals, Elegies, and Odes (1593) He also wrote A Divine Centurie of Spirituall Sonnets (1595) and The Divil's Charter (1607), a tragedy

Barnes, Charles Reid, 1858–1910, American botanist He was eminent as a teacher, first at Wisconsin and after 1898 at the Univ of Chicago, and helped stimulate interest in botanical research, especially in plant physiology and in the study of bryophytes He was coeditor with John M Coulter of the Botanical Gazette and wrote Analytic Keys to the Genera and Species of North American Mosses (1896) and Plant Life (1900)

Barnes, Harry Elmer, 1889–, American historian and sociologist, b Auburn, N Y , grad Syracuse Univ (B A , 1913, M A , 1914), Ph D Columbia, 1918 He taught economics, sociology, and history at various institutions of higher learning, notably at the New School for Social Research His wide interests generally centered about the main themes of the development of Western thought and culture His ability to synthesize information from various fields into an intelligible pattern showing human development profoundly affected the teaching of history Notable among the works that show his remarkable sweep and scope are Social History of the Western World (1921), History and Social Intelligence (1926), History of Western Civilization (1935), An Intellectual and Cultural History of the Western World (with some contributions from others, 1937), and Social Thought from Lore to Science (with Howard Becker, 1938) He took great interest in prison reform and became an authority on penology

Barnes, Juliana: see BERNERS, JULIANA

Barnes, William, 1801–86, English poet and philologist, son of a farmer He is best known for his poems in Dorset dialect, the first of which began to appear in local newspapers in 1833 After a career as a schoolmaster, in 1847 he took holy orders Barnes's Poems of Rural Life in the Dorset Dialect were published in three series between 1844 and 1863 Besides a Philological Grammar (1854), comprising examples from more than 60 tongues, he wrote other books on the English language, including Se Gefylsta an Anglo-Saxon Delectus (1849), Two (1862), and A Glossary of the Dorset Dialect (1886) See his Select Poems (ed by Thomas Hardy, 1909), biography by his daughter, Lucy E Baxter (1887)

Barnes, urban district (1931 pop 42,440, 1947 estimated pop 41,440), Surrey, England, on the Thames It is a suburb of London

Barnesboro, industrial borough (pop 3,831), W Pa , in the Alleghenies ENE of Pittsburgh, laid out 1891, inc 1893 Bituminous coal is mined here, and there is a clothing factory

Barnesville 1 City (pop 3,535), co seat of Lamar co , W central Ga , NW of Macon, settled c 1825 inc 1854 It is a processing center in a farm and lumber area Clothing and tire fabric are made Gordon Military College (junior) is here 2 City (pop 1,450), W Minn , SE of Moorhead, in the Red River valley It is a trade center for a farm and dairy region and has railroad shops 3 City (pop 5,002), SE Ohio, SW of St Clairsville, in a mine area

Barnet, urban district (1931 pop 14,726, 1943 estimated pop 25,000), Hertfordshire, England It is divided into various districts—among them Chipping Barnet—and is largely a residential area for London In 1471 Warwick the Kingmaker was killed here in a battle between the Yorkists and the Lancastrians The town holds a three-day horse fair East Barnet is in a separate urban district

Barnet (bärˈnĭt), town (pop 1,596), NE Vt , S of St Johnsbury, bounded on the east by the Connecticut, settled 1770 Henry Stevens, the bibliographer, was born in Barnet Many early settlers were Scottish. At Fifteen-Mile Falls on the Connecticut is a large power plant See F. P Wells, History of Barnet, Vermont (1923).

Barnett, Samuel Augustus (barˈnĕt), 1844–1913, English clergyman and social worker, pioneer in the social settlement movement As vicar of St Jude's, in the slums of London, he persuaded groups of university men to live in the neighborhood and work for community betterment Toynbee Hall, the first social settlement, was an outgrowth of these activities; it was opened in 1884 by Barnett He was also active in the university extension movement In 1893 he was made a canon His wife, Henrietta Octavia Barnett, 1851–1936, worked with him in his projects and collaborated in some of his books, notably Practicable Socialism (1888). She also wrote his biography (1918). Especially interested in housing, Mrs Barnett helped found a model garden suburb at Hampstead In 1924 she was created Dame Commander of the British Empire

Barnett, Samuel Jackson (bärnĕt'), 1873–, American physicist, b Woodson co, Kansas, Ph D Cornell, 1898 He taught at several institutions and was physicist at Carnegie Institution, Washington, D C, from 1918 to 1926 and professor of physics at the Univ of California from 1926 until 1944 He specialized in electricity and magnetism In 1918 he discovered magnetization by rotation He is the author of Elements of Electro-magnetic Theory (1903)

Barneveldt, Jan van Olden see OLDENBARNEVELDT

Barney, Joshua, 1759–1818, American naval hero, b Baltimore He entered the navy early in the American Revolution, undertook daring exploits, and was captured by the British three times, his most famous action was the capture (1782) of the General Monk in Delaware Bay Later (1796–1802) Barney served with distinction in the French navy In the War of 1812 he engaged in large-scale privateering In July, 1814, he was given the task of checking the British push up Chesapeake Bay For several weeks he halted the drive on Washington, and when the British did disembark, he rushed his marines and sailors to Bladensburg There he held the center of the line until the cowardice of the troops led to his being outflanked Barney was wounded and captured See biographies by W F Adams (1912), R D Paine (1924), and Hulbert Footner (1940)

Barnfield, Richard, 1574–1627, English poet, author of The Affectionate Shepherd (1594), Cynthia, with Certain Sonnets (1595), and The Encomion of Lady Pecunia (1598) Two of his poems, "If Music and Sweet Poetry Agree" and "As It Fell upon a Day," were for many years attributed to Shakspere See edition of Barnfield's poems by A B Grosart (1876)

Barnsdall (bärnz'dôl), oil city (pop 1,831), NE Okla, NW of Tulsa It was called Bigheart until 1921

Barnsley, county borough (1931 pop 71,522, 1947 estimated pop 74,410), West Riding of Yorkshire England, N of Sheffield It is the railroad center of a coal region and has ironworks, linen mills, and other industries

Barnstable (bärn'stubul), resort town (pop 8,333), SE Mass, on Cape Cod Its villages include Barnstable, county seat of Barnstable co, Hyannis, and Cotuit, noted for oysters This area was settled in 1639 Several 18th-century buildings remain

Barnstaple (barn'stupul) or Barum (bä'rum), municipal borough (pop 14,700), Devonshire, England on the west coast at the mouth of the Taw A 16-arch stone bridge across the river dates from the early 13th cent Barnstaple is a seaport and has shoe factories and foundries An annual fair attracts many visitors

Barnum, Phineas Taylor, 1810–91, American showman, b Bethel, Conn His first independent venture was the exhibition (1835) of a Negro slave, Joice Heth, who he claimed was the nurse of George Washington Barnum gained fame when he established (1842), the American Museum in New York city by combining Scudder's and Peale's museums Barnum enlivened his museum with a bearded lady and countless other exhibits and by extravagant advertising The dwarf "General Tom Thumb" was one of his major attractions In 1850 Barnum managed the American tour of the Swedish singer Jenny Lind and achieved remarkable financial success for her and for himself He served as mayor of Bridgeport, Conn, and in the Connecticut legislature, but after an unsuccessful campaign for Congress he turned to organizing his famous circus, "The Greatest Show on Earth," which opened in Brooklyn, N Y, in 1871 and soon became an American institution In 1881, the year that he imported the giant African elephant Jumbo, he merged with his most successful competitor, J A Bailey, and under the name Barnum and Bailey the circus continued for a generation after his death In 1883 the Barnum Museum of Natural History was established at Tufts College in honor of Barnum, who was one of its trustees His autobiography was published in 1855 and kept up to date in succeeding editions, he wrote also Humbugs of the World (1865), Struggles and Triumphs (1869), and Money Getting (1883) See his autobiography, Barnum's Own Story (ed. by W R Browne, 1927), biographies by M R Werner (1923) and H W Root (1927)

Barnwell, town (pop 1,922), co seat of Barnwell co, SW S C, SSW of Columbia, in a farm area, settled 1798, inc 1842 A state park is near by In the Civil War the town was burned (1865) by Sherman

Baroach, India see BROACH

Barocchio, Giacomo: see VIGNOLA, GIACOMO DA

Barocci or Baroccio, Federigo (fädâr'ē'gō bärō't'chē, -chō), c 1530–1612, Italian painter and engraver, also called Fiori da Urbino Many of the paintings executed for the churches of his native Urbino still survive, chief among them is St Sebastian, in the cathedral Barocci was employed by Pope Pius IV on the decorations of the Belvedere Palace, Rome His chief works in Rome are Presentation in the Temple and Visitation (Chiesa Nuova), Last Supper (Santa Maria sopra Minerva), Burning of Troy (Borghese Palace), and others in the Vatican collections Other works are Madonna del popolo (Uffizi), Madonna and Child with Saints (Louvre), Descent from the Cross (cathedral, Perugia), Crucifixion (cathedral, Genoa), Holy Family (Metropolitan Mus), and a portrait of Quintilia Fischeri (National Gall of Art, Washington, D C)

Baroche, Pierre Jules (pyĕr' zhül' barôsh'), 1802–70, French statesman He deserted the republican standard to support Napoleon III Subsequently he held many ministerial posts and was one of the most prominent politicians of the Second Empire until he was forced into retirement because of republican sympathies in 1869

Baroda (burō'du), former native state (8,127 sq mi, pop 2,855,010), Bombay state, India It is a prosperous area on a fertile, alluvial plain Its existence as a state dated from the 18th cent and its ruler was the Gaekwar In May, 1949, Baroda merged with Bombay Its chief city, Baroda (pop 153,301), has imposing new buildings (including a palace and a museum), several colleges, and a cotton-textile industry

Baroja y Nessi, Pio (pē'ō barō'ha ē nĕ'sē), 1879–, Spanish novelist from the Basque Provs, belonging to the group of writers known as the Generation of 1898 He left medicine to devote himself to literature after 1900 and is perhaps the best-known Spanish novelist of the 20th cent Most of his novels are published in trilogies, such as Tierra vasca [the Basque country], which includes his first novel, La casa de Aizgorri (1900), as well as El mayorazgo de Labraz (1902) and Zalacaín el aventurero (1909) Of the trilogies, the most widely read abroad is La lucha por la vida [the struggle for existence] formed by the three novels published in 1904, La busca (Eng tr, The Quest, 1922), Mala hierba (Eng tr, Weeds, 1923), and Aurora roja (Eng tr, Red Dawn, 1924) The longest cycle of novels that he has written, with a historical background, is known as Memorias de un hombre de acción [memoirs of a man of action] Baroja's novels are forceful though loosely constructed, characterized by a rather bare, hard style, vitality, and an undercurrent of social discontent

barometer (burŏm'utur), instrument for measuring atmospheric pressure The simple mercurial barometer, invented in 1643 by Torricelli, consists essentially of a glass tube 3 ft long with one end sealed and the other end open, completely filled with mercury With the open end temporarily closed, the tube is inverted and the temporarily closed end submerged in a cup of mercury, called the cistern With the tube supported vertically, the temporarily closed end is opened, causing the level of mercury in the tube to fall a short distance and creating a vacuum above it (Torricelli's vacuum) When this is done at sea level, the top of the mercury column in the tube will be about 30 in above the surface of the mercury in the cup The column of mercury in the tube is supported by the external pressure of the atmosphere on the surface of mercury in the cup and varies in height with changes in elevation above sea level and variations in atmospheric pressure Standard sea-level pressure is 14 7 lb per square inch, which is equivalent to a column of mercury 29 92 in in height, the decrease with elevation being approximately 1 in for every 900 ft of ascent A barometer used to indicate altitude is called an ALTIMETER The barometer is employed in weather forecasting, a storm being indicated when the barometer is "falling," i e, when the pressure shows a decreasing tendency When the barometer is "rising," the opposite weather conditions can be predicted The aneroid barometer is a metallic box so made that when the air has been partially removed from the box the surface depresses or expands with variation of air pressure on it, this motion is transmitted by a train of levers to a pointer which records the pressure on a graduated scale A barograph is a self-recording aneroid barometer in which a pen traces a continuous pressure record on a cylindrical chart which revolves by clockwork

Baron or Boyron, Michel (mēshĕl' barō', bwarō'), 1653–1729, French actor and playwright A pupil of Molière, he was one of the most famous actors of his time in both comedy and tragedy He wrote several plays, of which L'Homme à bonnes fortunes (1686) was the most popular

Baronius, Caesar (burō'nēŭs), 1538–1607, Italian ecclesiastical historian, cardinal of the Roman Church He came to Rome c 1557 and soon came under the tutelage of St PHILIP NERI His chief work is Annales ecclesiastici a Christi nato ad annum 1198 [ecclesiastical annals from the Nativity to 1198] It is erudite and complete, revealing the author as a remarkably honest scholar, though it was directed against the Protestant arguments, Protestants as well as Catholics concede that Baronius never suppressed a fact He was a strong defender of the Holy See He was largely responsible for the Roman Martyrology Baronius became superior of the Oratory on St Philip's death (1593), cardinal (1596), and librarian of the Vatican, he was confessor to Clement VIII It is said that only the hostility of the Spanish, aroused when Baronius questioned their claims to Sicily, prevented Baronius from becoming pope

Barons' War, in English history, that phase of the struggle between king and barons which took place between 1263 and 1267 HENRY III in 1261 denounced the Provisions of Oxford (1258) and the Provisions of Westminster (1259), which had vested all power in a council and a council of barons, and reasserted his sovereignty and his right to appoint councilors The barons led by Simon de MONTFORT finally resorted to arms in 1263 A decision in favor of the crown by Louis IX of France as arbitrator (1264) was rejected by the barons Montfort was victorious at Lewes (1264) and forced the king to submit again to government by council, and in 1265 he summoned Montfort's Parliament (see PARLIAMENT) to consolidate his power But a renewal of the war followed a rising of the "Marchers," Englishmen of the Welsh border, who were incensed over Montfort's alliance with Llewelyn ap Gruffydd and the Welsh Prince Edward (later EDWARD I) took the leadership of the royalist forces and won a victory at Evesham (1265), where Montfort was killed The barons submitted to the king finally in 1267 Though they had been unable to check the rise of royal power, though they had failed to establish the supremacy of the nobles, they had destroyed the influence of Henry's French half brothers and other foreign favorites at the court and had helped prepare the way for the constitutional developments of the reign of Edward I baroque (burōk'), in architecture and decoration, a style marked by complex organization of rich plastic forms and freedom of design Originating in Italy in the late 16th cent, it reached its height throughout Europe a century later Though the term was long used with an opprobrious implication, in recent times there has come a revaluation of the style and a recognition of its actual merits The movement achieved its most noteworthy results in Rome Part of the final phase of the Renaissance, its primary impulse was to revolt from the cold architecture of such classicists as Palladio The grandiosity, effectiveness and rich decoration of baroque apparently corresponded to the spirit of the time Once adopted, it tremendously enlarged the vocabulary of the architects, permitting a freedom hitherto impossible The works of baroque artists included monuments of great nobility, such as Lorenzo Bernini's masterly colonnades in St Peter's Square and also many extravagant designs, in which sane and honest quality was sacrificed to a facile decorative effectiveness Outstanding designers were Vignola, Borromini, and Carlo Maderna (designer of the façade of St Peter's) in Rome, Galeazzo Alessi in Genoa, and Baldassare Longhena in Venice In France the early period of baroque fell in the reign of Louis XIII, and the style developed its full richness under Louis XIV, it was superseded by the fanciful products of the ROCOCO style in the reign of Louis XV Germany and Austria were notably hospitable to all forms of baroque, the aspects of Vienna, Dresden, and Würzburg being almost dominated by it In Spain the style was carried to an extreme development in the work of José CHURRIGUERA Carried from Spain to the New World, it became an idiom of wide currency in Mexico and Latin America In Mexico a particular richness resulted from the fusion of Spanish churrigueresque and native Aztec tastes, reaching a peak of achievement in the 18th cent The style in Europe lasted well into that century, its dethronement was the result of archaeological interest in classical art See M S Briggs, Baroque Architecture (1913) baroque, in music, a style which extends from 1600, the date of production of the first extant opera music to 1750, the year of Bach's death Its beginnings were in the late 16th-century revolt against POLYPHONY which gave rise to the accompanied RECITATIVE and to OPERA With opera and recitative came the FIGURED BASS used consistently in ensemble music throughout the baroque era Renaissance polyphony persisted, however, being called the stile antico and considered more appropriate to the church than the nuove musiche, the baroque, then, was an era of stylistic duality It was a romantic era (see ROMANTICISM), which displayed emotional extremes, and thus opera was its outstanding creation By the end of the era major and minor TONALITY had replaced the church modes (see MODE) Contrapuntal writing was resumed in the middle baroque, but it now had a harmonic basis Idiomatic writing, taking account of the individual character and capacities of instruments and voices, was characteristic of baroque music Originating in Italy, opera, ORATORIO, and CANTATA were the principal vocal forms of the period. In instrumental music the

SONATA, CONCERTO, and OVERTURE were creations of the baroque In France and Italy the baroque had by 1725 been overshadowed by its outgrowth, the ROCOCO, and it remained for Germany, where the baroque saw the flowering of Protestant church music, to bring the era to culmination The FUGUE was the greatest form of the late baroque, the chorale prelude and the toccata were also important See M F Bukofzer, Music in the Baroque Era (1947)

Barotseland see NORTHERN RHODESIA.

Barozzi, Giacomo see VIGNOLA, GIACOMO DA.

barque see BARK

Barquisimeto (bärkēsēmä'tō), city (pop 54,176), NW Venezuela Founded in 1552 in a highland area between the Sierra Nevada de Mérida and the Caribbean coastal range, Barquisimeto is a commercial center on the Pan American Highway and has rail connections with PUERTO CABELLO Although the Segovia highlands to the north are largely barren, the city itself is in good grazing country Besides cattle, exports include coffee, cacao, and sugar, shipped in bags made from locally grown sisal Here ended (1561) the infamous career of Lope de AGUIRRE Barquisimeto had to be rebuilt after the earthquake of 1812

Barr, Amelia Edith Huddleston, 1831–1919, Anglo-American novelist, b Ulverston, England She came to the United States with her husband, Robert Barr, in 1853 Her ability to tell a story and her interest in history redeem her many sentimental, romantic novels, which include Jan Vedder's Wife (1885), A Bow of Orange Ribbon (1886), Remember the Alamo (1898), and An Orkney Maid (1917) See her autobiography, All the Days of My Life (1913)

Barr, Robert, 1850–1912, Scottish novelist and journalist, educated in Toronto He wrote for the Detroit Free Press from 1876 to 1881 and in 1892 founded the Idler with Jerome K Jerome in London In the Midst of Alarms (1894), The Triumphs of Eugène Valmont (1906), The Tempestuous Petticoat (1908), and The Sword Maker (1910) are among his numerous romances He collaborated with Stephen Crane in The O'Ruddy (1903)

Barra (bă'rə), island (22,222 acres, pop 2,250), off NW Scotland, in Inverness-shire, one of the Outer Hebrides Its town is Castlebay, a fishing center

barracuda (bărəkōō'də), elongated fish of tropical and subtropical seas, resembling the pike and having a long snout, large sharp-edged teeth, and a projecting lower jaw Swift and voracious, it pursues and kills fish, often those much larger than itself Many attacks on humans are recorded and it is much feared by bathers, especially in the West Indies and the warm coastal waters of the Americas Some forms, chiefly the smaller ones from 1 to 2 ft long, are used for food

Barranquilla (bă"rŭn-kē'u, Span bärangkē'yä), city (pop 150,395), N Colombia, near the mouth of the MAGDALENA Founded in 1629, Barranquilla was a sleepy tropical town until the middle of the 19th cent, when steamboats began navigating the river up to HONDA A modern railroad and highway connecting the city with Puerto Colombia on the coast, the recent dredging of the mouth of the Magdalena, and intercontinental air routes have made Barranquilla one of the most important Caribbean ports in South America, surpassing its old rival, CARTAGENA The new residential district, El Prado, has fine residences, hotels, avenues, and public buildings Negro farmers raise sugar and cotton (supplying the city's textile industry) in the region W of Barranquilla and vegetables along the river's natural levees Besides cotton and rayon mills, manufactures include cigarettes, paper, beer, vegetable oil, structural steel, corn products, hats, shoes, chocolate, building materials, and other minor products

Barras, Paul François Nicolas, comte de (pōl' frāswä' nēkōlä', kōt' du bara'), 1755–1829, French revolutionist Though of a noble family, he joined the Jacobins in the Revolution He was a member of the Convention and one of the commissioners in Toulon during the reprisals of 1793 Having turned against Robespierre, he was made commander of Paris on 9 THERMIDOR (July 27, 1794) His firmness saved the coup d'état from failure The leader of the subsequent reaction, he turned the troops over to Napoleon Bonaparte to suppress the VENDÉMIAIRE rising of 1795 and became the chief member of the DIRECTORY (1795–99) Barras was notorious for his corruption, ostentation, and immorality He played some part in appointing Bonaparte to command in Italy and, after some hesitation, supported Sieyès in his plans for the Napoleonic coup d'état of 18 Brumaire (Nov 9, 1799), which ended his political prominence See his memoirs (Eng tr, 4 vols, 1895–96)

Barré, Isaac (bă'rē), 1726–1802, British soldier and politician, b Dublin He served under James Wolfe and was wounded at Quebec in 1759. Entering Parliament in 1761, he was appointed adjutant general and governor of Stirling (1763), but was dismissed from the army by Pitt, with whom he had quarreled After reconciliation with Pitt, he was appointed (1768) vice treasurer of Ireland. A powerful orator, he persistently opposed taxing the American colonies. His advocacy of their cause is commemorated in the names of Barre, Mass., and Wilkes-Barre, Pa, which is also named for John Wilkes, his fellow advocate in England of the Americans

Barre (bă'rē) 1 Town (pop 3,528), central Mass, NW of Worcester, settled c 1720, inc 1774 Woolen and metal products are made here It has a particularly beautiful village square 2 City (pop 10,909), central Vt, near Montpelier, inc 1894 The town of Barre (pop 4,052) was organized as Wildersburgh in 1793 It is dominated by its famous granite quarries, which, developed after the War of 1812, supplied granite for the state capitol at Montpelier in 1836 A statue of Robert Burns by J Massey Rhind stands in the city high school grounds The town has an airport At the village of East Barre, in Barre town, is a flood-control dam, part of the Winooski river control system Goddard College (coeducational, 1938) is at near-by Plainfield

Barre des Écrins (bär' dāsākrē'), peak, 13,461 ft high, in the Pelvoux group, SE France, loftiest of the Dauphiné Alps

barrel organ, mechanical musical instrument, widely used in English churches from the late 18th cent A revolving cylinder is fitted with pegs which open valves permitting air to enter a set of organ pipes Some of the larger ones have several sets of pipes and various couplers Some have electric motors which cause the cylinders to turn The principle is one which was employed in the Middle Ages A portable type of barrel organ whose cylinder is turned by a hand crank is known as a HURDY-GURDY

barren grounds, term loosely applied to the open lands of the north beyond the tree line More specifically the term is applied to Canada NW of Hudson Bay and E of the Mackenzie basin—the basins of those rivers that enter the Arctic Ocean E of the Mackenzie and of those that enter Hudson Bay N of the Churchill It is not high country, its altitude above sea level seldom reaching above 600 ft even on the divide between the Arctic and Hudson Bay, but its geology is largely that of the LAURENTIAN PLATEAU The soil is thin, and large areas of bare rock, chiefly granites and gneisses polished by the ice, are exposed Drainage is still young and disorganized, and depressions are filled with swamps, ponds, and lakes The southwestern forest line is only relative, and trees may be found in any part where they are sufficiently sheltered, but the land is for the most part completely exposed Winters are colder and summers are cooler than they are in the Mackenzie basin Vast herds of caribou cross the area seasonally Musk oxen are common in the north The few inland Eskimo, along lakes and rivers, exist on fish and the caribou and live quite differently from those along the coast, where there are the seal and the walrus The barren grounds were first crossed by Samuel HEARNE in 1770-71 Sir John FRANKLIN, Sir George BACK, John RAE, and J B TYRRELL are others whose explorations covered this region Recently the airplane has permitted its more thorough exploration See P G Downes, Sleeping Island (1943)

Barrère, Georges (shôrzh' bărer'), 1872–1944, French-American flutist and conductor, grad Paris Conservatoire, 1895 In Paris he founded (1895) the Modern Society for Wind Instruments, was solo flutist (1897–1905) of the Colonne Concerts and the Paris Opera, and taught at the Schola Cantorum In the United States he was solo flutist (1905–28) of the New York Symphony Orchestra He joined the faculty of the Institute of Musical Art in 1905 and of the Juilliard School of Music in 1930 The Barrère Ensemble, founded in 1910, was expanded (1914) into the Barrère Little Symphony Through his efforts and artistry the flute became important as a solo instrument He composed a nocturne for flute and piano, Chanson d'automne for voice and piano, and pieces for wind instruments

Barrès, Maurice (mōrēs' bărēs'), 1862–1923, French novelist and nationalist leader He wrote at first as an advocate of an egregious egoism, product of scientific naturalism, a trilogy, Le Culte du moi [the cult of the ego] (1888–91), expressed this viewpoint He soon turned to a nationalism which grew into vengeful hatred for Germany, nourished by Barrès's love for his native Lorraine and by an ardent racial feeling After the First World War his views remained extremely nationalistic Even his enemies recognized the beauties of his style and his powers to analyze, to describe, and to move His trilogy, Le Roman de l'énergie nationale [the novel of national vitality] (1897–1902), announced his nationalistic views, the first of these, Les Déracinés [the uprooted] (1897), might be called a companion piece to Le Disciple of Bourget La Colline inspirée (1913, Eng tr, The Sacred Hill, 1929) has been highly praised See A L Guérard, Five Masters of French Romance (1916)

Barrett, Elizabeth: see BROWNING, ELIZABETH.

Barrett, John (bă'rĭt), 1866–1938, American diplomat and authority on international affairs, b Grafton, Vt, educated at Vanderbilt Univ and Dartmouth (B.A., 1889). After newspaper work in Portland, Oregon, he was (1894–98) minister to Siam In the Spanish-American War he was a correspondent in the Philippines, returning to the United States in 1900 In that year he was sent as a delegate to the Pan American Congress in Mexico city and thus began his long connection with Latin American affairs, as minister to Argentina (1903–4), Panama (1904–5), and Colombia (1905–6) and, more significantly, as the very able director general of the Pan American Union from 1907 to 1920

Barrett, Lawrence, 1838–91, American actor, b Paterson, N J, of Irish parents named Brannigan He made his New York debut (1856) in The Hunchback, appeared (1858–59) with the Boston Museum Company, and served (1861–62) as a captain in the Civil War From 1866 to 1869 he was associated with Edwin Booth, played Othello to his Iago, and Cassius to his Brutus, and performed other Shaksperian roles with great success He resumed acting with Booth, after many American and English tours, in 1887 Barrett had a fine voice and an intense manner He excelled in such tragic-romantic roles as King Arthur in William Young's Pendragon (1881) and Lanciotto in George Henry Boker's Francesca da Rimini (1882) He wrote a biography of Edwin Forrest (1881) See biography by A E Barron (1889)

Barrett, Sir William Fletcher, 1844–1925, British physicist, b Jamaica, British West Indies He was professor of physics at the Royal College of Science, Dublin, from 1873 to 1910. His many contributions include the discovery of the contraction of nickel when magnetized, the recalescence (sudden liberation of heat at a certain temperature during the cooling process) of the Society for Psychical Research (1882)

Barrie, Sir James Matthew (bă'rē), 1860–1937, British playwright and novelist, b Kirriemuir, Scotland He took up journalism, wrote leaders for a Nottingham newspaper, and became a contributor to various London papers, finally moving to London in 1885 Auld Licht Idylls (1888), sketches of his native village, was followed by A Window in Thrums (1889) and My Lady Nicotine (1890) The publication of The Little Minister (1891) established him as a successful novelist, just as the dramatization of this novel began his career as a successful playwright Margaret Ogilvy (1896), a tribute to his mother, was followed by the novels Sentimental Tommy (1896) and Tommy and Grizel (1900), a study of the "artistic temperament" at least in part autobiographical After 1902 Barrie's production was almost entirely dramatic The most important of his full-length plays were, aside from The Little Minister, Quality Street (1901), The Admirable Crichton (1902), Peter Pan (1904), Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire (1905), What Every Woman Knows (1908), and Dear Brutus (1917) Among his one-act plays, The Twelve-Pound Look (1911) and Shall We Join the Ladies? (1921) deserve mention. Many of Barrie's plays were made famous in the United States by Maude ADAMS See his speeches M'Connachie and J M B (1930) and letters (ed by Viola Meynell, 1947), biographies by J A Roy (1937) and Denis Mackail (1941)

Barrie, town (pop 9,725), S Ont, on Kempenfelt Bay, a western arm of Lake SIMCOE, in a mixed farming and dairying district

Barrier Reef, Australia see GREAT BARRIER REEF

Barrili, Antonio Giulio (äntō'nyō jōō'lyō bär-rē'lē), 1836–1908, Italian writer and patriot Born in Savona, he spent most of his life in Genoa His novels and short stories had a sentiment and charm that made them very popular Among these are Capitan Dodèro (1865, Eng tr, The Adventures of Captain Dodèro, 1920) and Santa Cecilia (1866) His part in Garibaldi's campaign is described in Con Garibaldi alle porte di Roma (1895)

Barrington, E . see BECK, LILY ADAMS (MORESBY)

Barrington, George, 1755–1804, English author and pickpocket, b Ireland His family name was Waldron, but he assumed the name Barrington when he ran away from school Arriving in London in 1773, he became a professional pickpocket and, obtaining introductions in society, robbed many wealthy persons After serving several jail terms, he was in 1790 sentenced to seven years' transportation to Botany Bay For his aid in suppressing a mutiny aboard the transport ship, he was released in 1792 and became superintendent of convicts He is supposed to have written A Voyage to Botany Bay (1801) and a history of New South Wales Barrington, however, denied these writings Although it was probably not his, Barrington is usually remembered by the frequently quoted couplet which appears in a prologue to Edward Young's Revenge, a play said to have been acted by the convicts under his direction: "True patriots we, for be it understood, We left our country for our country's good" See R S Lambert, The Prince of Pickpockets (1930).

Barrington. 1 Village (pop, 8,560), NE Ill, northwest suburb of Chicago; founded in the 1850s, inc 1865. It is primarily residential. 2 Borough (pop 2,329), SW N J, near Camden, laid out c.1890, inc

1917. 3 Town (pop 6,231), E R.I., SE of Providence; settled c 1670, included in Massachusetts until 1746, inc 1770 A residential and resort area, it has brick, shellfish, shipbuilding, and textile industries The 1938 hurricane destroyed much property here

Barrios, Justo Rufino (hōō'stō rōōfē'nō bär'yōs), 1835?–1885, president of Guatemala (1873–85) He took part in the successful revolution of 1871 and was elected to office by the liberals He imposed reforms on the country the religious orders were suppressed, Catholic schools and universities were replaced by secular institutions, railroads and telegraphs were introduced, agriculture was encouraged, Barrios dreamed of reestablishing the Central American Federation and, failing in his attempts to bring about the union by constitutional means, he resorted to force He was killed in a battle with the Salvadorean army. See biography by Paul Burgess (1926) barrister: see BAR, THE.

Barron, Clarence Walker, 1855–1928, American financial editor, b Boston He worked on the Boston Daily News, then on the Evening Transcript, and in 1887 founded the Boston News Bureau, to supply financial news to brokers In 1897 he founded the Philadelphia News Bureau and in 1901 became publisher of the Wall Street Journal Barron's Financial Weekly was founded by him in 1921 His notes of conversations with leading financiers, edited by Arthur Pound and S T Moore, are published as They Told Barron (1930) and More They Told Barron (1931)

Barron, James, 1769–1851, U S naval officer, b Hampton, Va Of a seafaring family, he served in the Virginia navy in the Revolution, entered the U S navy as a lieutenant in 1798, and had commands in the Mediterranean at the time of the Tripolitan War Promoted commodore in 1807, he had just left Norfolk when his flagship, the Chesapeake, was halted and then bombarded by the British warship Leopard on June 22, 1807 (see CHESAPEAKE) The incident, notable in the troubles over the right of the British to search American vessels, aroused American anger Barron was court-martialed, found guilty of "neglecting, on the probability of an engagement, to clear his ship for action" and suspended (1808) from duty for five years Later, embittered and convinced (perhaps with justice) that STEPHEN DECATUR was barring his return to honorable standing in the navy, Barron challenged him to a duel, in which Decatur was mortally wounded (March 22, 1820) Though reinstated to duty (1821) Barron was under something of a cloud until retirement in 1848 See P B Watson, The Tragic Career of Commodore James Barron (1942)

Barron, city (pop 2,059), co seat of Barron co , NW Wis , at the confluence of the Vermillion with the Yellow NW of Eau Claire, founded before 1878, inc 1887 Dairy products are made

Barros, João de (zhwÄ̃ō' dŭ bä'rōōsh), 1496?–1570, Portuguese historian He was of noble family and early entered the service of the prince who became King John III and showered João de Barros with favors The most important office he held (1533–67) was that of factor for Guinea and the Indies, through his hands passed all the important affairs of the Portuguese Empire in Asia and Africa An ill-judged attempt to direct and settle the captaincy of Maranhão in Brazil was ended (1539) by a shipwreck of his large fleet João de Barros never finished paying the resultant debts He won fame in his own time and forever after by his brilliantly written Asia, which was published in parts (1552, 1553, 1563, 1615) It is divided into decades in imitation of Livy and is a patriotic, uncritical, but stirring and nobly composed narrative of the building of the Portuguese Empire

Barrot, Camille Hyacinthe Odilon (kamē'yu yasĕt' ōdēlō' bärō'), 1791–1873, French liberal politician A leader of the liberal opposition to the Restoration government, he aided the July Revolution, but was disappointed in the bourgeois monarchy of Louis Philippe He became a leader of the so-called dynastic opposition to the July Monarchy and participated in the banquets and other devices for spreading propaganda against the conservative government He was a moderate in the Revolution of 1848 and opposed the radical economic schemes of some of his colleagues A minister when Louis Napoleon was president, he was forced to resign in 1849 but later appeared as president of the council of state in the Third Republic (1872–73) Some of his writings were collected as Mémoires posthumes (1875–76)

Barrow, Isaac, 1630–77, English mathematician and theologian. He was professor of mathematics at Cambridge from 1663 to 1669 and was succeeded by his pupil Isaac Newton Barrow became master of Trinity College in 1672 and vice chancellor of Cambridge in 1675. His theological works were edited by Alexander Napier (1859) and his mathematical works by William Whewell (1860).

Barrow, Sir John, 1764–1848, British geographer, promoter of arctic exploration His early travels as secretary to Earl Macartney (who was ambassador to China and governor of the Cape of Good Hope colony) were recorded in Travels in China (1804) and Travels into . Southern Africa (1806) When he served (1804–6, 1807–48) as second secretary of the admiralty, he instigated many arctic expeditions, notably those of Sir John Ross and W E Parry He founded the Royal Geographical Society in 1830. Point Barrow, Cape Barrow, and Barrow Strait were named in his honor He wrote Voyages of Discovery and Research in the Arctic Regions (1846) See his autobiography (1847).

Barrow, river of Ireland, rising in W Co Laoighus in the Slieve Bloom mts and flowing E to the Co Kildare line, then south along the borders of Counties Laoighis, Kildare, Carlow, Kilkenny, Wexford, and Waterford, past Carlow and New Ross to Waterford Harbour It is 119 mi long and is navigable below Athy It receives the Nore river barrow, in archaeology, a mound or tumulus erected over a place of burial Earth and stone or timber are the usual construction materials, in parts of SE Asia stone and brick have entirely replaced earth Barrows occur in many parts of the world, dating from the Neolithic period in Western Europe to recent times in Buddhist countries In European prehistory the characteristic barrows are either long or round The long are apparently the older and consistently appear to be the work of a single ethnic group The grave chamber was placed at one end of the mound and was approached by a passage, sometimes over 300 ft in length These may have been intended to simulate cave burials Round barrows were introduced by a metal-using people and are usually well furnished with burial goods The round barrow was commonly bell shaped, another type had a low central mound surrounded by a walled ditch, normally about 150 ft in diameter, and invariably contained a secondary burial of cremated remains Barrow building in Europe continued until the Christian era Roman, Saxon, and Viking barrows are known, though such burials were apparently only for important personages It is frequently discovered that barrows have been penetrated and enlarged by successive interments of later peoples, and their proper excavation is a slow and painstaking task. The erection of tumuli over burials has had widespread appeal Nomad chiefs of the Asiatic steppes and the priests and kings of Ceylon are among those so memorialized The round barrow or STUPA of Asia is usually a shrine for cremated relics of Buddha

Barrow, Point, Alaska see POINT BARROW

Barrow-in-Furness (–fûr'nus), county borough (1931 pop 66,202, 1947 estimated pop 67,610), Lancashire, England, on the southwest coast of the peninsula of FURNESS It is one of the principal engineering cities of Britain There are hematite iron mines near, and immense steelworks, smelting works, and shipbuilding plants have developed An airship factory is on WALNEY ISLAND, which is connected with Barrow by a great bridge The ruins of medieval Furness Abbey are near by

Barrows, Samuel June, 1845–1909, American clergyman and reformer, b New York city, grad Harvard Divinity School He was a pastor in Dorchester, Mass , and later edited (1880–96) the Christian Register, a Unitarian weekly In 1896 he was elected to Congress, where he worked for prison and civil service reform Especially interested in obtaining better treatment of prisoners, he helped draft and secure passage of New York state's first probation law (1901) He wrote numerous reports and articles and several books, including The Isles and Shrines of Greece (1898) See biography by his wife, Isabel C Barrows, A Sunny Life (copyright, 1913)

Barry, Sir Charles, 1795–1860, English architect, a leader in the use of a revived Gothic style in England His most imposing work is Westminster Palace (1840–60) in London, one of the most important buildings of the period See biography by Alfred Barry (1870)

Barry, Elizabeth, 1658–1713, English actress She gained entrance to the stage through the patronage of the earl of Rochester She failed at Dorset Garden in 1673, but from the time of her appearances (1682–95) at the Theatre Royal, until her last performance at the Haymarket in 1710, she reigned as the greatest tragic actress of the Restoration stage She was the first to play Monimia in Otway's Orphan and Belvidera in his Venice Preserved, Cordelia in Tate's version of King Lear, Zara in Congreve's Mourning Bride, and Lady Brute in Sir John Vanbrugh's Provoked Wife

Barry, James, 1741–1806, Irish historical painter and etcher Under the patronage of Edmund Burke, he studied five years in Rome He returned to London with a classical style which caused much controversy After 10 years as professor at the Royal Academy of Arts, he was expelled for quarrelsomeness Examples of Barry's work are to be seen in the National Gallery of Ireland, Victoria and Albert Museum, and National Portrait Gallery, London Characteristic are his Adam and Eve, Venus Rising from the Sea, and Death of General Wolfe He published engravings and etchings and a book called An Inquiry into the Obstructions to the Acquisition of the Arts in England (1775)

Barry, John, 1745–1803, U S. naval officer in the American Revolution, b. Co Wexford, Ireland He came when young to Philadelphia, where he was a trader and a shipmaster He offered his services at the beginning of the Revolution and commanded the brig Lexington when she captured (1776) the British tender Edward—first British ship taken by a commissioned American ship Later commands he accomplished with gallantry in the Raleigh he fought against superior forces until compelled to beach the vessel to save it and the crew from capture, in the Alliance he took (1781) two British vessels after a hard fight He was the foremost naval hero of the Revolution after John Paul Jones See biographies by Joseph Gurn (1933) and W B Clark (1938)

Barry, Sir John Wolfe Wolfe-, 1836–1918, English civil engineer, son of Sir Charles Barry He served as consulting engineer to many construction companies in England as well as some in China and India Projects with which he was connected in England include the extension of London's underground railways and the building of numerous bridges and docks

Barry, Patrick, 1816–90, American horticulturist, b Ireland. A noted nurseryman and a leader in the development of fruitgrowing in New York state, he was prominent in state agricultural and horticultural societies He was editor of the horticultural department of the New Genesee Farmer (1845–53) and editor of the Horticulturist (from 1853) He wrote The Fruit Garden (1851), which went through many editions.

Barry, Philip, 1896–1949, American dramatist, b Rochester, N Y , grad Yale, 1919, and studied under George Pierce Baker at Harvard Known for his satirical comedies of social manners, he wrote many stage successes, including Holiday (1928), Hotel Universe (1930), Here Come the Clowns (1938), The Philadelphia Story (1939), and Without Love (1942) White Wings (1926) is considered by many critics his finest play

Barry, Spranger, 1719–77, English actor, b Ireland Originally a silversmith, he went on the stage and made an immediate success as Othello at Drury Lane, after which he was engaged to alternate with Garrick in Hamlet and Macbeth In 1749–50 Barry, with Mrs Cibber, set up at Covent Garden a rival performance of Romeo and Juliet to Garrick's and George Anne Bellamy's at Drury Lane —a famous episode in theatrical history

Barry, William Taylor, 1785–1835, U S Postmaster General (1829–35), b Lunenburg co , Va , grad William and Mary College, 1803 In Kentucky, where he lived from childhood, Barry, a lawyer, was elected to several public offices He was (1814–16) a U S Senator He was made chief justice of the new state court of appeals established in 1825 by Relief party legislators, who sought to ease the economic difficulties caused by the collapse of many Kentucky banks The Democratic candidate for governor in 1828, he was defeated, but Andrew Jackson carried the state, and the new President took Barry into his cabinet Although personally honest, he was not particularly competent, and his administration of the Post Office Dept was criticized in congressional investigations (1834–35) On Barry's resignation in April, 1835 Jackson appointed him minister to Spain, but he died on the way there

Barry, city (pop 1,545), W Ill , E of Hannibal, Mo , founded 1836, inc 1859 It is a trade center for a dairy and farm area

Barry, municipal borough (1931 pop 38,891, 1947 estimated pop 38,920), Glamorganshire, Wales, on the Bristol Channel and SW of Cardiff It is one of the great coal-exporting ports of Britain as well as a seaside resort

Barrymore, family of actors The first of the name, Maurice Barrymore, 1847–1905, whose real name was Herbert Blythe, was born in Agra, India He graduated from Cambridge, studied law, and was admitted to the bar, but turned to the stage He began his acting career when he toured England with Charles Vandenhoff's company (1872) On his arrival in the United States (1875), he joined the stock company of Augustin Daly and played in a Daly melodrama, Under the Gaslight He married (1876) Georgiana Drew and thenceforth became a prominent figure of the American stage He played leading roles with Modjeska, Mrs Fiske, Olga Nethersole, and Lily Langtry and was starred in various stock companies His wife, Georgiana Drew Barrymore, 1856–93, b Philadelphia, was the daughter of John and Louisa Drew After her marriage to Maurice Barrymore, she acted with him in Mme Modjeska's company and in the Daly and Palmer stock companies One of the great comediennes of her day, she also acted with Booth, Barrett, and McCullough Lionel Barrymore, 1878–, b Philadelphia, is the older son of Maurice and Georgiana Barrymore He made his first stage appearance in 1893 and played minor roles in companies headed by his uncle, John Drew He played the title role in Barrie's Pantaloon in 1905 and later starred in The Copperhead, Peter Ibbetson, and The Jest After success in these and other romantic dramas, he won acclaim for his performance of Macbeth (1921)

He was one of the first actors of distinction to appear in moving pictures and is well known for his acting in A Free Soul, Grand Hotel, Rasputin and the Empress, Dinner at Eight, David Copperfield, and You Can't Take It with You His role of Scrooge in Dickens's Christmas Carol won him a wide radio audience Ethel Barrymore, 1879–, b Philadelphia, daughter of Maurice and Georgiana Barrymore, made her first appearance (1894) in New York Under Charles Frohman's management, she appeared (1901) in Clyde Fitch's play Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines, scoring instant success Her other stage successes include A Doll's House, Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire, The Constant Wife, The Silver Box, The Twelve-Pound Look, Whiteoaks, The Corn Is Green, and Embezzled Heaven She has appeared with success in moving pictures Her acting has great range, depth, and dignity John Barrymore, 1882–1942, b Philadelphia, was the younger son of Maurice and Georgiana Barrymore He attempted painting and cartooning, but turned to the stage, where he had his first success in The Fortune Hunter in 1909 He gave distinguished performances in Galsworthy's Justice and in Peter Ibbetson, Redemption, The Jest, and Richard III, but as Hamlet in 1922 he gave one of the greatest American portrayals of the role He last appeared on the stage in My Dear Children (1939), a pathetic burlesque of his baroque private life Some of the moving pictures in which he starred were Beau Brummel, Moby Dick, Rasputin and the Empress, Grand Hotel, Reunion in Vienna, Dinner at Eight, and Counsellor at Law See his autobiographical Confessions of an Actor (1926), Gene Fowler, Good Night, Sweet Prince (1943) The Royal Family (1934), a play by Edna Ferber and George S Kaufman is based, to some extent, on the Barrymore family

Barry's Bay, village (pop 1,198), S Ont , SW of Pembroke It is the supply center for the eastern part of Algonquin Provincial Park

Barsabas (bär'sŭbŭs), surname of JOSEPH BARSABAS and JUDAS BARSABAS

Barsetshire, imaginary county, S England It is the locale of novels by Anthony Trollope and Angela Thirkell Its county seat is Barchester

Barsotti, Charles (bärsōt'tē), 1856–1927, Italian-American editor, b near Pisa, Italy He came in 1872 to New York city, here in 1880 he established the Progresso, the first Italian daily newspaper in the United States

Barstow, unincorporated town (pop c 2,500) SE Calif , NE of San Bernardino, on the dry Mojave river It is a railroad division point, with railroad shops, and an outfitting point for expeditions into Death Valley

Bart, Jean (zhä' bar'), 1650–1702, French naval hero, b Dunkirk Of a seafaring family, he enlisted in the Dutch navy but entered the French service as a privateer at the outbreak of the Dutch War (1672) In 1686 he was commissioned a navy captain As a reward for his spectacular exploits, particularly in the War of the Grand Alliance, he was ennobled (1694) and made a rear admiral (1696) by Louis XIV The disarming simplicity of his manners charmed the Versailles court and won him a popularity that is still great

Bartas, Guillaume de Salluste du see DU BARTAS

Bartels, Hans von (häns' fŭn bar'tl̩s), 1856–1913, German painter He painted in both oil and water color, chiefly seascapes and fishing scenes He taught painting in Munich

barter, generally speaking, the exchange of commodities for one another as differentiated from their sale for money In the primitive community barter, as well as GIFT, was an important means of exchange Bartering practices which have persisted until recent times among Australian tribes suggest the importance of the institution for primitive society Wampum and beaver skins were articles of barter among North American Indians Bartering gave rise to trade routes and much of the social life of the tribes In general, barter gave way to the sale of commodities for money as more complex communities arose, sometimes, as in China, after an intermediate period of unmarked money shaped to resemble the articles previously bartered Barter, however, has never completely died out even in the most civilized communities Recourse to barter is sometimes had in times of depression as a self-help device Barter has also taken place among large corporations In the 1930s large-scale international barter was revived by the German government, payment for imported raw materials was made in the form of blocked marks, good only for the purchase of German manufactures This practice tended to perpetuate the unfavorable trade balances of nations exporting raw materials to Germany and to extend the power of the German government over both foreign and domestic economy See also TRADE

Barth, Heinrich (hīn'rĭkh bart'), 1821–65, German explorer His first book describes his travels (1845–47) through North Africa and the Levant In a journey (1849–55) for the British government, he crossed the Sahara and traveled in the then little-known Negro kingdoms of the W Sudan; here his two companions died His Travels and Discoveries in North and Central Africa (5 vols , 1857–58, in English and German) is a masterpiece of narrative and of geographic research

Barth, Karl, 1886–, Swiss Protestant Reformed theologian As leader of the German Protestant Church, Barth opposed the Nazi regime and in 1935, when he refused to take the oath of allegiance to Hitler, was retired from his position at the Univ of Bonn and deported to Switzerland There, at the Univ of Basel, he continued teaching his evangelical or dialectical theology In reaction to the growth of modernism in Christianity Barth has developed a biblical theology, an essential of which is revelation by faith, a revelation in which reason plays no part This doctrine is regarded by some as a development of the teaching of KIERKEGAARD Man's role is a passive one, best played through obedience to divine authority rather than through intellectual insight The relationship between man and God, as seen by Barth, is thus a reversion to the Calvinist doctrine of predestination This theological development is also associated with Emil BRUNNER, Paul Tillich, and Reinhold Neibuhr, although Barth's position is the most orthodox Barth's writings include Der Römerbrief (1919, Eng tr , The Epistle to the Romans, 1933), Das Wort Gottes und die Theologie (1924, Eng tr , The Word of God and the Word of Man, 1928), Credo (1935, Eng tr , 1937), and The Church and the War (Eng tr , 1944) See Wilhelm Pauck, Karl Barth, Prophet of a New Christianity? (1931), Adolf Keller, Karl Barth and Christian Unity (Eng tr , 1933), H R Mackintosh, Types of Modern Theology Schleiermacher to Barth (1937), P H Monsma, Karl Barth's Idea of Revelation (1937)

Barthélemy, Auguste Marseille (ōgüst' marsā'yŭ bartālmē'), 1796–1867, French poet With his friend J P A Méry he wrote several brilliant and popular political satires, including La Villéliade (1827), Napoléon en Égypte (1828), and Le Fils de l'homme (1829), a poem on Napoleon's son, the duke of Reichstadt, for the publication of which Barthélemy was imprisoned In L'Insurrection the authors celebrated the Revolution of 1830, only, shortly after, to attack the new government in their short-lived journal Nemesis (1831–32)

Barthélemy, François, marquis de (frāswä' märkē' dŭ bartālmē'), 1747–1830, French statesman While ambassador to Switzerland, he negotiated the Treaties of Basel (1795), which took Prussia and Spain out of the French Revolutionary Wars Elected to the DIRECTORY (1797), he opposed the coup d'état of 18 Fructidor and was deported to French Guiana He escaped (1799), returned to France, and supported Napoleon In 1814 he went over to the Bourbons, who rewarded him by raising him to the peerage

Barthez, Paul Joseph (pôl' zhōzĕf' bärtās', bärta'), 1734–1806, French physician and philosopher A professor at the Univ of Montpellier from 1760, he is remembered for his theory—set forth in his Nouveaux Éléments de la science de l'homme (1778) —that the vital principal is a life force distinct from the mind and from physicochemical changes in the body

Bartholdi, Frédéric Auguste (frādārēk' ōgust' bartōldē'), 1834–1904, French sculptor, b Colmar, Alsace He studied painting under Ary Scheffer but turned to sculpture Among his many works is a colossal group Switzerland Succoring Strasbourg, presented by France to Switzerland and now at Basel Monuments and statues include those of Martin Schongauer at Colmar, Vercingetorix at Clermont-Ferrand, and Lafayette and Washington in Paris Union Square, New York, has a statue of Lafayette Well known is the colossal Lion of Belfort, commemorating the heroic defense of BELFORT in 1870–71 and carved from the rock flanking the citadel Best known is Liberty Enlightening the World (see LIBERTY, STATUE OF), erected on Bedloe's Island, New York Bay, and dedicated in 1886

Bartholin, Kaspar (kä'spär bär'tōlēn), 1585–1629, Danish physician, b Sweden He was professor of medicine and later of theology at the Univ of Copenhagen and author of a textbook of anatomy, Institutiones anatomicae (1611) His son, Thomas Bartholin (tō'mus), 1616–80, physician, naturalist, and philologist, was professor of mathematics and of anatomy at the Univ of Copenhagen He is noted for describing the lymphatic system Kaspar Bartholin, 1655–1738, a son of Thomas Bartholin, also a professor at the Univ of Copenhagen, is credited with discovering the glands of Bartholin (a pair of glands of the vagina) and an accessory duct of the sublingual salivary gland

Bartholomaeus Anglicus. see BARTHOLOMEW DE GLANVILLE

Bartholomé, Paul Albert (pôl' älbĕr' bartōlōmā'), 1848–1928, French sculptor and painter. He studied painting in Geneva and then under Gérôme in Paris, not achieving much success, he turned to sculpture and became one of the outstanding sculptors of his generation In 1895 he completed his most celebrated work, the Monument to the Dead, in Père-Lachaise cemetery, Paris

Bartholomew, Saint (bärthŏl'ùmū) [Aramaic,=son of Talmai], one of the Twelve Apostles, identified with NATHANAEL Nathanael is a given name. Bartholomew a patronymic Mat 10 3, Mark 3 18, Luke 6 14, Acts 1 13 Tradition makes N India his missionary field and Armenia the place where he was flayed to death His attribute is a knife Feast Aug 24

Bartholomew de Glanville or Bartholomaeus Anglicus (bärthŏl'umē'ŭs äng'glĭkŭs), fl c 1250, English Friar Minor He was the author of De proprietatibus rerum, celebrated medieval encyclopedia

Bartholomew Fair, held in West Smithfield, London. It was founded by a charter (1133) granted by Henry I to his former jester, Rahere, who had turned monk and founded the Priory of St Bartholomew It lasted for a fortnight and was principally noted as a cloth fair Late in the 17th cent , when the fair had degenerated, the time was reduced to four days It continued until 1855, but in its later days was merely a period of riotous gaiety for the lower classes of London

Barthou, Louis (lwē' bartōō'), 1862–1934, French statesman and man of letters He held portfolios in numerous cabinets after 1894 and in 1934 became foreign minister in the Doumergue cabinet Barthou sought to strengthen the French position in Eastern Europe He was welcoming Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseilles when a Croatian nationalist assassinated both the king and Barthou (Oct , 1934) A man of culture and learning, Barthou was the author of several biographies, notably one of Victor Hugo (Eng tr , The Loves of a Poet, 1919) and of Hugo's father (Eng tr , General Hugo, 1920)

Bartimaeus (–mē'us) [Aramaic,=son of Timaeus], blind man to whom Jesus restored sight Mat 20 29–34, Mark 10 46–52, Luke 18 35–43

Bartlesville, city (pop 16,267), co seat of Washington co , NE Okla , on the Caney river and N of Tulsa, founded c 1877 on the site of an old trading post It is a distribution center for a rich agricultural and oil-producing area, with offices of many gas and oil companies and a U S Bureau of Mines experiment station There is some zinc smelting A state park is near by

Bartlett, Elisha, 1804–55, American physician, b Smithfield, R I , M D Brown Univ , 1826 He practiced in Lowell, Mass , was mayor there (1836), and later taught medical subjects in several universities Among his works are a history (1842, 1852), of the fevers of the United States, Essay on the Philosophy of Medical Science (1844), and Inquiry into the Degree of Certainty of Medicine (1848) See studies by William Osler (1900) and J T Winterich (1933)

Bartlett, John, 1820–1905, American compiler and publisher, b Plymouth, Mass While he worked in his University Book Store in Cambridge, he compiled the invaluable Familiar Quotations (1855), which ran through nine editions in his lifetime and was revised and enlarged (1914) by Nathan Haskell Dole and again (1937) by Christopher Morley and Louella D Everett Bartlett joined the publishing firm of Little, Brown & Company in 1863 and in 1871 became senior partner His Shakspere concordance (1894) is still a standard work

Bartlett, Josiah, 1729–95, American Revolutionary patriot, signer of the Declaration of Independence, b Amesbury, Mass He practiced medicine in Kingston, N H , and was a delegate to the provincial assembly (1765–75) and the provincial congress (1775) before serving in the Continental Congress (1775–78) He returned to New Hampshire, held judicial posts, advocated (1788) the adoption of the federal Constitution, and was chief executive of the state (1790–94)

Bartlett, Paul Wayland, 1865–1925, American sculptor, b New Haven, Conn The son of a sculptor, he lived in Paris in his boyhood and studied at the École des Beaux-Arts and under Frémiet The Bohemian Bear Trainer won a gold medal at the Salon of 1888 Of his other works, The Ghost Dance is at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, the equestrian statue of Lafayette is in Paris and a replica is in Hartford, Conn , Columbus, Michelangelo, and Law are in the rotunda of the Library of Congress The bronze statue of Robert Morris (Philadelphia) was unveiled after the sculptor's death

Bartlett, Robert Abram, 1875–1946, American arctic explorer, b Brigus, near St John's, Newfoundland He accompanied Robert E Peary on the expeditions of 1897–98 and 1905–6 In the expedition of 1908–9 he accompanied Peary to lat 87° 47' N and was the last white man from whom Peary parted to make his dash for the North Pole He commanded the Karluk on the expedition headed by Vilhjalmur Stefansson in 1913–14 The vessel was frozen in ice near Point Barrow and drifted until it was crushed by ice near Wrangel Island Bartlett crossed to Siberia for help and returned to rescue 13 of the party Later he commanded on many arctic voyages of his own, making an annual cruise from 1925 to 1941 His exploring and scientific work in Greenland was especially notable, and he was widely known. See G P. Putnam, Mariner of the North (1947).

Bartlett, Samuel Colcord, 1817–98, American Congregational clergyman and educator, b Salisbury, N H., grad. Dartmouth, 1836 He studied at Andover Theological Seminary and was ordained in 1843. He was professor (1858–77) of biblical literature and sacred theology at the Chicago Theological Seminary and from 1877 to 1892 was president of Dartmouth College

Bartlett, William Henry, 1809–54, English draughtsman and writer He made sketches for John Britton's Cathedral Antiquities of England (1814–32) and Picturesque Antiquities of English Cities (1828–30) For a series of volumes by William Beattie he made over 1,000 drawings He visited the United States and Canada, making drawings for American Scenery (1840) and Canadian Scenery (1842), with text by N P Willis

Bartlett. 1 Resort town (pop 1,154), E N H , on the Saco and SSE of Crawford Notch, in the White Mountain National Forest, inc 1790 This land was granted in 1769 to veterans of the French and Indian Wars 2 City (pop 1,668), central Texas, NNE of Austin, in a blackland farm area, settled 1882, inc as a city 1902

Bartok, Bela (bā'lu bar'tôk), Hung Bartók Béla, 1881–1945, Hungarian composer, pianist, and collector of folk music He studied, 1899–1903, at the Royal Academy, Budapest, where he became professor of piano in 1907 His strongly national symphony, Kossuth (1903), was his first successful work In 1905 he and Zoltan Kodaly began their collection of Magyar, Slovakian, Rumanian, and Transylvanian folk tunes The vigorous rhythms and melodies of this music influenced all Bartok's subsequent work The New Hungarian Musical Society, founded in 1911 by Bartok and Kodaly for the performance of new music, failed, and in 1913 Bartok went to Biskra, where he collected 200 Arab melodies His first unqualified success in Budapest came in 1917, at the performance of his mime play, The Wooden Prince (1913), and gave him incentive to resume composition On a tour of the United States, 1927–28, he performed his own works at the piano In 1940 he returned to the United States, where Columbia Univ commissioned him to transcribe a large collection of Yugoslav folk tunes This work occupied him until his death His principal works include six string quartets, Duke Bluebeard's Castle (1911) and The Miraculous Mandarin (1919), for the theater, three orchestral suites, much piano music, including Allegro barbaro (1910), Rhapsody for Piano and Orchestra (1904), two concertos (1926, 1931), and a set of progressive piano studies, Mikrokosmos (1935), Cantata profana (1917), for soloists, chorus, and orchestra, two rhapsodies for violin and orchestra, Music for Two Pianos and Percussion (1937), and Contrasts (1938), for clarinet, violin, and piano (1938) His music is harsh, vigorous, and highly contrapuntal, sometimes combining four melodies in different keys simultaneously See study by Emil Haraszti (1938)

Bartoli, Pietro Santi (pyā'trō sän'tē bar'tōlē), 1635–1700, Italian painter and engraver, studied painting with Nicolas Poussin His plates, once numerous, are now scarce Called Il Perugino, he is sometimes confused with the great Perugino

Bartolini, Lorenzo (lōrān'tsō bärtōlē'nē), 1777–1850, Italian sculptor His best works are Charity, in the Pitti Palace, Faith in God, Polli-Pezzoli Museum, Milan, a statue of Machiavelli, Uffizi, and the Niccolò Demidoff monument in Florence

Bartolomeo di Pagholo del Fattorino, Fra (frä' bärtōlōmā'ō dē pä'gōlō dēl fät'tōrē'nō), 1472?–1517, Italian painter He was also called Fra Bartolomeo and Baccio della Porta because he lived near the gate of San Pietro Gattolino (now Porta Romana), Florence He became (1500) a Dominican, relinquishing his art, which he resumed four years later at the solicitation of his prior and friends Raphael's visit to Florence, in 1506, resulted in a mutually helpful friendship Fra Bartolomeo later, in Venice, came under the influence of Bellini and Giorgione His finest paintings followed this period Among them are Vadonna between St Stephen and St John (cathedral, Lucca), God the Father Adored by Mary Magdalen and St Catherine (Lucca), Madonna with Six Saints (San Marco, Florence), Marriage of St Catherine (Louvre), St Mark (Uffizi), and The Creation of Eve (National Gall of Art, Washington, D C) In 1509 he formed a partnership with Albertinelli, and together they produced Madonna and Saints and Marriage of St Catherine (both Pitti Palace), and Patron Saints of Florence and The Last Judgment (both Uffizi)

Bartolomeo Veneto (vānā'tō), fl 1502–55, Italian painter He studied under Gentile Bellini in Venice but came under the influence of the Milanese school Vigorous, if over exact, draughtsmanship and fine high coloring distinguish his work His Madonna (Venice) and Madonna and Child (Bergamo) belong to his earliest period Notable among his portraits are those of Massimiliano Sforza and Lodovico Martinengo (National Gall , London) and Portrait of a Gentleman (National Gall of Art, Washington, D C) Madonna and Portrait of a Man in Black are in the Ambrosian Library

Bartolozzi, Francesco (frānchā'skō bärtōlōt'sē), 1727–1815, Italian engraver. In Florence he studied drawing and painting and formed a lifelong friendship with Cipriani, most of whose drawings he later engraved In 1764 he went to London, where he became one of the original members of the Royal Academy In England he achieved his best work in etching—a series from the drawings of Guercino He was responsible for the vogue in England of the stipple, or "red-chalk style" of engraving, a process which he greatly improved His unusual knowledge of anatomy accounted for his success in rendering the human figure In 1802 Bartolozzi went to Lisbon, to become head of the academy there

Barton, Benjamin Smith, 1766–1815, American physician and botanist, b Lancaster, Pa , studied at the College of Philadelphia, at Edinburgh, and at Gottingen (M D , 1789) He taught at the College of Philadelphia and after its merger with the Univ of Pennsylvania succeeded Benjamin Rush as professor of the theory and practice of medicine His Elements of Botany (1803) and his Collections for an Essay toward a Materia Medica of the United States (1798–1804) were useful contributions

Barton, Clara, 1821–1912, American humanitarian, organizer of the American Red Cross, b Oxford, Mass She taught school (1836–54) and clerked in the U S Patent Office (1854–61), before the outbreak of the Civil War Then she established a service of supplies for soldiers and nursed in army camps and hospitals President Lincoln appointed her (1865) to attend to correspondence of relatives of missing prisoners, the records she compiled from hospital and burial lists served to identify thousands of the dead at Andersonville prison In 1869 she attended a meeting of the International Committee of Relief for the Care of War Wounded, at Geneva, Switzerland, and, at the outbreak (1870) of the Franco-Prussian War, she went to the front for the German Red Cross Returning (1873) to the United States, she worked for the President's signature to the Geneva treaty for the care of war wounded, and for the organization of an American branch of the International Red Cross In 1877 she organized the American National Committee, which later became the American Red Cross, of which she was president until 1904 Her influence was important in securing the amendment providing Red Cross relief in catastrophes other than war She also served in Cuba during the Spanish-American War She wrote An Official History of the Red Cross (1882), The Red Cross in Peace and War (1898), A Story of the Red Cross (1904), and The Story of My Childhood (1907) See biographies by P H Epler (1915), Corra Bacon-Foster (1918), W E Barton (1922), J C Nolan (1941), and B C Williams (1941)

Barton, Sir Edmund, 1849 1920, Australian jurist and statesman He held high political offices in New South Wales, was a leader in the movement for Australian federation, and became the first premier of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1901 Knighted in 1902, the next year he was appointed a justice of the High Court

Barton, Elizabeth, 1506?–1534, English prophetess, called the Maid of Kent, or the Nun of Kent She was a domestic servant After a period of illness (1525) she commenced going into trances and uttering prophecies, which were supposed to be of divine inspiration Her fame spread She entered a convent in Canterbury, and her prophecies took on more and more a political tone dangerous to the government In particular she foretold dire consequences to HENRY VIII in case he should divorce KATHARINE OF ARAGON and marry Anne BOLEYN Her correspondence with many notables made the Maid's political importance great, and she was a serious obstacle to Henry She was arraigned before Cranmer and was brought to confess herself an impostor She and her accomplices were put to death for treason

Barton, Robert Childers, 1881–, Irish politician A member of the Sinn Fein party from 1916, he was a signer of the treaty with England in 1921 and a member of the Dail Eireann from 1921 to 1923 He was (1919–21) minister of agriculture

Barton, William Paul Crillon, 1786–1856, American naval surgeon and botanist, b Philadelphia, grad Princeton, 1805 He served as a naval surgeon (1809–15) and as the first chief (1842–44) of the naval Bureau of Medicine and Surgery He was a nephew of Benjamin S Barton, under whom he studied medicine and whom he succeeded (1815) as professor of botany at the Univ of Pennsylvania His chief works are Vegetable Materia Medica of the United States (1817–18), Flora of North America (1820–23), and Outlines of Lectures on Materia Medica and Botany (1827–28)

Barton, town (pop 3,371), N Vt , S of Newport It includes Barton village (pop 1,262), ORLEANS village, Willoughby mill village, and Crystal Lake

Bartonville, village (pop 1,879), central Ill , near the Illinois river just SW of Peoria, in a coal area, inc 1903 A state hospital for the insane is here

Bartow, city (pop 6,158), co seat of Polk co , central Fla , E of Tampa and W of Lake Kissimmee, in a region producing phosphates, citrus fruit, and truck. It was settled in the mid-19th cent on the site of a fort built during the Seminole War

Bartram, John, 1699–1777, pioneer American botanist, b near Darby, Pa He had no formal schooling but possessed a keen mind and a great interest in plants In 1728 he purchased land along the banks of the Schuylkill river near Philadelphia and planted there the first botanical garden in the United States It still exists as a part of the Philadelphia park system He made journeys in the Alleghenies and Catskills and in the Carolinas and Florida in search of new plants Among his correspondents were nearly all the great European botanists of the day By exchanging specimens with them, Bartram introduced many American plants into Europe and established some Old World species in the New World To his home and gardens came the famous Americans of his day and many distinguished European travelers His Observations, on a trip to Lake Ontario, appeared in 1751, and the journal of his Florida trip (1765–66) was published in William Stork's Description of East Florida (3d ed , 1769) His name is commemorated in a genus of mosses, Bartramia See Ernest Earnest, John and William Bartram (1940)

Bartram, William, 1739–1823, American naturalist b Philadelphia, son of John Bartram He accompanied his father in exploring (1765–66) the St Johns river of Florida From 1773 to 1777 William Bartram traveled through the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida and the Indian country to the west, aided financially by John FOTHERGILL of England, to whom he agreed to send plant specimens and seeds Bartram is known chiefly for his Travels (1791), in which he described these journeys and vividly portrayed the plants and wildlife of the country The book was soon republished in London and Dublin and translated into Dutch, French, and German Its influence is seen in the works of Wordsworth, Coleridge, and other writers who found it an unexcelled source of descriptions of the American wilderness and its inhabitants After his father's death he continued the correspondence with European naturalists and aided his brother John in caring for the botanical gardens at their home on the Schuylkill river He wrote many sketches and papers, prepared the drawings for Benjamin S Barton's Elements of Botany and furnished much of the material for Barton's Collections for an Essay toward a Materia Medica He kept records of the birds he had seen and of their migrations His list of 215 native birds was the most complete list in existence before American Ornithology by Alexander Wilson was published His name is commemorated in the genus name, Bartramia, of the bird known as the upland plover, Bartram's plover, Bartram's (or Bartramian) sandpiper, and upland sandpiper See his Travels (ed by Mark Van Doren, 1947)

Bartsch, Adam von (Johann Adam Bernhard von Bartsch) (ä'dam fŭn bärch', yōhän', bĕrn'härt), 1757–1821, Austrian engraver, etcher, and writer His critical catalogue, Le Peintre Graveur (21 vols , 1803–21), is still the authority on this subject Bartsch executed over 500 plates from his own designs and those of others

Baruch (bä'rŭk) [Heb ,=blessed] 1 Jeremiah's scribe for whom the book of BARUCH is named 2 Judahite Neh 11 5 3 Builder of the wall Neh 3 20 4 Signer of the covenant Neh 11 5

Baruch, Bernard Mannes (burōōk'), 1870–, U S government adviser on economics, b Camden, S C , grad College of the City of New York, 1889 He became wealthy through stock-market speculation before he was 30 In the First World War he advised on national defense and was (1918–19) chairman of the War Industries Board In the Second World War he became (1942) special adviser to James F Byrnes and wrote the report (1943) on post-war conversion As U S Representative to the UN Atomic Energy Commission (1946), he formulated plans for international control of atomic energy

Baruch, Simon, 1840–1921, American physician, b Poland, M D Medical College of Virginia, Richmond 1862, father of Bernard M Baruch He served (1862–65) as surgeon in the Confederate army and practiced medicine in Camden, S C (1865–81), and in New York city (from 1881) A pioneer exponent of hydrotherapy, he wrote The Principles and Practice of Hydrotherapy (1898, 3d ed , 1908) and established at Chicago and New York the first free municipal bathhouses in the United States

Baruch, book of the Old Testament, placed in the Apocrypha in AV and after Jeremiah in the Western canon It is named for a Jewish prince Baruch (fl 600 B C), faithful friend of JEREMIAH the prophet and editor of his book Jer 32 12–16, 36, 43 3,6, 45 Baruch contains the following parts a message from the exiled Jews to the Jews still at home (1–3 8), containing a prayer for Palestinian Jews to use, confessing sin and asking divine mercy, an exhortation to wisdom (3 9–4 4), including a famous messianic allusion (3 36–38), a consolation of Jerusalem (4 5–5 9) containing a lament, finally chapter 6, which is a letter of Jeremiah (called sometimes the Epistle of Jeremy) warning the exiles against idolatry The extant ancient versions of Baruch are in Greek, but Hebrew was probably the original language. Critics disagree greatly over the dates of Baruch; some see it as a collection of several authors For the Apocalypse of Baruch, see PSEUDEPIGRAPHA For bibliography, see OLD TESTAMENT

Barum, Devonshire, England see BARNSTAPLE.

Bary, Heinrich Anton de see DE BARY

Barye, Antoine Louis (ätwän' lwē' barē'), 1796–1875, French animal sculptor Son of a Parisian goldsmith, he followed his father's trade as a youth In 1832 he exhibited at the Salon his Lion and Serpent (Tuileries), which won him some reputation, but only late in life did he achieve fame and free himself from debt His simple and forceful studies of animals or groups of animals, many of them small and designed for commercial reproduction in bronze, enjoyed an international popularity and are still highly prized Well-known examples of his work are Tiger and Gavial, Jaguar and Hare, Theseus and the Minotaur (all Louvre), and Centaur and Lapith (Tuileries) He is also well represented in the Metropolitan Museum (which held a special exhibition of his work, Jan , 1940) and in the Brooklyn Museum

barytes see BARITE

barytone see BARITONE

Barzillai (-zĭl'ā-ī) [Heb , =iron] 1 Chief in Gilead who was friendly to David 2 Sam 17 27–29, 19 31–39, 1 Kings 2 7, Ezra 2 61, Neh 7 63 2 Father-in-law of Saul's daughter MERAB

Barzun, Jacques (zhäk' bar'zun), 1907–, American historian and teacher, b France, grad Columbia (B A , 1927, Ph D , 1932) He came to the United States in 1919 and was naturalized in 1933 Interested first in law, he turned to history and wrote his dissertation on The French Race (1932) After engaging in several historical research projects, he began (1928) teaching history in Columbia College, becoming professor of history in 1945 He is known as a critic of literature and the arts as well as a historian, and the titles of his works show the breadth of his interests, they include Race a Study in Modern Superstition (1937), Of Human Freedom (1937), Culture in the Democracy (1940), Darwin, Marx, Wagner (1941), Romanticism and the Modern Ego (1945), The Teacher in America (1945), and Berlioz and the Romantic Century (1950).

basalt (busôlt', bă'sôlt), a common LAVA or extrusive igneous rock of volcanic origin, dark gray to black in color, fine-grained, and usually crystalline Some basalts are porphyritic (see PORPHYRY), others are relatively free of phenocrysts In basalt-porphyry the phenocrysts, often of olivine, augite, or labradorite, are exceeded in volume by the ground mass The surface of a basalt flow may be quite smooth or it may be scoriaceous (containing many irregularly shaped gas cavities) When subjected to METAMORPHISM, basalt is transformed into hornblende-schist and other kinds of SCHIST Most of the world's great lava flows, e g , the Deccan trap, the Iceland flows, and the Columbia river plateau of the NW United States, are basaltic lava

Bascama (bās'kŭmŭ), unidentified town, E of the Jordan, where Jonathan the Maccabee was killed 1 Mac 13 23–26

Bascom, Henry Bidleman, 1796–1850, American Methodist minister and college president, b Hancock, N Y He became at an early age a preacher in the Ohio Methodist Conference and was a frontier circuit rider Bascom was chaplain (1824–26), in the U S Congress, president (1826–29) of Madison College, Uniontown, Pa , professor (1832–42) of moral science at Augusta College, Augusta, Ky , and president (1842–49) of Transylvania Univ At the convention of 1845 at which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized, he played an important role In 1850 he was elected a bishop of that church He was the author of Methodism and Slavery (1847)

Bascom, John, 1827–1911, American educator and philosopher, b Genoa, N Y, grad Williams, 1849, and Andover Theological Seminary, 1851 After serving (1855–74) as professor of rhetoric at Williams, he became president of the Univ of Wisconsin, which was reorganized during his administration (1874–87) Later he returned to Williams and until his retirement in 1903 was professor of political science Author of many magazine articles and some 20 books, including Ethics (1879), The New Theology (1891), and God and His Goodness (1901), Bascom did much to popularize liberal religious ideas See his autobiography, Things Learned by Living (1913), biography by Sanford Robinson (1922)

base, in chemistry, a compound which, according to the theory of the ION, yields hydroxyl (OH) ions in aqueous solution as the negative ions Such a compound is described also as the HYDROXIDE of a metal or of a positively charged RADICAL such as the ammonium radical (NH_4) Because of the presence of the hydroxyl ion, bases exhibit certain common characteristics when dissolved in water They have a caustic or bitter taste and a soapy feeling and turn red litmus blue Other properties of bases depend upon the specific metallic ion which they yield Bases in solution conduct electricity and react with acids and acid anhydrides (see NEUTRALIZATION) to form salts and water They vary in solubility, some (e.g., sodium and potassium hydroxide) being very soluble and others (e g , copper hydroxide) being very slightly soluble These last do not exhibit all the characteristic properties of the group Strong bases (see ALKALI) are those which are freely ionized in solution, weak bases ionize only slightly Bases are classified according to the number of hydroxyl groups present in a molecule Bases are used in industry (as in the manufacture of soap and textiles), in building, in the refining of petroleum, in agriculture, and as cleansing agents and disinfectants baseball, the "national game" of the United States It derives its name from the four bases on the wide, flat (except for a slight rise at the pitcher's mound) playing field (the diamond) Horsehide-covered hard balls, wooden bats, and heavily padded gloves (the catcher and chief umpire wear additional protective material) constitute the basic equipment A game is played by two opposing teams of nine players each—a pitcher, a catcher, four infielders, and three outfielders Once replaced in a particular game (this happens most often with pitchers), a player may not again take part in that contest The umpires rule on the plays of the game To win, a team must score more runs than its opponent, and a run is made when a player completes a circuit of the bases The rules of the game continue to undergo gradual change A form of baseball, doubtless derived from the English games of cricket and rounders, was played in the early 19th cent , and the children's game "one old cat" existed before that time Baseball was played largely in the northeastern states before the Civil War, and Alexander Cartwright and Henry Chadwick were important in the development of the game The report (1908) of a commission headed by A G Mills which declared that Abner DOUBLEDAY created the modern game in 1839 at Cooperstown, N Y , has been hotly contradicted Baseball made great headway in New York city and the neighboring regions, and a national organization of teams was formed in 1857 The sport was popular with Union soldiers during the Civil War, and after the war professional teams banded together in associations The National League, organized in 1876, is today made up of the Boston Braves, Brooklyn Dodgers, Chicago Cubs, Cincinnati Reds, New York Giants, Philadelphia Phillies, Pittsburgh Pirates, and St Louis Cardinals In 1900 the Western League changed its name to the American League and three years later gained recognition as the second major league The American League is composed of the Boston Red Sox, Chicago White Sox, Cleveland Indians, Detroit Tigers, New York Yankees, Philadelphia Athletics, St Louis Browns, and Washington Senators Since 1903 the leading teams—the pennant winner—of the two major leagues have met in an annual series of games to decide the world's championship The winners of the world series were 1903, Boston Red Sox, 1905, New York Giants, 1906, Chicago White Sox, 1907–8, Chicago Cubs, 1909, Pittsburgh Pirates, 1910–11, Philadelphia Athletics, 1912, Boston Red Sox, 1913, Philadelphia Athletics, 1914, Boston Braves, 1915–16, Boston Red Sox, 1917, Chicago White Sox, 1918, Boston Red Sox, 1919, Cincinnati Reds, 1920, Cleveland Indians, 1921–22, New York Giants, 1923, New York Yankees, 1924, Washington Senators, 1925, Pittsburgh Pirates, 1926, St Louis Cardinals, 1927–28, New York Yankees, 1929–30, Philadelphia Athletics, 1931, St Louis Cardinals, 1932, New York Yankees, 1933, New York Giants, 1934, St Louis Cardinals, 1935, Detroit Tigers, 1936–39, New York Yankees, 1940, Cincinnati Reds, 1941, New York Yankees, 1942, St Louis Cardinals, 1943, New York Yankees, 1944, St Louis Cardinals, 1945, Detroit Tigers, 1946, St Louis Cardinals, 1947, New York Yankees, 1948, Cleveland Indians, and 1949, New York Yankees There are several minor leagues—notably the International League, the American Association, the Pacific Coast League, the Southern League, and the Texas League—which also hold post-season play-offs An attempt to form (1914–15) a third major league—the Federal League—ultimately failed The "Black Sox" scandal (1920–21), in which several members of the Chicago White Sox were found guilty of having been paid to lose the 1919 world series to the Cincinnati Reds, led (1920) the major league clubs to appoint Judge Kenesaw M LANDIS high commissioner of professional baseball Albert B (Happy) CHANDLER was elected in 1945 to succeed Landis, who had died in office In 1935 night baseball games were introduced in the major leagues A number of baseball's greatest figures have been elected to the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum, built at Cooperstown, N Y in 1939 Baseball is also played by school, college, club, and semiprofessional teams It has achieved considerable popularity in Japan as well as in Cuba, Puerto Rico, Mexico, and elsewhere in Latin America. Softball, a form of baseball in which a larger ball and a smaller infield are required, has become very popular in recent years. Among the more famous names, past and present, in professional baseball are Grover C. (Ol' Pete) Alexander, Adrian C. (Cap) Anson, John F. (Home Run) Baker, Frank L Chance, Tyrus R Cobb, Gordon S. (Mickey) Cochrane, Edward T Collins, Jerome H (Dizzy) Dean, William M. Dickey, Joseph P Di Maggio, Hugh Duffy, Robert W. A. Feller, James E. Foxx, Frank F Frisch, Henry L (Lou) Gehrig, Robert M (Lefty) Grove, Rogers Hornsby, Carl O Hubbell, Miller J Huggins, Walter P. Johnson, William J Klem, Joseph V. McCarthy, Cornelius McGillicuddy (Connie Mack), John J McGraw, Christopher Mathewson, Stanley F Musial, Jackie Robinson, George H (Babe) Ruth (who has been called the greatest hero of them all), Tristram E Speaker, John S Vander Meer, John P (Honus) Wagner, Theodore S Williams, and Denton T (Cy) Young See Robert Smith, Baseball (1947), Martin Rothan, ed , The Baseball Rules and Decisions Book (1949), Parke Cummings, The Dictionary of Baseball with Official Rules (1950), Lee Allen, 100 Years of Baseball (1950), J G T Spink, The Baseball Register and The Baseball Guide (latest eds)

Basedow, Johann Bernhard (yōhän' bĕrn'hart bā'zudō), 1723–90, German educator, b Hamburg, educated in Hamburg and at the Univ of Leipzig Later he taught in Denmark (1753) and Germany (1761) but became involved in controversies aroused by his unorthodox religious writings In 1774 his Elementarwerk was published with funds raised by popular subscription, and Basedow opened at Dessau a school called the Philanthropin, where the methods of elementary education outlined in this text were employed Basedow emphasized realistic teaching and introduced nature study, physical education, and manual training He resigned in 1778 because of disagreements with his staff, and the school closed in 1793 His reforms were widely influential, however, and similar institutions were established throughout Germany

Basel (bä'zul) or Basle (bäl), Fr Bâle (bal), canton, Switzerland, bordering on France and Germany It is traversed by the Rhine (which here becomes navigable) and, in the south, by the Jura mts The inhabitants are mainly German-speaking and Protestant The canton has been divided since 1833 into two independent half cantons—Basel-Land (-länt), (165 sq mi , pop 94,459), formed of the rural districts, with its capital at Liestal, and Basel-Stadt (shtat), coextensive with the city of Basel and its suburbs (14 sq mi , pop 169,961) Founded by the Romans, it became an episcopal see (7th cent), passed to the Alemanni, the Franks, and Transjurane Burgundy, and in the 11th cent became a free imperial city ruled by prince-bishops It joined the Swiss Confederation in 1501 and accepted the Reformation in 1523 Though expelled from the city, the bishops continued to rule the bishopric of Basel, including PORRENTRUY and DELÉMONT, which in 1815 became part of Bern canton. The oppressive rule of the patriciate in the city over the rest of the canton resulted in revolts (1831–33) and the split into two half cantons The city is divided by the Rhine into Greater Basel (left bank), the intellectual and commercial center, and Lesser Basel, where the industries—producing chiefly chemicals, metal products, clothes, foodstuffs, and silk—are concentrated Among the principal buildings are the cathedral (consecrated 1019), the university (founded 1460), the 16th-century town hall, and an art gallery with a valuable collection of Holbein's works One of the oldest intellectual centers of Europe, Basel was the residence of Froben, Erasmus, Holbein the Younger, Calvin, and Nietzsche Leonhard Euler, Jacob, Jean, and Daniel Bernoulli, and Jakob Burckhardt were born here It is also a financial center and the seat of the Bank for International Settlements and of the Swiss Industries Fair.

Basel, Council of, 1431–49, council in the Roman Catholic Church, generally considered to have been ecumenical at its convocation It fell into heresy Its chief importance lies in the contest between council and pope The Council of Constance had seen the rise of the conciliar theory, the doctrine that the ultimate authority in the Church rests upon the general council, to which the pope must be subject It had been the plan to have frequent councils, but that of Basel was the first of importance to follow Constance, that of Pavia-Siena having accomplished little Pope MARTIN V convoked the council but died soon afterward, and it was EUGENE IV who confirmed the convocation. Various problems were brought before the council, the settlement of the difficulties with the Hussites, reform in the Church, particularly financial reform, and the matter of negotiations for the union of the Eastern Church and Western Church. Eugene was suspicious of the council, fearing that in the question of the Hussites it might reawaken doctrinal questions already regarded as settled, and he ordered the council dissolved almost immediately This marked the real outbreak of trouble between the council and the pope which was not to end until the council did. Emperor SIGISMUND, who desired the settlement of Hussite disputes from the council and desired coronation at the hands of the pope, acted as mediator The council pronounced its supremacy over the pope and in 1432 reached the zenith of its power Eugene was driven to granting more and more concessions, but the compromise reached was not lasting, and the continual reassertion of the conciliar supremacy led to the institution of a process against the pope for disobedience and ultimately to the complete denunciation of the council by the pope in the bull Doctoris gentium (1437) The council, which thus became heretical, had accomplished a good deal before this time The Compactata had marked a compromise with the Hussites, the annates and various papal taxes were declared illegal, various other reforms in church organization and finance were accomplished Eugene summoned the council to Ferrara (see FERRARA-FLORENCE, COUNCIL OF) The council continued to function at Basel Finally the process against Eugene was carried through, and AMADEUS VIII of Savoy was elected as pope (called Antipope Felix V) The allegiance of most temporal rulers was still given to Eugene, although the reforms of Basel were adopted by the French at Bourges and incorporated into the Pragmatic Sanction of Bourges, the council was not actually approved, some tentative steps were taken by the German princes in favor of the council, and these helped to bring the pope to accept the Basel reforms, only Savoy and Switzerland were loyal to the council Trouble arose between Felix V and his electors, the power of the council declined In its last days it moved to Lausanne All of its efforts came to an end with the resignation of Felix V in favor of NICHOLAS V, successor to Eugene IV With it the conciliar theory fell

base line : see GEODESY

Basel-Land and Basel-Stadt : see BASEL

Bashan (bā'-), in the Bible, fertile region E of the Jordan from the latitude of Haifa northward to that of Tyre It was conquered by the Israelites and given to the half tribe of Manasseh and is mentioned for fertility and for the sturdiness of its cattle and sheep Num 21 33, Deut 3, 2 Kings 10 33, Ps 22 12, 68 15, Amos 4 1

Bashan-havoth-jair see HAVOTH-JAIR

Bashemath (bāsh'u-), wife of Esau Gen 26 34, 36 2, 3

Bashford, James Whitford, 1849–1919, American educator and missionary, b Lafayette co , Wis , grad Univ of Wisconsin, 1873, and Boston Univ School of Theology, 1876 From 1889 to 1904 he was president of Ohio Wesleyan Univ Elected (1904) bishop in the Methodist Church with China as his field, Bashford became an authority on Chinese questions His books include China and Methodism (1906) and China an Interpretation (1916) See biography by G R Grose (1922)

Bashkir Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic (bŭshkēr'), autonomous republic (55,400 sq mi , pop 3,144,713), E European RSFSR, in the western foothills of the Urals and in the S Urals Ufa, the capital, Sterlitamak, and Beloretsk are the main cities Drained by the Ufa Belava, and other rivers, it is important for its agriculture, timber, and minerals (iron, copper, manganese, magnesite, gold, chromium, lead, bauxite, barite, petroleum, and lignite) The Trans-Siberian and South Siberian railroads serve the area About 40 percent of the population are Russians, about 24 percent are Bashkirs, and the rest are mostly Turko-Tatars Originally an eastern nomadic people, the Bashkirs made their appearance in the 10th cent They came under Tatar rule in the 13th cent , accepted the religion (Islam) and the speech (Turkic) of their conquerors, and became tributary to Russia in 1556 Despite the numerous rebellions of the warlike people, Bashkiria was gradually penetrated by Russian colonization Bashkiria was made an autonomous republic in 1919

Bashkirtseff, Marie (bāsh'kurtsĕf), 1860–84, French diarist and painter, b Russia As a young child she lived at various resorts of Italy and France The journal for which she is famous was begun at the age of 12 It is the frank record of an egotistical, talented, and precocious child, avid for fame and admiration She hoped first to win it as a singer, but her voice failed and she studied painting at Julien's in Paris Several of her pictures were hung in the Salon, a self-portrait is in the museum at Nice She wrote letters to many of the famous men of her time, of whom only Maupassant continued the correspondence In the last years of her short life she had a devoted friend in her art teacher, Bastien-Lepage Parts of her journal were published in both French and English in 1890, her letters in 1891 See her Journal of a Young Artist (new ed , 1926), Dormer Creston, Fountains of Youth (1937)

basic slag, artificial fertilizer obtained as a waste product in the manufacture of steel by both the Bessemer and the open-hearth processes It is a valuable source of phosphorus and also contains free lime (calcium), which is beneficial in neutralising acid soils

Basil, Saint: see BASIL THE GREAT, SAINT

Basil I (Basil the Macedonian), c 813–886, Byzantine emperor (867–86). Of obscure background, he came (c 856) to the attention of Emperor MICHAEL III, who, impressed by his athletic physique, made him his boon companion In 866 Basil assassinated Michael's uncle, Bardas, who until then was chief minister, and prevailed upon Michael to declare him coemperor Michael having shifted his affections to a boatman, whom he wished to have crowned, Basil procured the emperor's murder in 867 and had himself proclaimed sole emperor Thus the Macedonian dynasty of the East, which lasted for two centuries, was founded Basil turned out to be a capable ruler He reformed the finances, modernized the law of Justinian I by introducing a new code, protected the poorer classes, and restored the military prestige of the empire Byzantine art and architecture entered their second golden age during his rule The major event of his reign was the dissension between the Roman and the Eastern churches Basil strove vainly to prevent a breach He restored (867) to the patriarchate IGNATIUS OF CONSTANTINOPLE, who had been deposed in favor of PHOTIUS, but on Ignatius' death Photius again became patriarch Basil in 865 had divorced his wife and married the mistress of Michael III His successor, Leo VI, though legally Basil's son, was probably fathered by Michael

Basil II, c 958–1025, Byzantine emperor (976–1025), surnamed Bulgaroktonos [Bulgar slayer] With his brother, Constantine VIII, he nominally succeeded his father, Romanus II, in 963, but had no share in the government during the administration of the usurping generals NICEPHORUS II (963–67) and JOHN I (967–76) Primarily a soldier, Basil from 976 exercised virtually sole rule, while his debauched brother was emperor only in name Basil suppressed (976–89) a series of revolts of the great landowners and revived and strengthened the laws directed against them by ROMANUS I He subjugated and annexed (1018) Bulgaria, though leaving it some measure of autonomy, and later extended the eastern frontier of his empire to the Caucasus During his reign the schism between the Roman and the Eastern churches continued and widened Basil was succeeded by Constantine VIII (1025–28) and by Constantine's daughter Zoë

Basil III, Russian ruler see VASILY III

basil (bāz'ĭl), any plant of the genus Ocimum, tender herbs or shrubs mostly of Old World warm regions, related to the mints and widely cultivated for the aromatic leaves used for seasoning The basil of Kents's "Isabella" (and that of Boccaccio's story) is the common or sweet basil (Ocimum basilicum), once considered medicinal There are also the holy basil, venerated in India, the bush basil, and related plants sometimes called basil

Basilan (bäsē'län), northernmost group of the Sulu Archipelago, SW of Mindanao, in the Philippine Islands The largest island (494 sq mi , 1939 pop 48,086) of the group is also called Basilan, its products are rubber and coconuts

Basile (bäzēl'), village (pop 1,132), SW La , NE of Lake Charles, founded 1905 It has oil fields

Basilian monks (bŭzĭl'ēŭn), monks of the Eastern Church They follow the Rule of St BASIL THE GREAT, which has been universal among them since the 7th cent They have no centralized government, the rule treats proper monastic living, not organization Basilians are cenobites Their monasteries are collections of small cells, the whole group being a laura The chief monastery is the Great Laura of Mt Athos, another famous Orthodox monastery is St Catherine on Mt Sinai There are Basilians in communion with the pope The chief figure of Basilian history is the reformer, St THEODORE OF STUDIUM See MONASTICISM basilica (bŭsĭl'ĭkŭ) [Gr ,=royal], large building erected by the Romans for transacting business and disposing of legal matters The term is also applied to the general type of church building used by Christians up to the 10th cent The floor plan exhibits a wide central aisle, with one or more aisles at each side and with an apse or apses at the end, the aisles were continuous open colonnaded porticoes, surrounding the center space Sometimes, as in the Basilica Julia in the Roman Forum, the aisles were double Among the early basilicas were one in Pompeii (2d cent B C) and the Basilica Porcia in Rome Several basilicas, generally near the forums, were built before A D 300 in Rome, in Italy, and in the colonies In the 4th cent , Christians began to build edifices for worship like the smaller basilicas of private mansions These had a center nave with one aisle at each side and an apse at one end on this platform sat the bishop and priests Basilicas of this type were built not only in Western Europe, but in Greece, Syria, Egypt, and Palestine A good example of the Oriental basilica is the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem (6th cent) The finest basilicas in Rome were St John LATERAN, St Paul-outside-the-Walls, and San Clemente After the 6th cent the simple columnar construction was modified aisles were used instead of straight lintels, heavy piers replaced the slender columns, and vaulting came to be used throughout rather than only in the side aisle Thus gradually emerged the massive Romanesque churches, which still retained, however, the fundamental plan of the basilica.

Basilicata (bäzēlēkä'tä), region (3,856 sq. mi , pop 543,262), S Italy, extending from the Apennines southward to a short strip of the Tyrrhenian coast and southeastward to the Ionian Sea Corresponding to most of ancient LUCANIA and part of ancient SAMNIUM, Basilicata is now divided into Matera and Potenza provs and has the city of Potenza as its capital The climate is unfavorable, water is scarce over much of the region, and the soil is not very fertile Agriculture is supported by the raising of sheep and goats Communications are poor and commerce and industry minimal Malaria, still a scourge on the coast, caused the flourishing coastal towns to be abandoned in the early Middle Ages The region passed in turn to the Lombards, the Byzantines, and (11th cent) to the Norman duchy of Apulia, of which MELFI, now in Basilicata, was the capital Basilicata shared the fortunes of the kingdom of Naples, but its territory was constantly under feudal lords The 20th cent has seen reclamation works and social and land reforms

Basilides (bŭsĭl'ĭdēz), fl 120–145, Gnostic teacher of Alexandria He wrote Exegetica (24 books of biblical commentary) and poems The Basilidean sect of GNOSTICISM attracted many followers

Basilikon Doron (bŭsĭl'ĭkun dō'rŭn) [Gr ,=royal gift], book written by James VI of Scotland (subsequently James I of England) as a guide for the conduct of his son Henry when he became king It was completed in manuscript in 1598 and published the following year James warned Henry of meddlesome ministers and expounded the doctrine of the divine right of kings Henry died in 1612 and did not ascend the throne See edition by James Craigie (1944)

Basiliscus (bă'sĭlĭ'skus), d 477, usurper at Constantinople (475–77) He caused the failure of the expedition sent (468) against the Vandals by his brother-in-law LEO I and usurped the throne in the reign of ZENO (475) His extortions and his Monophysite tendencies led to the restoration of Zeno, who imprisoned Basiliscus and left him to die

basilisk (bă'sĭlĭsk, bă'zĭlĭsk) [Gr ,=little king], in fable, winged African lizard or serpent Pliny says that serpents flee at his hiss and his very glance is fatal

Basilius Valentinus (bŭsĭl'ēŭs văl'untī'nus), pseudonym (representing a nonexistent monk of the 15th cent), believed to have been adopted by Johannes Thölde of Frankenhausen, Germany His Currus triumphalis antimonii (1604) led to the wide use of antimony in fevers Thölde claimed that his books on chemistry were translations from the Latin of Basilius Valentinus

Basil the Great, Saint (bă'zĭl, bā'-), c 330–379, Greek prelate, bishop of Caesarea in Cappadocia, Doctor of the Church, and one of the Four Fathers of the Greek Church He was a brother of St GREGORY OF NYSSA In his student days at Athens he knew Julian, later emperor, and began his lifelong friendship with St GREGORY NAZIANZEN Converted to the religious life by his sister, St Macrina, he withdrew (c 357) to a retreat in Pontus There he wrote much of the Longer Rule and of the Shorter Rule, on these the life of the BASILIAN MONKS is based Through his rules Basil was a spiritual ancestor of St BENEDICT As counselor (365) and successor (370) of Eusebius, bishop of Caesarea and head of most of the Church in Asia Minor, Basil established orthodoxy over ARIANISM in the Byzantine East His revision of the liturgy is occasionally used in the Byzantine rite His works On the Holy Ghost and Against Eunomius are elegant, acute defenses of the Catholic system In the West his feast is June 14 See William Kemp Lowther Clarke, Basil the Great (1913), M G Murphy, St Basil and Monasticism (1930)

Basin, town (pop 1,099), co seat of Big Horn co , N Wyo , on the Bighorn river, in a farm area The state tuberculosis sanatorium is near by

Baskerville, John, 1706–75, English designer of type and printer His work as printer and publisher began in 1757, and in 1758 he became printer to Cambridge Univ His type faces introduced the "modern," pseudoclassical style, with level serifs and with emphasis on the contrast of light and heavy lines His work influenced that of the Didot family in France and that of BODONI in Italy, and for a time his "modern" type faces were generally preferred to the "old style" of CASLON Books printed by Baskerville are typically large, with wide margins, and excellent as to paper and ink The first wove paper used for printing books was made to his order The thin lines of his types required paper of smooth finish After his death most of his types were bought by Beaumarchais and were used for his edition of Voltaire The matrices, long lost, were rediscovered in Paris in 1929 by W E Rudge basketball. The game is played mostly indoors by two opposing teams of five players each—a center, two forwards, and two guards—on a regulation court 94 ft long and 50 ft wide At each end of the court is a basket made of bottomless white cord suspended from a metal ring, 18 in in diameter, which is attached, 10 ft. above the floor, to a backboard A team directs its play toward throwing the ball—which is round, leather-covered, and inflated—through one basket and toward preventing members of the opposing team from scoring through the other basket Each goal or basket counts two points Illegal body contact is penalized by awarding free throws—counting one point for each one made—to players fouled A player guilty of five personal fouls must leave the game An umpire and a referee rule on the plays of the game, which is divided into two periods or halves of 20 min each Basketball was originated in the United States in 1891 by Dr James A Naismith (1861–1939), then physical director of the Y M C A college in Springfield, Mass Today it is one of the leading national sports and has been enthusiastically adopted all over the world In March, 1937, the center jump (the opposing centers leaping to tap the ball tossed up between them to their respective mates) was limited by the National Rules Committee to the opening of the regular and overtime periods Previously there had been a center jump after every goal scored Now the team scored on puts the ball in play again with a throw-in from out of bounds underneath the basket it defends This virtual elimination of the center jump, the most far-reaching change in the game, has made basketball an even faster, higher-scoring sport and has reduced some of the advantage enjoyed by taller players While basketball rules vary widely from country to country, there are only slight variations within the United States Basketball became an important sport in American colleges, and such post-season collegiate basketball tournaments as the National Invitation Tournament, launched in 1938, and the National Collegiate Athletic Association play-off, begun in 1939, attract wide attention In 1950 the College of the City of New York team became the first to win both tournaments in the same year Professional basketball was begun in 1896 in New York city, and in 1925 the short-lived American Basketball League was formed, with nine cities in the circuit The New York Celtics (1918–29) became one of the best-known professional teams in the country In 1946 the Basketball Association of America was formed, and after public enthusiasm grew, the professional league admitted several new teams Various new rules have been adopted by this league Famous players and coaches of basketball are Forrest C Allen, Clair F Bee, Nathan (Nat) Holman, Joseph Lapchick, Angelo (Hank) Luisetti, George Mikan, and Adolph Rupp See H A Hobson, Basketball Illustrated (1948)

Basket Makers, name given to the members of an early American Indian culture in the Southwest, predecessors of the Pueblo Indians They are so called because they knew much of basketmaking, and by covering the baskets with clay and baking them hard they created useful fireproof containers They seem to have been at first nomadic hunters, using hunting sticks and wooden clubs Later they learned agriculture, particularly maize growing, probably from the southern neighbors in Mexico They dug pits and lined them with stone for storage of grain and later built substantial dwellings One system of dating places their arrival in the area as early as 1500 B C At some time, perhaps 2,000 years later, they were succeeded in the area by the ancestors of the Pueblo Indians, who probably absorbed many of the older people Others may have moved and may have been the ancestors of other Indian tribes Archaeologists divide the time of their culture into several periods, usually called Basket Maker I, Basket Maker II, and Basket Maker III

basketry, the art of weaving or coiling and sewing flexible materials to form vessels or other commodities The materials used include twigs, roots, strips of hide, splints, osiers, bamboo splits, cane or rattan, raffia, grasses, straw, and crepe paper Discoveries in the W United States indicate that the use of clay-covered baskets for cooking probably led to making pottery, while in the Andaman islands pottery was evidently made first In Egypt baskets used for storing grain in 4,000 or 5,000 B C have been excavated The tombs of Etruria have yielded ancient specimens, and these, as well as much later Roman baskets, display weaving strokes still in use Basketry has been employed by primitive peoples for rude huts, which they daubed with clay, and for articles of dress and adornment, granaries, traps, boats, cooking utensils, water vessels, and other utilities Africa, India, the East Indies, and China contribute largely to the modern supply of baskets Through skill in weaving, the basketmakers of certain localities become widely known This is the case with those of Leicester, East Leake, and Newark, England, the Black Forest of Bavaria, Verdun, France, Arima, Japan, the Blue Ridge, the Cumberland Plateau, and Great Smoky Mts and Arizona and California, where the Navaho and Hopi Indians are expert There are two types of baskets—woven and coiled or sewed—but variety is afforded by the many different strokes, forms, and methods of decoration Among the articles now made of wickerwork are furniture, hampers, flower, fruit, market, and shipping baskets, demijohn covers, and smaller baskets for general and household use. There are many large commercial basket-weaving establishments, but basketry is still a popular home industry and is taught in schools and, as vocational therapy, in hospitals See H H Bobart, Basketwork through the Ages (1936), M L Lee, Basketry and Related Arts (1948)

Basking Ridge, village (pop 1,778), N N J , near the Passaic SW of Morristown, settled early in the 18th cent At a tavern here Charles Lee was captured by the British in 1776.

Basle see BASEL

Basmath (băs'-), daughter of Solomon 1 Kings 4 15

Basoche or Bazoche (both bȧzôsh'), guild of clerks of the Parlement of Paris, formed early in the 14th cent It was organized as a miniature feudal state (the Royaume de la Basoche), with its king and other dignitaries It had the power to try minor cases among members and cases brought by outsiders against members It held mock trials, designed to give practice and instruction in legal procedure The Basoche played a great role in the development of the French stage, the clerks gave moralities, farces, and other comic pieces, many of them virulent satires on the existing order Henry III, in 1582, prohibited its use of the title king and ended its dramatic representations Besides the Royaume de la Basoche, there were similar organizations connected with other Parisian courts and with provincial courts After the French Revolution these organizations disappeared

Basque Provinces (băsk), Basque Euzkadi, Span. Vascondadas, the provinces of Álava, Guipúzcoa, and Vizcaya (combined area, 2,803 sq mi , pop 955,764), N Spain, S of the Bay of Biscay and bordering on France in the northeast (In a wider sense the name also applies to other territories largely inhabited by Basques—Spanish NAVARRE and the French provinces of Labourd, Soule, and Lower Navarre, all in Basses-Pyrénées dept) BILBAO, capital of Vizcaya prov , is the largest Basque city and one of the chief industrial centers of Spain Other cities include San Sebastián, capital of Guipúzcoa prov , Vitoria, capital of Álava prov , and historic GUERNICA The region includes the southern slopes of the W Pyrenees and is crossed by the CANTABRIAN MOUNTAINS In the southwest it is bounded by the Ebro In the densely populated coastal provinces of Vizcaya and Guipúzcoa the chief occupations are mining (iron, lead, copper, and zinc), shipbuilding, and fishing The minerals are exported mainly to England The history of the three provinces up to 1936 is covered in the article on the Basques Shortly after the outbreak of the Spanish civil war of 1936–39 the central government granted the three provinces autonomous status, and the Basque nationalist leader, José Antonio de Aguirre, was elected president of the autonomous government With a large part of Basque territory in insurgent hands, the Basques nevertheless defended their newly won status with their customary heroism and fervor However, by April, 1937, a new Insurgent offensive resulted in the complete subjection of the provinces by the Franco regime, which abolished Basque autonomy

Basques, people of N Spain and SW France There are c 1,550,000 Basques in the three Basque Provs and Navarre, Spain, c 200,000 in Labourd, Soule, and Lower Navarre, France, and c 250,000 in South America and other parts of the world The majority have preserved their ancient language, which is unrelated to any other tongue They also have jealously guarded their ancient customs and traditions, although they have played a prominent role in the history of Spain and France Primarily a people of free peasants, shepherds, fishermen, navigators, miners, and metalworkers, they also have produced such figures as St Ignatius of Loyola, St Francis Xavier, and Francisco de Vitoria Their physical stamina is symbolized by their strenuous national game, jai alai The Basques may be descendants of CRO-MAGNON MAN, they almost certainly are the oldest surviving racial group in Europe, and they antedate the ancient Iberian tribes of Spain, with which they have been erroneously identified Before Roman times the Basque tribes, little organized politically, extended further to the north and south than now But the core of the Basque country resisted Romanization and was only nominally subject to Roman rule Christianity was slow in penetrating (3d–5th cent) Once converted, the Basques have remained fervent Catholics, but they retained a certain tradition of independence from the hierarchies of Spain and France Both hardy and wily as warriors, the Basques withstood domination by the Visigoths and Franks Late in the 6th cent they took advantage of the anarchy prevailing in the Frankish kingdoms and expanded northward, occupying present GASCONY (Latin Vasconia), to which they gave their name The duchy of Vasconia, formed in 601 and chronically at war with the Franks, Visigoths, and Moors, was closely associated with, and at times dominant over, AQUITAINE In 778 the Basques, who had just been reduced to nominal vassalage by Charlemagne, destroyed the Frankish rearguard at RONCESVALLES, but they subsequently recognized Louis the Pious, king of Aquitaine, as their suzerain. The duchy of Gascony continued, but the Basques early in the 9th cent concentrated in their present habitat and in 824 founded, at Pamplona, the kingdom of NAVARRE, which under SANCHO III (1000–1035) united almost all the Basques. Although Castile acquired Guipúzcoa (1200), Álava (1332), and Vizcaya (1370), the Castilian kings had to acknowledge the wide democratic rights enjoyed by the Basques The Basque assemblies at GUERNICA remain famous With the conquest (1512) of Navarre by Ferdinand the Catholic, the Basques lost their last independent stronghold After the 16th cent , Basque prosperity declined and emigration became common, especially in the 19th cent Basque privileges remained in force under the Spanish monarchy, but in 1873 they were abolished because of the Basques' pro-Carlist stand in the Carlist Wars To regain autonomy, the Basques in Spain supported nearly every political movement directed against the central authority. In the civil war of 1936–39 they wholeheartedly supported the Loyalist government

Basra (bŭs'rŭ, băz'ru), city (pop c 180,000), Iraq, a port on the Shatt el Arab, 75 mi from the Persian Gulf The city, founded (A D 636) by the caliph Omar, owes its importance to its position on the trade routes using the Persian Gulf and to the fertility of the floodlands, where dates are grown A cultural center under Harun-al-Rashid, it declined with the decay of the Abbasid caliphate, and its possession was long contested by the Persians and the Turks With the opening of the rail connection to Baghdad, it regained commercial importance and resumed the profitable export of dates, barley, wool, and wheat In the Second World War, Basra was the scene of brief fighting in 1941, when British troops landed to crush the German-inspired Iraqi rebellion The name of the city also appears as Bassora, Bussora, and Busra

bas-relief see RELIEF

Bas-Rhin (bȧ-rȧ'), department (1,848 sq mi , pop 673,781), E France, occupying lower ALSACE Strasbourg is the capital

Bass, Sam (băs), 1851–78, American desperado, b near Mitchell, Ind He went (c 1870) to Denton, Texas, where he worked for a hotelkeeper and then was a cowboy and a deputy sheriff before he "went bad," joining a gang of gamblers and cattle rustlers He was a road agent and train robber around Deadwood, S Dak , for a time, then returned to Texas, where he gained a name as a train robber One of his gang turned informer, and when Sam Bass arrived to rob the bank at Round Rock he came into a trap and was mortally wounded by the Texas Rangers His career and especially his death provided material for frontier ballads See biography by Wayne Gard (1931)

bass, name for various food and game fish chiefly those of the sea-bass family (Serranidae) and of the sunfish family (Centrarchidae) The common sea bass (Centropristes striatus) is found along the coast from Massachusetts to N Florida Sometimes included in the sea-bass family and sometimes considered members of a separate family (Moronidae) are the striped bass or rockfish (Roccus saxatilus or R lineatus) found in fresh and salt water from New Brunswick to Florida and introduced in California the white bass (R chrysops) of the Great Lakes and Mississippi and Ohio valleys region, the yellow bass (Morone interrupta) of the lower Mississippi valley and the white or silver perch (M americana) of fresh and brackish waters from Nova Scotia to South Carolina In Europe the bass (M labrax) is found on the southwest coast and in the Mediterranean Fresh-water bass of the sunfish family include the largemouthed black bass, the smallmouthed bass, and the calico bass

bass, tree see BASSWOOD

bass (bās), in musical harmony, the part of lowest PITCH The term is used for the lowest-pitched male voice and for instruments of low pitch, such as bass CLARINET, bass DRUM, FRENCH HORN, BASSOON (bass oboe), and bass TROMBONE

Bassano, Jacopo (yäkō'pō bas-sä'nō), 1510–92, Venetian painter, whose real name was Jacopo, or Giacomo, da Ponte, b Bassano, Italy He studied with his father, Francesco da Ponte, an able painter, and in Venice Most of his life was passed in his native village and his paintings of religious themes abound in peasant types and homely scenes He was perhaps the first artist in Italy to paint genre A contemporary of Tintoretto, he recalls the latter in his brilliant use of high-lighting, with which he achieves dramatic characterization With his four sons he maintained a productive workshop, and his works abound in galleries throughout Europe Characteristic works include The Nativity (San Giuseppe, Bassano), Expulsion of the Money Changers (National Gall , London), Jacob's Return to Canaan (Ducal Palace, Venice); and The Annunciation to the Shepherds (National Gall. of Art, Washington, D C). His son and worthy follower, Leandro Bassano (lāän'drō), 1558–1623, is represented in many European galleries The Cleveland Museum of Art has his fine Pietà

Bassano (bȧsä'nō), town (pop 590), E Alta , ESE of Calgary The Bassano or Horseshoe Bend Dam near by, on the Bow river, is one of the longest dams in the world.

Bassano (bäs-sä'nō), city (pop 11,774), Veneta, NE Italy, on the Brenta A free commune in the Middle Ages, it was under Venetian rule after 1402. The Da Ponte family of painters, called Bassano after the city, had a flourishing school here in the 16th cent and here are many of their works In the 17th and 18th cent the Remondini printing plant was famous throughout Europe The palaces, churches, villas, and gardens of the city recall its past flowering Here in 1796 Bonaparte defeated the Austrians

Bassein (bŭsān', busān'), town (pop 45,662), S Burma, on the Bassein river Lying at the western edge of the Irrawaddy delta, it is important chiefly for the milling and export of rice

Basselin, Olivier (ôlēvyā' bäsulē'), 15th cent, French miller of Vire, Normandy, leader of a set of villagers who made drinking songs, love songs, and war songs The men were called the Compagnons du Vau de Vire [companions of the Vire valley, see VAUDEVILLE], and their songs the Vau, or Vaux, de Vire No specific song can be attributed to Basselin, though formerly the oldest collection of Vaux de Vire was ascribed to him This collection (first surviving ed , 1670) was composed by Jean Le Houx (d 1616), a Vire advocate See J P Muirhead, The Vaux-de-Vire of Maistre Jean Le Houx (1875)

Basses-Alpes (bäs-zälp'), department (2,698 sq mi , pop 83,354), SE France, in Provence, bordering on Italy Digne is the capital

Basses-Pyrénées (bus'-pērānā'), department (2,978 sq mi , pop 415,797), SW France The Pyrenees form its border with Spain, and Biarritz and Bayonne lie on its short Atlantic coast line The department, with Pau as its capital, includes all of BÉARN and the Basque part of GASCONY

Basse-Terre (bastĕr'), port (pop 10,086), capital of GUADELOUPE dept , French West Indies It is at the southern end of Guadeloupe or Basse-Terre island in a beautiful setting backed by rugged mountains The chief commercial activities of the department, however, center at POINTE-A-PITRE

Basseterre, town (pop 12,210), on SAINT KITTS, capital of St Kitts-Nevis presidency, British West Indies While sugar refining is its chief industry, Basseterre is also a port, the commercial depot at which the products of the presidency are collected for export

basset hound see HOUND

Bassett, James, 1834-1906, American Presbyterian missionary, b Canada, grad Wabash College, 1856, and Lane Theological Seminary, 1859 In 1872, under the auspices of the American Board, he founded the first American mission at Teheran, Persia Under his supervision other mission stations were founded, and in 1881 he became senior missionary and head of the Eastern Mission of Persia He wrote Persia, the Land of the Imams (1886) and Persia, Eastern Mission (1890)

Bassett, John Spencer, 1867-1928, American historian, b Tarboro, N C , grad Trinity College (now Duke Univ), 1888, Ph D Johns Hopkins, 1894 He was professor of history at Trinity (1894-1906) and then at Smith College (1906-28) His first writings were mostly monographs on North Carolina history published in the "Johns Hopkins Studies " Bassett founded (1902) the South Atlantic Quarterly and also established the "Smith College Studies " Chief among his writings are The Federalist System, 1789-1801 (1906, Vol II in the "American Nation" series), The Life of Andrew Jackson (1911), The Middle Group of American Historians (1917), Expansion and Reform, 1889-1926 (1926, Vol IV in the "Epochs of American History" series), The Writing of History (with J J Jusserand, W C Abbott, and C W Colby, 1926), and The Makers of a New Nation (1928, Vol IX in the "Pageant of America" series) His textbook, A Short History of the United States (1913, 3d ed , revised and enlarged by Richard H Bassett, 1939), is still widely used Bassett also edited much original material, including The Writings of "Colonel William Byrd " (1901), Selections from the Federalist (1921), The Southern Plantation Overseer as Revealed in His Letters (1925), and The Correspondence of Andrew Jackson (7 vols , 1926-35)

Bassompierre, François, baron de (frāswä' bärō du bäsōpyĕr'), 1579-1646, marshal of France Under Henry IV he distinguished himself in the army and as a courtier, and he remained loyal to Marie de' Medici during her regency Subsequently he was ambassador to Spain, to England, and to Switzerland, and he fought against the HUGUENOTS in 1621-22 and 1627-28 His opposition to Richelieu and his alleged part in an intrigue caused him to be imprisoned (1631) in the Bastille until after the cardinal's death (1643) During his captivity he wrote his valuable memoirs

bassoon (bäsōōn'), wood-wind instrument, the bass of the oboe family The long tube of which it is made is bent double, and because of its resemblance to a bundle of sticks, its Italian name is fagotto It may have been invented in the 16th cent., by 1600 it was made in several sizes In 1659 it made its appearance in the opera orchestra and today is considered indispensable in the modern orchestra. It was much improved in both France and Germany in the 19th cent , each country producing a very fine instrument

Bassora, Iraq see BASRA

basso-relievo. see RELIEF

Bass Strait (bäs), channel, 80 to 150 mi wide, between Tasmania and Victoria, Australia, merging with the Indian Ocean to the west and the Tasman Sea to the east Its discovery by George Bass in 1798 proved that Tasmania was not a part of the Australian continent, as had been believed bass viol (bās vī'ul), largest type of the viola da gamba Sometimes the double bass is erroneously called bass viol basswood (bās'wŏōd) or linden, name for any of a number of species of the genus Tilia, deciduous trees of the Northern Hemisphere The wood, light, strong, and easily worked, is valued for many uses, e g , for beehives and frames for honeycombs, Venetian blinds, woodenware, cheap furniture, carving, paper pulp, excelsior, and, because of its lack of odor, for tubs and baskets for foods The tough fibers of the inner bark, or bast, have been much used as cordage and for mats and other items The nectar of the fragrant flowers of most species is valued as a source of honey The blossoms have also been used in making a tea and a perfume The famous Berlin street, Unter den Linden, shaded by basswoods, was named for the trees, which have also been called linn, lime, and bass tree and whitewood

Bast see EGYPTIAN RELIGION

bast (bäst), inner BARK of the stems of plants, not necessarily of woody plants It is the phloem or food-conducting tissue It is the source of commercially important fibers in such plants as hemp, flax, jute, ramie, sunn hemp, and basswood Most bast fibers are obtained by retting—a process in which the rotting away of the other tissues is hastened by exposure to the weather or by submerging in water

bastard, person born out of wedlock If the child was born after the marriage of the parents, but its conception took place before the marriage, it is not a bastard It is presumed that any child born to a married woman, or within competent time after termination of the marriage, is the child of her husband If, however, it can be proved that it was physically impossible for the husband to have been the father, because of nonaccess to the wife, he may bring action to establish the ILLEGITIMACY of the child See LEGITIMATION

Bastard of Orléans, French general see DUNOIS, JEAN, COMTE DE

Bastia (bästē'ä), seaport (pop 37,122), NE Corsica, France It is the chief commercial center of the island Founded (14th cent) by the Genoese, it was the capital of Corsica until 1791 There is a citadel built in the 17th and 18th cent Bastia was severely damaged in the Second World War

Bastian, Adolf (ä'dôlf bas'tyan), 1826-1905, German anthropologist Often called the father of ethnography, he recorded his observations of peoples and cultures in Der Mensch in der Geschichte [man in history] (1860) His concept of "elemental ideas" as common to mankind but varying in form according to "folk ideas" of a given area foreshadows the culture-area theory of modern anthropology His influence was transmitted through the works of Boas and others His more important studies are in the Zeitschrift für Ethnologie, which he helped to found and edit, and Ethnologische Forschungen (1871-73)

Bastian, Henry Charlton (bās'-), 1837-1915, English physician At the University college, London, he taught pathological anatomy (1867-87), and principles and practice of medicine (1887-95) His numerous publications include books on the various kinds of paralysis, on the brain, and on the origin and evolution of life

Bastiat, Frédéric (frādārēk' bastyä'), 1801-50, French economist In his Harmonies of Political Economy (1850, Eng tr , 1860) he advocated and developed the classical theories of economic individualism and laissez faire He was a popular writer on controversial subjects, especially free trade, which he vigorously supported There are several translations of his series of Sophismes économiques (1847-48)

Bastidas, Rodrigo de (rôdhrē'gō dā bästē'dhas), c 1460-1526, Spanish conquistador in Colombia In 1501, accompanied by Balboa and Juan de la Cosa, he discovered the mouths of the Magdalena Because of difficulties with the Spanish crown, it was 1525 before he returned to found SANTA MARTA He prohibited exploitation of the Indians and so dissatisfied his followers that they attempted his assassination The wounds inflicted made him return to Cuba, where he died

Bastien-Lepage, Jules (zhül' bästyĕ'-lupäzh'), 1848-84, French painter of figures in the open air, son of a peasant of Damvillers, France He early showed talent and after graduating from the College of Verdun entered the École des Beaux-Arts and studied under Cabanel His portrait of his grandfather in the Salon of 1874 and First Communion (Luxembourg Mus , Paris), shown the following year, won him early recognition. A strong bond of friendship existed between him and his pupil Marie Bashkirtsev which lasted until their early deaths Well known are his Haymakers and portrait of André Theuriet, both in the Luxembourg Museum, and Joan of Arc (Metropolitan Mus) See memoir by André Theuriet (Eng tr , 1892), journal of Marie Bashkirtsev

Bastille (bästēl') [O Fr ,=fortress], fortress and state prison in Paris, located, until its demolition in 1789, near the site of the present Place de la Bastille Begun c 1369 by Hugh Aubriot, the provost of Paris under Charles V, it was later enlarged Among the political prisoners it housed were Nicolas Fouquet, the Man with the Iron Mask, and Voltaire Arbitrary and secret imprisonment by LETTRE DE CACHET gave rise to stories of horror, but actually the regime of the Bastille was for most political prisoners mild, no dishonor attached to being confined there Yet as a symbol of absolutism the Bastille was bitterly hated On July 14, 1789, a Parisian mob, angry at the dismissal of Necker, stormed the Bastille in the hope of capturing ammunition The governor, the marquis de Launey, was killed, the seven inmates, none of them political prisoners, were freed Marking the real outbreak of the French Revolution, the event acquired symbolic significance, and July 14 became the national holiday of republican France

Bastogne (bästô'nyu), town (pop 4,717), Luxembourg prov , SE Belgium, a market town in the Ardennes During the German counteroffensive of Dec , 1944 (known as the BATTLE OF THE BULGE), elements of the 101st U S Airborne Division and of other units, all under Gen Anthony McAuliffe, held (Dec 20-26) encircled Bastogne until relieved by the U S 3d Army Invited by the Germans to surrender, McAuliffe supposedly replied, "Nuts!" The town was nearly destroyed in the battle

Bastrop (bās'trŏp") 1 Industrial town (pop 6,626), parish seat of Morehouse parish, NE La Founded c 1845, it boomed after the discovery of natural gas in 1916 It has paper, pulp, carbon, and brick manufactures 2 City (pop 1,976), co seat of Bastrop co , S central Texas, on the Colorado and SE of Austin, settled 1827, inc 1837 It ships cotton, pecans, turkeys, and eggs Lignite and oil are found in the area

Basutoland (busōō'tōländ", buzōō'-), British territory (11,716 sq mi , pop 624,605), an enclave in the Union of South Africa, administered directly by the crown The capital is Maseru Basutoland is a high plateau rising to 11,000 ft in the large mountain region of the Drakensberg range in the east Cattle, sheep, and goats are raised, and hides, skins, and wool are exported The chief crops are wheat, corn, and sorghum There are no railroads or hard finished roads The native inhabitants, the Basuto, were formed into a nation (1815-31) out of the remnants of tribes which had been scattered by the raids of the Zulu and Matabele To resist the advances of the Boers, the Basuto accepted (1868) the protection of Great Britain In 1871 the territory was annexed to the Cape Colony, but in 1884 it was restored to the direct control of the British crown The country is governed by a resident commissioner with the help of an advisory native council

bat, mammal of the order Chiroptera It is the only mammal with the power of true flight and is found in almost all temperate and tropical parts of the world The wing is a membrane stretched between the elongated bones of four fingers, and in most bats it extends along the body from the forelimbs to the hind limbs and from the hind limbs to the tail The thumb is small, clawed, and free of the membrane Bats suspend themselves head downward when at rest Chiefly nocturnal, they have some sight but depend for their ability to avoid collision in flight mostly on their keen senses of hearing and touch In temperate climates some bats hibernate in caves in winter and some migrate Bats are divided into two suborders, the Microchiroptera or insectivorous bats of both hemispheres and the Old World Megachiroptera, most of which feed on fruits and blossoms Some Megachiroptera (e g , Pteropus and Acerodon) that have a foxlike muzzle and a wingspread of nearly 5 ft are called "flying foxes " Among the Microchiroptera are the Old World mouse-tailed, horseshoe, hollow-faced, and false vampire bats, the New World hare-lipped, long-legged, smoky, disk-winged, and vampire bats (the only true blood-drinking vampires are Desmoda and Diphyllus), and the free-tailed and vespertilionid (or typical) bats of both hemispheres The excreta of some species is a source of guano There is evidence that the bite of some vampires can transmit paralytic rabies to humans and to stock animals Bats have figured in folklore, sorcery, primitive religions, and in heraldry The belief that they will deliberately try to fly into one's hair is unfounded See G M Allen, Bats (1939)

Bataan (bätän', -tan', bata-an'), peninsula and province (157 sq mi , 1948 pop 92,901), W Luzon, Philippine Islands The peninsula (30 mi long, 15 mi wide) forms the west shore of Manila Bay After the fall of Manila in the Second World War, U S troops withdrew here in Jan., 1942, and fought gallantly against tremendous odds for three months before they were forced to surrender They were first under the command of Gen Douglas MacArthur and later under Lt Gen Jonathan M Wainwright

Bataille, Henry (ārē' bătāy'), 1872–1922, French dramatist His early poetry allied him with the symbolists, but in the 1900s he gained success with plays based on divided personality and on the reflection of the subconscious in conscious behavior Some of his successes were Maman Colibri (1904), La Marche nuptiale [the wedding march] (1905), La Vierge folle [the foolish virgin] (1910), and L'Homme à la rose [the man with the rose] (1921)

Batalha (bătă'lyū) [Port ,=battle], town, W central Portugal, just S of Leiria, in the old region of Estremadura Here is the magnificent Dominican monastery and church (Santa Maria da Vitória), built by John I of Portugal to commemorate his victory (1385) over John I of Castile at near-by Aljubarrota The monastery, now a national museum, is a masterpiece of architecture

Batalpashinsk, RSFSR see CHERKESSK

Batanes, Philippine Islands see BATAN ISLANDS

Batangas (bătäng'gäs), municipality (1948 pop 59,582), on SW Luzon, capital of Batangas prov, Philippine Islands, S of Manila It is in a farm area producing rice and sugar cane

Batan Islands (bătän') or Batanes (bătä'nēs), island group and province (76 sq mi , 1948 pop 10,705), N of Luzon, in the Philippine Islands They are separated from Formosa by Bashi Channel Coal and sulphur are mined

Batavi (bută'vī), ancient Germanic tribe, in the Rhine estuary Batavian regiments served under Rome until the anti-Roman conspiracy of Civilis, one of their leaders, in A D 70 Their name was later revived to designate Holland, particularly the BATAVIAN REPUBLIC

Batavia (bûtā'vēu), Malay Jakarta or Djakarta, city (pop 533,015), capital of the United States of Indonesia, on NW Java The city is divided into two sections—the old town in the north, with Javanese, Chinese, and Arab quarters, and the modern residential garden suburb of Weltevreden in the south Its port, Tanjungpriok (5 mi northeast of the city proper), is the largest in Indonesia With its canals crossed by drawbridges, Batavia somewhat resembles a Dutch town There are a university, an archaeological and ethnological museum, and several churches built in the late 17th cent Industries include the manufacturing of textiles, leather and rubber goods, machinery, and chemicals The chief exports are minerals, rubber, tea, and spices In 1619 the Dutch founded the fort of Batavia next to the Javanese settlement of Jakarta, which was destroyed in 1620 From 1811 to 1814 Batavia was the headquarters of British rule in Java In the Second World War it was briefly the headquarters of the Allied Far East Command

Batavia. 1 City (pop 5,101), NE Ill , on the Fox river and W of Chicago, founded 1834, inc as a village 1856, as a city 1891 Among its manufactures are cosmetics, medicines, and farm implements Near by is Mooseheart, a community supported by the Loyal Order of Moose 2 City (pop 17,267), co seat of Genesee co , W N Y , SW of Rochester, in a farm area, inc as a city 1914 It was settled in 1801 by Joseph Ellicott, agent for the HOLLAND LAND COMPANY Shoes, paper boxes, and farm tools are made Batavia has a U S veterans' hospital and a state school for the blind The Genesee County Fair is held in the city annually A monument to William Morgan is a reminder of the Anti-Masonic movement once waged here Albert Brisbane was born in the old Brisbane homestead, now the city hall 3 Village (pop 1,320), co seat of Clermont co , SW Ohio, E of Cincinnati, settled c 1797, laid out 1814, inc 1842

Batavian Republic, 1795–1806 The United Provs of the NETHERLANDS, occupied by the French in the FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY WARS, were reconstituted as the Batavian Republic in 1795 and remained under French occupation and tutelage In 1801 Bonaparte imposed a new constitution on the republic, which was financially drained by French requisitions, and in 1806 he made it into the kingdom of Holland for his brother, Louis BONAPARTE

Bate, William Brimage, 1826–1905, Confederate general, governor of Tennessee, and U S Senator (1887–1905), b Castalian Springs, Tenn He served in the Mexican War and was a member of the state legislature before studying law at Lebanon and serving as attorney general of the Nashville district (1854–60) Entering the Confederate army as a private (1861), Bate rose in a spectacular career to be a major general, he served with distinction at Shiloh, Murfreesboro, Chattanooga, and Missionary Ridge, in the Atlanta campaign, and at Nashville He was elected governor of Tennessee in 1882 and reelected in 1884, the chief accomplishment of his administration being the settlement of the state debt His career was capped by his terms as Senator See biography by Park Marshall (1908)

Bateman, Kate Josephine, 1843–1917, American actress. Of a theatrical family, she appeared as a prodigy at the age of three, was managed (1851–54) by P T Barnum, and was successful in Shakesperian roles and in the title role of Augustin Daly's Leah the Forsaken, just before and after the Civil War She acted (1875–77) with Sir Henry Irving in London and after 1892 conducted a school of acting there

Bates, Edward, 1793–1869, American statesman, b Goochland co , Va In 1814 he went to Missouri, where he became an outstanding lawyer Bates held several public offices, including a seat in Congress (1827–29), but as Whig leader in strongly Democratic Missouri he did not have much chance for political success However, he was sufficiently well regarded to win 48 votes on the first ballot of the Republican national convention at Chicago in 1860, even though he had not formally joined that party Lincoln chose him as one of the border-state representatives in his cabinet, and Bates served as Attorney General until Nov , 1864, when he retired to St Louis See H K Beale, ed , The Diary of Edward Bates, 1859–1866 (1933), B J Hendrick, Lincoln's War Cabinet (1946)

Bates, Henry Walter, 1825–92, English naturalist and explorer In 1848 he went with A R Wallace to Brazil, where he explored the upper Amazon, returning in 1859 with some 8,000 new species of animals He was the first to state a plausible theory of MIMICRY His great work was The Naturalist on the River Amazon (1863) From 1864 Bates was assistant secretary of the Royal Geographical Society

Bates, Katharine Lee, 1859–1929, American educator and poet, b Falmouth, Mass , grad Wellesley, 1880 She began teaching at Wellesley in 1885 and from 1891 to 1925 was professor of English literature Her hymn, America the Beautiful, which first appeared in the magazine the Congregationalist, July 4, 1895, is commemorated by murals at Wellesley Her books of verse include Fairy Gold (1916) and Little Robin Stay-behind (1923), a collection of plays in verse See foreword of her Selected Poems (1930)

Batesburg, town (pop 2,933), W central S C , WSW of Columbia, in a farm and timber area Cotton goods are made here

Bates College see LEWISTON, Maine

Bateson, William, 1861–1926, British naturalist He is known especially for his work on Mendelism and the determination of sex His works include Materials for the Study of Variation (1894), Mendel's Principles of Heredity (1902), and Method and Scope of Genetics (1908) See his Essays and Addresses (with biography by Beatrice Bateson, 1928) and Scientific Papers (1929)

Batesville. 1 City (pop 5,267), co seat of Independence co , N central Ark , on the White River and in the Ozarks, settled c 1810 It is the center of an area producing cotton, lumber, fruit, poultry, milk, manganese, bauxite, and marble Arkansas College and the state Masonic orphans' home are here Near by are a Univ of Arkansas agricultural experiment station and the White River Dam 2 City (pop 3,065), SE Ind , ESE of Greensburg Meat packing is done here 3 Town (pop 1,815), a co seat of Panola co , NW Miss , near the Tallahatchie and S of Memphis, Tenn in a farm area, founded 1855

Bath, county borough (1931 pop 68,815, 1947 estimated pop 77,490) and city, Somerset, England It is in a natural amphitheater in the Avon valley, the river flows through the city In the 1st cent A D the Romans discovered the warm springs here, named the town Aquae Sulis, and built walls and elaborate baths (first excavated in 1755) In Saxon England the town's importance was religious A convent was founded in 676, and a Benedictine abbey was built in the 10th cent., demolished in 1090, and rebuilt A new abbey, finished in the early 17th cent , is still standing. In Chaucer's time Bath was a wool-marketing and cloth making town Although the curative properties of the baths had early drawn visitors, it was in the 18th cent that Bath flourished as a fashionable spa Beau, or Richard, Nash, called the king of Bath, was the social arbiter John Wood and later his son, John Wood the younger, planned streets, terraces, and squares of buildings suited to the purposes of the gay resort, chiefly built of Bath stone Of these, Royal Crescent and the Circus are most noted The Assembly Rooms (destroyed by fire in air raids of 1942) were built by the younger Wood Among the industries of modern Bath are metal casting, electrical engineering, limestone quarrying, and the manufacture of electric generators, soap, biscuits, paints, and plasticine See Edith Sitwell, Bath (1932), Bryan Little, The Building of Bath (1947)

Bath. 1 City (pop 10,235), co seat of Sagadahoc co , SW Maine, on the west bank of the Kennebec 12 mi from the ocean, inc as a town 1781, as a city 1847 Champlain and others visited or passed this site when exploring the Kennebec, and permanent settlers came c 1670. Having a good harbor and with timber resources easily accessible, Bath became a busy shipbuilding center. At Bath Iron Works, founded soon after the Civil War, cruisers and destroyers as well as pleasure and commercial craft were built, the city flourished particularly during the First and Second World Wars It is a port of entry The Davenport Memorial has ship models and paintings and other marine exhibits. Carlton Bridge (1927) spans the Kennebec at Bath 2 Village (pop. 4,606), co seat of Steuben co , S N Y , on the Cohocton and NW of Elmira, in a rich farm area; settled 1793, inc. 1816 Its chief products are ladders and knit goods A U.S veterans' administration center (opened 1878) is here 3 Town (pop 380), E N C , on the Pamlico river and SE of Washington, settled c 1690 on the site of an Indian village, laid out 1704, inc 1705 The oldest town in the state, it was for a time the capital of the province of North Carolina A library was started in 1700, the first public library in the state In 1941 several old buildings were restored 4 Borough (pop 1,720), E Pa , near Bethlehem, settled c 1810, laid out 1816, inc 1856 It has cement plants 5 Town, W Va see BERKELEY SPRINGS

Bath, Order of the, British order of knighthood Established as a military order by George I in 1725, it was said to be a revival of an order created by Henry IV in 1399 Existence of the earlier order is disputed, but there is evidence of the creation of knights of the Bath (if not of the order) at Henry's coronation and as late as that of Charles II In 1815 the order was instituted in three classes, and in 1847 civil knights were added to the military Aside from the sovereign, the order consists of knights grand cross (G C B), knights commanders (K C B), and commanders (C B) The order ranks second only to that of the Order of the Garter

Bathgate, burgh (pop 10,097), West Lothian, Scotland Its chief industries are metal casting and the manufacture of chemicals

Bathory (bă'tôrē), Hung Báthory, Pol Batory, Hungarian noble family Stephen Bathory, 1477–1534, a loyal adherent of JOHN I of Hungary (John Zapolya), was made (1529) voivode of TRANSYLVANIA His youngest son became (1575) king of Poland (see STEPHEN BATHORY) and was succeeded as prince of Transylvania by his brother, Christopher Bathory, 1530–81 Christopher married Elizabeth, sister of Stephen Bocskay His son and successor, Sigismund Bathory, 1572–1613, was probably insane At first a loyal vassal of the Hapsburg king of Hungary (Emperor Rudolf II), he crushed (1594) the pro-Turkish faction of nobles and was recognized by Rudolf as hereditary prince In 1596 he abdicated in favor of his cousin, Andrew Cardinal Bathory (d 1599), planning to enter religious life, but he soon reversed his decision and, with the help of Stephen Bocskay, returned to power as a vassal of the sultan After a second abdication (1599) he returned in 1601, but in 1601 he abdicated definitively (in favor of Rudolf) and retired to Silesia Elizabeth Bathory, d 1614, a niece of Stephen Bathory, is celebrated in legend and history as a female werewolf She is said to have slaughtered more than 600 virgins in order to renew her youth by bathing in their blood She was incarcerated in 1610 and died in prison See Baring Gould, Book of Werewolves (1865) Gabriel Bathory, 1589–1613, a nephew of Andrew Cardinal Bathory, became prince of Transylvania in 1608 His harsh regime provoked a rebellion by the nobles, and he was murdered By the marriage of his niece Sophia (d 1680) to George II RAKOCZY, the two prominent families were united

Bath-rabbim (–răb'–), gate in Heshbon Cant 7 4

baths, in architecture The practice of building chambers for the purpose of bathing is traceable to ancient Egypt and to the early civilizations about the Aegean Sea Remains of bathing apartments dating from the Minoan period exist in the palaces at Cnossus and Tiryns The ancient Greeks devised luxurious bathing provisions, with heated water, plunges, and showers Bathing as a public diversion was developed by the Romans to a unique degree Thermae, probably copied after the Greek gymnasia, had no exterior architectural adornments, but the interiors were lofty and impressive, with rich mosaics, rare marbles, and gilded metals Water, brought by aqueducts, was stored in reservoirs, heated to various temperatures, and distributed by piping to the bath apartments Certain rooms were kept heated by means of furnaces which sent hot air into lines of flues beneath floors and in the walls In Pompeii there are ruins of public baths, and in Rome there exist extensive remains of the thermae of Titus (A D 80), of Caracalla (A D 212–35), and of Diocletian (A D 302)

Bath-sheba (băth'-shē'bû, băth-shē'bû), the wife of Uriah the Hittite David seduced her, effected the death of her husband, and married her Her second son by David was Solomon 2 Sam 11, 12, 1 Kings 1; 2, Mat 1 6 Bath-shua 1 Chron 3 5.

Bath-shua (–shō'ŏ'û) [Heb ,=daughter of Shua], same as BATH-SHEBA

Bathurst, municipality (pop. 11,889), New South Wales, Australia, WNW of Sydney Founded in 1815 and named for the earl of Bathurst, then colonial secretary, it was the first settlement on the western side of the Blue Mts. It is a gold-mining center and the seat of a Roman Catholic and an Anglican archbishop.

Bathurst, town (pop. 3,554), NE N B. It is a fishing and lumbering center and a summer resort on Nipisiguit Bay, a recess on the south shore of Chaleur Bay The Nipisiguit river entering the bay here affords fine salmon fishing.

Bathurst (bă'thûrst, bă'thûrst'), town (pop 21,000), capital of Gambia, on St Mary's Island in the mouth of the Gambia river, a port on the Atlantic Ocean. It was founded (1816) by the British as a base for suppression of the slave trade Peanuts are exported

Bathurst Island, area 786 sq mi , off the north coast of Australia, in the Timor Sea. It is an aboriginal reservation

bathysphere: see DIVING

batik (bŭtēk', bă'tĭk), method of decorating fabrics practiced for centuries by the natives of Indonesia It consists in applying a design to the surface of the cloth by means of melted wax The material is then dipped in cool vegetable dye, the portions protected by the wax or "resist" do not receive the dye and when the wax is removed in hot water display a light pattern on the colored ground Remains of clothing found in Java indicate that the same or similar patterns have been in use for about 1,000 years and are handed down in families Certain designs are reserved for royalty and high officials Motifs are geometric or are based on conventionalized natural objects Cotton cloth is generally used, and some silk Batik was first brought into Europe by Dutch traders In the 19th cent , Western craftsmen adopted the art See C F Lewis, A Practical Handbook of Batik (1924), Tassilo Adam, The Art of Batik in Java (1935)

Batista y Zaldívar, Fulgencio (fōōlhĕn'sēō bătā'stă ē saldē'vär), 1901–, president of Cuba (1940–44) An army sergeant, Batista took part in the opposition that overthrew Gerardo MACHADO in 1933 and subsequently headed the military and student junta that ousted Carlos Manuel de CÉSPEDES and installed GRAU SAN MARTÍN Made chief of staff of the army, he increased its size and power and soon became de facto ruler, launching a three-year plan for economic and social rehabilitation Batista's term in office as de jure ruler was characterized by increasingly democratic practices, in the 1944 election his candidate lost to Grau San Martín

Batley, municipal borough (1931 pop 34,573, 1947 estimated pop 39,700), West Riding of Yorkshire, England, SW of Leeds It leads in the manufacture of shoddy and produces other textiles, carpets, and machinery

Batlle y Ordóñez, José (hōsa' bät'vā ē ôrdō'nyās), 1856–1929, president of Uruguay (1903 7, 1911–15) A journalist and the head of the Colorado party, Batlle in his second term initiated legislation to increase public welfare and break the anarchism which had plagued Uruguay since the winning of independence The constitution of 1919, because of his influence, curbed the powers of the executive and provided for socialistic government, a trend not interrupted until Gabriel TERRA became president in 1931

Batoche (bătŏsh'), village, central Sask , S of Prince Albert Here, in Riel's Rebellion, Louis Riel made his headquarters, and the rebels were routed on May 11, 1885

Batoni, Pompeo Girolamo (pōmpā'ō jērō'lämō bätō'nē), 1708–87, Italian painter, b Lucca, one of the foremost painters of his day His works include Magdalen, his masterpiece (Louvre), Achilles (Uffizi), John the Baptist, Marriage of St Catherine (Quirinal, Rome), and many fine portraits of popes and sovereigns, among them Benedict XIV, Clement XIII, Pius VI, and Emperor Joseph II

Baton Rouge (bät'un rōōzh") [Fr ,=red stick], city (pop 34,719), state capital, and parish seat of East Baton Rouge parish, SE La , NW of New Orleans It stretches along high bluffs, safe from floods, on the east bank of the Mississippi Built by the French in 1719 as a fort, it occupied a strategic place on the river It was incorporated in 1817 and was made state capital in 1849 In the Civil War the city was taken by Farragut after the fall of New Orleans (May, 1862), a Confederate attempt to recapture it failed (Aug , 1862) In the railroad-building boom that followed the Civil War, Baton Rouge emerged as a major distributing and commercial center It is served by three main railroad lines and is a deepwater port (a port of entry), an airport, and the focus of retail trade for a large surrounding area Set in a rich agricultural region producing cotton, sugar, strawberries, fruit, vegetables, cattle, and dairy products, it has numerous food-processing industries Chemical plants and woodwork factories are also important The chief industry, however, is oil refining, the Standard Oil plant here being one of the largest in the world The city retains much of its old French charm The old capitol (1882), built in the Gothic style of the original which was burned during the Civil War, still stands, a new capitol was occupied in 1932 LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY AND AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL COLLEGE is here, as are a state agricultural experiment station and the state schools for the deaf and the blind Near by is Southern University and Agricultural and Mechanical College (Negro; land grant; coeducational; 1880).

Batory: see STEPHEN BATHORY and BATHORY, family

Battenberg (bă'tnbûrg), princely family issued from the morganatic union of Alexander, a younger son of Louis II, grand duke of Hesse-Darmstadt, and Countess Julia von Hauke, who was created (1858) princess of Battenberg Their oldest son, Louis, an admiral in British service, was created marquess of Milford Haven, and married a granddaughter of Queen Victoria In the First World War he changed his name to Mountbatten His daughter Alice married Prince Andrew of Greece, third son of King George I of Greece, and their son, Prince Philip, married (1947) Princess Elizabeth of England Louis Mountbatten is third son of the 1st marquess of Milford Haven The second son of Prince Alexander of Hesse was (1879–86) prince of Bulgaria (see ALEXANDER) A third son, Henry, married Beatrice, daughter of Queen Victoria of England Their daughter, Victoria Eugenie, married Alfonso XIII of Spain

Battenberg lace or Renaissance lace see LACE

battering ram, machine used in war to destroy the walls of fortifications in ancient and medieval times The invention is very old and is sometimes attributed to the Phoenicians or to Archimedes The primitive battering ram was a huge beam borne on men's shoulders and crashed into a wall Later the beam was supplied with a metal cap and was suspended to be swung, still later it was laid on rollers and impelled by means of ropes The machine in its most elaborate form in the Middle Ages was mounted on wheels and had a protective roof, the beam was from 60 to 120 ft long, and the machine was operated by as many as 100 men The battering ram fell into disuse with the introduction of artillery

Battersea, metropolitan borough (1931 pop 159,552, 1948 estimated pop 116,500) of SW London, England, on the south bank of the Thames. The river is here crossed by the Albert and Chelsea bridges, along the shore between them stretches Battersea Park (nearly 200 acres) The borough is largely one of workingmen's residences This district suffered much damage in air raids in 1940–41

Battery, the, park at the southern extremity of Manhattan island, New York city, the site of Dutch and later English fortifications The municipal aquarium here (opened in 1896 and closed in 1941 because of the construction of the Brooklyn-Battery tunnel) occupied a historic structure Built as a fort (c 1807), it was converted into Castle Garden, a noted amusement hall and opera house Here Jenny Lind made her American debut (1850) under P T Barnum In 1855 Castle Garden became an immigration station, serving as such until Ellis Island opened in 1892 See Rodman Gilder, The Battery (1936)

battery, in law, the unlawful touching by an aggressor, or by some force put in motion by an aggressor of any part of the person of another or of anything worn or carried by another, e g , a stick The contact need not be by a direct blow, spitting on his clothes or performing an operation upon him without consent also constitute battery Every consummated ASSAULT is a battery, but a battery may also occur without any intent to direct the force against the one injured, as when it results from a negligent act To be the basis for a suit, a negligent battery must cause actual physical injury, whereas an intentional battery may render the aggressor liable to damages even if no direct physical injury has been done By the term "assault and battery" is meant an intentional or malicious physical injury, however slight, done to another's person in an offensive manner

battery, electric Commonly the term is used to describe an electric CELL, such as the "dry-cell battery," but more correctly it is applied to a group of cells acting together as a source of electric current In radio receiving sets in which batteries are used to supply the current, these batteries are given special names to indicate the part of the set which they supply The A battery or filament battery is a small electric battery which provides current to heat the FILAMENT in the vacuum tube of a radio receiver Both dry cells and storage batteries are used, and from 1 5 to 6 volts are necessary, according to the type of tubes used The current to the filament is controlled by a small, variable resistance, called a rheostat A batteries are used chiefly in portable and automobile sets The B battery is used to produce the necessary voltage on the plates of the vacuum tubes in a radio receiving set It is the source of the current in the PLATE circuit The battery is usually of the dry-cell type and consists of many small individual dry cells connected in series, the current consumed being very small The battery may also be of the storage type The standard dry-cell B battery is made in 45-volt size, and two or more batteries are used in each set Where direct current (DC) is available, it may be used, together with a suitable resistance, to replace the B battery This system has been extended to replace A and C batteries also, and the rectifying systems are incorporated in "all-electric" sets Such sets require only a single supply of current Even in automobile radios, a generator may be used to provide suitable current and so eliminate all batteries The C battery is used in the GRID circuit of a vacuum tube (see TUBE, VACUUM) for the purpose of creating a potential or bias (usually negative) on the grid of the tube C batteries are used in some detector-tube circuits, but they are more frequently found in amplification circuits The bias required for receiving sets varies from 1 5 to 45 or more volts, depending on the plate voltage and the type of tube used One of the chief advantages of using a C battery is the reduction of B battery or plate current Without grid bias, this would increase in large-power tubes to such a point that the tube would overheat and be destroyed In "all-electric" radio sets, the grid bias is almost always obtained from the rectified and filtered power supply that furnishes the plate voltage In this case the voltage is divided by means of resistances, so that the grid of the tube is slightly negative with respect to the filament or cathode (see ELECTRODE), and the plate is maintained at a relatively high positive voltage The storage battery is much used as a source of electric current, especially in the automobile It consists of a number of electric cells connected in series (see ELECTRIC CIRCUIT) Within each cell positive plates are connected together to form the positive electrode, and negative plates to form the negative electrode When the battery is being charged, an electric current is led into it causing a chemical reaction to take place In this reaction, electric energy is transformed into chemical energy, which later, by reversing the process, can be converted back into electrical energy and can thus cause a current to flow The lead storage battery is commonly used It is made up of a number of electric cells with plates of lead and lead oxide and is filled with a solution of sulphuric acid In discharging, the lead and lead oxide are acted upon by the sulphuric acid to form (in both cases) lead sulphate In the reaction electricity is generated

Battey, Robert, 1828–95, American surgeon, b Augusta, Ga , M D Jefferson Medical College, 1857 He practiced in Macon, Ga A specialist in diseases of women, he became internationally known for the introduction of new techniques and practices in abdominal surgery

Battle, former urban district (1931 pop 3,491), Sussex East, England, NW of Hastings In 1066 the battle was fought here which resulted in the death of Harold and the elevation of his Norman conqueror as WILLIAM I of England There are ruins of Battle Abbey, founded by William to commemorate his victory Battle Abbey Roll, which was kept here, was a purported list of the noble companions of William in his battle It exists only in 16th-century documents which are possibly copies of a 14th-century compilation, now lost The whole is of doubtful authenticity battle In modern warfare the meaning of the word battle has broadened Though a battle may still be called a single conflict between armed forces of considerable size, a modern battle is likely to be fought in a much larger theater and over a longer period of time than in the past Sir Edward S Creasy made a list of 15 decisive battles of the world from 490 B C to 1815 They are Marathon (490 B C), Syracuse (413 B C), Arbela (331 B C), Metaurus (207 B C), the Teutoburg Forest (A D 9), Châlons-sur-Marne or Catalaunian Fields (451), Tour or Poitiers (732), Hastings or Senlac (1066), Orléans (1429), the victory over the Spanish Armada (1588), Blenheim (1704), Poltava (1709), Saratoga (1777), Valmy (1792), and Waterloo (1815) The list is, of course, arbitrary Other famous or decisive battles that affected the history of Europe and America are Salamis (480 B C), Issus (333 B C), Cannae (216 B C), Zama (202 B C), Pharsala (48 B C), Philippi (42 B C), Actium (31 B C), Adrianople (A D 378), Lechfeld (955), Bouvines (1214), Sluis (1340), Crécy (1346), Nikopol (1396), Agincourt (1415), Constantinople (1453), Pavia (1525), Mohacs (1526), Mühlberg (1547), Lepanto (1571), White Mt (1620), Lützen (1632), Rossbach (1757), Plassey (1757), Kings Mt (1780), Yorktown (1781), Aboukir Bay or battle of the Nile (1798), Austerlitz (1805), Trafalgar (1805), Leipzig (1813), Ayacucho (1824), Solferino (1859), Vicksburg (1863), Gettysburg (1863), Sedan (1870), Manila Bay (1898), Tsushima (1905), first and second battles of the Marne (1914, 1918), Jutland (1916), Verdun (1916), Coral Sea and Midway (1942), Alamein (1942), and Stalingrad (1942–43)

battle, wager of: see ORDEAL

Battle Abbey and Battle Abbey Roll: see BATTLE

Battle above the Clouds see CHATTANOOGA CAMPAIGN

Battle Creek, city (pop 43,453), S Mich , SW of Lansing, at the confluence of the Kalamazoo with the Battle Creek, settled 1831, inc. as a village 1850, as a city 1859 It is a farm trade center and is widely known for its cereal and other health foods Automobile parts, farm equipment, and ink are also made Dr J H Kellogg became director of the Health Reform Institute (founded 1866 by Seventh-Day Adventists) and reorganized it (1876) as Battle Creek Sanitarium. The W. K. Kellogg

Foundation (for child welfare) has headquarters here In the Leila Arboretum is the Kingman Memorial Museum of natural history Not far is the Kellogg Bird Sanctuary, a U S veterans' administration center and a convalescent hospital are at near-by Fort Custer

Battleford, town (pop 1,336), W Sask , at the confluence of Battle river with the North Saskatchewan NW of Saskatoon It is one of the oldest towns in the western part of the province, having served as capital (1876–83) of the Northwest Territories and figured prominently in Riel's Rebellion of 1885 North Battleford has become the business center of the region

Battle Hymn of the Republic, The: see HOWE, JULIA WARD

Battle of the Bulge, popular name of the battle in the Second World War, Dec , 1944–Jan , 1945, resulting from the last German attempt to break through the Allied lines on the Western Front On Dec 16, 1944, a strong German force, spearheaded by armor and commanded by Marshal von Rundstedt, attacked the thinly held American front in the Belgian Ardennes sector Taking advantage of the foggy weather and of the utter surprise of the Allies, the German columns penetrated deep into Belgium, threatening Spa, Liége, Namur, and Dinant, and thus created a dent, or "bulge," in the Allied lines Simultaneously, the supply centers of Liége and Antwerp were subjected to intensive punishment by rocket bombs Only a small American pocket at BASTOGNE held out against the onslaught Cut off from the headquarters of General Bradley at Luxembourg, the U S 1st and 9th armies were temporarily placed under Field Marshal Montgomery, while the U S 3d Army attacked the German salient from the south Improved flying weather after Dec 24 helped the Allied counterthrusts, which by mid-January, 1945, had cut off the German escape routes The German offensive soon turned into a total rout, but not without having cost the U S forces more than 40,000 casualties During the battle both sides—but especially the less warmly dressed Americans—suffered greatly from the intense cold and snow of the Ardennes

Battle of the Spurs. 1 Fought in 1302 near Courtrai, Belgium, between the rebellious Flemish towns, led by Bruges, and an army sent by Philip IV of France, who had annexed Flanders in 1301 The French were utterly defeated The spurs taken from the fallen French knights formed so huge a trophy that they gave the battle its name 2 Won in 1513 by the English under Henry VIII over the French, at GUINEGATE, N France This second battle received its name possibly because of the speedy flight of the French cavalry

battleship: see WARSHIP

Batu Khan (ba'tōō kän'), d 1255, Mongol commander, grandson of Jenghiz Khan In 1235 Batu was placed at the head of the Mongol army assigned to the conquest of Europe, his chief general was Subutai Batu crossed the Volga, sending part of his force to Bulgaria but most of it to Russia By 1240 he had Moscow and Kiev in his grasp, and in the following two years he conquered Hungary and Poland and invaded Germany His recall to Karakorum in 1242 to participate in the election of a grand khan is sometimes said to have saved Europe from subjection to the Mongols Batu died while preparing additional campaigns From the gorgeous tents in which he camped, his host was called the GOLDEN HORDE The domain which he established is known as the Kipchak khanate

Batum (bŭtōōm'), city (pop 70,807), capital of Adzhar Autonomous SSR, Georgia, USSR, on the Black Sea near the Turkish border, with a large and excellent port Connected by pipe lines with Baku, it is a major oil-refining and -shipping center, a naval base, and a subtropical resort An ancient city, Batum was ceded to Russia by Turkey in 1878 at the Congress of Berlin

Batwa see PYGMY

Batyushkov, Konstantin Nikolayevich (kŭnstăntyēn' nyĭkul'yĭvĭch bŭt'yōōshkôf), 1787–1855, Russian poet He wrote lyrics, epigrams, and elegies in the classical manner and was a translator of Tibullus, Petrarch, and Boccaccio

Batz, Jean, baron de (zhäⁿ' bärō' dŭ bats), 1761–1822, French counterrevolutionist conspirator A deputy of the nobles to the States-General of 1789, he opposed the Revolution from the start He vainly plotted to save Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette from the guillotine and was involved in every royalist conspiracy against the Convention Despite his recklessness he always managed to escape arrest Batz was made a general after the Bourbon restoration See Meade Minnigerode, Marie Antoinette's Henchman (1936).

Baucis, in Greek legend see PHILEMON AND BAUCIS

Baudelaire, Charles (sharl' bōdlâr'), 1821–67, French poet and critic Brilliant, erratic, and inordinately attached to his mother, Baudelaire destroyed his life by poverty, debt, misunderstanding, and excesses His only volume of verse, Les Fleurs du Mal (1857, enlarged 1861, 1868, Eng tr., Flowers of Evil, 1936, and One Hundred Poems from "Les Fleurs du Mal," 1947), was publicly condemned as obscene, and six of the poems were suppressed A perfectionist who labored years on his work and was himself obsessed with morality, Baudelaire never fully recovered from the assault which he felt to be personal, and his affairs from that time declined progressively Although always haunted by inner despair, his work as a critic and as the translator of Poe, to whom he felt great affinity, earned him many friends and distinction in literary circles After two years in Belgium, where he lived in abject poverty, Baudelaire died in Paris See his letters to his mother (tr by Arthur Symons, 1927) and his intimate journal (tr by Christopher Isherwood, 1947), biography by Enid Starkie (1933), study by J D Benpett (1944)

Baudette (bôdĕt'), village (pop 1,017), co seat of Lake of the Woods co , N Minn , on Rainy River at the Canadian boundary It is a port of entry and lumber and farm trade town Headquarters of a Federal forest and game reservation and of a resettlement project are here Baudette was destroyed by forest fire in 1910 but rebuilt

Baudrillart, Jacques Joseph (zhäk' zhōzĕf' bōdrēyär'), 1774–1832, French writer on forestry and arboriculture He wrote Dictionnaire de la culture des arbres et de l'aménagement des forêts (1821) and Traité générale des eaux et forêts, chasses et pêches (10 vols , 1821–34)

Bauer, Georg see AGRICOLA, GEORG

Bauer, Harold, 1873–, Anglo-American pianist He was first a successful violinist, but in 1892 he studied the piano with Paderewski and has since earned international recognition as a pianist See Harold Bauer His Book (1948)

Bauer, Louis Agricola, 1865–1932, American magnetician, b Cincinnati, grad Univ of Cincinnati, 1888, Ph D Univ of Berlin, 1895 From 1899 he was lecturer on terrestrial magnetism at Johns Hopkins He served as chief of the terrestrial magnetism division of the U S Coast and Geodetic Survey (1899–1906) and as director of the department of terrestrial magnetism of Carnegie Institution (1904–29) Influential in coordinating work in magnetism in many parts of the world, he was a permanent member of the committee on terrestrial magnetism of the International Meteorological Conference and secretary and director of the central bureau of the section on terrestrial magnetism and electricity of the International Geodetic and Geophysical Union (1919–27) He founded in 1896 and edited until his death the periodical Terrestrial Magnetism and Atmospheric Electricity

Bauhaus (bou'hous), art school in Germany It revolutionized art training by combining the teaching of the pure arts with the study of crafts The Bauhaus was founded (1919) at Weimar when the old Weimar art academy was merged with a crafts school It was headed by Walter GROPIUS, with a faculty including Paul Klee, Lyonel Feininger, Vasily Kandinsky, Laszlo Moholy-Nagy, and Marcel Lajos Breuer The teaching plan, which insisted on functional craftsmanship in every field with a thorough realization by the student designers of the industrial problems of mechanical mass production, found vigorous opposition by politicians and academicians In 1925 the school moved to the more friendly city of Dessau, where Gropius designed special buildings to house the various departments Gropius resigned (1928) to return to private practice, and the leadership was continued by the architect Hannes Meyer, who in turn was replaced (1932) by Miés van der Rohe In the summer of 1932 the opposition to the school had increased to such an extent that the city of Dessau withdrew its support The school was then moved to Berlin, where they endeavored to carry on their ideas, but in 1933 the new German government closed the school entirely The Bauhaus ideas, enveloping design in architecture, furniture, weaving, and typography, among others, had by this time found wide acclaim in many parts of the world and especially in the United States Many of the instructors came here and encouraged and practiced further work with the same ideals The Chicago Institute of Design, founded by MOHOLY-NAGY, most completely carried on the teaching plan of the Bauhaus

Bauhin, Gaspard (gaspar' bōĕ'), 1560–1624, Swiss botanist and doctor of medicine, of French descent His early classification of plants by genus and species in his chief work, the Pinax theatri botanici (1623), anticipated the binomial arrangement of Linnaeus His elder brother, Jean Bauhin (zhäⁿ'), 1541–1613, was also a botanist and doctor of medicine A genus of plants, Bauhinia, was named for the brothers

Bauld, Cape, N F , at the extreme north end of the Great Northern Peninsula

Baum, Lyman Frank (bōm), 1856–1919, American writer of juvenile stories, b Chittenango, N Y Famous as the author of the Oz books, he wrote 14 in all. The first, The Wonderful Wizard of Oz (1900), was made into a musical extravaganza (Chicago, 1902), in which Fred Stone and Dave Montgomery rose to stardom, and in 1939 was made into a technicolor movie. The Oz books, many dramatized, were continued by R. P. Thompson after Baum's death.

Baumann, Oskar (ôs'kär bou'män), 1864–99, Austrian explorer in Africa He traveled up the Congo river to Stanley Falls (1885), and the following year explored Fernando Po, in the Gulf of Guinea. After accompanying a party to Mt Kilimanjaro in 1888, he explored East Africa for the German East African Society in 1890 and took a party (1892–93), to Victoria Nyanza where he found the Kagera river to be the chief tributary of the lake and the ultimate source of the Nile

Baumé, Antoine (ätwän' bōmā'), 1728–1804, French chemist He invented a graduated hydrometer (the scale of which is known as the Baumé scale) still used for specific gravity determinations and discovered various processes (e g , for the manufacture of sal ammoniac) important in industrial chemistry He wrote Éléments de pharmacie théorique et pratique (1762, 9th ed , 1818) and Chimie expérimentale et raisonnée (1773)

Bäumeler, Joseph Michael see BIMELER

Baur, Ferdinand Christian (fĕr'dĭnänt krĭs'tyan bour'), 1792–1860, German Protestant theologian He was from 1826 on the theological faculty of Tübingen He became convinced of Hegel's philosophy of history and studied Christian history and doctrines and the Bible from that point of view In New Testament criticism he rejected the authenticity of most of the books, using philosophical and literary criteria His methods and disciples were referred to as the Tübingen School

Bausch, Edward (boush), 1854–1944, American inventor of scientific devices, b Rochester, N Y From 1874 he was associated with the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company He worked with Edison on the kinetoscope and with Eastman on the camera and contributed largely to the development and perfection of microscopes and other instruments

Bautzen (bou'tsun), city (pop 38,524), Saxony, SE Germany, in Upper LUSATIA, on the Spree It has machine and textile industries Founded in the 10th cent , it was contested in the 11th and 12th cent by Poland, Meissen, Brandenburg, and Bohemia Eventually passing to Bohemia, it was burned (1634) in the Thirty Years War and in 1635 passed to Saxony In 1813 Napoleon I defeated a Russo-Prussian army near by Since 1921 Bautzen has been the see of the Catholic suffragan bishop of Meissen

Baux, Les (lā bō') ruined medieval town (pop c 60), Bouches-du-Rhône dept , SE France, near Arles Once the seat of a powerful feudal family, it is now a remarkable historical monument Bauxite, first discovered here, was named after Baux and is mined in the vicinity

Bauxite (bôk'sīt), unincorporated "company town" (pop 1,821), Saline co , central Ark , SW of Little Rock, in the midst of rich bauxite mines

bauxite, the hydrate of alumina, mixed with oxides of iron, silicon, or titanium in varying quantities It is a noncrystalline mineral, claylike, earthy, and ranging in color from white to deep brown or red, depending upon the nature and quantity of its components Its composition varies, alumina constituting from about 50 to about 70 percent It is widely distributed, the larger deposits occurring in Russia, Italy, Ireland, France (at Baux, where it was first discovered and from which it received its name), and the United States (Alabama, Arkansas, and Georgia) It is important as the chief source of metallic ALUMINUM, alumina, alums, and alundum—in fact, of most aluminum compounds It is used also, mixed with clay or lime, to line furnaces, because of its high melting point

Bavai (bäv'āī, bāvā'ī), the same as BINNUI 1.

Bavaria, Ger Bayern (bī'urn), state (without LINDAU and the Rhenish PALATINATE 27,119 sq mi., pop 9,029,090), S Germany MUNICH is the capital Bavaria is bounded by Czechoslovakia on the east, by Austria on the southeast and south, by Württemberg and Baden on the west, and by Hesse, Thuringia, and Saxony on the north Bavaria is divided into seven administrative and historical districts—Upper and Lower Bavaria, Upper, Middle, and Lower FRANCONIA, SWABIA, and the Upper PALATINATE Upper Bavaria, with Munich as its capital, rises to the Bavarian Alps, along the Austrian border, and culminates in the Zugspitze Between the Alps and the BOHEMIAN FOREST, which forms the border with Czechoslovakia, lies a high plateau, traversed from west to east by the Danube Lower Bavaria comprises parts of that plateau and of the Bohemian Forest, its capital, PASSAU, lies on the junction of the Danube and the Inn The FICHTELGEBIRGE, in NE Bavaria, occupies the Upper Palatinate The lowest-lying part of Bavaria is the Main river valley, at its northeastern extremity, in Lower Franconia The population of Bavaria is about evenly divided between agricultural and industrial pursuits, but the country, especially in Bavaria proper (i e , Upper and Lower Bavaria), is predominantly rich, softly rolling agricultural land Major industrial products are machinery, instruments, beer, and textiles There are important home industries such as the making of toys and musical instruments Salt and graphite are the chief mineral resources The scenic beauties and the picturesque local customs and costumes of the Bavarian Alps attract many tourists. Among the resorts are GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN and OBERAMMERGAU and the spas Bad Kissingen and Bad Reichenau Until the Second World War the historic cities and artistic centers, AUGSBURG, NUREMBERG, BAMBERG, WÜRZBURG, and ROTHENBURG OB DER TAUBER (all in Swabia and Franconia) were also major tourist attractions The borders of Bavaria varied considerably throughout its long history Until the early 19th cent Bavaria did not include Swabia and Franconia, which have separate histories The region was inhabited by Celts when Drusus conquered it (15 B C) for Rome The Baiuoarii (see GERMANS) invaded it (6th cent A D) and set up the duchy to which they gave their name St Boniface (8th cent) completed its Christianization In 788 Charlemagne defeated Duke Tassilo and added Bavaria to his empire From 817 to 911 Bavaria was ruled by the Carolingians LOUIS THE GERMAN, CARLOMAN (d 880), Emperor ARNULF, and LOUIS THE CHILD In 911 the duchy (then comprising, roughly, Bavaria proper, present Austria, and part of the Upper Palatinate) came under native rulers Frequent Magyar inroads were stopped (955) by Emperor OTTO I, who in 947 gave Bavaria to his brother Henry Henry's grandson was duke of Bavaria when he was elected (1002) German king as Henry II After his accession Bavaria was ruled by various houses, but in 1070 Emperor Henry IV gave the fief to Welf or Guelph d'Este IV (see ESTE) who began the dynasty of the GUELPHS From the 9th to the 12th cent the Bavarian dukes, of whatever house, were at the center of the rebellions of the great German princes against the imperial authority To reduce their power Emperor OTTO II in 976 stripped the duchy of all but present Upper and Lower Bavaria and the Tyrol When in 1137 the Guelph HENRY THE PROUD acquired Saxony in addition to Bavaria, Emperor CONRAD III deposed him and gave Bavaria to the BABENBERG rulers of Austria Frederick I restored (1154) Bavaria to HENRY THE LION, but in 1180 deposed the rebellious Guelph and bestowed the duchy (from which he detached the Tyrol) to Otto of Wittelsbach The political history of Bavaria, much reduced in importance, became that of the WITTELSBACH family, which ruled until 1918 The Wittelsbach fiefs, including the Rhenish Palatinate (acquired in 1214) were almost always divided among the numerous branches of the dynasty Under the Wittelsbach emperor LOUIS IV (1314–46) Bavaria was briefly reunited Duke Albert IV (d 1508), who again united Bavaria (except the Rhenish Palatinate) under his rule, introduced the law of primogeniture, thus Bavaria entered the Reformation period much strengthened The triumph of Catholicism in Bavaria proper was crucial for its later history Duke MAXIMILIAN I headed the Catholic League in the Thirty Years War and was rewarded with the Upper Palatinate and the rank of ELECTOR The agricultural wealth and the strategic position of Bavaria made it a coveted prize and a favorite battleground then and later Bavaria was overrun by foreign armies notably in the War of the SPANISH SUCCESSION, the War of the AUSTRIAN SUCCESSION, the War of the Bavarian Succession, and the French Revolutionary Wars Elector Maximilian, who in 1799 united all Wittelsbach lands, allied himself with Napoleon I, joined the CONFEDERATION OF THE RHINE, and in 1806 was proclaimed king of Bavaria as MAXIMILIAN I, and later gained much territory In 1813 Maximilian abandoned Napoleon and joined the Allies, who at the Congress of Vienna left him in possession of virtually all present Bavaria, including the Rhenish Palatinate In the period of reaction that followed, Bavaria stood out for the liberalism of its government The liberal constitution of 1818 lasted exactly a century King LOUIS I, dethroned by the mild revolution of 1848, was succeeded by the able MAXIMILIAN II and the brilliant but insane LOUIS II All three rulers had a passion for the arts, sciences, and architecture The reputation of Bavaria, particularly Munich, as a cultural center dates from their reigns The abolition (1848) of guild restrictions opened the way for industrialization However, the rural prosperity of Bavaria and the strong influence of the Catholic Church (which predominates except in the Upper Palatinate and in Middle Franconia) accented the hostility of Bavaria toward the rising power of Prussia Bavaria sided with Austria in the Austro-Prussian War (1866) Defeated, it acknowledged Prussian leadership, sided with Prussia against France in 1870–71, and joined (1871) the German Empire As the chief German state after Prussia, Bavaria retained a distinctive position and a separatist tendency King LOUIS III, successor of the mad OTTO I, was dethroned in Nov, 1918, and a Socialist republic was set up under Kurt EISNER Eisner's assassination resulted in a Communist revolution (April, 1919), which was bloodily repressed by the German army. Bavaria joined the Weimar Republic Though Munich soon became the center of National Socialism, Catholic Bavaria as a whole resisted the movement until Hitler's accession Under the National Socialist regime Bavarian autonomy was lost. Conquered by American troops in 1945, Bavaria was placed (except for the Rhenish Palatinate and Lindau, occupied by France) in the U S zone of occupation A new constitution was drawn up in 1946

Bavarian Succession, War of the, 1778–79 Elector Maximilian III having died childless in 1777, the duchy of Bavaria passed to the elector palatine, Charles Theodore, of the Sulzbach line of the house of WITTELSBACH However, by a secret treaty with Emperor Joseph II, Charles Theodore, in exchange for certain concessions, ceded Bavaria to Austria, which occupied the duchy Charles Theodore had no legitimate issue, his heir presumptive, Duke Charles of Zweibrücken (of the Birkenfeld line) with the council of Frederick II of Prussia protested the transfer of his inheritance Prussia declared war on Austria and invaded Bohemia No serious engagement took place, and the war ended with the Congress of Teschen (1779) Austria renounced its claims but retained the Innviertel, a district now in Upper Austria A classic example of 18th-century cabinet warfare, the conflict has been called the Potato War because the entire campaign was spent in provisioning the armies

Bax, Sir Arnold, 1883–, English composer, studied at the Royal Academy of Music, London His early works, in a highly complex style, did not find great public recognition, but works in a simpler style, composed after 1910, brought him recognition as one of the outstanding contemporary British composers Wagner, French impressionism, and Celtic folklore all influenced his works, among which are piano pieces, four piano sonatas, the tone poems In the Faëry Hills (1909), The Garden of Fand (1916), and Tintagel (1917), chamber music, the motet Mater ora Filium (1921), Symphonic Variations (1917) and Winter Legend (1930) for piano and orchestra, ballets, songs, and concertos Between 1921 and 1939 he composed seven symphonies He was knighted in 1937 In 1942 he succeeded Walford Davies as Master of the King's Musick

Bax, Ernest Belfort, 1854–1926, English socialist philosopher He studied music and philosophy in Germany In England, influenced by Marxist and other radical thought, he became active in socialist groups, especially the Social Democratic Federation He left this to help found (1885), with William Morris, the Socialist League, but returned when the League veered to anarchism With Morris he wrote Socialism Its Growth and Outcome (1893) His other writings include The Problem of Reality (1893, rev ed, 1914), The Fraud of Feminism (1913), and The Real, the Rational, and the Alogical (1920) See his autobiography (1918)

Baxar, India see BUXAR

Baxley, city (pop 2,916), co seat of Appling co, SE Ga, WSW of Savannah, inc 1875 It is a market center for a tobacco, pecan, and lumber area

Baxter, Gregory Paul, 1876–, American chemist, b Somerville, Mass, grad Harvard (B A, 1896, Ph D, 1899) He taught chemistry at Harvard from 1902 and became emeritus professor in 1944 From 1930 to 1947 he was chairman of the International Committee on Atomic Weights He wrote with others Researches upon the Atomic Weights (1910)

Baxter, Richard, 1615–91, English nonconformist clergyman Ordained in 1638, he began his ministry at Kidderminster in 1641 He sided with Parliament when the civil war broke out and served (1645–47) as a chaplain in Cromwell's army, where he urged moderation in both religious and political opinions Upon the Restoration, Baxter was chosen by Charles II as one of the royal chaplains He took a leading part at the Savoy Conference (1661), where he strove to provide means that would permit moderate dissenters to stay in the Church of England He declined an offer of the bishopric of Hereford, and with the passage of the Act of Uniformity (1662) he took farewell of the Church of England Despite the persecution of nonconformist ministers, Baxter continued preaching, he was imprisoned for 18 months, after a trial conducted with great brutality by Judge Jeffreys, on the charge of having libeled the Church of England in his Paraphrase of the New Testament (1685) Among Baxter's voluminous works are The Saints' Everlasting Rest (1650), Gildas Salvianus, the Reformed Pastor (1656), and A Call to the Unconverted (1657) His autobiographical Reliquiae Baxterianae (1696) was edited (1925) by J M L Thomas See biography by F J Powicke (2 vols, 1924–27)

Baxter Springs, city (pop 4,921), SE Kansas, near the Okla and Mo lines, settled c 1850, inc 1868 Now the rail center for an area of zinc and lead mining, it boomed as a cow town during the 1860s and 1870s A monument in near-by Baxter Springs National Cemetery commemorates the victims of the Baxter Springs massacre (1863), in which a force under W C Quantrill killed 87 men.

bay or sweet bay, see LAUREL

Bayamo (bäyä'mō), town (pop 16,161), SE Cuba, on the Bayamo river Founded in 1513, it was an inland port until the 19th cent and is now a quiet agricultural town, where cheese and canned milk are manufactured. Once it was a breeding place of revolutions—the TEN YEARS WAR (1868–78) and the successful revolt begun in 1895 Carlos Manuel de CÉSPEDES and ESTRADA PALMA were born here

Bayamón (bayamōn'), town (pop 14,596), N Puerto Rico, just SW of San Juan Traditionally the district was the first settled on the island Tropical fruits, sugar, tobacco, and coffee are grown, industries include cigar making and the canning of grapefruit and pineapples

Bayard, James Asheton (bī'urd), 1767–1815, U S Representative (1797–1803) and Senator (1804–13) from Delaware, b Philadelphia, grad Princeton, 1784 Admitted to the bar in 1787, he began practice at Wilmington, Del Bayard, a prominent Federalist, played a leading part in securing Thomas Jefferson's election as President over Aaron Burr in 1800 In 1814 he served on the commission which negotiated the difficult Treaty of Ghent (see GHENT, TREATY OF) ending the War of 1812 His papers were edited (1915) by Elizabeth Donnan

Bayard, James Asheton, 1799–1880, U S Senator from Delaware (1851–64, 1867–69), b Wilmington, Del, grad Union College, 1818, son of James Asheton Bayard (1767–1815) A Jacksonian Democrat in Whig Delaware, he continually failed of election to public office until 1851, when a combination of parties favoring the Wilmot Proviso sent him to the Senate His Unionist sentiments led him into the new Republican party, but he bitterly opposed the dominant radical Republicans and in 1864 resigned He was elected again, however and served (1867–69) as a Democrat and supporter of President Andrew Johnson's Reconstruction policy His son, Thomas Francis BAYARD, succeeded him

Bayard, Pierre du Terrail, seigneur de (bī'urd, pyĕr' du tĕrī'yu sānyûr' du bāyar'), c 1474 1524, French military hero, called le chevalier sans peur et sans reproche [the knight without fear or blame] He exhibited bravery and genius as a commander in all the important battles of the Italian Wars, from Fornovo (1495) to the Sesia, in which he was killed (1524) His defense of Mézières (1521) saved central France from an imperial invasion See biography by Samuel Shellabarger (1928)

Bayard, Thomas Francis (bī'urd), 1828–98, U S statesman, b Wilmington, Del, son of James Asheton Bayard (1799–1880) He began his law practice at Wilmington (1851) An active Democrat, Bayard was elected U S Senator (1869) to succeed his father, and was reelected in 1875 and in 1881 He became Secretary of State during Cleveland's first administration and was ambassador to Great Britain during Cleveland's second presidency In both posts he was much concerned with the VENEZUELA BOUNDARY DISPUTE

Bayard (bā'urd), city (pop 2,121), W Nebr, on the North Platte below Scottsbluff, in an irrigated area, founded c 1887 Beet sugar is produced here

Bayard (bā'urd), Ital Bayardo (bayar'dō), in romances of chivalry, a wonderful bay horse, remarkable for his spirit and for his unique ability to fit his size to his rider He appears in Boiardo, Ariosto, and Tasso

Bayazid or Bayazit see BAJAZET

bayberry, name for some of the species of the genus Myrica, wild or cultivated American shrubs, growing chiefly near the eastern seacoast The species most commonly known as bayberry is Myrica carolinensis, which bears numerous small, gray, stemless berries that are very waxy These persist on the bush through the winter and are often sold for winter bouquets, but they have long been particularly valued for making bayberry candles, for which they are gathered in the fall, boiled to extract the waxy substance, refined by remelting, and made into the aromatic green candles now largely used at Yuletide The berries may yield 4 or 5 lb of wax to the bushel Besides being used in candles, the wax is sometimes employed in making scented soap and sealing wax Other names for the bayberry are wax myrtle and candleberry, another species (Myrica cerifera), similar in appearance, is also called bayberry and candleberry, but is more commonly known as wax myrtle It is sometimes used as a substitute for the bayberry, and the bark has been used as a tonic and astringent The leaves of the bayberry may be retained into early winter, while those of the wax myrtle are sometimes evergreen There is a California bayberry (Myrica californica) on the West Coast The commercial bayberry, yielding the oil of bay used in BAY RUM, is a West Indian tree

Bay City 1 City (pop 47,956), co seat of Bay co, S Mich, on the Saginaw near its mouth on Saginaw Bay, settled c 1831, inc as a village 1859, as a city 1865 It is a port of entry, and its fine river harbor carries Great Lakes and ocean shipping and fishing tugs The vicinity is rich in Indian relics In the 1890s the city's thriving lumber industry declined, today coal mining, commercial fishing, and sugar refining are among its many industries Its chief products include automobile parts, heavy machinery, and boats The county historical society maintains exhibits here Near by are a state park and fish hatchery 2 Town (1940 pop 6,594, 1947 estimated pop 9,000), co seat of Matagorda co, S Texas, SW of Houston and near the Colorado, inc 1901 It is a shipping and industrial center for a region producing oil, rice, poultry, and live stock

Bayer, Johann (yō'hän bī'ûr), 1572–1625, German astronomer. His Uranometria (1603), a star chart in 51 sheets, added 12 new constellations to the 48 previously charted He introduced (1603) the system of designating the stars in a constellation (usually in the order of their brightness) by letters of the Greek alphabet

Bayeux (bāyō'), Fr bayû'), town (pop. 8,744), Calvados dept., N France, in Normandy, near the English Channel A Roman town and early an episcopal see, it was burned (1105) by Henry I of England Sections of its Romanesque church withstood the fire and form a part of the remarkable Gothic cathedral Bayeux was the first French town to be liberated from German occupation when it was entered (June 8, 1944) by British troops

Bayeux tapestry. This so-called tapestry is in fact an embroidery, which chronicles the Norman conquest of England by William the Conqueror in 1066 It is a long, narrow strip of coarse linen, 230 ft by 20 in., embroidered in worsteds of eight colors in couching and stem stitch The embroidery is a valuable document on the history and the costumes of the time Its prominence and date have long been disputed Tradition attributes it to Queen Matilda, wife of William the Conqueror, and her handmaidens, but it is now thought to be of somewhat later origin and possibly the work of English embroiderers The embroidery is preserved in the Bayeux Museum See F R Fouke, The Bayeux Tapestry (1875), Hilaire Belloc, The Book of the Bayeux Tapestry (1914), Sir Eric Maclagan, The Bayeux Tapestry (1945)

Bayfield, city (pop 1,212), N Wis., on Lake Superior N of Ashland, settled 1856, inc 1913 It is a fishing resort and fruit center The Apostle Islands are reached from here

Bay Islands, archipelago, off the north coast of Honduras, in the Caribbean Of the three principal islands (Roatán, Guanaja, and Utila), Roatán is the largest Guanaja (or Bonaca) was visited by Columbus in 1502 The climate is sultry The chief products are tropical fruits and the logwood that was being exploited by English logcutters (the baymen) as early as the 17th cent British garrisoning of the islands in 1848 led to unrest, which was ended by the CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY (1850) and relinquishment of British rights (1859) to Honduras Dissatisfied, the English inhabitants requested and from the American filibuster, William WALKER, who was shot at TRUJILLO The population today retains many British characteristics

Baykal. see BAIKAL

Bayle, Pierre (pyĕr' bāl'), 1647–1706, French rationalistic philosopher He was of Huguenot background; from 1681 he taught at Rotterdam The chief work propounding his views was a biographical dictionary, Dictionnaire historique et critique (1697) Bayle's opinions had a profound influence on the French and German ENLIGHTENMENT, especially on the authors of the Encyclopédie, and on the English deists See Howard Robinson, Bayle, the Sceptic (1931); L P Courtines, Bayle and England (1938)

Baylen, Spain see BAILÉN

Bayley, Richard, 1745–1801, American physician, b Fairfield, Conn., pupil of William Hunter He practiced in New York city and taught anatomy and surgery at Columbia Public feeling against dissection of the human body by anatomists took the form of violence when the "Doctor's Mob" destroyed (1788) his valuable anatomical collection He made thorough studies of yellow fever and prepared a valuable account of the disease (1796) during the epidemic of 1795 in New York city As health officer of the port of New York he was influential in setting up quarantine laws He died as a result of contracting yellow fever

Bayliss, Sir William Maddock (bā'lĭs), 1860–1924, English physiologist At University College, London, he carried on researches in the mechanism of heart action, circulation, and digestion With E H. STARLING he discovered, in 1902, secretin, a hormone produced in the small intestine, and developed the theory of hormone action He wrote Principles of General Physiology (1914) and The Vaso-Motor System (1923)

Baylor, Robert Emmett Bledsoe, 1793–1873, American jurist, b Kentucky He served in the War of 1812, studied law, served in the Kentucky legislature, moved (1820) to Alabama, served in the Alabama legislature, and was (1829–31) a U S Representative from Alabama before moving again (1839), this time to Texas. He was a judge in the republic of Texas and was prominent in drafting the state constitution, which became operative on the annexation of Texas He was a judge under the new constitution. Baylor was also a Baptist preacher and is chiefly remembered because he drew up and secured passage of a charter for the Baptist college that became Baylor Univ

Baylor University, mainly at Waco, Texas, coeducational, chartered and opened 1845 by Baptists (see BAYLOR, ROBERT E B) at Independence, moved 1886 and absorbed Waco Univ (chartered 1861) The college of medicine is in Houston, the college of dentistry and the nursing school are in Dallas. The library has a noted Robert Browning collection.

Bay Minette (mĭnĕt'), town (pop. 1,763), co. seat of Baldwin co., SW Ala., NE of Mobile, in a farm area, founded c.1861 It produces naval stores. Indian mounds are near by The region has fine hunting and fishing grounds

Baynes, Thomas Spencer, 1823–87, British editor, b Wellington, Somerset, studied at the Univ of Edinburgh He was editor (1850–54) of the Edinburgh Guardian and assistant editor (1858–64) of the London Daily News From 1864 until his death he was professor of philosophy and English literature at the Univ of St Andrews, from 1873 he was also editor of the ninth edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica He wrote Essay on the New Analytic of Logical Forms (1850) See his Shakespeare Studies and Other Essays (with memoir by Lewis Campbell, 1894)

Bay of Whales see ROSS SEA and ANTARCTICA

Bayonne (bāyŏn'), city (pop 28,110), Basses-Pyrénées dept., SW France, in Gascony, on the Adour near its entrance into the Bay of Biscay Basque is spoken here, as well as French and Spanish The seaport, fortified by Vauban, has an arsenal and shipyards Here Napoleon I forced CHARLES IV and FERDINAND VII of Spain to abdicate (1808) At the end of the Peninsular War Bayonne resisted its British besiegers for several weeks until the conclusion of the armistice (1814) Bayonne gives its name to the bayonet, invented here in the 17th cent The cathedral of Bayonne (13th cent.) is copied from those of Soissons and Rheims There is a museum of Basque folklore and a splendid fine arts museum, left to the city by the painter Bonnat, who was born here

Bayonne (bāyōn'), city (pop 79,198), NE N J., on a 3-mile peninsula S of Jersey City, between New York harbor and Newark Bay, inc 1869 A bridge, 1,675 ft long, opened in 1931, connects Bayonne with Staten Island Dutch traders came c 1650, the British gained possession in 1664 The U S navy has a dry dock and supply depot here Bayonne has had great oil refineries since 1875, and the oil pipe line from the Southwest comes here.

bayou (bī'ō, bī'ōō) [Louisiana Fr., from Choctaw, = small stream], term used chiefly in the Gulf states, especially Louisiana and Mississippi (the "Bayou State"), to describe a body of water formed by a branch of the Gulf of Mexico, a lake, or a river in which the water is apparently quite stationary or only very sluggishly moving The term is sometimes used as a synonym of OX-BOW LAKE

Bayport, village (pop 2,633), E Minn., on the St Croix and E of St Paul The state prison is here

Bay Psalm Book, common hymnal of the Massachusetts Bay colony Written by Richard Mather, John Eliot, and Thomas Weld, it was published in 1640 at Cambridge as The Whole Book of Psalms Faithfully Translated into English The announced effort of the authors to make a literal rendering at the expense of elegance is successful if the crudity of the verse be a criterion This was the first book published in the Thirteen Colonies

Bayreuth (bīroit'), city (pop 55,612), capital of Upper Franconia, Bavaria, on the Red Main river It manufactures textiles and metal and food products Founded in 1194, Bayreuth belonged to the HOHENZOLLERN family from 1248 to 1807, when it was ceded to France In 1810 it came to Bavaria The city was the residence (1872–83) of Richard WAGNER Annual music festivals of international importance, held at the Festspielhaus, were interrupted by the Second World War Wagner and Franz Liszt are buried at Bayreuth, which suffered heavy war damage "Villa Wahnfried," Wagner's residence, was completely destroyed

Bay Roberts, town (1945 pop 1,281), SE N F., on Conception Bay and S of Harbour Grace. It was formerly the base for a great fleet of fishing schooners that fished on the Labrador banks A transatlantic cable station is here bay rum, aromatic liquid used chiefly for the hair as a cosmetic and a perfume It originated in the West Indies, where it was prepared by distillation from rum and bay leaves It is now commonly a mixture of oil of bay (from a bayberry), alcohol, water, oil of pimento, and oil of orange peel

Bay Saint Louis (lōō'ĭs), resort city (pop 4,138), co seat of Hancock co., S Miss., on Mississippi Sound W of Gulfport and at the entrance to St Louis Bay, inc 1854 Settled about the turn of the 19th cent., it was first called Shieldsborough

Bay Shore, unincorporated village (pop 8,631), on the south shore of Long Island, SE N Y At the widest point of Great South Bay, it is noted as a fishing and duck-hunting center A ferry runs to Fire Island

Bay Springs, lumber-processing town (pop 1,228), a co seat of Jasper co., SE Miss., N of Hattiesburg, settled 1896, inc 1904.

Baytown, city (1948 estimated pop 20,000), S Texas, on Galveston Bay and SE of Houston It was formed in 1947 by the combination of three cities, Goose Creek, Pelly, and Baytown The region produces oil, and the city has oil refineries, chemical plants, and docks that send large shipments of oil across the world

Bay Village, village (pop 3,356), NE Ohio, western suburb of Cleveland.

Bayville, village (pop. 1,516), on the north shore of Long Island, SE N.Y.; inc. 1919. It is included in Oyster Bay town.

Baza (bā'thä), city (pop 14,330), Granada prov., S Spain, in Andalusia In a fertile agricultural area, it is noted for its cattle An important city of the Moorish kingdom of Granada, it fell to the Spanish in 1489.

Bazaine, Achille François (ăshēl' frăswä' bāzĕn'), 1811–88, marshal of France After service in Algeria, Crimea, Lombardy, and Mexico, he was at the outbreak of the FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR (1870) put in command of the 3d Corps of the Army of the Rhine In Aug., 1870, Napoleon III devolved his supreme command on Bazaine, whose incompetence was rivaled only by that of the emperor himself Bazaine allowed his army to be invested at Metz The attempt of Marshal MACMAHON to rescue him led to the disaster of Sedan. Bazaine then engaged in questionable diplomatic intrigues with the Germans in the hope of joining them in a march on Paris and of "saving France from herself"—i e, from a revolution The result was his capitulation at Metz (Oct 27). Found guilty of treason in 1873, he was sentenced to 20 years' seclusion but escaped and spent the rest of his life in Italy and Spain See Philip Guedalla, The Two Marshals: Bazaine, Pétain (1943).

Bazán, Álvaro de see SANTA CRUZ, ÁLVARO DE BAZÁN, MARQUÉS DE

Bazán, Emilia Pardo see PARDO BAZÁN

Bazard, Saint-Amand (sĕtämä' bazär'), 1791–1832, French socialist, founder of a Carbonarist republican society, Les Amis de la vérité [Friends of Truth], in 1818 Bazard plotted for the overthrow of the monarchy but was unsuccessful He adopted the socialistic doctrines of Saint-Simon and, with ENFANTIN, headed the Saint-Simonian movement until he withdrew after a quarrel

Bazargic, Bulgaria see DOBRICH

Bazin, René (runä' bāzĕ'), 1853–1932, French novelist His novels, artistic, charming, sensitive, were often intended to propagate Christian morality Les Oberlés (1901, Eng tr., The Children of Alsace, 1912), and Le Blé qui lève (1907, Eng tr., The Coming Harvest, 1908) are notable

Bazlith (bāz'-) [Heb., = nakedness], family in the return from exile Neh 7 54. This is the Bazluth of Ezra 2 52

Bazoche see BASOCHE

Bazzi, Giovanni Antonio see SODOMA, IL.

B battery: see BATTERY, ELECTRIC

bdellium (dĕl'ĭum), gum resin obtained from trees of the genus Commiphora (or Balsamodendron) It is similar to myrrh Bdellium is mentioned in the Bible (Gen 2 12, Num 11 7).

Be, chemical symbol of the element BERYLLIUM

Beach, Chester, 1881-, American sculptor, b San Francisco, studied in Paris and Rome He is one of the few artists who are also craftsmen, able to cut from the marble in the rough the figures of their imagining Among his works are large groups for the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco, 1915, reredos for St Mark's Church, The Sacred Fire for the American Academy of Arts and Letters and Service to the Nation for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company Building, New York, fountain, Cleveland Museum of Art, and portrait head of Mrs Beach, Art Institute of Chicago

Beach, Harlan Page, 1854–1933, American Congregational missionary and educator, b South Orange, N J., grad Yale, 1878, and Andover Theological Seminary, 1883 He served (1883–90), as a missionary in China, as superintendent (1892–95), of the School for Christian Workers, Springfield, Mass., as educational secretary (1895–1906) of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions, as professor (1906–21) of the theory and practice of missions at Yale, and as lecturer on missions (1921–28) at Drew Theological Seminary He wrote numerous books about missions and was co-author of the World Missionary Atlas (1925)

Beach, Mrs. H. H. A., 1867–1944, American composer and pianist, b Henniker, N H She was Amy Marcy Cheney before her marriage She received her piano training in the United States and toured both here and in Europe In composition she was largely self-taught Her Gaelic Symphony (1896) was the first important symphony by an American She composed a piano concerto, many songs, including Ah, Love, but a Day, and choral music, including The Canticle of the Sun (1928).

Beach, Moses Yale, 1800–1868, American journalist, b Wallingford, Conn. He invented a rag-cutting machine still used by paper mills. In 1838 he bought the New York Sun from his brother-in-law, Benjamin Day, for whom he had been working Beach found the Sun's chief competitor in the penny-paper field to be the New York Herald, edited by James Gordon Bennett. The rivals used ingenious means to get news fast—the Sun even kept carrier pigeons in a special house atop its building Costs, especially during the Mexican War, mounted so much that at a conference in Beach's office the editors of a number of New York newspapers established the New York Associated Press to cooperate in securing the news. Beach is credited with the first European edition of an American paper, the weekly American Sun (1848), and with starting the newspaper syndicated article In 1848 he turned the paper over to his sons, Alfred E and Moses Sperry Beach. See F. M. O'Brion, The Story of the Sun (1918).

Beach, city (pop. 1,178), co. seat of Golden Valley co., SW N.Dak., W of Bismarck and near the Mont. line; inc. 1910 It is a grain-shipping center beach grass or marram grass, any species of the genus Ammophila, sand-loving grasses important in the control of shifting sands The European beach grass has been used to hold dunes in Europe and was early planted at Cape Cod to bind the sands, later it was used at Golden Gate Park and elsewhere in the United States. The American beach grass is native to dunes of the Great Lakes and much of the eastern seacoast. Beach grasses have creeping rootstalks which form mats of roots

beach plum: see PLUM

Beachy Head, high chalk cliffs on the south coast of Sussex, England, SW of Eastbourne The battle of Beachy Head, in the War of the Grand Alliance, was fought (June 29, 1690) between an Anglo-Dutch fleet and the French fleet under the comte de Tourville, it resulted in a French victory

Beacon, city (pop 12,572), SE N Y, on the east bank of the Hudson opposite Newburgh, inc as a city 1913, when Fishkill Landing and Matteawan (măt'ŭwän') villages were united An inclined railway here ascends Mt Beacon The city's chief products are hats and rubber goods Matteawan State Hospital for insane criminals is here Several historic buildings remain A tuberculosis hospital for veterans is at near-by Castle Point

Beacon Falls, town (pop 1,756), SW Conn., on the Naugatuck S of Waterbury, settled c 1678, inc 1871.

Beaconsfield, Benjamin Disraeli 1st earl of: see DISRAELI, BENJAMIN

Beaconsfield (bē'kŭnz-, bĕk'unz-), urban district (1931 pop 4,840, 1943 estimated pop 6,000), Buckinghamshire, England Disraeli became earl of Beaconsfield in 1876 The town is the burial place of Edmund Burke

bead [Mid Eng.,=prayer or something on which a prayer is said, as a ROSARY bead], used from prehistoric times in ornament and costume, for jewelry, and as embroidery on garments and accessories Beads were early employed as talismans and amulets, and Phoenician relics illustrate their use in barter Beads have been made from innumerable materials, including shells, seeds, clay, metals, ivory, and glass, and from precious and semiprecious stones Characteristic beads have been developed in certain localities—of colored glass in Venice, jet in Central Europe, faïence in Egypt, carved ivory in China Amber, coral, amethyst, and jade are among the substances believed to confer peculiar benefits on their wearers Pearls, real and imitation, have been highly favored both in strings and in embroidery "Eye beads" have been made in different times and places to wear as a protection from the "evil eye" The manufacture of trade beads has long flourished in Europe, beads being found valuable in dealing with primitive people Such glass beads, first brought by white traders, have been used by the American Indians in embroidery on fine leather Modern fashion employs a wide diversity of beads, in costume jewelry, embroidery, millinery, bags, purses, and various accessories

beaded lizard: see GILA MONSTER

Beadle, Erastus, 1821–94, American publisher, b Pierstown, N Y. He learned the printer's trade at Cooperstown, N Y, and about 1848 set up his own shop in Buffalo In 1851 he issued the first Dime Song Book and afterwards other songbooks that printed and preserved the cheaper lyrics of the period In 1852 he began to publish game books and manuals, and in 1856 he started the Home Monthly, which soon had a large circulation In 1860, having moved to New York city, his firm published the first of his DIME NOVELS, which became immediately popular From then until Beadle's resignation from the firm in 1889 he continued to publish such adventure stories, in various series See his To Nebraska in '57 a Diary (1923), E. L Pearson, Dime Novels (1929)

Beadle, William Henry Harrison, 1838–1915, American educator, b Parke co, Ind, grad Univ of Michigan, 1861 He served (1861–66) in the Union army, rising to the rank of brigadier general, practiced law for two years, and in 1869 was appointed surveyor general of Dakota Territory Through his efforts as secretary of the commission which drew up the territorial code in 1877 and as a member of the legislature and chairman of its judiciary committee in 1878, a law was passed requiring that the school lands of the state should not be sold for less than $10 an acre While Beadle was superintendent of public instruction (1879–85), he succeeded despite opposition in having this provision embodied in the state constitution. Congress then required similar constitutional provisions of North Dakota, Montana, Washington, Idaho, and Wyoming before these states were admitted in 1889–90. From 1889 until his retirement as emeritus professor in 1905, he was president of the state teachers college at Madison, S Dak.

Beagle, small, 235-ton vessel which made a world cruise (1831–36), under Capt Robert Fitzroy with Charles DARWIN as naturalist of the expedition This was the opportunity for Darwin's collection of observations from which he formulated his theories regarding organic EVOLUTION He recorded his observations in several series of publications which appeared from 1839 to 1846

beagle: see HOUND

Beal, Gifford Reynolds, 1879–, American painter of landscapes, marines, and figure pieces, studied at the Art Students League of New York, pupil of William M Chase His canvases have been awarded many medals and honors Among his best-known works are Mayfair, The Albany Boat, and Across the Valley, a water color (Metropolitan Mus), Freight Yards (Syracuse, N Y, Mus), and A Puff of Smoke (Art Inst, Chicago)

Beal, William James, 1833–1924, American botanist, born on a Michigan frontier farm, grad Univ of Michigan (B A, 1859, M A, 1862), B S Harvard, 1865, M S Univ of Chicago, 1875 He taught botany at the Michigan Agricultural College from 1871 until his retirement in 1910 His lecture The New Botany, published in several editions, had wide influence on teachers of botany Grasses of North America (1896) and Seed Dispersal (1898) were also popular In addition he published many papers and bulletins In 1875 he founded a forest preserve for the college

Beale, Dorothea, 1831–1906, English educator In 1857 she was appointed head teacher of the Clergy Daughters' School, Casterton, Westmorland, the "Lowood" of Charlotte Brontë's Jane Eyre In 1858 Miss Beale became principal of Cheltenham Ladies' College Recognising the need for trained teachers, she was a founder (1885) of St Hilda's College, Cheltenham, and of St Hilda's at Oxford (1893) Her Reports on the Education of Girls was published in 1869

Beale, Edward Fitzgerald, 1822–93, American frontiersman, b District of Columbia, grad Annapolis, 1842 He sailed to California in the Congress with Robert F STOCKTON just as the Mexican War was starting When Stephen W KEARNY was hard pressed in the battle of San Pasqual, Beale and Kit CARSON daringly crawled through the lines to get aid Later Beale made several trips across the continent, and he was the first to bring east the news of the gold strike in California He was appointed in 1852 superintendent of Indian affairs in California and Nevada and served well In the Southwest he is best remembered for a curious experiment in transportation in 1857 he had camels imported to use when he was surveying a government wagon road across New Mexico and Arizona He made other surveys and was (1861–66) surveyor general of California Beale was briefly (1876–77) also minister to Austria-Hungary See biography by Stephen Bonsal (1912), L B Lesley, ed., Uncle Sam's Camels (1929)

Bealiah (bē'ul'u) [Heb.,=God is Baal], warrior who joined David at Ziklag 1 Chron 12 5

Bealoth (bē'u-) [Heb.,=fem plural of BAAL], town, S Judah Joshua 15 24 At 1 Kings 4 16 RV has Bealoth, but AV translates "in Aloth"

Beamsville, village (pop 1,309), S Ont., near Lake Ontario and E of Hamilton

Bean, Roy, c 1825–1903, American frontiersman, b Mason co, Ky. Roy Bean left (1847) Kentucky, traveled westward by wagon train, and managed a trading post in Chihuahua, Mexico, until 1849 He lived adventurously in California before he aided the Confederate cause in the Civil War as a lawless irregular in New Mexico and Texas When the Southern Pacific RR was being built across Texas, Bean followed the construction camps as a saloonkeeper, and in 1882 he settled at the camp at Vinegaroon (later renamed LANGTRY), Texas There he became justice of the peace—to which he added the title "the law west of the Pecos"—and Judge Bean meted out decisions in his saloon with one lawbook and a six-shooter One of the most colorful figures of the Southwest, Bean rendered unorthodox and often witty decisions See biography by C L Sonnichsen (1943)

Bean, Tarleton Hoffman, 1846–1916, American ichthyologist, b Bainbridge, near Harrisburg, Pa. He was curator of the Dept of Fisheries in the U S National Museum (1880–95) and director of the New York Aquarium (1895–98). As New York state fish culturist from 1906, he developed scientific methods of fish propagation which were imitated throughout the country His many books include Catalogue of the Fishes of New York (1903) and Catalogue of the Fishes of Bermuda (1906) He collaborated with G B Goode on Oceanic Ichthyology (1895) and with W. C Harris on The Basses (1905).

bean, various genera and species of the legume family which have long been cultivated, many even in prehistoric times. The Greeks and Romans used the broad bean for balloting, black seeds signifying opposition and white seeds agreement. This custom lingered in England in the election of the king and queen for Twelfth Night and other celebrations and was taken to the New World colony at Massachusetts Bay, where Indian beans were used Beans are prolific, adaptable, and easily cultivated. They are an important crop, both for human consumption and for fodder. Of some genera the whole plant is grown for forage or soilage and as green manure or cover crops Bean forage is high in protein content and combines well with grains rich in carbohydrates, dried beans are fed to horses in some countries In the human diet dried beans are useful as a meat substitute and are found in different parts of the world as a characteristic item of the national fare. Beans and bacon were a staple food of the poorer folk of England Baked beans, cooked for hours with pork or molasses or with both, became a traditional New England dish The broad bean (Vicia faba) of ancient Old World origin is grown in England and on the Continent as a field and a garden crop It needs a long, cool season and is grown to some extent in Canada Other names for the broad bean are Windsor and horse bean The common garden bean of the United States is Phaseolus vulgaris, of which there are numerous varieties, among them the snap or string bean, of which both pods and seeds are edible There are two main groups, the bush beans and the climbing or pole beans, and both green-podded and yellow-podded or wax beans are found in each group In Europe the common bean is called kidney, French, or haricot bean. The lima bean (Phaseolus limensis or P lunatus macrocarpus) is a climbing variety from which the pod is stripped and only the seeds are eaten It is successfully grown in a warm climate and is an important crop of California It contains more fat than other beans A bush form has been developed The cowpea or black-eyed pea (Vigna sinensis), one of the main forage and green-manure crops of the S United States, is also used as food by man The scarlet runner (Phaseolus coccineus), grown in Europe for food, is in North America mainly an ornamental vine The tepary (P acutifolius latifolius), a small bean long grown by the Indians in the SW United States, has been found better suited to hot, arid climates and more prolific than the frijole Other beans are the hyacinth bean or lablab (Dolichos lablab), grown in the Orient and tropics for forage and food and cultivated in North America as an ornamental climbing plant, the asparagus bean or yard-long bean (Vigna sesquipedalis), grown as a curiosity, the locust or carob bean (Ceratonia siliqua), and the velvet bean (Stizolobium), cultivated in the S United States as a forage crop and soil renovator. See also CAROB, FRIJOLE, SOYBEAN

Bear, river rising in NE Utah in the Uinta Mts and flowing some 350 mi in a circuitous course N and NW through Wyoming and Idaho, then S into Utah again to enter Bear River Bay of Great Salt Lake It thus loops around Bear Lake, and in 1915 a canal was dug to connect river and lake bear, mammal of the family Ursidae of the order Carnivora, found almost exclusively in the Northern Hemisphere Its feet are plantigrade, the claws nonretractile, the fur thick and shaggy, and the tail very short, the body appears clumsy Some bears can run at a speed of 25 or 30 mi an hour Except for the heavy grizzly bear, most climb trees Bears are omnivorous, living generally on fruits, roots, and other vegetable matter, honey, insects, fish, carrion, and infrequently on mammals Where the winters are cold they hibernate in sheltered spots or caves The young, usually twins, are born during the winter in an undeveloped state. The brown bear (Ursus arctos) of the Old World is extinct in much of Western Europe, but small numbers survive in some wooded sections of the Continent, and larger numbers in Russia and N Asia Closely related to the Old World brown bear are the grizzly bears of W North America and the Alaskan brown bears In the United States the grizzly bear has been almost exterminated except where it is protected in national parks. The coat of the various species ranges from shades of brown to blackish-gray, often with gray-tipped hairs They usually weigh from 300 to 1,000 lb Unless wounded or startled they rarely attack man An Alaskan brown bear known as the Kodiak or Kadiak bear is the largest living carnivore, sometimes weighing 1,500 lb or more The commonest bear in North America is the black bear found in wooded and mountainous regions from parts of Canada to Mexico city. It usually weighs about 200 to 300 lb and has a smaller, more pointed head than the grizzly and shorter, more curved claws, it is taller in the posterior region than at the shoulder, while the grizzly has its greatest body height at the shoulder Among the races of the black bear are the cinnamon bear, the white Kermode's bear, and the glacier or blue bear The polar bear of the arctic has a thick white or creamy coat, black tongue, and relatively small head and long neck It is a strong swimmer, and its hairy soles facilitate walking on ice It eats chiefly fish, seal, and other flesh It is believed that polar bears remain active throughout the year except for the pregnant females, which seek winter burrows in the ice and drifted snow in which the cubs are born In South America the only known bear is the spectacled bear of the Andes. The Atlas bear, the only African bear, may be extinct. Among related Asiatic animals are the Himalayan or Tibetan black bear, the Malay or sun bear, and the sloth bear bear, in speculative markets see BULLS AND BEARS

Bear, Great and Little, in astronomy see URSA MAJOR

bearberry (bâr'bĕr"ĭ), trailing, evergreen woody plant (Arctostaphylos uva-ursi) of the Northern Hemisphere, related to the heaths and sometimes cultivated as a ground cover The small leathery leaves, astringent and an official drug until recently, were once used for tobacco by the Indians, who also utilized the red mealy berries for food and beverages Manzanita belongs to the same genus, other plants are sometimes called bearberry

Beard, Charles Austin, 1874–1948, American historian, b near Knightstown, Ind, grad DePauw Univ, 1898 A year at Oxford gave him an interest in English local government, and after graduate study at Cornell Univ and Columbia he wrote, for his doctoral dissertation at Columbia, The Office of Justice of the Peace in England (1904) While teaching (1904–17) history and politics at Columbia, he joined James Harvey ROBINSON in forwarding the teaching of history that would include economics, politics, the intellectual life, and culture—that would, in short, embrace civilization Together they wrote The Development of Modern Europe (1907) and compiled an accompanying book of readings Beard was especially concerned with the relationship of economic interests and politics His study of the conservative economic interests of the men at the Federal Constitutional Convention, An Economic Interpretation of the Constitution (1913), caused much stir, he also wrote Economic Origins of Jeffersonian Democracy (1915) and The Economic Basis of Politics (1922) His interest in city government led to American City Government (1912) as well as the long-standard American Government and Politics (1910) After resigning from Columbia in the First World War, he helped to found the New School for Social Research, was director (1917–22) of the Training School for Public Service in New York city, and was an adviser on administration in Tokyo after the disastrous Japanese earthquake of 1923 Beard wrote A Charter for the Social Sciences in the Schools (1932)—the first and basic volume of the report of the American Historical Association Commission on the Social Studies in the Schools, he thus exercised enormous influence on the teaching of history He became widely known to the general reading public through The Rise of American Civilization (2 vols, 1927) and its sequels (Vol III and Vol IV), America in Midpassage (1939) and The American Spirit (1943), all written in collaboration with his wife, Mary Ritter Beard (1876–) This panoramic work is an example of the broad historical view that Beard championed, the great store of fact is laid open with easy and graceful literary style With his wife he also later wrote a brief survey, The Beards' Basic History of the United States (1944) Mary R Beard, a historian in her own right, was also graduated from DePauw and also did graduate work at Columbia She was particularly interested in feminism and the labor movement and wrote a number of works on them, notably Women's Work in Municipalities (1915), A Short History of the American Labor Movement (1920), On Understanding Women (1931), and Women as Force in History (1946) Charles A Beard, much criticized as a radical in his earlier years, was just as much criticized by the liberals in his later years for his violent opposition to Franklin D Roosevelt's administration, especially in the struggle over the Supreme Court and in foreign policy Beard's last work was President Roosevelt and the Coming of the War, 1941 (1948)

Beard, Daniel Carter, 1850–1941, American illustrator and naturalist, b Cincinnati, Ohio, studied at the Art Students League, New York He illustrated many books (among them Mark Twain's Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court) and taught animal drawing In 1878 he became interested in work for boys, and his best-known book, The American Boys' Handy Book, was published in 1882 The Dan Beard Outdoor School for Boys in Pike co, Pa, was started in 1888 One of the founders (1910) of the Boy Scouts of America, he served for the remainder of his life as national scout commissioner To boys all over the country he was known as Uncle Dan Mt Beard, adjoining Mt McKinley, is named for him In addition to many articles on woodcraft and nature study, Beard wrote Boy Pioneers and Sons of Daniel Boone (1909), American Boys' Book of Wild Animals (1921), and Wisdom of the Woods (1927) See his autobiography, Hardly a Man Is Now Alive (1939)

Beard, Frank (Thomas Francis Beard), 1842–1905, American illustrator, b Cincinnati; son of James Henry Beard In the Civil War he served as special artist for Harper & Brothers His "chalk talks"—lectures illustrated by crayon sketches—were popular with Chautauqua audiences His political and temperance cartoons appeared in Judge and the Ram's Horn Beard was professor of fine arts at Syracuse Univ from 1881 to 1884.

Beard, George Miller, 1839–83, American physician, b Montville, Conn., M D Columbia, 1866 He was a pioneer in electrotherapeutics and in neurology He introduced in the United States the concept of neurasthenia or nervous exhaustion His works include The Medical and Surgical Uses of Electricity (with A D Rockwell, 1871), Nervous Exhaustion (1880), and American Nervousness (1881)

Beard, James Henry, 1812?–93, American painter, b Buffalo, N Y He was long a portrait painter in Cincinnati, his subjects included Henry Clay, John Quincy Adams, Zachary Taylor, and William H Harrison In 1846 he exhibited in New York his famous Carolina Emigrant In his later years he painted animals

Beard, William Holbrook, 1824–1900, American artist, b Painesville, Ohio, brother and pupil of James Henry Beard He started his career as an itinerant portrait painter, but turned to satire His Bear's Temperance Question is in the Art Institute of Chicago

beard, the hair grown on the lower face Modern usage usually prefers the term mustache for hair left only on the upper lip, while whiskers may apply to the cheek hair of an otherwise clean-shaven face Modern studies distinguish 15 standard types of beards, but these do not include the possible varieties among them or the innovations of precivilized peoples Alteration of the natural growth of facial hair by trimming, depilation, plaiting, or curling may well have begun with the earliest societies The first trimmed beard of classical antiquity is the fringe type which outlines a shorn face This type was evident in the Cretan-Mycenaean period and for centuries thereafter served to identify the native of the Near East The historical scholar may interpret the many fashions in beards as reflections of wider social change Many beards have been shorn as a concession to modernism, on the other hand, groups to whom face hair was once abhorrent, e g, the Japanese, have adopted the mustache and chin beard of Western peoples An oath sworn on one's beard is solemnly binding, an insult to the beard an outrage Important deities and patriarchs are portrayed with beards, testifying their venerability A young man's first beard may admit him to adult status Beards have been found convenient social or professional insignia, the guardsman's mustache of the 18th and early 19th cent was the sign of an army man Beards 5 ft long have been reported The most abundant beards are found among the Ainu, the most sparse among Mongoloid and Negroid peoples

Beardsley, Aubrey Vincent, 1872–98, English black-and-white illustrator One of the greatest of modern illustrators, Beardsley received much criticism because of the erotic character of some of his work He is never exempt from a certain morbidity He found inspiration for his decorative pen-and-ink drawings and posters in the art of Japan and that of the Italian Renaissance and created an exquisitely artificial style Among his best work are the frontispiece to Volpone and the illustrations for the Morte d'Arthur, the Yellow Book, the Savoy Magazine, and The Rape of the Lock Beardsley was art editor of the Yellow Book until 1896 and died of tuberculosis two years later He embraced the Roman Catholic faith not long before his death See Letters from Aubrey Beardsley to Leonard Smithers (1937), studies by Joseph Pennell (in Studio, April, 1893), Robert Ross (1909), Arthur Symons (1918), and Haldane Macfall (1928) For collections of his works, see Early Works (1899), Later Works (1901), Uncollected Works (1925)

Beardstown, city (pop 6,505), W central Ill, WNW of Springfield and on the Illinois river, from which it is protected by a high levee, settled 1819 as a ferry crossing, platted 1827, inc 1837 It is a rail, trade, and shipping center for a fruit and farm area It has railroad shops and commercial fisheries and manufactures gloves and cigars The city hall, built in 1845, was the setting in which Lincoln argued and won the Armstrong murder case

beardtongue or pentstemon (pĕntstē'mŏn) [Gr, = having five stamens], any plant of the genus Pentstemon, chiefly western American herbs or shrubs often cultivated as garden flowers The tubular flowers of various colors usually have a characteristic sterile "bearded" stamen Normally perennials, many kinds are not hardy in the North and are treated as annuals There are a number of garden hybrids bearings, in general, parts of a machine which support a shaft and are intended to minimize FRICTION A good bearing should fit so that the shaft turns freely but cannot move in any way to set up vibration Bearings are made of materials soft enough to permit some slight unevenness in the shaft but hard enough to stand without distortion the load placed upon them In general they are made of ANTIFRICTION METAL, such as BABBITT METAL Since heat is generated by friction, the efficiency of a bearing depends largely upon its LUBRICATION Oil or grease is deposited between the contact surfaces by a sigzag groove in the bearing; the lubricant is fed from a cup at the top, the revolutions of the shaft spreading a film of oil over the contact surface. Failure of lubrication or the introduction of foreign matter such as grit results in overheating which, if not remedied, causes the bearing metal to melt or the shaft to "seize" in the bearing because of unequal expansion Bearings are held in position by a frame commonly called a pillow block or plummer block High-speed bearings are generally lubricated by oil under pressure or by the running of the whole bearing in an oil bath Machinery working at high speed is usually fitted with ball bearings, an arrangement of hard steel balls surrounding a shaft and overcoming frictional resistance by a rolling, instead of a sliding, contact The balls are usually in a frame or cage designed to hold them apart from one another and at the same time allow contact with the revolving and stationary elements of the machine The balls and the races are made of case-hardened steel, in a great variety of types and sizes Modern, smooth-running machinery can be attributed largely to their extensive use In high-grade bearings, the balls are perfectly spherical and of equal diameter and hardness In roller bearings, cylindrical rollers replace the balls They are usually arranged parallel to one another around the shaft and are used principally in heavy machinery where greater contact surface is required These two types of bearings are generally known as antifriction bearings Thrust bearings are designed to resist forces in a shaft along the direction of its own length, as those of the propeller shaft of a ship In this case the thrust from the propeller has to be transferred into the hull of the vessel It is accomplished by flanges projecting from the shaft and revolving in grooves, the grooves being part of a plummer block securely fastened to the ship's structure

Bear Island: see SPITSBERGEN

Bear Lake, c 30 mi long and 7 mi wide, N Utah and S Idaho, NE of Great Salt Lake

Bear Mountain 1 Peak, 2,355 ft high, NW Conn, in Salisbury town, one of the highest points in the state 2 Peak, 1,314 ft high, SE N Y, overlooking the Hudson (here crossed by Bear Mountain Bridge), S of Newburgh It gives its name to a section of the Palisades Interstate Park The park has facilities for summer and winter sports and is accessible to New York city by water and highway

Bear Mountain Bridge, highway toll bridge, 2,257 ft long, across the Hudson N of Peekskill, N Y, opened 1924, acquired by New York state 1940 It is a suspension bridge, with a central span of 1,632 ft

Béarn (bärn'), region and former province SW France, in the Pyrenees It now is the inland part of Basses-Pyrénées dept The valleys of Béarn are well cultivated, and cattle breeding is an important activity Pau replaced Orthez as the capital in the 15th cent The Bearnese are related to the BASQUES but speak French One of the lordships of GASCONY, the viscounty of Béarn passed (13th cent) to the counts of FOIX, who also became kings of NAVARRE, and (1494) to the house of ALBRET JEANNE D'ALBRET, queen of Navarre and Béarn, imposed Protestantism on the Bearnese Béarn was formally united with France in 1620 as an anti-Protestant measure With the Basque districts of French or Lower Navarre, Béarn became a French province under the jurisdiction of the parlement of Navarre, which sat at Pau

bear's-breech: see ACANTHUS

Beas (bē'ăs), river, mainly in Punjab state, India, flowing c 285 mi generally W to the Sutlej river It is the easternmost of the five rivers of the Punjab It marked the limit of Alexander's invasion (326 B C) from the west

beatification: see CANONIZATION

Beatitudes (bēăt'-) [Latin, = blessing], eight blessings uttered by Jesus at the opening of the Sermon on the Mount Mat 5 3–12 Some, counting verses 11–12 apart from verse 10, say there are nine In the parallel passage, Luke 6 20–26, only four of the blessings appear, with four corresponding woes

Beaton, Cecil Walter Harry, 1904–, English photographer, writer, and designer His witty books of photographs and sketches, such as Cecil Beaton's Scrapbook (1937) and Cecil Beaton's New York (1938), are highly popular His costume and stage design are equally well known In 1946 he designed sets and costumes for and acted in a revival of Wilde's Lady Windermere's Fan

Beaton or Bethune, David (both bē'tun), 1494–1546, Scottish churchman, cardinal of the Roman Church He was the nephew of James Beaton, archbishop of St Andrews, whom he succeeded as archbishop and primate of Scotland in 1539 He was made cardinal in 1538 Beaton arranged the marriage of James V and Mary of Guise and tried to assume the regency for MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS (1542), but James HAMILTON, earl of Arran, seized power The following year Arran abjured Protestantism and sided with Beaton, who crowned Mary. Beaton became chancellor of Scotland and ably opposed the designs of Henry VIII of England Beaton's relentless persecution of Scottish reformers led to the execution of George WISHART in 1546, and in reprisal the cardinal himself was brutally murdered in his castle four months later.

Beatrice (bē'ătrĭs), city (pop. 10,883), co. seat of Gage co, SE Nebr., on the Big Blue River and S of Lincoln; founded 1857, inc. as a town 1871, as a city 1873. It is on the old Oregon Trail and is the trading and industrial center for a grain, dairy, and livestock area. Irrigation equipment is made. The state institution for the feeble-minded is here. Near by is the Freeman homestead, first farm claimed under the Homestead Act of 1862.

Beatrice Portinari (bā'trĭs, bā'ätrē'chā pôrtēnä'rē), 1266–90, Florentine lady believed to be the Beatrice of the Divine Comedy and Vita nuova of DANTE. He first saw Beatrice when he was nine years old, and she remained his ideal and inspiration until his death in 1321. Her identity has been the cause of much controversy.

Beattie, James (bā'tē), 1735–1803, Scottish poet and essayist. Professor of moral philosophy at Marischall College, Aberdeen, he attacked Hume in his Essay on the Nature and Immutability of Truth (1770) and advocated the doctrine afterwards known as that of "common sense." He is best remembered as the author of The Minstrel (1771–74). This long, unfinished poem in Spenserian stanzas is an autobiographical account of the formation of the poet's mind.

Beatty, David Beatty, 1st Earl (bē'tē), 1871–1936, British admiral. He entered the navy in 1884 and served with distinction in Egypt and the Sudan (1898), and in the Boxer Rebellion (1900). Advanced to rear admiral in 1910, he commanded successful naval actions in the First World War at Heligoland Bight (1914) and at Dogger Bank (1915). By great daring and hard fighting his squadron lured the German fleet into position for its defeat by the British grand fleet under Admiral Jellicoe at Jutland (1916). Beatty commanded (1916–19) the fleet and was (1919–27) first sea lord of the navy. He was made Earl Beatty in 1919.

Beattyville (bā'tēvĭl), town (pop 1,012), co. seat of Lee co., central Ky., on the Kentucky and SE of Lexington, in a coal, oil, timber, and farm region. Cumberland National Forest is near by.

Beauce (bōs), region, N France SW of Paris, a flat limestone plateau between the Seine and Loir rivers. The "granary of France," it is covered with wheat fields. The region shared the history of the countship of Chartres, its only important city. Little Beauce, Fr Petite Beauce, between the Loir and the Loire, is also a rich wheat district. Vendôme is the center.

Beauceville (bōs'vĭl), town (pop 899), SE Que., SSE of Lévis. It is a gold-mining and agricultural center. Beauceville East (pop 1,251) has been separate since 1931.

Beauchamp, Guy de see WARWICK, GUY DE BEAUCHAMP, EARL OF.

Beauchamp, Richard de see WARWICK, RICHARD DE BEAUCHAMP, EARL OF.

Beauchamp, Thomas de see WARWICK, THOMAS DE BEAUCHAMP, EARL OF.

Beaufort, Edmund see SOMERSET, EDMUND BEAUFORT, 2D DUKE OF.

Beaufort, François de Vendôme, duc de (frāswä' du vädôm' duk' du bōfôr'), 1616–69, French courtier and politician, grandson of Henry IV and Gabrielle d'Estrées. Implicated in the Cinq Mars (sē' mar') conspiracy, he fled (1642) to England. After his return (1643), he joined the Importants, a clique opposing Mazarin, and was imprisoned from 1643 to 1648. During the FRONDE, he was nicknamed King of the Markets because of his popularity with the Parisian mob. Exiled in 1652, he was later recalled and given command (1666) of the French fleet against the Turks and the Barbary pirates.

Beaufort, Henry (bō'furt), c. 1377–1447, English prelate and statesman, cardinal of the Roman Church, b. Beaufort castle in Anjou. The son of John of Gaunt and Catherine Swynford, he was half brother to Henry IV and was declared legitimate by Richard II. He entered the Church and was made bishop of Lincoln and later (1404) bishop of Winchester. Under Henry IV he was chancellor (1403–4) but, as friend of Prince Henry, shared his fall from power. On the prince's accession as Henry V, Beaufort again was chancellor (1413–17). At the Council of Constance Beaufort swung (1417) English influence to help elect Pope Martin V, but Henry refused to let him accept a cardinalate. When in 1422 the baby Henry VI became king of England and France, Beaufort, as a strong member of the council of regency, opposed the selfish designs of Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, and served again as chancellor (1424–26). He became a cardinal in 1426 and was papal legate in Germany, Hungary, and Bohemia until 1431. In that year he crowned Henry VI in Paris and thereafter sought to end the French wars.

Beaufort, Margaret, countess of Richmond and Derby (bō'fûrt, därb'bē), 1443–1509, English noblewoman, daughter and heiress of John, 1st duke of Somerset, and granddaughter of John of Gaunt. She married (1455) Edmund Tudor, earl of Richmond, whose posthumous son became Henry VII. Next she married Henry Stafford, and later Lord Thomas Stanley, afterwards earl of Derby. Renowned for her philanthropy, she endowed professorships of divinity at Oxford and Cambridge and with the help of her confessor, John Fisher, founded Christ's College and St. John's College, Cambridge. She was the patron of many religious houses and of Caxton and Wynkyn de Worde.

Beaufort. 1 (bō'furt) Resort and fishing town (pop 3,272), co. seat of Carteret co., E N C., SE of New Bern, on the coast near Cape Lookout, laid out 1722. It is a port of entry. The U S Fish and Wildlife Service has a marine biological laboratory near by. 2 (bō'furt) City (pop 3,185), co. seat of Beaufort co., on Port Royal Island (one of the SEA ISLANDS), S S C., SW of Charleston. Beaufort has a good harbor and is a tourist center and a canning and shipping point for a farming, shrimping, and oystering area. The second oldest town in the state, it was founded in 1711. The city was held by Union forces from Nov., 1861, to the end of the Civil War. The many interesting old buildings here include a number made of tabby (crushed oyster shells). The city has a national cemetery and an arsenal.

Beaufort Sea (bō'furt), part of the Arctic Ocean, N of Alaska and Canada, lying between the mainland and the Arctic Archipelago. It was explored by Vilhjalmur Stefansson in 1914, and here G. H. Wilkins in 1927 proved that an airplane could land on the ice pack.

Beaufort's scale see WIND.

Beauharnais, Alexandre, vicomte de (alĕksä'dru vēkôt' du bōarnā'), 1760–94, French general, b. Martinique. He fought in the American Revolution and the French Revolutionary Wars. A moderate member of the National Assembly, he was guillotined in the Reign of Terror. His widow later became the empress JOSEPHINE.

Beauharnais, Eugène de (ûzhĕn'), 1781–1824, French general, son of Alexandre and Josephine de Beauharnais. He served ably in the campaigns of his stepfather, NAPOLEON I, who made him viceroy of Italy in 1805. His court at Milan was brilliant, his administration in Italy capable. Beauharnais married a Bavarian princess, and after Napoleon's downfall he lived in Munich with the titles of duke of Leuchtenberg and prince of Eichstadt.

Beauharnais, Hortense de (ôrtäs'), 1783–1837, queen of Holland (1806–10), daughter of Alexandre and Josephine de BEAUHARNAIS and wife of Louis BONAPARTE. She was the mother of Napoleon III and, by her lover, the comte de Flahaut—of the duc de MORNY.

Beauharnais, Josephine de see JOSEPHINE.

Beauharnois, Charles de la Boische, marquis de (sharl' du la bwash' markē' du bōarnwa'), 1670–1749, French governor of New France (1726–46). When he returned to France in 1747 he left memories of good rule in an era of peace, prosperity, and expansion.

Beauharnois (bōhär'nwa), town (pop 3,550), S Que., on the south shore of Lake St. Louis and SW of Montreal. Beauharnois Canal, opened in 1843, was originally a navigation work on the south side of the St. Lawrence to avoid the rapids between Lakes St. Francis and St. Louis, c. 40 mi. above Montreal. It was superseded by the Soulanges Canal on the north side in 1899. In 1931 the development of the Beauharnois Canal for power purposes under a lease granted by the dominion government led to the "Beauharnois scandal." The province of Quebec took over the plant as a public-ownership enterprise in 1945.

Beaujeu, Anne de see ANNE DE BEAUJEU.

Beaujeu, Daniel Hyacinthe Marie Lienard de (dänyĕl' yasĕt' marē' lyĕnar' du bōzhû'), 1711–55, soldier of New France, b. Montreal. Sent in 1755 to relieve the sieur de Contrecœur as commander at Fort Duquesne, he had charge of the small force that met and defeated Gen. Edward Braddock, but Beaujeu lost his life early in the action.

Beaujolais (bōjôlā'), hilly region, Rhône dept., E central France, W of the Saône between Mâcon and Lyons. Its famous red wine is lighter than the Burgundy grown farther north. Villefranche-sur-Saône is the chief town. Beaujolais was once the fief of the powerful lords of Beaujeu (a small town which gave the region its name). It was annexed to the crown in 1531 and incorporated into Lyonnais proper.

Beaumanoir, Philippe de Remi, sire de (fēlēp' du rumē' sēr' du bōmänwar'), c. 1250–1296, French poet and jurist, a writer of medieval law texts. He was a judicial officer at Clermont and Senlis. His Coutumes de Beauvoisis [customary laws of the region of Beauvais] is a source for medieval French law and social customs.

Beaumarchais, Pierre Augustin Caron de (pyĕr' ôgüstĕ' kärô' du bōmarshā'), 1732–99, French dramatist, at first a watchmaker by trade. His two successful comedies were the brilliant Le Barbier de Séville (1775), basis of an opera by Rossini, and Le Mariage de Figaro (1784), source of an opera by Mozart. The second of these is regarded as an attack on the privileges of the nobility. Beaumarchais was famous as a litigant, and the pamphlets he wrote about his cases were witty and effective. One of them (1774) narrated an incident about his sister which served as the basis of Goethe's Clavigo. Beaumarchais's employment as a secret agent by the monarchy introduced him to the intrigues that led up to his interest in the American Revolution and dealings (1774–75) with Silas DEANE and Arthur LEE, his mock firm, Hortalès & Cie, furnished arms to the Americans (1776–77). The payment in tobacco and other products expected in return was never forthcoming, and the claims of Beaumarchais against the Americans were settled only in 1835 through a grant by Congress to his heirs. Another costly venture was a 70-volume edition of Voltaire (pub. 1785–90, though volumes bear dates 1784–89). See biographies by René Dalsème (Eng. tr., 1929) and Paul Frischauer (Eng. tr., 1935), E. S. Kite, Beaumarchais and the War of American Independence (1918).

Beaumont, Élie de, see ÉLIE DE BEAUMONT.

Beaumont, Francis (bō'mŏnt), 1584?–1616, English playwright, probably b. Leicestershire, educated at Oxford and the Inner Temple. The plays of Ben Jonson were models for his early works, The Woman Hater (1606) and his great comedy The Knight of the Burning Pestle (between 1607 and 1610), both of which seem to show the touch of John FLETCHER as well. It is difficult to say just when Beaumont and Fletcher began their collaboration, just as it is a major problem of scholarship as to what and how much each wrote, although Dryden says their tragicomedy Philaster (between 1608 and 1610) was the first to bring them fame. They are generally considered to have also written together Cupid's Revenge (between 1607 and 1612) and A King and No King (1611). So far as is known, the only plays entirely by Beaumont are The Masque of the Inner Temple and Gray's Inn (1613) and The Theatre of Apollo (1625). His style was laconic, his plots romantic, and his contemporary popularity great. He retired to his estate in Kent after his marriage in 1612 or 1613. Beaumont's poems were collected in 1640, although there may be some poems by other hands in the volume. See edition of the Beaumont and Fletcher works by Arnold Glover and A. R. Waller (10 vols., 1905–12), biography by C. M. Gayley (1914), E. H. C. Oliphant, The Plays of Beaumont and Fletcher (1927), L. B. Wallis, Fletcher, Beaumont & Company (1947).

Beaumont, William, 1785–1853, American physician and army surgeon, b. Lebanon, Conn. He was privately educated, and was licensed (1812) to practice in Vermont. His Experiments and Observations on the Gastric Juice and the Physiology of Digestion (1833, facsimile ed., 1929, with biographical essay by Sir William Osler, reprinted 1941) was an exhaustive account, covering several years of a case famous in medical history. In 1822, while serving as post surgeon on Mackinac Island, Beaumont was called to treat Alexis St. Martin, a youth of 19 whose stomach had been torn open by an accidental gunshot at close range. All efforts to close the wound failed although St. Martin recovered his health and strength. Later, realizing a unique opportunity for studying the digestive process, Beaumont, with the assent of his frequently rebellious patient, instituted a series of experiments which completely revolutionized the knowledge of the subject. In all, about 238 experiments were reported. These were begun at Mackinac Island in 1825 and were continued at intervals at Plattsburg, N.Y., at Fort Crawford (Prairie du Chien, Wis.), and at Washington, D.C. See J. S. Myer, Life and Letters of Dr. William Beaumont (1912, new ed., 1939).

Beaumont. 1 City (1940 pop. 2,208, 1946 special census pop. 3,016), S Calif., E of Riverside, at the summit of San Gorgonio Pass, in a fruit-growing area, inc. 1912. 2 City (1940 pop. 59,061, 1943 special census pop. 77,335), co. seat of Jefferson co., SE Texas, on the Neches and ENE of Houston; settled before 1835, laid out 1837, inc. 1881. The lush-growing forest, the flat fields, the petroleum beneath the earth, and the sea itself have made the fortune of this Gulf Coast city. Pine was the base of a thriving lumber industry before the Civil War. Livestock grazed on pastures of the region, and rice fields covered more and more acres in the late 19th cent. In 1901 the life of the city was revolutionized when an oil gusher came in at near-by Spindletop. Oil is the principal support of the city, but there are many industries, from rice mills, paper mills, and wooden-box factories to oil refineries, metalworks, and chemical plants. A canal, completed in 1916, made Beaumont a deepwater port. Now a port of entry on the Sabine-Neches Waterway, it ships by rail and road as well as by sea. Shipbuilding, long known, was especially important in the Second World War. Lamar Junior College is in Beaumont.

Beaune (bōn), town (pop. 11,022), Côte-d'Or dept., E France, famed for its art treasures and as a wine center. It flourished as a residence of the dukes of Burgundy. Its textile industry was ruined when the revocation of the Edict of Nantes expelled (1685) the Protestant craftsmen. Beaune has a Romanesque church (12th cent.) with 15th-century Flemish tapestries. Its famous hôtel Dieu was founded (1443) by Chancellor Nicolas Rollin, a patron of Roger van der WEYDEN, whose Last Judgment it contains. The Hôtel de la Rochepot (c. 1502) and the 15th-century ramparts are further witnesses to the past splendor of Beaune.

Beauport (bōpôr'), town (pop. 3,725), S Que., on the St. Lawrence and NE of Quebec. One of the oldest communities in Canada, it was settled in 1634 The French, strongly entrenched here, repulsed General Wolfe's attacks and thus made necessary the surprise landing below the Plains of Abraham in 1759.

Beauregard, Pierre Gustave Toutant (bō'rĭgär'd), 1818–93, Confederate general, b St Bernard parish, La., grad West Point, 1838 As engineer on the staff of Winfield Scott in the Mexican War, he figured prominently in the taking of Mexico city He later did engineering work in Louisiana and for five days in Jan , 1861, was superintendent of West Point Beauregard, resigning from the army in February, was soon made a Confederate brigadier general and was sent to Charleston, where he ordered the firing on Fort Sumter He took command of the army in NE Virginia (June) and in July was second in command to J E Johnston at the first battle of Bull Run Promoted full general, he was sent to the West in 1862 Upon the death of A S Johnston at the battle of Shiloh, Beauregard succeeded to the command of the Army of Tennessee He retreated to Corinth, which he shortly abandoned to Halleck's superior army Ill-health then forced him to yield the command to Bragg After a rest he was charged with the defense of the South Carolina and Georgia coast, which he ably held against Union attacks, particularly those on Charleston in 1863 In May, 1864, Beauregard reinforced Lee in Virginia He defeated B F Butler at Drewrys Bluff and held Petersburg against Grant until Lee arrived In the closing months of the war he was in the Carolinas with J E Johnston After the war Beauregard was a railroad president, manager of the Louisiana state lottery, and for many years adjutant general of that state His superior engineering abilities overshadowed his deficiencies as a field commander See Alfred Roman, Military Operations of General Beauregard (1884), biography by Hamilton Basso (1933).

Beauséjour (bōsāzhōōr'), town (pop 1,181), SE Man., NE of Winnipeg near the Brokenhead river

Beauséjour, Fort, N B , near Amherst, N S Built between 1751 and 1755 to command Chignecto isthmus between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, it was captured (1755) by British and American troops under General Monckton and was renamed Fort Cumberland In 1926 it was made a national park (area 81 acres), with a museum and some ruins

Beauvais (bōvā'), city (pop 20,665), capital of Oise dept , N France, between Paris and Amiens A Roman town and an early episcopal see, it flourished in the Middle Ages and again after the 17th cent , when Colbert made it the center of the state manufactures of tapestries It was the center of the Jacquerie in 1358, and in 1472 its citizens resisted Charles the Bold of Burgundy Jeanne Hachette, who earned her surname for the hatchet with which she helped to repel the Burgundians, is commemorated in a yearly celebration Until 1940 the center of Beauvais was a gem of medieval architecture, the Germans bombed and set fire to the city, and almost none of its past glory remains The tapestry manufactures were transferred to the Gobelins workshops in Paris Amidst the ruins, and partly damaged itself, stands the Cathedral of St. Pierre, begun in 1227 as the highest building in Christendom and never completed Its choir vault (154 ft), the highest of all Gothic vaults, was reinforced after it fell in 1284, the transept was completed in 1548 Although the cathedral still lacks a nave, it remains one of the loftiest monuments of medieval faith and daring

Beaux, Cecilia (bō), 1863–1942, American figure and portrait painter, b Philadelphia, studied in Philadelphia under William Sartain and Eakins, in Paris in the Julien and Lazar schools A skilled technician, with an unusual sense of design, she won many honors through her long career She painted, among other celebrities, Henry James, Clemenceaux, and Cardinal Mercier Well-known paintings include A New England Woman (Pa Acad of the Fine Arts), After the Meeting (Toledo Mus), Ernesta (Metropolitan Mus), The Dancing Lesson (Art Inst , Chicago), Sita and Sarita (Corcoran Gall.), Portrait of Mrs Dupont (Mus of Fine Arts, Boston); Portrait of Adelaide Nutting (Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore), Girl with Cat (Luxembourg Mus , Paris), self-portrait (Uffizi) See her autobiography, Background with Figures (1930)

Beaux-Arts, École des see École des Beaux-Arts

Beaver. 1 Wheat-shipping town (pop 1,166), co seat of Beaver co., NW Okla , on the North Canadian river in the Panhandle, first settled (by squatters) c 1880 Beaver was the capital (1887) for the "Territory of Cimarron" (see Cimarron, Territory of) 2 Residential borough (pop 5,641), co seat of Beaver co., W Pa., NW of Pittsburgh near the junction of the Beaver and Ohio rivers, laid out 1791, inc 1802. A flagstaff marks the site of Fort McIntosh (1778), the first U S military post, N of the Ohio 3 City (pop 1,808; alt 5,970 ft), co. seat of Beaver co , SW Utah; settled 1856 by Mormons There was a mining boom in the 19th cent. Now water from the Beaver river irrigates farms, and livestock is raised.

Beaver, rivers of Canada 1 Rising in central Alberta and flowing 350 mi E into Saskatchewan, then north to headwaters of the Churchill 2 Digby co , SW N S 3 SE Yukon and N British Columbia, a tributary of the Liard

Beaver, tributary of the Ohio river, W Pa., which it joins at Rochester

beaver, large rodent of the family Castoridae of Europe and North America It is characterized by its thick fur (a soft undercoat with a longer, rougher outer coat), rounded head with small ears, scaly, flattened tail (about 10 in long and 6 in wide), and webbed hind feet Its body length exclusive of the tail is about 30 in and it weighs 40 to 50 lb , often more The tail acts as a rudder in swimming and is used to slap the water to warn other beavers of danger and as a support when gnawing a tree The hind feet have combing claws with which it grooms itself There are two living species, Castor fiber, the European beaver, exterminated in most countries but found in small numbers in parts of France, Germany, Norway, Poland, and Siberia, and C canadensis, the American beaver Although some American beavers live in burrows in stream banks, the majority construct "lodges" of branches and twigs tightly plastered with mud A room above the water level in the lodge serves as living room and nursery The entrances and an emergency exit are under water as a protection from enemies If the water of the chosen site is not deep enough to cover the entrances of their lodges and to provide an underwater cache for food, the group of beavers make a dam of tree trunks, branches, mud, and stone A winter store of wood is submerged in the water near the lodge, where it can be reached by swimming under the ice Bark of aspen, cottonwood, willow, birch, and alder and succulent parts of aquatic plants constitute most of its diet Chipping the wood with its incisor teeth, the beaver fells trees to be used in making the dam and for food Canals are often made in which to float the more distant logs to the site of the dam The beaver was the staple article of the fur trade of Canada and the United States from the early 17th cent The constant hunting by Indians and by white trappers almost exterminated the beaver, which was preserved only by protective laws The beaver pelt (called a plus or "plew") was the basis of value of articles of trade including other furs Until about the mid-19th cent , pelts were used chiefly in making hats, the rest in coats and trimmings See E R Warren, The Beaver (1927), G M Vevers, The Life Story of the Beaver (1946)

Beaverbrook, William Maxwell Aitken, 1st Baron, 1879–, British statesman and newspaper owner, b Maple (near Toronto), Ont The son of a Presbyterian clergyman, he grew up near Beaverbrook, N B He made a fortune, chiefly by merging small firms, and went to England There he was prominent in finance and entered political life as an associate of Bonar Law, becoming a member of Parliament in 1910 In the First World War he was observer for the Canadian forces and was minister of information in 1918 He was made a baron in 1917 and in that year bought his first newspaper Soon his Daily Express, Sunday Express, and Evening Standard thundered out his imperialist and generally Conservative views In the Second World War, Lord Beaverbrook served in Churchill's coalition cabinet as minister of aircraft production (1940–41), minister of state (1941), minister of supply (1941–42), minister of war production (Feb , 1942), special envoy to the United States on supplies (1942), and lord privy seal (1943–45) After the fall of the Churchill cabinet in 1945 he continued his supervision of his newspapers

Beaver City, city (pop 1,015), co seat of Furnas co , S Nebr , on Beaver Creek near the Kansas line; inc 1872

Beaver College see Jenkintown, Pa

Beaver Dam, locality, S Ont , on the Niagara peninsula just S of St Catherines, scene of a battle fought June 24, 1813, in the War of 1812 An American force of 600 men advanced from Fort George by way of Queenston to attack a British force, but the British commander, warned of the approach by Laura Secord, was ready The Americans were ambushed by Indians, and when the small British force advanced, the Americans believed that they were surrounded by a superior force and surrendered

Beaver Dam. 1 City (pop 1,166), W Ky , SSE of Owensboro and near the Green River. It is a trade center in an area raising grain and tobacco and also having coal deposits 2 City (pop 10,356), central Wis , SW of Fond du Lac and on Beaverdam Lake, settled 1841, inc 1856 Its varied products include shoes, malleable-iron ranges, and cheese

Beaver Falls, city (pop 17,098), W Pa , on the Beaver river and NW of Pittsburgh, settled c 1793, laid out 1806, inc as a borough 1868, as a city 1930. It manufactures chinaware and metal and cork products. The city was founded on an Indian trail, which later became a pioneer road, and is the seat of Geneva College (Reformed Presbyterian; coeducational; 1848)

Beaver Island, 13 mi long and c 3 to 6 mi. wide, off N Michigan, in Lake Michigan NNW of Charlevoix, with which it is connected by ferry and plane. It is the largest of the Beaver Archipelago and has lakes, beaches, and a harbor at St. James village Its permanent inhabitants are mainly fishermen. James J. Strang had a Mormon settlement here from 1847 to 1856. See O. W Riegel, Crown of Glory (1935)

Beaver Meadows, industrial borough (pop. 2,030), E central Pa , near Hazleton; settled 1787. It has anthracite mines and a silk mill

Beaverton, city (pop 1,052), NW Oregon, near Portland, founded 1868, inc 1893 St Mary's home for boys and St Mary's home for girls are here

Bebai (bē'bā'ī), head of a family in Zerubbabel's return Esra 2 11, 8,11, 10 28, Neh 7 16, 10 15

Bebel, August (ou'gōōst bā'bul), 1840–1913, German Socialist leader. A turner by trade, he became a Marxian Socialist under the influence of Wilhelm Liebknecht At a congress at Eisenach (1869) he was instrumental in founding the German Social Democratic party, which he later represented in the Reichstag His antimilitarism and his social program earned him the hatred of Bismarck In 1872 Bebel and Liebknecht, tried on false charges, were sentenced to two years' imprisonment, but Bebel was reelected to the Reichstag In 1875 he helped to unite the Lassalle group with the Social Democrats Among his writings are Women and Socialism (1883, Eng tr , 1910) and his autobiography (1910–14, abridged Eng tr , 1912)

Bec (bĕk), former Benedictine abbey, near the village of Bec-Hellouin, Eure dept , N France, in Normandy, S of Rouen Founded in the 11th cent , it soon became famous when Lanfranc taught there and Anselm was abbot It declined after the Hundred Years War, was suppressed in the French Revolution, and fell into ruin

Beccafumi, Domenico di Pace (dōmā'nēkō dē pa'chā bĕk-kafōō'mē), 1486–1551, Italian painter and sculptor, also called Il Mecherino He studied painting in Siena and Rome and was a versatile and prolific worker, achieving distinction also as engraver and sculptor He is best known for his frescoes in the city hall in Siena and for his designs for the famous pavement of Siena Cathedral, on which he worked at intervals from 1517 to 1546, his designs consisting of a great series of scenes from the Old Testament Among his other works are Holy Family (Pitti Palace), Descent into Limbo and Nativity of the Virgin (Siena), and the fine bronze and marble sculptures in Siena Cathedral Holy Family with Angels is in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D C

Beccaria, Cesare Bonesana, marchese di (chā'zärē bōnāzē'nä markā'zā dē bĕk-kärē'ä), 1738–94, Italian economist, jurist, and criminologist Of a retiring disposition, he nevertheless held several public offices, through these and through his writings he influenced local economic reforms and stimulated penal reform throughout Europe In 1764 appeared his famous Essay on Crimes and Punishments (Eng tr , 1767), one of the first arguments against capital punishment and inhuman treatment of criminals This especially influenced Jeremy Bentham and the utilitarians He made original contributions to economic theory, applying mathematics to economics, analyzing population problems, and anticipating the wage and labor theories of Adam Smith Much of this work appears in Elementi di economia publica (1804), a posthumous collection of his lectures (1768–70) in political economy at Milan See Coleman Phillipson, Three Criminal Law Reformers (1923)

Becerra, Gaspar (gäspär' bāchĕr'rä), 1520–70, Spanish sculptor, architect, and painter. He studied in Rome with Vasari and decorated the Alcazar of Madrid (burned in 1735) for Philip II His best-known surviving work is his altarpiece in the Astorga Cathedral

Béchamp, Pierre Jacques Antoine (pyĕr' shäk' ätwăn' bāshä'), 1816–1908, French chemist He is noted for his discovery of a method of preparing aniline from nitrobenzene

Becher (bē'kur) 1 Son of Benjamin Gen 46 21, 1 Chron 7 6,8 In 1 Chron 8 1 "his first-born" should perhaps be read "Becher", cf Bocheru See Bicri 2 Son of Ephraim His descendants are Bachrites Num 26 35 Bered 1 Chron 7 20

Becher, Johann Joachim (yō'hän' yō'äkhĭm bĕ'khĭr), 1635–82, German chemist With G E Stahl (who summarized Becher's doctrines in Specimen Becherianum) he was cofounder of the phlogiston theory

Bechorath (bĕkō'răth) [Heb., =first-born], ancestor of Saul 1 Sam 9 1, Bechuanaland (bĕchōō'ənŭlănd"), British protectorate (c.275,000 sq mi ; pop 250,022), Africa. It is administered from Mafeking in the Union of South Africa Bechuanaland is bounded by South-West Africa on the west and north, by Southern Rhodesia on the east, and by the Union of South Africa on the east and south. The country is mainly a plateau averaging over 3,000 ft. high The Kalahari occupies S Bechuanaland, and in the north sandy depressions mark former extensive lake beds. Rainfall in general is insufficient to raise crops, and grazing of cattle, sheep, and goats is the chief occupation. Gold and silver are mined, especially in the TATI concession. In part of E Bechuanaland, which is served by the protectorate's only railroad, there are white farmers, otherwise, the entire territory is a native reservation inhabited by Bantu tribes, notably the Bechuana, and by some Bushmen. In the early 19th cent., except for some Boer incursions in the south, there was little white interest in the area Under Khama, a Bechuana chief, the depredations of the Matabele were curbed and a fairly unified native state grew up In the late 19th cent., however, the Boers in the neighboring Transvaal made threats against the territory, and at the request of Khama, Great Britain established a protectorate over present-day Bechuanaland and over certain territory to the south, which, in 1895, was annexed to Cape Colony Most of the protectorate today is ruled by a paramount chief under a British high commissioner

Beck, Sir Adam, 1857–1925, Canadian statesman, b Baden, Ont Entering the Ontario legislature in 1902, he was appointed (1903) a commissioner to investigate the development of power at Niagara Falls In 1906 he introduced a bill creating the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, of which he was chairman until his death

Beck, Carl, 1856–1911, American surgeon, b near Heidelberg, Germany, M D Univ. of Jena, 1879 He came to the United States in 1882 and was president of St Mark's Hospital from 1886 and professor of surgery at the New York Post-Graduate Medical School from 1890 His innovations in surgery of the chest and of the abdomen brought him wide fame He was among the first to use X rays in medical diagnosis and treatment Among his works are Text Book on Fractures (1900) and Surgical Diseases of the Chest (1909)

Beck, John Brodhead, 1794–1851, American physician, b Schenectady, N Y, M D College of Physicians and Surgeons, 1817, brother of Lewis C Beck and Theodric R Beck He taught materia medica and medical jurisprudence for many years at the College of Physicians and Surgeons Besides aiding his brother Theodric in preparing a famous work on medical jurisprudence, he wrote Essays on Infant Therapeutics (1849) and Lectures on Materia Medica and Therapeutics (1851) and articles for the New York Medical and Physical Journal, of which he was editor and cofounder

Beck, Lewis Caleb, 1798–1853, American physician and chemist, b Schenectady, N Y, educated at Union College and at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, brother of John B Beck and Theodric R Beck He practiced medicine for a time, but soon turned to teaching and to the pursuit of studies in botany, chemistry, geology, and mineralogy Most of his teaching was at Rutgers and at Albany Medical College In 1837 he was appointed to the geological survey of New York state as mineralogist He was chosen, in 1848, to make a chemical investigation of foodstuffs under the first congressional appropriation made for that purpose His works include A Manual of Chemistry (1831), Botany of the Northern and Middle States (1833), and Mineralogy of New York (1842)

Beck, Lily Adams (Moresby), pseud E Barrington, d 1931, British author She traveled widely in the East and lived in Canada from 1919 until just before her death Her published work is of two different types Under the name L Adams Beck she wrote of Oriental life and thought, including The Story of Oriental Philosophy (1928) and The Ninth Vibration and Other Stories (1922) She is better known, however, for her romantic biographies written under the pseudonym E Barrington and including Glorious Apollo (1925, on Byron) and The Divine Lady (1924, on Lady Hamilton) She wrote The Glory of Egypt (1926) under the pseudonym Louis Moresby

Beck, Theodric Romeyn, 1791–1855, American physician, b Schenectady, N Y, M D College of Physicians and Surgeons, 1811, brother of John B Beck and Lewis C Beck He was principal of the Albany Academy (1817–54) and professor at the Western College of Physicians and Surgeons, Fairfield, N Y, from 1815 until the school was given up in 1840 From 1840 to 1843 he taught materia medica at Albany Medical College His Elements of Medical Jurisprudence (1823), the first important book on the subject in America, went through many editions His first name is also spelled Theodoric

Beckenham (bĕk'ənum), municipal borough (1931 pop 43,832, 1947 estimated pop 75,460), Kent, England, near London It has tanneries and cable works

Becker, Carl Lotus, 1873–1945, American historian, b Blackhawk co, Iowa, grad Univ of Wisconsin (B A., 1896; Ph D, 1907) and studied at Columbia Univ. He taught history at the Univ of Kansas (1902–16) and at Cornell Univ (1917–41). After retirement he was professor emeritus and university historian at Cornell Among his early works were monographs such as his History of Political Parties in the Province of New York, 1760–1776 (1909), but his real forte was the analysis of thought and philosophy in action, exemplified by his studies in the American Revolutionary period. The Eve of the Revolution (1918; in the "Chronicles of America" series) and The Declaration of Independence (1922), and in the broader study, The Heavenly City of the Eighteenth-Century Philosophers (1932) His deep concern with the use of history for the betterment of international relations and of mankind was shown in his How New Will the Better World Be? (1944). His works are remarkable as much for the quiet originality of his thought as for the purity and lucidity of his impeccable literary style.

Becker, George Ferdinand, 1847–1919, American geologist, b New York city, grad Harvard (B A., 1868) and Heidelberg (Ph D., 1869) He taught at the Univ of California (1875–79) When Clarence King became director of the U S Geological Survey in 1879, Becker was appointed geologist-in-charge. He carried on important geophysical research at his Washington, D C, laboratory Besides the Geology of the Comstock Lode (1882), which established his reputation, he wrote on geodynamics and the genesis of various metals and on gold fields in many parts of the world

Becker, Wilhelm Adolf (vĭl'hĕlm ä'dôlf), 1796–1846, German archaeologist He was professor of archaeology at Leipzig His unfinished Handbuch der römischen Alterthümer (1843–46) was completed by Marquardt and Mommsen. Two popular romances, Gallus (1838, Eng tr, 1844) and Charicles (1840, Eng tr, 1845), went through numerous editions

Becket, Thomas. see THOMAS À BECKET, SAINT

Beckett, Gilbert Abbott à, and Gilbert Arthur à Beckett see À BECKETT, GILBERT ABBOTT

Beckford, William, 1760–1844, English author and dilettante Although he wrote several travel books and two burlesques on the novels of the day—The Elegant Enthusiast (1796) and Azemia (1797)—he is remembered for the Oriental romance Vathek, written in French but first published (1784) in English translation Becoming involved in scandal (he was suspected, among other things, of practicing black magic), he lived on the Continent for a number of years, later he built in Wiltshire a Gothic castle, Fonthill Abbey, where he lived in magnificent seclusion until even his large fortune was depleted His last years were spent at Bath. See biographies by J W Oliver (1932) and Guy Chapman (1937)

Beckley, city (pop 12,852), co. seat of Raleigh co, S W Va, N of Bluefield, in a coal area, chartered 1838 A junior college and a state tuberculosis sanatorium are here

Becknell, William see SANTA FE TRAIL

Beckwith, James Carroll, 1852-1917, American painter, b Hannibal, Mo, studied with Carolus-Duran and at the École des Beaux-Arts His genre paintings include The Blacksmith (National Mus, Washington, D C), but he is probably best known for portraits, of which those of Mrs R H McCurdy, Mark Twain, and Capt Joseph Lentilon are noted He taught at the Art Students League, New York city, for many years

Becque, Henry François (ärē' frāswä' bĕk'), 1837–99, French dramatist of the naturalistic school Notable among his plays which mordantly depict aspects of French bourgeois life are Les Corbeaux (1882) and La Parisienne (1885), translated in the volume The Vultures, The Woman of Paris, The Merry-go-round (1913)

Bécquer, Gustavo Adolfo (gōōstä'vō adôl'fō bä'kĕr), 1836–70, Spanish poet Bécquer's lonely and introspective life is evident in his writings His Rimas, of which he wrote 76, are a collection of lyrics comparable to Heine's, Byron's, and Musset's poetry His relation to these romantic poets has been the subject of much research In prose he wrote 22 leyendas [legends] and Desde mi celda (1864), a group of nine literary letters Bécquer expressed profound feelings in a delicate and subtle manner, enveloping both poetry and prose in an atmosphere of dreams and shadows He is considered one of the outstanding Spanish poets He died of tuberculosis at 34

Becquerel, Alexandre Edmond (ălĕksä'dru ĕdmô' bĕkurĕl'), 1820–91, French physicist In 1878 he succeeded his father, Antoine César Becquerel, as professor at the Muséum d'Histoire naturelle Known for his studies in light, photochemistry, and phosphorescence (for which he invented the phosphoroscope), he wrote La Lumière, ses causes et ses effets (1867–68) Antoine Henri Becquerel was his son.

Becquerel, Antoine César (ätwan' sāzär'), 1788–1878, French physicist, a pioneer in electrochemical science He was professor of physics at the Muséum d'Histoire naturelle from 1837 until his death He made a special study of telegraphy and magnetism and wrote several books on these subjects

Becquerel, Antoine Henri (ätwän' ärē'), 1852–1908, French physicist He was professor at the École polytechnique, Paris, from 1895 He studied atmospheric polarisation and the influence of the earth's magnetism on the atmosphere In 1896 he discovered RADIOACTIVITY IN URANIUM, the Curies made further investigations of the phenomenon and shared with Becquerel the 1903 Nobel Prize in Physics (see CURIE, PIERRE).

bed. A litter of dried grasses and animal skins placed on the floor or in a shallow depression or chest was used for sleeping by prehistoric and primitive peoples. In ancient Babylonia, Assyria, and Egypt, people of wealth slept on ornate bedsteads of wood, stone, ivory, or metal, laced with wickerwork or other resilient material on which rested rush mattresses Pillows, as in many parts of the Orient today, were headrests of wood, stone, or pottery The Greeks used couches and mattresses which were often stuffed with wool or feathers Air cushions were an innovation of the Etruscans The Romans developed different types of beds for sleeping and for reclining In Europe during the Middle Ages only the nobility used bedsteads, these were light frames easily carried on expeditions or sojourns in the lord's various residences and were set up in the great hall Canopies were suspended from wall or ceiling, covers and draperies were of the richest fabrics In the 15th cent, separate bedchambers became common, bedsteads had high, ornately carved headboards and elaborate canopies supported on four posts and were enclosed with rich hangings Children and servants often slept on low pallets, or truckle beds concealed by day under the principal bed In England especially, monumental beds came into fashion in the 15th cent, the Great Bed of Ware (c 1580) measured 10 by 11 ft The 17th cent saw the development of a variety of forms--luxurious great beds with testers of many sizes and shapes, couches with adjustable headpieces, beds that turned up against the wall, cupboard beds concealed by doors or shutters In the 18th cent both beds and hangings became lighter and more graceful In the 19th cent the sleigh bed with curved ends was popular, and in the latter half of the century cast-iron and brass bedsteads and woven wire, link, and vertical coil springs were common Modern developments include the inner-spring mattress, a number of space-saving forms, and hospital beds In parts of the Orient, rugs piled on the floor serve as beds, the Japanese sleep between quilts spread on the floor matting, Ceremonial beds have been used since ancient Egyptian times In the 17th cent it became customary to receive guests while lying in bed The "Bed of Justice" was a cushioned seat used by the kings of France in the parliament chamber

Bedad (bĕ'-), father of HADAD 2

Bedan (bē'dăn) [Heb, =servile] 1 Otherwise unknown deliverer of Israel 1 Sam 12 11 The Septuagint reading, Barak, may be correct 2 Manasseite 1 Chron 7 17

Bedaresi or Bederi, Yedayah ben Abraham (bädärä'sē bädēr'ē), 1270?–1340, Jewish poet and philosopher, b Béziers, France His most successful poem was the didactic Examination of the World, of which many translations have been made, among them one in English by Rabbi Tobias Goodman (London, 1806)

bedbug, bug of the order Hemiptera found in most parts of the world The common species, Cimex lectularius, is a flat, reddish-brown bug about ¼ in long It has an unpleasant odor Both male and female bedbugs feed only on blood and can live for 4 to 12 months without eating They attack man chiefly, but also other mammals and poultry By day they usually hide in crevices in walls and furniture Steam cleaning of furniture and mattresses, spraying, and fumigation are methods of control See Bedbugs (U S Dept of Agriculture, Leaflet 146)

Beddoes, Thomas Lovell, 1803–49, English poet He was the author of poetry—The Improvisatore (1821), The Bride's Tragedy (1822)—and the play Death's Jest-Book, or, The Fool's Tragedy (1850) Beddoes had a liking for the grim and grotesque, which contrast with the delicacy of his lyrical passages See his works (ed by H W Donner, 1936), Lytton Strachey, Books and Characters (1922)

Bede (bēd) or Baeda (bē'du), 673?–735, English historian, a Benedictine monk, called the Venerable Bede and St. Bede He spent his whole life at the monasteries of Wearmouth (at Sunderland) and Jarrow and became probably the most learned man in Western Europe in his day His writings, virtually comprising a summary of the learning of his time, consist of theological, historical, and scientific treatises. Like a modern scholar, he gives due credit to his sources, a practice then most unusual His theological works are commentaries on the Scriptures in the light of the interpretations of the Church Fathers He wrote biographical works such as the lives of St Cuthbert (in prose and verse) and the History of the Abbots (of Wearmouth and Jarrow). His Ecclesiastical History of the English Nation, written in Latin prose, is an important primary source for English history from 597 to 731 His accounts in it of how the poet Caedmon received the gift of song and of the conversion of Northumbria to Christianity are among the most notable passages in medieval literature. The Ecclesiastical History has been many times translated, while the best edition of the text is in Bedae opera historica (ed by Charles Plummer, 1896) Among Bede's scientific treatises the best known are those on chronology, long held as standard Feast May 27 See the collection of essays, Bede His Life, Times, and Writings (ed by A. Hamilton Thompson, 1935)

Bedeiah (bĕdē'yù), Jew married to a foreign wife. Ezra 10 35.

Bedell, Frederick (bûdĕl'), 1868–, American physicist and electrical engineer, b Brooklyn, N Y, grad Yale (B A, 1890) and Cornell (Ph D, 1892) He taught at Cornell (1893–1937) and was an editor (1894–1922) of the Physical Review He specialized in alternating currents, wrote on electricity and aerodynamics, and invented systems of power transmission

Bedersi, Yedayah ben Abraham see BEDARESI

Bedford, Francis Russell, 5th duke of see RUSSELL, family

Bedford, Francis Russell, 2d earl of: see RUSSELL, family

Bedford, Francis Russell, 4th earl of: see RUSSELL, family

Bedford, Gunning, 1747-1812, U S statesman, b Philadelphia, grad Princeton Settling in Delaware, Bedford became a member of the local legislature, attorney general (1784-89), and a delegate to the Continental Congress (1785 86) In the Federal Constitutional Convention (1787) he opposed a strong central government and was a vigorous champion of the rights of small states

Bedford, Hastings William Sackville Russell, 12th duke of see RUSSELL, family

Bedford, John of Lancaster, duke of: see JOHN OF LANCASTER

Bedford, John Russell, 4th duke of: see RUSSELL, family

Bedford, John Russell, 1st earl of. see RUSSELL, family

Bedford, William Russell, 5th earl and 1st duke of see RUSSELL, family

Bedford, town (pop 1,697), S Que, on the Pike river and SE of Montreal

Bedford, municipal borough (1931 pop 40,554, 1947 estimated pop 52,210), co seat of Bedfordshire, England on the Ouse and NNW of London It is a residential community and market center, with some manufactures of farm implements In the 6th cent it was a battlefield for Saxons and Britons, there are examples of Saxon stone carvings in St Peter's Church John Bunyan is commemorated by a chapel on the site of a building where he preached after 1672 The town's schools, well known throughout England were established in 1556 by Sir William Harper, a native of the town Bedford School, founded in 1552, is one of the largest public schools of England

Bedford 1 City (pop 12,514), co seat of Lawrence co, S Ind, near the East Fork of the White River SSE of Bloomington, laid out 1820 It has many large quarries of the excellent building limestone to which it gives its name and which is shipped all over the world 2 City (pop 2 151), co seat of Taylor co, SW Iowa, near the Mo line, inc 1885 Bedford State Park, with a fish hatchery, is near by 3 Town (pop 3,807), E Mass, NW of Boston, settled c 1640, inc 1729 It still has pre-Revolutionary houses, also here are a hospital for veterans (1928), a convent, and a seminary 4 Town (pop 1,561), S N H, SW of, and near, Manchester; inc 1750 It was settled in 1737 on grants made in 1733-34 to soldiers of King Philip's War and their heirs J E Worcester and Zachariah Chandler were born in Bedford Many houses were wrecked by an explosion in 1944 5 Unincorporated residential village (pop 893), SE N Y, in Westchester co A state reformatory for women is at near-by Bedford Hills 6 Residential village (pop 7,390), NE Ohio, SE of Cleveland It was settled c 1813 on the site of a Moravian settlement (1786) Chairs and china are among Bedford's products 7 Agricultural borough (pop 3,268), co seat of Bedford co, S Pa, on a branch of the Juniata river and SE of Johnstown, settled c 1750, laid out 1766 It has stock farms and apple orchards The borough is on the site of a fort (c 1757), later an important post on the Pittsburgh Turnpike and the place where Washington in 1794 reviewed troops sent to suppress the Whisky Rebellion It has several colonial buildings The resort, Bedford Springs, is near by. 8 Town (pop 3,973), SW Va between Roanoke and Lynchburg, in a farm area, founded 1781, inc 1890, reinc 1912 It has tobacco warehouses and varied manufactures The courthouse of Bedford co and the Elks National Home are here Near by is "Poplar Forest" (1806–9, restored), the country home of Jefferson.

Bedford Level, England see FENS, THE

Bedfordshire or Bedford, county (473 sq mi, 1931 pop 220,525, 1948 estimated pop 298,715), S central England The shortened form of the name is Beds The county town is Bedford The terrain is generally flat with low chalk hills in the south The region is a fertile one, drained by the meandering course of the Ouse More than four fifths of the area is under cultivation, agriculture, particularly market gardening for near-by London, is the chief occupation. The county manufactures agricultural implements, and Luton, its largest town, has been famous for centuries as a center for the manufacture of lace and straw plait for hatting Part of the ancient kingdom of Mercia, Bedfordshire was first mentioned as a shire in 1016 when the region was laid waste by King Canute A refuge for continental Protestants, the county strongly opposed the king in the Puritan Revolution. John Bunyan was born at Elstow and preached at Bedford See Victoria History of Bedfordshire (3 vols, 1904–12), Arthur Mee, Bedfordshire and Huntingdon (1939)

Bédier, Joseph (zhôzĕf bādyā'), 1864–1938, French authority on medieval literature. He was professor of medieval French language and literature at the Collège de France and a member of the French Academy His reconstruction of the Roman de Tristan et Iseult (1900) into modern French brought him fame for its beauty of language and excellence of scholarship Les Légendes épiques (4 vols, 1908–13), his masterpiece, developed a new theory of the origin of the great romances of the Middle Ages

Bedivere, Sir, King Arthur's steward see ARTHURIAN LEGEND

Bedlam [i e, Bethlehem], oldest insane asylum in England and one of the oldest in Europe A priory in 1247, the building was used c 1400 for the insane Known properly as the Bethlem Royal Hospital, it was moved (1930) from Lambeth borough to a new site near Croydon

Bedlingtonshire, urban district (1931 pop 27,461, 1947 estimated pop 27,350), Northumberland, England In a coal-mining area, it includes the towns of Bedlington, Netherton, and West Sleekburn The Bedlington terrier is bred here

Bedlington terrier see TERRIER

Bedloe's Island, 10 38 acres, in Upper New York Bay, SW of Manhattan Island, site of the STATUE OF LIBERTY NATIONAL MONUMENT The island, site of New York city's first quarantine station (established by John BARD) and later of a fort and other army buildings, was placed under the jurisdiction of the National Park Service in 1937

Bedny, Demyan (dyĕmyan' byĕd'nyĭ), 1883-1945, Soviet verse writer, whose real name was Yefim Pridvorov As the "early poet-laureate of the Revolution" he wrote topical verse and was widely acclaimed In 1936 a libretto, The Heroes, in which the legendary champions of Russia were satirized, turned critical opinion against him

Bedouin (bĕ'dōōĭn) [Arabic, = tent dwellers], nomad peoples of interior Arabia They are of the same Semitic stock as their sedentary neighbors and with them share a devout belief in ISLAM, but are distrustful of any but their own local traditions and way of life Camel breeding provides their main livelihood Land is divided into recognized tribal orbits within which are roving family groups As with most nomads, hospitality and simple, immediate justice are first rules of conduct See C M Doughty, Travels in Arabia Deserta (1926), C R Raswan, Black Tents of Arabia (1935, reissue, 1947)

Beds. see BEDFORDSHIRE

Bedzin, Pol Będzin (bĕ'jĕn), Ger Bendzin (bĕn'tsēn), city (pop 27,754) Silesia prov, SW Poland, a center of the KATOWICE mining and industrial region Founded in the 14th cent, it passed to Prussia (1795) and to Russia (1815) It reverted to Poland in 1919

bee, insect of the order Hymenoptera, which also includes the ant and the wasp The solitary bees include the carpenter, the cuckoo, the leaf-cutter, and the mason bees Solitary bees do not produce wax The groups of social bees are the bumblebees, the stingless bees, and the hive bees Bumblebees belong to the genus Bombus In the tropics, bumblebee colonies continue for many years, but in temperate regions the workers and drones die in the fall Only the young, fertilized queens live through the winter, in hibernation In the spring they begin to lay eggs, often in deserted nests of field mice and chipmunks Bumblebees are pollinators of red clover Stingless bees are chiefly tropical Some species release a caustic liquid which burns the skin The honeybee or hive bee commonly raised in many parts of the world is Apis mellifera (or mellifica) of Old World origin Races of the honeybee include the Carniolan, Caucasian, Cyprian, and Italian Artificial insemination is sometimes employed to insure purity of the strain A typical colony consists of a queen, many thousands of workers (sexually undeveloped females), and a few hundred drones (fertile males) At the tip of the bee's abdomen is the strong, sharp lancet or sting In the queen it is smooth and can be withdrawn easily She stings only rival queens The worker bee stings humans and other animals Its sting is barbed and can rarely be withdrawn without tearing the body of the bee, causing it to die In the nuptial flight the queen is followed aloft by the drones, one of which succeeds in impregnating her with millions of sperms These are stored in her body in a pouch The drone dies and the queen returns to the hive For the rest of her life (usually several years) she lays in the waxen cells both fertilized eggs, which develop into workers, and unfertilized eggs, which become drones A queen is produced from a fertilized egg when the cell is enlarged and the larva in it is fed entirely on royal jelly during the larval period (five and a half days), other larvae are fed pollen and nectar for the last two or three days When a hive becomes overcrowded a swarm may leave and establish another colony The duties of the workers include gathering nectar, making and storing honey, building the cells, cleaning, ventilating, and protecting the hive; and feeding and caring for the queen and her young. They are of inestimable value as agents of pollination Workers live for only about six weeks during the active season. Those which hatch in the fall live through the winter Drones die in the fall See also BEESWAX and HONEY See Maurice Maeterlinck, The Life of the Bee (1913), A I. Root and E R Root, The ABC and XYZ of Bee Culture (1940), E W Teale, The Golden Throng (1940)

bee balm see OSWEGO TEA and LEMON BALM

Beebe, William (bē'bē), 1877–, American scientist, explorer, author, b Brooklyn, N Y, grad Columbia (B S, 1898) He became (1899) curator of ornithology at the New York Zoological Society and made his department there one of the greatest in the world His expeditions have carried him to many parts of the globe, including under water in a bathysphere Among his numerous books are The Bird (1906), Jungle Peace (1918), Galapagos (1923), The Arcturus Adventure (1925), Pheasants Their Lives and Homes (1926), Beneath Tropic Seas (1928), Nonsuch Land of Water (1932), first volume of a study of waters around Bermuda, Half Mile Down (1934), Book of Bays (1942), and High Jungle (1949) He edited Book of Naturalists (1944)

Beebe, strawberry-shipping town (pop 1,189), central Ark, NE of Little Rock A state junior agricultural college is here

Beebe Plain (bē'bē), village (pop 1,024), SE Que, near Lake Memphremagog SSW of Sherbrooke and near the international boundary beech, name for any of several species of the genus Fagus, deciduous trees of the Northern Hemisphere The American beech (Fagus grandifolia) is one of the dominant forest trees over much of E North America The tree is symmetrical and has a distinctive, smooth light gray bark Its wood is tough and strong but easily worked and is used for furniture, interiors, and woodenware, among other things, and it makes a good firewood The beechnuts are of sweet flavor but are no longer marketed to any extent, swine are often turned into beech forests to fatten on the mast The European beech (F sylvatica) is an important forest tree especially in Central and S Europe, valued for its wood and for an edible oil extracted from the nuts Varieties of the European beech, e g, the purple and copper beeches, are cultivated in America The blue or water beech is an IRONWOOD

Beecham, Sir Thomas, 1879, English conductor He made his debut in 1899 and in 1906 organized and conducted the New Symphony Orchestra As producer and conductor of opera he introduced to England the operas of Richard Strauss, many Russian operas, and the Russian ballet He has also been the champion of the music of Delius In 1932 he organized the London Philharmonic Orchestra, which he conducted for many years He was a frequent conductor of the Hallé Orchestra, Manchester, until 1942 In the 1942-43 season he appeared as conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra and the Metropolitan Opera He organized in 1946 the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, of which he is conductor See his autobiography, A Mingled Chime (1943)

Beecher, Catharine Esther, 1800–1878, American educator, b East Hampton, N Y, educated in Litchfield, Conn, daughter of Lyman Beecher She first taught in New London, Conn, and in 1824 founded a girls' school in Hartford Later she organized the Western Female Institute in Cincinnati (1832) and similar institutions in Quincy, Ill, Milwaukee, and Burlington, Iowa Author of works on religion, health, and domestic science (which she introduced in her schools), she was indefatigable in the promotion of liberal education for women, although she opposed woman suffrage See biography by M E Harveson (1932)

Beecher, Henry Ward, 1813–87, American Congregational preacher, orator, and lecturer, b Litchfield, Conn, son of Lyman Beecher and brother of Harriet Beecher Stowe He graduated from Amherst in 1834 and attended Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati After two pastorates in Indiana, he was called in 1847 to the newly organized Plymouth Church (Congregational) in Brooklyn, N Y Every important issue of the day was discussed on his platform He was an outstanding leader in the antislavery movement, a proponent of woman suffrage, and a convert to the theory of evolution Beecher became editor of the Independent in 1861 and of the Christian Union in 1870 In 1863 he visited England, where his lectures were influential in gaining a more sympathetic understanding of the Union cause Enthusiasm, imaginative insight, a real interest in his fellow man, ready wit, and an easy command of English produced a convincing eloquence The sensational lawsuit brought against him by Theodore Tilton for adultery ended after a long trial (1875) with disagreement of the jury Beecher's friends acclaimed him victor The statue of him in Brooklyn is the work of John Quincy Adams Ward Beecher's published works include The Life of Jesus the Christ (1871) and Evolution and Religion (1885) See biographies by Lyman Abbott (1903) and Paxton Hibben (1927).

Beecher, Lyman, 1775–1863, American Presbyterian clergyman, b New Haven, Conn., grad. Yale, 1797.

In 1799 he became pastor at East Hampton, N.Y While serving (1810–26) in the Congregational church at Litchfield, Conn , he published his six sermons on intemperance, which passed through many American and English editions Beecher helped to found (1816) the American Bible Society In 1826 he was called to the Hanover St Church, Boston, where his revival services created excitement He was president of Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, from 1832 to 1852 His liberal views not infrequently placed him in sharp opposition to the conservative group in the Presbyterian church Of his 13 children, Henry, Charles, Edward, Thomas, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and Catharine Beecher won wide recognition See his Collected Works (1852) and his Autobiography and Correspondence (ed by Charles Beecher, 1863–64), L B Stowe, Saints, Sinners, and Beechers (1934)

Beechey, Frederick William, 1796–1856, British arctic explorer A naval officer, he accompanied an expedition N of Spitsbergen in 1818 and wrote an account of it in his Voyage of Discovery towards the North Pole (1843) He accompanied W E Parry to the Canadian arctic regions in 1819, and in 1825–28 he commanded the Blossom in its explorations of the NW Alaska coast He wrote Narrative of a Voyage to the Pacific and Bering Strait (1831) He later surveyed the North African and the Irish coasts

Beechey, Sir William, 1753–1839, English portrait painter, studied at the Royal Academy of Arts Beechey early gained an enviable reputation and painted many portraits of British fashionable society and of the royal family He is represented in the National Gallery, London, the Louvre, and the Metropolitan Museum

Beech Grove, suburban town (pop 3,907), central Ind , near Indianapolis, settled 1902, inc 1906 It has railroad shops

beef, flesh of CATTLE prepared for food In the United States it has become one of the chief products of MEAT PACKING and is sold either chilled, frozen, or cured The carcasses, after being dressed, are split in half along the back and then cut into fore and hind quarters In this form beef usually reaches local dealers and is cut by them into portions e g , shank, round, rump, loins (roasts and steaks), flank, rib (roasts), chuck, plate, and brisket In addition to the heart, kidneys liver, tongue, tripe, and tail are edible Only the choicest animals are thus disposed of for fresh beef The inferior ones are converted into various products, as beef extract, sausage, pickled or corned beef, and canned or potted products Young steers especially fattened produce the finest beef, which is a clear light red color, firm, and well marbled with fat

Beefeaters, popular name for the YEOMEN OF THE GUARD and for the warders of the Tower of London Both wear colorful uniforms similar to those of the Elizabethan period

Beeliada (bē″ĕlī′ŭdu) [Heb ,=known by Baal], the same as ELIADA 1

Beelzebub (bēĕl′zĭbŭb), in the Bible see SATAN

bee moth, wax moth, or honeycomb moth, small moth (Galleria mellonella)which lays its eggs in crevices of the hive of a weak colony of bees The larvae eat the wax and debris, making silk-lined tunnels which destroy the comb See Wax Moth and Its Control (U S Dept of Agriculture; Circular 386)

Beer, George Louis, 1872–1920, American historian, b Staten Island, N Y , grad Columbia (B A , 1892, M A , 1893) He was a tobacco importer for 10 years but also lectured on European history at Columbia from 1893 to 1897 After 1903 he devoted himself to continuing his economic historical studies of British colonial policy His works revolutionized history writing about the American colonies These were, notably, The Commercial Policy of England toward the American Colonies (1893), British Colonial Policy, 1754–1765 (1907), Origins of the British Colonial System, 1578–1660 (1908), and The Old Colonial System, Part 1 (1912) He was also a practical expert on colonial problems, and he is sometimes credited with the first employment of the word mandates in its modern usage He was one of the corps of U S experts at the Paris Peace Conference and was a member of the League of Nations mandates commission

Beer, Thomas, 1889–1940, American author, b Council Bluffs, Iowa, grad Yale, 1911, and studied law at Columbia, 1911 13 He is remembered for his biographies of Stephen Crane (1923) and Mark Hanna (1929) and his witty study of American manners in the 1890s, The Mauve Decade (1926) Those three works were edited with an introduction by Leonard Bacon (1941), and some of Beer's short stories which appeared in magazines were edited by Wilson Follett in Mrs Egg and Other Americans (1947)

Beer (bē′ur) [Heb ,=well] 1 Place, to which Gideon's son Jotham fled Judges 9 21 2 Place, E of the Dead Sea between the Arnon and the Jordan, where Israel camped and dug a well Num 21 13–18 The little song quoted is one of the oldest poetic pieces in the Bible See BEER-ELIM.

beer, alcoholic beverage made by brewing and fermenting cereals, especially malted barley, usually with hops (see HOP) added as a flavoring agent and stabilizer One of the oldest of alcoholic beverages, beer was already well known in ancient Egypt Earlier brewed chiefly in the household and monastery, it became in late medieval times a commercial product and is now made by large-scale manufacture in almost every modern country, especially England, Germany, Czechoslovakia, and the United States It is less popular in southern or wine-producing areas Although English, continental, and American beers differ markedly in flavor and content, brewing processes are similar A mash prepared from crushed malt (usually barley), cereal adjuncts such as rice and corn, and water are heated and rotated in the mash tun to dissolve the solids and permit the malt enzymes to convert the starch into sugar The liquid wort is drained into a copper vessel, where it is boiled with the hops, then run off for cooling and settling At the required temperature it is "pitched" with barm (liquid yeast), the strain of yeast employed determining top or bottom fermentation Modern beers, lighter than ancient, contain about 3 to 6 percent alcohol The term ale, once used for a beer made without hops, is now applied in England to any light-colored beer In the United States ale is a pale, strongly hopped malt beverage generally brewed by top fermentation Most American beers are made by the bottom fermentation process and stored for several weeks or months before marketing, hence the name lager beer (Ger Lager = storage place) Bock beer, said to take its name from Einbeck, Prussia, where it was first made is a heavier, darker beer commonly drunk in spring Porter is a strong, dark ale brewed with the addition of roasted malt to give flavor and color Stout, darker and maltier than porter, has a more pronounced hop aroma and may attain an alcoholic content of 6 to 7 percent See Carl A Nowak, Modern Brewing (1934), John Arnold, Origin and History of Beer and Brewing (1911)

Beera (bē-ē′ru) [Heb ,=a well], Asherite 1 Chron 7 37

Beerah (bē-ē′ru) [Heb ,=a well], Reubenite 1 Chron 5 6

Beerbohm, Sir Max (bēr′bōm), 1872–, English essayist and caricaturist He contributed to the famous Yellow Book while still an undergraduate at Oxford By the time he succeeded G B Shaw as dramatic critic for the Saturday Review, Beerbohm was the author of several books, including The Christmas Garland (1895) and The Works of Max Beerbohm (1896) Other works include Zuleika Dobson (1911), a satire-fantasy on Oxford, Seven Men (1919), And Even Now (1920), and Mainly on the Air (1947) He was knighted in 1939 on his return from Italy, where he had lived from 1910 Collections of his caricatures, for which he was famous, include The Poets' Corner (1904) and Rossetti and His Circle (1922)

Beer-elim (bē′ur-ē′lĭm) [Heb ,=well of the heroes], unidentified place, perhaps the same as BEER 2 and certainly in the same region Isa 15 8

Beer-Hofmann, Richard (rĭkh′ärt bär′-hôf′man), 1866–1945, Austrian poet and dramatist He was associated with the "Young Vienna" group active in Austria at the turn of the century His Schlafied fur Miriam [cradle song for Miriam] (1898) is considered to be one of the finest philosophical lullabies in German His first and best-known play, Der Graf von Charolais [the count of Charolais] (1904), was followed by Jaakobs Traum [Jacob's dream] (1918) and Der junge David [the young David] (1933) Some of his verse was collected in 1941 He came to the United States in 1939

Beeri (bē-ē′rī) [Heb ,=my well] 1 Father of Esau's wife, Judith Gen 26 34 2 Father of Hosea, the prophet Hosea 1 1

Beer-lahai-roi see LAHAI-ROI

Beernaert, Auguste (ōgüst′ bârnart′, bâr′nart), 1829–1912, Belgian statesman Belonging to the liberal wing of the Catholic party, he was a member of several cabinets and promoted electoral reform Beernaert was a delegate to the Hague Peace Conferences (1899, 1907), and he shared the 1909 Nobel Peace Prize with Estournelles de Constant

Beeroth (bē-ē′rŏth, bē′r-) [Heb ,=wells, plural of BEER] 1 City, c 10 mi due N of Jerusalem, important as a road station, now Bireh Joshua 9 17, 18 25, 2 Sam 4 2, 23 37, Ezra 2 25, Neh 7 29 2 The same as BENE-JAAKAN

Beers, Clifford Whittingham, 1876–1943, American founder of the mental hygiene movement, b New Haven, Conn , grad Sheffield Scientific School, Yale, 1897 After the publication of A Mind That Found Itself (1908), an autobiographical account of his confinement in a mental institution, he had the support of the medical profession and others in the work to prevent mental disorders He was a leader in the field until his retirement in 1939

Beersheba (bērshē′bu, bēr′shēbu) [Heb ,=seven wells or well of the oath], town, S Palestine, now called Bir es-Seba, c 28 mi SE of Gaza, 48 mi SW of Jerusalem It has always been one of the most southerly towns of the country, hence the expression "from DAN to Beersheba" for the whole of Palestine It is especially connected, in the Bible, with Abraham, Hagar, Isaac, and Elijah Gen 21 31; 26 33, Joshua 19 1,2, Judges 20 1, 1 Chron 21 2, 2 Kings 23 8, 2 Chron 19 4; Neh 11 30 Beersheba was the first city taken by the British in the Palestine campaign (1917) of the First World War In the partition of Palestine (1948), Beersheba was assigned to the Arabs and occupied by forces of Jordan

Beesh-terah (bēĕsh′-tĭrû) see ASHTAROTH

beet, biennial or annual vegetable cultivated since before the Christian era Only one species, Beta vulgaris, is of commercial importance, many varieties of it having been developed, about 50 of these are grown in the United States Besides the garden vegetable—of which both root and leaf are eaten—other varieties are cultivated for their foliage, for a cattle feed, and one, the sugar beet, for beet sugar Chard or Swiss chard is a potherb variety Mangelwurzel is a coarse beet used for fodder The beet is attacked by fungus diseases, such as leaf spot, red and white rust, and scab It is one of the root crops most often included in crop rotation systems

Beethoven, Ludwig van (lōōd′vĭkh van bā′tōvn), 1770–1827, German composer, b Bonn He studied first with his father, a singer The most important of his early teachers was C G Neefe, who introduced him to Bach's Well-tempered Clavier In 1787 he had some lessons with Mozart From 1792 he lived in Vienna, studying under Haydn and later under Antonio Salieri and J G Albrechtsberger, at the same time earning renown as a solo pianist and improviser In 1800 he appeared publicly in concert, but his growing deafness made a career as a virtuoso impossible The first period of his composition includes piano sonatas, among them the Sonata pathétique (1799) and the Sonata quasi una fantasia (1801) in C sharp minor, known as the Moonlight Sonata, the early chamber music, serenades, and violin sonatas, the first three piano concertos, and the first two symphonies In the next period are most of the best-known works including the Fourth Piano Concerto (1805–6) the Fifth, or Emperor, Concerto (1809), the Violin Concerto in D (1806), the most famous of his 10 violin sonatas, the Ninth, or Kreutzer, Sonata (1803), the Third, or Eroica, Symphony (1802–4), the Fifth Symphony (1805–7), the Sixth, or Pastoral, Symphony (1807–8), the Seventh Symphony (1812), the Eighth Symphony (1812), his one opera Fidelio (1803–5, revised 1806, 1814), for which he composed four overtures, each of the first three called Leonore Overture, and many well-known piano sonatas, including the Waldstein (1804), Appassionata (1804–6), and Les Adieux (1809) sonatas In the years 1812–18 when he was occupied with a bitter struggle over the custody of his nephew (whom he loved dearly but who caused him much anxiety and grief), his creative output was very small The great works of his last period were mostly composed in total deafness the last five piano sonatas, including Opus 106, the Hammerklavier (1818 19), the Ninth Symphony (1817–23), with choral finale based on Schiller's "Ode to Joy", the Missa Solemnis in D (1818–23), and the last five string quartets (1825–26) A continuous developing and maturing, rather than abrupt changes of style, are evident throughout Beethoven's music He took the classical forms, principally the sonata, and developed them to the ultimate Although some of his harmonies were considered daring and his instrumentation sometimes bizarre, his works were successful in his lifetime, and the financial difficulties of his later years were chiefly the result of his own ineptness He is regarded simultaneously as the last of the classical composers and the first of the romantic composers See biographies by A W Thayer (rev ed , 1921), Paul Bekker (1928), Romain Rolland (1929), R H Schauffler (1929), M M Scott (1934), Walter Riezler (1938), J N Burk (1943), and Madeleine Goss (rev ed , 1946), Sir George Grove, Beethoven and His Nine Symphonies (1904), J W N Sullivan, Beethoven His Spiritual Development (1927), D G Mason, Beethoven and His Forerunners (rev ed , 1930), D F Tovey, Beethoven (1944)

beetle, insect of the order Coleoptera, of which there are about 180,000 species Approximately 22,000 species are found in North America Most beetles have two pairs of wings, the first of these is modified to a thickened pair of wing covers, or elytra which form a protective covering for the body and for the membranous hind wings Beetles undergo a complete metamorphosis The larva is usually called a grub A few families are aquatic but the majority are terrestrial Some are predaceous, others feed on living plants, on deadwood, or on decaying animal or vegetable matter The tiger, whirligig, and carrion beetles are common, as are the BOLL WEEVIL, the COLORADO POTATO BEETLE, the FIREFLY, the JAPANESE BEETLE, the LADYBIRD, the SCARAB, the TUMBLEBUG, the JUNE BEETLE, and the WIREWORM See also WEEVIL

Beets, Nicolaas (nē′kōlas bāts), 1814–1903, Dutch author He translated Byron into Dutch and was fairly well known as a poet when his Camera Obscura (1839), published under the pseudonym Hildebrand, won great popularity This was a series of sketches of everyday life, gently humorous in tone

beet sugar see BEET and SUCROSE

Beeville, city (pop 6,789), co seat of Bee co, S Texas, NW of Corpus Christi, settled in the 1830s, laid out 1878, inc. 1908 Long a cow town, Beeville is, with its markets and small factories, the center of an area producing cattle, oil, milk, and eggs.

Begas, Karl Joseph (kärl' yō'zŏf bā'gäs), 1794–1854, German historical and portrait painter He studied in Paris and became painter to the king of Prussia, who sent him to Italy On his return, he was appointed a professor in the Royal Academy, Berlin Influenced successively by the German and the Italian masters, he adopted first the style of the Nazarenes (or German Pre-Raphaelites), then the romantic manner, and finally became a realist His portraits are among the finest examples of his work. Of his three sons, Oskar Begas (ôs'kär), 1828–83, was a painter of portraits of contemporaries, genre subjects, and wall decorations Reinhold Begas (rīn'hŏlt), 1831–1911, was a sculptor who studied under Rauch and later in Italy, where he was influenced by the works of Michelangelo and of the artists of the baroque period His Borussia, executed for the façade of the Berlin Exchange, first brought him into prominence His portrait busts include those of Moltke, Bismarck, Alexander von Humboldt, and members of the Hohenzollern family His brother and pupil, Karl Begas 1845–1916, studied also in Rome His best work, as well as that of the rest of the family, was in Berlin

Begg, Alexander, 1839–97, Canadian pioneer He was an early settler and merchant in Manitoba, and his Creation of Manitoba (1871), Ten Years in Winnipeg (1879), and History of the North-West (3 vols, 1894–95) are of value for their regional history Another Alexander Begg, 1825–1904, a journalist, wrote a History of British Columbia (1894).

beggar, one who lives by asking alms for his personal use The rise of begging is linked with the beginnings of private property There is most begging in times of economic and social stress and in regions where there is a religious stimulus to almsgiving Vagrants (see VAGRANCY) are roving beggars, able but unwilling to work, to be distinguished from hobos, who are itinerant workers The unemployed and handicapped drift easily into professional begging, against which punitive measures do little The opening of municipal lodginghouses, vocational help for the handicapped, old-age pensions, organised charity—including hospitals and convalescent homes—all aid in removing the cause of begging See C J Ribton-Turner, History of Vagrants and Vagrancy (1887), H W Gilmore, The Beggar (1940)

Beggars of the Sea see GUEUX

Beggar's Opera, The. see GAY, JOHN

beggarweed, leguminous plant (Desmodium purpureum), native to the West Indies and sown in the United States for forage and for green manure It has high nutritive value and is palatable to stock Although it does well as far north as Virginia, it is little grown outside of Florida

Beggs, oil city (pop 1,283), E central Okla, S of Tulsa, inc 1902

Beghards (bĕg'ŭrdz), associations of men in Europe, organized similarly to the BEGUINES They are first known to have been established at Louvain in 1220 From there they extended their organisations throughout the Netherlands, into Germany, and into France and Italy Although they survived into the 15th cent, they were unpopular and mistrusted from before 1300 According to the Council of Vienne (1311), which condemned their doctrine, the Beghards taught that one may attain in this life to such a perfection as to be unable to sin, i e, what he may do thereafter is by definition never sinful This idea is found earlier among the Albigensians and later among some Protestants The Beghards were influenced by the pantheistic mystical sect, Brothers and Sisters of the Free Spirit, which flourished around Cologne

begonia (-gō'-), any plant of the large genus Begonia, mostly succulent perennial herbs of the tropics cultivated elsewhere as bedding or pot plants and propagated by seeds, stem or leaf cuttings, or division Some kinds are grown for their showy, variously colored leaves—rex begonias—and some for their flowers, sometimes double The blossoms, white, pink, red, or yellow, are of a single sex Begonias may be divided roughly into root types, as fibrous, rhizomatous, and tuberous There are a large number of hybrids See Bessie Buxton, Begonias and How to Grow Them (1939)

Beguines (bāgēn'), religious association of women in Europe, established in the 12th cent The members, who took no vows and were not controlled by the rules of any order, usually were housed in separate cottages and devoted themselves to charitable works Their community was called a beguinage Until the 14th cent, women of high social standing came into the communities in numbers From Belgium and the Netherlands the movement extended across France and Germany. During the earlier years, their services to society brought to the Beguines favor and protection from secular heads and Church authorities, but in the 13th and 14th cent accusations of heresies and immorality among them as well as among the BEGHARDS, the corresponding bands of men, led to the scattering of the members. The character of the communities changed, eventually, where they survived, taking the form of almshouses for needy spinsters in certain places Some still exist in Germany but the most successful beguinages today are in Belgium and Holland, particularly in Ghent

Behaim, Behem, or Boeheim, Martin (all bā'hīm), b 1436? or 1459?, d 1506?, German traveler and cosmographer He studied (possibly under Regiomontanus) astronomy, navigation, and mathematics He went to Portugal as a merchant c 1480 and may have gone on an expedition along the west coast of Africa In 1486 he went to Fayal in the Azores, where he married He is believed to have developed an astrolabe and other devices for the use of navigators, but is best known for the terrestrial globe which he made in 1492 and gave to his native city, Nuremberg The globe is inaccurate and does not represent the best geographical information of the late 15th cent

Beham (bā'hām), Behem (-hĕm), or Peham (pā'-), name of two German engravers and painters, among the most celebrated of the German Little Masters Hans Sebald Beham (hāns' sā'bŏlt), 1500–1550, a pupil of Dürer, with his brother was banished from Nuremberg for freethinking in 1525 After some vicissitudes he settled in Frankfurt c 1531 His rare paintings have less interest than his engravings on wood and copper, of which he produced some 1,250 Many of his prints deal with biblical or mythological subjects, such as The Labors of Hercules, but his best work depicts the life of his day, as in the spirited Village Weddings series His brother, Barthel Beham (bär'tul), 1502–40, was painter to Duke William of Bavaria, who sent him to Italy He painted a celebrated Christ Bearing the Cross and numerous portraits, one of which is in the Metropolitan Museum He is best known, however, for his excellent engravings, which include Virgin at the Window and portraits of the emperors Charles V and Ferdinand I behaviorism, explanation of human behavior entirely in terms of physiological activity (of the nervous system) in response to stimuli Introduced by J B WATSON in 1912, it is based on the early mechanistic concepts of Democritus and Epicurus and the later beliefs of Hobbes Behaviorism was modern, however, in its subjection of psychology to the laboratory technique Watson, in his insistence that behavior is a physiological reaction to environmental stimuli, denied the value of introspection and the concept of consciousness as unscientific and saw mental processes as bodily movements, even when unperceived, thus thinking is subvocal speech The conditioned-reflex experiments of Pavlov and Bekhterev had a central place with the behaviorists, who considered that all emotions—aside from rage, fear, and love—were conditioned by habit and could be learned or unlearned Behaviorism was influential in the United States between the First World War and the Second World War See J B Watson, Behaviorism (1925), R S. Woodworth, Contemporary Schools of Psychology (rev ed, 1948).

Behem, artists see BEHAM

Behem, Martin see BEHAIM, MARTIN

behemoth (bē'hĭmŏth, bĭhē'-) [Heb, =plural of beast], animal mentioned in Job 40 15–24, probably the hippopotamus

Behistun (bāhĭstōōn', bū-, bēhĭ'stōōn) or Bisutun (bēsōōtōōn', bēsu-), village, W Iran, E of Kermanshah Near it is a mountainous rock which bears on its face, c 300 ft. above the ground, a bas-relief depicting Darius I with a group of captive chiefs, together with a cuneiform inscription in Old Persian, in Susian (the Iranian language of Elam), and in Assyrian The rock was not unknown (Diodorus attributed the carvings to Semiramis), but it was not until 1835 that Sir Henry RAWLINSON scaled the rock, copied the inscriptions, and thus made it possible to decipher the Assyrian text and provide a key for study of ancient Mesopotamia

Behm, Ernst (ĕrnst' bām), 1830–84, German geographer and statistician, b Gotha He was the founder and editor (1866–84) of Geographisches Jahrbuch, editor (1878–84) of Petermanns Mitteilungen, and statistician (1876–84) of the Almanach de Gotha

Behmen, Jakob see BOEHME, JAKOB

Behn, Aphra (bān, bēn), 1640–89, English dramatist, novelist, and poet, first English woman to write for a livelihood According to tradition, she spent her youth in Surinam, married Behn, a merchant of Dutch extraction, in England, and after his death served as an English spy in Antwerp and in Holland When she turned to writing, Mrs Behn produced works as indecent, as witty, and as bustling with intrigue as any Restoration playwright The Feign'd Courtezans (1679) and The Lucky Chance (1686) are probably her best plays. The scene of Oroonoko (1688), her best-known novel, is chiefly Surinam See Montague Summers, ed, The Works of Aphra Behn (1915), V. Sackville-West, Aphra Behn (1928)

Behrendt, Walter Curt (väl'tŭr kōōrt' bā'rĕnt), 1884–1945, German writer on modern architecture. Building adviser to the Prussian ministry of finance, he came to the United States in 1934 and taught at Dartmouth His works include Alfred Messel (1910), Der Sieg des neuen Baustils (1927), Die holländische Stadt (1928), and Modern Building (1937)

Behrens, Peter (pā'tŭr bā'rŭns), 1868–1940, German architect, influential in Europe in the evolution of the modern architectural style He established before the First World War a predominantly utilitarian type of architecture which, at the same time, achieved qualities of clarity and impressiveness His buildings were among the earliest European works to base a simple and effective style upon the frank terms of modern construction. Behrens is known also for residences, for workers' apartment houses in Vienna, and for the Abbey of St Peter at Salzburg Among his pupils were the Swiss architect Le Corbusier and the German, Walter Gropius

Behring, Emil Adolph von (ā'mĭl a'dôlf fun bâr'ĭng), 1854–1917, German physician He worked with Kitasato at Koch's laboratory in Berlin and from 1895 was professor of hygiene at Marburg A pioneer in serum therapy, following the work of P P E Roux, he demonstrated immunization against diphtheria (1890) and tetanus (1892) by injections of antitoxins which he developed with Kitasato For this work he received the 1901 Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine

Behrman, Samuel Nathaniel (bâr'mŭn), 1893–, American dramatist, b Worcester, Mass, grad Harvard, 1916 He studied under George Pierce Baker His plays The Second Man (1927), Serena Blandish (1928), based on a novel by Enid Bagnold, and Meteor (1929) were issued as Three Plays (1934) He also wrote Brief Moment (1931), Biography (1932), and No Time for Comedy (1939) He is the author of the notable moving-picture play Queen Christina, which starred Greta Garbo

Beira (bā'rŭ, bā'rū), region and former province, N central Portugal, S of the Douro river The old capital was Coimbra It extended to the coast between the Douro and the Mondego, and S of the Mondego it extended SE to the upper Tagus The region is now occupied by Beira Alta, Beira Baixa, and part of Beira Littoral It is to a large extent mountainous (the Serra da Estrela) and has some lovely mountain scenery The arable land yields wheat, and there are also vineyards and olive groves The area had been reconquered from the Moors even before Portugal was formed, but Moorish attacks continued into the 13th cent Later Beira was contested in the incessant Portuguese-Castilian wars

Beira, city (pop 24,762), central Mozambique, a port on the Mozambique Channel of the Indian Ocean, founded 1884 It is connected by rail with many of the major cities of South Africa, Angola, and E Africa Among the products of E central Africa which it exports are lead, copper, chrome, iron, and asbestos

Beirut, Lebanon see BEYROUTH

Beisan (bāsan'), village, Palestine, in the Jordan valley, c 300 ft below sea level It is the site of the biblical BETH-SHAN and of the Greek city Scythopolis, which belonged to the DECAPOLIS Archaeological expeditions have uncovered ruins, notably of a great temple Some finds date from c 1500 B C Beisan is occupied by the forces of Jordan

Beissel, Johann Conrad (yō'hän kōn'rät bī'sŭl), 1690–1768, founder of the Seventh-Day Baptist community at Ephrata, Pa Emigrating (1720) from Germany, he settled first with the German Baptists, or Dunkards, in Germantown, Pa He soon moved to the Conestoga Valley, where he preached to the German settlers Beissel published (1728) a tract on his conviction that Saturday was the true Sabbath With his followers he established (c 1728–1733) at EPHRATA a semimonastic religious community which became well known in colonial times Over 400 of Beissel's hymns were printed, most of them in the Turtel-Taube (1747), the Ephrata hymnal See biography by W. C Klein (1942)

Belt, Alfred (bĭlt), 1853–1906, South African financier, b Hamburg He went to South Africa in 1875, became wealthy from the development of diamond mines, and was a colleague and lieutenant of Cecil Rhodes in Rhodesia Gifts which he made for education include the founding of a chair at Oxford Univ. for colonial history and bequests to found universities at Hamburg and Johannesburg

Beja (bā' zhŭ), city (pop. 21,851), S Portugal, capital of Beja dist, Alentejo prov, SE of Lisbon The Roman city of Pax Julia, it was later a fortress city of the Moors and was reconquered by the Portuguese in 1162. Notable are the 14th-century citadel and the Mosteiro da Conceição [Monastery of the Conception] Beja has trade in agricultural products and in copper and other minerals, and pottery is made here

Bejapur, India: see BIJAPUR.

Béjart or Béjard (both: bāshär'), French family of actors associated with MOLIÈRE, who joined them (1643) to form a troupe at Paris called the Illustre Théatre After the collapse of the venture (1645) and a long period in the provinces, the Béjarts and Molière organized (1658) a new company in Paris, which was successful. The eldest of the family was Joseph Béjart (zhōzĕf'), b.1616–1659. His sister, Madeleine Béjart (mädulĕn'), 1618–72, the ablest of the family and the virtual manager, was Molière's mistress. Her sister, Geneviève Béjart (zhônùvyĕv'), 1624–75, and the youngest brother, Louis Béjart (lwĕ'), 1630–78, also acted in the Paris company. Louis retired in 1670. Armande Grésinde Béjart (ärmäd' grāzĕd'), d 1700, Madeleine's sister or daughter, married Molière (1662) and played the ingénue roles for some years. The death of Molière (1673) caused a momentary collapse of the King's Troupe, as the company was called, but Molière's widow and the actor La Grange procured the absorption by their group of one of the two rival Parisian companies, the troupe of the Théatre du Marais. At the same time they lost the Palais Royal, the theater they had had since 1660. From its new quarters the company was known as the Hôtel Guénégaud troupe. In 1680 the troupe's only rival, the company of the Hôtel de Bourgogne, an older group, was merged with it by royal decree. The resultant company was called the COMÉDIE FRANÇAISE. See Rosamond Gilder, Enter the Actress (1931)

Bek-Budi, Uzbek SSR. see KARSHI

Beke, Charles Tilstone (bĕk), 1800–1874, English traveler and author. In 1840–43 he visited Ethiopia, where he mapped some 70,000 mi of the country, determined approximately the course of the Blue Nile, and compiled vocabularies of 14 languages or dialects. He wrote Origines Biblicae (1834), The Sources of the Nile (1860), and The British Captives in Abyssinia (1865). His Discoveries of Sinai in Arabia and of Midian appeared posthumously, and his widow published (1874), a Summary of his works.

Bekes, Hung. Békés (bā'kĕsh), town (pop 29,283), SE Hungary, on the White Körös river. It is an agricultural center.

Bekescsaba or Csaba, Hung. Békéscsaba (bā'kĕshchō'bŏ), city (pop 52,404), SE Hungary. In a silk-raising and tobacco-growing area, it manufactures textiles and agricultural implements. In the early 18th cent. many Slovaks were settled here.

Bekhterev, Vladimir Mikhailovich (vlŭdyĕ'mĭr mĕkhī'lùvĭch byĕkh'tyĭrĭf), 1857–1927, Russian neurologist and psychologist. He made studies of the localization of functions in areas of the brain and studies of body heat and applied his study of conditioned reflexes in dogs to interpretation of human behavior. His emphasis on the physiological nature of psychic phenomena greatly influenced the behaviorists. He wrote General Principles o Human Reflexology (1904, Eng. tr., 1932).

Bel, deity of the BABYLONIAN RELIGION. The name is a cognate of that of BAAL. For Bel in the Bible, see BEL AND THE DRAGON.

Bela IV (bĕ'lu, bä'lù), 1206–70, king of Hungary (1235–70), son and successor of Andrew II. He set out to recover the crownlands his father had alienated. Confronted by the menace of the Mongol invasion, he sent unheeded appeals to Gregory IX and Frederick II and was crushingly defeated at Mohi on the Sajo river in 1241. Returning after the withdrawal of the invaders, he repopulated the country by inviting foreign colonization and encouraged the building of castles. Bela defeated and killed the last Babenberg duke of Austria in 1246. He was defeated by OTTOCAR II of Bohemia in a war over Styria. His last years were disturbed by the rebellion of his son, later King STEPHEN V.

Bela (bē'-) 1 First king of Edom. Gen. 36.32, 1 Chron. 1.43. 2 Benjamin's first son. Num. 26.38, 1 Chron. 7.6, 8.1. Belah. Gen. 46.21. 3 Reubenite. 1 Chron. 5.8. 4 City later called ZOAR.

Belah (bē'lu), the same as BELA 2.

Bel Air (bulâr'), trading and banking town (pop 1,885), co. seat of Harford co., N Md., NE of Baltimore, in a rich farm area, settled c 1782. Edwin and John Wilkes Booth were born near by.

Bela Kun, see KUN, BELA.

Belalcázar, Sebastián de: see BENALCÁZAR, SEBASTIÁN DE.

Bel and the Dragon, customary name for Dan. 14, a chapter placed in the Apocrypha in AV (see DANIEL). Verses 1–21 tell of the idol Bel, ministered to by priests who secretly consume food left for it, thus deceiving the people. Daniel reveals the fraud, and priests and idol are destroyed. Verses 22–42 tell of a dragon, i.e., a great beast or monster, worshiped as a god. Daniel kills him and is thrown to the lions. To the den Habakkuk is brought miraculously by an angel to minister to him. Daniel is preserved, and the king recognizes the power of the God of Daniel.

Belasco, David, 1853–1931, American actor, playwright, and manager, b. San Francisco. Actively connected with the theater from his youth and at 19 stage manager of the Baldwin Theatre in San Francisco, Belasco by the age of 27 was accredited with some 200 roles, varying in histrionic demand from Uncle Tom's Cabin to Hamlet. In 1880, in partnership with James A. HERNE, he toured the country in Hearts of Oak, his first play. Connections with the Frohmans brought him to New York city in association (1882–84) with the Madison Square Theatre and later as stage manager (1886–90) of the Lyceum. At this time he launched himself as an independent manager. Belasco, a prolific playwright, was best when collaboration displayed his flair for adapting ideas to a theatrical medium. He was famous as a producer of stage lighting and scenery effects, for his inclination towards the spectacle, and for his promotion of talent. He was lucratively associated with Mrs. Leslie CARTER, David WARFIELD, Ina Claire, Mary Pickford, and Lenore Ulrich. His most successful writing combinations were with Herne, Franklyn Fyles, William C. De Mille, and John Luther LONG. He built the Stuyvesant Theatre (1907), later known as the Belasco, during his fight against the Theatrical Syndicate of the '90s. He wrote The Theatre through Its Stage Door (1919). See biography by William Winter (2 vols., 1918).

Belaya (byĕ'lŭ), river, 853 mi. long, Bashkir Autonomous SSR, E European RSFSR. It rises in the Urals and winds generally NW past Beloretsk, Sterlitamak (where it becomes navigable), and Ufa to join the Kama.

Belaya Tserkov (tsĕr'kŭf), city (pop 42,974), NW Ukraine. Here in 1651 Bohdan Chmielnicki signed a short-lived peace with Poland. It has flour mills.

Belcher, John, 1841–1913, English architect. He was known for his ability to give dignified architectural treatment to the many commercial structures which chiefly made up his commissions. With Mervyn Macartney he wrote Later Renaissance Architecture in England (2 vols., 1901), an influential work.

Belcher Islands, area 1,096 sq. mi., off W Quebec, in Hudson Bay northwest of the mouth of Great Whale river, part of the Northwest Territories.

Belchertown, town (pop 3,503), W central Mass., NE of Springfield, settled 1731, inc. 1761. A state school for mental defectives is near. J. G. Holland was born in Belchertown. Quabbin Reservoir is near by.

Belding, industrial city (pop 4,089), S Mich., NE of Grand Rapids and on the Flat River, inc. 1893. Silk, refrigerators, and automobile parts are made.

Belém (bulān') or Pará (pùrä', parä'), city (pop 164,673), capital of Pará state, NE Brazil, on the Pará river. It is the chief port and the metropolis of the vast Amazon river basin and handles the Amazonian produce—rubber, Brazil nuts, cacao, roots (especially cube or timbo root, yielding rotenone), tagua nuts, tobacco, hardwoods, and some jute. There are small plants that process some of this produce. The port area was included in the nationalization of the Port of Pará in 1940. The climate is humid and hot, the streets are heavily shaded by tropic trees, and the botanical garden is brilliant with exotic flowers. Health conditions were much improved by a drainage program in the Second World War. Belém [Port. = Bethlehem] was founded early in the 17th cent. as Santa Maria de Belém do Grão Pará, and there is a 17th-century Jesuit church. The government palace and the cathedral were built in the 18th cent. Belém reached a peak of feverish prosperity in the wild-rubber boom in the early 20th cent., then suffered a depression which was lifted by diversification and planned development in the 1930s. An airport and a coastal railroad enhance the trade of Belém, which also has various state and other institutions, including several schools of higher education. There is a well-equipped modern leprosarium. The city has usually been called Pará by foreigners.

Belen (bulān'), village (pop 3,038), W central N. Mex., S of Albuquerque, in a grain area. It is a trade and railroad center, with railroad yards and shops and a large flour mill. In the Indian revolt of 1680, the pueblo was destroyed.

Belfast (bĕlfăst'), county borough (pop 438,086), capital of Northern Ireland, mainly in S Co. Antrim, but partly in N Co. Down. It is on Belfast Lough, an inlet of the North Channel of the Irish Sea, and at the mouth of the Lagan. The harbor, 8½ mi. long, is navigable to the largest ships. The great shipyards of the Harland and Wolff company have built some of the largest ocean liners. Belfast is the center of the Irish linen industry, its other industries include tobacco processing, flour milling, engineering, food canning, distilling, brewing, iron founding, woolen milling, and the making of rope, cables, chemicals, soap, machinery, and clothing. A castle in defense of a ford over the Lagan was built in 1177. Town and castle were destroyed by Edward Bruce in the 14th cent. French Huguenots, coming here after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, stimulated the growth of the town's linen industry. Belfast became a city in 1888 and capital of Northern Ireland in 1920. In 1935 there was serious rioting between Catholics and Protestants after a celebration of the battle of the Boyne. The city and surrounding country were subjected to heavy air raids in 1941. Belfast is the seat of Queen's Univ. (founded 1845) and the Protestant Cathedral of St. Anne. The Parliament House of Northern Ireland is at Stormont, a suburb.

Belfast (bĕl'făst), city (pop 5,540), co. seat of Waldo co., S. Maine, on Penobscot Bay opposite Castine, chartered 1853. It was settled by Scotch-Irish in 1770 and sacked by the British in 1779 and again in 1814. Belfast flourished as a shipping and shipbuilding port in the 19th cent., the old homes of many sea captains are preserved. Marine supplies are still made here, and the city is a port of entry and a tourist center.

Belfort (bŭfôr', bĕ-, bĕl-), town (pop 35,952), capital of the Territory of Belfort, E France, in Alsace. A major fortress town since the 17th cent., it commands the Belfort Gap or Burgundy Gate between the Vosges and the Jura mts., thus dominating the roads from France, Switzerland, and Germany. An Austrian possession, Belfort passed to France through the Peace of Westphalia (1648) and was fortified by Vauban. In the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71) the garrison withstood a siege of 108 days. Partly in appreciation of this heroism, Belfort and the surrounding territory were left to France when the rest of Alsace was annexed to Germany. The siege is commemorated by a huge statue (36 ft. high, 72 ft. long), the Lion of Belfort, by Bartholdi. In the First World War, Belfort was successfully defended, in 1940, attacked from the rear by the Germans who had swung around the Maginot Line, it was of no military value.

Belfort, Territory of, department (235 sq. mi., pop. 86,648), E France, surrounding the city of Belfort (its capital) and bordering Switzerland on the south. It was created in 1871 from the only district of Alsace then left to France.

Belgae: see GAUL.

Belgaum (bŏlgoum') town (pop 58,319), capital of Belgaum dist., SW Bombay state, India. There are several mosques and Jain temples. Textiles are manufactured here, and there is trade in fish, dates, coconuts, and salt.

Belgian Congo, Fr. Congo Belge, colony (904,991 sq. mi., pop. 10,805,658), equatorial Africa. Leopoldville is the capital. The Atlantic coast line (c. 50 mi. long) of the Belgian Congo separates two parts of Portuguese Africa—Cabinda to the north, the rest of Angola to the south. The frontier with French Equatorial Africa is largely marked by the Bomu and Ubangi rivers on the north and by the Ubangi and the Congo on the west. The colony is otherwise bordered by the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan on the north, by Uganda, Lake Edward, Ruanda-Urundi, Lake Tanganyika, and the Luapula river (largely forming the eastern border with Northern Rhodesia) on the east, and by Northern Rhodesia and Angola on the south. About two thirds of the Belgian Congo is below the equator. The climate is hot and the rainfall heavy, especially in the equatorial zone. The character of the vegetation varies with the elevation of the land. The low-lying central region, traversed by the Congo, is dense jungle or swamp, and the surrounding highlands are bush or grass savannas. The exportable wealth of the colony comprises minerals, including copper, diamonds, lead, and gold (all mined in the east, notably in KATANGA), and agricultural products, especially cotton, palm oil, and coffee. Rubber and ivory were formerly important. The country's foreign trade mainly travels along the CONGO (where are situated major cities, including Leopoldville and Stanleyville) and its tributaries. A sparse network of railroads and roads connects to the waterways some of the regions (e.g., that around Elisabethville) where the navigable river system does not extend. Transportation facilities are inadequate for the expanding economy. The Belgian Congo has very little industry, and the native population, except for miners and other hired workers comprising about 25 percent of the adult males, is engaged in agriculture. There are several distinct native stocks. The Pygmies, who are mostly nomadic forest dwellers, are thought to be the oldest element. Bantu tribes (constituting the bulk of the population) and Nilotic peoples probably invaded the area and displaced the Pygmies. A small element of the population is of Arab descent, and there are some 45,000 white settlers. Diogo Cão visited the mouth of the Congo in the 1480s. The difficulty of penetrating the jungle long discouraged further explorations. In the 19th cent. David Livingstone explored the lakes lying on the eastern border, and later Henry STANLEY made his epic trip down the Congo. The riches revealed excited the interest of King Leopold II of Belgium, who commissioned (1878) Stanley to make further journeys and to conclude treaties with the native rulers. Leopold organized the Belgian Free State in 1885 with himself as monarch and as chief stockholder in the managing company. The Free State concerned itself with suppression of the slave trade and with exploration as well as with exploiting the resources of the land. Investigation of abuses of the native population on the rubber plantations and in the mines led to a demand for a less personal regime, and in 1908 the Free State was transformed into the colony of the Belgian Congo. In the First World War troops from the colony fought against the German holdings in Africa, and after the war the German territory of RUANDA-URUNDI was placed under the administration of the Belgian Congo. See L. G. Pugh, The Changing Congo (1948).

Belgian horse: see HORSE.

Belgian literature. For literature in Flemish (Dutch), see DUTCH AND FLEMISH LITERATURE. The writings of French-speaking Belgians, of whom the chief are MAETERLINCK and VERHAEREN, belong to French literature See also WALLOONS.

Belgium (bĕl'jŭm), Flemish België (bĕl'khā'ŭ), Fr Belgique (bĕlzhĕk'), kingdom (11,779 sq. mi , pop. 8,388,526), NW Europe BRUSSELS is the capital Belgium borders on the North Sea and the Netherlands in the north, on Germany and the grand duchy of Luxembourg in the east, and on France in the west and the southwest A constitutional monarchy with a bicameral legislature, Belgium is divided into nine provinces, which enjoy a large measure of self-government—ANTWERP, BRABANT, EAST FLANDERS, WEST FLANDERS, HAINAUT, LIÉGE, LIMBURG, LUXEMBOURG, and NAMUR In the BELGIAN CONGO the kingdom possesses a valuable colony Belgium is low-lying except in the ARDENNES mts in the south Its population, the densest in Europe, is overwhelmingly industrial. Coal mining, steel production, and chemical industries are concentrated mainly in the Sambre and Meuse valleys, around MONS, CHARLEROI, NAMUR, and LIÉGE, and in the CAMPINE coal basin Some iron is mined, but most is imported, especially from the Lorraine basin in France Zinc is mined and worked in the Liége area Textiles, the chief Belgian manufacture, are produced mainly in West Flanders (e g , at Tournai) and Hainaut (e g , at Courtrai) MALINES, BRUGES, and Brussels are celebrated for their lace The industrial centers are linked with each other and with the main ports (ANTWERP and GHENT) by the MEUSE and SCHELDT rivers and their tributaries, by a network of canals (notably the ALBERT CANAL) totaling c.1,100 mi , and by the densest railroad net of continental Europe In shipping and transit trade Belgium is among the world's leading countries Except in the marshy Campine and in the heavily forested Ardennes there is much arable and well-irrigated soil Truck farming and cattle raising are important in Belgian agriculture Despite the intense industrialization, many cities have preserved their treasures of medieval architecture and art, thus attracting tourists Ghent, LOUVAIN, Brussels, and Liége are university cities The Belgians are about evenly divided into two language groups by a line running roughly E-W through Brussels North of the line Flemish, a Dutch dialect, is official, south of the line, French is official Brussels is bilingual German is spoken in parts of Liége prov , notably at Eupen and Malmédy The WALLOONS, in SE Belgium, speak a French dialect which has no official standing The Roman Catholic Church embraces virtually the entire population and plays a powerful part in Belgian life, especially in education Its primate in Belgium is the archbishop of Malines Belgium takes its name (in general use only since the late 18th cent) from the Belgae, a people of ancient GAUL The Roman province of Belgica was much larger than modern Belgium Here the FRANKS first appeared in the 3d cent A D The Carolingian dynasty had its roots at HERSTAL, in Belgium After the divisions (9th cent) of Charlemagne's empire Belgium was comprised in LOTHARINGIA and later in the duchy of Lower Lorraine, which occupied all but the western part of the so-called LOW COUNTRIES In the 12th cent Lower Lorraine disintegrated, the duchies of Brabant (see BRABANT, DUCHY OF) and LUXEMBOURG and the bishopric of Liége took its place The histories of these feudal states and of FLANDERS and Hainaut constitute the medieval history of Belgium The salient fact was the rise of the cities (e g , Ghent, Bruges, and YPRES) to virtual independence and to economic prosperity through their wool industry and their trade In the 15th cent all present Belgium passed to the dukes of BURGUNDY, who strove to curtail local liberties At the same time the wool industry declined, partly because of English competition With the death (1482) of MARY OF BURGUNDY a period of foreign domination began (see the article NETHERLANDS, AUSTRIAN AND SPANISH, which covers the period from 1477 to 1797). The Treaty of Campo Formio (1797) transferred Belgium from Austria to France, the Treaty of Paris (1815) gave it to the Netherlands In 1830 a rebellion broke out in Brussels against King WILLIAM I Belgian independence was declared, and in 1831 Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha was chosen king of the Belgians (see LEOPOLD I) The European powers, meeting at London (see LONDON, CONFERENCE of, 1830-31) approved the new status, but William I rejected their decision and invaded Belgium, withdrawing only when France and England intervened in 1832 A final Dutch-Belgian peace treaty was signed in 1839, and the "perpetual neutrality" of Belgium was guaranteed by the major powers, including Prussia. Under the rule (1865–1909) of LEOPOLD II the rapid industrialization of the country led to labor unrest and to the rise of the Socialist party in opposition to the reactionary and clerical groups Social conditions improved under ALBERT I (1909–34), who also granted universal and equal male suffrage (the suffrage was extended to all women only in 1948) In Aug , 1914, Germany invaded neutral Belgium and kept it under a harsh occupation regime throughout the First World War, while the Belgian army continued to fight on French soil Tension between the French and Flemish elements characterised the period after 1918 In May, 1940, Germany, which in 1937 had again guaranteed Belgian neutrality, attacked and occupied Belgium (see WORLD WAR, SECOND). King LEOPOLD III surrendered unconditionally on May 28, but the Belgian cabinet continued to wage war on Germany from London German occupation placed the country under a reign of terror, by 1944 some 600,000 Belgians were working as slave laborers in Germany Liberation by British and American troops, aided by an efficient Belgian underground army, came in Sept , 1944. The unsuccessful German counteroffensive of Dec., 1944—Jan , 1945 (see BATTLE OF THE BULGE), caused much destruction in addition to the damage wrought in May, 1940, and by Allied air raids However, Belgian economy recovered far more rapidly than the rest of Western Europe The chief political issue of post-war years was the question of the return of King Leopold, whose surrender in 1940 had led to attacks by the Liberals and Socialists Despite the support of the Conservative Catholics, Leopold was still barred from return in May, 1950, his brother, Prince Charles, was regent for him after 1944 Belgium joined (1947) with the Netherlands and Luxembourg to form a customs union This bloc, known as Benelux, joined with England and France in a Five-Power Pact (1948), participated in the European Recovery Program after 1948, and joined in the North Atlantic Treaty (1949) See Henri Pirenne, Histoire de Belgique (6 vols , 1900–1926) and Belgian Democracy Its Early History (1910, Eng tr , 1915), A R H. Moncrieff, Belgium, Past and Present (1920), Émile Cammaerts, History of Belgium (1921), S B Clough, History of the Flemish Movement in Belgium (1930), Hugh Gibson, Belgium (1939)

Belgorod (byĕl'gŭrŏd), city (pop 31,036), SW European RSFSR, 45 mi NNW of Kharkov It is a railroad junction and an agricultural center

Belgorod-Dnestrovsky (-dunyĕstrŏf'skē), Rumanian Cetatea-Alba, city (1930 pop 34 485), S Ukraine, a port at the mouth of the Dniester It is in a fertile agricultural and wine-producing region Founded as Tyras by Greek colonists (7th cent B C), it later passed under Roman and Byzantine rule Until its conquest (1484) by the Turks, who named it Akkerman, the city frequently changed hands The Genoese built a castle near by, which Stephen the Great of Moldavia restored in the 15th cent , of this ruins remain With Bessarabia, the city passed to Russia in 1812, to Rumania in 1918, and again to Russia in 1940 (confirmed 1947)

Belgrade (bĕl'grād), town (pop 1,046), SW Maine, SW of Waterville, settled 1774. Belgrade village is headquarters for the Belgrade Lakes resort area

Belgrade (bĕl'grād), Serbo-Croatian Beograd (bā̆'grăd), city (pop 388,246), capital of Yugoslavia and of Serbia, on the Danube at the mouth of the Sava Because of its strategic position it is called the key to the Balkans It has metallurgical, woodworking, textile, tanning, and food industries and is the seat of a university (founded 1863), of a Roman Catholic archbishop, and of an Orthodox Eastern patriarch Belgrade grew from fortifications built by Celts, Illyrians, and Romans Its Roman name was Singidunum Here Decius was born and was proclaimed emperor In the early Middle Ages, Belgrade was held variously by the Byzantine Empire, Hungary, and Bulgaria In the 12th cent it passed to Serbia and became its capital John Hunyadi and St John Capistran repulsed a Turkish attack in 1456, but in 1521 it was captured by Suleiman I The Turks made Belgrade their chief strategic fortress in Europe The Austrians stormed it in 1688, in 1717, and in 1789 but were able to keep it only from the Treaty of Passarowitz (1718) to the Treaty of Belgrade (1739) The pashalik [Turk , =province] of Belgrade was the scene of the Serbian insurrections led by Karageorge and Milosh Obrenovich The Turkish garrison bombarded the city in 1862 but finally withdrew in 1867 In the First World War, Belgrade was occupied (1915–18) by the Austrians In the Second World War it underwent extreme hardship under German occupation (1941–44) and suffered widespread damage Belgrade, a handsome city with fine parks, palaces, museums, and churches, was quickly rebuilt after the war

Belgrano, Manuel (mänwāl' bĕlgrä'nō), 1770–1820, Argentine revolutionist Important as a political figure—he was appointed secretary of the commercial tribunal of Buenos Aires in 1794—he vigorously championed popular education and proposed economic reforms He contributed to Telégrafo mercantil, the first periodical of the Río de la Plata (founded 1801), and published (1810–11) Correo de comercio He served under LINIERS against the British invaders (1806–7) A leader in the revolution of May, 1810, he was a member of the first patriot governing junta and commander of the unsuccessful expedition to Paraguay. In 1812 he succeeded Pueyrredón as commander of the Army of the North and won decisive battles at Tucumán (1812) and Salta (1813) Later in 1813 he invaded Upper Peru (now Bolivia), but after defeats at Vilcapugio and Ayohuma he was superseded (1814) by San Martín. In 1815 Belgrano was in Europe on an unsuccessful diplomatic mission. He again commanded the Army of the North from 1816 to 1819 See Bartolomé Mitre, Historia de Belgrano (4th ed , 3 vols., 1887).

Belgravia (bĕlgrā'vēə), fashionable section of London, England, in the West End, S of Belgrave Square and touching Buckingham Palace gardens and Hyde Park

Belhaven, town (pop 2,360), E N C., at the mouth of the Pungo on a branch of Pamlico Sound and E of Washington, in a lumber and fishing area

Belial (bē'lēəl), name applied to SATAN

Belington, shipping city (pop 1,517), N W.Va , NW of Elkins, in a forest area, inc 1905

Belinsky, Vissarion Grigoryevich (vĭsärĭyôn' grĭgôr'yŭvĭch byĭlyĭn'skē), 1810–48, Russian writer He was the founder of modern Russian literary criticism and is considered today, as he was before the Russian Revolution, a great progressive thinker not only in the field of literature but also in that of sociopolitical ideas Although for a time he appeared, under Hegel's influence, to condone tsardom and reaction in general, he returned in the 1840s to his early liberalism and repudiated the doctrine of art for art's sake which he had embraced From this time he was the principal champion of the realistic and socially responsible new Russian literature

Belisarius (bĕlĭsâr'ēəs), c 505–565, Byzantine general under JUSTINIAN I After suppressing (532) the dangerous Nika sedition (see BLUES AND GREENS), he defeated (533–34) the Vandals of Africa, capturing their king, and in 535 was given command of the expedition to recover Italy from the Ostrogoths He took Naples and Rome (536) and, after some delays occasioned by a conflict of authority with NARSES, captured Milan and Ravenna (540) He fought an indecisive campaign (541–42) against KHOSRU I of Persia, and in 544 was sent back to Italy against TOTILA Handicapped by Justinian's jealousy and distrust, he did little more than hold the enemy in check, he was recalled in 548 and replaced by Narses In 559 he emerged from retirement to drive the Bulgarians from Constantinople He was accused (562) of a conspiracy and temporarily imprisoned but was shortly restored to favor

Belitong, Indonesia see BILLITON

Belize (bĕlēz'), city (pop c 16,500), capital and chief seaport of BRITISH HONDURAS, at the mouth of the Belize river The river flows 150 mi generally W to the Gulf of Honduras and is navigable almost to Guatemala, its estuary forms a good harbor, but outlying cays exclude deep-draft vessels and make passage difficult for coastwise trade Through Belize pass the forest products of the interior Usually free from storms, the city (alt 1 ft) was nearly destroyed by hurricane in 1931

Belknap, Jeremy (bĕl'năp), 1744–98, American historian, b Boston A Congregational minister, he wrote history out of antiquarian interest, but showed great diligence and skill in research and considerable ability in writing His History of New Hampshire (3 vols , 1784–92) was a model of early local history He was a leader in the founding (1794) of the Massachusetts Historical Society, the first state historical society

Belknap, William Worth, 1829–90, U S Secretary of War (1869–76), b Newburgh, N Y He attended Princeton, studied law at Georgetown, D C , and practiced in Iowa He served in the Civil War, was a division commander under Sherman in Georgia and the Carolinas, and became a major general in 1865 An internal revenue collector in Iowa (1865–69), he was made Secretary of War by GRANT In 1876 a political scandal broke when a House committee found evidence that Belknap had indirectly received annual bribes from the trader at an Indian post Impeachment was unanimously voted Grant accepted Belknap's resignation At the Senate trial, the vote was 35 "guilty," 25 "not guilty"—falling short of the two thirds necessary to convict Of the 25, 22 declared that they voted "not guilty" on the ground that the Senate lacked jurisdiction after Belknap's accepted resignation. He later practiced law in Washington, D C

Bell, Alexander Graham, 1847–1922, American scientist, inventor of the telephone, b Edinburgh, Scotland, educated at the Univ of Edinburgh and University College, London, son of Alexander Melville Bell. He worked in London with his father, whose system of visible speech he used in teaching the deaf to talk In 1870 he went to Canada, and during 1871 he lectured, chiefly to teachers of the deaf, in Boston and other cities During the next few years he conducted his own school of vocal physiology in Boston, lectured at Boston Univ , and worked on his inventions His teaching methods were of lasting value in the improvement of education for the deaf As early as 1865 Bell conceived the idea of transmitting speech by electric waves In 1875, while he was experimenting with a multiple harmonic telegraph, the principle of transmission and reproduction came to him, and by March 10, 1876, his apparatus was so far developed that the first complete sentence,

"Watson, come here; I want you," was distinctly heard by his assistant. The first demonstration took place before the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in Boston on May 10, 1876, and a more significant one, at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition the same year, introduced the telephone to the world The Bell Telephone Company was organized in July, 1877 A long period of patent litigation followed in which Bell's claims were completely upheld by the U S Supreme Court. With the telephone commercially established, Bell's attention turned to other subjects With the 50,000 francs awarded him as the Volta Prize for his invention he established the Volta Laboratory in Washington, D C , where the first successful phonograph record was produced Bell invented the photophone, which transmitted speech by light rays, the audiometer, another invention for the deaf, the induction balance, used to locate metallic objects in the human body, and the flat and the cylindrical wax recorders for phonographs He investigated the nature and causes of deafness and made an elaborate study of its heredity Largely through his influence was founded (1880) the magazine Science, which became the official organ for the American Association for the Advancement of Science A liberal gift also established the Astrophysical Observatory at the Smithsonian Institution, and in 1898 he was made a regent of the Smithsonian He was president of the National Geographic Society from 1896 to 1904 and by insisting on pictures in its magazine did much to increase its circulation under the editorship of his son-in-law, Gilbert Grosvenor After 1895 his interest was occupied largely by aviation, and he spent many months experimenting at his summer home on Cape Breton He invented the tetrahedral kite The Aerial Experiment Association, founded under his patronage in 1907, brought together G H Curtis, F W Baldwin, and others, who invented the aileron principle and developed the hydroplane See biography by Catherine Mackenzie (1928)

Bell, Alexander Melville, 1819–1905, Scottish-American educator, b Edinburgh Bell taught elocution in Edinburgh from 1843 to 1865 He worked out a physiological or visible alphabet, with symbols by means of which it was possible to represent every sound of the human voice He later lectured at the Univ of London and in Boston, in 1870 he moved to Kingston, Ont., in 1881 to Washington, D C There he engaged in the education of deaf-mutes and continued to write on education and the science of speech Alexander Graham Bell was his son

Bell, Andrew, 1753–1832, British educator, b St Andrews, Scotland After seven years in Virginia as a tutor, he returned to England, was ordained a deacon, and later (1789) became superintendent of an orphan asylum in Madras, India Here he developed the MONITORIAL SYSTEM, which he described in a pamphlet, Experiment in Education, published upon his return to London (1797) Joseph LANCASTER, a Quaker, established a school on similar principles, and Bell organized a system of schools teaching the principles of the Established Church See biography by Robert Southey and C C Southey (3 vols , 1844), J M D Meiklejohn, An Old Educational Reformer (1881)

Bell, Sir Charles, 1774–1842, Scottish anatomist and surgeon, educated at Edinburgh He became professor of anatomy and surgery at the Royal College of Surgeons, London, in 1824 and was professor of surgery at the Univ of Edinburgh from 1836 He was the first to distinguish between the motor and the sensory functions of the nerves; this work was confirmed and elaborated by Magendie in 1822 Among Bell's works is The Nervous System of the Human Body (1830), a contribution of great importance See his letters (ed by his wife, 1870) His brother John Bell, 1763–1820, a surgeon of Edinburgh, was a founder of modern surgery of the blood vessels and author of Anatomy of the Human Body (1793), Discourses on the Nature and Cure of Wounds (1795), and Principles of Surgery (1801–7)

Bell, Clive, 1881–, English critic of art and literature His works include Art (1914), Since Cézanne (1922), Landmarks in Nineteenth-Century Painting (1927), Civilization (1928), Proust (1929), An Account of French Painting (1931), Enjoying Pictures (1934), and Victor Pasmore (1946)

Bell, Gertrude Margaret Lowthian, 1868–1926, English traveler and author, one of the builders of modern Iraq She graduated at Oxford (1887) with first-class honors in history An intrepid mountain climber, she achieved several Alpine records From 1892 she journeyed extensively in Persia, Anatolia, and Syria and early in 1914 reached Hail in the Arabian Desert. In the First World War she placed her unmatched knowledge of Near Eastern geography, languages, and personalities at the disposal of the British government and in 1915 was appointed to the intelligence service. As liaison officer of the Arab Bureau in Iraq and assistant political officer, her aid was invaluable. She was largely responsible for the selection of Feisal I as king. She founded and directed the archaeological museum of Baghdad, for which she secured part of the funds from Ur. Her writings include Poems from the Divan of Hafiz (1897), The Desert and the Sown (1907), Amurath to Amurath (1911), Palace and Mosque at Ukhaidir (1914), The Arab of Mesopotamia (1917), and Persian Pictures (1928, pub anonymously as Safar Nameh, 1894) See The Letters of Gertrude Bell (ed by Lady Bell, 1927), Earlier Letters (ed by Elsa Richmond, 1937); biography by Ronald Bodley and Lorna Hearst (1940)

Bell, Henry, 1767–1830, British ship designer, b. Scotland He was a pioneer in building steamships His Comet, launched on the Clyde in 1812, introduced practical steam river navigation in Europe

Bell, John, surgeon see BELL, SIR CHARLES

Bell, John, 1797–1869, American statesman, b near Nashville, Tenn , grad Cumberland College (now the Univ of Nashville), 1814 A leading member of the Nashville bar, he served in the U S House of Representatives (1827–41), was speaker in 1834, and for a few weeks in 1834 was Secretary of War under Harrison At first a Jacksonian, Bell broke with Jackson in the fight over the Bank of the United States and ultimately became the chief leader of the Whigs in Tennessee, dominating state politics for nearly two decades As U S Senator (1847–59), he was the leader of the conservative Southern element which, though supporting slavery, placed the Union first He admitted the right of Congress to prohibit slavery in the territories, supported Clay's Compromise of 1850, objected to the Kansas-Nebraska Bill, and supported the admission of Kansas under the Lecompton Constitution In 1860 Bell was the presidential candidate of the moderate CONSTITUTIONAL UNION PARTY and won the electoral votes of Tennessee, Kentucky, and Virginia, significantly all border states The lower South seceded with Lincoln's election, but Bell held Tennessee in the Union until after the firing on Fort Sumter Bell counseled resistance to the Union invasion, but, heartbroken and in ill-health, took no active part in the Civil War See biography by Joseph Howard Parks (1950)

Bell, John Joy, 1871–1934, Scottish journalist and author He wrote humorous stories and plays, frequently in dialect, of life in Glasgow, but is best remembered for his story Wee Macgreegor (1902).

Bell, Robert, 1800–1867, Irish journalist and author, a founder of the Dublin Historical Society He is best remembered for his annotated edition of the English Poets (24 vols , 1854–57)

Bell, Robert, 1841–1917, Canadian geologist, b Toronto, educated at McGill Univ For over 50 years he was connected with the Geological Survey of Canada, part of the time as director and chief geologist His explorations and surveys took him to nearly every part of Canada

Bell, city (pop 11,264), in San Antonio township S Calif , near Los Angeles, inc 1927 Among its manufactures are steel and iron products

bell, in music, a percussion instrument consisting of a hollow vessel usually cup-shaped with a flanged opening and now generally cast of bell metal, set into vibration by a blow from a clapper within or from a hammer without A set of bells, usually not more than 15 in number, tuned to the intervals of the major scale, is called a chime A larger set, with chromatic intervals, is called a carillon The bells of a carillon are played from a keyboard and are stationary, while those of a chime may not be Harmonies and effects of shading, not possible on a chime, are part of the art of carillon playing—an art for which there is a school in Belgium The bells of a carillon must be tuned with more accuracy than those of a chime, the best modern craftsmen can tune the fundamental (known as the hum note), the octave (known as the strike note), the twelfth, and the fifteenth with perfect accuracy Bells were known in ancient civilizations and have been used in connection with all major religions except Mohammedanism China had very large bells as early as 2000 B C but did not make musical use of them Bells tuned to a musical scale were first used in Venice, before the 11th cent By the 14th cent , bells had become part of the symbolism and ritual of Christianity The carillon developed out of the Belgian voorslag of the 15th cent , a set of bells attached to a large tower clock which played a tune before striking the hour In the Low Countries, where the making and playing of carillons centered, they were installed in all the principal cities A peak in carillon making was reached in the work of the brothers Hemony of Amsterdam, who were active from 1641 until 1677 The carillonneur's art reached its flower in the 18th cent , declining during the French Revolution, when many carillons were melted to make armaments Although at Queen Elizabeth's command a carillon of 40 bells was installed in the Chapel Royal, carillon playing was overshadowed in England by the science of change ringing, which became popular in the 17th cent In this practice a group of ringers, using a peal (or set) of bells tuned to the diatonic scale, ring the bells in various stated orders, not repeating any order. The bell is swung full circle, being sounded by a clapper within, thus giving a more resonant sound than in carillon playing, wherein a hammer strikes a stationary bell Toward the end of the 19th cent. English bellmakers rediscovered the secrets of tuning which had been used by the 17th-century Dutch and Flemish craftsmen This, with improvements in methods of striking, in placement of the bells, and in action of the keyboard, has made 20th-century carillons the finest in existence Active in a renaissance of carillon music was Jef Denijn (1862–1941), carillonneur of Mechlin Since the First World War many carillons have been installed in the United States, outstanding is that of the Riverside Church, New York (1930), whose 20-ton bourdon bell is the largest ever cast in England The largest bell in the world is the Great Bell of Moscow, cast in 1733, it cracked before it was ever rung Bells signaled the Sicilian Vespers in 1282 and the massacre of St Bartholomew's Day in 1572 Many legends and traditions are associated with bells. For use of the term bells on shipboard, see BELLS. See S N Coleman, Bells (1928), W G. Rice, Carillon Music and Singing Towers of the Old World and the New (1930), F P Price, The Carillon (1933).

Bells, Stefano della (stäfa'nō dĕl'la bĕl'lä), 1610–64, Italian engraver, b Florence His engravings number over 1,400 pieces, the view of the Pont Neuf, Paris, is usually considered his finest work.

belladonna (bĕludŏ'nù) [Ital , = beautiful lady, from an old practice of using the drug to dilate the pupils of the eyes for cosmetic reasons] or deadly nightshade, an Old World perennial NIGHTSHADE (Atropa belladonna), long noted for its narcotic poison (see ATROPINE) Belladonna has purplish flowers and black berries and is cultivated for its various medicinal uses

belladonna lily. see AMARYLLIS

Bellaire (bĕl"ăr'), city (pop 13,799), E Ohio, on the Ohio river below Wheeling, W Va , settled c 1802 Coal mining and the manufacture of enamelware and glass are done here

Bellamy, Edward (bĕl'umē), 1850–98, American author, b Chicopee Falls (now part of Chicopee), Mass After being admitted to the bar he tried his hand at journalism and contributed short stories of genuine charm to magazines These were later collected as The Blind Man's World and Other Stories (1898) His novels—Dr Heidenhoff's Process (1880), Miss Ludington's Sister (1884), and The Duke of Stockbridge (book form 1900)—were followed by Looking Backward, 2000–1887 (1888), which overshadowed his other work and brought him fame This utopian romance pictured the world in A D 2000 under a system of state socialism Much of the book's appeal lies in its unpretentious style and vivid picture of the imagined society The work sold over a million copies in the next few years and resulted in the formation of "Nationalist" clubs throughout the nation and the founding of the Nationalist monthly (1888–91) Bellamy himself founded and edited the New Nation (1891–94), a weekly Equality, a sequel to Looking Backward, appeared in 1897 See biography by A E Morgan (1944), Morgan, The Philosophy of Edward Bellamy (1945), with excerpts

Bellamy, George Anne, 1731?–1788, English actress Her first appearance in 1742 was in Congreve's Love for Love, and she was Garrick's Juliet in the celebrated theatrical duel with Spranger BARRY and Mrs Cibber in 1750 Admired in her heyday by aristocratic and theatrical society, she died in poverty See her Apology for the Life of George Anne Bellamy (1785)

Bellamy, Joseph, 1719–90, Congregationalist clergyman, b Cheshire, Conn , grad Yale, 1735 A follower of Jonathan Edwards and a powerful revivalist of the Great Awakening, he preached in Bethlehem, Conn , for 52 years Bellamy wrote True Religion Delineated (1750) and pamphlets in opposition to the Half-Way Covenant

Bellarmine (bĕlar'mĭn), 1542–1621, Italian churchman, cardinal of the Roman Church His full name was Roberto Francesco Romolo Bellarmino He joined the Jesuits (1560) and taught at Louvain (1569–76) and at the Roman College (1576) In 1599 he received the red hat and from 1601 to 1605 he was archbishop of Capua His theological works (in Latin) were polemical and widely noticed One, the most lucid modern exposition of Catholic doctrine, called forth many Protestant replies In another, a reply to the work of William Barclay, Cardinal Bellarmine uses the analogy, taken from THOMAS AQUINAS, of body and soul to show the relative interdependence and importance of the state and the Church As Jesuits nearly always are, Cardinal Bellarmine was uncompromisingly ultramontane He was an admirer of Galileo, with whose condemnation he had nothing to do, in spite of his position as an officer of the Holy Office His devotional works have been translated frequently into English Bellarmine was a principal influence in the Catholic REFORM Pope Pius XI beatified him in 1923

Bellary (bĭla'rē), town (pop 56,148), N Madras state India Iron and manganese deposits are near by. The chief industry is the weaving of cotton and silk textiles

Bellay, du. see DU BELLAY.

Belle-Alliance (bel'-ălyäs'), village near Waterloo, Belgium The battle of Waterloo (see WATERLOO CAMPAIGN) is sometimes known, particularly in Germany, as the battle of Belle-Alliance

Belleau, Remy (rümē' bĕlō'), 1528–77, French poet of the PLÉIADE La Bergerie (1st ed, 1565) a collection of his poems, mainly sonnets, is best in its passages on nature

Belleau Wood (bĕlō', bĕlō'), forested area, N France, E of CHÂTEAU-THIERRY. Here in the First World War, U S troops were victorious over the Germans in an action of the second battle of the Marne With French troops cooperating, U S infantry and marines (whose conduct was particularly praised) secured the wood clean of enemy emplacements by hard fighting from June 6 to June 25, 1918

Belleek ware (bŭlēk'), pottery with a highly lustrous and often iridescent glaze It is made at Belleek, Co Fermanagh, Northern Ireland

Bellefontaine (bĕlfoun'tĭn, -fŏn'tĭn), city (pop 9,808), co seat of Logan co, W central Ohio, N of Springfield, laid out 1820 It is a trade and rail center (with railroad shops) for a farm area and has varied industries Campbell Hill or Hogue's Hill, highest point in Ohio (1,550 ft), is near by

Bellefonte (bĕl'fŏnt') 1 Town (pop 2,593), NE Del, near Wilmington, inc 1915 2 Borough (pop 5,304), co. seat of Centre co, central Pa, NE of Altoona, platted 1795, inc 1806 It is a resort and farm trading center with limestone quarries. George Grey Barnard was born here

Belle Fourche (bĕl fōōrsh) [Fr, =beautiful fork], city (pop 2,496), co seat of Butte co, W S Dak, near the Wyo. line and at the north edge of the Black Hills, settled 1878, platted 1890, inc 1903 It is at the junction of Redwater Creek with the Belle Fourche river The city grew as the shipping center of a great cattle and sheep region Its industries include a beet-sugar factory, flour mills, and bentonite-processing plants. A Black Hills roundup has been held annually since 1918

Belle Fourche, river rising in NE Wyoming and flowing N of the Black Hills to the Cheyenne in W central South Dakota Its waters are used by a Bureau of Reclamation project, which is served by Belle Fourche Dam (est 1911), 112 ft high and 6,282 ft long, and by Keyhole Dam

Belle Glade, town (pop 3,806), S central Fla, near the southern tip of Lake Okeechobee W of Palm Beach, founded c 1925, inc 1928 It is the trade center for a productive truck area In 1928 a hurricane devastated the town and killed many people Near by are the Everglades Experiment Station and the state prison farm

Belle-Isle, Charles Louis Auguste Fouquet, duc de (shärl' lwē' ōgüst' fōōkā' dük' du bĕl-ēl'), 1684–1761, marshal of France and diplomat His support of the claims of Charles of Bavaria (Emperor Charles VII) was in part responsible for France's entry into the War of the AUSTRIAN SUCCESSION, with the unfortunate outcome for France, he became unpopular, although his masterly retreat from Prague had saved the French army from surrender (1742) He became minister of war in 1758 and did much to reorganize the army

Belle Isle, Strait of (bĕl'), between Newfoundland and Labrador, the northern entrance to the Gulf of St Lawrence It is 10 to 15 mi wide and c 35 mi long, deep, and free of rocks and shoals There is a strong tidal current The tiny rock island Belle Isle (700 ft high), at the Atlantic entrance, has a lighthouse and is the first land sighted by ships from Europe

Belle Meade, city (pop 2,061), central Tenn, a suburb of Nashville

Belle Plaine. 1 City (pop 3,202), E central Iowa, near the Iowa river WSW of Cedar Rapids, platted 1861 as Gwinsville, renamed 1862, inc. 1863 It is a railroad division point 2 Borough (pop 1,407), S Minn, on the Minnesota river and SW of Minneapolis, in rich farming country, platted 1853

Bellerophon (bŭlĕr'ufŏn", -fun), in Greek legend, hero, originally named Hipponoüs Assigned the task of killing the Chimera, he captured and rode the winged horse PEGASUS and thus was enabled to kill the monster and accomplish other warlike feats Grown prosperous and proud, he attempted to fly to heaven on Pegasus but was thrown down and blinded. He spent his last days in miserable wandering One version has Zeus send a gadfly to make Pegasus fling Bellerophon from his back, killing him.

Bellerose (bĕl'rōs), village (pop 1,317), on W Long Island, SE N.Y., near Floral Park, settled 1908, inc. 1924

Bellevernon (bĕlvûr'nŭn), borough (pop 2,463), SW Pa., near the Monongahela SSE of Pittsburgh, laid out 1813, inc. 1863 Glass is made here.

Belleville, city (pop. 15,710), co seat of Hastings co, S Ont, on the Bay of Quinte. It is a port and a manufacturing city Albert College (1857) is here. Massassaga Point across the bay is a summer resort

Belleville. 1 City (pop 28,405), co seat of St. Clair co., SW Ill., adjoining East St Louis, in a coal, clay, and sand area, platted 1815, inc. 1819. Its manufactures include stoves, bricks, clothing, shoes, and beer Le Clerc College (for women) is here. Near by is Scott Field, a military air base. 2 City (pop 2,580), co. seat of Republic co., N Kansas, N of Salina near the Nebr line; laid out 1869, inc 1878. It is the trade center for an agricultural region, and dairy products are made here. A large regional fair is held at Belleville in September. 3 City (pop. 1,286), SE Mich, on the Huron river and near Detroit, settled 1826, inc. 1905. 4 Town (pop. 28,167), NE N J, on the Passaic just N of Newark, settled c 1680, set off from Newark 1839, inc 1910. Electrical equipment and chemicals are produced In 1798 an engine was built here for John Stevens's boat for the run between the Passaic river and New York.

Bellevue (bĕl'vū) 1 Town (pop 1,771), E Iowa, in a farm area, on the Mississippi below Dubuque, settled in the 1830s, inc 1844 A U S fish hatchery, Bellevue State Park, and a lock and dam of the Mississippi project are here In 1840, after a series of depredations by a gang under the leadership of William W. Brown, a battle (known as "the Bellevue War") was fought between the gang and a posse sent against them The 13 bandits captured alive were flogged and exiled 2 City (pop 8,741), N Ky, near the Ohio, a suburb of Covington and Cincinnati 3 Village (pop 1,011), S Mich., SW of Lansing, settled 1830, inc. 1867 4 Village (pop 1,184), E Nebr., on the Missouri and S of Omaha, inc. 1855 Oldest town in the state, it was a trading post in the early 19th cent and was the site of a Presbyterian Indian mission in the '40s and '50s A newspaper, the Nebraska Palladium, was published here in 1854 5 City (pop 6,127), N Ohio, SW of Sandusky, named Bellevue 1839 It is a railroad center in a farm area Vegetable oils are made here Near by are the Seneca Caverns 6 Residential borough (pop 10,488), SW Pa, near Pittsburgh, settled 1802, inc 1867.

Bellevue Hospital Medical College: see NEW YORK UNIVERSITY

Bellew, Frank Henry Temple, 1828–88, American caricaturist and illustrator, b India He wrote and illustrated children's stories and contributed illustrations and political and comic caricatures to Harper's Weekly, Scribner's Monthly, Vanity Fair, and other papers

bellflower or campanula (kămpăn'ūlŭ), any plant of the genus Campanula, annual, biennial, or perennial herbs of the Northern Hemisphere, with usually bell-shaped flowers These occur in various colors but are prevailingly blue and hence are sometimes called bluebell The many species range from dwarf to tall and are particularly used in borders or rock gardens Species include the Canterbury bells, a tall popular garden biennial (Campanula medium), the HAREBELL, the chimney bellflower (Campanula pyramidalis), often grown as a pot plant, and the rampion (Campanula rapunculus) with roots and leaves used as a salad

Belli, Giuseppe Gioacchino (jōōzĕp'pā jwäk-kē'nō bĕl'lē), 1791–1863, Italian poet He wrote, in Roman dialect, more than 2,000 sonnets which portray the life of the common people with unusual accuracy and insight Belli also wrote political attacks in sonnet form belligerency (bŭlĭj'ûrŭnsē), status of parties legally at war. Belligerency exists in a WAR between nations or in a civil war when the established government treats the insurgent force as if it were a sovereign power The rules of international law require that belligerency between states be preceded by an absolute declaration of war or an ultimatum prescribing the terms on which the issuing power will refrain from war When belligerency has been established, the relations between the warring powers are determined by the laws of war (see WAR, LAWS OF) In recent years there have been anomalous situations in regard to belligerency Thus, in the Second Chino-Japanese War, Japan and China maintained diplomatic relations until 1941, although their armies were locked in combat In civil wars if the insurgent force is granted belligerency rights, neutral nations generally abstain from supplying or helping either the established government or its opponent An example of this practice is found in the NEUTRALITY proclamations issued by European powers in the American Civil War Neutral nations may refuse to recognize the belligerency of an insurgent, however, and in this way preserve the right to claim any damages which accrue against the established government for having failed to suppress the rebellion without delay.

Bellingham. 1 Town (pop 2,979), S Mass, SE of Worcester; settled c.1713, inc. 1719 Woolen goods are produced 2 City (pop. 29,314), co. seat of Whatcom co, NW Wash., a port of entry on Bellingham Bay, near Canada Settled in 1852 as Whatcom, it merged (1903) with three other towns and became Bellingham. It is the distributing center for an area producing dairy and truck products, fruit, and poultry Fruit and salmon canneries, lumber factories, paper mills, and coal mining are important. The area attracts tourists. A state teachers college and a U S experimental bulb farm are here, Larabee State Park and an Indian reservation are near by.

Bellini (bĕl-lē'nē), illustrious family of Venetian painters of the Early Renaissance Jacopo Bellini (yä'kōpō), c.1400–c.1464, founder of the family, was a pupil of Gentile da Fabriano. He worked chiefly in the churches and palaces of N Italy and established a studio in Padua, where his famous sons, Gentile and Giovanni, received their early training Many of his greatest paintings have perished, among them the enormous Crucifixion in the cathedral at Verona. His extant works include three Madonnas (Uffizi, Academy, Venice, and the Louvre), the fine Crucifixion in the archbishop's palace, Verona, and Annunciation, in Sant' Alessandro, Brescia A profile portrait of a boy and Christ Washing the Feet of the Apostles are in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D C Two very important sketchbooks, which contain a vast number of studies and drawings, an invaluable source of information for a critical study of his work, are in the National Gallery, London, and in the Louvre His son Giovanni Bellini (jōvän'nē), c 1426–1516, studied with his father and with Mantegna, whose influence appears in many of his earlier works. Among these are the Agony in the Garden (National Gall, London), three Madonnas (Johnson Coll, Philadelphia, Davis Coll, Newport; and Metropolitan Mus.), and Crucifixion (Correo Mus, Venice). With his brother, he executed many historic frescoes in Venice, none of which has survived Giovanni's work, at its best, is characterized by a monumental quality, a mastery of color, and an intensity of religious feeling, combined with serenity and majesty, that exerted a profound influence upon his contemporaries He became the teacher of many noted painters, among them Giorgione and Titian His chief fame rests upon his great altarpieces The best known are those of the Frari and San Zaccaria, in Venice, two of the most magnificent of the Renaissance, Baptism of Christ (La Santa Corona, Vicenza), St Job (now in the Academy at Venice), and the imposing altarpiece in San Giovanni Crisostomo, Venice Other noted examples of his art are the portrait of the Doge Loredano (National Gall., London), Feast of the Gods (National Gall. of Art, Washington, D C), Allegory of the Church (Uffizi), and St. Francis (Frick Coll, New York). See monograph by Roger Fry (1900) Jacopo's son Gentile Bellini (jäntē'lā), c 1427–c 1507, was a pupil of his father and of Mantegna The paintings on the doors of St Mark's School, Venice, are his earliest known works In 1479 he was sent by the state to the court of Mohammed II in Constantinople The results of this visit include the Reception of a Venetian Ambassador at Constantinople (Louvre), portrait of Mohammed II (National Gall., London), and the portrait of a Turkish scribe (Gardner Mus, Boston) Returning to Venice, he worked with his brother Giovanni on the great historic frescoes in the ducal palace (entire decoration destroyed by fire), depicting episodes in the struggle between Pope Alexander III and Barbarossa He excelled in portraiture and in pageant and processional pictures, and his paintings are valued for their historical interest and faithful representation of contemporary Venetian life Extant examples include three fine historical paintings in the Academy at Venice, Adoration of the Magi (National Gall, London), and his last and perhaps greatest work, St. Mark Preaching at Alexandria (Brera, Milan)

Bellini, Vincenzo (vēnchän'tsō bĕl-lē'nē), 1801–35, Italian composer of operas much admired by Chopin. His style, profusely melodic, demands virtuosity of the singers Norma and La sonnambula (both 1831) are his most popular operas I Puritani (1835) shows the influence of the French grand opera, felt again in the early operas of Verdi

Bellinzona (bĕl-lēntsō'nä), town (pop. 10,948), capital of Ticino canton, Switzerland, on the Ticino river Possibly a Roman settlement, it belonged at times to Lombardy, Como, Milan, France, and the Four Forest Cantons It became in 1798 the capital of the Bellinzona canton under the Helvetic Republic and the capital of Ticino in 1803. The town has two 16th-century churches and three 15th-century castles of the dukes of Milan. It is a center of transalpine traffic and has diversified industries

Bell Island, island (1945 pop. 8,167), 6 mi. long and 3 mi. wide, SE N F., in Conception Bay Bell Island town is the oldest industrial center in Newfoundland. Large reserves of iron ore are here.

Bellman, Carl Michael (mē'kĕl bĕl'män), 1740–95, Swedish song writer, protégé of Gustavus III. His dithyrambic odes in Fredmans Epistlar (1790) and Fredmans Sanger (1791) include drinking songs, bacchanals, pastorals, and comics Sometimes he wrote the music, but oftener he set the words to French melodies See H W. Van Loon and Grace Castagnetta, The Last of the Troubadours (1929), with the words and music of 20 songs bell metal: see BRONZE.

Bellmawr (bĕlmär'), borough (pop. 1,250), SW N.J., near Camden, inc. 1926.

Bello, Andrés (ändrās' bā'yō), 1781–1865, South American intellectual leader, b. Venezuela. In 1810 he was sent with Bolívar on a mission to London, where he remained 19 years as diplomat, teacher, and writer. He reflected a new attitude in Hispanic American letters, initiating the movement for intellectual independence from Europe. Called to a governmental post in Chile, he soon became a leader in Chilean education and reorganized the university at Santiago, becoming (1843) its rector Many of his learned works, such as Gramática de la lengua castellana (1847) and Principios de derecho internacional (1844; revised from an earlier work), became textbooks, and he was author of a code of civil law for Chile He wrote many poems in the neoclassic style, of which the best known is his "Silva a la agricultura de la zona tórrida "

Belloc, Hilaire (Joseph Hilaire Pierre Belloc) (bĕl'ŏk), 1870–, British author, b France, grad Balliol College, Oxford, 1895 He became a British subject in 1902 Noted for his versatility, he is a poet, essayist, satirist, and historian, writing from the Roman Catholic point of view Among his works are The Bad Child's Book of Beasts (1896), The Jews (1922), The Cruse of the Nona (1925), Napoleon (1932), Selected Essays (1936), and Places (1942) He was a close friend of G K Chesterton, and, known as Chesterbelloc, they defended distributism, a medieval, anticapitalist, antimaterialist philosophy opposed to Fabian socialism

Bello Horizonte, Brazil see BELO HORIZONTE

Bellomont, Richard Coote, earl of, 1636–1701, colonial governor of New York, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire, b Ireland He arrived (1698) in New York at a time when a more unified administration of colonial affairs was being attempted His administration was uneventful, but his endeavors to enforce the trade laws and to suppress piracy brought him the enmity of the aristocratic party in New York He was noted for his arrest of William KIDD

Bellona (bulŏ'nu), in Roman religion, goddess of war She was associated with Mars and her temple stood in the Campus Martius The senate met there on certain occasions

Bellotto, Bernardo see CANALETTO

Bellows, Albert Fitch, 1829–83, American painter, b Milford, Mass He lived in Antwerp for some time and became a member of the Belgian Royal Society of Painters His earlier genre pictures were executed in oil, but later he devoted himself to landscapes painted usually in water color Many of his pictures were painted in England and Wales Among his paintings are Sunday in Devonshire; Forest Life (N Y Public Library), A Village Scene (Art Inst , Chicago)

Bellows, George Wesley, 1882–1925, American painter, draughtsman, and lithographer, b Columbus, Ohio, son of an architect and builder In his senior year he left Ohio State Univ , where he excelled as a baseball player, to study painting under Robert Henri in New York He achieved early success, and in 1907 his promise was already recognized A popular instructor at the Art Students League, in 1910 he married one of his students, Emma Louise Story, and settled in lower Manhattan, where he spent the remainder of his life Bellows never visited Europe and seemed uninfluenced by the currents affecting his European contemporaries, but actively supported independent art movements in New York His work has a direct, unself-conscious realism and has survived because of its real humanity and conviction Emma and Her Children (Mus of Fine Arts, Boston), Up the River (Metropolitan Mus), Stag at Sharkey's (Cleveland Mus), and a portrait of the artist's mother (Art Inst., Chicago) are characteristic paintings Bellows revived lithography in America and his prints are quite as important as his paintings Billy Sunday, Dance in a Mad House, and Dempsey and Firpo are American classics His untimely death robbed America of an artist of growing power See studies by Emma S Bellows (1927) and G W Eggers (1932)

Bellows, Henry Whitney, 1814–82, American clergyman, b Boston, Mass , educated at Harvard and at Cambridge Divinity School He was pastor of the First Unitarian Church (later All Souls), New York city, from 1839 until his death and was one of the founders of Antioch College, but perhaps his outstanding service was the organization and administration of the U S Sanitary Commission, which served the sick and wounded during the Civil War Among his books are The Treatment of Social Diseases (1857) and Restatements of Christian Doctrine (1860)

Bellows Falls, village (pop 4,236) in Rockingham town, SE Vt , on terraces above the Connecticut A navigation canal, said to have been the first begun in the United States, was built (1792–1802) around the 50-foot falls here It was used for a time after the first Vermont railroad, from Boston, reached Bellows Falls (1849), and it was rebuilt as part of a hydroelectric power development in 1926–28 The first bridge over the Connecticut was built at Bellows Falls in 1785 The paper-making industry here was begun in 1802

Bells, town (pop 1,054), W Tenn , on the South Fork of the Forked Deer and NW of Jackson. It is a railroad shipping point in a farm area.

bells, term used on shipboard to indicate the time of day, which is marked by the strokes of a ship's bell The custom originated when the sand glass used for marking time was turned every half hour and the turning was announced by the stroke The day is divided into six four-hour periods (related to watches; see WATCH), and within the period each half hour is marked by an increased number of bell strokes, thus, 12 30, one bell, 1 00, two bells, 1 30, three bells, and so on to 4 00, eight bells. The sequence is repeated, beginning with 4 30, one bell For bells in music, see BELL

Belluno (bĕl-lōō'nō), city (pop 10,083), capital of Belluno prov , Venetia, NE Italy, on the Piave at the foot of the Dolomites It belonged to various lords until 1420, when it voluntarily submitted to Venice The town has a 16th-century cathedral with a beautiful baroque bell tower, and a Renaissance city hall

Bellville. 1 Village (pop 1,199), N central Ohio, S of Mansfield, in a fruitgrowing area, settled 1809, platted 1815, inc 1841 2 City (pop 1,347), co seat of Austin co , S Texas, WNW of Houston, settled 1847, inc. 1927 It is the trade center of a farm and dairy region

Bellwood. 1 Residential village (pop 5,220), NE Ill , near Chicago, inc 1900 Among its manufactures are hardware and machinery 2 Borough (pop 2,772), central Pa , NNE of Altoona at the eastern base of the Allegheny Mts

Belly, river rising in the north part of Glacier National Park, Mont , flowing generally NE into Alberta, and joining the Oldman river NW of Lethbridge The Waterton river, draining Waterton Lakes (a national park) on the Canadian side of the boundary, is one of its tributaries

Belmar (bĕl'mar), borough (pop 3,435), E N J , a resort on the Atlantic S of Asbury Park, inc 1890

Belmond, town (pop 2,109), N Iowa, on the Iowa river, and SW of Mason City, inc 1881 It has a soybean-processing plant

Belmont. 1 City (1940 pop 1,229, 1947 special census pop 3,916), W Calif , SE of San Francisco, inc 1926 It is a flower-shipping point The College of Notre Dame (junior, Catholic, for women) is here. 2 Town (pop 26,867), E Mass , a suburb of Boston, settled 1636, inc 1859 3 Town (pop 1,374), S central N H , S of Laconia, set off from Gilmanton and inc 1859 4 Village (pop 1,145), co seat of Allegany co , W N Y , on the Genesee and SW of Hornell, in a farm region, inc 1871 Dairy products and handles are made 5 Town (pop 4,356), W central N C , on the Catawba river and W of Charlotte, in the agricultural piedmont region Belmont has textile mills and dye works Belmont Abbey College and Sacred Heart Academy are here

Belmonte, Juan (hwän' bĕlmōn'tā), 1892–, Spanish bullfighter, b Seville He made his debut in Madrid in 1913, and soon the thin, undersized matador achieved great fame for his skill and daring and became a national hero Often gored Belmonte retired from bullfighting several times, but repeatedly returned See his autobiography (as told to Manuel Chaves Nogales, Eng tr , 1937), biography by Henry Berlein (1934)

Beloeil (bĕlû'yu), town (pop 2,008), S Que , on the Richelieu river and NE of Montreal The seigniory of Beloeil was granted in 1694

Belo Horizonte (bĕl' ōrĕzŏnt'), city (pop 177,004), capital of Minas Gerais state, E Brazil It is a planned city, with broad avenues somewhat reminiscent of Washington, D C It was built to replace OURO PRETO as the state capital, and construction began in 1895 It handles the minerals produced in the state (iron, manganese, and gold), cattle, and farm products The opening of a hydroelectric plant in 1946 speeded the growth of industries, mostly utilizing the products of the area—cotton mills, furniture factories, and plants producing light metal goods, footwear, and pottery The name was formerly spelled Bello Horizonte

Beloit (bĭloit') 1 City (pop 3,765), co seat of agricultural Mitchell co , N central Kansas, on the Solomon, settled 1868, inc 1872 It has flour mills The state reform school for girls is here 2 City (pop 25,305), S Wis , on the Rock River at the Ill line, founded c 1837, inc 1857 The city's products include papermaking and woodworking machinery and Diesel engines It is noted for its winter sports Roy Chapman Andrews was born here Beloit College (nonsectarian, coeducational), chartered in 1846, was organized in 1847 by Congregationalists and Presbyterians in territory opened by the Black Hawk War It is noted for anthropology courses and has anthropology and art museums

Belon, Pierre (pyĕr' bülŏ'), 1517–64, French naturalist. Besides an account of his travels in the Near East, he wrote monographs on fishes and other aquatic animals, on conifers, and on birds (1555, in comparing skeletons of birds and man, this Histoire . des oyseaux foreshadows comparative anatomy) Belon was murdered in the Bois de Boulogne, Paris

Beloretsk (byĕlûrĕtsk'), city (pop c 32,000), Bashkir Autonomous SSR, E European RSFSR, in the Urals and on the Belaya river. It is a metallurgical center exploiting the regional iron ore and pyrite mines.

Belorussia (byĕ'lûrŏō'shŭ) or White Russia, constituent republic (80,150 sq. mi.; 1946 estimated pop 9,300,000), W European USSR. Minsk is the capital, other cities are Bobruisk, Brest, Gomel, Grodno, Mogilev, Pinsk, Polotsk, and Vitebsk Belorussia borders on Poland in the west, on Lithuania and Latvia in the northwest, on the RSFSR in the east, and on the Ukraine in the south The larger part of Belorussia is a lowland, drained by the Dniepr, the Western Dvina, and the Niemen rivers The PRIPET MARSHES are in the south The soil is generally turfy or sandy, but has been much improved by drainage The leading crops are potatoes -used for extensive hog raising—hemp, kok-saghyz (a rubber-bearing plant), rye, oats, and wheat Peat is the main fuel source, phosphorite and salt are mined Chemicals, lumber, textiles, and machines are the chief industrial products The population consists mainly of Belorussians (80 percent), a Slavic group influenced by Polish culture, both the Roman Catholic and the Russian Orthodox churches have adherents among them The rest are Russians, Jews, Ukrainians, and Poles The region fell (9th cent) under the sway of Kiev and was later subdivided into several principalities forming part of Kievan Russia The destruction of the Kievan state by the Mongols facilitated the conquest (early 14th cent) of Belorussia by the dukes of LITHUANIA The region became part of the Lithuanian empire, which in 1569 was fully merged with Poland The large Jewish population settled here in the 14th cent White Russia flourished under Lithuanian rule and its language became that of the state, but after its incorporation with Poland the ruling classes became thoroughly Polonized Through the Polish partitions (1772, 1793, 1795) all White Russia passed to the Russian Empire The country suffered much in the wars (16th–18th cent) between Poland and Russia and in the Napoleonic invasion of 1812 (during which it was laid waste by the retreating Russians) The Russian Social Democratic party was first organized in Belorussia, which played a leading part in the Russian Revolution of 1917 Great poverty, notably among the Jews, led to mass emigration to the United States Belorussia was a battlefield in the First World War and again in the Russo-Polish War of 1919–20 The Treaty of Riga (1921) gave part of the country to Poland The Belorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, originally formed in 1919, joined the USSR in 1922 Its territory was nearly doubled in the Polish partition of 1939 Occupied (1941–44) by the Germans in the Second World War, Belorussia was one of the most devastated parts of the Soviet Union Its western border was adjusted (1945) slightly to the advantage of Poland, but the 1939 frontier was essentially retained The republic joined the United Nations in 1945 The name also appears as Bielorussia and Byelorussia

Belphegor see BAAL-PEOR

Belpre (bĕl'prā), village (pop 1,717), SE Ohio, on the Ohio river opposite Parkersburg, W Va , in a fertile fruit and truck area, settled 1789, laid out 1852, inc 1902 Near by is Blennerhassett Island, where Aaron Burr plotted with Harman BLENNERHASSETT

Belsen (bĕl'zun), village, in the former Hanover prov , N Germany, near Celle A large and infamous concentration camp was here under the Hitler regime

Belshazzar (bĕlshăz'ur), in the Bible, son of NEBUCHADNEZZAR and last king of Babylon At his feast, handwriting appeared on the wall, and Daniel interpreted it as a prophecy of doom That night Belshazzar's kingdom fell to Cyrus Dan 5 The identity of Belshazzar is a problem Josephus apparently held him to be identical with NABONIDUS, a theory that is tenable except for his relation to Nebuchadnezzar Nabonidus had a son Belshar-uzur, who governed the southern part of the kingdom, he was not a king

Belt, Great, and Little Belt, two shallow straits connecting the Kattegat with the Baltic Sea The Great Belt (maximum width c 20 mi) separates Zealand and Fyn islands, Denmark The Little Belt (maximum width c 20 mi), between Fyn and Jutland, Denmark, is crossed by a railroad and road bridge

belt, in costume see GIRDLE

Belteshazzar (-shăz'-), in the book of DANIEL, Babylonian name of the prophet

Belton. 1 Town (pop 2,119), NW S C , just E of Anderson It has cotton mills 2 City (pop 3,572), co seat of Bell co , central Texas, on the Leon river and Noland Creek, between Austin and Waco, founded 1850 as Nolanville, renamed 1851, inc 1884 A market center in a rich farm region, it is the seat of Mary Hardin-Baylor College (Baptist; for women, 1845), formerly called Baylor-Belton and connected with Baylor Univ Prehistoric skeletons and artifacts have been found near by

Beltraffio, Giovanni Antonio see BOLTRAFFIO

Beltramelli, Antonio (antō'nyō bĕlträmĕl'lē), 1879–1930, Italian writer Active in the political struggles following the First World War, he finally became a Fascist His earlier prose somewhat resembles Verga's, he later followed D'Annunzio In addition to plays and verse, he wrote Il Cavalier Mostardo (1921), a story of post-war political life, and a biography of Mussolini, L'Uomo nuovo [the new man] (1923). His juvenile Piccolo Poms (1915) was translated into English (1925)

Beltrami, Eugenio (āōjā'nēō bĕltrā'mē), 1835–1900, Italian mathematician He is famous for his work on non-Euclidian geometry, electricity, and magnetism

Belvedere (bĕl'vŭdēr'), name of a gallery and court of the Vatican, Rome, containing some of the rarest classical antiquities, among which are the Apollo Belvedere, the Torso of Hercules, and the Laocoön It was built 1490 for Innocent VIII A palace of this name in Vienna houses the Museum of History and Art

Belvidere (bĕl'vĭdēr"). 1 City (pop 8,094), co seat of Boone co, N Ill, on the Kishwaukee and E of Rockford, founded 1836, inc 1852 It is a trade center in a farm area. Among its manufactures are sewing machines, machine parts, scales, clothing, and grain and food products 2 Town (pop 2,060), co seat of Warren co, NW N J, on the Delaware and NNE of Phillipsburg, settled 1759, laid out 1799, inc 1845

Bely, Andrei (ŭndrā' byĕ'lĭ), pseud of Boris Nikolayevich Bugayev (bŭrēs' nyĭkŭl'uvĭch bōōgā'yŭf), 1880-1934, Russian poet, novelist, essayist, and philosopher One of the leading symbolists, he had great influence on early Soviet literature He was an experimenter, whether in prose or verse His poems are contained in the four-volume Symphonies (1901–8), his best prose is in The Silver Dove (1910), Petersburg (1912), and Kotik Letayev (1920), an autobiographical novel in the James Joyce vein In his later life Bely came under the influence of Rudolph Steiner's anthroposophy He left Russia in 1922 but returned a year later For his poems available in English, see Babette Deutsch, Russian Poetry (1927), and Charles Coxwell, Russian Poems (1929)

Belzoni, Giovanni Battista (jōvän'nē bät-tēs'ta bĕltsō'nē), 1778–1823, Italian traveler and archaeologist He lived (1803–12) in England and there invented a hydraulic machine, which he introduced into Egypt in 1815 Becoming interested in archaeology, he opened (1817) the rock temple of Abu-Simbel and he discovered (1817) the tomb of Seti I at Thebes The bust of Rameses II (known as The Young Memnon, now in the British Mus) was taken by Belzoni from Thebes to Alexandria His discoveries are recorded in his Narrative (1920)

Belzoni (bĕlzō'nē), city (pop 3,789), co seat of Humphreys co, W central Miss, on the Yazoo, in a rich cotton area, founded c 1827

Bembo, Pietro (pyā'trō, bĕm'bō), 1470–1547, Italian humanist, cardinal of the Roman Church A favorite of the Medici, he was secretary of Leo X, he received the red hat from Paul III Bembo was for many years the arbiter of Italian letters, insisting that classic traditions should be preserved He wrote the History of Venice (1551), a disquisition on platonic love, Gli Asolani (1505), based on the form of Cicero's Tusculan Disputations, lyric verse (Rime, 1530) in Latin and Italian, the latter modeled upon Petrarch, and Prose della volgar lingua [prose in the vernacular] (1525) For translations of his Italian verse, see Lorna de' Lucchi, An Anthology of Italian Poems (1922), for translations of his Latin verse, see J A Symonds, The Renaissance in Italy

Bement (bē'mĕnt'), village (pop 1,466), central Ill, NE of Decatur, in a farm area, inc 1874

Bemidji (bumĭj'ē), city (pop 9,427), co seat of Beltrami co, N central Minn, on Bemidji Lake; settled c 1892, inc as a village 1896, as a city 1905 The Mississippi flows through Bemidji Lake Formerly a lumber center on the site of an Indian camp, Bemidji became a manufacturing and trade center for a resort and farm area A state teachers college is here An 18-foot figure of Paul Bunyan is on the lake shore

Bemis Heights, battle of see Saratoga campaign

Ben, Levite porter under David 1 Chron 15 18

Ben-abinadab (-ubĭn'-) [Heb, =son of Abinadab] see Abinadab 4

Benaiah (bēnā'yu) [Heb, =built by God] 1 One of David's warriors, faithful in David's old age to Solomon 2 Sam 8 18, 20 23, 23 20–23, 1 Kings 1, 2, 1 Chron 11 22–25, 18 17, 27 5,6 2 Warrior under David 2 Sam 23 30, 1 Chron 11 31, 27 14 3 Levite 1 Chron 15 18,20, 16 5 4 Priest 1 Chron 15 24, 16 6 5 Simeonite 1 Chron 4 36 6 Asaphite 2 Chron 20 14 7 Levite of the reign of Hezekiah 2 Chron 31.13. 8 Father of Pelatiah Ezek 11.1,13 9, 10, 11, 12 Jews who had married foreign wives Ezra 10 25,30,35,43

Benalcázar or Belalcázar, Sebastián de (sāvästyän' dā bānälkä'thär, bäläl-), c 1479–1551, Spanish conquistador. After accompanying Columbus on his third voyage (1498), Benalcázar served in Darien and Nicaragua before joining Francisco Pizarro in the conquest of Peru (1532). Setting out from Piura, he forestalled Pedro de Alvarado and entered (1533) the Indian stronghold of Quito, now capital of Ecuador, founded Guayaquil, and marched (1535) into SW Colombia (Popayán) in search of El Dorado In 1539 he tried unsuccessfully to ally himself with Federmann against Jiménez de Quesada. Journeying to Spain with them, Benalcázar returned (1541) as governor of Popayán prov. Between 1541 and 1548 he aided Vaca de Castro against Diego de Almagro the younger and then helped Núñez Vela and Pedro de la Gasca against Gonzalo Pizarro For executing the refractious leader of a neighboring province which he claimed as his, Benalcázar was tried (1550) and convicted On his way to appeal to the Council of the Indies he died of fever in Cartagena.

Ben-ammi (bĕnăm'ī) [Heb, =son of my kindred], son of Lot and of his younger daughter, eponym of the Ammonites Gen 19 38

Benares (bunu'rĭs), city (pop 263,100), SE United Provs, India, on the Ganges river Buddha is believed to have preached (c 500 B C) at near-by Sarnath In the 7th cent A D Benares had nearly 100 temples sacred to Siva Under Moslem rule (13th-18th cent) Hinduism was suppressed and all its monuments destroyed The mosque of Aurangzeb, the Mogul emperor, is the most notable building of this period Hindus believe that one who dies in Benares must achieve salvation Annually c 1,000,000 pilgrims visit the city to make a circuit of 36 mi in its outskirts and to bathe in the Ganges from the numerous ghats The present-day brasses, embroideries, and brocades are inferior to those which were famous long ago It is an educational center with a Hindu university opened in 1921

Benavente y Martínez, Jacinto (häthēn'tō bā"navān'tā ē märtē'nĕth), 1866–, Spanish dramatist Born in Madrid, he has lived there all his life He was awarded the 1922 Nobel Prize in Literature His best-known play is Los intereses creados (1907, Eng tr, Bonds of Interest, 1917), a farce written on the pattern of the Italian commedia dell' arte In 1916 he wrote a second part to this play, La ciudad alegre y confiada [the gay and confident city] Señora Ama (1908) and La malquerida (1913) are both rural dramas highly appreciated by the public and the critics Some of his other plays are La noche del sábado (1903, Eng tr, Saturday Night, 1918), Alfilerazos (1925), and a short play for children, El príncipe que todo lo aprendió en los libros [the prince who learned everything in books] (1909) See study by Walter Starkie (1924)

Benavides (bānăvē'dus, -vĭd'-), city (pop 3,081), S Texas WSW of Corpus Christi, inc 1936 The area yields oil, cotton, and livestock

Ben Avon (bĕn ā'vun), residential borough (pop 2,516), SW Pa, on the Ohio and near Pittsburgh, inc 1891

Benbow, John (bĕn'bō), 1653–1702, English vice admiral Some of the stories of his exploits seem to be legendary, but he did successfully fight the French at Saint-Malo (1693) and Dunkirk (1696) and the Spanish in the West Indies (1698) He received a fatal wound in a four-day running fight with a French fleet in the Caribbean off Santa Marta In this engagement his flagship, the Breda, was deserted by all but one of his fleet, several of the disobedient captains were later court-martialed and shot

Benbow, William, fl 1825–40, English pamphleteer and publisher He is known especially as the author (c 1832) of the Grand National Holiday, or, Congress of the Productive Classes, which introduced the theory of the general strike and was influential in promoting class consciousness and unity among workers Little is known of his life except that he had a publishing house in London, was a member of the National Union of Working Classes, took a minor part in the Chartist movement, and was several times imprisoned

Benbridge, Henry, 1744–1812, American portrait painter and miniaturist, b Philadelphia, studied in Italy and with Benjamin West in London His portraits are characterized by technical skill and have sometimes been attributed to John Singleton Copley Among his works are portraits of Mrs Simons (Metropolitan Mus) and Benjamin Franklin (Carnegie Inst, Pittsburgh) He lived in Charleston, S C, for many years

Benchley, Robert Charles, 1889–1945, American humorist, b Worcester, Mass, grad Harvard, 1912 He was dramatic editor of Life (1920–29) and of the New Yorker (1929–40) and was known by many for the short films which he wrote, directed, and acted in himself His books include Of All Things (1921), My Ten Years in a Quandary (1936), and Benchley beside Himself (1943)

Bend, city (pop 10,021), co seat of Deschutes co, W central Oregon, on the Deschutes and S of The Dalles, at the eastern foot of the Cascade Range, laid out and inc 1905. The city is the industrial and commercial center for a large lumber area, with irrigated farming and resort and recreation facilities

Benda, Julien (zhülyĕ' bādā'), 1867–, French novelist and critic A humanist, he led a sustained attack against the aesthetic philosophy of Bergson L'Ordination (1912, Eng tr., The Yoke of Pity, 1913), a novel, won him immediate recognition La Trahison des clercs (1927, Eng tr., The Treason of the Intellectuals, 1928) was regarded as sensational for its theory that the thinker, in pursuit of truth, should disregard any practical consequences He has also written La Jeunesse d'un clerc (1936) and Un Régulier dans le siècle (1938). See H. E. Read, Julian Benda and the New Humanism (1930).

Benda, Wladyslaw Theodor, 1873–1948, Polish-American painter and illustrator, b Poznan, Poland, studied at the Art Academy in Cracow and in Vienna, San Francisco, and New York city He came to the United States in 1899. In addition to decorative works and many illustrations for magazines and books, he created a modern mask for the theater, first used in Greenwich Village Follies (1920) He wrote Masks (1945)

Ben Day process see Day, Benjamin

Bendemann, Eduard Julius Friedrich (ā'dōōārd" yōō'lyōōs frēd'rĭkh bĕn'dumän), 1811–89, German Jewish historical and portrait painter The Jews Mourning in Exile, exhibited in Berlin in his 21st year, created a sensation and established his reputation While a professor at the Dresden Academy, he executed many historical frescoes on a monumental scale To these he devoted 15 years, and on them his fame chiefly rests From 1859 to 1867 he was director of Düsseldorf Academy

Bender (bĕn'dur), Rumanian Tighina (tĭgē'nā), Rus Bendery (bĭndyĕ'rē), city (1930 pop 31,384), S Moldavian SSR, in Bessarabia It was conquered (1538) from Moldavia by the Turks From 1709 to 1713 Charles XII of Sweden resided near Bender as the unwelcome guest of the Turkish government There are ruins of old fortifications

Bendigo (bĕn'dĭgō), municipality (pop 30,778), Victoria, Australia, NW of Melbourne It is the trade center for a wheat-growing area There is a Roman Catholic cathedral Founded in 1851 with the gold rush, it was formerly an important mining town, popularly called Sandhurst The municipality includes Eaglehawk (pop 4,039).

Bendix, N J see Teterboro

bends see caisson disease

Bene-berak (bĕ'nē-bĕ'rāk) [Heb, =sons of Barak], town, W Palestine, ESE of Jaffa Joshua 19 45

Benedek, Ludwig von (lōod'vĭkh fŭn bā'nudĕk"), 1804–81, Austrian general He served in the suppression of the Polish insurrection of 1846, in the Austrian campaigns of 1848–49 in Italy and Hungary, and in the Italian War of 1859 His wide repute was destroyed by his crushing defeat at Sadowa (1866) in the Austro-Prussian War

Benedetti, Vincent (vĕsäl' bānädĕt'tē), 1817-1900, French diplomat, b Corsica, made a count by Napoleon III He was ambassador to Prussia from 1864 to 1870 His interview (1870) with William I at Ems (in which he asked the king to disapprove formally and permanently the candidacy of a Hohenzollern prince for the Spanish throne) was so altered in Bismarck's version of the Ems dispatch that it inflamed feelings in both countries and thus became the immediate cause of the Franco-Prussian War

Benedetto da Majano (bānädĕt'tō dä mäyä'nō) 1442–97, Italian sculptor and architect of the Florentine school His pulpits, altarpieces, and other church furniture are of great beauty Examples of these are in Santa Croce and the Palazzo Vecchio, Florence, and in San Domenico, Siena The altarpiece in the Church of Monte Oliveto at Naples was probably his masterwork A polychrome terra-cotta sketch, made for the figure of the Virgin in this altarpiece, is in the Metropolitan Museum

Benedict, Saint, d c 547, Italian monk, founder of the Benedictines, called Benedict of Nursia, b Norcia (E of Spoleto), Italy He went to Rome to study, then withdrew to Subiaco to live as a hermit, after three years he was famous for holiness He started an establishment of monks, a set of cells of 13 monks each This he finally left, and at Monte Cassino, in an old pagan holy place, he started the first truly Benedictine monastery The product of Benedict's experience appears in the Rule of St Benedict (in Latin), the chief rule in Western monasticism, used always by Benedictines and by Cistercians as well Its 73 chapters (with Prologue) original and personal and full of a spirit of common sense, set forth the central ideas of Benedictine monasticism St. Benedict's sister, St Scholastica, was a religious also His feast March 21 See St Gregory I, Dialogues, Book II (Eng tr, 1874, 1911, 1925), Dom John Chapman, Saint Benedict and the Sixth Century (1929), Dom Justin McCann, Saint Benedict (1937), Leonard J Doyle, St Benedict's Rule for Monasteries (1948)

Benedict XI, d 1304, pope (1303–4), an Italian (b Treviso) named Niccolò Boccasini, successor of Boniface VIII and predecessor of Clement V He had risen to become master general of the Dominican order and was in the empire as legate during the tragic close of Boniface's reign He was able to conciliate many of the enemies Boniface had made, but he would not yield on the necessity that those who had assaulted the pope, namely, Sciarra Colonna and Nogaret, should stand trial. He has been beatified

Benedict XIII, antipope see Luna, Pedro de

Benedict XIV, 1675–1758, pope (1740–58), an Italian (b Bologna) named Prospero Lambertini, successor of Clement XII and predecessor of Clement XIII Long before his pontificate he was renowned for his learning. In 1728 he received the red hat.

He was much interested in the Eastern churches and began (with the bull Etsi pastoralis, 1742) the modern papal legislation which favors the Eastern rites and prohibits activity which is likely to Latinize them He beautified Rome and restored monuments, and he was munificent to Bologna He patronized learning and welcomed all to his court He denounced the cruelty to the Indians in the disbanding of the Paraguay REDUCTIONS

Benedict XV, 1854-1922, pope (1914-22), an Italian (b Genoa) named Giacomo della Chiesa, successor of PIUS X and predecessor of PIUS XI He was made archbishop of Bologna in 1907 and cardinal in 1914, two months before his election as pope His conduct in the First World War was one of the strictest neutrality, and he had the respect of all belligerents He originated several proposals for peace Benedict was lavish in charity toward war victims, and he founded the Vatican service for prisoners of war In his pontificate France and England resumed diplomatic relations with the Holy See

Benedict, Sir Julius, 1804–85, German-English composer and conductor, active in England from 1835 until his death, pupil of Weber He was conductor (1876–80) of the Liverpool Philharmonic and also conducted at Covent Garden and Drury Lane His best-known work is the opera The Lily of Killarney (1862) He was knighted in 1871

Benedict, Ruth Fulton, 1887–1948, American anthropologist, b New York city, grad Vassar, 1909, Ph D Columbia, 1923 She was a student and later a colleague of Franz Boas at Columbia Univ, where she taught from 1924 With others she contributed toward enlarging the scope of anthropology to include, in addition to the already established concepts, culture motif and the role of culture in individual personality formation During the Second World War she guided research on culture analysis for the Dept of State and afterward continued a program of investigation of contemporary European cultures She was the author of Concept of the Guardian Spirit in North America (1923), Patterns of Culture (1934), Race: Science and Politics (rev ed, 1943), and The Chrysanthemum and the Sword: Patterns of Japanese Culture (1946)

Benedict Biscop (bĭs'kŭp), c 628–690, English monk He founded the monasteries of Wearmouth (at Sunderland) and Jarrow, and he was abbot of St Peter's, Canterbury Bede was his pupil

Benedict College see COLUMBIA S C

benedictine (bĕnŭdĭk'tĭn), sweet, brown LIQUEUR originated in 1510 by Benedictine monks at Hâvre, France, and now manufactured by a secular concern on the grounds of the old abbey Every bottle bears the initials of the Latin dedication Deo Optimo Maximo [To God most good, most great]

Benedictines, monks of the Roman Catholic Church, following the Rule of St BENEDICT They are called Black Monks Their first establishment was at MONTE CASSINO, Italy, ever since the symbolic center of Western MONASTICISM St Benedict's institute was novel in monastic life in replacing austerity by moderation The monastery, or ABBEY, was conceived as a devout Christian family of men, fathered by the abbot The monks promised to live in the house till death The whole life was in common, the waking hours being devoted principally to worship and work, especially manual labor The individual's motives on entering were to lead the monastic life, rather than to join in some project the house might undertake The greatest of early Benedictines was Pope St GREGORY I, whose espousal of the life had great influence He sent out St AUGUSTINE OF CANTERBURY, with his monks, who brought Benedictine life and Christianity together to Anglo-Saxon England So too went St BONIFACE from England to Germany. In this expansion of Christendom the abbey was an outpost, a unit both of Latin culture (including Western agricultural methods) and Christian religion Also within the area that had been Latin for centuries the Benedictines were active—their preservation of books was a critical service In the 10th cent a reform began at the abbey of CLUNY, France, though this led to a separate organization (see CLUNIAC ORDER); it deepened the long-standing Benedictine tendencies to emphasize the liturgy, study, and education A Benedictine reform, or reaction, in 1098, resulted in a new foundation, the CISTERCIANS Throughout the centuries, however, many Benedictine houses went on quietly, unaffected by the fashions which provoked the rise and decline of various orders Since the Middle Ages the Benedictines have occupied a central position in Western religious orders, they are not so rigorous as the TRAPPISTS (who aim at living a primitive Benedictine life), and they are as attached as ever to the domestic life of the monastery They are organized as a loose federation of congregations, each congregation is a collection of geographically related abbeys or monasteries The abbeys are mainly autonomous Famous abbeys include Bobbio, St Denis, St. Gall, Einsiedeln, Fulda, Hersfeld, Lorsch, Reichenau, Solesmes, Monserrat, St Albans, Glastonbury, Westminster, and Bury St Edmunds Permanent Benedictine establishments in the United States began in the 1840s, the oldest among them were at Latrobe, Pa, St Meinrad, Ind, Collegeville, Minn, Atchison, Kansas, and Newark, N J. See Edward C. Butler, Benedictine Monachism (1922)

benediction (bĕn'-) [Latin, =blessing], solemn blessing administered usually in the name of God by one especially able to do so, as a priest or a minister The temple worship at Jerusalem had fixed forms of benedictions, and Christians have always given them an important place in ceremony, especially at the end of a ritual Protestants have generally abandoned many of the blessings of the Roman Catholic Church, such as the apostolic benediction by the pope and his delegates and benediction of the dying Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, a popular extraliturgical service of Roman Catholics, consists of a blessing of the people by the priest with the Host exposed in a monstrance

Benedict the Moor, Saint, d 1589, Sicilian Negro friar He was first a hermit, then a Franciscan lay brother Though illiterate and therefore not a priest, he became a superior because of character and ability He had many supernatural visitations St Benedict was not a Moor He was canonized in 1809 Feast April 14

Benedictus (bĕnudĭk'tus), hymn of Zachary Luke 1 68–79 It begins in Latin, "Benedictus Dominus Deus Israel" [blessed be the Lord God of Israel] It is used at funerals and at lauds in the Roman Catholic Church and at morning prayer in the Church of England For another hymn called Benedictus, see SANCTUS

benefice (bĕ'nŭfĭs [Latin, =gift], in canon law, income attached to a position in the Church The income is usually from an endowment, the endowment having commonly been made originally by a lay person The problem raised by the existence of benefices is simply whether a layman may control the selection of the churchman to occupy the benefice The Church has always demanded, and usually got, the right to veto a presentee (one presented to the benefice) on the grounds of moral or other ineligibility The most commonly beneficed were, on the Continent, abbots and superiors, and in England and Scotland, parish ministers In England beneficed parish ministers are called vicars As a result of the disestablishment of the Roman Catholic Church on the Continent and after the reforms of the Council of Trent (see TRENT, COUNCIL OF), the evils of benefices have largely vanished, and the Church has for bishops and superiors everywhere full control over appointments so far as lay patronage is concerned In England benefices are still common, but reforms and restrictions have removed many abuses The Church of Scotland was involved in a struggle over lay patronage from 1715 on This culminated in the great disruption of 1843, when more than a third of the Church seceded to set up the Free Church of Scotland, the immediate cause of the great disruption was a decision in the courts that the presentee of any person who had the right to present must be accepted by the presbytery and the congregation if he fulfilled the minimum essentials In 1874 the Church of Scotland abolished patronage entirely, and benefices were at an end in Scotland benefit of clergy, term originally applied to the exemption of Christian clerics from criminal prosecution in the secular courts The privilege was established by the 12th cent, and it extended only to the commission of felonies The ecclesiastical courts did not inflict capital punishment, and their severest sentences usually were degradation and the imposition of penances Many criminals posed as clerics to obtain benefit of clergy In England the privilege was soon extended to all clerks, i e, literate persons Since the first verse of Psalm 51 was the test of literacy, violators of the law would memorize the text The ecclesiastical courts lost their criminal jurisdiction in 1576, and thereafter all clerics were tried by the secular courts and either discharged or sentenced to a year's imprisonment In Queen Anne's reign the reading test was abolished and all persons were allowed to claim the privilege for the first conviction of felony, and later the privilege was extended generally to peers and women Benefit of clergy thus mitigated the severities of English criminal law, which imposed death for many offenses now deemed trivial The criminal law was ameliorated in the early 19th cent, and in 1827 benefit of clergy was abolished as being no longer necessary In the United States it was abolished in 1790 for all Federal crimes and c 1850 it disappeared from the state courts The term "benefit of clergy" has come in popular usage to mean "sanction of the clergy" particularly in the phrase "without benefit of clergy" See L C Gabel, Benefit of Clergy in England in the Later Middle Ages (1929)

Bene Israel or Beni Israel (both bā'nē) [Heb, = sons of Israel], Jewish community of India, numbering some 15,000 mostly in and near Bombay city Allusions in literature indicate that this people may have come to India in the 2d cent A D, but some authorities claim that they descend from Moslems converted to Judaism in the early 18th cent. When the Bene Israel were discovered by Westerners in the late 18th cent their customs were substantially like those of the Hindus except that they kept the Sabbath and several Jewish festivals and circumcised boys on the eighth day after birth The only Hebrew they were said to know was the prayer, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is one!" In the 19th cent many of the men were soldiers in the British army Wealthy Jews established schools to instruct the Beni Israel in Hebrew and Judaism, and in time their religious practices became quite similar to those of Jews throughout the world Certain other Eastern groups, notably tribesmen in Afghanistan, also claim Hebrew descent

Bene-jaakan (bĕn'ē-jā'ŭ-) [Heb, =tribe of AKAN], halting place in the wilderness Num. 33 31,32 Beeroth Deut 10 6

Beneke, Friedrich Eduard (frē'drĭkh ā'dōōärt bā'nŭkŭ), 1798–1854, German philosopher and psychologist A Privatdocent at Berlin, he opposed the doctrines of Hegel and was deprived of the right to teach From 1824 to 1827 he lectured in Gottingen and after Hegel's death returned (1832) to Berlin to lecture Beneke emphasized the use of the empirical method in psychological investigation, maintaining that metaphysics should be based on psychology His writings include Psychologische Skizzen (1825–27) and Lehrbuch der Psychologie als Naturwissenschaft (1833)

Benelli, Sem (sĕm' bānĕl'lē), 1875?–1949, Italian dramatic poet He fought in the First World War, entered politics, and from the late 1920s was a successful impresario He wrote some 30 dramas and comedies, among them romantic plays notable for their dramatic power and richness of expression and setting La cena della beffe (presented 1909, Eng trs, The Jester's Supper 1924–25, The Jest, 1939) won international acclaim and has been produced in the United States both as a play and as an opera by Giordano L'amore dei tre re (1910, Eng tr, The Love of Three Kings, 1923) was set to music by Montemezzi His last important play was Orfeo e Proserpina (1929)

Benes, Eduard, Czech Beneš (bĕ'nĕsh), 1887–1948 Czech statesman As a university student at Prague he became a disciple of T G MASARYK He finished his studies in France, later taught sociology and economics at Prague, and in 1915 joined Masaryk in exile After the breakup of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy he represented Czechoslovakia at the Paris Peace Conference of 1919 As foreign minister (1918–35), premier (1921–22), leader of the Czech National Socialist party (a liberal and nationalist party, not to be confused with its German namesake), and right-hand man of Masaryk, Benes exerted a strong influence on both national and European politics The LITTLE ENTENTE and the Czech alliance with France were essentially his work Elected president of Czechoslovakia at Masaryk's retirement (1935), he resigned (1938) after the dismemberment of his country by the MUNICH PACT and went into exile in the United States and England After the outbreak of the Second World War he resumed (1940) the title president and headed a provisional government, at war with Germany, in London He returned to Prague in 1945, was confirmed in office and was reelected president in 1946 After the Communist coup of Feb, 1948, he reluctantly endorsed the new regime, but resigned in June on the ground of illness, refusing to sign the new constitution He died shortly afterward at his country home Among his writings are My War Memoirs (Eng tr, 1938) and Democracy Today and Tomorrow (in Eng, 1939) Publication, in Czech, of his later memoirs began in 1947

Benét, Stephen Vincent (bĕnā'), 1898–1943, American poet and novelist, b Bethlehem, Pa, grad Yale, 1919, brother of William Rose Benét Before he left college, Stephen Benét had written three volumes of promising verse He rapidly added more poetry and several novels, including The Spanish Bayonet (1926) John Brown's Body, a book-length poem of the Civil War, brought him fame and the Pulitzer Prize for the best volume of verse written in 1928 Ballads and Poems followed in 1931 With his wife, Rosemary, he wrote for children the poems in A Book of Americans (1933) His short stories are some of the best of their time and include "Johnny Pye and the Fool-Killer" and "The Devil and Daniel Webster" The latter became in turn a play, an opera (score by Douglas Moore), and a motion picture Moore also wrote the music for his operetta The Headless Horseman (1937) Many of Benét's poems and stories were dramatized over the radio, and when, during the last three years of his life, he devoted himself to propaganda writing, he produced several radio scripts, now collected in We Stand United (1945) His Selected Works (2 vols) appeared in 1942, and the unfinished American epic, Western Star, published after his death in 1943, won the Pulitzer Prize in 1944 Benét's work is uneven, but at its best it has increased the small body of great American writing about America

Benét, William Rose, 1886–, American poet and editor, b Fort Hamilton on New York Bay, grad Sheffield Scientific School, Yale, 1907, brother of

Stephen Vincent Benét. He has been associated as editor or assistant editor with the Century Magazine, the Literary Review of the New York Evening Post, and the Saturday Review of Literature (which he helped found in 1924) His books include Merchants from Cathay (1913), The Great White Wall (1916), and Man Possessed (1927), poems, a novel, The First Person Singular (1922), a volume of essays, Wild Goslings (1927), and an anthology, The Reader's Encyclopedia (1948) His autobiographical verse-narrative, The Dust Which Is God (1941), won the 1942 Pulitzer Prize in poetry His second wife was the poet, Elinor Wylie, whose poems he edited in 1932

Benevento (bĕnəvĕn'tō), city (pop 26,692), capital of Benevento prov, Campania, S Italy, on a small plain in the Apennines The region produces tobacco, cereals, and grapes A town of the Samnites, it became under the Romans an important commercial center on the Appian Way It was the capital of a powerful Lombard duchy (6th–11th cent), extending over much of S Italy Near here in 1266 Charles of Anjou defeated MANFRED From the 11th cent to 1860 the city was under papal rule, except for periods of foreign occupation Among its monuments are a triumphal arch erected for Trajan, remains of a Roman theater, and the Church of Santa Sofia (8th cent), with a 12th-century cloister The cathedral was practically destroyed in the Second World War

Benezet, Anthony (bĕnəzĕt'), 1713–84, American reformer, b France Of Huguenot parentage, Benezet joined the Society of Friends in England before he came to Philadelphia (1731) He taught in the Friends' English Public School after 1742, and in 1755 he founded a girls' school Benezet wrote numerous articles and pamphlets against the evil of slavery, helped organize the first antislavery group in the United States, and founded and endowed a Negro school He was also concerned with the welfare of the Indians See biography by G S Brookes (1937)

Ben Ezra see IBN EZRA, ABRAHAM BEN MEIR

Benfey, Theodor (tā'dōr bĕn'fī), 1809–81, German linguist An authority on Sanskrit, he compiled a Sanskrit-English dictionary (1866)

Bengal (bĕng-gôl'), region (77,442 sq mi, pop 60,306,525), India and Pakistan, on the Bay of Bengal Some inland sections are mountainous, but most of Bengal is fertile land of the Ganges-Brahmaputra alluvial plains and delta Along most of the coast are the richly timbered jungles of the Sundarbans, mainly swamps and islands The heavy monsoon rainfall and predominantly warm weather make possible two harvests a year Rice, produced in exportable surplus, is the chief crop, sugar cane and oil seeds are also important Bengal is the world's chief source of jute Industry in the province includes steel mills as well as numerous plants to process agricultural produce Coal, produced in great quantity in the southwest, is exported to the factories of Bihar prov Large iron deposits are untouched An abundance of waterways and a good rail net facilitate the movement of commodities to and from CALCUTTA, the metropolis and chief port, and insure the region's prosperity Higher education is provided by the universities at Calcutta and DACCA, each with affiliated colleges In the 3d cent B C, Bengal belonged to the empire of Asoka It was conquered (A D c 1200) by Mohammedans of Turki descent When the Portuguese began their trading activities (late 16th cent), Bengal was a part of the Mogul empire The British East India Company made its first settlement in 1642, and during the next 125 years completed its occupation by conquering the native princes and expelling the Dutch and French Under British control Bengal was a presidency of India The population, which mainly speaks Bengali, is ethnically quite homogeneous However, the people are divided almost equally between Mohammedans and Hindus, and when India was partitioned in 1947, the presidency was divided along the line approximately separating the two main concentrations of the religious communities to make the Indian state of West Bengal (28,033 sq mi, pop 21,194,613) with its capital at Calcutta and the Pakistan province of East Bengal (including territory formerly in W Assam 54,029 sq mi, pop. 41,844,912) with its capital at Dacca.

Bengal, Bay of, arm, c 1,300 mi long and c 1,000 mi wide, of the Indian Ocean, with India on the west and Burma and Malaya on the east It receives many large rivers, including the Ganges and the Irrawaddy, and in it are the Andaman Islands and the Nicobar Islands

Bengali (bĕngäl'ē), Indo-European language See LANGUAGE (table)

Bengasi or Benghazi (both bĕngä'zē), city (pop 50,751), Cyrenaica, Libya, a port on the Mediterranean Sea On this site was the ancient city of Berenice (thus renamed for the wife of Ptolemy III) Bengasi is a center of communications, and it has varied light industries In the Second World War it was taken and retaken several times before its final capture by the British in Dec., 1942.

Bengel, Johann Albrecht (yō'hän äl'brĕkht bĕng'əl), 1687–1752, German Lutheran theologian and biblical scholar. He was appointed (1713) professor in charge of a theological training school at Denkendorf and remained there for 28 years In this period he produced his most important works —a carefully prepared Greek text of the New Testament (1734), with an Apparatus criticus, which formed the point of departure for modern New Testament textual criticism, and his Gnomon Novi Testamenti (1742), an exegetical commentary, later translated into German and English.

Benghazi, Libya see BENGASI

Benguela (bĕn-gĕ'lə, bĕng-gĕ'lə), town (pop 14,243), central Angola, a port on the Atlantic, founded 1617 It is on a transcontinental railroad extending to Beira, Mozambique. It has a large trade in fish, sugar, coffee, cotton, sisal, and oil seeds.

Benha (bĕn'hä), city (pop 35,245), N Egypt, in the Nile delta Cotton is ginned, and rugs are woven

Benhadad (–hā'dăd) [Heb, =son of Hadad, a Syrian god], kings of Damascus 1 Fl 890 B C, ally of ASA of Judah against Baasha of Israel 1 Kings 15 17–20 2 Fl 854 B C, leader of the coalition that withstood Shalmaneser III of Assyria at Karkar on the Orontes (c 854 B C), he continued the traditional enmity of his kingdom with Israel and defeated AHAB and Jehoshaphat He was murdered and succeeded by Hazael 1 Kings 20, 22, 2 Kings 8 15 3 Fl 800 B C, son of Hazael and contemporary of Jehoash of Israel, who defeated him in war He also was Assyria's vassal 2 Kings 13 25, Amos 1 4

Ben-hail (–hā'əl) [Heb, =son of might], one of Jehoshaphat's princes 2 Chron 17 7

Ben-hanan (–hā'nən) [Heb, =son of the Merciful], Judahite 1 Chron 4 20

Ben-hur [Heb, =son of Hur] see HUR 4

Beni (bā'nē), river formed by tributaries rising in the Andes of Bolivia It flows N and NE to Brazil and, joining the Mamoré at the Brazilian border, forms the MADEIRA The Beni is navigable across the selvas N to the Madre de Dios Before the collapse (1912) of the rubber boom it was an important avenue of trade

Benicia (bənĭsh'ə), city (1940 pop 2,419, 1944 special census pop 8,368), W Calif, a port on Carquinez Strait (see SAN FRANCISCO BAY) NE of Oakland, founded 1847, inc 1850 A U S army ordnance depot and an arsenal are here

Beni Hassan or Beni Hasan (both bĕ'nē hä'sən), village, central Egypt, on the Nile There are 39 tombs carved out of solid rock in the XII dynasty of ancient Egypt Their columns are remarkable

Beni Israel see BENE ISRAEL

Benin (bĕnēn'), town (pop 8,530), SW Nigeria Its rulers, who formerly controlled a small native state, had contact with European traders as early as the 14th cent Benin was notorious for its unparalleled slave trade and as a place of human sacrifice It was stormed in 1897 to avenge the massacre of British officers who had been sent on a diplomatic mission The ironwork and carved ivory which were formerly made in Benin rank with the finest native art of Africa Today the town trades in hardwood and native crafts The Benin river here empties into the Bight of Benin, the northern part of the Gulf of Guinea

Beninu (bēnī'nū) [Heb, =our son], Levite sealer of the covenant Neh 10 13

Beni Suef (bĕ'nē swäf'), city (pop 56,356), Egypt, on the Nile Cotton is milled, and sugar is refined

Benjamin [Heb, =son of the right hand, i e, auspicious] 1 Youngest son of Jacob and Rachel and ancestor of one of the 12 tribes of Israel His mother, dying, named him Benoni (bĕnō'nī) [Heb, =son of my sorrow] He was the favorite of his family The tribe of Benjamin was allotted the plateau of E central Palestine lying W of the Jordan between Jerusalem and Bethel The tribesmen were famous archers The name survived in the High Gate of Benjamin of the Temple at Jerusalem Saul was the most noted man of the house of Benjamin Gen 35 18, 42–46, 49 27, Num 1 36, 13 9, 26 38–41, 34 21, Deut 33 12, Joshua 18 11–28, Judges 3 15, 20–21, 1 Chron 8 40, 12 2, 2 Chron 14 8, 17 17 2 Descendent of Benjamin 1 Chron 7 10 3 One who was separated from a foreign wife Ezra 10 32. 4 Repairer of the wall Neh. 3 23 5 Dedicator of the wall Neh 12 34 He may be the same person as 3 and as 4.

Benjamin, Asher, 1773–1845, American architect, b Greenfield, Mass His Country Builder's Assistant was published in 1797 and The American Builder's Companion, with Daniel Reynard, in 1806. Both contained many architectural plates and passed through a number of editions. Benjamin built houses and churches in many New England towns, but his greater influence was through his books, which popularised the details of the Late Colonial style His later books, The Rudiments of Architecture (1814) and The Practical House Carpenter (1830), show more Greek design.

Benjamin, Judah Philip, 1811–84, Confederate statesman and British barrister, b. Christiansted, St Croix, Virgin Islands His family moved (c.1813) to Wilmington, N C., later lived at Fayetteville, N.C., and by 1822 had finally settled in Charleston, S.C. A precocious young man, Benjamin entered Yale at 14, but left (1827) under a cloud early in his junior year. He went to New Orleans in 1828, worked for a notary, taught English, and studied French and the law in his spare time. Admitted to the bar in Dec., 1832, he published (1834), with his friend Thomas Slidell, a digest of Louisiana appeal cases which enhanced his reputation as a rising young lawyer His practice soon made him wealthy enough to become a sugar planter as well. Benjamin, a prominent Whig, served in both branches of the state legislature, was a delegate to two state constitutional conventions, and in 1852 was elected to the U.S Senate On the dissolution of the Whig party because of the slavery issue, he publicly proclaimed himself a Democrat (May 2, 1856), and two years later he was reelected Senator One of the ablest defenses of Southern policy was presented in the Senate by Benjamin on Dec. 31, 1860 On Feb 4, 1861, after Louisiana's secession, he resigned his seat. In the new Southern government, Benjamin first served as attorney general, was appointed secretary of war in Nov., 1861 (he had been acting secretary since September), and from March, 1862, to the end of the Civil War was secretary of state Though not popular with the people, he was the intimate friend of Jefferson DAVIS and was known in the North as "the brains of the Confederacy " As secretary of war he was an able administrator, but was severely criticized—for the most part unjustly—for Confederate defeats early in 1862, particularly the loss of Roanoke Island, N C Davis, however, not only ignored strong demands that Benjamin be removed from the cabinet but promoted him to head the state department There he worked unceasingly but unsuccessfully to secure European recognition of the Confederacy In Feb, 1865, he proposed that slaves who willingly joined the Confederate ranks be freed On the collapse of the Confederacy, Benjamin escaped via Florida and the West Indies to England and there carved out a new career in the law He was called to the bar in 1866 and won immediate recognition with A Treatise on the Law of Sale of Personal Property (1868) On his retirement early in 1883, he was universally acknowledged to have been in the front rank of his profession He died and was buried in Paris, where his wife, a Louisiana Creole, and his daughter had made their home since the 1840s See biography by R D Meade (1943); B J Hendrick, Statesmen of the Lost Cause (1939)

Benjamin, Park, 1809–64, American editor and poet, a prominent sensational journalist of his day, b British Guiana As owner and editor of the New England Magazine, he merged it (1835) with the American Monthly Magazine of New York and became associate editor with C F Hoffman For a time he was literary editor of Greeley's New Yorker, but in 1839 he founded the New World, a weekly which ran until 1845. See biography by M M Hoover (1948)

Benjamin, Samuel Greene Wheeler, 1837–1914, American painter and author, b Greece, son of a missionary After graduation from Williams College, he attempted work in a library, then traveled extensively before establishing himself as a marine painter He wrote magazine articles on yachting and travel as well as on art He served (1883–85) as the first American minister to Persia and wrote two books on that country See his autobiography, Life and Adventures of a Free Lance (1914)

Benjamin-Constant, Jean Joseph, see CONSTANT, JEAN JOSEPH BENJAMIN

Benjamin of Tudela (tōōdā'lə), d 1173, Jewish traveler, b Tudela, Spain He traveled from 1159 to 1173, reaching China His account, Massaoth Schel Rabbi Benjamin, sheds light on the history of the Jews An English translation was published in 1840 as Itinerary of Benjamin of Tudela

Benkelman, village (pop 1,448), co seat of Dundy co, S Nebr., on the Republican near the Kansas line, in the Great Plains region, settled 1880. It is a trade center and has a fish hatchery

Benld (bĕnĕld', –ĕl') [for Ben L. Dorsey, founder], city (pop 2,444), SW Ill, NE of Alton, in a coal area, inc 1904

Benlliure y Gil, José (hōsā' bĕnlyōōr'ē ē hēl'), 1855–, Spanish history and genre painter, long a leader of the Spanish colony in Rome. Among his well-known paintings are The Swashbuckler, Valley of Jehosaphat, and Vision in the Colosseum His brother Mariano Benlliure y Gil (märēä'nō), 1862–, is a sculptor His portrait statues of GOYA, Ribera, and López del Haro are famous

Ben Macdhui or Ben Muich-Dhui (mäkdōō'ē), peak, 4,296 ft high, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in the Cairngorm mts, second highest peak in Scotland

Benmore Head or Fair Head, rocky promontory, 636 ft high, Co. Antrim, Northern Ireland

Bennet, Henry: see ARLINGTON, HENRY BENNET, 1ST EARL OF.

Bennett, Arnold (Enoch Arnold Bennett), 1867–1931, English novelist, b. Staffordshire. He was educated at the Univ of London and studied for the bar, he turned to journalism, however, and became editor of the magazine Woman, from which he resigned in 1900 to devote himself to his own writing. Bennett's best work is in the novels of the "Five Towns," the pottery-manufacturing district in which he was born The Old Wives' Tale (1908) and the trilogy Clayhanger (1910), Hilda Lessways (1911), and These Twain (1916) are naturalistic in style, building up a picture of the Five Towns in great detail. His lesser works include The Grand Babylon Hotel (1902); The Grim Smile of the Five Towns (1907), short stories, The Card, known in the United States as Denry the Audacious (1911), Riceyman Steps (1923), and Imperial Palace (1930). His writing for the stage brought forth two notable successes, Milestones (1912), written with Edward Knoblock, and Buried Alive (from which the moving picture Holy Matrimony was made), adapted from his novel written in 1923 See his journal (3 vols, 1932–33); Virginia Woolf, Mr Bennett and Mrs Brown (1924), an essay, biography by Dorothy Cheston Bennett (1935) and study by Georges Lafourcade (1939)

Bennett, Charles Edwin, 1858–1921, American classical scholar, b Providence, R I, grad Brown, 1878 After study at Harvard and in Germany he returned to the United States and from 1872 taught Latin at Cornell Univ His scholarly papers and his Syntax of Early Latin (2 vols, 1910–14) won him an international reputation, but his name was more widely known because of his textbooks, beginning with A Latin Grammar (1895) He also translated Horace and Frontinus

Bennett, Floyd, 1890–1928, American aviator, b near Lake George, N Y In 1925 he was assigned to accompany the Mac Millan expedition to NW Greenland as a member of the aviation detachment under Richard E Byrd With Byrd he made a number of notable flights from Greenland W over Ellesmere Land In 1926 Byrd and Bennett, the latter acting as pilot, made a nonstop flight from Spitsbergen to the North Pole and return, this being the first airplane flight over either pole. He was made second in command of Byrd's antarctic expedition and had taken charge of transportation arrangements when his career was cut short by death from pneumonia, contracted while flying to the relief of the stranded Bremen transatlantic flyers at Greenly Island See biography by his wife, Cora Bennett (1932)

Bennett, James Gordon, 1795–1872, American newspaper proprietor, b Keith, Scotland, educated at Blair's College, Aberdeen He came to America in 1819 and won a reputation as Washington correspondent of the New York Enquirer and later (1829–32) as assistant editor of the combined Courier and Enquirer He launched his New York Herald May 6, 1835, a new penny paper of four four-column pages His capital totaled $500 and his office was a Wall St cellar, yet in less than a year the paper sold almost 15,000 copies daily Bennett's innovations made the Herald a landmark in the history of American journalism in his brief editorials he criticized all political parties, he included new fields of news, notably that of Wall St finance, he played up crime and sensational news, he first (1838) established European correspondents for his paper, he first used the telegraph extensively in newspaper work, and he first used illustrations (drawings) for news articles The Herald's reputation for full and accurate news was at its height during the Civil War, when it spent $525,000 on war reporting See Oliver Carlson, The Man Who Made News James Gordon Bennett (1942).

Bennett, James Gordon, 1841–1918, American newspaper proprietor, b New York city, son of James Gordon Bennett (1795–1872) Educated mostly in France, Bennett in 1867 took over from his father the management of the New York Herald In 1867 also he founded the New York Evening Telegram as a separate venture For several decades he maintained the Herald's unrivaled reputation as a news gatherer In 1869–71 he financed Stanley's expedition into Africa to find David Livingstone, in 1879–81 he supported the ill-fated expedition of G W De Long to the arctic In international news and relations the Herald scored repeated triumphs Its staff of brilliant reporters was famous. After 1877 Bennett lived mostly in Paris, directing his newspapers by cable, and with John W Mackay he organized (1883) the Commercial Cable Company to handle European dispatches He established London and Paris daily editions of the Herald, the Paris paper was an unprofitable, sincere attempt to promote international good will Bennett was fond of sports, especially of yachting, and established the James Gordon Bennett cup as a trophy in international yacht races and similar cups for balloon and airplane races. See Don C. Seitz, The James Gordon Bennetts (1928).

Bennett, John Hughes, 1812–75, English physician and physiologist, M.D. Univ. of Edinburgh, 1837 He was professor at the Univ. of Edinburgh from 1843 to 1874 He described leukemia (1845) simultaneously with Virchow, advocated fresh-air treatment of pneumonia and the use of cod-liver oil in tuberculosis and other diseases, and wrote on medical subjects.

Bennett, Richard Bedford, 1870–1947, Canadian prime minister, b. Hopewell, N.B., educated at Dalhousie Univ. He represented Calgary in the House of Commons of the Canadian Parliament from 1911 to 1917 and served as minister of justice and attorney general in the first Meighen ministry (1921) and as minister of finance in the second Meighen ministry (1926) In 1927 Bennett succeeded Arthur Meighen as leader of the Conservative party; upon the defeat of the Liberals in 1930, he became prime minister At the imperial conference in London in 1930 he strongly urged a preferential tariff for the empire, at the conference held in Ottawa in 1932, over which he presided, his policy was partly adopted with the signing of 12 separate trade agreements of Great Britain with the dominions and of the dominions with one another With the defeat of his Conservative party in 1935, Bennett resigned as prime minister He was leader of the opposition until 1938, when he retired from politics and went to live in England In 1941 he was raised to the peerage as 1st Viscount Bennett of Calgary, of Mickleham, and of Hopewell

Bennett College see Greensboro, N C

Bennettsville, town (pop 4,895), co seat of Marlboro co, NE S C, NE of Columbia, laid out 1818 It is the trade and processing center for a cotton, tobacco, vegetable, and timber area and produces aircraft parts

Ben Nevis (bĕn'vĭs, nĕv'ĭs), peak, 4,406 ft high, Inverness-shire, Scotland, overlooking Glen Nevis, highest peak of Great Britain Ruins of an observatory are on the summit, from which there is an impressive view, especially on the northeastern side with its precipice of more than 1,450 ft

Bennewitz, Peter see Apianus, Petrus

Bennigsen, Rudolf von (rōō'dôlf fŭn bĕn'ĭksun), 1824–1902, German politician An ardent nationalist, he led the opposition in the Hanoverian parliament and in 1866 founded, with Eduard Lasker, the National Liberal party After 1871 he exercised considerable influence in the Reichstag and in the Prussian lower house

Bennington, town (pop 11,257), SW Vt, a co seat of Bennington co, chartered in 1749 as a New Hampshire town, the first W of the Connecticut, settled 1761 by Samuel Robinson It includes the villages of Bennington (pop 7,628), North Bennington (pop 992), and Old Bennington (pop 169) Old Bennington, now chiefly a resort village, was headquarters of the Green Mountain Boys A shaft over 300 ft. high commemorates the battle of Bennington (see Saratoga campaign) Other points of interest include the site of the first schoolhouse in Vermont, the site of William Lloyd Garrison's printing shop, the site of Catamount Tavern, meeting place of the Green Mountain Boys, marked by a sculptured catamount, Walloomsac Inn (1764), a historical museum, and the beautiful Old First Church (1806), restored in 1937 as a state monument Stoneware was made in Bennington from late in the 18th cent to late in the 19th cent, that produced by Christopher Fenton in the middle of the 19th cent is especially prized by collectors Bennington College (nonsectarian, for women), chartered in 1925 and opened in 1932, is at North Bennington It has a noted summer school of modern dance A leading experimental college, Bennington has self-dependent education without fixed general requirements The arts, literature, science, and social studies are featured In the winter there is a two-month field and reading period See John Spargo, The Bennington Battle Monument (1925) and The Potters and Potteries of Bennington (1926), B S Jones, Bennington College (1946)

Benno, Saint, d 1106, German prelate He was bishop of Meissen and an ardent supporter of Gregory VII against Henry IV, who had him deposed He was reinstalled on Gregory's death Luther was much displeased at the canonization (1523) of Benno St Benno is a patron of Munich Feast June 16

Beno (bē'nō) [Heb, =his son], Levite 1 Chron 24 26,27

Benois, Aleksandr Nikolayevich (ălyĭksän'dŭr nyĭkult'uvĭch bĕnŏā'), 1870–, Russian illustrator, scene designer, painter, and art critic He has written on Russian art He painted the scenery and wrote the scenarios for several ballets, of which Stravinsky's Petrouchka is the most important

Benoît de Sainte-More or Benoît de Sainte-Maure (bĕnwä' dŭ sĕt-môr'), fl 1175, French trouvère He was the author of the Roman de Troie, a romance in 301,000 verses based on Dares and Dictys. It became the source of medieval versions of the Trojan legend, notably the story of Troilus At the order of Henry II of England, Benoît undertook a rhymed Chronique des ducs de Normandie.

Benoni (bĕnō'nī) see Benjamin 1

Benoni, city (pop 74,170), S Transvaal, Union of South Africa, on the Witwatersrand. It is on a railroad and 16 mi E of Johannesburg There are heavy industries, including iron and brass foundries Benozzo di Lese. see Gozzoli, Benozzo.

Bensenville, village (pop. 1,869), NE Ill, NW of Chicago, in a truck-farm area, inc 1894.

Benson, Arthur Christopher, 1862–1925, English writer, educated at Eton and at Kings College, Cambridge, eldest son of Archbishop Benson He was a master at Eton (1885–1903) and at Magdalene College, Cambridge (1915–25) His writings include essays, From a College Window (1902) and The House of Quiet (1904), critical studies, and biographies of his father and brother Hugh See his Memories and Friends (1924)

Benson, Edward Frederick, 1867–1940, English novelist, educated at Cambridge, third son of Archbishop Benson His novel Dodo (1893), the heroine of which was believed to be Margot Tennant later Countess of Oxford and Asquith, was the first of a number of popular books, which included the series about "Lucia." His several autobiographical writings include Our Family Affairs (1920), As We Were (1930), and Final Edition (1940)

Benson, Edward White, 1829–96, archbishop of Canterbury, educated at Trinity College, Cambridge He was appointed the first bishop of Truro (1877), and in 1882 he became archbishop of Canterbury Three of his four sons made literary reputations—A C Benson, E F Benson, and Robert Hugh Benson See biography by A C Benson (1899)

Benson, Egbert, 1746–1833, American political leader, b New York city, M A King's College (now Columbia), 1768 Benson was a figure of much local importance in New York in the period of the American Revolution, the Confederation, and the early republic He was first state attorney general and was also a judge and a lawyer of some repute He served in the Continental Congress and the later Congress and adopted Federalist principles Benson founded the New York Historical Society

Benson, Frank Weston, 1862–, American etcher and painter In 1889 he became instructor of the school of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston Long a successful painter, Benson is represented in numerous museums and painted seven decorations in the Library of Congress He is best known as an etcher of highly popular sporting prints of ducks and duck hunting

Benson, Robert Hugh, 1871–1914, English writer and Roman Catholic priest, educated at Eton and at Cambridge, fourth son of Archbishop Benson He was converted to Roman Catholicism in 1903 and ordained the next year. In 1911, as a monsignor, he became privy chamberlain to Pope Pius X His novels include By What Authority? (1904) and The Queen's Tragedy (1905) He also wrote Confessions of a Convert (1913) See biographies by A C Benson (1915) and C. C Martindale (2 vols, 1916)

Benson, Stella, 1892–1933, English novelist, b Much Wenlock, Shropshire Her travels with her husband, John O'Gorman Anderson, are reflected in her writing Her books, widely read in America as well as in England, include Goodbye, Stranger (1926), Tobit Transplanted (1931, American title, The Far-away Bride, 1930), which won the Femina Vie Heureuse Prize in 1932, The Little World (1925) and Worlds within Worlds, travel sketches (1928), Hope against Hope (1931) and Christmas Formula (1932), short stories

Benson. 1 City (pop 2,729), co seat of Swift co, W Minn, on the Chippewa and E of Ortonville, platted 1870 for a railroad company, inc as a village 1877, as a city 1908 It is a shipping center for wheat, dairy products, and livestock 2 Town (pop 1,837), central N C, S of Raleigh, in a farm area, settled 1779, inc 1887 The town has lumber and cottonseed mills

Bent, Charles, 1799–1847, American frontiersman, b St Louis, educated at West Point He entered the fur trade of the Missouri and became one of the mountain men. His interests turned to the Southwest, and he led expeditions on the Santa Fe Trail Charles Bent was the senior partner of a trading firm that included Ceran St Vrain as well as William Bent and others of the seven Bent brothers The company was one of the most prominent on the frontier, and Bent's Fort was one of the most famous of American trading posts Because of his high standing, Charles Bent was chosen as governor of New Mexico after the American occupation in the Mexican War, but his great repute, bravery, and nobility of character did not prevent his being murdered at Taos in an uprising of Indians and Mexicans His wife was the sister-in-law of Kit Carson

Bent, James Theodore, 1852–97, English explorer and archaeologist, grad. Oxford, 1875 He studied local customs in the Aegean archipelago (1885–87) and engaged in archaeological research on the coast of Asia Minor (1888–89), the Bahrein Islands (1889), Cilicia Trachia (1890), Mashonaland (1891), Ethiopia (1893), and the Arabian peninsula (1893–97), where he mapped the Hadramaut region. He wrote The Ruined Cities of Mashonaland (1892), The Sacred City of the Ethiopians (1893), and Southern Arabia, Soudan, and Sokotra (1900)

Bent, William, 1809–69, American frontiersman, b St Louis One of the younger brothers of Charles Bent, he was for many years the manager of famous Bent's Fort, while Charles Bent lived mainly in Taos William Bent was one of the most widely known and highly respected traders in the West He greatly aided Stephen W. Kearny and Sterling Price in the conquest and pacification of New Mexico in the Mexican War. The generally accepted story says that with the decline of the Indian trade and the coming of the U S army, he tried to sell the fort to the U S government but, dissatisfied with the response of the government, blew it up Later he built a new fort farther down the Arkansas. After this was leased to the government in 1859, he became a rancher at the mouth of the Purgatoire river He is sometimes called the first permanent settler of Colorado bent grass, any species of the genus Agrostis, chiefly slender, delicate grasses, many of which are cultivated for pasture, hay, lawn, and turf purposes Important kinds of bent grasses include redtop (sometimes called herd's-grass or florin), much used for forage and pasture, creeping bent, a lawn and putting-green grass that becomes established in a short time when stolons are planted and is useful in acid soil, and Rhode Island bent, a lawn and pasture grass The cloud grass (Agrostis nebulosa) is cultivated for use as an EVERLASTING

Bentham, George (bĕn'thm), 1800–1884, one of the greatest of English systematic botanists, nephew of Jeremy Bentham He wrote Handbook of British Flora (1858) and (with Hooker) Genera Plantarum (1862–83) and handbooks on the flora of several British possessions

Bentham, Jeremy, 1748–1832, English philosopher, jurist, political theorist, and founder of UTILITARIANISM Educated at Oxford, he prepared for the law, which he practiced briefly before devoting himself to the scientific analysis of the forms and operation of political institutions His discerning analyses, which showed the influence of Helvétius, won him recognition throughout the Western world His greatest work was his Principles of Morals and Legislation (1789), of which a second part The Limits of Jurisprudence Defined, was first published in 1945 Bentham's philosophy stems from two principles, the associationist psychology and the ethics of utilitarianism From them he arrived at a deterministic position in which he argued that legislation could be devised to bring men to virtue Though he was no strong advocate of liberty his belief in equality led him to political democracy and opposition to imperialism Bentham generally sided with the employing group in his economics and ceased to be considered even mildly radical as the government absorbed his major positions Bentham's utilitarianism held that the greatest good of the greatest number is the primary goal of social ethics Good is identified with happiness and happiness with pleasure He argued that self-interest is harmonious with the interest of the group and that each person, in pursuit of his own happiness, should strive for that of all Among his close friends he counted his fellow utilitarian, James Mill Other works by Bentham were The Fragment on Government (1776), Defence of Usury (1787), and Theory of Punishment and Reward (1801), See C W Everett, The Education of Jeremy Bentham (1931)

Bentinck, Lord George (bĕn'tĭngk, –tĭk), 1802–48, English statesman, whose full name was William George Frederick Cavendish Bentinck A wealthy landowner, an important figure in the world of horse racing, and a member of Parliament from 1828, he entered political strife only when he felt that Sir Robert PEEL, in favoring repeal of the corn laws, had betrayed his party and his class He and Benjamin DISRAELI led the protectionists in the conservative group in their fight against repeal

Bentinck, William see PORTLAND, WILLIAM BENTINCK, 1ST EARL OF

Bentinck, Lord William Cavendish, 1774–1839, British statesman in India He served in the Napoleonic Wars and was (1803–7) governor of Madras Going out as governor general of Bengal in 1827, he became the first governor general of British India (1833) when the functions of his office were extended Bentinck courageously introduced reforms in the interests of the people, he opened offices to natives, fostered communication and education, revised the system of landholding, abolished suttee, and destroyed the dreaded Thugs. See biography by D C Boulger (1892)

Bentinck, William Henry Cavendish: see PORTLAND, WILLIAM HENRY CAVENDISH BENTINCK, 3D DUKE OF

Bentivoglio (bān'tēvō'lyō), Italian noble family, which struggled with other families for BOLOGNA most of the 15th cent Its greatest member was GIOVANNI II, who was lord—in fact if not in name—from 1462 until 1506, when Pope Julius II took Bologna. He held a splendid court and beautified his city Cardinal Bentivoglio was a member of the family

Bentivoglio, Guido (gwē'dō bān'tēvō'lyō), 1579–1644, Italian diplomat and historian, cardinal (after 1521) of the Roman Church He was papal nuncio to Flanders and to France His history of the war in Flanders is reliable, and his memoirs and letters vividly picture his times

Bentley, John Francis, 1839–1902, English architect. He is noted for his design of Westminster Cathedral (Roman Catholic), London, an original and imposing structure in the Byzantine style, with vast, unobstructed nave and tall campanile He died at Clapham, with his designs for a proposed cathedral in Brooklyn, N.Y , unfinished.

Bentley, Richard, 1662–1742, English critic and philologist He was largely responsible for the high standards of textual criticism in the work of his many followers, and he is generally considered the greatest of English classical scholars His exposure of a 2d-century forgery, The Epistles of Phalaris, is his most celebrated work See biography by R C Jebb (1882)

Bentley, William, 1759–1819, American Unitarian clergyman, b Boston, grad Harvard, 1777 From 1783 until his death he was pastor of East Church, Salem, Mass His Diary (4 vols , 1905 -14), covering 1784–1819, is a valuable historical source

Bentleyville, borough (pop 3,428), SW Pa , SE of Washington, laid out 1816, inc 1868

Benton, Thomas Hart, 1782–1858, American statesman, b Hillsboro, N C , studied briefly at the Univ of North Carolina He moved to Tennessee in 1809, was admitted to the bar in 1811, and served (1809–11) in the state senate In 1815 Benton pushed on to St Louis, where he became editor of the Missouri Enquirer, established a thriving law practice, and won political prestige He entered the U S Senate on Missouri's admission to the Union in 1821 and was four times reelected, serving to 1851 He was the first Senator to hold office that long In Tennessee, Benton had been a personal enemy of Andrew JACKSON, who was wounded in a frontier brawl with Benton and his brother Jesse, but Benton and Jackson were reconciled in 1824 Thereafter the Missouri Senator was one of Jackson's stoutest supporters and a power in the administrations of Jackson and Martin Van Buren He played one of the most prominent parts in the successful war on the BANK OF THE UNITED STATES A rigid "hard money" man (he delighted in the sobriquet "Old Bullion"), Benton had the ratio of silver to gold revised from 15 to 1 to 16 to 1 in 1834 and thus brought gold into circulation again Congress defeated his resolution requiring that the public lands be paid for in hard money only, but Jackson immediately legalized the idea in an executive order (1836), the famous Specie Circular, which Benton himself drew up All these currency measures benefited the common man and limited the unwarranted privileges previously enjoyed by the business community, which despised Benton as heartily as it did Jackson and Van Buren Benton also supported all legislation which favored the development of the West and aided settlers—reduction in the price of government lands, suppression of land speculation, westward removal of the Indians, and internal improvements He advocated government support of Western exploration, with which he was intimately connected through the expeditions of John Charles FRÉMONT, who married one of his four daughters, Jessie Benton FRÉMONT The Oregon country especially interested him, and he protested the joint occupation with Britain Yet he insisted that the 49th parallel (the line established) was the only boundary the United States could rightfully claim and deplored the Democratic campaign slogan of 1844—"Fifty-four forty or fight" As to Texas, although he had protested the 1819 treaty with Spain as one in which the United States gave up its rights to that region, he could not acquiesce in the intrigues which led to the annexation of Texas and the Mexican War Benton had early come to favor the gradual abolition of slavery, and with the ascendancy of the proslavery Democrats he naturally lost influence in the party His antislavery sentiments ran counter to majority opinion in Missouri at that time, and with his opposition to the proslavery features of the Compromise of 1850 he was defeated for a sixth term However, he returned to Congress as a U S Representative (1853–55), but, having voted against the Kansas-Nebraska Bill in 1854, he was again defeated for reelection In 1856 he was also defeated for the governorship of Missouri He compiled An Abridgment of the Debates of Congress from 1789 to 1856 (16 vols , 1857–61) and wrote the autobiographical Thirty Years' View (2 vols , 1854–56) Benton was a large man, physically and intellectually, with much personal charm Even his vanity was of such huge proportions that it was not resented See biographies by Theodore Roosevelt (1886), W. M. Meigs (1904), and J M Rogers (1905), A. M. Schlesinger, Jr , The Age of Jackson (1945)

Benton, Thomas Hart, 1889–, American painter, b Neosho, Mo , grandnephew of Sen Thomas Hart Benton and son of Congressman Maecenas E Benton Much of his youth was spent in Washington, D C At 15 he made sketches for the Joplin American In 1906 and 1907 he attended the Art Institute of Chicago and at 19 went to Paris, where he remained five years On his return to the United States, he designed movie sets, managed an art gallery, and continued to paint In 1918 he joined the navy During 1919 he traveled over the country making sketches of American types and occupations which later served him for his first mural commission at the New School for Social Research His work there, depicting phases of American industry, established his reputation Since then he has executed murals for the Whitney Museum, New York, the Indiana Building at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago (now in the Indianapolis War Memorial); the new Post Office Dept and Dept of Justice buildings, Washington, D C , and the Missouri statehouse in Jefferson City His easel paintings and lithographs are in many leading galleries Benton is noted for his dramatization of American themes and brilliant characterization of popular types His style is graphic, strong in color, and dynamic in its insistent use of rhythmic line He taught painting at Bryn Mawr, Dartmouth, the Art Students League, and the Kansas City Art Institute See his autobiographical An Artist in America (1937)

Benton. 1 City (pop 3,502), co seat of Saline co , central Ark , SW of Little Rock, founded c 1834 A railroad junction, it has furniture and pottery plants Bauxite mines are in the area A state hospital for nervous diseases is near by 2 City (pop 7,372), co seat of Franklin co , S Ill , inc 1841 It is a farm and coal-mining center 3 Town (pop 1,906), co seat of Marshall co , SW Ky , SE of Paducah It is in a rich farm area which grows principally strawberries, tobacco, and grain The Southern Harmony Singing Festival has been held here annually since 1884, "Tater Day," when farmers meet to buy their potatoes, is another yearly event 4 Town (pop 1,290), S Maine, bordered on the west by the Kennebec above Waterville and crossed by the Sebasticook, settled c 1775, inc 1842 as Sebasticook, renamed 1850

Benton Harbor, resort city (pop 16,668), SW Mich , on Lake Michigan at the mouth of the St Joseph and opposite St Joseph city, settled c 1840, inc as a village 1869, as a city 1891 Its temperate climate has made it the center of Michigan's fruit industry Canning and shipping of fruit and manufacture of metal products are important Mineral springs here have made Benton Harbor a popular health resort The House of David, a religious colony founded here in 1903, has numerous business and farm holdings Its rival, the Israelite City of David, is near by One of the city's landmarks is the municipal fruit market, said to be the nation's largest With St Joseph it has an annual Blossom Festival

bentonite see CLAY

Bentonville, city (pop 2,359), co seat of Benton co , extreme NW Ark , on the Ozark plateau, settled 1837 It ships poultry, dairy products, and apples from the environs and has hatcheries, feed mills, and a cheese factory Bella Vista, a resort, is near by, and mineral springs are in the area

Bent's Fort, one of the most noted trading posts of the American West, on the Arkansas river in present SE Colorado, E of Rocky Ford and La Junta and some miles above the mouth of the Purgatoire The trading company headed by Charles Bent and Ceran St Vrain, one of the most successful in the West, also included William Bent and two other Bent brothers They had their first post in the neighborhood in 1826 and settled upon this site in 1828 The fort, often called Bent's Old Fort, was completed in 1832 Because William Bent was the manager and chief trader in all the years of its prosperity, it is also sometimes called Fort William Within its adobe walls came all the famous mountain men of the later period, for the fort on the mountain branch of the Santa Fe Trail came to dominate the trade of all the Indian tribes S of the Black Hills—not to mention the trade of the Mexicans and the arriving Americans Kit Carson was a hunter here from 1831 to 1842 S W Kearny and Sterling Price each briefly used the fort for their troops in the Mexican War The generally accepted story says that the Indian trade fell off and William Bent attempted to sell the fort to the U S government, he reached no satisfactory conclusion and in anger abandoned the fort and set the powder in it on fire, partially destroying it In any case the fort was abandoned by 1852 William Bent erected a new establishment farther down the Arkansas in 1852 or 1853 This (Bent's New Fort) he leased to the government in 1859 It was soon afterward destroyed by flood and was replaced by a new army fort

Benue (bān'wā), river, c 870 mi long, N Nigeria, the chief tributary of the Niger It flows W from the French Cameroons to the Niger at Lokoja In the rainy season the lower course is navigable

Benwood, steel-manufacturing city (pop 3,608), W Va , in the Northern Panhandle near Wheeling, in a mining region; chartered 1853

Benz, Karl (bĕnts), 1844–1929, German engineer, credited with building the first automobile powered by an internal-combustion engine The car, driven in Mannheim in 1885 and patented in 1886, had three wheels, an electric ignition, and differential gears and was water-cooled See St J C. Nixon, The Invention of the Automobile (Karl Benz and Gottlieb Daimler) (1936).

benzaldehyde see ALDEHYDE.

benzedrine, drug used to stimulate the higher nerve centers, particularly the cortex of the brain. Because of its toxic effects and its stimulant action on the central nervous system, it should be used only on prescription.

benzene (bĕn'zēn, bĕnzēn') or benzol (ben'zōl,–zŏl), colorless liquid with a pleasant aromatic odor, boiling at 80.1°C. and solidifying at 5.48°C. It should not be confused with benzine, an entirely separate substance. Benzene is a compound of hydrogen and carbon, its molecule consisting of six atoms of each element with the carbon atoms arranged, according to Kekulé, in a hexagonal ring called the benzene ring or benzene nucleus To this ring are attached the six hydrogen atoms, one to each of the six carbon atoms This compound is the first in a series of aromatic hydrocarbons, called the benzene series, all of which are obtained by the destructive distillation of coal tar, as a by-product in the manufacture of coke, and each of which contains a benzene ring in its structural formula The other members of the series have in their molecules twice as many hydrogen atoms less six as there are carbon atoms Besides benzene the series includes TOLUENE, from which TRINITROTOLUENE (TNT) is derived, and XYLENE, a solvent Benzene is used in the manufacture of dyes and explosives and as a solvent for certain organic substances, such as fats and resins It is chiefly important because of substances derived from it Phenol, or CARBOLIC ACID, is formed when one hydroxyl (OH) group of atoms replaces one of the hydrogen atoms attached to the central benzene ring Phenol subjected to a series of nitrations (reactions resulting in the addition of nitrogen and oxygen) yields trinitrophenol, or PICRIC ACID Nitrobenzene, another derivative, when reduced yields ANILINE Benzene and the other aromatic hydrocarbons are widely used in the manufacture of many synthetic drugs and perfumes and of certain lacquers benzine (bĕn'zēn, bĕnzēn'), colorless, highly inflammable liquid It is used widely as a cleaning agent because of its power as a solvent for organic substances such as fats, oils, and resins and is used also in the preparation of certain dyes and paints It should not be confused with benzene Benzine is a mixture of hydrocarbons, chiefly those of the METHANE SERIES (or paraffin series) such as pentane and hexane It is obtained by the fractional distillation of PETROLEUM Its vapors, when mixed with air, are extremely explosive

benzoate of soda see SODIUM BENZOATE

Ben-zoheth (–zō'hĕth), Judahite 1 Chron 4 20

benzoic acid (bĕnzō'ĭk), solid, crystalline, organic ACID, melting at 122°C and boiling at 249°C It is used in medicine as an antiseptic, in the laboratory as the starting point for many organic syntheses, and commercially in the preparation of many dyes It is usually prepared commercially from toluene

benzoin (bĕn'zoin, –zōĭn), balsamic RESIN, the dried exudation from the pierced bark of various species of the benzoin tree (Styrax) native to Sumatra and Java, appearing as red-brown to yellow-brown tears Because of its fragrant odor it is used in perfumery and sometimes in incense The benzoic acid present in it gives it value in medicine as an antiseptic, a diaphoretic, and a stimulant and, in certain respiratory diseases, as an inhalant (see FRIAR'S BALSAM) Among the several varieties are Siam benzoin and Sumatra benzoin Siam benzoin is considered finer, since it has a high content of benzoic acid, Sumatra benzoin contains cinnamic acid

benzol see BENZENE

Beograd, Yugoslavia see BELGRADE.

Beon (bē'un) see BETH-BAAL-MEON

Beor (bē'ôr) [Heb ,=burning] 1 Father of Balaam Num 22 5 Bosor 2 Peter 2 15 2 Father of BELA 1

Beowulf (bā'ŭwōlf), oldest English epic, probably composed in the early 8th cent by an Anglian bard in the vicinity of Northumbria It survives in only one manuscript, written A D c 1000 by two scribes and preserved in the British Museum in the collection of Sir Robert Cotton The materials for the poem are derived mainly from Scandinavian history, folk tale, and mythology Its narrative consists of two parts the first relates the hero's successful fights with the water monster Grendel and with Grendel's mother, the second narrates Beowulf's victory in his old age over a dragon and his subsequent death and funeral at the end of a long life of honor These events take place entirely in Denmark and Sweden The poem contains a remarkable fusion of pagan and Christian elements and provides a vivid picture of old Germanic life It is written in a strongly accentual, alliterative verse For translations into modern English in the original verse form, see F B Gummere, The Oldest English Epic (1909) and C W Kennedy, Beowulf (1940), see also W W Lawrence, Beowulf and Epic Tradition (1928)

bequest. see WILL

Bera (bē'ra), king of Sodom Gen 14 2.

Berachah (bĕra'kŭ) [Heb ,=blessing] Beracah RV. 1 One who joined David at Ziklag 1 Chron 12 3. 2 Valley, N of Hebron, running roughly east-west. 2 Chron 20 26

Berachiah (bĕr"ākī'u), variant form of BERECHIAH.

Berachya ben Natronai ha-Nakdan see BEREKHIAH.

Beraiah (bĕr"ī'ŭ) [Heb ,=whom I created], Benjamite 1 Chron 8 21.

Béranger, Pierre Jean de (pyĕr' zhā' dŭ bārāzhā'), 1780–1857, French lyric poet ' He was a protégé of Lucien Bonaparte and numbered among his friends some of the most eminent men of his day His first collection of songs, published in 1815, was immediately popular For the republican views expressed in later poems he was twice imprisoned Successive collections of his verse appeared in 1821, 1825, 1833, and 1838 He owed his wide popularity largely to the fact that, like Burns, he fitted his verse to popular melodies, and as he used his poems largely to express republican and Bonapartist ideas, his influence was great Criticism is divided as to his rank as a poet, but Goethe and Heine admired him Some of his most popular pieces are "Le Roi d'Yvetot," "Ce n'est plus Lisette," "Le Grenier," and "Le Dieu des bonnes gens " See translations of his works by William Walsh (1889) and Béranger's autobiography (1857)

Berar, India see MADHYA PRADESH

Berat (bĕrät'), town (pop 11,872), S central Albania In a fertile district, probably on the site of ancient Antipatrea, it fell to the Serbs in 1345, and to the Turks in 1440 A citadel, rebuilt by the Byzantines in the 13th cent, overlooks the town, which has a 15th-century mosque and several old churches

Berbera (bûr'bŭrŭ), city (pop c 15,000), capital of British Somaliland, a port on the Gulf of Aden It was occupied in 1875 by the Egyptians and in 1884 by the British Berbers, aboriginal peoples of North Africa They inhabit the lands between the Sahara and the Mediterranean, from Egypt to the Atlantic coast The now extinct Guanches of the Canary Islands were related to them Except for the TUAREG, who are nomads, they are relatively simple agriculturists with warlike tendencies, living under a loose tribal organization in independent villages They have developed many local industries The native languages are of the Hamitic group, but many speak Arabic, the language of their religion, Islam Despite a history of conquests, they have retained a remarkably homogeneous culture, which, on the evidence of Egyptian tomb paintings, derives from earlier than 2,400 B C Their successful administration under French government has largely depended on the extent to which their own culture and regulations have been respected See D P Barrows, Berbers and Blacks (1927), C S Coon, Tribes of the Rif (1931).

Berbice: see GUIANA

Berceo, Gonzalo de (gônthä'lō dā bĕrthā'ō), 1180?–1247?, Spanish medieval poet, the earliest whose name is known in Spanish literature, b Berceo, a village of Castile A religious in a Benedictine monastery, he wrote many books, chiefly devotional in character and dealing with the life of saints His devotion for the Virgin is expressed in the 25 poems entitled Milagros de Nuestra Señora [miracles of Our Lady]

Berchem or Berghem, Nicolaes (or Claes) Pieterszoon (both nē'kōlas pē'tursōn bĕr'khum), 1620–83, Dutch painter and etcher He was particularly adept in rendering sunshine and atmospheric effects, and his landscapes were popular Rest, a typical example, is in the Metropolitan Museum

Berchem (bĕr'khŭm), industrial suburb (pop 44,491) of Antwerp, Belgium

Berchet, Giovanni (jōvän'nē bĕrkĕt'), 1783–1851, Italian patriot and poet He conspired to free Lombardy from Austria and was exiled He wrote stirring patriotic ballads of a romantic type and rhymed romances, such as Giulia and Matilde

Berchtesgaden (bĕrkh'tūsgn"dun), winter and summer resort (pop 5,752), S Bavaria, in the Bavarian Alps At the foot of the near-by Obersalzberg is the Berghof, Hitler's residence, which was the unofficial capital of the Third Reich Atop the mountain, connected with the Berghof by an elevator, was Hitler's private retreat

Berchtold, Leopold, Graf von (lā'ōpōlt graf fŭn bĕrkh'tōlt), 1863–1942, Austro-Hungarian foreign minister (1912–15) After the assassination (June 28, 1914) of Archduke FRANCIS FERDINAND at Sarajevo he directed the reckless policy which precipitated the First WORLD WAR Although Serbia made a conciliatory reply to his harsh ultimatum, Berchtold pressed for full acceptance, he probably even magnified a border incident in order to secure Emperor Francis Joseph's signature to the declaration of war on Serbia See S B Fay, The Origins of the World War (1928)

Berdichev (bĕrdyĕ'chuf), city (pop 66,306) W Ukraine Founded in 1482, it became a trade center in the late 18th cent and now has sugar refineries, tanneries, machine shops, and flour mills

Berdyaev, Nicholas (bĕrdyī'uf), 1874–1948, Russian Orthodox religious philosopher, b Kiev He early rejected the social and economic mores of his elders and espoused Marx's equalitarian views Berdyaev emphasized the supreme need of the human spirit to seek the suprasensual and God and the concomitant importance of eschatology in lending meaning to individual experience and to history " He was driven into exile from the USSR in 1922 Among his works are The End of Our Time (Eng. tr., 1933), The Destiny of Man (Eng. tr., 1937), Slavery and Freedom (Eng tr , 1943), and The Russian Idea (Eng tr., 1948)

Berdyansk see OSIPENKO, Ukraine

Berea or Beroea (both bĕrē'u), Greek name of three places mentioned in the Bible 1 Bivouac of the Syrian army, near Jerusalem 1 Mac 9 4 2 See VERGIA, Macedonia 3 See ALEP, Syria

Berea (burē'ŭ) 1 Town (pop 2,176), central Ky , SSE of Lexington, The Churchill Weavers here are noted for their hand-woven products Berea College (nonsectarian, coeducational), opened in 1855 by John G FEE as a school, was chartered in 1866 and became a college in 1869 The school owns and the students operate the town utilities, a press, a tavern, and various manufactories Crafts such as woodwork, weaving, sewing, and broommaking are taught, and the products sold The college provides extension services and an opportunity school for the mountain people of E Kentucky There are lower schools and a nursing school The campus includes extensive farm and forest lands See W G Frost, For the Mountains (1937) 2 City (pop. 6,025), NE Ohio, near Cleveland, settled 1809, inc 1850 Berea has stone quarries It is the seat of Baldwin-Wallace College (Methodist, coeducational, 1845)

Bereans or Beroeans (both burē'ŭnz) [Acts 17 10, 11], members of a religious sect, now almost extinct, formed in Scotland c 1773 Their name indicates their emphasis upon the Scriptures The founder was John BARCLAY, and his followers are sometimes known as Barclayites

Berechiah (bĕr"ukī'u) [Heb ,=God will bless] 1 Son of Zerubbabel 1 Chron 3 20 2 Father of MESHULLAM 5 3,4 Levites, perhaps the same person 1 Chron 9 16, 15 23 5 Important Ephraimite 2 Chron 28 12 6 Father of Asaph the psalmist 1 Chron 15 17 Berachiah 1 Chron 6 39 7 Father of Zechariah the Minor Prophet Zech 1 1,7 In Mat 23 35 the name Barachias is probably a textual insertion, for the Zechariah being referred to is almost certainly ZECHARIAH 2, not Zechariah the Minor Prophet

Bered (bē'rĕd) [Heb ,=hail] 1 Unidentified place, S Palestine Gen 16 14 2 See BECHER 2

Berekhiah ben Natronai ha-Nakdan (bĕrukī'ŭ bĕn nutrōnī' hänäk'dän), 12th or 13th cent , Jewish fabulist, biblical commentator, philosopher, grammarian, and translator His first name also appears as Berachya He is best known for his collection of fables in rhymed prose Another work attributed definitely to him is Sefer Masrif (Eng tr by Sir Herman Gollancz, The Ethical Treatises of Berachya, 1902)

Berengar II (bĕ'rĭng-gur), d 966, marquis of Ivrea In 950 he made himself and his son joint kings of Italy, but his great unpopularity and his designs on ADELAIDE brought about the intervention (951) of OTTO I of Germany Berengar swore fealty to Otto (952) Later, however, he ravaged Italy and intrigued with Pope JOHN XII against Otto, who captured and imprisoned him in 963

Berengaria (bĕ"rĭng-gā'rēu), d c 1230, queen consort of Richard I of England, to whom she was married in 1191 She was the daughter of Sancho VI of Navarre

Berengar of Tours (bĕ'rĭng-gūr), c 1000–1088, French theologian, also called Bérenger and Berengarius, b Tours He was archdeacon of Angers (c 1040–1060) He studied at Chartres and returned to Tours to become head of the cathedral school Berengar gradually evolved a dialectic concerning the Eucharist in which he held a nominalist viewpoint similar to that of ERIGENA, but he probably did not deny the Real Presence His denial of authority angered his contemporaries, particularly LANFRANC Berengar was defended by Pope GREGORY VII and Peter Damian He wrote a reply to Lanfranc, De Sacra Coena, which was condemned He was declared a heretic See A J Macdonald, Berengar and the Reform of Sacramental Doctrine (1930)

Berenice (bĕrunī'sē), fl c 325 B C , consort of Ptolemy I, king of ancient Egypt A Macedonian, she was the widow of one of the officers of Alexander the Great as well as half sister of Ptolemy and cousin of his wife Eurydice She accompanied Eurydice to Egypt and soon supplanted her in the affections of Ptolemy Berenice, whose portrait appears with that of Ptolemy on many medals, was the mother of Ptolemy II

Berenice, d 221? B C , queen of ancient Egypt. She was the daughter of King Magas of Cyrene Objecting to her mother's choice of a husband for her after her father's death, Berenice led a successful revolt and put her mother and her suitor to death She married Ptolemy III in 247 B C Legend has it that her hair, offered for her husband's safe return from war, became a constellation, Berenice's Hair (Coma Berenices) After her husband's death she was joint ruler with their son, Ptolemy IV, until he had her murdered Despite the murder, he had a special priestess in Alexandria appointed to honor her

Berenice, d 246 B C , queen of Antiochus II of ancient Syria, called Berenice Syra She was the daughter of Ptolemy II, and her marriage to Antiochus marked a temporary cessation in the wars between the Egyptian monarchs and the Seleucids. On the death of Antiochus II, however, Seleucus II, his son by Laodice, whom he set aside for Berenice, seems to have brought about (with his mother) the death of Berenice and her infant son before Berenice's brother, Ptolemy III, could arrive. New war resulted.

Berenice, fl. 6 B C , Jewish princess, daughter of Costobarus and Salome, sister of Herod the Great She was married to her nephew Aristobulus and bore him a son, Herod Agrippa I She was accused of having instigated the death of her husband at the hands of Herod the Great in 6 B C Later she married Theudion, the maternal uncle of Herod the Great After Theudion was put to death for plotting against Herod, she married Archelaus and settled in Rome

Berenice, d A D c 28, Jewish princess, daughter of Herod Agrippa^I She was very beautiful and consequently was involved in much intrigue. After her first husband died, she was married to her uncle Herod of Chalcis After his death she lived with her brother, Herod Agrippa II, causing some scandal Her third husband was Polemon, a king in Cilicia, whom she abandoned, returning to Herod Agrippa II. It was before her and Agrippa that Paul appeared at Caesarea In the struggle between Rome and Judaea both she and her brother espoused the Roman cause She attracted the attention of Titus, and after the destruction of Jerusalem he apparently planned to marry her. The great unpopularity of the Jews with the Romans forced him to withdraw from the match. This is the theme of Racine's Bérénice

Berenice, city of ancient Cyrenaica: see BENGASI

Berenice, city of ancient Egypt, on the Red Sea. It was founded by Ptolemy II and commanded the trade with Arabia

Berenson, Bernard (bĕ'rĭnsŭn), 1865–, American art critic, authority on Italian art, b Lithuania, grad Harvard, 1887 He lived near Florence, Italy, making frequent trips to America His publications include Venetian Painters of the Renaissance (1894), Lorenzo Lotto (1895), Florentine Painters of the Renaissance (1896), Central Italian Painters of the Renaissance (1897), Study and Criticism of Italian Art (3 series, 1901, 1902, 1915), Drawings of the Florentine Painters (1903), North Italian Painters of the Renaissance (1907), Venetian Painting in America (1916), Sunese Paintings (1918), Medieval Art (1930), and Aesthetics and History in the Visual Arts (1949)

Beresford, William Carr Beresford, Viscount (bĕr'ĭs-, -ĭz-), 1768–1854, British general He won popularity while serving in Egypt (1801–3) and participated in the capture of Cape Colony (1806) Under the orders of Sir Home POPHAM, he captured Buenos Aires (June 27, 1806), later he capitulated to Jacques de LINIERS Beresford occupied Madeira (1807) and for a time was governor of the island Joining Sir Arthur Wellesley (later duke of Wellington) in Portugal (1808), he successfully reorganized the Portuguese army and was prominent throughout the PENINSULAR WAR Returning to England, he entered politics and was master general of ordnance in Wellington's first cabinet from 1828 to 1830, when he retired

Beresford, city (pop 1,642), SE S Dak , S of Sioux Falls near the Iowa line It is a trade center in a grain and poultry region

Berezina (bĕrĕzē'nŭ), river, 365 mi. long, Belorussia. Rising near the Lithuanian border, it flows S past Borisov and Bobruisk into the Dnieper It is navigable for 330 mi The Beresina Canal (built 1798–1805) connects it with an affluent of the Western Dvina, thus linking the Baltic with the Black Sea Near Borisov took place (Nov 26–29, 1812) the heroic retreat across the Berezina of the remnants of Napoleon's Grand Army. Despite the loss of more than 20,000 men, the crossing—effected under heavy Russian attacks—saved Napoleon and his forces from capture.

Berg, Alban (äl'bän bĕrk'), 1885–1936, Austrian composer. In his Lyric Suite (1926) for string quartet, he employs the 12-tone technique invented by his teacher, Arnold SCHÖNBERG Berg's works have sometimes been received with the same violent demonstrations that have attended performances of some of Schönberg's music The opera Wozzeck (Berlin, 1925) attained considerable success, he left unfinished his highly erotic Lulu (Zurich, 1937) His Violin Concerto (Barcelona, 1936) was his last completed work Berg owes much to the Viennese romantic tradition There are lyricism and solidity of form in his works See Nicolas Slonimsky, Music since 1900 (1937); David Ewen, The Book of Modern Composers (1942).

Berg (bĕrk), former duchy, W Germany, on the eastern bank of the Rhine between the Ruhr and Sieg rivers Düsseldorf was its chief city. Originally a county, it passed (1348) to the dukes of JÜLICH and in 1380 was made a duchy On the failure of the Jülich line it passed (1524) to John III of Cleves (see CLEVES, DUCHY OF). In 1666 it was annexed by the Palatinate-Neuburg branch of the house of WITTELSBACH Ceded by Bavaria to France in 1806, Berg was raised to a grand duchy by Napoleon I in favor of Joachim Murat. The Congress of Vienna assigned (1815) the duchy to Prussia.

Bergamo (bĕr'gämō), city (pop. 73,584), capital of Bergamo prov , Lombardy, N Italy, picturesquely located in the Alpine foothills. Anciently a Gallic town, it was an independent commune in the 12th cent Later it came under the rule (1329–1427) of the VISCONTI and then of Venice until 1797, when it was included in the Cisalpine Republic Within the walls of the old hilltop town are the Romanesque cathedral (12th cent), the beautiful Renaissance Colleoni chapel, and the baptistery In the modern city on the plain below cotton, wool, and silk textiles are made. Bergamo, the birthplace of Donizetti, has a fine musical tradition bergamot (bûr'gəmŏt) [from Bergamo, Italy], citrus tree (Citrus bergamia) grown chiefly in Italy. From the rind of the bergamot orange is extracted an essential oil used in perfumes and eau de Cologne Various American plants of the mint family are called bergamot because of their bergamotlike fragrance Chief among these is Monarda fistulosa, or wild bergamot, closely related to the OSWEGO TEA, which it resembles The name bergamot is also applied to a variety of pear

Berge, Edward (bûr), 1876–1924, American sculptor He is noted for his graceful garden figures and fountains and for his public monuments which are to be seen in his native Baltimore and in Charleston, S C , and Prince George, Md His Pietà (St Patrick's Church, Washington, D C.) is characteristic of his more formal work

Bergen (bûr'gun, Nor bär'gün), city (pop 109,320), co seat of Hordaland co , SW Norway, on the Vagen (Nor Vågen=the bay) and on the Pudde Fjord—both inlets of the North Sea. It is the main shipping center and the second largest city of Norway Founded (c.1070) as Bjorgvin by Olaf III, Bergen soon prospered as an export center (handling chiefly codfish) and became the largest city of medieval Norway The Norwegian kings made it their main residence As an episcopal see and as seat of numerous monasteries it had cultural as well as economic importance Foreign, especially German, merchants acquired (13th and 14th cent) increasing trading privileges, and the HANSEATIC LEAGUE created (c 1350) one of its four great foreign establishments at Bergen The Hansa merchants, enjoying extraterritorial privileges, imposed their unpopular rule on the city until 1560 In 1395 Bergen was sacked by pirates. During the disturbances accompanying the Reformation most of the ancient churches and monasteries were destroyed The center of the city was rebuilt after a severe fire in 1916 In the Second World War the German naval installations were heavily bombed Bergen is built on a high promontory, guarded by two fortresses Its ancient buildings are mostly restorations, these include Haakon's Hall, a 12th-century palace, the cathedral (13th cent), a 12th-century church; and the Rosenkrantz Tower (16th cent.), which overlooks the formerly walled Hanseatic quarter Bergen has a university and several scientific institutes and museums Its theater, founded by Ole Bull, gained international importance through its association with Ibsen and Bjornson. Edvard Grieg was born here

Bergen, N J . see JERSEY CITY

Bergenfield (bûr'gunfēld), borough (pop 10,275), NE N.J , NE of Hackensack, inc 1894 Its Old South Church was built in 1799

Bergen op Zoom (bĕr'gun ŏp zōm'), municipality (pop 28,234) and town, North Brabant prov., SW Netherlands, a commercial and fishing port on the Eastern Scheldt (an arm of the North Sea) Once strongly fortified, it was repeatedly besieged by the Spanish and the French in the wars of the 16th–18th cent and by the English in 1814 There are several ancient buildings, notably the town hall (14th cent), a 15th-century church (Groote Kerk), and the Markiesenhof palace

Berger, Victor Louis, 1860–1929, American Socialist leader and Congressman, b Austria-Hungary After study at the universities of Budapest and Vienna, he came (1878) to the United States and settled in Milwaukee After 1892 he devoted himself to Socialist politics and journalism, editing the Milwaukee Vorwärts! (1892–98) and a weekly which became (1911) the influential Milwaukee Leader. In opposition to the policies of Samuel GOMPERS and the A F of L he, with Eugene V DEBS, pioneered in creating the American Socialist party His leadership brought (1910) the Socialists control of Milwaukee for many years and made him the first Socialist member of Congress (1911–13) Reelected twice (1918, 1919), he was twice excluded by Congress on grounds of sedition, for which he was sentenced to a 20-year prison term The decision was reversed by the U S Supreme Court in 1921 He was allowed to take his seat when reelected in 1922 and continued in the House until his death Voice and Pen (1929) is a collection of his speeches and editorials.

Bergerac, Cyrano de see CYRANO DE BERGERAC.

Bergerac (bĕrshürăk'), town (pop. 17,014), Dordogne dept., SW France, in PÉRIGORD, on the Dordogne. Bergerac processes wines and luxury foods.

Bergerat, Émile (Auguste Émile Bergerat) (ōgüst' āmēl' bĕrshürä'), 1845–1923, French journalist and dramatist. In addition to many articles for Figaro under the pseudonym Caliban, he wrote the plays La Nuit bergamasque [Bergamasque night] (1887), Le Capitaine Fracasse (1896), and La Fontaine de jouvence [the fountain of youth] (1906), Souvenirs d'un enfant de Paris (1911–13); and a biography (1877) of Gautier, his father-in-law.

Bergey, David Hendricks (bûr'gē), 1860–1937, American bacteriologist, b. Montgomery co , Pa , M.D. Univ. of Pennsylvania, 1884. He was associated with the Univ. of Pennsylvania from 1896 until his retirement in 1932 In 1931 he became director of research in biology for the National Drug Company. He wrote Handbook of Practical Hygiene (1899) and The Principles of Hygiene (1901) and was chairman of the editorial committee for the Manual of Determinative Bacteriology, first published in 1923 and revised at intervals

Bergh, Christian (bûrg), 1763–1843, American shipbuilder, b. near Rhinebeck, N Y. He opened a shipyard on the East River in New York city and there built a number of vessels for the U.S. navy His ships, especially the frigate President, gained fame in the War of 1812, and after the war he built some of the swiftest packet ships on the sea

Bergh, Henry, 1811–88, American philanthropist, son of Christian Bergh. In 1866 he founded the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the first such organization in the country He later succeeded in having passed a state law for the protection of animals In 1875 Bergh helped Elbridge T GERRY establish the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children See Zulma Steele, Angel in Top Hat (1942).

Berghem, Nicolaes Pieterszoon: see BEECHEM, NICOLAES PIETERSZOON

Bergholz (bûr'gōlz), village (pop 1,122), E Ohio, NW of Steubenville; settled 1885, inc 1906

Bergius, Friedrich (frād'rĭkh bĕr'gēōōs), 1884–1949, German chemist. As chairman of the board of the Holshydrolyse Aktiengesellschaft he contributed to the synthetics (ersatz) industry He devised processes for transforming bituminous coal into liquid fuel (by hydrogenation under high pressure) and wood into sugar (by hydrolysation of cellulose with concentrated hydrochloric acid) With Carl Bosch he shared the 1931 Nobel Prize in Chemistry, awarded to them for their work in devising and developing chemical high-pressure processes for producing essential products

Bergman, Torbern Olof (tôr'bürn ōl'lôv bĕr'yümän), 1735–84, Swedish chemist, physicist, and naturalist A professor at the Univ. of Uppsala from 1758, he developed a theory of chemical affinity, made improvements in the methods of chemical analysis (especially blowpipe analysis) and in the classification of rocks, and did important research in crystallography He wrote A Dissertation on Elective Attractions (1775, Eng tr , 1785). His collected works, Essays, Physical and Chemical, appeared in six volumes (1779–81, Eng tr , 1791)

Bergmann, Ernst von (ĕrnst' fun bĕrg'män), 1836–1907, German surgeon, b Riga He became professor at the Univ of Berlin in 1882 He contributed to the modern practice of asepsis in surgery by introducing (1886) steam sterilization of instruments and dressings

Bergognone see BORGOGNONE

Bergson, Henri (äNrē' bĕrgsôN'), 1859–1941, French philosopher He became a professor at the Collège de France in 1900 Bergson devoted some time to politics and, after the First World War, took an interest in international affairs He is well known for his brilliant and imaginative philosophical works, which won him the 1927 Nobel Prize in Literature. Among his works which have been translated into English are Time and Free Will (1888), Matter and Memory (1896), Laughter (1901), Introduction to Metaphysics (1903), Creative Evolution (1907), The Two Sources of Morality and Religion (1935), and The Creative Mind (1934). Bergson's philosophy is dualistic—the world contains two opposing tendencies, life and matter Life climbs, creates, and is the dynamic élan vital which struggles for richness and complexity through and beyond matter Matter is clinging and clogging, the congealed results of creation, and is ever moving downgrade in the dissipation of eroding natural law Men know matter through the intellect which is, in fact, attuned to matter as a tool for handling it Intellect sees matter in extended geometrical space and in divisible marked-off time It formulates the doctrines of science and sees things as entities set out as separate units within the stream of becoming Set above intellect is intuition which derives from the instinct of lower animals. Intuition gives us an intimation of the life force which pervades all becoming. Intuition perceives the reality of time—that it is duration directed in terms of life and not divisible or measurable Duration is demonstrated by the phenomena of memory. See H. W. Carr, The Philosophy of Change (1914); H. M. Kallen, William James and Henri Bergson (1914), Ben-Ami Scharfstein, Roots of Bergson's Philosophy (1943).

Bergstrand-Poulsen, Elisabeth (bĕr'yûstrănd-poul'sun), 1887–, Swedish artist and writer Her paintings hang in several Swedish museums Since 1926 she has written and illustrated a number of books which depict provincial life Among her books are The Crown (1937, Eng tr., 1939) and Man and the Hells (1939)

Berhampore (bûr'ŭmpôr'), town (pop 41,558), N West Bengal state, India Here occurred the first uprising in the Sepoy Rebellion of 1857

Berhampur (bûr'ŭmpŏor') town (pop 43,536), SE Orissa state, India Silks and sugar are the principal products

Beri (bā'rī) [Heb ,=my fountain], Asherite 1 Chron 7 36

Beriah (bĕr'ŭ). 1 Son of Asher, eponym of the Berites Gen 46 17, Num 26 44,45, 1 Chron 7 30 2 Son of Ephraim 1 Chron 7 23 3 Benjamite 1 Chron. 8 13,16 4 Levite 1 Chron 23 10,11

beriberi (bĕ'rĭbĕ'rē), disease of malnutrition, common in the Orient and more widespread in the Western Hemisphere than was formerly supposed The disease, which affects the nervous system and causes damage to many organs, may in extreme cases result in paralysis and death It is caused by an unbalanced diet with a low vitamin B content In the Orient, individuals who developed beriberi after a monotonous diet of polished rice were cured on being fed the rice polishings A properly balanced diet containing the whole grain of rice, wheat, or corn will prevent the symptoms of the disease Treatment consists of the administration of vitamin B, orally or by injection

Bering, Vitus Jonassen (vē'tŏos yō'nasŭn bā'rĭng), 1681–1741, Danish explorer in Russian employ. Called to command in the Russian navy, he resigned in 1724 but was persuaded by Peter I in 1725 to accept an appointment to explore far NE Siberia Having finally got men and supplies across Siberia, Bering in 1728 sailed N through Bering Strait but sighted no land and did not recognize the importance of the strait Later in 1728, setting out from Kamchatka, he was driven from his course and discovered the southern route around Kamchatka He returned to St Petersburg, arriving in 1730 Bering then drew up a large scheme of exploration, which was supported by the government Under his general command various units (such as one under Dmitri Laptev) of a huge expedition set out to map the far reaches of the Siberian arctic regions Much was accomplished, but at great expense and with no immediate prospects of profit Bering himself headed an expedition across the sea to Alaska In 1741 he commanded the St Peter while Aleksey Ilich Chirikov (d 1748) commanded the St Paul They set out, rounded Kamchatka, founded the town of PETROPAVLOVSK, and then went west The vessels were separated Bering himself sighted the St Elias Mts in Alaska on July 16, and the scientist Georg Wilhelm Steller led a landing party on a small island Bering then sailed W past the Aleutian Islands The weather was bad and almost all the crew had scurvy when the ship was wrecked on the shore of Bering Island, which they took to be the coast of Kamchatka There on Dec 8 Bering died The few survivors of his crew patched up a small vessel from the St Peter and managed to reach Kamchatka in the summer of 1742 The St Paul under Chirikov had also sighted land and had halted on the way westward at one of the Aleutian Islands, possibly Attu He reached Kamchatka in Oct , 1741 See F A Golder, Bering's Voyages (2 vols , 1922–25, Vol II is a translation of Steller's journal), L H Stejneger, Georg Wilhelm Steller (1936)

Bering Island (bĕr'ĭng, bâr'-, bĕr'-), off Kamchatka, extreme NE Asiatic RSFSR, in the Bering Sea, largest of the Komandorski Islands The low, treeless island has an area of more than 600 sq mi and a population of some 600. Vitus Bering was wrecked and died here

Bering Sea, area c 878,000 sq mi , northward extension of the Pacific Ocean between Siberia and Alaska It is screened from the Pacific proper only by the Aleutian Islands With the Arctic Ocean it is connected by Bering Strait. The warm Japan Current has little influence on Bering Sea, which has much ice; it can usually be traversed only after late May (Bering Strait can be traversed only after late June) The sea has various islands, notably NUNIVAK, SAINT LAWRENCE, Hall, St Matthew, and the PRIBILOF ISLANDS (all owned by the United States) and the KOMANDORSKI ISLANDS (owned by the USSR) It was explored by the Russian Deshnev in the 17th cent , but not until after the voyages of Vitus Bering (1728, 1741) was the fur-seal wealth of the Bering Sea made widely known The whole region was under the control of the Russian American Company (see ALASKA), but it proved impossible to prevent mariners from other nations from getting the skins of the seals and the sea otters. The question of protecting the seals became in 1886 the subject of a bitter international incident called the Bering Sea Fur-Seal Controversy. The seal herd that summered in the Pribilof Islands wintered farther south, when returning north in the spring they could be taken in the open sea. This pelagic (open-sea) sealing, practiced by Canadian and other sealing vessels, greatly reduced the herd and threatened its extinction The Alaska Commercial Company, which had a U S monopoly on the sealing, protested, and in 1886 several Canadian vessels were seized and were condemned by a court at Sitka. The legal basis for such action was the claim that Russia had controlled all the Bering Sea and that the control had gone to the United States with the purchase of Alaska This was not accepted by the British, and a move to settle the matter of protection by international agreement was blocked by the Canadians The matter was referred to a court of arbitration, which, meeting in Paris, declared in 1893 against the U S. claim, damages were paid to the owners of the seized vessels It was obvious, however, that regulation of the sealing was necessary, and it was arranged under international agreement In 1911 by an agreement of Great Britain, Russia, Japan, and the United States pelagic sealing was forbidden altogether and sealing in the Pribilofs was put completely under U S supervision. For several years it was halted altogether, and then it was resumed under careful restrictions The herd has been built up again The sea otter is, however, almost extinct, the 1911 agreement forbade killing sea otters altogether

Bering Strait, water lane between extreme NE Asia and extreme NW North America It connects the Arctic Ocean and the Bering Sea and varies in width (generally c 50 mi) The Diomede Islands are in the strait The narrowness of the strait makes it possible for small boats to cross from the tip of Siberia to Seward Peninsula in Alaska, the usual theory is that the American Indians came thus to America Vitus Bering traversed the strait in 1728 without knowing that he had passed between the continents

Berites (bĕ'rīts). see BICHRI

Berith (bĕ'rĭth), abbreviation of BAAL-BERITH

Berkeley, George (bâr'klē, bûr'-), 1685–1753, Irish philosopher and clergyman Educated at Trinity College, Dublin, he became a scholar and later a fellow there He knew Jonathan Swift well and became acquainted with the philosophy of John Locke Most of Berkeley's important work in philosophy was done in his younger years His New Theory of Vision (1709), the Treatise concerning the Principles of Human Knowledge (1710), and the famous Dialogues (1713) are among his more important works. He progressed rapidly in the English church At considerable personal sacrifice he organized a movement to establish a college in the Bermudas to convert the American Indians, going to Rhode Island in 1728 to wait for promised support This support never came, and after three years in the colony he returned to England He was made bishop of Cloyne in 1734 Berkeley in his philosophy went beyond Locke, who had argued that such qualities as color and taste arise in the mind while primary qualities of matter such as extension and weight have existence independent of the mind Berkeley held that both types of qualities are known only in the mind and that therefore there is no existence of matter independent of perception (esse est percipi) The observing mind of God makes possible the continued apparent existence of material objects God arouses sensations in us in a regular coherent order Selves and God make up the universe Berkeley felt that his argument constituted a complete disproof of atheism He demonstrated that qualities, not things, are perceived and that the perception of qualities is relative to the perceiver See E C Graham Optics and Vision the Background of the Metaphysics of Berkeley (1929), John Wild, George Berkeley (1936), Frans Bender, George Berkeley· Philosophy Reexamined (1946)

Berkeley, John, 1st Baron Berkeley of Stratton, 1602–78, English army officer and courtier He fought in numerous royalist engagements, and later through association with the duke of York (later JAMES II) won great political advancement. In 1661 he was appointed lord president of Connaught for life, in 1664 he was made one of the proprietors of NEW JERSEY, and in 1670 he became lord lieutenant of Ireland

Berkeley, Miles Joseph, 1803–89, English botanist and authority on fungi and plant pathology He contributed much to the knowledge of the fungus pests of several crop plants

Berkeley, Sir William, 1606–77, colonial governor of Virginia, was educated at Oxford He was knighted in 1639, appointed governor in 1641, and arrived in Virginia in 1642 Berkeley defeated the Indians and the Dutch, extended explorations, and encouraged agriculture, but so persecuted dissenters that many of them left the colony An uncompromising royalist, he made Virginia a haven for supporters of Charles I and declined to recognize the Commonwealth Berkeley was deposed by a Puritan force from England in 1652 and lived quietly on his Virginia plantation until the Restoration in 1660, when he was reappointed governor. Supported by the small aristocratic planter class of the tidewater, he became a tyrant The people, deprived of a voice in the government, might have continued to bear injustices had not Berkeley declined to defend them against Indian attacks. Apparently he was more concerned with protecting his large financial interests in the fur trade than with safeguarding lives on the frontier At any rate his stupid and arrogant negligence brought on BACON'S REBELLION. He was soon restored to power after Bacon's premature death Berkeley's vindictive hanging of many of Bacon's followers has been compared to the Bloody Assizes of the following decade The executions were carried out in defiance of a royal commission which had arrived with pardon for all except Bacon Universally despised, he finally yielded to the commission's order that he return to England, where he died discredited See T J Wertenbaker, Virginia under the Stuarts, 1607–1688 (1914)

Berkeley (bûrk'lē) 1 City (pop 85,547), W Calif , on the eastern shore of San Francisco Bay and NE of San Francisco Originally part of the Rancho San Antonio granted to the Peralta family in 1820, the site was bought in 1853 by Americans The city was incorporated in 1878 In 1923 it adopted the council-manager form of government Berkeley is a suburban and educational center, with various industries It is the seat of the Univ of California (see CALIFORNIA UNIVERSITY OF), Armstrong College, several divinity schools, and state schools for the deaf and the blind It has a fine aquatic park and yacht harbor 2 City (pop 2,577), E Mo , west suburb of St Louis, inc 1937

Berkeley Springs, town (pop 1,145), co seat of Morgan co , W Va , in the agricultural Eastern Panhandle, NW of Martinsburg, chartered 1776 as Bath, still its official name The warm springs which have made the town a health resort from colonial days are in a state park, the site of a sanatorium Glass sand is mined here

Berkey, Charles Peter (bûr'kē), 1867–, American geologist, b Goshen, Ind , grad Univ of Minnesota (B S , 1892, Ph D , 1897) He taught at Columbia Univ from 1903 to 1939 A specialist in geology as applied to engineering, he served as geologist of the Port of New York Authority, as consulting engineer of the U S Bureau of Reclamation, as consulting geologist for the New York Board of Water Supply (from 1906), and as geologist in many engineering projects From 1922 he was chief geologist on the Central Asiatic Expeditions of the American Museum of Natural History

Berkhampstead or Berkhamsted, Hertfordshire, England see GREAT BERKHAMPSTEAD

Berkley 1 Town (pop 1,130), SE Mass , S of Taunton, settled 1638, inc 1755 2 City (1940 pop 6,406, 1947 special census pop 12,358), SE Mich , northwest suburb of Detroit, inc as a village 1924, as a city 1932

Berkman, Alexander, 1870?–1936, anarchist, b Vilna (then in Russian Poland) He came to the United States c 1887 At the time of the Homestead, Pa , strike (1892) Berkman attempted to kill Henry Clay Frick but succeeded only in wounding him He served 14 years of a 22-year sentence imposed for this attack His association with Emma GOLDMAN, begun before his imprisonment, was resumed after his release In 1917 they were arrested for obstructing the draft and in 1919 were deported to Russia Disappointed in his hope of finding under the Bolshevist government the freedom which he sought, Berkman left Russia and in various European cities supported himself by translation He died in Nice, a suicide His writings include Prison Memoirs of an Anarchist (1912), The Bolshevik Myth (1925), The Anti-Climax (1925), and Now and After the A B C of Communist Anarchism (1929)

Berkshire (bark'shĭr, -shur, bûrk'-) or Berks (bârks, bûrks), inland county (725 sq mi , 1931 pop 311,453, 1948 estimated pop 391,290), S central England The county town is Reading Berkshire lies almost entirely in the basin of the Thames, which forms its northern boundary It is largely agricultural, and its most productive regions are the Vale of the WHITE HORSE and the Kennet valley Chalk downs extend across the center of the county Dairying is important, and Berkshire hogs are famous Berkshire has been a transportation artery from the time of the Romans Great modern motor highways run west from London through Berkshire Anciently part of the kingdom of Wessex, the county was the birthplace of King Alfred There are remains of medieval abbeys at Abingdon and Newbury At Windsor, in the eastern end of the county, is the famous castle, chief residence of the English monarchs for many centuries See the Victoria History of Berkshire (4 vols , 1906–24), Arthur Mee, Berkshire (1939)

Berkshire (bûrk'shĕr), town (pop 1,156), N Vt , on the Missisquoi at the Canadian line, settled 1792, inc 1795 or 1796

Berkshire Hills, region of wooded hills with many streams and small lakes, Berkshire co , W Mass The Berkshires are part of the TACONIC MOUNTAINS, but the name is used loosely, referring sometimes to all the highlands in W Massachusetts, sometimes to that portion separated from the main range of the Taconics by a valley. The hills are dotted with resorts and country homes North Adams, Pittsfield, Great Barrington, Lenox, and Stockbridge are among the towns in the area Mt GREYLOCK is the highest point, the Housatonic and the Westfield are the chief rivers See Federal Writers' Project, The Berkshire Hills (1939), Roderick Peattie, ed , The Berkshires (1948)

Berkshire Symphonic Festival, summer music festival, held since 1937 at "Tanglewood," a former estate near the center of LENOX, Mass , but mostly in adjoining Stockbridge town The Berkshire Festivals were begun in 1934 at a farm in Stockbridge, and Henry Hadley conducted for two summers an orchestra composed largely of members of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony In 1936 Serge Koussevitsky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra took over the festival The music shed at Tanglewood, designed by Eliel Saarinen, was opened in 1938 In 1940 a summer school, the Berkshire Music Center, was begun in combination with the festival See M A De Wolfe Howe, The Tale of Tanglewood (1946)

Berle, Adolf Augustus, Jr. (bûr'lē), 1895–, American lawyer, b Boston, Mass , grad Harvard, 1913, and Harvard Law School, 1916 In the First World War he was an army intelligence officer in the Caribbean area Berle went with the American commission to negotiate peace with Germany He returned to practice law in New York and later lectured at the Harvard School of Business and Columbia Univ School of Law As a specialist in corporation law and finance, he became a member of F D Roosevelt's Brain Trust. In 1933 he was sent as financial adviser to the American embassy in Cuba Later (1934–37) he was chamberlain of New York city In 1936 Berle was a delegate to the inter-American conference at Buenos Aires, and from 1938 to 1944 he was Assistant Secretary of State After serving (1945–46) as ambassador to Brazil, he resumed his professorship at Columbia Univ

Berlichingen, Götz von (gûts' fŭn bĕr'lĭkhĭng-n), c 1480–1562, German knight and adventurer He was known as Gotz of the Iron Hand because, having lost his right hand at the siege of Landshut (1504), he bore an iron one in its place A soldier of long and varied experience, he was a leader of the rebellious peasants in the PEASANTS' WAR Later he served against the Turks and the French His memoirs inspired Goethe's drama, Götz von Berlichingen (1773), a rugged product of the STURM UND DRANG era in German literature

Berlin, Irving, 1888–, American composer of over 1,000 popular songs, b Russia His surname was originally Baline Alexander's Ragtime Band (1911), not strictly ragtime, was Berlin's outstanding song hit In 1918, while he was in the army, he wrote, produced, and acted in Yip, Yip, Yaphank, which was given by an army cast and which he rewrote in 1942 as This Is the Army He has written songs for many successful musical comedies, including the Ziegfeld Follies, and for moving pictures, beginning with Top Hat (1935). See biography by Alexander Woollcott (1925).

Berlin, Ont see KITCHENER

Berlin (bûr'lĭn', bûrlĭn', Ger bĕrlēn'), city (1939 pop , 4,321,521, 1946 pop 3,199,938), former capital of Germany and of Prussia, N Germany, in Brandenburg (from which it is administratively separate), on the Spree and Havel rivers The incorporation (1912, 1920) of neighboring towns (notably Charlottenburg and SPANDAU) and communities gave it an area of 344 sq mi , including extensive forests and lakes Until its virtual destruction in the Second World War, Berlin was the second largest city of Europe and the political, industrial, financial, commercial, and cultural center of Germany, with a large inland port Textiles and clothing, chemicals, electrical machinery, and publishing were among its chief industries The major communications center of Central Europe, it has SIX railroad stations. The chief airfield is at Tempelhof A suburban railroad system and an underground railroad system facilitate internal communication Berlin took its origin from two Wendish villages, Berlin and Kölln, which were chartered in the 13th cent and merged in 1307 It assumed importance as a Hanseatic town and became the residence of the electors of Brandenburg (after 1701 kings of Prussia) in the late 15th cent After the ravages of the Thirty Years War, Frederick William, the Great Elector, restored and improved the city. Occupied in the Seven Years War by Russian and Austrian troops (Oct , 1760) and in the Napoleonic Wars by the French (1805), Berlin emerged from both conflicts as a center of German national feeling and an increasingly serious rival of Vienna From the 18th and early 19th cent date the few distinguished monuments and buildings of the city (chiefly by Andreas SCHLÜTER and Karl Friedrich SCHINKEL), near-by POTSDAM became famous as the favorite residence of Frederick II The Revolution of 1848 against King Frederick William IV was weathered with little bloodshed In 1866 Berlin became the seat of the North German Confederation The capital of the German Empire after 1871, Berlin prospered and expanded rapidly, but the German collapse of 1918 brought on a period of social and political unrest After the establishment (Nov , 1918) of a Socialist government, Berlin was the scene of the abortive uprising of the communistic SPARTACUS PARTY (Jan., 1919) and of the conservative putsch of 1920 (see KAPP, WOLFGANG). In the following years inflation and unemployment, along with the reckless profiteering of a few speculators, created a favorable climate for the rise of extremist groups of the right and the left The crisis year of 1929 was preceded by a brief recovery. Berlin at that time was a brilliant, cosmopolitan, avant-garde center of the arts, literature, and music. The accession (1933) of the National Socialist government brought a sudden end to these activities Berlin was repeatedly bombed from the air by the Allies in the Second World War, but the heaviest destruction was caused by the Russian artillery barrage of unprecedented intensity which accompanied the capture (April 28, 1945) of the city by Marshal Zhukov. At the POTSDAM CONFERENCE of 1945 Berlin was divided into four occupation zones The Russian sector (pop 1,175,979) comprises largely the workers' district (in the east) and the center of Berlin The American sector (pop 989,598) and the British sector (pop 605,588) occupy the southern districts, including Tempelhof, the southwestern and western residential sections, and the Tiergarten (a park, not to be confused with the zoological garden) The French sector (pop 428,773) is in the northwest A joint Allied military government (Kommandatura) and a city government were set up The Allied Control Council for GERMANY was also installed in Berlin Political friction between Russia and the three Western powers soon impeded the functioning of the Kommandatura and of the city government, Berlin became increasingly split into two distinct administrations After imposing (April 1, 1948) stringent restrictions on the railroad and highway traffic linking the Western sectors with the Western occupation zones of Germany, the Russian authorities left the Kommandatura on June 15 and on June 24 stopped all railroad and highway traffic into Berlin from the West Ostensibly the reason was a conflict over the introduction (June 18 and 23) of separate Western and Eastern currencies The Western powers, foremost among them the United States, began to supply their sectors by a constant stream of airplanes flying through three narrow air "corridors" left open by the Russian authorities The Berlin airlift continued throughout the summer of 1949 until the blockade was lifted after a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers Through their tremendous and costly effort, the Allies thus succeeded in maintaining their position in Berlin and in demonstrating the firmness of their purpose The physical destruction of Berlin extends to almost every building, and whole quarters have been wiped out The buildings along the best-known thoroughfares, Kurfurstendamm and Unter den Linden, are severely damaged The Brandenburg Gate, terminus of Unter den Linden, still stands, but the near-by governmental buildings, notably the chancellery, where Hitler presumably committed suicide, were gutted The REICHSTAG building remains gutted since the historic fire of 1933 Among the undamaged buildings is the Marienkirche, begun in the 13th cent , with a pulpit by Schlüter The Hohenzollern palace, largely by Schlüter, was heavily damaged The Univ of Berlin, founded in 1810, was reopened after the war The contents of the famous Kaiser Friedrich Museum were saved but scattered

Berlin (bûr'lĭn) 1 Industrial town (pop 5,230), central Conn , SSW of Hartford, settled 1686, inc 1785 Tools and metal products are made here 2 Town (pop 1,435), Eastern Shore, Md , SE of Salisbury, in a farming area, settled in the early 19th cent It has fruit-tree nurseries and textile and food-processing plants Stephen Decatur was born here Near by are the training grounds for thoroughbred horses where War Admiral was trained 3 Rural town (pop 1,057), E central Mass , near Wachusett Reservoir, settled 1665, inc 1784 4 City (pop 19,084), NE N H , in the White Mts at falls of the Androscoggin, settled 1821, inc as a town 1829, as a city 1897 In heavily forested country, it early became a center of pulp and paper milling The city is a winter sports center, the first ski club in the United States was organized here Near by are a municipal airport and a government fish hatchery 5 Borough (pop 1,753), SW N J , SE of Camden, inc 1927 6 Borough (pop 1,602), SW Pa , SE of Somerset, settled c 1769 by Germans, laid out 1784, inc 1833. Maple sugar is produced here 7 Town (pop 1,111), Washington co , central Vt , just S of Montpelier 8 City (pop 4,247), central Wis , W of Oshkosh and on the Fox, in a farm area, inc 1857

Berlin, Congress of, 1878, called by the signatories of the Treaty of Paris of 1856 (see PARIS, CONGRESS OF) to reconsider the terms of the Treaty of SAN STEFANO which Russia had forced on the Ottoman Empire earlier in 1878 Great Britain and Austria-Hungary were the powers most insistent on revision, Russia submitted the treaty to revision only after war was threatened and Bismarck had offered to mediate as "honest broker " He was chairman of the congress Disraeli represented Great Britain; Count Andrassy, Austria-Hungary, Waddington, France; Alexandr M. Gorchakov, Russia, Count Corti, Italy; and Alexander Karatheodori, Turkey. The agreements reached in the Treaty of Berlin and the accompanying British-Turkish pact deeply modified the Treaty of San Stefano. Montenegro, Serbia, and Rumania were recognized as independent states; Rumania, however, was forced to cede S Bessarabia to Russia in return for the less favored Dobruja. Bulgaria was divided into N Bulgaria, a principality under nominal Turkish suzerainty, Eastern RUMELIA, to be governed, with certain autonomous rights, by a Christian appointee of the Porte, and Macedonia (including Adrianople), under unrestricted Turkish sovereignty. BOSNIA AND HERCEGOVINA, original cause of the Russo-Turkish war of 1877–78, were assigned to Austria-Hungary for administration and military occupation In Asia, Russia acquired Ardahan, Batum, and Kars from Turkey Cyprus passed to Great Britain through a separate agreement, and Crete was promised constitutional government Other provisions included an important rectification of the Greco-Turkish boundary, the demilitarization of the lower Danube, and the protection of the Armenians and other religious minorities in Turkey See C D Hazen, W R Thayer, and R H Lord, Three Peace Congresses of the 19th Century (1917)

Berlin Decree, decree issued in Berlin by Napoleon I, Nov 21, 1806, in answer to the British blockade Claiming that the British blockade of purely commercial ports was contrary to international law, Napoleon retaliated by declaring the British Isles under blockade and forbidding any trade to or from them The Berlin Decree initiated the CONTINENTAL SYSTEM

Berliner, Emile (bûr'lĭnur), 1851–1929, American inventor, b Hanover, Germany He came to the United States in 1870 In 1877, the year after Bell invented the telephone, Berliner invented the loose-contact telephone transmitter (which also serves as a radio microphone) The rights were transferred to the Bell Company, with which Berliner became identified His other major invention was the disc record, the groove varying in width and direction, rather than in depth as in Edison's cylindrical record On the basis of this patent and Berliner's invention for the duplication of records in quantity, the business of the Victor Talking Machine Company was built Berliner was also a pioneer worker on the helicopter In 1901 he instituted an educational program to make public the dangers of raw milk He was responsible for the Washington Milk Conference in 1907 See F W. Wile, Emile Berliner (1926).

Berlin Pact see AXIS

Berlioz, Louis Hector (lwē' ĕktôr' bĕrlēōz'), 1803–69, French romantic composer, whose ideas of orchestral coloring influenced many later composers He abandoned medical study to enter the Paris Conservatoire as a composition student In 1830 his cantata Sardanapale won the Prix de Rome and his Symphonie fantastique received its first performance in Paris During the next decade in Paris he wrote the symphonies Harold in Italy and Romeo and Juliet, the opera Benvenuto Cellini, and the Requiem In 1842–43 he toured Germany successfully and later made concert appearances in Austria, England, Germany, and Russia His outstanding dramatic works are the dramatic legend, The Damnation of Faust (1846), sometimes given as an opera, and the two-part opera The Trojans, first given in its entirety (1890) in Karlsruhe and successfully revived after 1920 Some of his works are scored for large masses of instruments, not only for loudness but for richness of tone color even in delicate passages He had many impetuous love affairs and was twice married, first to Harriet Smithson, Irish actress He was librarian, but never a professor, of the Paris Conservatoire He wrote newspaper criticisms as well as his interesting memoirs (rev ed , 1935) His treatise on instrumentation (1843) was widely recognized as a text See biographies by W J Turner (1934) and J H Elliott (1938), studies by Ernest Newman (1905), Romain Rolland (1915), and T S Wotton (1935), Jacques Barzun, Berlioz and the Romantic Century (1950)

Bermondsey (bûr'mundsē), metropolitan borough (1931 pop 111,542; 1948 estimated pop 60,410) of S London, England, on the south bank of the Thames It is a district of workmen's residences, factories, docks, and wharves

Bermuda (bûrmū'du), British crown colony (21 sq mi , 1946 estimated pop 34,965), comprising a group of some 300 coral islands (of which about 20 are inhabited), c 650 mi SE of North Carolina. The capital is HAMILTON on the largest island, Bermuda (or Great Bermuda) Smaller islands are Somerset, Ireland, and St George. Discovered in 1515 by the Spaniard, Juan de Bermúdes, the islands were uninhabited until a group of colonists under Sir George Somers was wrecked there in 1609 This wreck was known to Shakspere when he wrote The Tempest Long called Somers Islands, they were at first governed by a chartered company but were acquired by the crown in 1684.[1] Climate, scenery, charm, and luxurious semitropical vegetation have made the Bermudas a year-round resort The population is about 60 percent Negro With no industries, Bermuda's revenues come from tourists, customs receipts, and exportation of bananas, vegetables, lily bulbs, and flowers As a result of the Second World War, automobiles have been permitted, and the United States, acquiring a 99-year lease, has built a naval and air base See W B. Hayward, Bermuda, Past and Present (1923), Hudson Strode, The Story of Bermuda (1932), R. J Wilhams, Bermudiana (1937)

Bermuda grass, one of the most important pasture grasses (Cynodon dactylon) common in warmer regions of both hemispheres Bermuda is the standard pasture in the S United States It is heat- and drought-resistant and will grow in almost any soil that is not too wet or shady, often becoming a weed It may be grown from seed or by rootstocks

Bermuda Hundred, fishing village, SE Va , on the peninsula at the confluence of the Appomattox with the James NNE of Petersburg, founded 1613 In the Civil War the Union Army of the James was bottled up here after its defeat at Drewrys Bluff, May 16, 1864

Bern (bûrn, Ger bĕrn) or Berne (Fr bĕrn), canton (2,658 sq mi , pop 728,916), Switzerland, the most populous of the country It comprises three sections—the Bernese Alps or Oberland [Ger , highlands] with many peaks, including the Finsteraarhorn and Jungfrau, the Mittelland [midlands], in the northern foothills of the Alps, and the Seeland [lake country], in the northwest, including Biel and the Bernese Jura Agriculture, cattle raising, dairying, and tourist trade are the chief means of livelihood in the Oberland and the Mittelland, the Seeland is industrialized, producing mostly watches The population is predominantly Protestant and—except in the Jura—German-speaking The history of the canton is largely that of its capital, Bern or Berne (pop 130,331), which is also the capital of Switzerland Situated on the Aar river in the center of the canton, it was founded (1191) by Berchtold V of Zähringen as a military post and made (1218) a free imperial city by Emperor Frederick II when Berchtold died without issue Bern grew in power and population and in 1353 joined the Swiss Confederation, of which it became the leading member Its conquests, including Aargau (1415) and Vaud (1536), besides numerous smaller territories, were governed until 1798 by an autocratic urban aristocracy Bern accepted the Reformation in 1528 The secularization of convents and monasteries increased the city's wealth When, during the French Revolutionary Wars, Switzerland was invaded (1798) by the French, Bern was occupied, its treasury pillaged, and its territories dismembered At the Congress of Vienna (1815), Bern failed to recover Vaud and Aargau, but received the Bernese Jura (the former bishopric of Basel) A liberal constitution was adopted in 1831, and in 1848 Bern became the capital of the Swiss Confederation It is the seat of numerous international agencies, notably the Universal Postal Union (since 1875), the International Telecommunication Union (since 1869), and the International Copyright Union (since 1886) The city is largely medieval in its architecture, with arcades, fountains, a 15th-century cathedral, and numerous historic buildings An elaborate medieval clock tower and a pit in which bears (Bern's heraldic animal for seven centuries) are kept are well known to tourists Modern buildings include the federal palace, museums, and the university (founded 1834)

Bernadette, Saint (bûrnădĕt'), 1843–79, French girl, who claimed to see the Virgin Mary in apparitions at a grotto near Lourdes, her home, in 1858 Her name was Bernadette Soubirous After years of unpleasantness at the hands of the curious, the skeptical, and the powerful, she was allowed to enter a convent at Nevers (1866) She was canonized in 1933 Feast April 16 See Frances Parkinson Keyes, The Sublime Shepherdess (1940), Franz Werfel, The Song of Bernadette (1942)

Bernadotte, Count Folke (fōl'kŭ bĕrnădŏt', bûr'nudŏt), 1895–1948, Swedish internationalist, nephew of King Gustavus V As president of the Swedish Red Cross, he sought in 1945 to negotiate an armistice between Germany and the Western Allies In 1948 he was appointed United Nations mediator in Palestine He was suspected by the Jews of favoring British interests, and members of an extremist gang assassinated him in Jerusalem He was succeeded as mediator by Ralph Bunche Bernadotte wrote The Curtain Falls (1945) and Instead of Arms (1948)

Bernadotte, Jean Baptiste Jules see Charles XIV (Sweden)

Bernanos, Georges (zhôrzh' bĕrnanōs'), 1888–1948, French novelist and political writer Three novels, Sous le soleil de Satan (1926, Eng tr , The Star of Satan, 1940), La Joie (1929, Eng tr , 1946), and Journal d'un curé de campagne (1936, Eng tr , The Diary of a Country Priest, 1937), reflect deep mysticism and study of spiritual life A Roman Catholic, Bernanos considered monarchy insurance against materialistic greed His political writings include Les Grands Cimetières sous la lune (1938, Eng tr , A Diary of My Times, 1938), repudiating the Spanish civil war, and Lettre aux Anglais (1942, Eng tr , Plea for Liberty, 1944).

Bernard, Saint: see Bernard of Clairvaux, Saint, and Bernard of Menthon, Saint For the two Alpine passes, see Saint Bernard

Bernard VII, d 1418, count of Armagnac, constable of France As father-in-law of Charles d'Orléans he was the actual head of the Armagnac faction (see Armagnacs and Burgundians) and from 1415 to 1418 was the virtual ruler of France His oppression of the Parisians caused the betrayal of Paris to John the Fearless of Burgundy, in the massacre that followed Bernard was killed

Bernard, Claude (klōd' bĕrnar'), 1813–78, French physiologist He turned from literature to medicine, working in Paris under Magendie and teaching at the Collège de France and at the Sorbonne One of the great scientific investigators, he is known as the founder of experimental medicine because of his work on the digestive processes (especially the discovery of the glycogenic function of the liver and of the action of pancreatic juice) and on the vasomotor mechanism He is the author of An Introduction to the Study of Experimental Medicine (1865, tr by H C Greene, 1927) See studies by Sir Michael Foster (1899) and J M D Olmsted (1938)

Bernard, Sir Francis (bûr'nurd), 1712–79, British colonial governor He was educated at Oxford and was in 1737 called to the bar As colonial governor of New Jersey (1758–60), he did much to promote colonial solidarity and to build defense in the French and Indian War Transferred to the governorship of Massachusetts, he lost early popularity there because he felt it his duty to enforce the Stamp Act and other laws the colonists found objectionable In 1769 he was recalled to England An amateur architect, he was the designer of Harvard Hall at Harvard Univ

Bernard, Joseph Antoine (zhōzĕf' atwan' bĕrnar'), 1866–1931, French sculptor, b Vienna, son of a stonemason He studied in Lyons and Paris and worked in Rodin's studio He is best known for his simple and monumental works in stone Characteristic is his monument to Servetus in Vienna

Bernardes, Diogo (dyō'gō burnar'dĭsh), c 1530–c 1596, Portuguese poet A follower of Sá de Miranda, he wrote smooth-flowing bucolic verse, notable for sweet melody, and became one of the chief poets of the Renaissance in Portugal He was official poet on the tragic expedition that ended at Alcacer-Kebir, and later he was given a pension by Philip II of Spain

Bernardin de Saint-Pierre, Jacques Henri (zhăk' ăNē' bĕrnardĕ' du sĕ-pyĕr'), 1737–1814, French naturalist and author He was a friend of Rousseau, by whom he was strongly influenced His chief work, Études de la nature (1784), sought to prove the existence of God from the wonders of nature, it is rich in descriptive passages, and it added to the French language specific color terms and plant names From it was taken the prose idyll, Paul et Virginie (1788), which achieved the great success of the larger work and was made into an opera set to music by Victor Massé

Bernardine of Siena, Saint (bûr'nurdĭn, sēĕn'ă), 1380–1444, Italian preacher He was a Franciscan of the Observant congregation He was one of the most effective and most widely-known preachers of his day His popular, lively sermons still make good reading He was vicar general of his congregation, and he refused ecclesiastical preferment repeatedly St Bernardine was one of the great promoters of devotion to the Holy Name of Jesus His principal companion was St John Capistran Feast May 20

Bernardo del Carpio (bĕrnar'dō dĕl kär'pyō), hero of medieval Spanish legend Supposedly the nephew of Alfonso II, he strove against that king and others to secure his father's release from prison Many stories were told of him, and the Spanish made of him a counterpart and opponent of the French Roland and even the slayer of Roland at Roncesvalles

Bernard of Clairvaux, Saint (klârvō'), 1090?–1153, French churchman, Doctor of the Church, b Fontaines, near Dijon, of noble family He entered the abbey of Cîteaux (1112) taking along 4 brothers and 25 friends In 1115 he headed the band sent to found a house at Clairvaux There he remained abbot all his life, in spite of many efforts to move him higher A holy life, a reputation for miraculous cures, and unusual eloquence made Bernard renowned, and he became the most powerful influence in France and, in time, in all Western Europe. It was he who led the long struggle to seat Innocent II, the canonically elected pope, and persuaded Lombardy to accept Emperor Lothair II (1130–38) He procured the condemnation of Abelard and Arnold of Brescia (1140 or 1141), and he preached the Second Crusade (1146) He was the adviser of popes, especially of his friend Eugene III The abbot's fame greatly benefited the Cistercians, thus in his lifetime 68 houses were founded out of Clairvaux alone He was tireless in journeys to make peace, and he would undertake any mission of charity, however arduous or apparently trivial, thus he stopped a wave of pogroms in the Rhineland (1146), and he repeatedly saved luckless peasants from the powerful. St Bernard's works have had wide influence They consist of about 330 sermons, some 500 known letters, and 13 other prose works, or "treatises," some of which were originally letters or sermons His style, strong and eloquent, full of biblical allusions, intensely personal and direct, has gained him the name the Mellifluous Doctor Among his sermons the series of 86 on the Canticles have been favorites The treatises include On the Steps of Humility and Pride (c 1125, tr by G B Burch, 1940), Apologia (c 1125), an influential attack on monastic laxity, particularly at Cluny, On the Love of God (c 1127, tr by T L Connolly, 1937), a masterpiece on contemplation, On Grace and Free Will (c 1127, tr by W W Williams, 1920), important in the history of theology, On Conversion (1140, tr by W W Williams, 1938), a long, severe sermon to Parisian students, Against Abelard (1140), Life of St Malachy (c 1149, see Malachy, Saint), and finally, on the duties of a pope, a masterpiece called On Consideration (1149–1152? tr by George Lewis, 1908) A number of nonauthentic or doubtful works, including 15 hymns (among them Jesu, dulcis memoria, "Jesus, the very thought of Thee"), bear St Bernard's name He was canonized in 1174 Feast Aug 20 See biographies by E Vacandard (1927, in French) W W Williams (two 1935, 1944), and A J Luddy (1937), Étienne Gilson, The Mystical Theology of Saint Bernard (Eng tr , 1940)

Bernard of Cluny (klōō'nĭ) or Bernard of Morlaix (môrlā'), fl 1150, French Cluniac monk, of English parentage He wrote De contemptu mundi [on contempt for the world], a poem in 3,000 hexameters On it Horatio Parker based his oratorio Hora novissima, and from it John Mason Neale drew the words of Jerusalem the Golden

Bernard of Menthon, Saint (mătŏ'), 11th cent , Savoyard churchman, founder of the Alpine hospices of Saint Bernard His life was spent working among the people of the Val d'Aosta He is patron of mountaineers Feast May 28

Bernardston, rural town (pop 954), N Mass , on the Falls River, permanently settled 1738, inc 1762 It was an early outpost against Indians

Bernardsville, borough (pop 3,405), N N J , SW of Morristown, settled early 18th cent , inc 1924

Bernauer, Agnes (bĕrnou-ûr), d 1435, German heroine Daughter of a baker of Augsburg, she was secretly married to the son of a duke, and his father, enraged, caused her to be drowned Greif, Hebbel and others have dramatized the story

Bern Convention see COPYRIGHT

Berne, Switzerland see Bern

Berne, town (pop 2,075), NE Ind , near the Ohio boundary SSE of Fort Wayne, settled 1840 by Swiss, inc 1887 A milk company is here

Berners, John Bourchier, 2d Baron (bou'chur, bûr'nurz), 1467–1533, English diplomat and man of letters, who spent many years in France His literary work includes translations—Froissart's Chronicles (2 vols , 1523–25), Huon of Bordeaux (1534?), said to have furnished Shakspere with scenes for A Midsummer Night's Dream, and The Golden Book of Marcus Aurelius (1535, from a French version of Guevara's work), a forerunner of the euphuistic school

Berners, Bernes, or Barnes, Juliana (bûr'nurz bărnz), fl early 15th cent , supposed English author according to tradition the prioress of Sopwell convent, Hertfordshire A conjectural biography has been built up, but nothing is actually known of her life To her is attributed a popular treatise on hunting in The Book of Saint Albans (1486, 2d ed , printed by Wynkyn de Worde, 1496) See facsimile edition (with introduction by William Blades, 1881)

Bernese Alps see Bern

Bernhardi, Friedrich von (frē'drĭkh fŏn bĕrnhar'dē), 1849–1930, German general and military writer His book, Germany and the Next War (1912, Eng tr , 1914) was widely publicized by the Allies as an example of Pan-Germanism and German ambition

Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar (säks'-wī'mar, zăksevī'mĕr), 1604–39, Protestant general in the Thirty Years War Under Mansfeld and the margrave of Baden, Bernhard fought against the emperor He served in the Netherlands and later allied himself (1631) with Gustavus Adolphus, after whose death at Lutzen (1632) he took command Bernhard was made joint commander of the army of the Heilbronn Union In 1633 he was rewarded with the newly created duchy of Franconia His capture of Regensburg (1633) made him the hero of the Protestant West In 1634 he suffered a crushing defeat at Nordlingen Bernhard and his army were taken into French pay in 1635 Victories at Breisgau and Breisach (1638) brought him control over Alsace and the Upper Rhine A dispute with the French arose over Bernhard's claim to Breisach and was unsettled at Bernhard's sudden death

Bernhardt, Sarah (bûr'hart, Fr bĕrnar'), 1844–1923, stage name of Rosine Bernard, French actress of Jewish descent, b Paris Her parents embraced the Catholic faith She was brought up in a convent until she was 13, when she entered the Paris Conservatoire, at 17 she made an unsuccessful debut at the Comédie Française. Her first successes were at the Odéon as Cordelia in King Lear and as the queen in Hugo's Ruy Blas in 1867, and she added to her stature as Zanetto in Coppée's Le Passant in 1869 In the title role of Racine's Phèdre in 1874 and as Doña Sol in Hugo's Hernani in 1877, her portrayals were superb; by this time the "divine Sarah," as Oscar Wilde called her, had made her name. The queen of the French stage in romance and classic tragedy, she began (1880) the tours which brought her to all of Europe, England, and the United States in such plays as Adrienne Lecouvreur, La Dame aux Camélias, and Froufrou She was long associated with the works of Sardou, who often patterned his plays for her, and she starred in his Fédora, Théodora, and La Tosca from 1883 to 1893 She managed the Théâtre de la Renaissance in 1893, appearing there in Lemaître's Les Rois, Sardou's Gismonda, and Rostand's La Princesse lointaine, and in 1899 she leased the Théâtre des Nations, renamed it Théâtre Sarah Bernhardt, and appeared there in Rostand's L'Aiglon and in the title role of Hamlet In 1912 she appeared in the silent moving pictures La Dame aux Camélias and Queen Elizabeth Her leg was amputated in 1914, but her career continued She wrote L'Aveu (1888), a play, and her memoirs (Eng tr , 1907) See biographies by Jules Huret (1899), Sir George Arthur (1923), Basil Woon (1924), G G Geller (1934), Maurice Baring (1934), and Louis Verneuil (1942)

Berni, Francesco (frănchā'skō bĕr'nē), 1497?–1535, Italian humorous poet, a priest He was noted for his burlesque capitoli, light, often ribald verses in terza rima He revised Boiardo's Orlando Innamorato, adding humorous touches and what he considered stylistic improvements For many years Berni's version of Boiardo was the only one used, but now it is generally discarded

Bernice (bûr'nēs, burnēs'), another form of the name Berenice Bernice has been commonly used in English-speaking countries in modern times

Bernice (bûr'nēs, burnēs'), town (pop 1,071), N La , NW of Monroe, settled 1841, inc 1899 It has cotton gins and sawmills

Bernicia (bûrnĭ'shu), Anglian kingdom Established in 547, it later extended from the Tees to the Forth In the late 6th cent. it was united with Deira to form Northumbria

Bernie, city (pop 1,160), SE Mo , SE of Poplar Bluff, inc 1908 It has cotton gins

Bernierville (bĕr'nyĕvĭl) or Saint Ferdinand (sĕt fĕrdēnā'), village (pop 1,638), SE Que , W of Thetford Mines, in an area of farms and dairies

Bernina (bĕrnē'na), Alpine mountain group on the Swiss-Italian border, culminating in the Piz Bernina (pēts) (13,295 ft) The Bernina pass, 7,645 ft high, from the Upper Engadine Valley, Switzerland, to the Valtellina, Italy, is crossed by a road (built 1842–65) and a railroad (built 1907–10)

Bernini, Giovanni Lorenzo (jōvan'nē lōrĕn'tsō bĕrnē'nē), 1598–1680, Italian architect and sculptor, a commanding figure of the baroque period In the adornment of the great elliptical piazza in front of St Peter's Church with superb flanking colonnades four rows deep (1629–67), he produced a masterpiece To him are due the striking bronze baldachin beneath the dome in St Peter's, the royal staircase in the Vatican, and two extravagantly baroque fountains in the Piazza Navona, Rome Bernini's most noted sculpture is the group of Apollo and Daphne in the Borghese Gallery at Rome See Sir Reginald Blomfield, Sir Architects (1935)

Bernoulli or Bernouilli (both bĕrnōōyē'), name of a family distinguished in scientific and mathematical history The family, after leaving Antwerp, finally settled in Basel, Switzerland, where it grew in fame

Jacob, Jacques, or James Bernoulli (shăk'), 1654–1705, became professor at Basel in 1687 He was the first to use the word integral in solving Leibnia's problem of the isochronous curve He wrote an important treatise on the theory of probability (1713) He discovered Bernoulli's numbers He was succeeded at Basel by his brother, Jean, Johann, or John Bernoulli (shă, yō'hăn), 1667–1748, who was famous for his work in the field of integral and exponential calculus His collected works were published under the title Johannis Bernoulli opera omnia His son, Daniel Bernoulli (dănyel'), 1700–1782, was a mathematician and a physician He solved a differential equation proposed by Riccati, today the equation is known as Bernoulli's equation In his work Hydrodynamica (1738), he advanced the kinetic theory of gases and fluids He wrote several mathematical and medical works

Bernstein, Eduard (ā'dōōărt bern'shtīn), 1850–1932, German socialist From 1872 he was actively associated with the Social Democratic party In 1878 he left Germany because of antisocialist legislation and spent over 20 years in exile, chiefly in England In 1898 he aroused great discussion among German socialists by his criticisms of Marxist theories, denying the inevitability of intensification of the class struggle and world revolution. Returning to Berlin in 1901 he became the leader of revisionism, opposed by Kautsky The most important of his several books setting forth criticisms of Marxism is Evolutionary Socialism (1898, Eng tr., 1909). See his reminiscences, My Years of Exile (1918, Eng tr., 1921).

Bernstein, Henry (ārē' bĕrnstīn'), 1876–, French dramatist Prolific writer of sophisticated comedy, he was represented continuously on the French stage after 1904 Some 10 of his plays have appeared in America, most successful among them Le Voleur (1906, Eng tr , The Thief, 1907) Others are Le Secret (1912, Eng tr , 1913) and Espoir (1934, Eng tr , Promise, 1937) Bernstein came to America in 1940 to escape the Nazis and was deprived (1941) of his French citizenship by the Vichy government

Bernstorff, Andreas Peter (ăndrā'ăs pā'tûr bĕrns'tôrf), 1735–97, Danish statesman, nephew of Johann Hartwig Ernst Bernstorff Made foreign minister (1773) after the fall of Struensee, he obtained from Russia the final ratification of the exchange treaty negotiated by his uncle in 1767 Sacrificed in 1780 to pacify Russia, he was recalled in 1784 and was chief minister until 1797 He sought friendly relations with Sweden, kept Denmark neutral in the French Revolutionary Wars, and undertook a liberal program of social, economic, and educational reform

Bernstorff, Johann Hartwig Ernst (yōhăn' härt'vĭkh), 1712–72, Danish statesman, of German (Hanoverian) origin As minister of foreign affairs (1751–70) under FREDERICK V and Christian VII he exerted himself successfully to keep Denmark at peace In 1767 he negotiated with Russia a provisional treaty by which the Danish crown was to cede OLDENBURG to Catherine II of Russia in exchange for ducal HOLSTEIN In 1770 Christian VII, under the influence of STRUENSEE, dismissed Bernstorff

Bernstorff, Johann Heinrich, Graf von (hĭn'rĭkh grăf' fŭn), 1862–1939, German diplomat As ambassador to the United States (1908–17) he tried to conciliate American feelings and repeatedly warned his government that unrestricted submarine warfare would bring the United States into the First World War A member of the Reichstag from 1921 to 1928, and a delegate to the League of Nations disarmament conferences (1929–31), he went into exile at Geneva after Hitler took power in Germany His memoirs were published in 1936

Bernward, Saint see BERWARD, SAINT

Berodach-baladan: see MERODACH-BALADAN.

Berœa (bĕrē'u), the same as BEREA

Beroeans see BEREANS

Berossus (burŏ'sŭs), 3d cent B C , Babylonian priest-historian, contemporary of MANETHO His work, in Greek, preserved Mesopotamian myths regarding creation and history It survives in fragments quoted by Josephus and Eusebius

Berothah (bĕrō'thu), city, Syria Ezek 47 16 Berothai may be the same

Berothai (bĕr'ōthī), city, Syria, perhaps the same as Berothah 2 Sam 8 8 Chun 1 Chron 18 8

Berothite (bĕr'ōthīt), inhabitant of the city Beeroth 1 Chron 11 39

Berrettini, Pietro see CORTONA, PIETRO DA

Berrien Springs (bĕr'ēun), village (pop 1,510), SW Mich , SE of Benton Harbor and on the St Joseph, platted 1830, inc 1867 Automobile parts and tools are made here, and there are medicinal springs The village is the seat of Emmanuel Missionary College (Seventh-Day Adventist) Near by are Indian mounds

Berruguete, Alonso (ălōn'sō bĕr-rōōgā'tā), c 1480–1561, Spanish sculptor, painter, and architect He studied with his father, Pedro Berruguete, a painter at the Spanish court, and in Rome with Michelangelo On Berruguete's return to Spain (1520) he was appointed court painter and sculptor to Charles V He is best known for his magnificent sculpture and wood carving The carved altar screens for San Benito el Real (Valladolid Mus), the choir stalls of the cathedral at Toledo, and the marble tomb of Cardinal Tavera (Toledo) are masterpieces Berruguete brought the influence of the Italian Renaissance and of Michelangelo to Spain, but his vigorous and original art is essentially Spanish His work is best seen in Valladolid See Bernard Bevan, History of Spanish Architecture (1938)

Berry, Caroline Fernande Louise, duchesse de (bĕ'rē, Fr kărōlēn' fĕrnăd' lwēz' dūshĕs' du bĕrē'), 1798–1870, wife of the French prince, Charles Ferdinand, duc de Berry, daughter of Francis I of Naples She was exiled from France in 1830 but returned in 1832 in an attempt to win the throne for Berry's posthumous son, later known as Henri, comte de CHAMBORD Her activities ended in imprisonment, The discovery of her marriage to an Italian so alienated French sympathy, however, that Louis Philippe found it safe to release her

Berry, Charles Ferdinand, duc de (shărl' fĕrdēnă' dūk'), 1778–1820, younger son of Charles, comte d'Artois (later Charles X of France) He served in Condé's army against the French Revolution His assassination in 1820 caused a sensation which the ultraroyalists used to their advantage in turning Louis XVIII even more decidedly against the liberals

Berry, Edward Wilber, 1875–1945, American paleontologist, b. Newark, N J From 1907 to 1942 he was associated with Johns Hopkins; he became professor of paleontology in 1917, dean in 1929, and provost in 1935 In 1910 he became senior geologist of the U.S Geological Survey Besides hundreds of articles on the paleontology and paleobotany of North and South America, he wrote Tree Ancestors (1923) and Paleontology (1929).

Berry, Martha McChesney, 1866–1942, American educator, b near Rome, Ga., Pd.D Univ of Georgia, 1920 Determined to provide educational opportunities for underprivileged mountain children, Miss Berry opened in 1902 a log-cabin school with five pupils This she developed at Mt Berry, Ga., into an institution comprising four units, a boys' school (1902), a girls' school (1909), Berry College (1926, coeducational), and a model practice school Now spread over 35,000 acres, the schools offer liberal arts and vocational training to over a thousand students who work out their tuition, Martha Berry was the only woman member of the Univ of Georgia Board of Regents (1932) and the State Planning Commission (1937) Her many honors include the Roosevelt medal (1925) See biography by Tracy Byers (1932)

Berry (bĕ'rē, Fr bĕrē'), region and former province, central France, S and W of the Loire It is largely occupied by a semiarid plateau, the Champagne Berrichonne, used for raising cattle The valleys of the Indre and the Cher are fertile agricultural districts BOURGES and Châteauroux are the chief towns A part of the Roman province of Aquitania, Berry was conquered (5th cent) by the Visigoths and (507) by the Franks It was first made a county in the 8th cent and was purchased (c 1100) by the French crown In 1360 Berry was made a duchy and until 1601 it was held as an appanage by various princes of the blood.

berry see FRUIT

Berryville. 1 Resort town (pop 1,482), a co seat of Carroll co , NW Ark , near Missouri, in the Ozark fruitgrowing region, laid out 1850 2 Town (pop 1,262), N Va , near Winchester, in a farm and apple area of the Shenandoah Valley, laid out 1798, inc 1870 The courthouse of Clarke co is here An annual horse show is held

Bersimis (bĕrsēmē'), river of E Quebec, 250 mi long, flowing SE to the St Lawrence 67 mi above Tadoussac, navigable for 35 mi from its mouth. It is the property of the Montagnais Indians

Bertha of the Big Foot, d 783, Frankish queen, wife of Pepin the Short and mother of Charlemagne She figures prominently in Carolingian legend

Berthelot, Pierre Eugène Marcelin (pyĕr' ŭzhĕn' marslĕ'), 1827–1907, French chemist He was professor at the École supérieure de Pharmacie (1859) and at the Collège de France from 1865 He was made a life senator in 1881 and later served as minister of education (1886) and of foreign affairs (1895) In 1900 he became a member of the French Academy A founder of modern organic chemistry, he was the first to produce organic compounds synthetically, at the same time exploding the old theory of a vital force essential to organic compounds He also did valuable work in thermochemistry and in explosives His works include Chimie organique fondée sur la synthèse (1860) and Leçons sur la thermochimie (1897)

Berthier, Louis Alexandre (lwē' ălĕksădr' bĕrtyā'), 1753–1815, marshal of France He served in the American Revolution and in the French Revolutionary Wars, distinguishing himself in Italy under Napoleon The emperor made him prince of Neuchâtel and Wagram, appointed him chief of staff, and arranged his marriage with a Bavarian princess Berthier acclaimed the return of the Bourbons in 1814. Torn by divided allegiance when Napoleon returned from Elba he withdrew to Bavaria, where he killed himself or was killed on June 1, 1815

Berthier (bĕrtyā'), town (pop 2,634), S Que , on the St Lawrence at the head of Lac St Pierre (Lake St. Peter) and NE of Montreal It contains the ruins of the first Protestant church built (1786) in Canada after the British conquest

Berthollet, Claude Louis, Comte (klōd' lwē', kōt bĕrtōlā'), 1748–1822, French chemist His contributions to chemistry include analyzing ammonia; discovering the bleaching properties of chlorine, the use of carbon to purify water, and the detonating properties of potassium chlorate, and stating the theories of chemical equilibrium and the double decomposition of salts In 1798 he went with Napoleon to Egypt

Bertillon system (burtēl'yun, Fr bĕrtēyō'), first scientific method of criminal identification, developed by the French criminologist Alphonse Bertillon (1853–1914) The system, based on the classification of skeletal and other body measurements and characteristics, was officially adopted in France in 1888 and soon after in other countries Fingerprinting, added later as a supplementary measure, has largely replaced the system.

Bertrand, Henri Gratien (ārē' grāsyē' bĕrtrā'), 1773–1844, French general under Napoleon I He was created count Bertrand accompanied Napoleon to Elba (1814–15) and St. Helena (1815–21)

Bertrand de Born (bur'trŭnd) or Bertran de Born (bĕrtrā'), c 1140–c.1214, French TROUBADOUR of Limousin Some of his 40 surviving poems (in the language of his province) commemorate Bertrand's part in the struggles between Henry II of England and his sons.

Berward, Saint (bûr'wŭrd), d, 1022, German priest. He was court chaplain under Otto III, and as bishop of Hildesheim after 993 he created the glory of the place, walling the bishop's house, founding the cloisters, starting the construction of St. Michael's Church, and instituting the decorative arts, especially work in mosaics and in gold His name also appears as Bernward and Bernard He was canonized in 1193

Berwick, James Fitz-James, duke of (bĕr'ĭk), 1670–1734, marshal and peer of France, illegitimate son of King James II of England and Arabella Churchill, sister of the duke of Marlborough Born and educated in France, he first fought under Charles V of Lorraine at Buda and Mohacs Later he received high rank in the English army After the dethronement of his father (1688), he took part in the invasion of Ireland (1689) and fought at the Boyne (1690) He then joined the French army and fought in the War of the Grand Alliance He became a naturalized Frenchman in 1703 As military governor of Languedoc (1705) he took rigorous measures against the Protestant CAMISARDS In the War of the Spanish Succession he won the decisive victory of Almansa (1707) The campaign which he undertook against Prince Eugene in 1709 in defense of the southeastern frontier of France was a distinguished achievement in strategy, and his capture of Barcelona (1714) was the closing event of the war In 1717, as governor of Guienne, he befriended Montesquieu, who later wrote an introduction to his memoirs Berwick was killed at Philippsburg in the War of the Polish Succession

Berwick (bĕr'ĭk) or Berwickshire (bĕr'ĭkshĭr), maritime county (457 sq mi , 1931 pop 26,612, 1948 estimated pop 26,219), SE Scotland The county town is Duns Berwick is separated from England by the Tweed The coast line (along the North Sea) is rocky and inhospitable The county is divided into three geographical regions the Merse, in the southeast, one of the most productive valleys in Scotland, the Lammermuirs, a pastoral mountainous region in the northwest, and Lauderdale, a cultivated hilly region along Leader Water in the west The Eye is the chief river Agriculture (oats, barley) is the chief occupation Berwick was part of the ancient Saxon kingdom of Northumbria For many centuries it was the scene of border strife between England and Scotland See W S Crockett, Berwickshire and Roxburgh (1926)

Berwick (bûr'wĭk) 1 Town (pop 1,906), S La , on the Atchafalaya river near the mouth It has seafood, shell, and boat-construction industries 2 Town (pop 1,971), SW Maine, on the Salmon Falls River opposite Somersworth, N H , inc 1713 Settled c 1627, it was raided by Indians in 1675, 1690, and 1723 Woolen goods are manufactured 3 Industrial borough (pop 13,181), E Pa , on the Susquehanna and SW of Wilkes-Barre, settled 1783, inc 1818 It produces automobile parts, railroad cars, and rayon The site of Fort Jenkins (1777) is here

Berwick-on-Tweed (bĕr'ĭk) or Berwick-upon-Tweed, municipal borough (pop 12,299), Northumberland, England, on the north side of the mouth of the Tweed Being the principal border town, it was a bone of contention between England and Scotland for centuries, until it definitely became a part of Northumberland in 1885 There are complete ramparts around the town Its leading industries are fishing (herring and salmon) and metal casting The county of Berwick or Berwickshire is part of Scotland

Berwyn (bur'wĭn), city (pop 48,451), NE Ill , residential suburb of Chicago, founded 1890, inc as a village 1891, as a city 1908

beryl (bĕr'ĭl), mineral, a silicate of beryllium and aluminum, extremely hard, occurring in hexagonal crystals which may be of enormous size and may be rose-colored, red, green, blue, or colorless It is commonly used as a gem stone The refractive index is low, and the stones have little or no fire The most valued variety of beryl is EMERALD An AQUAMARINE is a blue to sea-green beryl, morganites are the rose-red beryls of California and Madagascar beryllium (burĭ'lĭŭm) [from beryl] or glucinum (glōōsī'nŭm) [Gr ,=sweet], rare, steel-white, metallic element (symbol=Be or sometimes Gl, for physical constants, see ELEMENT, table) Lighter and harder than aluminum, it resists corrosion as effectively Resembling magnesium chemically as well as physically, it combines with various other elements to form compounds, e g , a chloride, a silicate, and a sulphate With oxygen it forms the oxide beryllia Beryllium does not occur by itself in nature, but only in combination BERYL, of which the aquamarine and emerald are variations, contains about 5 percent of beryllium Combined with silicon and oxygen, the element appears as the quartzlike substance phenacite. It is found also in the granite pegmatite Beryllium ores are found in the United States, Europe, and Africa, but the cost of extracting the metal (by electrolysis) limits its commercial use Alloyed with aluminum it produces a material lighter, with a higher melting point, and of greater strength than aluminum itself; alloyed with other metals it adds hardness and strength Beryllium metal was first isolated independently by Wöhler and Bussy in an impure state in 1828, although discovery of the element had been anticipated (1798) by Vauquelin, who recognized a new earth which he called glucina (now beryllia) as a compound distinct from alumina, with which it had been confused.

Berytus: see BEYROUTH, Lebanon

Berzelius, Jons Jakob, Baron (bûrzā'lēŭs, Swed yuns' yä'kôp, bĕrzā'lĭŭs), 1779–1848, Swedish chemist, M D Univ of Uppsala, 1802 He was noted for his work as teacher at the medical school and other institutions in Stockholm and for his discoveries in diverse fields of chemistry He developed the modern system of symbols and formulas in chemistry, prepared a remarkably accurate table of atomic weights, analysed numerous chemical compounds, and discovered the elements selenium, thorium, and cerium Silicon in the amorphous form was first prepared by Berzelius, and he was the first to isolate zirconium He also contributed to the science of electrochemistry and wrote a number of books

Bessi (bĕ'sī), family which returned with Zerubbabel Ezra 2 49, Neh 7 52

Besançon (buzāsôN'), city (pop 51,939), capital of Doubs dept , E France, on the Doubs river It today has large watch and clock manufactures Besançon was a Roman military station and early became an archiepiscopal see It passed to the successive kingdoms of Burgundy and to FRANCHE-COMTÉ, but Emperor FREDERICK I (who had held here in 1157 the fateful diet which led to his excommunication) made Besançon a free city, with special privileges for its archbishops Besançon maintained its independence, with interruptions, until 1648, when it passed completely under Spanish rule through its incorporation with Franche-Comté After LOUIS XIV's second conquest of Franche-Comté (1674), Besançon became (1676) the capital of his new province, and he transferred the PARLEMENT and the university (founded c 1422) here from Dôle Besançon has Roman ruins, a cathedral (12th-16th cent), and many other handsome buildings in Spanish Renaissance style, notably the Palais Granvelle (birthplace of Cardinal GRANVELLE now housing a museum) and the imposing town hall Proudhon, Fourrier, and Victor Hugo were born in Besançon

Besant, Annie (Wood) (bĕ'zănt), 1847–1933, English theosophist and social reformer When in 1873 she separated from her husband, a clergyman, the courts refused her the guardianship of her children because of her agnosticism As a member of the National Secular Society she preached free thought and as a member of the Fabian Society spread socialist propaganda With Charles Bradlaugh she became coeditor of the National Reformer and with him published (1877) a pamphlet on birth control, The Fruits of Philosophy, for which they were tried on a charge of immorality and acquitted In 1889 she joined the Theosophical Society, becoming a disciple of Mme Blavatsky From this time on she lived in India, and she became active in Indian politics She founded the Central Hindu College at Benares in 1898 and in 1916 established the Indian Home Rule League and became its president She was president of the Indian National Congress in 1917 She traveled (1926–27) in England and America with her protégé, Jiddu KRISHNAMURTI, whom she announced as the new Messiah President of the Theosophical Society from 1907, she wrote an enormous number of books and pamphlets on theosophy The long list of her works includes her autobiography (1893), Four Great Religions (1897), The Ancient Wisdom (1897), and The Wisdom of the Upanishads (1906)

Besant, Sir Walter (bĭzănt'), 1836–1901, English novelist and humanitarian, grad Christ's College, Cambridge, 1859 He taught at the Royal College of Mauritius from 1861 to 1867 After his return to England he devoted himself to writing and to various causes, among these the improvement of the copyright laws His first novels, in collaboration with James Rice, won immediate popularity, they include The Golden Butterfly (1876) and Ready-Money Mortiboy (1872) After the collaboration with Rice ceased in 1881, many of Besant's novels dealt with social problems, among them were All Sorts and Conditions of Men (1882) and Children of Gibeon (1886) Although he was one of the most widely read novelists of the late 19th cent., Besant's popularity did not long survive his death He wrote or edited a long series of works on London, many of which were published posthumously. Other works include the novels Armorel of Lyonesse (1890) and Beyond the Dreams of Avarice (1895), biographies of Gaspard de Coligny (1879), Rabelais (1879), and Captain Cook (1890), and critical studies of French literature Besant was knighted in 1895 See his autobiography (1902)

Besier, Rudolf (bāsyā'), 1878–1942, English dramatist, b. Java He wrote The Virgin Goddess (1906), Don (1909), Lady Patricia (1911), and Kings and Queens (1915) and collaborated with H G Wells in writing Kipps (1912), with Hugh Walpole in Robin's Father (1918), and with May Edginton in several plays. He is best known for The Barretts of Wimpole Street (1931), produced in the United States with Katharine Cornell as Elizabeth Barrett

Beskids, mountain range of the Carpathians, along the Polish-Czechoslovak border The highest peak (Pol Babia Góra, Slovak Babí Hora) rises to 5,658 ft

Beskow, Elsa Maartman (ĕl'sä märt'man bĕs'kôv), 1874 , Swedish writer for children Many of her stories, which she illustrates, have been translated into English They include Aunt Brown and Aunt Lavender and Pelle's New Suit

Besnard, Paul Albert (pôl' älbĕr' bänär'), 1849–1934, French painter, studied with Cabanel and in Italy He received many official honors and was the last important academic painter His portrait of Legros and his Woman Warming Herself are in the Luxembourg Museum, Paris He is best known for his many mural decorations in schools and public buildings of Paris See study by Camille Mauclair (1914, in French)

Besodeiah (bĕsōdē'yu, bĕsōdā'ĭ'u) [Heb ,=in God's secret], father of MESHULLAM 6

Besor (bē'-), wadi, S Palestine 1 Sam 30 9,10,21

Bessarabia (bĕsurā'bēu), region of SE Europe, bounded by the Dniester on the north and east, the Pruth on the west, the Danube on the south, and the Black Sea on the southeast Consisting largely of flat steppes, it has an extremely fertile soil, which, however, often suffers from severe drought Corn, wheat, tobacco, and grapes are among the chief crops, sheep raising furnishes wool for export Kishinev, Izmail, and Belgorod-Dnestrovsky are among the chief centers Always a march country, the region changed hands often It was part of Roman Dacia, was invaded by numerous nations (Goths, Petchenegs, Cumans, Mongols) and was largely conquered by the princes of MOLDAVIA (14th cent) The name is derived from that of Bassarab, a princely family of Walachia, which at one time extended its rule into S Bessarabia By the end of the 15th cent the Turks and their vassals, the khans of the Crimean Tatars, conquered Bessarabia, which was placed under Tatar governors and later under Turkish pashas After the Russo-Turkish War of 1806–12 it was ceded to Russia by the Treaty of Bucharest (1812) The Crimean War resulted (1856) in the cession by Russia of S Bessarabia to Moldavia, but the Congress of Berlin (1878) returned the district to Russia, compensating Rumania with the Dobruja In 1918 all Bessarabia was seized and annexed to Rumania The Soviet government, which never recognized the loss of the province, in 1940 presented an ultimatum to Rumania, demanding the return of Bessarabia and N Bukovina Rumania yielded, but in 1941, having joined Germany in its war on Russia, reoccupied Bessarabia It was in turn recovered by Russian troops in 1944 The Rumanian peace treaty of 1947 confirmed Bessarabia as part of the USSR The larger part was incorporated in the Moldavian SSR, the southern section, with a predominantly Ukrainian-speaking population, was added to the Ukraine

Bessarion, Johannes (gōhän'ĭs bĕsär'ĭun), 1395?–1492, Byzantine humanist, cardinal of the Roman Church He attended the Council of FERRARA-FLORENCE as metropolitan of Nicaea and remained in Italy He was made a cardinal in 1439, and in 1463 the pope named him patriarch of Constantinople Bessarion's time was chiefly occupied in translating from Greek into Latin He was a student of Plato and introduced Neoplatonic ideas to Italy A projected translation of Ptolemy was completed by his protégés, Purbach and REGIOMONTANUS His fine collection of Greek MSS was the nucleus of St Mark's library, Venice

Bessborough, Vere Brabazon Ponsonby, 9th earl of, 1880–, English governor general of Canada (1931–35) He served in Gallipoli and France during the First World War In 1931 he was appointed governor general of Canada He edited (with Arthur Aspinall) Lady Bessborough and Her Family Circle (1940)

Bessel, Friedrich Wilhelm (frēd'rĭkh vĭl'hĕlm bes'l), 1784–1846, German astronomer He became in 1810 director of the new observatory at Königsberg and professor of astronomy at the Univ of Königsberg Among his many achievements the most noted is his discovery of the parallax of the fixed star 61 Cygni Announced in 1838, it was officially recognized in 1841 as the first fully authenticated measurement of the distance of a star His observations had, by 1833, increased the number of accurately determined stars to 50,000 This work was continued and extended by his pupil ARGELANDER Bessel's works include Fundamenta Astronomiae (1818) and Astronomische Untersuchungen (1841–42)

Bessemer, Sir Henry (bĕs'umur), 1813–98, English inventor, b Charleton, Hertfordshire He had no formal education, but possessed an aptitude for mechanics. While working at the time of the Crimean War to improve the construction of cannon, he became convinced of the prime necessity of better iron and began experiments to that end After two years he discovered the basic principle involved in the BESSEMER PROCESS and in 1856 read before the British Association at Cheltenham his important paper "The Manufacture of Iron without Fuel" He built a successful converter and, later, erected the Bessemer Steel Works at Sheffield, which began to operate in 1858 and soon produced iron so cheaply that he could undersell his competitors In America the Bessemer process was patented in 1857, but Bessemer's priority right here was challenged by William KELLY, and in the end the battle between the two interests was settled by a consolidation of the rival companies Bessemer received many honors for his signal contribution and was knighted in 1879 See his autobiography (1905, new ed , 1924)

Bessemer. 1 Industrial city (pop 22,826), central Ala , just SW of Birmingham, in a mining area, founded 1887 Iron, steel, and chemical products are made here 2 City (pop 4,080), co seat of Gogebic co , W Upper Peninsula, N Mich , near the Black River NE of Ironwood, inc as a village 1887, as a city 1889 It is in the Gogebic iron-mining region There is a small museum with a collection of arms here 3 Borough (pop 1,635), W Pa , WSW of New Castle near the Ohio border; inc c 1910 Portland cement is made here

Bessemer City, textile-mill town (pop 3,567), W central N C , just W of Gastonia, in the piedmont

Bessemer process [for Sir Henry BESSEMER] industrial process for the manufacture of STEEL from cast iron (pig iron) The principle involved is that of oxidation of the impurities in the iron by the oxygen of air blown through the molten iron, the heat of oxidation raises the temperature of the mass and keeps it molten during operation The process depends for its efficiency upon a large container made of steel with a lining of silica and clay or of dolomite, called the Bessemer converter The capacity is from 15 to 25 tons of molten iron, the usual charge is 15 or 18 tons The converter is egg shaped At its narrow, or upper, end it has an opening through which the iron to be treated is introduced and the finished product is poured out The wide end, or bottom, has a number of perforations (tuyères) through which the air is forced upward into the converter during operation The container is set on pivots (trunnions) so that it can be tilted at an angle to receive the charge, turned upright during the "blow," and inclined for pouring out the molten steel after the operation is complete As the air passes upward through the molten pig iron, impurities such as silicon, manganese, and carbon unite with its oxygen to form oxides, the carbon monoxide burns off with a blue flame and the other impurities form slag (see METALLURGY) Phosphorus and sulphur are difficult to remove by the process and cause brittleness in the product Dolomite is used as the converter lining when the phosphorus content is high, the process is then called basic Bessemer The silica and clay lining is used in the acid Bessemer In order to provide the elements necessary to give the steel the desired properties another substance, often spiegeleisen (an iron-carbon-manganese alloy), is usually added to the molten metal after the oxidation is completed The converter is then emptied into ladles from which the steel is poured into molds, the slag being left behind The whole process is completed in from 20 to 30 min. Bessemer steel is used for making machinery, tools, wire, and nails and for structural purposes

Bessenyei, George (bĕ′shĕnyā), Hung Bessenyei György (dy ör′dy ü), 1747–1811, Hungarian dramatist and writer A member of the famous Hungarian Horse Guard at Vienna, he came in contact with the ideas of French rationalism and was soon an ardent follower of Voltaire and the Encyclopedists His plays and prose writings have no literary merit; Bessenyei's importance lies in the fact that he wrote in Hungarian, which had fallen into disuse among the upper classes of his country His efforts encouraged other writers to use that language again, and thus Bessenyei is often regarded as the inaugurator of the modern era in Hungarian literature

Bessey, Charles Edwin, 1845–1915, American botanist, b Wayne co , Ohio, educated at Michigan State College of Agriculture, at Harvard, and at the State Univ of Iowa (Ph D , 1879) He was professor of botany at the Univ of Nebraska from 1884 until his death and was head dean from 1909 He was among the first to use laboratory methods, nontechnical and well illustrated, in teaching botany, and he wrote a number of texts and studies concerning plant life

Best, Charles Herbert, 1899–, Canadian physiologist, b West Pembroke, Maine, grad Univ. of Toronto (B A , 1921, M D , 1925) With F G BANTING he discovered (1921) the use of insulin in the treatment of diabetes He was appointed professor of physiology at Toronto in 1929, served as associate director of the Connaught Laboratories from 1932 to 1941, and became director of the Banting-Best department of medical research at Toronto in 1941. With N. B Taylor he wrote The Living Body (rev. ed., 1946), The Physiological Basis of Medical Practice (4th ed , 1946), and The Human Body and Its Functions (rev ed , 1948).

bestiary (bĕs′-), a type of medieval book that was widely popular The bestiary presumed to describe the animals of the world and to show what human traits they severally exemplify. The bestiaries are the source of a bewildering array of fabulous beasts and of many misconceptions of real ones They were the artist's guide to animal symbolism in religious building, painting, and sculpture Physiologus, an ancient work of the type, was probably the chief source of the bestiaries

Bestuzhev, Aleksandr Aleksandrovich (ŭlyĭksan′dur ŭlyĭksān′druvĭch byĭstōō′zhŭf-), pseud Cossack Marlinsky (kŏs′ŭk märlyēn′skē), 1797–1837, Russian novelist and poet He wrote popular romantic tales in the Byronic manner As an officer in the guards he joined the Decembrists and was exiled to Siberia Later transferred to the Caucasus, he found here the material for his best novel, Ammalat Bek, available in Thomas Shaw's translation in Blackwood's Magazine (1843)

Bestuzhev-Ryumin, Aleksey Petrovich, Count (ŭlyĭksyā′ pĕtrō′vĭch byĭstōō′zhĕf-ryōō′myĭn), 1693–1766, Russian statesman, grand chancellor under Empress Elizabeth In the War of the AUSTRIAN SUCCESSION he succeeded (1747) in forming an alliance of Russia, Austria, England, and Saxony to check France and Prussia The death of Elizabeth and the accession of Peter III (1762) resulted in Bestuzhev-Ryumin's fall, but Catherine II after her accession recalled him to the court and made him a field marshal

Betah (bē′tu), the same as TIBHATH

beta particle and beta ray see RADIOACTIVITY, RADIUM, RAY

betatron (bā′tutrŏn), electron-accelerating machine originally called a rheotron, invented by D W Kerst in 1941 Electrons are given off by a hot filament in a doughnut-shaped glass vacuum tube which lies between the poles of a large electromagnet These electrons are accelerated in a circular path and are either released from the tube as a beam of beta rays or are directed at a metal target, causing the generation of X rays The betatron has been used in the study of cosmic rays and in medical and industrial research

Betelgeuse (bē′tuljōōz, bē′-, bē′tulj(ŭ)z), bright star in the constellation Orion, called also Alpha Orionis The name Betelgeuse [from Arabic,=the shoulder of the giant] indicates its position, marking the right shoulder Betelgeuse was the first star whose diameter was measured with the Michelson interferometer (Mt Wilson, Calif , 1920) It is a variable giant red star about 240 light years from the earth, and it is believed to have a linear diameter of c 215,000,000 mi betel nut (bē′-), fruit of the betel palm (Areca catechu) It is chewed with a leaf of the betel pepper smeared with quicklime and makes the teeth black and the saliva red Betel-nut chewing, as a narcotic stimulant, is a custom of many Eastern peoples Opinion is divided as to its beneficial qualities The betel nut is an article of considerable commerce in the East

Beten (bē′tĕn), village, N Palestine Joshua 19 25

Bethabara (-ăb′ŭru) [Heb ,=house of the ford], place, on the Jordan, traditionally located at a ford close by the Dead Sea, where John was baptizing when Jesus came to him Bethany RV, following the better ancient texts John 1 28

Bethalto, village (pop 1,207), SW Ill , just E of Alton, inc 1869

Beth-anath (-ā′năth) [Heb ,=house of Anat, Canaanite goddess], town, N Palestine Joshua 19 38, Judges 1 33

Beth-anoth (-ā′nŏth) [Heb ,=house of Anat, Canaanite goddess], town, probably the modern Beit Anun, not far NNE of Hebron Joshua 15 59.

Bethany (bĕth′unē) 1 Village, at the southeastern foot of Mt Olivet, the modern El Azariеh, 2 mi E of Jerusalem. Home of Lazarus, Martha, and Mary, it was frequently visited by Jesus It is closely associated with the final scenes of his life, and the ascension took place near Bethany Mark 11 1,11, John 11, Mat 21 17, 26 6, Mark 14 3, Luke 19 29, 24 50 2 See BETH-ABARA

Bethany. 1 City (pop 2,682), co seat of Harrison co , NW Mo , NE of St Joseph, in a farm and limestone region, founded 1845, inc 1858 2 City (pop 2,590), central Okla , near Oklahoma City Members of the Nazarene sect, who predominate, maintain the Bethany-Peniel College 3 Town (pop 410), W Va , in the Northern Panhandle, NNE of Wheeling and near the Pa line It is the seat of Bethany College (coeducational), chartered in 1840 and opened in 1841 by Alexander CAMPBELL.

Bethany College. see BETHANY, W.Va., and LINDSBORG, Kansas

Beth-arabah (-ăr′ŭbu) [Heb ,=house of the ARABA], town, in the Jordan valley near Jericho. Joshua 15 6,61, 18 22.

Beth-aram (-ā′-), the same as BETH-HARAN.

Beth-arbel (-är′bĕl), town not surely identified. It is probably one of two places called in modern times Irbid, one not far NW of Tiberias, the other c.15 mi. E of the Jordan and in the latitude of Jezreel. Hosea 10.14.

Beth-aven (-ā′vĕn) [Heb ,=house of nothingness], town, S central Palestine, between Bethel and Michmash. Joshua 7 2, 1 Sam 13 5; 14.23 It is probably used as an abusive name for Bethel in Hosea 4 15, 5 8, and 10 5 The prophet seems to use Aven (for Beth-aven) also in the same way. Hosea 10 8.

Beth-azmaveth: see AZMAVETH.

Beth-baal-meon (-bā′ul-mē′ŭn) [Heb ,=house of the Baal of habitation], town, E of the Jordan, now represented by the extensive ruins of Main, 12 mi SW of Heshbon. Joshua 13 17 Baal-meon Num 32 38, Ezek 25 9, 1 Chron 5 8 Beth-meon Jer 48 23 Beon in Num 32 3, an otherwise unidentified place, is probably the same

Beth-barah (-bā′ru), unidentified town, near Bethshan Judges 7 24

Beth-birei (-bĭr′rē), unidentified town. 1 Chron 4 31 See BETH-LEBAOTH

Beth-car [Heb ,=house of the lamb], town, westerly of Jerusalem 1 Sam 7 11

Beth-dagon (-dā′-) [Heb ,=house of Dagon] 1 Town, SW Palestine, perhaps the modern Beit Dejan, 5½ mi NW of Lydda going toward Joppa, or the modern Dajun, c 1½ mi SW of Beit Dejan Joshua 15 41 2 Town, N Palestine, possibly another Beit Dejan, 7 mi ESE of Shechem going toward the Jordan Joshua 19 27

Beth-diblathaim: see ALMON-DIBLATHAIM

Bethe, Hans Albrecht (bā′tŭ), 1906–, American physicist, b Strasbourg, educated at Frankfurt and Munich universities In 1935 he came to the United States to teach at Cornell, where he became professor in 1937 From 1943 to 1946 he was director of the theoretical physics division of the Alamos Atomic Bomb Project He is noted for his brilliant theories on atomic properties and on the origin of solar and stellar energy

Bethel (bĕth′l) [Heb ,=house of God] 1 Ancient city, central Palestine, the modern Beitin, c 12 mi N of Jerusalem According to the Bible, where it is very frequently mentioned, it was called Luz (see Luz 1) at first, Bethel was first the name of Jacob's sacred stone there, then transferred to the town itself Bethel lost to Jerusalem its preeminence as a Jewish shrine, and Jeroboam's attempt to set Bethel up as his religious capital in rivalry to Jerusalem was vain Gerizim instead became the center of Jewish worship in the northern kingdom, and Bethel was increasingly associated with heathen worship—hence the denunciations by Amos and by Hosea, who calls it BETH-AVEN by way of insult As a heathen shrine Bethel was overshadowed by Jezreel and Samaria, and the New Testament does not even mention it See (for example) Gen 12 8, 35 1-15, Judges 20 26,27, 1 Kings 12 26-33, Amos 3 14 2 Unidentified place, S Palestine Joshua 12 16, 1 Sam 30 27 Chesil Joshua 15 30 Bethul Joshua 19 4 Bethuel 1 Chron 4 30

Bethel. 1 Town (pop 4,105), SW Conn , near Danbury, settled c 1700, inc 1855 Its hat factories date from c 1800 P T Barnum was born here 2 Resort town (pop 2,034), W Maine, SW of Rumford, in beautiful country on the Androscoggin, settled 1774, inc 1796 Wooden products are manufactured 3 Town (pop 217), NE Mo , WNW of Hannibal, founded 1844 by William KEIL as a communistic enterprise 4 Town (pop 1,333), E N C , N of Greenville, in an agricultural area 5 Village (pop 1,604), SW Ohio, SE of Cincinnati, in a farm area, settled 1797 6 Town (pop 1,477), central Vt , S of Montpelier, chartered 1778 Its granite quarries closed in 1925

Bethel College see NEWTON, Kansas

Beth-emek (-ē′mĕk) [Heb ,=house of the valley], town, probably the modern Amkah, c 8 mi NE of Acre Joshua 19 27

Bether (bē′thur), in the Bible, word or name of unknown significance It has been suggested that this may mean the plant malabathrum Cant 2 17

Bethesda (-thĕz′-, -thĕs′-) [Aramaic,=house of mercy], pool in Jerusalem, perhaps the one recently discovered under the Crusaders' Church of St Anne near St Stephen's Gate in the northeast corner of the city Its healing properties, which made it the resort of the sick and ailing, arose from an angel's visits. John 5 2–9

Bethesda (bĭthĕz′du) 1 Unincorporated town in election district 7 (pop 26,114) of Montgomery co , W central Md , northwestern suburb of Washington, D.C. The research center (1939) of the National Cancer Institute is here, as well as a naval medical center (1942) 2 Village (pop. 1,127), SE Ohio, SW of St Clairsville

Beth-ezel (-ē′zĕl), unidentified town Micah 1 11

Beth-gader (-gā′-) [Heb ,=house of the wall], unidentified town 2 Chron 2 51 The Geder of Joshua 12 13, otherwise unidentified, is perhaps the same town

Beth-gamul (-gā′-) [Heb ,=house of the weaned], unidentified town of Moab Jer 48 23

Beth-haccerem (-hăk′urĕm) [Heb ,=house of the vine], town, S Palestine, traditionally identified with the Frank mountain, or Herodium, 3 mi. SE of Bethlehem Neh 3 14, Jer 6 1.

Beth-haran (-hā′-), town, E of the Jordan, not far northeast of its mouth into the Dead Sea. Num. 32 3. Beth-aram. Joshua 13.27.

Beth-hogla or Beth-hoglah (bŏth'-hŏg'lă) [Heb.,=house of the partridge], town, the modern Ain Hajlah, c 2 mi W of the Jordan, SE of Gilgal. Joshua 15.6, 18 19,21.

Beth-horon (-hō'-) [Heb.,=house of the cave], name of two neighboring towns on the northerly road from Lydda to Jerusalem Beth-horon the nether (modern Beit Ur et-Tahta) is c 11 mi ESE of Lydda, and Beth-horon the upper (modern Beit Ur el-Fokha) c 2 mi farther up In this strategic locality two historic Jewish victories were gained, by Joshua and Judas Maccabaeus Joshua 10, 1 Mac 3 See also Joshua 16 3,5, 18 13,14, 21 22, 1 Kings 9 17, 1 Chron 6 68, 7 24, 2 Chron 8 5

Beth-jeshimoth (-jĕsh'I-) or Beth-jesimoth (-jĕs'I-) [Heb ,=house of wastes], town, c 1 mi NE of the Dead Sea. Num 33 49, Joshua 12 3, 13 20, Ezek. 25 9

Beth-lebaoth (-lĕb'ăŏth) [Heb ,=house of the lionesses], town, S Palestine Joshua 19 6 Lebaoth Joshua 15 32 BETH-BIREI corresponds with Bethlebaoth in a parallel passage

Bethlehem (bĕth'lēum) [Heb ,=house of bread or house of Lahmu, a goddess], Arabic Beit Lahm, town (pop 6,814), S central Palestine, just S of Jerusalem It was the birthplace of Jesus and is one of the great shrines of the world On a hill in green, fertile country, it looks across to the Dead Sea and beyond Its inhabitants, largely Christian, depend on the pilgrims for their livelihood In the Old Testament, it was the birthplace of Benjamin, the scene of the book of Ruth, and the home of David Another name—probably earlier—was Ephrath or Ephratah Gen 35 16-20, 48 7, 1 Sam 16, 17, 2 Sam 23 13-17, 1 Chron 15-19 David and his family neglected their city, which was obscure, forgotten by all except those who looked to Bethlehem for the Messiah, the second David Micah 5 2 Christians believe that Jesus was this Messiah, born of David's house in David's city, and view Bethlehem with peculiar affection Hadrian desecrated (135) the traditional place of the Nativity with a grove sacred to Adonis In 315 Constantine destroyed the heathen grove and in 330 set up instead a basilica A church standing there is shared by monks of the Greek, Latin, and Armenian rites The manger in which Jesus was born is said to have been in the grotto under the church In the court of the church St Jerome lived for 30 years Bethlehem has borne a charmed life and has been spared by almost all invaders In 1949 it was under Arab control There is also another Bethlehem NNW of Nazareth Joshua 19 15

Bethlehem. 1 Resort town (pop 935), NW N H , in the White Mts , on the Ammonoosuc river and SW of Whitefield, settled 1787, inc 1799 2 Industrial city (pop 58,490), Northampton and Lehigh counties, E Pa , on the Lehigh river and N of Philadelphia, settled 1740–41 by Moravians, inc as a borough 1845, as a city 1917 Steel products of all types are manufactured here, and it is the site of the Bethlehem Steel Corp The annual music festival (May) was developed by J Frederick Wolle and has attained international recognition (see BACH CHOIR) Bethlehem is the seat of LEHIGH UNIVERSITY, Moravian College (for men, 1807), and Moravian College for Women (1742) Points of interest in the city are the Central Moravian Church (c 1803), the Schmitz House (1749), and the Moravian Buildings The town was threatened with destruction in 1757 by hostile Delaware and Shawnee Indians, but was saved by Paxinosa, a Shawnee chief During the Revolutionary War one of the community buildings was used as a hospital for Continental soldiers

Bethlen, Gabriel (bĕth'lun), Hung Bethlen Gábor (bĕt'lĕn gă'bôr), 1580–1629, prince of Transylvania (1613–29) He was chief adviser of Stephen BOCSKAI and was elected prince after the assassination of Gabriel BATHORY A Protestant, though tolerant towards all religions, he allied himself (1619) with FREDERICK THE WINTER KING and overran Hungary, of which he was elected king (1620) After the Bohemian defeat at the White Mt (1620), he signed with Emperor FERDINAND II the Treaty of Nikolsburg (1621), by which he renounced the royal title but retained control of seven Hungarian counties and received the rank of prince of the empire He continued his relations with the Protestant powers opposing the emperor in the Thirty Years War and married the sister of the elector of Brandenburg, however, he kept the interests of Transylvania paramount He was a wise administrator and encouraged the development of law and learning

Bethlen, Count Stephen, Hung Bethlen István, 1874–, Hungarian statesman, premier (1921–31), member of the same Protestant Transylvanian family as Gabriel Bethlen. He entered the Hungarian parliament in 1901, and in 1919 he was a delegate to the Paris Peace Conference Called to the premiership by Admiral Horthy, he prevented, despite his monarchist leanings, the return of King Charles (Emperor CHARLES I) to avoid military intervention by the Little Entente The chief aim of his foreign policy was the revision of the Treaty of Trianon, a treaty of friendship (1927) with Italy advanced this cause Bethlen survived the scandal over the forgery of francs in 1926, in which high officials were involved, but his revisionism aroused the increasing suspicion of the Little Entente powers In 1931 French bankers offered a loan to the hard-pressed government only on condition that revisionism halt, and he resigned He was succeeded as premier by Count Julius Karolyi Active in parliamentary opposition, Bethlen at first favored cooperation with Hitler's Germany but later advised a more cautious course. He retired from politics in 1939

Beth-maachah ' see ABEL-BETH-MAACHAH

Bethmann-Hollweg, Theobald von (tā'ôbält fŭn bāt'mun-hōl'vāk), 1856–1921, German statesman He became minister of the interior (1905) and secretary of state (1907), and in 1909 succeeded Bernhard von BÜLOW as chancellor A Liberal, he worked for a comprehensive insurance law, extension of the franchise, and greater autonomy for Alsace-Lorraine, his legislative efforts were supported in the Reichstag by a coalition of Conservatives and Centrists By the settlement (1911) of the crisis over MOROCCO he won a large area for the German colony in the Cameroons and he also came to an agreement with Russia concerning the Near East Even though he greatly increased the German peacetime army he did not desire the First World War, but once in it he tried to justify the German stand His statement, calling the treaty guaranteeing Belgian neutrality "a scrap of paper," was much cited Bethmann-Hollweg tried to restrict submarine warfare and to end the war by conciliation (1916)—an attempt that led to his overthrow (1917) by Ludendorff and Hindenburg

Beth-marcaboth (-mar'kŭbŏth) [Heb ,=house of chariots], town, perhaps the same as MADMANNAH Joshua 19 5, 1 Chron 4 31

Beth-meon (-mē'un) see BETH-BAAL-MEON

Bethnal Green (bĕth'nul), metropolitan borough (1931 pop 108,194, 1948 estimated pop 60,580) of NE London, England It is an industrial district once noted for silk weaving It suffered severely from air raids in 1940–41 Bethnal Green Museum is a branch of Victoria and Albert Museum

Beth-nimrah (-nĭm'ru) [Heb ,=panther house], town, the modern Tell Nimrin, 6 mi E of the Jordan and c 10 mi from its mouth Num 32 36, Joshua 13 27 Nimrah Num 32 33

Beth-palet (-pā'-) [Heb ,=house of flight], unidentified town, S Palestine Joshua 15 27 Beth-phelet Neh 11 26 Its adjective is Paltite 2 Sam 23 26 See PELONITE

Beth-pazzez (-păz'ĕz) [Heb ,=dispersion], unidentified town Joshua 19 21

Beth-peor (-pē'ôr) [Heb ,=house of Peor, i e , house of BAAL-PEOR], town, perhaps the modern Minyeh, 10 mi SE of the mouth of the Jordan Num 25 3, Deut 3 29, 4 46, 34 6, Joshua 13 20

Bethphage (-fā'jē, -fāj) [Heb ,=house of green figs], place of unknown location, traditionally between Bethany and the Mount of Olives, NW of Bethany Mat 21 1, Mark 11 1, Luke 19 29

Beth-phelet (-fē'-) see BETH-PALET

Beth-rapha (-rā'-), unidentified person or place 1 Chron 4 12

Beth-rehob (-rē'hŏb) [Heb ,=house of the street], town, N Palestine Judges 18 28, 2 Sam 10 6 Rehob Num 13 21, 2 Sam 10 8

Bethsaida (-sā'ĭdu) [Heb ,=house of fish], birthplace of SS Peter, Andrew, and John It was renamed Julias later John 1 44, 12 21, Mark 6 45, 8 22, Mat 11 21, Luke 10 3 Some identify Bethsaida with the Julias just E of the Jordan and N of the Sea of Galilee, others would place it on the eastern shore of the lake, still others suppose two Bethsaidas, one on the eastern and another on the northwestern shore

Beth-shan (-shăn') or Beth-shean (-shē'un) [Heb , =quiet house], ancient fortress, at the meeting of the Vale of Jezreel with the Jordan valley, the modern BEISAN It was the principal strategic point of E Palestine, with the crossing of four roads, from the upper Jordan, from the lower Jordan, from Jerusalem past Mt Gerizim, and from Esdraelon and the sea Joshua 7 11, Judges 1 27, 1 Sam 31 10,12, 2 Sam 21 12, 1 Kings 4 12, 1 Chron 7 29 Bethsan 1 Mac 5 52, 12 40,41

Beth-shemesh (-shē'mĕsh) [Heb ,=house of the sun] 1 The Egyptian HELIOPOLIS Jer 43 13 The Greek and Hebrew names of this city are synonymous 2 Town, 16 mi W of Jerusalem Excavations here have revealed traces of the Egyptian occupation in the 2d millennium B C Joshua 15 10, 21 16, 1 Sam 6, 1 Kings 4 9, 2 Kings 14 11,13, 1 Chron 6 59, 2 Chron 28 18 Ir-shemesh Joshua 19 41 3 Town of Issachar Joshua 19 22 4 Town of Naphtali Joshua 19 38

Beth-shittah (-shĭt'u) [Heb ,=acacia house], town, on the north side of the Vale of Jezreel c 5½ mi above Beth-shan, probably the modern Shutta. Judges 7 22

Bethsura (-sū'ru), the same as BETH-ZUR

Beth-tappuah (-tăpū'u) [Heb ,=house of TAPPUAH], town, c 4 mi W of Hebron, of which it was perhaps a colony Joshua 15 53

Bethuel (bĕthū'ŭl) [Heb ,=man of God] 1 Father of Laban and Rebecca Gen 22 23, 28 5, 29 5 2 The same as BETHEL 2.

Bethul (bĕth'ŭl) the same as BETHEL 2.

Bethulia (bĕthū'lēu), city, Palestine, apparently located somewhere NE of Samaria, c 10 mi from that city It was the scene of the principal events of the book of Judith It has been variously identified, by some even with Jerusalem

Bethune, David ' see BEATON, DAVID

Bethune, Mary McLeod (mukloud' buthūn'), 1875–, American Negro educator, b Mayesville, S C , grad Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, 1895 In 1904 she founded the Daytona Normal and Industrial Institute for Negro Girls (now Bethune-Cookman College) and until 1942 was its president Mrs Bethune was director (1936–44) of the Division of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration and consultant on interracial understanding at the San Francisco Conference of the United Nations. In 1935 she was awarded the Spingarn medal

Bethune, Thomas Greene see BLIND TOM

Bethune-Cookman College see DAYTONA BEACH, Fla

Beth-zur (-zûr'), town, Palestine, the modern Beit-sur, c 5 mi N of Hebron on the Jerusalem road It was important in the Maccabean campaigns Joshua 15 58, 1 Chron 2 45, 2 Chron 2 7, Neh 3 16 Bethsura 1 Mac 4 29, 6 31, 11 65

Betio, Gilbert Islands see TARAWA

Betonim (bĕt'ōnĭm) [Heb ,=pistachio nuts], unidentified town, E of the Jordan Joshua 13 26

betrothal see MARRIAGE

Bettendorf, city (pop 3,143), E Iowa, industrial suburb of Davenport, on the Mississippi, settled c 1840, inc as a town 1902, as a city 1922 Industrial gases are made here A suspension toll bridge spans the river

Betterton, Thomas, 1635?–1710, English actor and manager He joined Sir William D'Avenant's company at Lincoln's Inn Fields theater in 1661 and became the leading actor of his time In the role of Hamlet he was acknowledged as the greatest after Burbage, and he excelled as Mercutio in Romeo and Juliet, as Macbeth, and as Bosola in the Duchess of Malfi After D'Avenant's death (1668), he was a partner in the management of the Dorset Garden Theatre in 1671, where he played Oedipus in the play by Dryden and Lee, and Timon, Lear, Troilus, and other characters in adaptations of Shakspere by Dryden, Shadwell, Tate, and himself In 1695 he opened a theater in Little Lincoln's Inn Fields, with Congreve's Love for Love as his first production This theater failed, and in 1705 Betterton opened the new Haymarket Theatre, erected for him and his company by Sir John Vanbrugh, where he made his last appearance in 1710 A trip to Paris, by royal command, enabled him to make changes in his theater based on French techniques See Colley Cibber's Apology, Pepys's Diary, R W Lowe, Thomas Betterton (1891) His wife, Mary Saunderson Betterton, d 1711, was the first woman to act Shakspere's great female characters, such as Lady Macbeth, Ophelia, and Juliet She often played opposite her husband

Betto, Bernardino di see PINTURICCHIO

Betty, William Henry West, 1791–1874, English boy actor At 12 he played Romeo, Hamlet, and Prince Arthur at Dublin, by 15 he acted at Drury Lane and Covent Garden, adding Richard III and Macbeth to his repertoire, and by 17 his star faded At his peak, however, he was called "the young Roscius," and on the motion of Pitt, Parliament adjourned to see him play Hamlet

Beuckelszoon, Beuckelzoon, or Beukels, Jan. see JOHN OF LEIDEN

Beulah (bū'lu) [Heb ,=married, used of a woman], allegorical name for Israel Isa 62 4,5

Beust, Friedrich Ferdinand (frē'drĭkh fĕr'dĭnänt boist'), 1809–86, Saxon and Austrian statesman He held various portfolios in the Saxon ministry and served as premier (1853–66), but his opposition to Bismark forced his resignation after Saxony's defeat in the Austro-Prussian War He entered the service of Austria, becoming foreign minister (1866), prime minister (Feb , 1867), and chancellor (June, 1867) With the Hungarians Andrassy and Deak he negotiated the Ausgleich [compromise] of 1867 which resulted in the establishment of the AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN MONARCHY Created a count in 1868, Beust was dismissed in 1871, but later served as ambassador to London (1871–78) and Paris (1878–82) See his memoirs (Eng tr , 1887)

Beuthen (boi'tŭn) or Bytom (bĭ'tôm), city (pop 93,179), Upper Silesia, transferred to Polish administration in 1945 (see SILESIA) Its present population is entirely Polish A center of the KATOWICE mining region, it also manufactures metal products Beuthen was ruled successively by Poland, Bohemia, and Austria, until it passed to Prussia in 1742 The city was damaged in the Second World War

Bevan, Aneurin (unĭ'rĭn bĕ'vun), 1897–, British political leader, b Monmouthshire A coal miner and a trade unionist, he became British minister of health in 1945 and administrator of the comprehensive system of socialized medicine instituted by the Labour government.

Beveland, North, and South Beveland (bā'vulănt), two islands (combined area 170 sq mi), Zeeland prov , SW Netherlands, in the Scheldt estuary

They are connected by railroad with the mainland and with Walcheren Agriculture and livestock raising are the chief occupations In the Second World War the British by heavy fighting (late 1944) dislodged the Germans and thus cleared the approaches to Antwerp beverage. From ancient times man has used natural plant fluids, such as juices or coconut milk, has steeped, boiled, fermented, or brewed plant products, and has drunk MILK, both natural and fermented Beverages are divided into two classes—alcoholic and nonalcoholic The former includes fermented fruit juices, as WINE and CIDER; FERMENTED MILKS, as kumiss, products brewed from malted cereals, as BEER and ale, distilled spirits (hard liquor), as WHISKY, GIN, BRANDY, and RUM, and LIQUEUR In the United States, beverages containing 24 percent by volume of alcohol are classed for tax purposes as distilled spirits Nonalcoholic beverages include milk, decoctions and infusions of plant products, as COFFEE, TEA, COCOA, and MATE, natural mineralized or carbonated waters; and a variety of still or carbonated soft drinks, especially popular in the United States

Beveridge, Albert Jeremiah, 1862–1927, U S. Senator (1899–1911) and historian, b Highland co, Ohio, grad DePauw Univ , 1885 He was admitted to the bar (1887) and practiced law (1887–99) in Indianapolis As U S Senator, he supported the policies of Theodore ROOSEVELT With other insurgents he opposed the PAYNE-ALDRICH TARIFF (1909), and was defeated for reelection (1911) He became (1912) an organizer of the PROGRESSIVE PARTY, ran (1912) for governor of Indiana on the party's ticket and lost Thereafter he devoted himself to writing history His thorough, sober lives of John Marshall (4 vols , 1916–19) and Abraham Lincoln (unfinished, 2 vols , 1928) were outstanding See Claude Bowers, Beveridge and the Progressive Era (1932)

Beveridge, William Henry, 1879–, British economist, b India, grad Balliol College, Oxford, 1902 His reputation as an authority on social problems was gained through investigations, writings, and government service (1908–19), especially as director of labor exchanges, set up largely through his efforts, and in the food ministry, where he devised wartime rationing He was knighted in 1919 Sir William was director of the London School of Economics from 1919 to 1937, when he became master of University College, Oxford Social Insurance and Allied Services (1942), a report prepared for the British government, proposed a social-security system "from the cradle to the grave" for all British citizens In 1944 his Full Employment in a Free Society advocated planned public spending, control of private investment, and other measures to assure full employment He served as a Liberal member of Parliament (1944–45) and was in 1946 made 1st Baron Beveridge of Tuggal One of his later writings is Voluntary Action (1948), a survey of the history and possibilities of voluntary agencies which supplement state social service

Beverley, Robert, 1673–1722, Virginia colonial historian, author of The History and Present State of Virginia (1705) A substantial planter and colonial official, he wrote his book after reading the manuscript by an English author on America which was full of error Vigorous, honest, and not lacking humor, his history was an immediate success. See edition by Louis B Wright (1947)

Beverley, William Roxby, 1814?–1889, English artist and scene painter He painted scenes for Vestris and Charles James Mathews at the Lyceum (1847–55), became scenic director at Covent Garden (1853), and worked at Drury Lane for more than 30 years He produced excellent dioramas and pantomime scenes

Beverley, municipal borough (pop 14,012), capital of the East Riding of Yorkshire, England, SE of York. The famous minster (13th cent , 334 ft long) is on the site of a monastery founded by St John of Beverley (d 721) and transformed by Athelstan into a college of canons It contains the Percy Shrine and the ancient "chair of peace," which gave sanctuary from the laws of man, a privilege granted by Athelstan. The town gate is of the early 15th cent , and St Mary's Church dates from the 14th cent

Beverly, town (pop. 1,171), central Alta , an east suburb of Edmonton.

Beverly. 1 City (pop 25,537), NE Mass , near Salem; settled before 1630, inc as a town 1668, as a city 1894. It had New England's first successful cotton-weaving mill (1789) The John Cabot home (1781) is preserved as a museum, other old houses remain In Beverly Farms, residential and resort section, Oliver Wendell Holmes and later his son the Associate Justice had a summer home 2 City (pop 2,691), SW N J , on the Delaware below Burlington; inc 1857 It is the site of a Civil War camp and hospital Rayon fabrics are made here

Beverly Hills, city (pop 26,823, 1914 pop 500), S Calif , planned 1906, inc 1914. A suburb of Los Angeles, it is the home of many moving-picture stars

Bevier (bŭvēr'), city (pop 1,105), N Mo , S of Kirksville, in a coal area; laid out 1858

Bevin, Ernest (bĕ'vĭn), 1881–, British foreign minister (1945–) in the Labour party cabinet. An orphan earning his own living at various jobs from the time he was a young boy, he began a long career as a trade-union official when he became secretary of the dock workers' union in 1911 He merged unions to make the powerful Transport and General Workers' Union, of which he was (1921–40) general secretary; he also served a term as chairman of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress In Winston Churchill's cabinet he was (1940–45) minister of labor, maintaining his popularity with the workers while mobilizing man power effectively to the uses of the state In 1945 in the Labour government under Clement Attlee, Bevin became foreign minister. A cardinal principle of his policy has been opposition to the USSR. See biography by Trevor Evans (1946)

Bevis of Hampton (bē'-), English metrical romance of the 13th cent which also appears in Anglo-French, French, and Italian Among other adventures, Bevis (or Beves) rescues and marries a princess and subdues a dragon

Bewick, Thomas (bū'ĭk), 1753–1828, English wood engraver Among his famous early works are his illustrations for Gay's Fables (1779) and Select Fables (1784) and for Ralph Beilby's General History of Quadrupeds (1790) In 1789 he engraved the Chillingham Bull, considered one of his finest blocks Bewick is best known for his classic illustrations of Beilby's History of British Birds (2 vols , 1797–1804) In addition, he made admirable illustrations for Goldsmith's Deserted Village, Thomson's Seasons, Burns's Poems, the fables of Aesop, and the History of British Fishes (unfinished when he died) There are many fine examples of Bewick's prints in the British Museum See his memoirs (1862), studies by D C Thomson (1882), Austin Dobson (1884), Rudolph Ruzicka (1943), and Graham Reynolds (1949)

Bexhill (bĕks'hĭl'), municipal borough (1931 pop 21,229; 1943 estimated pop 23,430), Sussex East, England It is a summer resort

Bexley, municipal borough (1931 pop 32,949, 1947 estimated pop 88,800), Kent, England It has electrical engineering works In the Red House here William Morris lived for several years

Bexley, residential city (pop 8,705), central Ohio, near Columbus, inc 1908 Capital Univ is here

Beyle, Marie Henri: see STENDHAL

Beyrouth or Beirut (both bārōōt'), city (pop 181,271), capital of Lebanon, a port on the Mediterranean at the foot of the Lebanon range A Phoenician city, it was known in ancient times as Berytus and was a trade center known from c 1500 B C It was prominent under the Seleucids but reached greater importance under the Romans It was not only a commercial town—with especially large trade in wine and linen—but also a colony with some territory In the 3d cent A D it had a famous school of Roman law It was included in the Byzantine Empire and declined after an earthquake in 551 Beyrouth was captured by the Arabs in 635 The Crusaders under Baldwin I took the city in 1110, and it was part of the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem until 1291, despite a siege by Saladin and the Egyptians in 1182 The Druses controlled the city under the Ottoman Empire. In the 19th cent it was one of the storm centers of the revolt of Mohammed Ali of Egypt. Ibrahim Pasha took it, but in 1840 the British and French bombarded and captured the city It was taken by Allied troops in the First World War, and under the French mandate over Syria and Lebanon it was the capital of Lebanon With the proclamation of the independence of Lebanon in the Second World War its importance was enhanced. Beyrouth is the seat of a coeducational American university, which has been of importance in the Middle East since the 1860s.

Beza, Theodore (bē'zə), Fr Théodore de Bèze (tāôdôr' du bĕz'), 1519–1605, French reformer and Calvinist theologian In 1548 he joined John Calvin at Geneva and soon became his intimate friend and chief aid Beza was professor of Greek at Lausanne from 1549 to 1558, and he wrote then De haereticis a civili magistratu puniendis (1554), a defense of the conduct of Calvin and the Genevan magistrates in the notorious trial and burning of Servetus In 1558 he became professor of Greek at Geneva, and in 1564 he succeeded Calvin in the chair of theology at Geneva Beza came to be regarded as the chief advocate of all reformed congregations in France, serving with distinction at the Colloquy of POISSY in 1561 He was of great importance in aiding the edition of the Greek and Latin versions of the New Testament, and he gave Codex D or Codex Bezae, one of the most important manuscripts of the Bible, to Cambridge Univ He wrote various theological tracts and a biography of Calvin

Bezai (bē'zā) [Heb ,=victory], family in the return from captivity Ezra 2 17; Neh. 7 23, 10 18.

Bezaleel (bēzăl'ēĕl, bĕz'ŭlēl) [Heb.,=in the shadow of God] 1 The artist of the Tabernacle in the wilderness Ex. 31. 2–11, 35 30, 38.22; 1 Chron 2 20, 2 Chron 1 5 2 Jew who had married a foreign wife Ezra 10 30.

Bèze, Théodore de. see BEZA, THEODORE.

Bezek (bē'zĕk) 1 Country or city of Adoni-bezek. Judges 1.5. 2 Bivouac of Israel. 1 Sam. 11.8.

Bezer (bē'stûr) [Heb.,=ore]. 1 Asherite. 1 Chron. 7 37. 2 Unidentified Reubenite town, E of the Jordan. Deut. 4.43; Joshua 20 8; 21.36; 1 Chron. 6.78.

Bezhitsa (bĕzhē'tsŭ), city (pop. 82,331), W European RSFSR, on the Desna river and just NW of BRYANSK. It produces locomotives and other machinery, oxygen, and electrical power

Béziers (bāzyā'), city (pop 59,894), Hérault dept , S France, in Languedoc It has an important trade in wine and spirits During the ALBIGENSIAN CRUSADE it was taken by Simon de Montfort in 1209, a horrible massacre followed

Bezruc, Petr, Czech Bezruč (pĕt'ûr bĕs'rōōch), pseud of Vladimir Vasek, Czech Vašek (vlă'dyĭmĭr vă'shĕk), 1867–, Czech poet, the bard of Silesia He belongs to no school, and his fame rests solely on the Silesian Songs, which began to appear in 1903 (latest ed , 1944) and in which he protests, often rhapsodically, against the moral and material poverty of the "lost" Slavs of the border between Silesia and Moravia. See Paul Selver, A Century of Czech and Slovak Poetry (1946).

Bezwada (bĭzwā'du), town (pop 86,184), NE Madras state, India, on the delta of the Kistna river. It is near a large irrigation dam A railroad junction, it is a trading center for the northern range of the Eastern Ghats The official name is VIJAYAWADA

Bhagalpur (bä'gulpōōr'), town (pop 93,254), NE Bihar state, India, on the Ganges river. It is a rail junction and a commercial center in an agricultural region.

Bhagavad-Gita (bŭg'ŭvŭd-gē'tu), Sanskrit philosophical poem incorporated in the MAHABHARATA It is an important expression of HINDUISM and has been much translated into English with the rest of the Mahabharata and separately (sometimes as The Song Celestial, as by Sir Edwin Arnold)

Bhamo (bä'mō, bŭmō'), town (pop c 7,800), NE Burma. It is the farthest point up the Irrawaddy river reached by steamers In the Second World War it was linked by the building of the Stilwell Road to Ledo in Assam Bhamo is the market town for the surrounding hill region and is also important as a center of overland trade with China Most of the people are Kachins

Bharat, an official name for the Union of India

Bhascara (bŭs'kuru), called Acarya (uchär'yu) [Skt ,=learned], b 1114, Hindu mathematician and astronomer According to the custom, he put his learned treatises into verse, adding, however, explanations in prose His work Siddhantasiromani includes chapters on arithmetic, algebra, and astronomy which have been translated into English He gives the first systematic exposition of the decimal system By mentioning such items as rates of interest and the prices of slaves he gives some indication of economic conditions in his day He was at the head of the observatory at Oudjein

Bhatgaon (bät'goun'), town (pop. c 30,000), Nepal, near Katmandu Founded in 865, it was for two centuries the country's chief town It has probably the finest pagoda in Nepal, completed in 1703 and well preserved

Bhatpara (bŭtpä'rŭ), city (pop 117,044), S West Bengal state, India, on the Hooghly river It is an old seat of Sanskrit learning Paper and jute products are the chief manufactures

Bhavnagar or Bhaunagar (both bounŭ'gur), town (pop 102,851), W Saurashtra state, India It is a port on the Gulf of Cambay Cotton goods are the chief export Cloth, bricks, tile, and iron products are manufactured

Bhils (bēlz), people, numbering more than 1,000,000, who inhabit portions of W central India, especially S Rajputana and N Bombay state They speak an Indo-European language, Bhili (see LANGUAGE, table), and retain a distinctive culture, much affected by, but not absorbed into, Hinduism.

Bholan Pass: see BOLAN PASS.

Bhopal (bō'päl), state (6,921 sq mi , pop 785,322), central India. The tall (c 54 ft high) Buddhist stupa at Sanchi (c 300 B C) is the greatest monument Agriculture is the main economic activity Until 1949 the predominantly Hindu population was ruled by a Mohammedan princely family The capital, Bhopal (pop 75,228), was founded in 1728 It is a trade center with manufactures of cotton cloth and jewelry

Bhubaneswar, India: see BHUVANESWAR.

Bhutan (bōōtän'), semi-independent state (c 18,000 sq. mi , pop c.300,000), in the E Himalayas, N of Bengal and Assam and S of Tibet The capital is Punaka. Formerly under the dual control of a spiritual and a temporal ruler, it has been since 1907 under a maharaja. The inhabitants are mostly Buddhists, though some are Hindus They farm the land where possible in this mountainous country, and they raise a breed of sturdy ponies Metalworking is expertly done Wild animals abound, especially elephants. The southern districts were ceded to the British after a war in 1864 In Aug , 1949, a treaty was concluded with India providing for the return to Bhutan of 32 sq mi. of territory and the assumption by India of Great Britain's former role in subsidising Bhutan and directing its foreign affairs.

Bhuvaneswar (bōōvänĕ'swär) or Bhubaneswar (bōōbä-), capital of Orissa state, India. Settlements on this site date back to the reign of Asoka, and here was (5th–10th cent.) the capital of the Kesaris dynasty of Orissa. It is estimated that 7,000 shrines once surrounded its sacred lake, today there are remains of some 500, displaying many styles of Hindu and Buddhist architecture and sculpture The population of Bhuvaneswar was small until its selection in 1947 as the state capital

Bi, chemical symbol of the element BISMUTH

Biafra, Bight of (bēä'frŭ), arm of the Gulf of Guinea, W Africa It lies approximately between the Niger delta and Libreville

Bialik, Hayyim Nahman (byä'lēk), 1873–1934, Hebrew poet, publisher in Odessa, Berlin, and Tel-Aviv, b Volhynia, Russia His fame began with the publication (1903) of his poem "In the City of Slaughter," inspired by a pogrom in Kishinev Bialik's style is sometimes biblical, prophetic, and majestic, sometimes simple and lyrical, he had a great effect upon modern Hebrew literature He wrote novels, humorous songs, and sketches, some of his work is in Yiddish, but his most important writings are in Hebrew They have been translated into many languages, including English (translations of his poems were published in 1924 and 1926) Bialik translated into Hebrew Shakspere's Julius Caesar, Cervantes's Don Quixote, Schiller's Wilhelm Tell, and Heine's poems

Bialowieza, Pol Bialowieza (byäwôvyĕ'zhä), large forest, E Poland Its varied trees—with pines predominant—shelter many animals, including the AUROCHS, the boar, and the deer, and it was a favorite hunting preserve of Polish kings and later of Russian tsars In the center of the forest the Polish government in 1921 established the first Polish national park

Bialystok, Pol Bialystok (byäwĭs'tôk), city (pop 56,759), NE Poland Founded in 1310, it passed to Prussia (1795) and to Russia (1807) and was returned to Poland in 1921 It has textile mills and other industries In the Second World War, Bialystok suffered much damage It is the capital of Bialystok prov (c 7,700 sq mi, pop 881,094), which also contains the cities of Lomza and Suwalki A section (c 4,900 sq mi, pop 36,469) of EAST PRUSSIA was placed under the administration of the province in 1945

Biandrata, Giorgio see BLANDRATA, GIORGIO

Biard, Pierre (pyĕr' byär'), c 1567–1622, French Roman Catholic missionary in North America, a Jesuit He left a professorship of theology in Lyons to head the first Jesuit mission to Canada, coming to Port Royal (the later Annapolis Royal) in Acadia in 1611 He was one of the founders (1613) of the French settlement at Bar Harbor on MOUNT DESERT ISLAND, in the present Maine He and all the colonists were soon taken prisoners by Samuel Argall After a long captivity and tempestuous voyage Biard finally reached France There he wrote his Relation de la Nouvelle France (1616), of much value to later historians

Biarritz (bē'ŭrĭts, Fr byärĕts'), town (pop 20,447), Basses-Pyrénées dept, SW France, on the Bay of Biscay near the Spanish border It was a favorite residence of Napoleon III and Empress Eugénie and since then has become one of the world's most fashionable resorts

Bias (bī'ŭs), fl 6th cent B C, Greek sage, b Priene He is at best semilegendary but was called one of the SEVEN WISE MEN OF GREECE Many epigrams were attributed to him by ancient writers

Bibb, William Wyatt, 1781–1820, first governor of Alabama (1817–20), b Amelia co, Ga Graduated in medicine from the Univ of Pennsylvania (1801), he began practice in Petersburg, Ga He was a state legislator, U S Representative (1805–13), and U S Senator (1813–16) In April, 1817, President Monroe appointed him governor of the newly created territory of Alabama, and he was continued in office when the new state government was organized (1819) On his death, Thomas Bibb, a brother, succeeded him in office

Bibb City, town (pop 1,631), W Ga, on the Chattahoochee river It is a northern suburb of Columbus and is built around a fabric plant

Bibbiena, Galli da see BIBIENA, GALLI DA,

Bibescu or Bibesco (both bēbĕs'kō), name of a noble Rumanian family A prominent member was George Bibescu, 1804–73, hospodar of Walachia (1843–48) He effected important reforms but was driven from the county in the Revolution of 1848 His brother Barbu Bibescu, 1799–1869, was adopted by Prince Stirbei, a Rumanian magnate, whose name he assumed when he became hospodar of Walachia (1849–56)

Bibiena or Bibbiena, Galli da (gälē'lē dä bēbyä'nä), family of Italian artists of the 17th and 18th cent The founder, Giovanni Maria Galli da Bibiena (jōvän'nē märē'ä), 1625–65, was born at Bibiena, near Bologna, and took the surname Bibiena, which was used by the entire family Giovanni studied with Francesco Albani and painted chiefly altarpieces, examples of which are to be seen in the churches of Bologna. His son Ferdinando Galli Bibiena (fĕrdēnän'dō), 1657–1743, the most renowned of the group, studied painting and architecture and became celebrated throughout Europe for his architectural views and theatrical designs and for his magnificent decorations for public and court festivities He wrote several treatises on architecture Francesco Galli Bibiena (fränchĕs'kō), 1659–1739, brother of Ferdinando, is celebrated chiefly as the designer of great theaters at Nancy, Verona, Rome, and elsewhere Other members of the family include Alessandro Galli Bibiena (älās-sän'drō), 1687–c 1769, son of Ferdinando, a fresco painter and architect, Giuseppe Galli Bibiena (jōsĕp'pä), 1696–1756, second son and pupil of Ferdinando and, like him, renowned for his sumptuous decorations for court and other functions, designed principally for the courts and theaters of Vienna, Munich, Dresden, Bayreuth, and Prague, Antonio Galli Bibiena (antō'nyō), 1700–1774, third son of Ferdinando, an architect and designer, and Carlo Galli Bibiena, (kär'lō) c 1728–c 1778, the son of Giuseppe, a painter and architect employed at many of the European courts

Bible, Dana Xenophon, 1891–, American football coach, b Jefferson City, Tenn, grad Carson-Newman College, 1912 He coached at several Southern universities, at the Univ of Nebraska (1929–36), and at the Univ of Texas (after 1937)

Bible [Gr, =the books], name used by Christians for their Scriptures For the composition and the canon of the Bible, see OLD TESTAMENT, NEW TESTAMENT, APOCRYPHA, PSEUDEPIGRAPHA, articles on the several books The traditional Christian view of the Bible is that it was all written under the guidance of God and that it is, therefore, all true literally or under the veil of allegory The view of many Protestants has been influenced in recent times by the pronouncements of critics, and the chief emphasis of modern FUNDAMENTALISM has been on the inerrancy of the Bible The interpretation of the Bible is one of the cardinal points of difference between Protestants, who believe that individuals have the right to interpret the Bible as they read it, and the Roman Catholic Church, which teaches that she alone may interpret Scripture and that the individual may read the Bible only according to the interpretation of the Church, such an interpretation is provided in the notes to the text which appear in Roman Catholic Bibles These notes vary from edition to edition Celebrated extant manuscripts of the Bible include Codex Vaticanus (Greek, 4th cent), at the Vatican, Codex Sinaiticus (Greek, 4th cent), in the British Museum, discovered by TISCHENDORF on Mt Sinai, Codex Alexandrinus (Greek, 5th cent), in the British Museum, given to Charles I by Cyril Lucaris, and Codex Bezae (Greek and Latin, 6th cent), at Cambridge, England, given by Theodore Beza The first great translation of the whole Bible was the VULGATE of St JEROME, the Latin version still used by the Roman Catholic Church The Greek text generally received in the East is, for the Old Testament, that of the Septuagint, the New Testament was written in Greek In England there were current from early times vernacular versions of parts of the Bible, especially of the Gospels, since the Gospel was often read at Mass in the vernacular after its recitation in Latin John WYCLIF (d 1384) was one of the first to project the publication and distribution of the Bible in the vernacular among the English people, and two translated versions go by his name In the 15th cent the Lollards did much to extend the use of the Wycliffite translation The next name in the history of the English Bible is that of William TYNDALE (d 1536), whose translation was not from Latin, like Wyclif's, but from Hebrew and Greek Its excellence is made evident in its use as a basis of the Authorized Version Tyndale's New Testament (1525–26) was the first English translation to be printed Contemporary with Tyndale was Miles COVERDALE (d 1569) The second version of Coverdale and the translation of Thomas Matthew closely followed Tyndale In 1539 the crown issued its first Bible, in the name of Henry VIII This, the Great Bible, was done principally by Coverdale The Geneva Bible or Breeches Bible (" made themselves breeches," Gen 3 7) was a revision of the Great Bible, financed and annotated by the Calvinists of Geneva The Bishops' Bible (1568) was a recasting of Tyndale The greatest of all English translations was the Authorized Version (AV) or King James Version of 1611, made by a great committee of churchmen, led by Lancelot ANDREWES and composed of many of the finest scholars in England The beautiful English of this version has had great influence and is generally ranked in English literature with the work of Shakspere The phraseology of much of it is that of Tyndale The Douay, or Rheims-Douay, Version was published by Roman Catholic scholars at Rheims (New Testament, 1582) and Douai, France (Old Testament, 1610), it was extensively revised by Archbishop CHALLONER In the 19th cent the project of revising the Authorized Version from the original tongues was undertaken by the Church of England with the cooperation of nonconformist churches The results of this revision were the English Revised Version and the American Revised Version (pub 1880–90) Since then several independent scholars have translated the Bible into English. Translations of the Bible have often been important in the histories of other literatures besides English, thus Luther's translation is the standard of German prose, and the Gothic translation of ULFILAS is the only notable work in Gothic The Bible is the only written work in many languages English translations begun in the 20th cent include the Revised Standard Version (Protestant, United States), the Westminster Version (Roman Catholic, England), the edition of the American Roman Catholic Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, and translations of James Moffatt (1922–25, Protestant) and Ronald Knox (1946–49, Roman Catholic)

Bible Christians, denomination of Methodists in England founded by William O'Bryan They seceded (1815–19) from the WESLEYAN METHODIST CHURCH and in 1907 were merged with two other branches in the UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Bible school, institution for religious instruction The term is sometimes applied to Sunday schools, but usually designates the daily vacation Bible schools for children The first school to provide religious teaching for young people during the summer vacation period was opened in New York city in 1901 by Dr Robert G. Boville, secretary of the Baptist City Mission The movement, which is nondenominational, spread rapidly The International Association of Daily Vacation Bible Schools is concerned with the work in the United States The World Association of Daily Vacation Bible Schools (1921) is composed of schools abroad

Bible societies, Protestant societies not limited by sectarian or ecclesiastical boundaries, for the translation, printing, and dissemination of the Holy Scriptures An early important organization of this kind was the Canstein Bible Society established in 1710 by Baron von Canstein at Halle, Germany In 1780 the Bible Society was formed in England to distribute Bibles among soldiers and sailors, the name was later changed to the Naval and Military Bible Society A pioneer and leader is the British and Foreign Bible Society founded (1804) in London, which began its work with Welsh Bibles for Thomas CHARLES With branches throughout the world, it has distributed versions of the Scriptures in hundreds of languages. In the United States the formation of Bible societies began early in the 19th cent Delegates from these associations founded (1816) the American Bible Society, which has many affiliates Through its work the Bible has been translated into many tongues and has been widely distributed In 1898 in Boscobel, Wis occurred a meeting that led to the founding of the Christian Commercial Men's Association of America, more usually known as the Gideons International Its program of placing a copy of the Bible in hotel rooms for use by commercial travelers and others has been widely realized and has made the organization internationally known In 1946 more than 20 national Bible societies formed an international association known as the United Bible Societies, with headquarters in London and in Geneva, Switzerland

Biblical Antiquities, Book of, see PSEUDEPIGRAPHA

bibliography. The listing of books is of ancient origin Lists of clay tablets have been found at Nineveh and elsewhere, the library at Alexandria had subject lists of its books Modern bibliography began only with the invention of printing and, at first, consisted of the catalogues of important libraries or "trade" bibliographies, i e, the lists of the publications of important publishing houses comparable to those in the present-day Trade List Annual and the British Reference Catalogue of Current Literature There have been efforts at universal bibliography, in 1545 at Zurich, Konrad von Gesner published his Bibliotheca universalis, in 1895 the International Institute of Bibliography was established at Brussels There are subject bibliographies, such as Sabin's Dictionary of Books Relating to America, and lists of the works of individual authors Bibliographies of rare and old books include that of J C Brunet and Book Prices Current The Cumulative Book Index is a monthly bibliography of books in the English language The Cambridge Bibliography of English Literature (4 vols 1941) is useful for English publications, and there is a bibliographical volume Literary History of the United States (1948), ed by R E Spiller and others, for American works Other special bibliographies include C P Farrar and A P Evans, Bibliography of English Translations from Medieval Sources (1946) See R B McKerrow, Introduction to Bibliography (1927), Arundell Esdaile, A Student's Manual of Bibliography (1931), Georg Schneider, Theory and History of Bibliography (1934), Bibliographical Index (cumulative)

Bibliothèque nationale (bēblēōtĕk' näsyônäl'), the great national library of France, in Paris It originated when early French kings made collections of writings In the 14th cent, Charles V placed a collection in the tower of the old Louvre Another early source was a library belonging to the house of Orléans at Blois Under Francis I (16th cent), these were brought together and deposited at Fontainebleau, to be transferred later to Paris by Charles IX Under Louis XIV (18th cent.), the library was enormously expanded The constantly growing departments (including nearly 5,000,000 books) are housed in a building erected (1854–75) under the direction of Henri Labrouste, it was remodeled in 1932–39

Bibracte (bĭbrăk'tē), former capital of the AEDUI, between present Nevers, Autun, and Moulins, central France Here Caesar defeated (58 B C) the Helvetii (see GALLIC WARS)

Bibulus (Marcus Calpurnius Bibulus) (bĭ'byŏŏlŭs), d 48 B C, Roman statesman The colleague in the consulship with Julius CAESAR in 59 B C, he did everything in his power to block every move made by Caesar A conservative republican, he was a strong partisan of Pompey In 51 B C he was governor of Syria and in 48 B C he wore himself to death trying to halt Caesar in the Adriatic

Bic (bēk), village (pop 1,117), E Que, on the south side of the St Lawrence and SW of Rimouski Bic Island, opposite the village, was once a headquarters for pilots guiding ships up the St Lawrence It is today chiefly a summer resort bicameral system (bī'kăm'ərul), governmental system dividing the legislative function between two chambers, an "upper," such as the U S Senate and the British House of Lords, and a "lower," such as the U S House of Representatives and the British House of Commons Though the term bicameral was coined by Jeremy Bentham as recently as 1832, a division of the legislative branch of government according to function and composition is of long standing Modern critics have held that the division of the English Parliament into Lords and Commons in the period following Edward I's Model Parliament of 1295 arose simply for the sake of convenience in transacting business, however, this division came to represent the historic cleavage between nobles and commons, with the balance of power, especially after the Revolution of 1688 and the rise of cabinet government in the 18th cent, shifting more and more to the commons The power of the House of Lords over money bills was drastically reduced by the Parliament Act of 1911, and in the period after the Second World War the upper chamber was almost extinguished as an effective legislative body In the American colonies, the bicameral system replaced the earlier one-house legislature, the upper chamber, whether elective or appointive, came to represent the colony as a whole, while delegates to the lower house were attached to particular constituencies The endorsement of the bicameral system in the U S Constitution, according to modern scholars, reflected colonial practice, British example, and the widespread differences in property qualification for suffrage and office-holding purposes current at the time rather than the French philosophical influences once considered primary In France, the differences between the 18th-century theorists who favored a bicameral legislature based on British experience, such as Montesquieu, and the "natural rights" philosophers, such as Rousseau, who opposed it have been reflected in subsequent French constitutional history The present French upper chamber has an advisory function Where bicameral legislatures exist, the two chambers express different principles of representation in addition to possessing different functions The unicameral legislative system after the First World War made headway in Eastern Europe, Latin America, and parts of the British dominions The Philippine republic is a recent proponent of the unicameral legislature Nebraska, in 1937, installed a single chamber See Lord Hugh Cecil, Second Chambers in the British Dominions and Foreign Countries in Rights of Citizenship (1912), A W Johnson, The Unicameral Legislature (1938)

bicarbonate see CARBONATE

bicarbonate of soda see SODA

Bichat, Marie François Xavier (märē' frăswä' zāvyĕ' bēshä'), 1771–1802, French anatomist and physiologist, studied in Paris with Desault His study of tissues (which he classified in 21 types) was the basis of modern histology He wrote Traité des membranes (1800), Recherches physiologiques sur la vie et sur la mort (1800), Traité d'anatomie descriptive (5 vols, 1801–3), and Anatomie générale (1801)

Bichri (bĭk'rī), father of SHEBA 3, but "son of Bichri" may stand for "descendants of BECHER 1" The "Berites," supporters of Sheba, are apparently to be understood as "Bichrites" 2 Sam 20

Bickerdyke, Mary Ann Ball, 1817–1901, Union nurse in the Civil War, b Knox Co, Ohio, educated at Oberlin Generally called Mother Bickerdyke, she served throughout the war in the West and was beloved by the enlisted men, whose rights she championed As able as she was kind, she was also a favorite with Generals Grant and Sherman

Bickerstaff, Isaac, pseudonym used by Jonathan Swift and later by Richard Steele in the Tatler

Bickerstaffe, Isaac, c 1735–c 1812, English dramatist, b Ireland Among his sentimental comedies The Maid of the Mill (1765) is best known

Bickmore, Albert Smith, 1839–1914, American naturalist, b St George, Maine, grad Dartmouth (B A, 1860, M A, 1863), Ph D Hamilton College, 1869 He studied (1860–64) with Louis AGASSIZ at Harvard and aided him in making collections in Bermuda From 1865 to 1868 he visited the Malay Archipelago, the Dutch East Indies, the interior of China, and little-known parts of Japan He wrote Travels in the East Indian Archipelago (1868) His conception of a museum of natural history was first outlined to a group of citizens in 1868 and in 1869 With the help of Theodore Roosevelt, M K Jessup, and Benjamin H Field, the American Museum of Natural History was established in New York city, Bickmore was superintendent from 1869 to 1884, and in 1882 he became head of the department of public instruction

Bicknell, city (pop 5,110), SW Ind, NE of Vincennes A coal-mining town, it has a polyglot population A mine rescue station is operated here in the center of the coal district

Bicocca, La (lä bēkô'kä), former village, Lombardy, N Italy, now included in Milan Here, in 1522, the vicomte de Lautrec, commanding a French army and Swiss mercenaries, was defeated by the combined Milanese, Spanish, and German troops in the ITALIAN WARS

bicycle, light, two-wheeled vehicle driven by pedals Suggestions of vehicles propelled by riders date from ancient times Experimental dandy horses operated by the thrust of the rider's feet upon the ground include a célérifère fashionable among French dandies c 1790 Probably the first practical dandy horse was the draisine, originated c 1816 by Baron Karl Drais von Sauerbronn, chief forester of the duchy of Baden, to facilitate his inspection tours Introduced into England in 1818, it was slowly improved, and c 1839 Kirkpatrick MacMillan, a Scottish blacksmith, developed a machine mechanically propelled by foot treadles and incorporating cranks, driving rods, and handle bars In France, Ernest Michaux introduced in 1855 a heavy crank-driven bicycle perfected c 1865 by Pierre Lallement, whose velocipede, known as a boneshaker, ran on iron-tired wooden rims, the front wheel larger than the rear Major improvements followed rapidly and included a light, hollow-steel frame, ball bearings, tangential metal spokes, and solid rubber tires By the 1880s the front wheel attained a diameter up to 64 in —the larger the wheel, the greater the potential speed, but the size was limited by the length of the rider's legs The safer tricycle also attained a vogue in the '80s, especially among women and short men The safety bicycle, with approximately equal wheels and a sprocket chain drive connecting the pedals with the rear wheels, was first manufactured at Coventry, England, c 1885 by James Starley and, following the addition of the pneumatic tire developed by John Dunlop in 1888, superseded the high-wheel form Additions to safety or comfort include the freewheel, the coaster brake, popular in the United States, and the hand brake, preferred abroad, and adjustable handle bars In the '80s and '90s cycling became a fad of major proportions in the United States and Europe Bicycle clubs were formed, both sexes participated in rides into the country, often on tandem bicycles The League of American Wheelmen, organized in 1880, was a leader in the agitation for good roads In the United States especially, bicycling declined with the coming of the automobile

Biddeford (bĭd'fūrd), city (pop 19,790), SW Maine, at falls of the Saco opposite Saco, SW of Portland, inc as a town 1718, as a city 1855 This area, granted to John Oldham and Richard Vines in 1630, was first visited by Vines in 1616 for Sir Ferdinando Gorges Having water power, Biddeford became a center of manufacturing, mainly of textiles, textile machinery, and lumber products Biddeford Pool is a resort at the mouth of the Saco

Biddle, Clement, 1740–1814, American soldier in the American Revolution, b Philadelphia He helped to organize a company of volunteer Quakers and later rose to importance in the service of supplies He was deputy quartermaster general of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey militia, commissary general of forage under Nathanael Greene in the Carolina campaign, and then quartermaster general of the Pennsylvania militia He attracted the attention of George Washington and others in command After the war he was (1789–93) U S marshal in Pennsylvania, but he gained more note as an importing merchant of Philadelphia

Biddle, Francis Beverley, 1886–, U S Attorney General (1941–45), b Paris, France, of American parents, grad Harvard (B A, 1909, LL D, 1911) Secretary to Associate Justice O W Holmes (1912), he became (1922) a successful corporation lawyer He served as National Labor Relations Board chairman (1934–35) and as appellate judge (1939–40) before succeeding Robert H JACKSON as Solicitor General (1940) and as Attorney General Biddle was (1945–46) a U S judge for the trial of war criminals at Nuremberg

Biddle, George, 1885–, American painter, b Philadelphia He prepared for the law but instead of practicing it studied painting at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, at Julien's in Paris, and in Munich During the First World War he served with distinction at Saint-Mihiel and the Argonne He traveled after the war sojourning in Polynesia, Paris, New York and the Southwest, and Italy In 1932 he returned to the United States. His work betrays little of his varied experience, being rather a straightforward interpretation of American life He is represented in the Whitney Museum, New York, and in the museums of Philadelphia, Denver, and Houston and Dallas, Texas Notable frescoes are in the Dept of Justice Building, Washington, D C He wrote An Artist's Story (1939) and Artist at War (1944)

Biddle, James, 1783–1848, U S naval officer, b Philadelphia He became a midshipman in 1800 and at the beginning of the War of 1812 was first lieutenant on the Wasp He led the boarding party that captured the Frolic, but the prize was lost later when a British ship of the line appeared. Later he was in command of the sloop Hornet and managed to capture a superior British vessel, the Penguin Again a British ship of the line appeared This time in a 36-hour chase Biddle managed to get away, only to find when he reached harbor that peace had been reached Sent out in the Ontario in 1817, he took formal possession of the Oregon country for the United States in 1818, helping to establish a claim that later was very important Afterward he spent much time in protecting U S shipping in South American waters when the troublous times of the new Latin American republics made the rights of neutrals hard to maintain In 1846 James Biddle negotiated the first treaty between the United States and China

Biddle, John, 1615–62, founder of English Unitarianism From his examination of the Scriptures he lost belief in the doctrine of the Trinity and stated his conclusions in Twelve Arguments Drawn Out of Scripture When the existence of this paper was made known to the magistrates in 1645, Biddle was imprisoned, as he was frequently thereafter His Twelve Arguments was suppressed and burned by the hangman in 1647 Upon the publication of his Two-fold Catechism in 1654, he was tried for his life but received from Cromwell a sentence of banishment to the Scilly Islands Returning in 1658, Biddle taught and preached until in 1662 he was again thrown into prison, where he died His followers were called Biddelians, Socinians, or Unitarians

Biddle, Nicholas, 1750–78, American naval officer, b Philadelphia Biddle deserted the British navy in 1773 In the American Revolution, he became captain in the American navy and daringly raided British shipping off the American coast Given command (1777) of the ship Randolph, Biddle was killed and his ship destroyed in an encounter (1778) with the British warship Yarmouth off the coast of Barbados See W B Clark, Captain Dauntless (1949).

Biddle, Nicholas, 1786–1844, American financier, b Philadelphia, grad College of New Jersey (now Princeton Univ), 1801 After holding important posts in the American legations in France and England, he returned to the United States in 1807 and became one of the leading lights of Port-Folio, a literary magazine, which he edited after 1812 He was also commissioned to write the history of the Lewis and Clark expedition, but turned the job over to Paul Allen, a Philadelphia journalist, when he was elected to the state senate In 1819 President James Monroe appointed him a director of the BANK OF THE UNITED STATES He became its president in 1822 and was one of the chief targets of the shafts of the Jacksonians in their war on the evils of the Bank of the United States After the bank was disestablished and had become (1836) only the United States Bank of Pennsylvania, Biddle retained his office, resigning in 1839 See R C H Catterall, The Second Bank of the United States (1903)

Bideford (bĭd'ufurd), municipal borough (1931 pop 8,778, 1943 estimated pop 9,442), Devonshire, England, on the Torridge and SW of Barnstaple The river is crossed by a 16th-century 22-arch bridge Bideford is a seaport and manufactures and exports ropes and sails, leather goods, textiles, pottery, and ironware. Sir Richard Grenville, born here, appears in Kingsley's Westward Ho!

Bidkar, captain under Ahab and Jehu 2 Kings 9 25

Bidpai or Bidpay (both bĭd'pī), supposed name of the author of the fables of the PANCHATANTRA The name first appears in an Arabic version of these fables—hence they are called the fables of Bidpai It is probably Sanskrit, meaning "wise man"

Biedermeier (bē'durmīur), name applied, first in a joking spirit, to a period of culture and a style of furniture and decoration originating in Germany early in the 19th cent It is believed to have been named for the worthy, bourgeois-minded "Papa Biedermeier," a humorous character featured in a series of verses by Ludwig Eichrodt, published in Fliegende Blätter. The Biedermeier period found expression in comfortable, homelike furnishings, simple in design and inexpensive in material, fitting the requirement of the German people in a time, following the Napoleonic Wars, when there was little wealth Although the best Biedermeier furniture was produced between 1820 and 1830, the period is regarded as extending from 1816 to 1848. Later pieces were usually clumsy and lacking in taste The designs were simplified forms of the French Empire and Directoire styles and of some 18th-century styles of England. Cabinets and other large pieces were severe in line and surface. Chairs and sofas show curved lines, frequently graceful, but sometimes exaggerated into swellings and contortions Black lacquer was effectively substituted for the costly ebony of Empire pieces Painted decorations reminiscent of peasant types were common The Biedermeier style has had a certain vogue among collectors and has been reproduced Much of the original furniture is still in S Germany and Austria, and a number of examples are in the United States

Biel (bēl) or Bienne (byĕn), town (pop 41,219), Bern canton, Switzerland, at the northeast end of the Lake of Biel A watchmaking center, it is the seat of a technical institute The Schwab museum has relics of lake dwellings found in the Lake of Biel or Lake of Bienne (15 sq mi), at the foot of the Jura mts Connected with Lake Neuchâtel by the Zihl Canal, it contains the Isle of St Pierre (now a peninsula), made famous by J J ROUSSEAU

Biel-. For some Russian names beginning thus, see BEL-

Biela, Wilhelm, Baron von (vĭl'hĕlm, fŭn bē'lu), 1782–1856, German astronomer While a captain in the Austrian army, he made in 1826 observations on the comet called by his name Biela's comet, when an astronometer computed its periodic time to be 6 692 years, was recognized as the same comet which had been noted in 1772, 1805, and 1818 In 1846 it was observed to split in two It has not been seen since 1852

Bielefeld (bē'lufĕlt), city (pop 132,276), in the former Westphalia prov , NW Germany Bielefeld is noted for its handmade linens Factories make silk, glassware, and sewing machines Chartered in 1250, the city was a member of the Hanseatic League Severe destruction occurred in the Second World War

Bielitz, Poland see BIELSKO

Biella (bēĕl'la), city (pop 24,328), Piedmont, NW Italy Chief wool-textile center of Italy, it also has several medieval palaces and a baptistery (10th cent) At Oropa on a mountain near by are a shrine and a monastery

Bielski, Martin, Pol Marcin Bielski (mar'tsēn byĕl'skĕ), c 1495 1575, Polish historian and poet He was the first to write history in the Polish language His history of Poland was completed by his son, Joachim Bielski

Bielsko (byĕl'skō), Ger Bielitz (bē'lĭts), town (pop 25,725), Silesia prov , W Poland It passed to Austria in 1772 and was returned to Poland in 1919 Though chiefly a trade center, Bielsko has a textile industry notable since the Middle Ages and also produces metal goods, clothing, foodstuffs, and chemicals

Bien, Jules (bĕn), 1826–1909, American map engraver, b Naumburg, Germany At Frankfurt he studied graphic arts, and after coming to the United States he engraved maps for many official publications—the census reports, geological and topographical surveys and atlases and historical records He also made maps for state geological surveys and published three atlases of his own—of Westchester co , N Y (1893), of New York state (1895), and of Pennsylvania (1900)

Bienewitz, Peter see APIANUS, PETRUS

Bienne, Switzerland see BIEL

biennial, a plant which ordinarily lives but two years, as distinguished from an ANNUAL or a PERENNIAL The first year, a biennial usually produces a fleshy root (by which the plant survives the winter) and a cluster of leaves, the second year, the flowers and seeds are produced The large roots contain an abundance of stored food, utilized when the flowers and seeds develop the next season, after which the plant dies Short-lived perennials (e g , the hollyhock) are often considered and treated as biennials, while some biennials are frequently treated as annuals (sown early for blooming the same season) Some biennials reseed themselves, and some produce offsets that perpetuate the plant indefinitely, so that it becomes essentially perennial Plants considered typical biennials include species of Canterbury bells, forget-me-not, foxglove, hollyhock, honesty, beet, and carrot See Gertrude Jekyll, Annuals and Biennials (1916), H S Ortloff, A Garden Bluebook of Annuals and Biennials (1924)

Bienville, Jean Baptiste le Moyne, sieur de (zhäⁿ' batēst' lu mwăn' syŭr' du byĕvēl'), 1680–1768, colonizer and governor of Louisiana, b Ville Marie (on the site of Montreal), Canada, son of Charles le Moyne, sieur de LONGUEUIL, and brother of Pierre le Moyne, sieur d'IBERVILLE A midshipman in the royal navy, he served gallantly in Iberville's last expedition into the Hudson Bay region in 1697 and the next year accompanied Iberville's colonizing expedition to the mouth of the Mississippi He was prominent in the preliminary explorations, ascending the Mississippi to the mouth of the Red River, and because of his facility in the Indian tongues he carried on negotiations with the tribes of the region Iberville, upon his departure, left Bienville at the Biloxi settlement as second in command to the sieur de Sauvole, and in 1701, when Sauvole died, Bienville became the real leader of the settlement He transferred the colony to Mobile Bay in 1702 and founded Mobile in 1710. After Iberville's death in 1706, only Bienville's heroic efforts kept the settlement alive in the face of famine, Indian hostility, the jealousy of Spain and Canada, and the neglect of France In 1712, when Louisiana became a monopoly of the French merchant Antoine Crozat, Bienville was superseded as governor by CADILLAC, but regained his position in 1717, the year John LAW, with his MISSISSIPPI SCHEME, took over Crozat's interest The colony grew rapidly in the next few years New Orleans, which he founded in 1718, succeeded Biloxi as Louisiana's capital in 1722 In 1719 he twice captured Pensacola from the Spanish Fearing insurrections of Negro slaves, first brought to the colony under his direction, Bienville promulgated (1724) the Code Noir Its provisions, completely regulating slave life, were humane for the times, and the Code remained in force until Louisiana became part of the United States An unsuccessful campaign in 1723 against the Natchez, whom he had previously defeated (1716), led to his recall (1725) to France Unsuccessful in defending his administration, he was relieved of the governorship Upon Louisiana's subsequent decline, he was begged to return and was warmly received on his arrival in 1733 He led strenuous but indecisive expeditions (1736, 1739–40) against the Natchez and the Chickasaw Worn out by his exertions, Bienville retired in 1743 and spent his remaining days in Paris He lived long enough to see transferred to Spain the colony which he, more than anyone else, had created for France See biography by Grace King (1892)

Bier, August (ou'gōōst bēr'), 1861–, German surgeon In 1907 he became a professor at the Univ of Berlin He advocated the use of hyperemia in treating surgical and other wounds, his treatise on the subject was translated in 1909

Bierce, Ambrose Gwinett, 1842–1914?, American journalist and author, b Meigs co , Ohio, studied at Kentucky Military Institute After distinguished Civil War service with the 9th Indiana Infantry, he turned to journalism In San Francisco he wrote for the Argonaut and the News-Letter, of which he became editor in 1868 In London, 1872–76, he wrote for the magazine Fun and finished three books, including his Cobwebs from an Empty Skull (1874) Back in San Francisco, he edited the Wasp, 1880–86, a column which he started in the Argonaut was continued in Hearst's Sunday Examiner, 1887–96, and made him the literary arbiter of the West Coast Later he was Washington correspondent for the American and a contributor to Cosmopolitan Some of his short stories were collected in Tales of Soldiers and Civilians (1891) and Can Such Things Be? (1893) Praise was showered on The Monk and the Hangman's Daughter (1892), a rewriting of a translation by G A Danziger (Adolphe de Castro) of Richard Voss's work Bierce's excellence lies in distilled satire (as in his Fantastic Fables, 1899) and in the savagery and horror of his short stories In 1913 he went to Mexico, where all trace of him was lost See his Collected Works (12 vols , 1909–12), Collected Writings (selected by Clifton Fadiman, 1946), and letters (ed by B C Pope, 1922), biographies by Carey McWilliams (1929) and Walter Neale (1929)

Bierman, Bernard William (Bernie Bierman), 1894–, American football coach, b Springfield, Minn , grad Univ of Minnesota, 1916 Bierman coached football at the Univ of Montana (1919–22), Tulane Univ (1923–25, 1927–32), Mississippi State College (1925–27), and the Univ of Minnesota (after 1932) He served with the U S marines in the First World War and the Second World War

Bierstadt, Albert (bēr'stat), 1830–1902, American painter of Western scenery, b Germany His canvases of the Rocky Mts and the Yosemite enjoyed wide popularity His works include The Rocky Mountains (Metropolitan Mus), Indian Encampment, Shoshone Village (N Y Public Library), The Last of the Buffalo (Corcoran Gall), and Discovery of the Hudson River and The Settlement of California (Capitol, Washington, D C)

Bifrost (bĭf'rŏst, bīv'–), in Norse mythology, rainbow bridge It leads from earth to heaven (Asgard) and it is guarded by HEIMDALL

bigamy (bī'gumē), crime of marrying during the continuance of a prior lawful marriage Bigamy is not committed by remarrying if the prior marriage was terminated by a DIVORCE or a decree of NULLITY OF MARRIAGE If a husband or wife was absent and unheard of for seven (or in some states five) years and not known to be alive, he is presumed dead, and remarriage by the other spouse is not bigamous Generally it is not a defense to a charge of bigamy that the offending party in good faith believed that he was divorced or that his previous marriage was not lawful The U S Supreme Court has ruled that plurality of wives, as originally permitted by the Mormon religion, is a crime and is not defensible as an exercise of religious liberty

Big Ben, the bell in the Parliament tower (Westminster Palace), London It was named for Sir Benjamin Hall, commissioner of works when the bell was installed (1856) The name is often given the huge clock in the tower

Big Bend National Park, 691,978 95 acres, W Texas, est 1944 It is a huge triangle formed by the Rio Grande, which runs south, then north in a big bend and flows through deep canyons, notably the Santa Helena Canyon The river, the desert plain, and the Chisos Mts offer sharp contrasts in wilderness scenery, and the park has archaeological treasures, some petrified trees, vestiges of prehistoric Indian cultures, and rare forms of animal and plant life It is the larger part of the projected Big Bend International Park, which will include a similar region on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande

Big Bethel, locality near Fort Monroe, Va , scene of one of the first engagements of the Civil War, June 10, 1861 Gen Ebenezer W Pierce, acting under orders of Gen B F Butler, led a Union brigade against the outposts of Gen J B Magruder's Confederate encampment and was repulsed

Big Black Mountain, 4,150 ft high, E Ky , in the Cumberlands near Lynch It is the highest peak in the state

Big Black River, rising in NE Mississippi and flowing 330 mi SW to the Mississippi river below Vicksburg

Big Dipper: see URSA MAJOR

Bigelow, Henry Jacob (bĭ'gulō), 1818–90, American physician, b Boston, M D Harvard, 1841, son of Jacob Bigelow He was associated with Harvard and with the Massachusetts General Hospital throughout his professional career He wrote the first account of W T G Morton's use of ether anesthesia (1846) and was the first in the United States to excise the hip joint and to introduce lithotrity (a method of crushing a stone in the bladder) He wrote an important monograph on the fracture and dislocation of the hip

Bigelow, Jacob, 1786–1879, American physician and botanist, b Sudbury, Mass , M D Univ of Pennsylvania, 1810, father of Henry J Bigelow He was professor of materia medica at Harvard (1815–55) and was long and prominently associated with the Massachusetts General Hospital He made an important contribution to medical theory and practice in his Discourse on Self-limited Diseases (1835) and to botany in his American Medical Botany (3 vols , 1817–20) and Florula Bostoniensis (1814, enlarged ed , 1824)

Bigelow, John, 1817–1911, American editor, author, and diplomat, b Malden, N Y , grad Union College, 1835 In 1838 he was admitted to the New York bar From 1848 to 1861 he shared with William Cullen BRYANT the ownership and editing of the New York Evening Post His antislavery and free-trade editorials were especially vigorous In 1861 he was appointed consul general at Paris, and later (1865–66) he served as U S minister to France Among American Civil War diplomats his work was second in importance only to that of Charles Francis Adams in London He is given large credit for preventing French recognition of the Confederacy His France and the Confederate Navy (1888) is a valuable historical work Notable among a long list of publications is his life of Benjamin Franklin (1874) and his edition of Franklin's complete works (10 vols , 1887–88) See his Retrospections of an Active Life (5 vols , 1909–13), biography by Margaret Clapp (1947)

Bigelow, Poultney, 1855–, American author and traveler, grad Yale, 1879, and Columbia School of Law, 1882, son of John Bigelow He was admitted to the bar in New York in 1882, but soon became a journalist and world traveler He continued the friendship he formed in childhood with William II of Germany and was well known for his sympathy with German aims Among his several books are Prussianism and Pacifism (1919) and his autobiography, Seventy Summers (1925)

Biggar, town (pop 1,799), W Sask , W of Saskatoon It is a railway center

Biggs, E Power (Edward George Power Biggs), 1906–, English-American organist, studied at the Royal Academy of Music, London His reputation was already established before he came (1930) to the United States Through many recitals and through a series of weekly broadcasts, begun in 1942, from the Germanic Museum of Harvard Univ , he has done much to make the best organ music, particularly that of the baroque period and of the 20th cent , familiar to the American public

Biggs, Hermann Michael, 1859–1923, American physician and public health administrator, b Trumansburg, N Y , M D Bellevue Hospital Medical College 1883 After studying abroad he taught from 1887 to 1923 at Bellevue In 1892 he organized and became director of the bacteriological laboratories of the New York city health department—the first of their kind in the country—and in 1894 he instituted the production and free distribution of diphtheria antitoxin His measures for the control of tuberculosis were also notable In 1914 he became state health commissioner See biography by C E A Winslow (1929)

Bigheart, Okla see BARNSDALL

Big Hole Battlefield National Monument: see NATIONAL PARKS AND MONUMENTS (table)

Bighorn, river, 461 mi long, formed at Riverton, W central Wyo , by the confluence of the Wind and the Popo Agie It flows N between the Absaroka

Range and the Bighorn Mts. into Montana, where it receives the Little Bighorn and flows NE to the Yellowstone river. At its mouth a trading post was established in 1807. The Bighorn basin is included in the unified plans for the development of the MISSOURI RIVER BASIN PROJECT. The Riverton project and the SHOSHONE PROJECT are on tributaries of the Bighorn. The Hardin project (with Kane and Yellowtail dams) and the Bighorn project (with Boysen Dam, c 20 mi. NE of Riverton, begun in 1947) are parts of the Bureau of Reclamation plans for the Bighorn itself.

bighorn or Rocky Mountain sheep, wild sheep of W North America, formerly plentiful in mountains from Canada to Mexico. Indiscriminate hunting, disease, and scarcity of food have reduced its numbers and in some areas exterminated it. It is a heavy, grayish-brown animal, with a conspicuous whitish patch on its hind quarters, the male carries on its head a pair of heavy curling horns, while the female has short, straight spikes. One form lives at high altitudes in the W United States and another in desert regions. Alaskan forms are Dall's or white sheep and Stone's or black sheep.

Bighorn Mountains, part of the Rocky Mts., N central Wyo., extending N of the Mont. border E of the Bighorn river and reaching 13,165 ft. in Cloud Peak. They include the Bighorn National Forest, mainly of pine, spruce, and fir, the grazing place of many cattle, horses, and sheep.

Bigler Lake. see TAHOE, LAKE.

Big Manitou Falls (măn'ĭtōō), 165 ft. high, NW Wis., in the Black River which flows N to Lake Superior. The falls are the highest in the state.

Bignon, Louis Pierre Édouard (lwē' pyĕr' ādwär' bōnyō'), 1771–1841, French diplomat and historian. He held a number of varied posts under Napoleon, was acting minister of foreign affairs during the Hundred Days, and after Waterloo signed the surrender of Paris. A member of the chamber of deputies in the Restoration, he was briefly (1830) foreign minister under Louis Philippe who raised him to the peerage in 1837. His major historical work is the Histoire de France sous Napoléon (10 vols., 1829–50).

Bignonia (bĭgnō'nēə), name for a genus of plants in which the TRUMPET CREEPER is sometimes included, but often limited to a single species, the cross vine or trumpet flower, Bignonia (or Anisostichus) capreolata. This is a tall climber with trumpet-shaped, reddish-orange flowers, cultivated on walls and trees and in greenhouses and native to the United States from Virginia and Illinois southward. The stem in cross section reveals a crosslike design because of which sacred virtues have been attributed to the plant.

Bigod, Hugh: see NORFOLK, HUGH BIGOD, 1ST EARL OF.

Bigordi, Domenico see GHIRLANDAIO, DOMENICO.

Bigot, François (frāswä' bēgō'), d. after 1760, intendant of New France (1748–59), b. Bordeaux, France. At Louisburg, where he served (1739–45) as commissary, it has been said that he indulged in fraudulent practices which contributed to the downfall of that fort. Powerful friends in France secured for him the office of intendant of New France. Bigot arrived at Quebec in 1748 and immediately instituted a system of peculation by which every branch of the public service was laid under tribute to enrich himself and his friends. His corrupt administration reduced the colony to bankruptcy and paved the way for the English conquest. After the fall of New France, he returned to France, where he was arrested, imprisoned for nearly a year, compelled to make restitution, and then banished. The date of Bigot's death is uncertain.

Big Rapids, resort city (pop. 4,987), co. seat of Mecosta co., N Mich., at falls of the Muskegon NE of Grand Rapids, settled 1854, inc. 1869. Its extensive gas wells supply a wide area. Furniture and tools are made. Ferris Institute is in Big Rapids (see FERRIS, W. N.). A state fish hatchery is near.

Big River: see FORT GEORGE, river.

Big Sandy River. 1 River formed at Louisa, Ky., by the junction of Tug Fork and Levisa Fork. It is part of the Kentucky–West Virginia boundary and flows N to the Ohio at Catlettsburg, Ky. 2 River rising in W Tennessee, N of Lexington, and flowing generally NNE to the Kentucky Reservoir of the Tennessee river.

Big Sioux (sōō), river rising in NE South Dakota and flowing south 420 mi. through a country of lakes and farms past Watertown and Sioux Falls to the Missouri at Sioux City, Iowa. In its lower course it is part of the Iowa–South Dakota boundary.

Big Spring, city (pop. 12,604), co. seat of Howard co., W Texas, SW of Sweetwater, founded 1881 with the coming of the railroad, inc. 1907. The spring, which once fed Beal's Branch of the Colorado but is now dry, was known to the Comanche, to buffalo hunters, to cattle ranchers, and finally to cotton and grain farmers. Oil, discovered in 1928, made the city a center of industries concerned with oil. It also handles and processes meat, dairy, poultry, and clay products and has railroad shops.

Big Stone Gap, manufacturing and mining town (pop. 4,331), extreme SW Va., near the Ky. line and in the coal district of the Cumberlands, inc. 1888. It was named for the pass cut through the mountains by the Powell river. The Southwest Virginia Museum, founded in 1935 and under state control since 1946, presents the history and folk culture of SW Virginia. Natural Tunnel (100–200 ft. high, 130 ft. wide, and c. 900 ft. long) is south.

Big Stone Lake, long narrow lake on the Minn.–S. Dak. line, once the outlet of glacial Lake Agassiz. The Minnesota river has its source in the lake.

Bigtha, chamberlain of Ahasuerus. Esther 1:10.

Bigthan, chamberlain who conspired with Teresh against King Ahasuerus. Esther 2:21. He is called Bigthana (bĭg'thənə) in Esther 6:2.

Big Timber, city (pop. 1,533), co. seat of Sweet Grass co., S Mont., on the Yellowstone river and NE of Livingston, inc. 1902. In cattle and sheep-raising country, it has dude ranches near by.

big tree see SEQUOIA.

Bigvai (bĭg'vāī, bĭgvā'ī) 1 Signer of the covenant. Ezra 2:2, Neh. 7:7, 10:16. 2 Name of a family in the return. Ezra 2:14, Neh. 7:19.

Bihar (bēhär'), state (70,308 sq. mi., pop. 36,545,575), NW India. Patna is the capital. Bihar is bounded on the north by Nepal and on the east by Pakistan. The predominantly agricultural northern area, crossed by the Ganges river, supports the bulk of the population. Rainfall, frequently inadequate, is supplemented by extensive irrigation. Rice is grown where possible, maize, wheat, barley, sugar cane, and oil seeds are also important crops. Jute is the main cash crop of the extreme northeast. The central and southern areas are hilly. The southeastern section is one of the greatest sources of India's mineral wealth. Mica and copper are abundant. Iron, found in association with coal, is fabricated at the great Jamshedpur steelworks. The chief transportation lines run east and west, thus linking central India with the Bengal ports. The provincial population, almost entirely Hindu, is unusually homogeneous for India. They speak Bihari, an Indo-European language. Bihar was the scene of Buddha's early life. Its history after the 17th cent. was largely linked with that of Bengal from which it was separated in 1912 to become part of Bihar and Orissa prov. From 1936 to 1950 it was a province.

Bihari (bēhär'ē). Indo-European language. See LANGUAGE (table).

Bisk, RSFSR see BISK.

Bijapur or Bejapur (both bīja'pōōr), town (pop. 48,968), SE Bombay state, India. There are extensive remains from the period (c. 1490–1686) when it was the capital of the Moslem state of Bijapur, notably the tomb of Mahmud Shah, with a dome c. 124 ft. in diameter. Bijapur is primarily a market place and a cotton-ginning center.

Bijns, Anna (ä'nä bīns'), c. 1494–1575?, Flemish poet of Antwerp. Her three volumes (1528, 1548, 1567) of lyric verse place her among the foremost Dutch poets of her age. She excelled in robust satires passionately inveighing against the social evils of the day and attacking the Reformation. Her religious poetry is sincere and moving.

Bika, El (ĕl bĭkä' bā'kä), valley, c. 100 mi. long, Syria and Lebanon, between the Lebanon and the Anti-Lebanon ranges. The upper course of the Orontes flows in the valley, which was the heart of ancient Coele-Syria and was the scene of warfare from the dawn of history. It was included in a province of the Persian Empire and was later bitterly contested by the Seleucids and the Ptolemaic kings of Egypt. Antioch was founded by Seleucus I to dominate the region. The name also appears as El Beqa and El Bukaa.

Bikaner (bĭkunĕr') former native state (23,181 sq. mi., pop. 1,292,938), Rajputana, India. The land, almost entirely desert, chiefly supports the raising of sheep and camels. Wool is locally spun and woven. In 1949 Bikaner was joined to the state of Rajasthan. Its capital city, Bikaner (pop. 127,226), was founded in 1488. There are several beautiful Rajput palaces of the 16th cent. Fine blankets and carpets are manufactured.

Bikini (bēkē'nē), uninhabited atoll comprising 36 islets on a reef 25 mi. long, central Pacific, one of the Ralik Chain in the Marshall Islands. Its former inhabitants were removed in 1946 to Rongerik before U.S. atom-bomb tests were made here. Later the Bikini natives were transferred from Rongerik and were in 1949 on Kili. The atoll was formerly called Escholtz Islands.

Bilac, Olavo (ōlä'vō bĭläk'), 1865–1918, Brazilian poet. He was the chief poet of the Parnassian school in Brazil, and his writings have an enameled elegance as well as sensual richness. Some of them are gathered in Poesias (1888) and Tarde [afternoon] (1919).

Bilaspur (bēləs'pōōr'), state (453 sq. mi., pop. 110,136), NW India, in the W Himalayas. The capital is Bilaspur (pop. 2,873). The state was selected as the site of a large projected dam across the Sutlej river.

Bilbao (bĭlbä'ō), city (pop. 183,200), capital of Vizcaya prov., N Spain, in the BASQUE PROVINCES, on both banks of the Nervión river, near the Bay of Biscay. The second port of Spain since the 19th cent., it is the center of an important industrial area, with rich iron deposits in the vicinity. Steel mills and shipbuilding are the chief industries. Founded in the 14th cent. on the site of an ancient settlement, Bilbao flourished in the 15th and 16th cent. In the 19th cent. it was twice unsuccessfully besieged by the Carlists. Bilbao was the seat of the short-lived Basque autonomous government from 1936 until its capture (1937) by the Insurgents.

Bilbilis, see CALATAYUD, Spain.

Bilbo, Theodore Gilmore, 1877–1947, U.S. Senator (1935–47), b. Poplarville, Pearl River co., Miss. After study at the Univ. of Nashville (1897–1900) and Vanderbilt Univ. law school (1905–7), he was admitted (1908) to the Tennessee bar. One of the most ultraconservative of Southern Democrats, he won his political way as a demagogue upholding white supremacy and was twice governor of Mississippi (1916–20, 1928–32) before he served as U.S. Senator from that state. He died while the 80th Congress was investigating charges that he was disqualified for the Senate because of anti-Negro campaigning and accepting bribes.

Bildad, the second, and perhaps the least consoling, of Job's comforters. Job 8,18,25,42:9.

Bilderdijk, Willem (wĭl'ŭm bĭl'dərdĭk), 1756–1831, Dutch poet. A monarchist exile (1795–1806) from the Batavian Republic, he returned to the Netherlands under Louis Bonaparte, whom he tutored in Dutch. Later he conducted a small private college at Leiden. There he had great influence on his pupils, among them Isaäc da Costa and Jacob van Lennep. Bilderdijk's work is of prodigious quantity and very uneven. At its best, however, the poetry is so splendid—the poet is so much the master of his medium—that Bilderdijk is ranked as the first great Dutch poet after Vondel. His most ambitious effort is an unfinished epic, De Ondergang der eerste Wereld [the destruction of the first creation] (1820).

bile, alkaline fluid formed in the liver, usually yellow, yellowish brown, or green in color. It is composed chiefly of water, bile salts and acids, bile pigments derived from the decomposition of worn-out red corpuscles, cholesterol, lecithin, and inorganic salts. In man the bile is stored temporarily in the GALL BLADDER, from which it passes through the cystic and common bile ducts into the first part of the small intestine when the partially digested food reaches that portion of the alimentary canal. Not all the functions of bile have been fully investigated, but it is known to aid in the emulsification, digestion, and absorption of fats and to serve as a means of carrying off the bile pigments and certain other products to be excreted. If the flow of bile through the bile ducts is obstructed by bacteria, gall stones, or other abnormalities, digestive disturbances and frequently JAUNDICE result.

Bileam (bĭl'ēəm), the same as IBLEAM.

Bilgah (bĭl'gu) [Heb. = cheerfulness] 1 Priest. 1 Chron. 24:14. 2 Priest in the return. Neh. 12:5, 18. He is called Bilgai (bĭl'gāĭ, gā'ĭ) at Neh. 10:8.

Bilhah (bĭl'hu) 1 Rachel's maid and Jacob's concubine. Gen. 29:29, 30:1–8, 35:22,25, 46:25, 49:4, 1 Chron. 7:13. 2 City of Simeon, of unknown location. 1 Chron. 4:29. Baalah. Joshua 15:29. Balah. Joshua 19:3.

Bilhan (bĭl'hăn) 1 Horite. Gen. 36:27, 1 Chron. 1:42. 2 Benjamite. 1 Chron. 7:10.

biliousness, common term for symptoms caused by disorders of the liver and the gall bladder, manifested by malaise, headache, indigestion, nausea, vomiting, and possibly slight jaundice. A fat-free diet is usually recommended.

Billaud-Varenne, Jacques Nicolas (zhäk' nēkōlä' bēyō'-varĕn'), 1756–1819, French revolutionist. One of the most violent antimonarchists in the Convention, he became a member of the Committee of Public Safety, he denied that anyone was inviolable, and he secured the passage of laws against monopolies. He plotted first against DANTON and then against ROBESPIERRE. Deported to French Guiana after Robespierre's fall, he refused an amnesty offered by Napoleon Bonaparte. In 1816 he fled to Haiti, where he died.

Billerica (bĭl'rĭkə), town (pop. 7,933), NE Mass., on the Concord and S of Lowell, settled 1637, inc. 1655. It was one of the "praying Indian" towns of John ELIOT. The Manning house dates from 1696. The town has railroad shops and produces woolen and asbestos products.

billiards, game played with a tapered, leather-tipped stick called a cue and usually three ivory balls, on an oblong, cloth-covered, slate table with raised and cushioned edges. In England a table (6 ft. x 12 ft.) with six pockets is used, in America the standard table (5 ft. x 10 ft.) is pocketless, and scoring is by caroms only, i.e., by causing the three balls to strike each other in specified ways. Pool is played on a table with pockets (usually six), and 15 balls and a cue ball are used. Pocket billiards is a variant of billiards, played on a pool table; in addition to caroms, the pocketing of balls enters into the scoring. Variants of these games were popular in France in the 16th cent., and a similar game was played earlier. The country of origin is a matter of dispute. Playing billiards was popular in England in Shakspere's time, and the game has been known in America since colonial days. Willie Hoppe, who became prominent in 1905, is generally considered to be the foremost billiards player of all time

Billings, Frank, 1854–1932, American physician, b Highland, Wis., M.D. Northwestern Univ., 1881 He taught at Northwestern from 1882 to 1898 and at Rush Medical College from 1898, becoming dean in 1900 He was an editor of the second edition (1914) and of several later editions of Therapeusis of Internal Diseases and with E C. Rosenow did important work on focal infection

Billings, John Shaw, 1838–1913, American surgeon and librarian, studied medicine at the Medical College of Ohio In the Civil War he was medical inspector of the Army of the Potomac After the war he was given charge of the Surgeon General's Library in Washington The catalogue entries increased, under his supervision, from 600 to 50,000 by 1873, and soon after he began the preparation of the great Index Catalogue Sixteen volumes appeared before his retirement In 1879 the Index Medicus, a monthly guide to current medical literature, was initiated by him He designed Johns Hopkins Hospital As director of the combined Astor, Lenox, and Tilden foundations in New York which were to become the New York Public Library, he consolidated the collections, planned and supervised the erection of the central library building, united the various free circulating libraries of the city, secured $5,000,000 from Carnegie for branch buildings, and in general created the New York Public Library as it now stands. See biographies by F H Garrison (1915) and H M Lydenberg (1924)

Billings, Josh, pseud of Henry Wheeler Shaw, 1818–85, American humorist and lecturer, b Lanesboro, Mass After a roving life as farmer, explorer, and coal miner, he settled in Poughkeepsie, N Y, as auctioneer and real-estate dealer In 1860 he began to write his humorous sketches in rural dialect and soon became also a popular lecturer See study by Cyril Clemens (1932)

Billings, William, 1746–1800, American composer, the first American professional musician, b Boston Though unschooled in music, he wrote hymns and sacred choruses of great vitality, employing a rugged sort of imitative counterpoint—hence their designation as fuguing tunes He often wrote his own texts, breaking with the colonial tradition of versified psalmody He was an innovator in the use of the pitch pipe, he also introduced the use of the cello into church services A singing class which he organized became (1780) the Stoughton Musical Society and is still in existence His publications include The New England Psalm Singer (1770), The Singing Master's Assistant (1778), and The Continental Harmony (1794)

Billings, city (pop 23,261), co seat of Yellowstone co, S Mont, on the Yellowstone river, inc 1885 Founded (1882) by the Northern Pacific RR and named for Frederick Billings, its president, Billings quickly became an important shipping point, with varied industries, including an oil refinery A state irrigation project of 3,000 acres is just outside the city limits The 30,000-acre Huntley project of the U S Bureau of Reclamation encircles Billings at a 30-mile radius A state normal school and ROCKY MOUNTAIN COLLEGE are here Prehistoric remains were found (1937) in near-by caves

Billingsgate (bĭl'ĭngzgĭt,-gāt), one of the old city gates of central London and hence a wharf and fish-market district below London Bridge on the north bank of the Thames The name is also applied to the coarse language prevalent here and in similar districts

Billings Polytechnic Institute see ROCKY MOUNTAIN COLLEGE

Billiton (bĕl'ĭtŏn) or Belitong (bĕlĭ'tŏng), island (1,866 sq mi, pop including offshore islets 73,429), Indonesia, E of Bangka Briefly occupied by the British, the island became a Dutch possession in 1824 It has valuable tin mines chiefly worked by Chinese labor bill of exchange, written order signed by the person giving it and requiring the person to whom it is addressed to pay a third party or his order a certain sum of money on demand or at a specified time It is sometimes known as a DRAFT The bill of exchange was originally a promissory note, but it came to indicate an indebtedness incurred in one kind of money and paid in another, i e, it "exchanged" moneys of different mints It was originally devised to give credit to a customer who intended to pay in the future, but it came to be used to pay foreign debts (see FOREIGN EXCHANGE) in that it obviated the annoyance, expense, and risk of transmitting money Apparently it was used in early Babylon, Egypt, and Rome, but the earliest clear instance of its use is in Genoa c 1156 Bills of exchange are commonly drawn by sellers or exporters upon buyers or importers in FOREIGN TRADE. They are little used in trade within the United States, but more so in domestic trade in European countries. The bill is sometimes payable on demand, usually, however, it is payable a stated number of days after acceptance by the debtor. Shipping papers covering the goods sold are ordinarily attached to a bill as added security. A bill of exchange enables the exporter to obtain immediate cash for his goods, a bank will buy the bill or grant him a loan on it and then will undertake through an agent in the importer's country to collect the debt when due See A M Samuel, The Working of the Bill of Exchange (1929)

Bill of Rights, 1689, in British history, one of the great instruments of the constitution It registered in statutory form the results of the long 17th-century struggle between the Stuart kings and the English people. Its principles were accepted by William III and Mary II in the Declaration of Rights as a condition of ascending the throne after the revolution in which James II was dethroned (1688) The Bill of Rights stated that certain acts of James II were illegal and henceforth prohibited, that Englishmen possessed certain inviolable civil and political rights, that James had forfeited the throne by abdication and that William and Mary were lawful sovereigns, and that the succession should pass to the heirs of Mary, then to Princess Anne (later queen) and her heirs, and that no Roman Catholic could ever be sovereign of England By its provisions and implications it gave political supremacy to Parliament and was supplemented (1701) by the Act of SETTLEMENT

Bill of Rights, in U S history, see CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

Billy the Kid, 1859–81, American outlaw, b New York city His real name was William H Bonney His family moved to Kansas and then to New Mexico when he was a child He early frequented saloons and gambling halls, and before he was 16 he had killed several men In 1878 he led a gang in the Lincoln co cattle war, killed a sheriff, and engaged in large-scale cattle rustling John S Chisum and other cattlemen secured (1880) the election of a new sheriff sworn to rid the country of the cattle thieves Billy the Kid was captured, tried, and sentenced to death He escaped but was again trapped and was shot by Sheriff Pat F Garrett See biographies by Pat F Garrett (1882, new ed, 1927), C A. Siringo (1920), and Walter Noble Burns (1926)

Biloxi (bĭlŭk'sē), city (pop 17,475), SE Miss, on a small peninsula between Mississippi Sound and Biloxi Bay, inc as a town 1838 as a city 1896 It is a popular resort and fishing and boatbuilding center and packs and ships large quantities of oysters and shrimps The first white settlement in the lower Mississippi valley was established in 1699 across the bay at Old Biloxi (now Ocean Springs) by the French under IBERVILLE In 1702 BIENVILLE transferred the settlement to the Mobile area New Biloxi, the present site of the city, was founded in 1719 and was Louisiana's seat of government until 1722, when New Orleans was made capital The city is the seat of a U S coast guard air base, a U S veterans' hospital, and Naval Reserve Park, now included in U S Keesler Field (air base) Near by is "Beauvoir" (1852–54), last home of Jefferson Davis, now a state Confederate veterans' home Ship Island a long sandy bar just off the coast, has served intermittently as a naval base

Biloxi Bay, arm of Mississippi Sound, c 17 mi long and 1 to 3 mi wide, SE Miss It receives the Biloxi river A bridge (1930) from Biloxi to Ocean Springs crosses the bay

Bilshan [Heb, =son of the tongue], one who returned with Zerubbabel Ezra 2 2, Neh 7 7

Bilston, municipal borough (1931 pop 31,225, 1947 estimated pop 32,080), Staffordshire, England There are potteries and coal mines

Bimeler, Joseph Michael (bĭ'mŭlŭr), 1778–1853, German religious leader, originally called Bäumeler A teacher of the separatists in Württemberg, in 1817 he led a group of them to America In Ohio they founded the community of ZOAR

bimetallism, name first used in 1869 by Cernuschi to describe a monetary system in which two commodities, usually gold and silver, are used as a standard and are coined without limit at a ratio fixed by legislation which also designates both of them as legally acceptable for all payments The ratio is expressed in terms of weight, as "16 oz of silver equal 1 oz of gold," which is described as a ratio of 16 to 1 As the ratio is determined by law, it has no relation to the commercial value of the metals, which fluctuates constantly Gresham's law, therefore, applies, i e, the metal that is commercially valued at less than its face value tends to be used as money, and the metal commercially valued at more than its face value tends to be used as metal, valued by weight, and hence is withdrawn from circulation as money In bimetallism the debtor tends to pay in the metal which is commercially the cheaper, thus creating a demand which is likely to bring its commercial value up to its face value Until the acts of 1798 and 1816 under which England made gold the standard currency, all countries practiced bimetallism Bimetallism was strengthened by the formation of the Latin Union in 1866, which included France, Belgium, Italy, and Switzerland, to which were joined in 1867 Greece and Rumania But in 1873 the new German Empire adopted the gold standard, and shortly thereafter the Latin union was dissolved and most modern nations abandoned bimetallism for the gold standard. In the United States bimetallism was abandoned in 1873, but the Bland-Allison Act of 1878 allowed a limited coinage of silver dollars, a "limping bimetallism," partially dependent on silver but primarily dependent on gold This policy was finally ended by the Gold Standard Act of 1900 Bimetallism was long a paramount political issue in the United States See MONEY See F A Walker, International Bimetallism (1904), H D Macleod, Bimetallism (1906) René Léon, Money and Trade (1937), Anatol Murad, The Paradox of a Metal Standard (1939)

Bimhal (bĭm'hăl) [Heb, =son of circumcision], Asherite 1 Chron 7 33

Bimini (bĭ'mĭnēz, bŭmē'nēz), island group, part of the Bahama Islands The Biminis include North Bimini, South Bimini, and surrounding cays Here legend places the fountain of youth for which Juan Ponce de León searched The islands are today known especially for the exceptionally good fishing in near-by waters

binder, for the harvesting machine see REAPER

Bindraban or Bindrabund, India see BRINDABAN

Binea (bĭn'ēu), descendant of Saul. 1 Chron 8 37, 9 43

Binet, Alfred (älfrĕd' bēnā'), 1857–1911, French psychologist From 1894 he was director of the psychology laboratory at the Sorbonne He is known for his research and innovation in testing human intelligence With Théodore Simon (1873–) he devised (1905–11) a series of tests which, with revisions, came into wide use in schools, industries and the army The Stanford, the Herring, and the Kuhlmann revisions are important Binet and Simon wrote Les Enfants anormaux (1907, Eng tr, Mentally Defective Children, 1914) Most of his writings were published in Année psychologique, a journal which he founded in 1895

Bingen (bĭng'ŭn), city (pop 15,373), W Germany, on the Rhine, above the whirlpool known as Binger Loch In former Hesse-Darmstadt, it was after 1945 included in the French-occupied Rhineland-Palatinate Bingen lies in a famous wine district Dating from pre-Roman times, it was fortified (1st cent B C) by Drusus It joined the Hanseatic League in 1254 and in 1281 came under the rule of the archbishop of Mainz Near Bingen, on a rock in the Rhine, is the famous Mauseturm [mouse tower], where, according to legend, Archbishop Hatto of Mainz was devoured by mice for wronging his subjects

Bingham, Caleb, 1757–1817, American textbook writer, b Salisbury, Conn, grad Dartmouth, 1782 He taught until 1796 then became a bookseller and publisher in Boston He wrote and published some of the earliest grammars, spelling books and geographies and was especially known for his readers The American Preceptor (1794) and The Columbian Orator (1797), which predominated in New England schools for the next quarter century

Bingham, George Caleb, 1811–79, American genre painter, b Augusta co, Va His family moved to Missouri in 1819, and Missouri was the arena of most of Bingham's activities Discovering a talent for portraiture, he made and sold likenesses of his neighbors In 1837 he studied for a short time at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts From 1856 to 1859 Bingham traveled in Europe, studying at Düsseldorf for a time Journeys on the Mississippi and through the South resulted in such paintings as The Jolly Flatboatmen (1846, Mercantile Library Association, St Louis), Daniel Boone Coming through the Cumberland Gap (1851, Washington Univ, St Louis), and Raftsmen Playing Cards (City Art Mus, St Louis) Bingham entered Missouri politics with his election to the legislature in 1848 (he had been defeated in 1846), he served as state treasurer, 1862–65 (after a year in the Union army), and became state adjutant general in 1875 Such pictures as The Verdict of the People and Stump Speaking (Mercantile Library Association, St Louis) reflect his interest in politics His scenes —vigorous, interesting in composition, humorous, and faithfully representing their time and locale— were very popular in his day, and engravings from them sold widely After Bingham's death his reputation was in eclipse until the 1930s, when exhibitions of his work were held See biography by A W Christ-Janer (1940)

Bingham, Hiram, 1789–1869, American Congregationalist missionary, b Bennington, Vt, educated at Middlebury College and Andover Theological Seminary In 1819 the American Board of Missions sent him, with others, to found the first Protestant mission in the Hawaiian Islands Bingham adapted the Hawaiian language to writing, published Elementary Lessons in Hawaiian (1852), and, with his associates, translated the Bible into Hawaiian

Bingham, Hiram, 1831–1908, American Congregationalist missionary, b Honolulu, grad Yale, 1853, and Andover Theological Seminary, 1855, son of Hiram Bingham (1789–1869) In 1857 he founded a mission at Abaiang in the Gilbert Islands, but ill-health forced him to retire (1864) to Hawaii Bingham reduced the language of the Gilbert Islands to writing. He translated the Bible into Gilbertese and also prepared in Gilbertese a Bible dictionary, a grammar, a hymnbook, and commentaries on the Gospels and the Acts

Bingham, Hiram, 1875–, American archaeologist, aviator, and statesman, b Honolulu, son of Hiram Bingham (1831–1908) He was educated at Yale (B A , 1898), the Univ of California (M A , 1900), and Harvard (Ph D , 1905) and later taught (1907–23) at Yale He headed expeditions sent from Yale in 1911, 1912, and 1914–15 to South America to study Inca ruins and was the discoverer of the Inca cities of Vitcos and Machu Picchu in 1911 and 1912, the road opened to Machu Picchu in 1948 was named the Hiram Bingham Highway His well-known books deal with these expeditions and with Machu Picchu—Journal of an Expedition across Venezuela and Colombia (1909), Across South America (1911), Inca Land (1922), Machu Picchu, a Citadel of the Incas (1930), and Lost City of the Incas (1948) In the First World War he was notable as an aviator, heading an Allied flying school in France Leaving Yale, he served as lieutenant governor (1923–24) and governor (1924–25) of Connecticut and as U S Senator (1925–33) He also wrote on the Monroe Doctrine and other state policies

Bingham, Joseph, 1668–1723, English theologian He is known for his learned work on Christian antiquities (10 vols , 1708–22)

Bingham, Robert Worth, 1871–1937, American newspaper publisher and diplomat, b Orange co , N C He attended the universities of North Carolina and Virginia and received a law degree (1897) from the Univ of Louisville After holding several public offices, he became publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times He was important in promoting cooperative associations for tobacco growers From 1933 to 1937 he was ambassador to Great Britain

Bingham, town (pop 1,210), central Maine, on the Kennebec above Skowhegan, settled 1780, inc 1812 Wyman Dam near here in the Kennebec was built in 1929–31 Wood products are made

Bingham Canyon or Bingham, town (pop 2,834, alt 6,100 ft), N central Utah, in a gulch of the Oquirrh Mts SW of Salt Lake City At first (1848) a farm of the Mormons Thomas and Sanford Bingham, it became in the 1860s a roaring mining town —gold, then silver and lead, and in the 20th cent copper The open-pit mine attracts many visitors

Binghamton (bĭng'umtun), industrial city (pop 78,309), co seat of Broome co , S N Y at the confluence of the Chenango with the Susquehanna, laid out 1800, inc as a village 1813, as a city 1867 Binghamton grew mainly after the Chenango Canal connected it with Utica in 1837 It is the largest of the Triple Cities, comprising Binghamton, Endicott, and Johnson City, famous for shoes Photographic supplies paints, and furniture are also made The city has experienced several damaging floods, notably that of July, 1935 There is a state mental hospital here, and the Chenango Valley State Park is near by

Bingley, urban district (1931 pop 20,553, 1943 estimated pop 22,496), West Riding of Yorkshire, England It has woolen and silk mills and manufactures leather goods, paper, machine tools, and paint

Binney, Horace, 1780–1875, American lawyer, b Philadelphia, grad Harvard, 1797 He was admitted to the bar in 1800 and in 1809 began the publication of several volumes of Pennsylvania supreme court decisions He soon became one of the leading lawyers of his state He was appointed in 1808 a director of the Bank of the United States His first elective office was that of Congressman (1833–35) In Congress, Binney condemned President Andrew Jackson, particularly for his stand against the Bank of the United States In 1844, opposing Daniel Webster, Binney argued successfully before the U S Supreme Court that a bequest of Stephen GIRARD to Philadelphia for philanthropic purposes was lawful His argument was influential in liberalizing the American law relating to charitable bequests He wrote biographies of William Tilghman (1827), John Marshall (1835), and Bushrod Washington (1858) He also wrote Leaders of the Old Bar of Philadelphia (1859) See biography by C C Binney (1903)

Binns, Charles Fergus, 1857–1934, British-American potter and professor of ceramics, b Worcester, England He was connected with the royal porcelain works at Worcester from 1872 until he migrated to the United States in 1897 He was for three years principal of the Technical School of Science and Art, Trenton, N J. From 1900 until his retirement in 1931 he was director of the state college of ceramics at ALFRED UNIVERSITY He was a founder and president (1901) of the American Ceramic Society His publications are The Story of the Potter (1896), Ceramic Technology (1897), and The Potter's Craft (1909)

Binns, John Alexander, c 1761–1813, American agriculturist, b Loudoun co , Va He was one of the first to experiment with gypsum as a fertilizer and to convince others of its efficacy Partly through example and partly through his pamphlet, Treatise on Practical Farming (1803), what came to be known as the Loudoun system spread rapidly throughout Virginia and Maryland and ultimately into other districts

Binnui (-ūī) [Heb ,=building], Levitical name common in Ezra and Nehemiah The following may probably be distinguished 1 Levite with Zerubbabel Ezra 8 33, Neh 3 24, 10 9, 12 8 Bavai Neh 3 18 Bani Neh 8 7 Bunni Neh 9 4 2, 3 Men married to foreign wives Ezra 10 30,38 See also BANI 4

Binyon, Laurence, 1869–1943, English poet, keeper of prints and drawings in the British Museum, and authority on Oriental art He made a catalogue of English drawings in the British Museum (4 vols , 1898–1907) He wrote many books on art, including Painting in the Far East (1908), The Court Painters of the Grand Moguls (1921), and The Drawings and Engravings of William Blake (1922), numerous volumes of poetry, Selected Poems (1922), The Sirens (1927), and Akbar (1932), and poetic dramas, Arthur (1923) and Boadicea (1927) Well known is his ode "For the Fallen," commemorating the dead of the First World War He edited the Golden Treasury of Modern Lyrics (1929)

Binz, Karl (bĭnts), 1832–1912, German physician and pharmacologist As professor at Bonn he accomplished important work in experimental pharmacology and pathology, he studied and wrote on the use of quinine, of anesthetics, and of other substances

Bío-Bío (bē'ō-bē'ō), river, c 240 mi long, rising in the Andes of central Chile and flowing NW to the Pacific It is navigable only for flat-bottomed boats operating from Concepción near its mouth The province of Bío-Bío through which much of its course lies, is named for the river biochemistry, the science which is concerned chiefly with chemical processes in living organisms and with organic products of living things Sometimes the science is called biological chemistry or physiological chemistry Biochemical processes include photosynthesis, metabolism of nutrients in plant and animal cells, digestion, absorption, and biological oxidation Biochemistry deals also with studies of the chemistry of such substances as proteins, carbohydrates fats, vitamins, hormones, enzymes, and blood and with studies of the chemistry of immunology The beginnings of the science are seen in Antoine Lavoisier's recognition of the nature of respiration, in Justus von Liebig's realization that the nutritive materials of green plants are inorganic in nature, in Friedrich Wöhler's synthesis of urea (the first synthesis of an organic product from inorganic materials), and in Pasteur's work on fermentation In the years following, biochemistry assumed increasing importance Research has revealed more and more of the chemical aspects of biological processes, and by chemical synthesis a constantly growing number of organic materials have been duplicated biography, history of an individual, called autobiography when written by the individual himself The earliest purpose in writing biography was, apparently, to support a theory, as Plutarch did, or to teach a moral lesson, as did the writers of saints' lives In English the modern conception of biography for its own sake began in the 17th cent with such works as William Roper's Sir Thomas More, Izaak Walton's lives, and many biographies and autobiographies dealing with religious conversions James Boswell's famous Life of Samuel Johnson, LL D (1791) was the culmination of a tendency to make biography a complete portrait and history of its subject, and most modern biographical writing follows the same course Many 19th-century writers produced ponderous life-and-letters volumes, indispensable but often marred by the suppression of information thought to be improper Others, such as Leslie Stephen, did much to develop well-balanced biographical writing In the 20th cent , such intensive treatment of a few years in a man's life as Edmund Gosse's Father and Son and Harold Nicolson's Byron the Last Journey proved effective, and the highly selective works written by André Maurois, Lytton Strachey, and Gamaliel Bradford have been stimulating and have been widely imitated Biographical dictionaries, though dating from the 15th cent , did not until the 19th cent approach the status of such eminent works of this type as the Dictionary of National Biography, the Allgemeine deutsche Biographie, the Nouvelle Biographie generale, and the 20th-century Dictionary of American Biography A recent development is the handy noncritical collection of biographical facts in such a work as Who's Who and its various foreign counterparts Besides those mentioned, great biographies of the world include the stories of Ruth, David, and Joseph in the Old Testament, the Gospels, Plutarch's Lives, Tacitus' Agricola, Suetonius' Lives of the Caesars, Anthony Wood's Athenae Oxonienses, Thomas Fuller's Lives of the Worthies of England, the Acta Sanctorum of the Bollandists, the sire de Joinville's St Louis IX, Samuel Johnson's Lives of the Poets, J G Lockhart's Sir Walter Scott, John Morley's Gladstone, Mrs Gaskell's Charlotte Brontë, G H Lewes's Goethe, biographies of Lincoln by Lord Charnwood, Nicolay and Hay, and A. J Beveridge; G F Henderson's Stonewall Jackson; Ernest Renan's Life of Jesus, Stanley T Williams's Washington Irving; Amy Lowell's John Keats, Harvey W Cushing's Sir William Osler, Winston S Churchill's Marlborough, and Douglas S Freeman's R E Lee Outstanding autobiographies and memoirs include those of St Augustine, Benvenuto Cellini, Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Benjamin Franklin, Samuel Pepys (diary), Casanova, Jean Jacques Rousseau, John Quincy Adams, John Stuart Mill, Cardinal Newman, Goethe, Edward Gibbon, John Woolman, U S Grant, Henry Adams, Bismarck, Tolstoy, T E Lawrence, and W B Yeats See W C Cross, An Outline of Biography (1924), Harold Nicolson, The Development of English Biography (1928), E H O'Neill, History of American Biography (1935), J M Longaker, Contemporary Biography (1934), D A Stauffer, The Art of Biography in 18th Century England (1941)

biology, the science which deals with living things It is broadly divided into ZOOLOGY, the study of animal life, and BOTANY, the study of plant life Subdivisions of each of these sciences include cytology (the study of cells), histology (the study of tissues), anatomy or morphology, physiology, and embryology (the study of the development of an individual animal or plant) Also included in biological studies are ecology, the sciences of genetics and heredity, evolution, paleontology, and taxonomy or systematics Microbiology is a term applied in recent years to the science comprising the study of microscopic forms of life, including protozoa, bacteria, viruses, algae, fungi, and yeasts Evidences of early man's observations of nature are seen in prehistoric cave art Biological concepts began to develop among the early Greeks The biological works of Aristotle include his observations and classification of his large collections of animals The invention of the microscope, in the 16th cent , gave a great stimulus to biology and both broadened and deepened its scope Among the many who contributed to the science are Claude Bernard, Cuvier, Darwin, Haeckel, T H Huxley, Lamarck, Linnaeus, Mendel, and Alexander von Humboldt See also CELL and MARINE BIOLOGY See W A Locy, Biology and Its Makers (1908) and The Growth of Biology (1925), Erik Nordenskiold, The History of Biology (Eng tr , 1928), C J Singer, A Short History of Biology (1931), H G Wells and others, The Science of Life (1934 ed in one volume), L L Woodruff, Foundations of Biology (6th ed , 1941, reissued 1946)

Bion (bī'ŭn), fl 2d cent ?B C , Greek bucolic poet, an imitator of Theocritus Only a few fragments of his work survive The Lament for Adonis, attributed to him, was the model for Shelley's Adonais and was translated by Elizabeth Barrett Browning

biplane see AIRPLANE

Birch, Reginald Bathurst, 1856–1943, American illustrator, b London, studied in Munich He came to the United States in 1872 Birch worked for St Nicholas, Harper's, Century, and Life and is famous for his fine pen-and-ink illustrations for Little Lord Fauntleroy and other children's books

Birch, Samuel, 1813–85, English Egyptologist He wrote a dictionary of hieroglyphics and translated the Book of the Dead

birch, name for any of the numerous species of the genus Betula, deciduous trees or shrubs widely distributed in the Northern Hemisphere Of the several native American birches the best known are the paper or canoe birch (Betula papyrifera), a forest tree of Canada and the N United States which reaches 60 to 100 ft in height, and the gray birch (B populifolia) of E Canada and the United States which is rarely more than 35 ft high and can grow in poorer soil and farther south than the paper birch Both have white bark and that of the paper birch forms in layers The paper birch bark was used for canoes and baskets by American Indians The yellow birch (B lutea) is an important timber tree of the NE United States, and its wood is used for furniture and flooring Both the yellow and the sweet birch (B lenta) yield oil of WINTERGREEN Various birches have also yielded sugar, vinegar, a tea from the leaves, and a birch beer from the sap Oil of the white birch (B alba), used in tanning, imparts its odor to Russian leather

Bird, Isabella see BISHOP, ISABELLA LUCY (BIRD)

Bird, Robert Montgomery, 1806–54, American playwright and novelist, b New Castle, Del , M D Univ of Pennsylvania, 1827 He wrote four prize-winning verse plays for Edwin Forrest, the tragedian, of which the more notable were The Gladiator (produced 1831) and The Broker of Bogota (produced 1834) A financial misunderstanding led to a break between the two friends and Forrest, throughout his life, refused to release the copyrights he claimed to hold for the plays Bird, badly in need of money, turned to prose, a medium perhaps better suited to him than poetry His first popular romance, Calavar (1834), was enthusiastically received, and within a year the first issue was sold out and a sequel, The Infidel (1835), had appeared Bird, familiar with Mexican customs and the Spanish language, used Mexico as a background for both these books, The Hawks of Hawk-Hollow (1835) is the first to use the American scene. Nick of the Woods (1837), his most popular novel, passed through many English editions, in spite of European apathy to American writers, and was translated into German It draws on Bird's travels through America and, in contrast to Cooper, paints the Indian as violent and debased His romances, although complicated in plot, are dramatic and contain vivid character portrayal Bird's reputation as a dramatist was revived in 1919 when his plays were published with the biography by C E Foust (only The Broker of Bogota had appeared earlier, 1917)

Bird, William see BYRD, WILLIAM (b 1542 or 1543)

bird, warm-blooded, egg-laying, vertebrate animal having its body covered with FEATHERS and its forelimbs modified into WINGS Like mammals, birds have a four-chambered heart, and there is a complete separation of oxygenated and deoxygenated blood The body temperature is from 2° to 14° higher than that of mammals Birds have a relatively large brain, keen sight, and acute hearing, but little sense of smell They are believed to have evolved from reptiles The fossil remains of Archaeopteryx and of Archaeornis of the Jurassic period, found in S Germany, show reptilian tails, jaws with teeth, and clawed wings, but feathers were well developed Birds are highly adapted for FLIGHT Their structure combines lightness and strength Body weight is reduced by the presence of a horny bill instead of heavy jaws and teeth and by the air sacs in the hollow bones as well as in other parts of the body Compactness and firmness are achieved by the fusion of bones in the pelvic region and in other parts of the skeleton The heavier parts of the body—the gizzard, intestines, flight muscles, and thigh muscles—are all strategically located for maintaining balance in flight Feathers, despite their lightness, are highly protective against cold and wet The flight feathers, especially, have great strength Feathers are renewed in the process of MOLTING Some birds such as the ostrich, the penguin, and the kiwi lack the power of flight and have a flat sternum or breastbone without the prominent keel to which the well-developed flight muscles of other birds are attached In the majority of species there are differences between male and female in plumage coloring In these birds the mate (except in the phalarope) is the most brilliant or the most distinctly marked and is the aggressor in courtship Unusual courtship displays are performed by the ruffed grouse, the bird of paradise, the crane, the pheasant, and the peacock Song reaches its highest development during the breeding season, and singing ability is usually either restricted to or superior in the male In spring and fall many birds are motivated by factors not fully understood to undertake migration These trips often involve flights of hundreds and even thousands of miles over mountains and oceans Most birds build a NEST in which to lay their eggs Some birds, such as the oriole, weave an intricate structure, while others lay their eggs directly on the ground or among a few carelessly assembled twigs Eggs vary in size, number, color, and shape Birds are of enormous value to man because of their destruction of insect pests and weed seeds Many are useful as scavengers The bills of birds are well adapted to their food habits Specialized bills are found in the crossbill, hummingbird, spoonbill, pelican, and woodpecker The game birds hunted by man for food and sport include grouse, pheasant, quail, duck, and plover The chief domestic birds are the chicken, duck, goose, turkey, and guinea fowl Parrots and many members of the finch family are kept as pets Among the periodicals devoted to the study of bird life are Bird Lore and the Auk See also MIGRATION OF ANIMALS and SONG, BIRD See William Beebe, The Bird (1906), A A Allen, The Book of Bird Life (1930), F M Chapman, Handbook of Birds of Eastern North America (1932), Gilbert Grosvenor and Alexander Wetmore, ed, The Book of Birds (2 vols, 1932), R C Murphy, Oceanic Birds of South America (1936), G C Aymar, Bird Flight (1938)

Bird Island, village (pop 1,201), S central Minn, E of Granite Falls, in farming country

bird of paradise, any of several birds of New Guinea and the adjacent islands The male birds have handsome, bright plumage with elongated tail feathers and ruffs on the wings and neck These adornments are displayed by the male in an extraordinary premuptial performance

bird sanctuary see WILDLIFE REFUGE

Birdsboro, borough (pop 3,313), SE Pa, SE of Reading, settled 1750 It manufactures metal products Many old churches and homes are here

Birdseye, Clarence, 1886-, American chemist, b Brooklyn, N Y He developed a quick-freezing process for preserving food (see REFRIGERATION)

Bird Woman see SACAJAWEA

Biren, Ernst Johann von see BIRON

Birgitta, Saint see BRIDGET OF SWEDEN, SAINT

Birkbeck, George, 1776–1841, English educator He established (1800 1804) in Glasgow a popular course of lectures for workingmen, which led to the founding of the Glasgow Mechanics' Institution in 1823 He became (1824) president of the London Mechanics' Institution and was also a founder (1827) of University College of the Univ of London He did much to further popular scientific instruction in England Birkbeck Laboratory at University College was established by gifts from his pupils See biography by J S Godard (1884)

Birkbeck, Morris, 1764–1825, English pioneer in the United States. One of the most advanced agriculturists in England, he had a huge farm in Surrey before in 1817 he emigrated to the United States He and another English traveler, George FLOWER, undertook a scheme to create a settlement in Illinois Though the two fell out, the undertaking resulted in the occupation of thousands of acres of land and the founding of Albion, Ill Birkbeck's Notes on a Journey to the Territory of Illinois (1818) and Letters from Illinois (1818) helped to bring European settlers to the fertile prairies of the Middle West and are invaluable historical sources

Birkeland, Olaf Christian (ō'lāv krīs'tyän bēr'kulän), 1867–1917, Norwegian physicist With Samuel Eyde he developed an electric-arc process (Birkeland-Eyde process) for nitrogen fixation, one of the first processes used in the large-scale manufacture of a nitrogen compound from atmospheric nitrogen From 1898 he was professor at the Univ of Oslo Birkeland, noted also for his work on magnetics, aided in establishing magnetic observatories in the arctic regions and recorded the results in The Norwegian Aurora Polaris Expedition, 1902–1903 (Eng tr, 1909)

Birkenhead, Frederick Edwin Smith, 1st earl of (bur'kunhĕd), 1872–1930, British statesman and jurist He was called to the bar in 1899 and from 1906 to 1919 sat in the House of Commons as a Conservative He was solicitor general (1915), attorney general (1915–19), and lord chancellor (1919–22) He was created earl in 1922 He was (1924–28) secretary of state for India in Baldwin's cabinet His books include International Law (4th ed, 1911), Famous Trials of History (1927), Law, Life, and Letters (1927)

Birkenhead (bûr'kunhĕd), county borough (1931 pop 147,803, 1943 estimated pop 143,400), Cheshire, England, at the mouth of the Mersey opposite Liverpool, with which it is connected by the Mersey tunnel It is a milling, steel manufacturing, and shipping center The imports are largely grain and cattle, the exports, coal, flour, the by-products of milling, and machinery There are extensive docks Shipbuilding has been important since the early 19th cent The town and docks were subjected to heavy air raids in 1941

Birkhoff, George David (bûrk'hôf), 1884–1944, American mathematician, b Overisel, near Holland, Mich, B A Harvard, 1905, Ph D Univ of Chicago, 1907 He joined the faculty of Harvard in 1912, became professor of mathematics in 1919, and was dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences from 1935 to 1939 He is known for his researches in dynamics and in relativity and for his conceptual theory of atomic structure

birling (bûr'lĭng), sport, popular with American lumberjacks after the middle of the 19th cent, performed on floating logs In the main event of a birling tournament a contestant tries to spill his rival into the water by superior logrolling Log-poling races and individual acrobatic performances on logs are also held National birling contests in the United States have been held from time to time since 1898

Birmingham, George A see HANNAY, JAMES OWEN

Birmingham (bûr'mĭng-um), city (1931 pop 1,002,603, 1948 estimated pop 1,096,100), Warwickshire, England, with suburbs in Worcestershire and Staffordshire The second city in size in England, it is a great industrial center in the Black Country With iron and coal in the vicinity, it is especially noted for metal manufacturing (which dates from the 16th cent) Munitions, automobiles, and steel pens are among its products Most of Britain's brass and bronze coins are minted here Birmingham was a market town before the 13th cent The city was taken and partly destroyed (1643) by Prince Rupert in the civil war, it was swept by the plague in 1665 The Reform Act of 1832 enfranchised the city, and the Greater Birmingham scheme in 1911 extended its boundaries to an area of 80 sq mi In the Second World War, Birmingham suffered several air raids (Nov, 1940, and April, 1941), resulting in many casualties and heavy damage to buildings Although in 1791 popular sentiment against Joseph PRIESTLEY led a mob to wreck his house, Birmingham has led in many political and religious reform movements Street railways and water, gas, and electrical services have long been municipal enterprises, there is a municipal bank and a city orchestra The town's noted citizens, besides Priestley, have included John Baskerville, James Watt, who with Boulton founded the Soho metalworks in the suburb Handsworth, and Joseph Chamberlain, who represented Birmingham in Parliament The oldest church is St Martin's, founded in the 13th cent, and the city has both an Anglican and a Roman Catholic cathedral The Univ of Birmingham has absorbed several smaller colleges. See T Lloyd Renshaw, Birmingham: Its Rise and Progress (1932)

Birmingham (bûr'mĭnghăm") 1 City (pop 267,583), co seat of Jefferson co, N central Ala, in the Jones Valley near the southern end of the Appalachian system It is the largest city in the state and the leading iron and steel center in the South Iron, coal, limestone, and other materials from the area supply the city's great iron- and steel-manufacturing plants and metalworking factories Textiles, chemicals, and cement are also made, and meat packing is important Birmingham was founded and incorporated in 1871, it grew swiftly, its industrial development (promoted by men like H F DE BARDELEBEN) responding mightily to the advantages of its natural resources It is also an important trading center and a port of entry On near-by Red Mt is a huge iron statue of Vulcan overlooking the city Near by are the state training schools for boys and girls Birmingham is the seat of Howard College (Baptist, coeducational, 1841), Miles College (Negro, coeducational, 1907), and a notable Negro high school Birmingham-Southern College (coeducational) was formed in 1918 by merging Southern Univ (chartered 1856 by Methodists, opened 1859 at Greensboro, Ala) and Birmingham College (opened 1898) The Birmingham Conservatory of Music became affiliated in 1940 2 Residential city (pop 11,196), SE Mich, on the River Rouge and between Detroit and Pontiac, in a farm area, settled 1819, inc as a village 1864, as a city 1933 The old Saginaw Trail crossed the river here

Birnam, village, Perthshire, Scotland, on the Tay opposite Dunkeld Overlooking the village is Birnam Hill, once forested with the Birnam Wood of the witches' prophecy in Macbeth

Birney, James Gillespie (gĭlĕ'spē bûr'nē), 1792–1857, American abolitionist, b Danville, Ky, grad College of New Jersey (now Princeton Univ), 1810 He practiced law at Danville from 1814 to 1818, when he moved to Alabama There he served one term in the state legislature and was influential in securing the passage of several laws benefiting slaves Birney was briefly (1832–34) an agent of the AMERICAN COLONIZATION SOCIETY before becoming an abolitionist In 1832 he returned to Kentucky, freed (1834) his inherited slaves, and helped organize (1835) the Kentucky Anti-Slavery Society He was forced to move (1836) to Ohio to publish, at New Richmond, his anti-slavery weekly, the Philanthropist, later edited by Gamaliel BAILEY In 1837 he became executive secretary of the American Anti-Slavery Society and was a vice president of the World's Anti-Slavery Convention at London in 1840 In contrast to William Lloyd GARRISON, Birney constantly advocated political action and became the acknowledged leader of like-minded abolitionists who, forming the LIBERTY PARTY, nominated him for the presidency in 1840 and 1844 An injury sustained in 1845 took him out of public life Letter on the Political Obligations of Abolitionists (1839) and The American Churches the Bulwarks of American Slavery (1840) were his most important abolitionist writings See his letters (ed by D L Dumond, 1938), biography by his son, William Birney (1890)

Birobidzhan (bē"rŭbējän') or Jewish Autonomous Oblast, district (13,820 sq mi, pop 108,419), S Khabarovsk Territory, RSFSR, in SE Siberia, between the Amur, which forms the southern border with Manchuria, and the Bureya range on the north It is named for two tributaries of the Amur, the Bira and the Bidzhan The southern and eastern sections are a fertile agricultural area (wheat, oats, soybeans), in the north, lumbering and gold mining are the chief occupations, in the west, there are iron mines The oblast was formed in 1934 for the purpose of colonization by Jewish settlers from Russia and other lands, who received considerable government aid The percentage of the Jewish population by 1948 has been estimated variously as 25 percent and as more than 50 percent of the total The seat of the autonomous Jewish government is at Birobidzhan city (pop 29,654), on the Trans-Siberian RR Alternate spellings are Birobidjan and Birobijan

Biron or Biren, Ernst Johann von (ĕrnst' yōhan' fŭn bē'ron, bē'run), 1690–1772, duke of Courland (1737–58, 1763–72), favorite of Anna of Russia A Baltic nobleman, he rose to an all-powerful position under Anna through whose influence he was elected duke of Courland After Anna's death (1740) he was made regent for Ivan VI His unscrupulousness and insolent display earned him general hatred, and through a coup d'état he was arrested (1740) and banished (1741) In 1743 Augustus III of Poland deprived him of his duchy Peter III later recalled him and Catherine II secured the restoration of his title, but Biron never regained his former influence

Birr (bûr), urban district (pop 3,225), Co Offaly, Ireland, on the Brosna river and SW of Tullamore It is a malting center and an agricultural market The castle is the property of the earls of Rosse, descendants of Lawrence Parsons, to whom the area was granted by James I, it is the ancient seat of the O'Carrols The 3d earl of Rosse installed a noted telescope in the castle. There is a modern

Roman Catholic cathedral. Birr was formerly called Parsonstown

Birrell, Augustine (bĭr'ĕl), 1850–1933, English essayist and public official Chief secretary for Ireland (1907–16), he pursued a conciliatory course, resigning after the Easter Rebellion of 1916 His pleasant and urbane critical essays, Obiter Dicta (the first volume of which appeared in 1884), were followed by More Obiter Dicta (1924) and in 1930 by Et Cetera He wrote biographies of Charlotte Brontë (1887), William Hazlitt (1902), Andrew Marvell (1905), and Frederick Locker-Lampson (1920), his father-in-law

Birsha (bûr'shŭ), king of Gomorrah Gen 14 2

Birs Nimrud (bûrs' nĭmrōōd'), mound on the Euphrates, S Iraq It is believed to be the site of the ancient city Borsippa, very near Babylon It contains the ruins of a great square temple (a ziggurat), mentioned as the possible site of the Tower of Babel birth or labor, the process by which the fetus leaves the uterus and is delivered from the maternal organism It occurs about 280 days after the last period of menstruation before conception The actual cause of onset is undetermined but is related to the irritability of the uterus There are painful contractions of the uterine muscle, at first every 15 to 30 min and later every 2 or 3 min The duration varies, being about 18 hr for a woman having her first child and 12 hr or less in subsequent births About 15 to 30 min after the child has been born, the uterus contracts again, expelling the PLACENTA In 95 percent of cases the head of the child is born first Difficult passage, hemorrhage, and rupture of the uterus are complications Following labor, PUERPERAL FEVER from infection is a serious condition See also OBSTETRICS birth control, popular term for voluntary limitation of births Limitation of sexual intercourse, practiced in many primitive societies, and mechanical and chemical contraceptives, some of which were known in ancient civilizations, are included Although contraceptive techniques were known to a few in France and other European countries before 1800, the movement for birth control began in England, where the writings of MALTHUS (1798, 1803) stirred interest in the problem of overpopulation In 1877 Annie Besant and Charles Bradlaugh were tried for selling The Fruits of Philosophy (1832), a pamphlet on contraceptive methods written by Charles Knowlton, an American After their famous trial the Malthusian League was founded The first clinic was opened in 1921, largely through the efforts of Dr Marie STOPES Organized activity in the United States followed the indictment in 1915 of Margaret SANGER, a public-health nurse, for the circulation of her pamphlet Family Limitation A permanent clinic was opened (1923) in New York, and similar ones were established elsewhere In 1936 the Federal law prohibiting the dissemination of contraceptive ("obscene") information through the mails was modified The practice of contraception has spread rapidly in America and Europe, despite the opposition of orthodox church organizations The declining birth rate in Western countries, especially among professional and similar groups, has caused a shift in emphasis from simple contraception to "planned parenthood," with a bias toward eugenic factors Information has been introduced in countries of Asia but, outside of Japan, not generally disseminated See Dorothy Dunbar Bromley, Birth Control Its Use and Misuse (1936), Norman Himes, Medical History of Contraception (1936)

birthmark, name for either a congenital mole (nevus) or a small blood-vessel tumor of the skin (hemangioma) A mole is usually brown or black in color and flat or elevated and may be associated with the growth of hair The color is caused by a deposition of pigment in the upper layers of the skin Although most moles are benign, some types, especially those of a bluish-black color, may become malignant Moles are removed surgically or by electric cautery The small flat blood-vessel type of birthmark is pink to purple in color and is known as the "port-wine" variety This kind may be left untreated Moles which are elevated above the skin and which increase in size after birth should be treated by a physician

birth rate: see VITAL STATISTICS

birthstone: see MONTH

Birzavith (bĭrzā'–), unknown place, N Palestine 1 Chron 7 31

Bisanthe: see TEKIRDAG, Turkey

Bisayas, Philippine Islands see VISAYAN ISLANDS

Bisbee (bĭs'bē), city (pop 5,853), co seat of Cochise co, SE Ariz, near the Mexican border, inc 1900 After the still-rich copper deposits were discovered (c 1876), the city was built in two steep canyons, Mule Pass Gulch and Brewery Gulch

Biscay, Bay of, arm of the Atlantic, indenting the coast of W Europe from the island of Ushant, off Brittany, France, to Cape Ortegal, NW Spain It was named for the Basques (Viscayans) who live on part of its southern shore The bay is noted for its sudden severe storms The chief ports are Brest, Nantes, La Rochelle, and Bordeaux in France and San Sebastián, Bilbao, and Santander in Spain, The southern part of the bay is known in Spanish as the Mar Cantábrico

Bisceglie (bēshäl'yĕä), city (pop 32,552), Apulia, S Italy, a seaport on the Adriatic It exports olives, grapes, and other fruit The city flourished in the Middle Ages The duchy of Bisceglie was a fief of Alfonso of Aragon, husband of Lucrezia Borgia, and of their son Rodrigo There are a fine Apulian Romanesque cathedral, several churches of the 11th and 12th cent, and ruins of a medieval castle

Bischof, Karl Gustav (kärl' gōōs'täf bĭ'shôf), 1792–1870, German chemist and geologist From 1822 he was professor of chemistry at the Univ of Bonn He made a special study of the inflammable gases in coal mines, perfected the safety lamp, and made important contributions to knowledge of internal terrestrial heat His chief work was Elements of Chemical and Physical Geology (3 vols, 1847–54, Eng tr, 1854–59)

Bischoff, Theodor Ludwig Wilhelm (tā'ōdōr lōōt'vĭkh vĭl'hĕlm bĭ'shôf), 1807–82, German physiologist He was professor at the universities of Heidelberg (1836–44), Giessen (1844–54), and Munich (from 1855) He was the first to demonstrate the presence of free oxygen and carbon dioxide in the blood Among his contributions to embryology was a treatise (1844) dealing with the periodic ripening of ova in human beings and other mammals

Biscoe, John, d 1848, British navigator A British sealer in the employ of the Enderby firm of London, he in 1831–32 discovered ENDERBY LAND on the coast of Antarctica His voyage gave Great Britain the chief basis for British claims to Antarctica

Bishlam, deputy of Artaxerxes Ezra 4 7

Bishop, Sir Henry Rowley, 1786–1855, English operatic conductor, composer of 120 dramatic works He is known today for a setting of Shakspere's "Lo, here the gentle lark" and the melody of Home, Sweet Home from J H Payne's comic opera, Clari, the Maid of Milan (1823)

Bishop, Isabella Lucy (Bird), 1831–1904, English traveler and writer, first woman member of the Royal Geographical Society Before her marriage in 1881 she had traveled in the United States and Canada, Australia and New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, and Japan and had written The English Woman in America (1856), The Hawaiian Archipelago (1875), A Lady's Life in the Rocky Mountains (1879), and Unbeaten Tracks in Japan (1880) Her later books recording travels in Asia include Journeys in Persia and Kurdistan (1891) and Korea and Her Neighbors (1898)

Bishop. 1 Town (1940 pop 1,490, 1947 special census pop 2,093), E Calif, in the Owens river valley SE of Mono Lake, in a region yielding tungsten, gold, silver, and other minerals, settled 1861, inc 1903 The town, which lies in a resort area, is a trade center for miners and cattle raisers It is the headquarters for Inyo National Forest 2 Town (1940 pop 1,329, 1947 estimated pop 3,500), S Texas, SW of Corpus Christi This oil and cotton center has benefited from the recent growth in the Corpus Christi region A chemical plant is near by

Bishop Auckland (ôk'lund), urban district (1931 pop 12,277, 1947 estimated pop 35,090), Durham, England, on the Wear It is a mining town Auckland Castle has been the seat of the bishops of Durham since c 1300

Bishop Hill, village (pop 199), NW Ill, near Galva, founded 1846, inc 1853 It was established by a group of Swedish religious dissenters under the leadership of ERIC JANSON The community was organized on a communistic basis with authoritarian control by Janson After his death (1850), the practice of celibacy was introduced and this, plus poor financial management, led to the community's dissolution See M A Mikkelsen, The Bishop Hill Colony (1891)

Bishop's College, University of, see LENNOXVILLE

Bishop's Falls, town (1945 pop 2,521), central N F, SW of Botwood near the falls of the same name on the Exploits river It is the site of a large pulp plant Pulp is pumped from here to the mills at Grand Falls to be made into paper

Bishops' Wars, two brief campaigns of the Scots against Charles I of England in 1639 and 1640 When Charles attempted to strengthen episcopacy in Scotland by imposing the English Book of Common Prayer, the Scots countered by pledging themselves in the National Covenant (1638) to restore Presbyterianism A general assembly of the church abolished episcopacy The first war was terminated by the Pacification of Berwick, leaving the issues to a free assembly. The assembly still supported the Covenant. In spite of the refusal of his Short Parliament to vote him money for an army, Charles managed to march against the Scots They immediately invaded England and were welcomed by the English. The king was forced to conclude the second war by the treaty made at Ripon (1640) His promise there to reimburse the expenses of the Scots necessitated his calling the Long Parliament. See PURITAN REVOLUTION.

Bishopville, town (pop 2,995), co. seat of Lee co., NE S C., ENE of Columbia, in a cotton area.

Biisk (bĕsk), city (pop. 80,190), SE Altai Territory, RSFSR, in SW Siberia. Founded in 1709, it is a center of a dairy-farming area and terminus of a branch of the Turksib RR Variant spellings are Bisk and Biysk

Biskra, town (pop. 36,347), Algeria, SW of Constantine It was the Roman military base Vescera, later was an important Moslem town, and after 1844 served as a French base for operations in S Algeria The surrounding oasis produces dates

Bisley (bĭs'lē), village, Surrey, England, near Woking It is the site of the ranges of the National Rifle Association

Bismarck, Otto von (bĭs'märk, Ger ō'tō fŭn bĭs'märk), 1815–98, German statesman Born of an old Brandenburg family, he studied at Göttingen and Berlin, and after holding minor judicial and administrative offices he was elected (1847) to the Prussian Landtag There he opposed the liberal movement, advocated unification of Germany under the aegis of Prussia, and defended the privileges of his social class, the Junkers As Prussian minister to the German diet at Frankfurt (1851–59), as ambassador to St Petersburg (1859–62), and as ambassador to Paris (1862), he gained the insight and the experience that determined his subsequent policy In 1862 WILLIAM I appointed Bismarck premier to secure adoption of the king's army program, which was strenuously opposed in parliament Bismarck, in direct violation of the constitution, dissolved parliament and assumed control of the government and the budget To expel Austria from the GERMAN CONFEDERATION now became Bismarck's chief aim The affair of SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN in 1863–64 and its sequel gave him the necessary pretext No agreement was reached on disposition of the Danish territory occupied by Prussia and Austria in 1866, and friction soon developed Bismarck accused Austria of violating the Convention of Gastein (1865) and thus precipitated the AUSTRO-PRUSSIAN WAR (1866), which ended after seven weeks with the defeat of Austria Germany was reorganized under Prussian leadership in the NORTH GERMAN CONFEDERATION, from which Austria was excluded Fear of France, skillfully propagated by Bismarck, was to bring the remaining German states into the Prussian orbit when the candidature of a Hohenzollern prince to the throne of Spain caused friction with Napoleon III To make sure that this friction would provoke war, Bismarck published the famous EMS DISPATCH In the FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR (1870–71) the states of S Germany rallied to the Prussian cause as Bismarck had anticipated, and in Jan 1871, William I of Prussia was proclaimed German emperor Bismarck, the creator of the empire, became its first chancellor When added to his Prussian positions (premier, foreign minister, and minister of commerce) the imperial chancellorship gave him almost complete control of foreign and domestic affairs To maintain the peace necessary for the consolidation of the empire, he proposed to advance a strong military program, to gain the friendship of Austria, to preserve British friendship by avoiding naval or colonial rivalry, and to isolate France in diplomacy so that revanche would be impossible Therefore, in 1872, he formed the THREE EMPERORS' LEAGUE (Germany, Austria, and Russia) and he also maintained friendly relations with Italy The Balkan rivalries of Austria and Russia and the subsequent triumph of Austria at the Congress of Berlin (see BERLIN, CONGRESS OF), over which Bismarck presided, caused a rift in Russo-German relations A defensive alliance with Austria was now concluded (1879), and this Dual Alliance became a Triple Alliance when Italy adhered in 1882 (see TRIPLE ALLIANCE AND TRIPLE ENTENTE) Friendship with Russia was revived and maintained by a series of treaties, renewed periodically Bismarck, with his system of alignments and alliances, became the virtual arbiter of Europe and was acknowledged as its leading statesman The influence of the "iron chancellor" upon German domestic affairs was no less apparent The empire, soon after its establishment, was disturbed by the KULTURKAMPF, a fierce conflict between the state and the Roman Catholic Church, which lasted almost two decades However, the struggle lost intensity after Bismarck sensed danger from another quarter—the fusion (1875) of the Lasalle and the Marxist socialists Bismarck at first met the socialist opposition with extremely repressive measures Adopted by a newly elected Reichstag, the antisocialist law (1878) prohibited the circulation of socialist literature, empowered the police to break up socialist meetings, and put the trial and punishment of socialists under the jurisdiction of police courts This "martyrdom" of the Social Democrats only increased their number in parliament Now, partly to weaken the socialists and partly as a result of his policy of economic nationalism—adopted in place of laissez faire—Bismarck instituted a program of sweeping social reform Between 1883 and 1887, despite violent opposition, laws were passed providing for sickness, accident, and old-age insurance; limiting woman and child labor, and establishing maximum working hours Bismarck's new economic policy also resulted in the rapid expansion of German commerce and industry and the acquisition of overseas colonies and spheres of influence (see GERMANY). The Bismarckian era closed with the death of Emperor Frederick III A struggle for supremacy between Bismarck and WILLIAM II developed immediately upon the emperor's accession in 1888 and ended with Bismarck's dismissal in 1890 Bismarck, created prince (Fürst) after the Franco-Prussian War, was now made duke (Herzog) of Lauenburg He retired and spent the remainder of his life in criticism of the emperor and his ministers See Bismarck, the Man and the Statesman (his reminiscences, tr by A J Butler, 1898), C G Robertson, Bismarck (1918), Erich Eyck, Bismarck (in German Vol I, 1941, Vol II, 1943)

Bismarck. 1 City (pop. 1,302), E Mo , SW of St. Louis, in a farm and timber area, laid out 1868. 2 City (pop 15,496), state capital, and co seat of Burleigh co , S central N Dak , on hills overlooking the Missouri Lewis and Clark camped (1804–5) near the site of the city, it was settled (1871–72) with the coming of the Northern Pacific (1873) Laid out in 1873 as Edwinton, near Fort Greeley, but locally called "The Crossing," it was named Bismarck (for Germany's chancellor) later in the year in the hope of attracting German investment in the Northern Pacific RR, then building The city boomed as a river and railroad center and as a supply point for the Black Hills gold mines (1874), was incorporated in 1877, and became territorial capital in 1883 Bismarck is a distributing center for a large spring-wheat country, industries stem also from the region's dairy and agricultural products The capitol, destroyed by fire in 1930, was replaced (1932) by a skyscraper The state penitentiary is near by

Bismarck Archipelago, volcanic group, area 19,200 sq mi , SW Pacific, part of the Territory of New Guinea (see NEW GUINEA, TERRITORY OF) It includes NEW BRITAIN (the largest island), NEW IRELAND, LAVONGAI, ADMIRALTY ISLANDS, DUKE OF YORK ISLANDS, and VITU ISLANDS The group is generally mountainous, and there are active volcanoes on the larger islands The chief products are copra, pearls, cacao, and some copper and gold Made a German protectorate in 1884 the group was occupied in the First World War by Australian forces and was mandated to Australia in 1920 In the Second World War it was the site of Japanese naval and air bases (Rabaul being the chief stronghold), which were neutralized in 1943-44

Bismarckhütte · see CHORZOW

Bismarck Sea, southwest arm of the Pacific Ocean NE of New Guinea and NW of New Britain In the Second World War a Japanese naval force was destroyed here (1943) by U S aircraft

bismuth (bĭz'mŭth), silvery-white, reddish-tinged, crystalline, brittle element (symbol=Bi, for physical constants, see ELEMENT, table) It does not tarnish in the air, but when heated burns to form the trioxide Bismuth expands upon solidification, an unusual property which makes it useful in type-metal alloys and for castings In the periodic system it is grouped with nitrogen, phosphorus, antimony, and arsenic, exhibiting, however, more strongly metallic properties than any of the others Its more important compounds are the trioxide, which is basic, and the trisulphide called bismuth glance, both of which serve as commercial sources of the element The sulphide is roasted, the oxide reduced, to prepare the metal Bismuth also occurs free in nature The metal and its ores are found in Europe, the United States, and South America Bismuth's principal use is in alloys of low melting point, as Wood's metal, and in casting alloys Its soluble compounds are poisonous (for antidote, see POISONING, table), but some of its insoluble compounds are used in medicine in certain gastric disorders It is employed also in the examination of the digestive tract by means of the FLUOROSCOPE It serves in the printing of cotton goods and in the manufacture of certain cosmetics Recognised as a metal by early observers, including Georg Agricola, in the 16th cent , it was, however, long held to be a kind of lead or tin until the work of Claude J Geoffroy (1753) established its real identity bison, hoofed short-horned mammal related to domestic cattle, characterised by its high, heavily mantled shoulders which slope downward to the hindquarters There are two species of the genus Bison The European bison, or wisent, miscalled aurochs, is taller and longer-bodied and has a less luxuriant mantle and beard than the American species Once abundant over much of Europe it was reduced by 1948 to 97 known purebred specimens, more than half of them in Poland and Russia The American bison, commonly called buffalo, roamed in vast herds over much of North America, especially on the Great Plains Millions of the animals were slaughtered by the Indians and by the white man for food, for the hides which were made into leather, and for the furred hides which were made into buffalo robes Before the middle of the 19th cent. the bison was extinct E of the Mississippi Migrations westward, the expansion of the fur trade, and the building of the Union Pacific RR extended the slaughter until in 1900 there were but two wild herds, one in Yellowstone Park and one of wood bison in Canada Killing bison in Yellowstone was forbidden in 1894 The American Bison Society was founded in 1905 Bison are now protected on national refuges in Montana, Oklahoma, Nebraska, and North Dakota and on some state refuges

Bispham, David Scull (bĭs'pum), 1857–1921, American baritone, b Philadelphia He made his operatic debut in London in 1891 and was leading Wagnerian baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, from 1896 to 1903 He advocated English translation of foreign operas and supported native opera in England, and in 1921 the Opera Society of Chicago established the Bispham memorial award for composers of such operas See his Quaker Singer's Recollections (1921)

Bissagos Islands see PORTUGUESE GUINEA

Bissau (bĭsou'), small town, capital of Portuguese Guinea It is a port on the Atlantic Ocean. The name also appears as Bissão

Bisschop, Simon see EPISCOPIUS, SIMON

Bissen, Hermann Vilhelm (hĕr'män vĭl'hĕlm bĭs'p), 1798–1868, Danish sculptor He studied in Rome under Thorvaldsen, by whose will he was commissioned to complete the master's unfinished works Returning to Copenhagen, he produced many original works, and, in 1850, he was made director of the Academy of Arts

Bistrita (bĕ'strētsu), Ger Bistritz, Hung Beszterce town (pop 15,801), N Rumania, in Transylvania It is a commercial center First mentioned in the 12th cent , it has a 13th-century church and other ancient buildings One sixth of the population is Hungarian bites and stings, injuries from insects, snakes, cats, and dogs varying from a small puncture to a large WOUND The stings of bees, wasps, scorpions, centipedes spiders, and mosquitoes are relieved by application of dilute ammonia followed by soaking in plain water In the case of chiggers and ticks, it is important to remove parts left in the skin Dogs and cats suspected of being rabid should be kept for observation by officials so that vaccination of persons bitten can be started early to prevent hydrophobia All bites should be cleaned and treated to prevent infection Small injuries may be treated with tincture of iodine, some preparation of Dakin's solution is suitable for large wounds See also SNAKE BITE

Bisutun, Iran see BEHISTUN

Bithiah (bĭthī'ŭ) [Heb ,=daughter of God], wife of a Judahite, a Pharaoh's daughter 1 Chron 4 18

Bithron (bĭth'rŏn) [Heb ,=gully], unidentified place, E of the Jordan, probably a wadi 2 Sam 2 29

Bithynia (bĭthĭ'nēu), ancient country of NW Asia Minor, in present Turkey The original inhabitants were Thracians who established themselves as independent and were even given some autonomy after Cyrus the Great incorporated Bithynia into the Persian Empire After the death of Alexander the Great, the Bithynians took advantage of the wars of the Diadochi to secure freedom from the Seleucids Their leader, Zipoetes, was succeeded (c 280 B C) by Nicomedus I, who founded Nicomedia as the capital of his flourishing state Under him, Prusias I, Prusias II, and Nicomedus II, wars continued with the Seleucids and with Pergamum In the 1st cent B C , Mithridates V of Pontus had designs on Bithynia, which was under Nicomedus III (also called Nicomedus IV) a client of Rome When Nicomedus died (74 B C) he willed Bithynia to Rome The last of the wars with Mithridates resulted Bithynia was an important province of Rome For some time after Pompey's rearrangement of the empire it was combined with Pontus as a single colony After the time of Hadrian, Bithynia declined

Bitlis (bĭtlēs'), town (pop 10,779), NE Turkey, in Turkish Armenia There are numerous mosques and convents of dancing dervishes

Bitolj (bĕ'tôlyŭ), Macedonian Bitola (bĕ'tôlŭ), formerly Monastir (mônästēr'), city (pop 31,131), Macedonia, S Yugoslavia Founded by the Slavs, it was first mentioned in 1014 and became a bishopric in the 11th cent Having passed to the Turks in 1382, it developed as a military and commercial center Bitolj suffered heavily in the Balkan Wars and in the First World War It is noted for its numerous mosques, several churches, and a former Turkish market Near by are ruins of a Roman city, Heraclea Lyncestis

Biton (bī'tŏn), in Greek legend, brother of Cleobis (klēō'bĭs) When their mother, the priestess Cydippe, wanted to see a famous temple of HERA, the brothers dragged her chariot for many miles At the end of the journey Cydippe prayed that her sons might receive the greatest of blessings They were given a swift and painless death.

Bitonto (bētôn'tō), city (pop., 27,341), Apulia, S Italy, W of Bari The cathedral is a splendid example of Apulian Romanesque and is especially remarkable for its fine sculptures

Bitter, Karl Theodore Francis, 1867–1915, American sculptor, b. Austria Having done some decorative modeling in Austria, Bitter soon found work when he came to the United States in 1889 His work for the Chicago exposition (1893) brought him similar opportunities for ornamental sculpture at the Buffalo (1901) and St Louis (1904) expositions Many private and public buildings in New York and elsewhere are adorned by his designs, notably the reliefs in the Pennsylvania RR station, Philadelphia His best statues and memorials include a bust of Dr William Pepper (Philadelphia), the equestrian statue of Franz Sigel and the Carl Schurz Memorial (New York), the Villard Memorial (Sleepy Hollow, N Y), and the Hubbard Memorial (Montpelier, Vt) At the height of his career he was struck and killed by an automobile

Bitterfeld (bĭ'tŭrfĕlt), city (pop 32,833), in the former Prussian province of Saxony, central Germany, N of Leipzig, in a brown-coal-mining region It has manufactures of chemicals, machinery, and pottery.

bittern, migratory marsh bird of the heron family The American species, often called "stake driver" because of the male's booming call in the spring, is widely distributed in E North America Mostly nocturnal, it feeds on frogs, fish, and insects When pursued, it escapes detection by standing motionless with bill uplifted, its variegated brown and yellow coloring and striped forenock blending with the marsh grasses It is about 2 to 3 ft tall The eastern least bittern is about 13 in long, and the similar western least bittern is larger

bitternut hickory see HICKORY

Bitterroot, river rising in SW Montana and flowing N between the Bitterroot Range and the Sapphire Mts to join the Clark Fork near Missoula Hamilton is on the river

bitterroot, low perennial plant (Lewisia rediviva) native to W North America Bitterroot flowers were found by Lewis and Clark on their Western expedition and the genus was named for Lewis, the common name has lent itself to several Western landmarks, as the Bitterroot Mts The large pink or white cactuslike blossom became the state flower of Montana The starchy root of the plant, extremely bitter until cooked, has been an important Indian food Bitterroot, with its cluster of small narrow fleshy leaves, is suitable for rock gardens

Bitterroot Range, part of the Rocky Mts , on the Idaho-Mont border The main range, running northwest and southeast, includes Trapper Peak (10,175 ft) and El Capitan (9 936 ft) The southern part of the range is also known as the Beaverhead Mts The Bitterroot Range is sometimes said to include (in the south) the east-running spur which rises to 10,961 ft in Mt Garfield bitters, beverages containing bitter principles, such as angostura bark, cascarilla, quassia, gentian, orange, quinine, and other flavoring agents, and prepared by infusion or distillation They are used as appetizers and digestives and frequently attain an alcoholic strength of 40 percent bittersweet, name for two unrelated plants, both fall fruiting, occasionally used medicinally, and reported poisonous One, called also bitter or woody nightshade (Solanum dulcamara), has purplish, potatolike blossoms and scarlet berries It is a somewhat wood vine of the Old World, naturalized in North America The more popular bittersweet (Celastrus scandens) is a woody, twining vine which grows over stone walls and thickets from Maine to North Carolina and as far west as Nebraska It has small greenish flowers (male and female sometimes borne on separate plants) and clusters of orange-yellow capsules that split and show a fleshy scarlet center See also EUONYMUS

bitumen (bĭtū'mĕn), term originally used to include a number of natural mineral substances, now known to be essentially mixtures of hydrocarbons ASPHALT and PETROLEUM are bitumens Substances resembling these or containing their constituents are called bituminous See also COAL

Bitzius, Albrecht see GOTTHELF, JEREMIAS

bivalve (bī'vălv"), mollusk with two valves (i e , shells) connected by a ligament Most forms are marine but some are found in fresh water They are usually inactive Food particles in the water enter the body through one siphon and wastes are given off through the other Some bivalves, e g , the CLAM, burrow into the sand or mud, while the OYSTER is sessile, and the SCALLOP moves freely through the water

Biwa (bē'wa), lake, c 40 mi long and from 2 to 12 mi wide, S Honshu, Japan, NE of Kyoto The largest lake in Japan, it abounds in fish , A canal to Kyoto supplies hydroelectric power

Biwabik (bĭwa'bĭk, bī–), village (pop 1,304), NE Minn , on the Mesabi iron range and E of Virginia

Bixby, Horace Ezra, 1826–1912, Mississippi river steamboat captain, b Geneseo, N Y He won his pilot's license in 1846 and soon became famous for his remarkable knowledge of the ever-changing river channel It was with Bixby that Mark TWAIN in 1857 elected to study river navigation, and their subsequent adventures together are vividly recorded in Life on the Mississippi In the Civil War, Bixby piloted the gunboat Benton and for a time was chief of the Union River Service After the war he owned and captained a steamer which plied between St Louis and Fort Benton, Mont , on the Missouri, and still later was master of the City of Baton Rouge (on the St Louis-New Orleans run) of the Anchor Line, in which he was financially interested. He was still on the Mississippi, as captain of the government snag boat Wright, in 1912

Bixby, William Herbert, 1849–1928, American military engineer, b. Charlestown, Mass., grad West Point, 1873. An authority on river and harbor improvements and on lighthouse construction, he directed such work in many states. For several years he served as head of the Mississippi River Commission. He directed (1912) the raising of the battleship Maine

Bixby, town (pop. 1,291), NE Okla. on the Arkansas river and SE of Tulsa, in a farm area, founded 1893, inc. 1907

Biysk, RSFSR: see Biisk

Bizerta (bĭzâr'tə, bĭzûr'tu), Fr. Bizerte (bēzĕrt'), city (pop. 39,327), Tunisia. It is a port and naval station strategically situated near the narrowest part of the Mediterranean. Anciently a colony of Tyre, it had a checkered career under Romans, Vandals, Arabs, Moors, Spaniards (1534–72), and Barbary pirates. The French took it in 1881, they improved and fortified the outer harbor and constructed a quay-lined canal (2,600 ft. long) to the Lake of Bizerta (area c. 50 sq. mi.), where he naval works and the military town of Ferryville. The White Russian fleet (1920) and the Spanish Republican navy (1939) were interned at Bizerta. A German base in the Second World War, it was heavily bombed by Allied forces (1943)

Bizet, Georges (zhôrzh' bēzā'), 1838–75, French operatic composer. He entered the Paris Conservatoire at nine and took the Prix de Rome in 1857. Although he enjoyed moderate success in his lifetime, he matured late and died young, thus leaving only one real masterpiece, Carmen (based on a novel by Mérimée), produced the year of his death. Its vivid depiction of intense emotion, its Spanish idiom, and its colorful orchestration have made it immensely popular, although it was not successful when first performed. His operas Les Pêcheurs de perles (1863), La Jolie Fille de Perth (1867), and Djamileh (1872) and his Symphony in C Major (1855) receive occasional performances, and his incidental music to Daudet's Arlésienne, in the form of two orchestral suites, is quite popular. See study by Martin Cooper (1938)

Bizjothjah (bĭzjŏth'jŭ), name in a geographical list marred by copyists. Joshua 15:28

Bizzha, chamberlain of Ahasuerus. Esther 1:10

Bjerknes, Vilhelm Friman Koren (vĭl'hĕlm frē'mən kō'run byĕrk'nēs), 1862–, Norwegian physicist. He was professor at the universities of Oslo (1907–12, 1926–32), Leipzig (1912–17), and Bergen (1917–26). His work in meteorology and on electric waves was important in the early development of wireless telegraphy. His works include Fields of Force (1906), he is co-author of Dynamic Meteorology and Hydrography (2 vols., 1910–11). He evolved a theory of cyclones known as the polar-front theory with his son Jakob Aall Bonnevie Bjerknes (yä'kŏp ôl'bô'nuvē), 1897–, who became a U.S. citizen in 1946. He served as professor of meteorology at the Univ. of Bergen (1931–40) and at the Univ. of California (from 1940).

Bjorneborg, Finland: see Pori

Bjornson, Bjornstjerne, Nor. Bjørnstjerne Bjørnson (byûrn'styĕrnu byûrn'sŏn), 1832–1910, Norwegian novelist, poet, dramatist, and social and political leader. After several years as literary and dramatic critic for various Oslo papers, he wrote, in 1857, his first drama, Between the Battles, and in the same year produced Synnøve Solbakken (first Eng. tr., 1881, Sunny Hill, 1932), the first of his peasant novels, which also include Arne (1859). In 1857 he succeeded his friend Ibsen as director of the Ole Bull Theater in Bergen and the next year wrote the drama Lame Hulda. From 1859 he was an influence in politics, championing the Norwegian liberals in their struggle for a parliamentary form of government, which he helped to win in 1884. Receiving in 1860 a stipend to travel, he visited the Continent. Sigurd Slembe (1862), one of his finest historical dramas, belongs to this period. Returning to Oslo in 1863, he was granted an annuity by the Storting for artistic effort and was director of the Oslo Theater until 1867. Some of his best works are the novel The Fisher Girl (1868; Eng. tr., 1871), the epic poem Arnljot Gelline (1870), and The Bankrupt (1875, Eng. tr., 1914), a modern drama which won international acclaim. At this time Bjornson left the church. During the years 1881–87 he lived abroad, in 1883 the first part of his drama Beyond Our Power (Eng. tr., 1913) was published. On his return to Norway he retired to his farm in Gudbrandsdal. Among his later works are a novel, In God's Way (1889, Eng. tr., 1890), and two dramas—Beyond Human Might (the second part of Beyond Our Power, 1895; Eng. tr., 1914) and Paul Lange and Tora Parsberg (1898, Eng. tr., 1899). He ranks as Norway's foremost novelist and poet and as a dramatist is second only to Ibsen. He was awarded the 1903 Nobel Prize in literature. His poem, "Ja, vi elsker dette landet" [Yes, we love this land of ours], is the Norwegian national anthem. His letters were edited by Halvdan Koht (6 vols., 1912–32). See biography by Harold Larson (1944).

Black, Greene Vardiman, 1836–1915, American dentist, b. Scott co., Ill., D.D.S. Missouri Dental College (now part of Washington Univ.), 1877. Professor at Chicago College of Dental Surgery (now part of Loyola Univ.) from 1883 to 1889 and professor (from 1891) and dean (from 1897) at Northwestern Univ. dental school, he made large contributions to dentistry as teacher, as originator of methods and instruments, and as author. His works include Formation of Poisons by Microorganisms (1884), Dental Anatomy (1891), and Operative Dentistry (1908). The Black method of preparing amalgam alloys for fillings is still in use

Black, Hugh, 1868–, Scottish-American theologian and author. After pastorates in Paisley and Edinburgh, he came to the United States in 1906 to enter upon his professorship of practical theology in Union Theological Seminary, New York city. His books include Culture and Restraint (1900), Christ's Service of Love (1907), The New World (1915), The Adventure of Being Man (1929), and Christ or Caesar (1938)

Black, Hugo LaFayette, 1886–, Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1937–), b. Harlan, Clay co., Ala., LL.B. Univ. of Alabama, 1906. He practiced law and held local offices before he served (1927–37) in the U.S. Senate. There he ardently supported New Deal measures, conducted Senate investigations of merchant-marine subsidies (1933) and lobbying (1935), and sponsored (1937) the Wages and Hours bill. His appointment to the Supreme Court met strong opposition in the Senate and public objection on the grounds of his former membership in the Ku Klux Klan

Black, James, 1823–93, American temperance leader. A Pennsylvania lawyer, he was active in state and national temperance work. His plan for a National Publication House was adopted by the National Temperance Convention (1865). In 1872, as presidential nominee of the Prohibition party, he gained some 5,000 votes

Black, Jeremiah Sullivan, 1810–83, American cabinet officer, b. Somerset co., Pa. Admitted to the Pennsylvania bar in 1830, he became a successful lawyer. He was appointed (1842) president judge of a district court, was elected (1851) a justice of the state supreme court, and was reelected in 1854. As U.S. Attorney General (1857–60) under President Buchanan he hired Edwin M. Stanton, later his successor, to clear up the involved land-title cases in California, but was less successful in enforcing unpopular legislation concerning slavery. It was Black's opinion that though the seceding Southern states could not be coerced, measures should be taken to protect all Federal property in the South and to resist armed rebellion. He replaced (Dec., 1860) Lewis Cass as Secretary of State and succeeded in persuading Buchanan to send supplies to Fort Sumter. Buchanan appointed him to the Supreme Court in Feb., 1861, but the Senate, with both Democrats and Republicans hostile to Black, refused to confirm him. See P. G. Auchampaugh, James Buchanan and His Cabinet on the Eve of Secession (1926), biography by W. N. Brigance (1934)

Black, Joseph, 1728–99, Scottish chemist and physician, b. France. He was professor of medicine at Glasgow (1756–66) and at Edinburgh (from 1766). He is known especially for his theories of latent heat and specific heat and for discovering carbon dioxide (he called it "fixed air").

black and tan terrier: see TERRIER.

Blackbeard, d. 1718, English pirate. His name was probably Edward Teach, Thatch, or Thach. It is supposed that he began as a privateer in the War of the Spanish Succession and at its end turned pirate. Certainly between 1716 and 1718 he preyed with cruelty and treachery on the shipping and coastal settlements of the West Indies and the Atlantic coast of North America. His headquarters were in the Bahamas and the Carolinas, and the compliant governor of North Carolina shared some of the booty. Despite such protection Teach was killed by a British force sent by the governor of Virginia. Legend has given Blackbeard's history a romantic cast

Black Belt, term loosely applied to a broad belt dipping across central South Carolina and Georgia. The term is also used for black-soil areas in Alabama, Mississippi and other states. The Black Belt is characterized by dark, rich cotton-growing soil, a preponderance of Negroes in many of the counties, and a tendency to cling to large-scale plantation economy. Recently, diversified farming and stock raising have been introduced blackberry, name for several species of thorny plants of the genus Rubus, which includes also the raspberry, dewberry, and loganberry—all of which are sometimes called brambles. Cultivated blackberries are derived from native American species and are valued for their juicy fruits, black or dark purplish when ripe, which are used fresh, cooked, or for jams and preserves. The DEWBERRY is sometimes called running blackberry. See also RASPBERRY blackbird, name in North America of a perching bird allied to the bobolink, the meadow lark, the grackle, and the oriole. The European blackbird is a thrush. The red-winged blackbird of E North America is a familiar sight, its scarlet shoulder patches conspicuous among the tall grasses of marshes and wet meadows where it nests. It has a pleasing song which sounds like "conk-ka-ree." It compensates for the grain it eats by destroying harmful insects and weed seeds. Except during the breeding season blackbirds usually travel in flocks. The yellow-headed, the tricolored red-winged, and Brewer's blackbird are known in the West. The rusty blackbird, glossy blue black in summer when the brown which edged its feathers in winter has worn off, winters in the United States but breeds mainly farther north

Blackburn, Joseph, b. c1700, d. after 1765, American portrait painter. Little is known concerning him except that from 1750 to 1765 he painted portraits (usually signed J.B.) chiefly of members of distinguished families in Boston and Portsmouth, N.H. Examples are those of Rev. and Mrs. I. Hancock (Public Library, Lexington, Mass.), Gen. J. Winslow (Mass. Historical Society, Boston), Theodore Atkinson, Jr. (R.I. School of Design, Providence), Col. Theodore Atkinson (Worcester Art Mus.), Jonathan Simpson and his wife (Mus. of Fine Arts, Boston), Thomas and Mary Sylvester Dering and portraits of three members of the Greenleaf family (Metropolitan Mus.)

Blackburn, county borough (1931 pop. 122,697, 1947 estimated pop. 109,300), Lancashire, England, NNW of Manchester. It is a great cotton-weaving center, noted especially for calicoes. The textile industry started very early here—Blackburn checks were well known about the middle of the 17th cent. In 1764 James Hargreaves invented the spinning jenny here, and the manufacture of cotton goods received a new impetus. Chemicals, pharmaceuticals, paper, and silk textiles are also made. John Morley was born here

Black Canyon of the Gunnison National Monument: see NATIONAL PARKS AND MONUMENTS (table)

black codes: see RECONSTRUCTION

Black Country, highly industrialized region, mostly in Staffordshire, but partly in Worcestershire and Warwickshire, England. It has extensive coal mines, iron foundries, steel plants, and blast furnaces and includes the cities Birmingham, Dudley, Rowley Regis, Tipton, Walsall, Wednesbury, West Bromwich, and Wolverhampton

Black Death: see PLAGUE

Black Diamond, village (pop. 1,380), S Alta., SSW of Calgary, in a coal-mining region at the east edge of the Turner Valley oil field

Black Douglas: see DOUGLAS, SIR JAMES DE DOUGLAS, LORD OF

black earth or chernozem (chär'nôzĕm"), variety of soil rich in organic matter in the form of HUMUS. It is generally a modified type of LOESS. True chernozem is black in color, but there are various grades, shading off into gray and chestnut-brown soils. It is most widely distributed in Russia, where it forms a large part of the good agricultural soil, but soils similar to the Russian are also found in India and the United States

Blackett, Patrick Maynard Stuart (blă'kĭt), 1897–, English physicist. In 1937 he became professor of physics at the Univ. of Manchester. During the First World War he served with the royal navy and during the Second World War he contributed importantly to research especially to that on the atomic bomb. For his work in improving and extending the use of the Wilson cloud chamber and his discoveries concerning cosmic rays he received the 1948 Nobel Prize in Physics. He is the author of Military and Political Consequences of Atomic Energy (1948, rev. ed., 1949, American ed., Fear, War, and the Bomb, 1949).

black-eyed bean: see COWPEA

black-eyed Susan, North American wild flower (Rudbeckia hirta), daisylike, yellow with a dark brown center, it is called also oxeye and yellow daisy. It is a weedy biennial or annual of dry places and is the state flower of Maryland

Blackfeet Indians: see BLACKFOOT INDIANS

black fly, small vicious-biting fly of nearly world-wide distribution, with gauzy wings, short legs, and a humped back. In most species the eggs are attached to underwater vegetation or rocks and the larvae live in flowing water. When the adult hatches from the pupa case, it emerges from the water in a bubble of air. Species include the Adirondack and the white-stockinged black flies and the buffalo and the turkey gnats

Blackfoot, city (pop. 3,681), co. seat of Bingham co., SE Idaho, SSW of Idaho Falls, between the Blackfoot and the Snake near their confluence, founded 1878, inc. 1907. The area, irrigated from the Snake since early days, produces sugar beets, dairy products, and grain, and the Blackfoot river has a reservoir used for the Fort Hall irrigation project. The Eastern Idaho Fair is held annually in Blackfoot

Blackfoot Indians, North American tribes of Algonquian linguistic stock, occupying in the early 19th cent. a large range of territory around the Upper Missouri (above the Yellowstone) and the North Saskatchewan rivers W to the Rockies. There were three main tribes—the Siksika or Blackfoot proper, the Piegan, and the Blood. These were in no way connected politically, but they were united by the sense of being one people with common enemies The Atsina Indians (related to the Arapaho) and the Athapascan-speaking Sarsi Indians were allied with the Blackfoot group To other neighboring tribes and usually to white men the Blackfoot were unremittingly hostile They had moved into the N Great Plains somewhat earlier, had acquired horses from southern tribes, and had a typical nomadic Plains culture, largely dependent on the buffalo Their only cultivated crop was tobacco, grown for ceremonial purposes With the early coming of the white man, the Blackfoot gained wealth from the rich beaver streams in their territory, but the killing out of the buffalo and the near exhaustion of fur stocks decimated the proud tribes On reservations in Alberta and Montana there are today greatly reduced numbers of Blackfoot, who continue to a small degree the rich ceremonialism that earlier marked their religion—the sun dance, the vision quest, and the elaborate paraphernalia of ritual

Black Forest, Ger Schwarzwald (shvärts'vält), mountain range in S Baden and Württemberg, SW Germany Covered by beautiful, dark pine forests and cut by deep valleys and small lakes, it rises to 4,903 ft in the Feldberg The chief resorts are Baden-Baden and Wildbad The Danube and Neckar rise here Lumbering is an important source of livelihood The Black Forest is famous for its clock and toy industries (cuckoo clocks, musical boxes).

Black Friday In 1868 a small group of American financial speculators, including Jay GOULD and James FISK, sought the support of Federal officials of the Grant administration in a drive to corner the gold market The attempt failed when government gold was released for sale The drive culminated in a day of panic when thousands were ruined—Friday, Sept 24, 1869, popularly called Black Friday There was great indignation against the perpetrators Several other days of financial panic have also been occasionally referred to as Black Friday

black gum, ornamental deciduous tree (Nyssa sylvatica) native to E North America The leaves turn bright scarlet in the fall The very tough wood has been used for wheel hubs and other purposes It is sometimes called sour gum, tupelo, and pepperidge, names also given other species of the genus

Black Hand, name and symbol often used by criminal or terroristic organizations The Black Hand flourished in Sicily in the late 19th cent and was carried from there to certain cities of the United States See CAMORRA.

black haw, name for several woody plants, particularly a VIBURNUM (Viburnum prunifolium) native E of the Rockies in North America and called also stagbush and sloe It has flat-topped clusters of small flowers, followed by bluish-black, edible berry-like fruits A verse of James Whitcomb Riley commends the fruit The bark has been used medicinally

Black Hawk War 1 Conflict between the Sac and Fox Indians and the United States in 1832 After the War of 1812 white settlement of the Illinois country exerted pressure on the Indians A treaty of 1804, which had no real claim to validity, provided for removal of the Sac and Fox Indians W of the Mississippi An Indian leader, Black Hawk (1767–1838), who was born in the Sac village near the site of present Rock Island, Ill, and who had fought for the British in the War of 1812, denounced the treaty and resisted removal Years of intermittent skirmishing followed In 1831 the whites used force to impose a new treaty that compelled the Indians to retire In April, 1832, Black Hawk, with some 500 braves and their families, returned to Illinois Not receiving the support he expected, he admitted defeat, but when the peaceful emissaries he sent were shot down in cold blood, the outraged Black Hawk successfully attacked a larger white force, then returned into present Wisconsin A large force of volunteers was gathered under Gen Henry ATKINSON On the Bad Axe river Black Hawk was attacked by these troops and a Sioux war party Trapped, he displayed a white flag, but this was ignored and almost all of his band, including women and children, were wiped out Black Hawk himself escaped, surrendered to the Winnebago, was turned over for imprisonment, and was released in 1833 to return to the pitiful remnant of his tribe and his family in Iowa Lorado Taft's colossal statue (1911) near Oregon, Ill, has come to be known as the Black Hawk monument See his autobiography, published in 1833 and reissued as Life of Black Hawk (1932) Cyrenus Cole, I Am a Man the Indian Black Hawk (1938) 2 Conflict between the Indians and white settlers in Utah from 1865 to 1868 Warfare supposedly broke out because a smallpox epidemic in Gunnison spread to the Ute Indians Sporadic outbreaks of trouble continued for three years in Utah's worst Indian troubles Finally the Ute chiefs, including one called Black Hawk (d 1870), agreed to a treaty of peace in 1868

blackhead or comedo (kŏm'fdō) [Latin, =glutton], the oily secretion and other material with which the ducts of the sebaceous glands of the skin are sometimes filled Blackheads vary from yellow to black and occur especially on the face and back Bacteria may cause infection in them Usually the skin on which they occur is oily and requires washing with soap and warm water, followed by cold water Mild astringents applied locally and general toning up through exercise and good nutrition are helpful. See also ACNE

Blackheath, common, 267-acres, in Greenwich metropolitan borough, London It was the gathering place of highwaymen and of several martial and civil groups, including the followers of Wat Tyler and Jack Cade, and of the London people who welcomed Henry V on his return from Agincourt Prehistoric subterranean caves were converted into air-raid shelters in 1939

black hellebore see CHRISTMAS ROSE

black henbane see HENBANE

Black Hills, mountains, SW S Dak and NE Wyo They comprise an area of c 6,000 sq mi, enclosed by the Belle Fourche and Cheyenne rivers, and rise from the surrounding semiarid plains to altitudes of 5,000 ft and over, with Harney Peak (7,242 ft) the highest point At the time of their discovery the mountains were heavily forested with a species of yellow pine which looked black from a distance, and hence they were called the Black Hills by white men and Indians Most of the area is within Black Hills and Harney national forests, and many of its features are preserved in Custer State Park, Wind Cave National Park, Jewel Cave and Fossil Cycad national monuments, and Mt Rushmore National Memorial When gold was discovered in the area (1874), the Indians lost their hold upon the land, white settlement advanced rapidly after 1876, chiefly in such mining towns as Custer, Deadwood, Lead, Rapid City, and Spearfish Present besides gold are silver, tungsten, mica, coal, quartz, granite, and petroleum See R J Casey, The Black Hills (1949)

Black Hole of Calcutta see CALCUTTA

Blackie, John Stuart, 1809–95, Scottish classical scholar Educated for the ministry, he instead became a professor of Latin at the Univ of Aberdeen and later professor of Greek at the Univ of Edinburgh He is best known for his translations of Greek, especially the dramas of Aeschylus He also translated Goethe's Faust See his letters (ed by his nephew Archibald Stodart Walker, 1909) and the autobiographical Notes of a Life (also ed by his nephew, 1910), biography by Anna M Stoddard (3d ed, 1895)

Black Isle, peninsular district, Ross and Cromarty co, Scotland, projecting into Moray Firth

black jack, card game played with an ordinary deck The game is also called twenty-one Each player receives one card face down and bets that this card plus one or more cards dealt face up will beat the dealer's hand without exceeding 21 An ace counts 1 or 11, a picture card 10, and all other cards according to their face value A score of 21 on the first two cards is the perfect hand, called black jack See R L Frey, ed, The New Complete Hoyle (1947)

Black Lake, town (pop 2,276), SE Que, on Lake Noir and SW of Thetford Mines It owes its existence to the asbestos mines, opened in 1884

black lead see GRAPHITE

black letter see TYPE blackmail, in law, exaction of money from another by THREAT of exposure of crime or of disreputable conduct The term was originally used for the tribute levied until the 18th cent by bands of brigands upon the inhabitants of the Scottish border Statutes often treat blackmail as a form of EXTORTION

black market, term for the selling or buying of commodities at prices above the legal ceiling or beyond the amount allotted to a customer in countries which have placed restrictions on sales and prices Such trading was common during the Second World War wherever the demand and the means of payment exceeded the available supply Most of the warring countries attempted to equalize distribution of scarce commodities by rationing and price fixing In the United States black market transactions were carried on extensively in meat, sugar, tires, and gasoline (the last chiefly through stolen or counterfeit coupons) American soldiers in occupied countries who trafficked in cigarettes, gasoline, or other scarce commodities were severely dealt with In England, where clothing and liquor were rationed, these were popular black-market commodities In the United States rationing terminated at the end of the war, but a black market in automobiles and building materials continued while the scarcity lasted BOOTLEGGING during the prohibition era was a black-market operation under a different name

Blackmore, Richard Doddridge, 1825–1900, English novelist, grad Exeter College, Oxford He gave up practicing law and teaching and retired to devote himself to fruit farming and writing His reputation rests chiefly on his romantic novel of the 17th-century outlaws of Exmoor, Lorna Doone (1869), but he wrote also a number of other novels—of which the best known are perhaps The Maid of Sker (1872) and Springhaven (1887)—and several volumes of poetry

Black Mountain, resort town (pop 1,042), W N C, in the Blue Ridge just E of Asheville Near by are Montreat College (junior) for girls and Y M C A and Presbyterian assembly areas Also near by is Black Mountain College (nonsectarian, coeducational, opened 1933) It is an experimental school, integrating academic work with community life and student needs Students are self-responsible

Black Mountains, part of the Appalachian system, W N C, rising to 6,684 ft in Mt MITCHELL

Blackmur, Richard P, 1904– American critic and poet The Double Agent (1935) is a collection of his criticism, much of which was published in Hound and Horn while Blackmur was an associate editor Although his talent was unanimously recognized, his poems, From Jordan's Delight (1937), were not so well received as a second book of essays, The Expense of Greatness (1940)

Blackpool, county borough (1931 pop 101,553, 1947 estimated pop 152,470), Lancashire, England It is a large seaside resort on the Irish Sea and serves the Lancashire industrial region It has beaches, piers, and many mechanical amusements

Black Prince see EDWARD THE BLACK PRINCE

Black River 1 Tributary of the White River (Ark), rising in SE Missouri and flowing c 300 mi SW to Newport, Ark It is partly navigable The construction by U S army engineers of Clearwater Dam (143 ft high and 4,225 ft long) in the Black River 6 mi SW of Piedmont, Mo was completed in 1948 2 Name often given to the short stream formed after the Tensas joins the Ouachita in NE Louisiana It flows into the Red 3 River of N New York, c 120 mi long, rising in the Adirondacks and flowing SW, NNW, and WSW to Black River Bay, an inlet of Lake Ontario W of Watertown Its falls provide power for many factories, especially paper mills From 1836 until its abandonment in 1926, a canal connected the Black River with the Erie Canal at Rome 4 River, c 160 mi long, rising in central Wisconsin near Rib Lake and winding S and W to the Mississippi at La Crosse It was important in the lumbering industry

Black River Falls, city (pop 2 539) co seat of Jackson co, central Wis, on the Black River and NE of La Crosse, settled before 1840, inc 1883 It is a farm trade center

Blacksburg 1 Town (pop 1,917), extreme N S C, near the N C line NE of Spartanburg, in a farm area 2 Town (pop 2,133), SW Va, in the Alleghenies W of Roanoke, settled 1745, inc 1871 VIRGINIA POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE is here Near by is Mountain Lake, a resort (alt 3,874 ft)

Black Sea, inland sea (c 160,000 sq mi, maximum depth c 7,360 ft), connected with the Mediterranean by the Bosporus, the Sea of Marmara, and the Dardanelles Its largest arm is the Sea of Azov (see AZOV, SEA OF) It is enclosed by the USSR (Ukraine, RSFSR, and Georgian SSR) on the north and east, by Turkey on the south, and by Bulgaria and Rumania on the west Among the chief ports are Odessa, Batum, and Constanta, and river feeders are the Danube, the Dnieper, and the Don The Pontus Euxinus of the ancients, the Black Sea has been navigated since prehistoric times Its shores were colonized by the Greeks in antiquity and by the Genoese in the Middle Ages Of the many conquerors that occupied its banks, the Turks and the Tatars stayed longest The Tatar khanate of CRIMEA, which blocked Russian access to the sea, was annexed to Russia in 1783 After the Second World War, Russia proposed to place the Black Sea under the control of the riparian nations by revising the status of the Turkish straits (see DARDANELLES) The Black Sea is sometimes called the Euxine Sea

Blackshear, city (pop 2,010), co seat of Pierce co, SE Ga, near the Satilla river just NE of Waycross, in a coastal-plain farm and lumber area, inc 1859

black snake, nonpoisonous snake of the E United States, 5 to 6 ft long It frequents woods and meadows and likes rather open country with stone walls for sunning itself and for concealment Not a constrictor, it seizes its prey (small animals) in its mouth, pressing the animal to the ground to overcome it The young are gray, blotched with brown, becoming uniformly black on the upper surface when adult Sometimes confused with the black snake is the pilot black snake, also nonpoisonous, of the NE United States In contrast to the dull black of the flat scales of the black snake, the scales on its back are shiny and slightly keeled and sometimes show white edges It reaches a length of more than 8 ft

black snakeroot, North American woods perennial (Cimicifuga racemosa) It has compound leaves and small, white, rank-odored flowers along a wandlike stalk The rootstock has until recently been an official drug of the U S Pharmacopoeia Black snakeroot is also called bugbane and black cohosh, and all three names are used for other plants

Blackstone, Sir William, 1723–80, English jurist He was at first unsuccessful in legal practice and turned to scholarship and teaching He became (1758) the first Vinerian professor of law at Oxford, and he inaugurated courses in English law at the British universities, which had previously confined themselves to Roman law Blackstone published his lectures as Commentaries on the Law of England (1765–69) This work is regarded as the most thorough treatment of the whole of English law ever produced by one man It is especially notable for its excellent style and for its reduction to order of an exceedingly complex subject Blackstone has been criticized, notably by Jeremy Bentham, for a complacent belief that in the main English law was beyond improvement and for his failure to analyse exactly the social factors underlying legal systems Blackstone's book was highly influential in England and in the United States until the end of the 19th cent and has been often republished In his later life he resumed practice and served in Parliament (1768–70) and as a judge of the Court of Common Pleas (1770–80) He was active in prison reform See Jeremy Bentham, A Comment on the Commentaries (ed by C. W Everett, 1928)

Blackstone. 1 Textile town (pop. 4,566), S Mass , on the Blackstone river at the R I line, settled 1662, set off from Mendon 1845. 2 Town (pop 2,699), S Va , SW of Richmond, inc 1888, reinc 1914 It is a farm trade center and tobacco market. A girls' junior college is here

Blackstone, river rising in central Massachusetts and flowing SSE to the Providence river in Rhode Island

blackthorn or sloe, low, spreading, thorny bush or small tree of the plum genus (Prunus spinosa), having black bark, white flowers, and deep blue fruits, usually rather acrid and not much larger than peas, native to Europe, Asia, and North Africa The blackthorn is cultivated for hedges, its limbs are used in Ireland for canes and cudgels, and the juice of the berries is used in making brandy, sloe gin, and preserves and as a diluent of port One of the hawthorns is sometimes called blackthorn

Black Tom, part of Jersey City, N J , called also Black Tom Island Here German saboteurs demolished (Aug , 1916) an American munition plant six months after they had destroyed the Kingsland arsenal, also in New Jersey Sued (1922) by the U S government and vindicated (1930) before an international claims commission, the German government, upon new hearings (1939) was ordered to pay (1940) $50,000,000 damages

Blackville, town (pop 1,456), SW S C , 88W of Columbia, in a farm area noted for melons and cucumbers Near by is an experiment station of Clemson Agricultural College

black walnut see WALNUT

Black Warrior, navigable river rising in N central Alabama and flowing 178 mi generally SW to the Tombigbee near Demopolis.

Black Warrior, merchant steamer that plied between New York and Mobile, usually stopping at Havana, Cuba Her seizure on Feb 28, 1854, by Spanish authorities at Havana on the grounds that she had violated customs regulations nearly caused war between the United States and Spain The South, anxious to secure Cuba, was ready for war, but the North refused to support the idea, and after the Black Warrior was released the excitement died down

Black Watch or Royal Highlanders, Scottish regiment of infantry whose name comes from their dark plaid kilts. The companies were raised in 1725 and the regiment formed in 1735 to watch the Scottish rebels and keep the peace It was for a time the 43d, but in 1751 became the 42d regiment, a distinguished one in British history

Blackwater, river of Essex, England, rising near Saffron Walden and flowing c 40 mi to the North Sea.

Blackwater, river of Ireland, rising in Co Kerry and flowing c 100 mi E through Co Cork and across a corner of Co Waterford, turning abruptly S to enter the Atlantic at Youghal Bay

Blackwater, river of Northern Ireland, rising in the southern part of Co Tyrone and flowing 50 mi east and northeast to the southwest end of Lough Neagh It forms most of Co Tyrone's southeast border with Co Monaghan (Ireland) and Co Armagh

Blackwell, Alice Stone, 1857–1950, American woman-suffragist, b East Orange, N J , grad Boston Univ , 1881; daughter of Henry Brown Blackwell and Lucy Stone She was an editor (1881–1917) of the Woman's Journal, first as assistant to her parents and after their death as editor in chief Among her works are Lucy Stone, Pioneer of Woman's Rights (1930) and anthologies of Armenian, Russian, Yiddish, Hungarian, and Spanish American poetry

Blackwell, Antoinette Louisa (Brown), 1825–1921, American Unitarian minister, b Henrietta, N.Y., grad Oberlin College, 1847, and Oberlin Theological Seminary, 1850 Ordained a Congregational minister in 1853, she later became a Unitarian She was active in the woman-suffrage movement from its early days, an abolitionist, and a temperance advocate She was the sister-in-law of Henry B Blackwell and Elizabeth Blackwell Her books include The Sexes throughout Nature (1875) and The Making of the Universe (1914).

Blackwell, Elizabeth, 1821–1910, American physician, b England, sister of Henry Brown Blackwell She was the first woman in the United States to receive a medical degree, which was granted (1849) to her by Geneva Medical College (then part of Geneva College, early name of Hobart) With her sister, Emily Blackwell (1826–1910), and Marie Zackrzewska, she founded (1857) the New York Infirmary and College for Women, outgrowth of a private dispensary which she had earlier opened In the Civil War she organized a women's association for nursing and relief and later founded the first school for nurses in the United States In 1869 Dr Blackwell settled in England, where she became (1875) professor of gynecology at the London School of Medicine for Women, which she had helped to establish She wrote Pioneer Work in Opening the Medical Profession to Women (1895) and many other books and papers on health and education See Rachel Baker, First Woman Doctor (1944), Isabel Ross, Child of Destiny (1949)

Blackwell, Henry Brown, 1825–1909, American reformer, b Bristol, England, brother of Elizabeth Blackwell He was an abolitionist and later, with his wife, Lucy STONE, a worker for woman suffrage Alice Stone Blackwell was their daughter

Blackwell, city (pop 8,537), N Okla , NE of Enid, in a wheat and oil-producing area, founded and inc 1893 The city has an oil refinery, a zinc smelter, a glass factory, and food-processing plants

black widow see SPIDER

Blackwood, Algernon, 1869–, English novelist A collection of his old ghost stories was published in 1906 His novels, in which terror and the supernatural predominate, include The Empty House (1906), John Silence (1908), The Lost Valley (1910), The Centaur (1911), The Promise of Air (1918), The Garden of Survival (1918) See his autobiographical Episodes before Thirty (1928).

blackwood see ACACIA bladder, urinary, muscular sac situated in the pelvis. When empty or slightly distended, the organ lies within the pelvis, when filled with urine it extends upward into the abdominal cavity Urine from the kidneys enters the bladder by way of two tubes (ureters) Pressure of the collected fluid stimulates the nervous system, the sphincter is voluntarily relaxed, and the urine is conveyed out of the body by another tube (the urethra) The bladder is subject to trauma, inflammation, infection, calculus, polyps, and tumor formation Nervous disorders affect normal bladder function bladderwort, any plant of the genus Utricularia and of similar related genera, insectivorous or carnivorous plants, many native to North America, where they inhabit aquatic or boggy places These are thready plants with small bladderlike organs which trap minute animal life Each bladder has a door equipped with bristles or other protuberances, these, when touched, cause the door to swing inward with a rush of water by which the prey is swept into the bladder so quickly as to defy detection by the human eye The victim, it is usually agreed, is digested Bladderworts are often grown in aquariums

Bladensburg (blā'dunzbûrg), town (pop 1,220), W central Md , on the Anacostia river and near Washington, D C , in a farming area; chartered 1742 On Aug 24, 1814, the British under Gen. Robert Ross defeated the Americans under Gen W H Winder and entered Washington Here Stephen Decatur was mortally wounded by James Barron in a duel

Blaeu, Willem Janszoon (vĭ'lum yän'sōn blou'), 1571–1638, Dutch cartographer and printer He studied astronomy under Tycho Brahe The printing establishment he founded in Amsterdam was famed for its atlases and globes, especially the great folio atlas compiled by Blaeu himself Publication was not limited to geographical works, and the shop had some claim to being the best of its time The sons and grandsons of Blaeu continued his work

Blagoveshchensk (blŭgŭvyĕsh'chĭnsk) city (pop 58,761), capital of Amur oblast, RSFSR, in extreme E Siberia, on the Amur and Zeya rivers and on a spur of the Trans-Siberian RR It is an agricultural center, has a shipbuilding industry, and is a supply point for the Zeya gold-mining basin Founded in 1856, it flourished in the late 19th cent as a center of colonization and gold mining

Blaina, England see NANTYGLO AND BLAINA

Blaine, James Gillespie (glĭ'spē blān'), 1830–93, American politician, b West Brownsville, Pa , grad Washington (now Washington and Jefferson) College, 1847. He taught school and studied law before moving in 1854 to Maine, where he became an influential newspaper editor A leader in the formation of the Republican party in Maine, Blaine was state chairman (1859–81) and was elected to three terms in the legislature In 1863 he entered Congress, serving until 1876 and holding the speakership from 1869 to 1875 His friendship with James A GARFIELD of Ohio and William B. Allison of Iowa brought him support in the West, but a slighting personal remark he made in 1866 about Roscoe CONKLING won him the lifelong enmity of that leader of the "Stalwart" Republicans. Blaine, leader of the "Half-Breed" Republicans, only slightly less conservative, was widely considered the logical Republican choice for President in 1876 Shortly before the party convention, however, a Democratic House investigating committee charged him with using his influence as speaker to secure a land grant for a railroad in Arkansas and with selling the railroad's bonds at a liberal commission. Blaine privately secured possession of the famous "Mulligan letters," which had been named as proof, before they could be placed on record, and he never surrendered them He read portions of them, out of chronological order, before the House in a dramatic defense, but there seems to have been little doubt that he was guilty as charged The episode was decisive in his career It was a factor in his defeat in the 1876 convention, when Robert G INGERSOLL, in nominating him, called him a "plumed knight" Blaine, as U S Senator (1876–81), loyally supported President Rutherford B Hayes In 1880 the Conkling faction, though unable to renominate Grant, successfully prevented Blaine's nomination The deadlock was broken by the choice of Blaine's friend, Garfield, with Chester A ARTHUR, a Conkling man, nominated for Vice President Blaine became Garfield's Secretary of State, but upon the President's assassination resigned Retiring to private life, he wrote his widely read Twenty Years of Congress (2 vols , 1884–86) Finally nominated for President in 1884, Blaine who had heartily endorsed the radical Republican Reconstruction program, vigorously "waved the bloody shirt" against the Democratic candidate Grover CLEVELAND Sprightly allusions to the "Mulligan letters" and to Cleveland's admitted paternity of an illegitimate child enlivened the bitter campaign However, reform Republicans (the MUGWUMPS) such as Carl SCHURZ preferred Cleveland's untainted public record to Blaine's private virtue Their defection was made the more important when a tactless New York Presbyterian clergyman, the Rev Samuel D Burchard, spoke, in Blaine's presence, of the Democrats as "the party whose antecedents are rum, Romanism, and rebellion" He thus offended the large Irish Catholic vote in New York Blaine lost that state by a scant thousand votes and lost the election In 1888 Blaine unexpectedly declined to run for President but supported Benjamin HARRISON, who, upon becoming President, made him Secretary of State again Three days before the Republican convention of 1892 Blaine resigned to seek the nomination for President, but Harrison was renominated Blaine's health afterwards failed rapidly and he died the next year As Secretary of State, Blaine was particularly energetic in fostering closer relations with the Latin American nations Though invitations to a Pan American Congress were recalled when Frederick T Frelinghuysen succeeded him under Arthur, he was able during his second period in office to bring about and preside over the first Pan American Congress (see PAN-AMERICANISM) Vital matters that Blaine hoped to discuss were avoided, but the foundation was laid for subsequent congresses, and the Pan American Union was established Blaine hoped to increase commercial relations among American nations by reciprocal tariff treaties, and though the McKinley Tariff Act prevented this, the idea of tariff "reciprocity" was his contribution He also concluded a treaty with Great Britain to submit the BERING SEA FUR-SEAL CONTROVERSY to arbitration See biographies by Edward Stanwood (1905) and D S. Muzzey (1934), A F Tyler, The Foreign Policies of James G Blaine (1927)

Blaine. 1 Town (pop 1,049), NE Maine, N of Houlton, inc 1874. 2 Tourist and farm-trade city (pop 1,524), NW Wash , a port of entry on the Strait of Georgia near Canada, platted c 1884. It is the site of the Peace Arch on the border

Blair, Francis Preston, 1791–1876, American journalist and politician, b Abingdon, Va , grad Transylvania Univ , 1811 His articles in the Argus of Western America, the Frankfort, Ky , newspaper edited by Amos KENDALL and then himself, made it supreme among the Western journals supporting Andrew Jackson. On the defection of Duff GREEN, William T BARRY suggested that Blair be invited to Washington to establish a new administration paper Thus in Dec , 1830, began the Washington Globe, which until 1841 was to exert tremendous political influence as the Jacksonian "court journal" Blair won Jackson's unlimited confidence, and Kendall and he were the two leading members of the KITCHEN CABINET With John C Rives, who became his partner in 1834, he also established the Congressional Globe (now the Congressional Record), in which the daily proceedings of Congress were recorded When James K Polk became President, he forced Blair, who belonged to the radical or Van Buren wing of the Democratic party, to sell his interest in the Washington Globe to Thomas RITCHIE, and Blair "retired" to his new country estate in near-by Silver Spring, Md Blair House (now owned by the Federal government), his famous residence in the capital, he gave (1853) to his son Montgomery Blair. Another son, Francis Preston Blair (1821–75), was to be a distinguished general and Senator. The elder Blair's antislavery views led him to become one of the founders of the Republican party, and he presided over its first national convention at Pittsburgh in 1856 The Blairs worked hard for Lincoln's election, and the chief of this talented and politically ambitious clan was a top presidential adviser in the early years of the Civil War. In 1865 he engineered the futile HAMPTON ROADS PEACE CONFERENCE The Blairs supported Andrew Johnson's Reconstruction policy and were so bitterly opposed to the radical Republicans that they all returned to the Democratic fold See W E Smith, The Francis Preston Blair Family in Politics (1933); A M Schlesinger, Jr, The Age of Jackson (1945); B J Hendrick, Lincoln's War Cabinet (1946)

Blair, Francis Preston, 1821–75, American political leader and Union general in the Civil War, b Lexington, Ky, grad Princeton, 1841, son of Francis Preston Blair (1791–1876) He studied law at Transylvania Univ and in 1842 began practice with his brother, Montgomery Blair, at St Louis In the 1848 election he was the leader of the Free-Soil party in Missouri Blair was a state legislator (1852–56), a Congressman (1857–59, June, 1860, 1861–62), and in 1860 an energetic Lincoln supporter He organized in St Louis the armed "Wide Awakes," and his seizure, with Nathaniel LYON, of prosecessionist Camp Jackson and the U S arsenal early in 1861 helped to keep Missouri loyal to the Union At his request Lincoln sent John C FRÉMONT to command the Dept of the West, but a quarrel ensued between the two men, which led first to Blair's imprisonment by Frémont and then, partly through the influence of the powerful Blair family, to Frémont's dismissal Blair was an able chairman of the Committee on Military Defense in the 37th Congress before he resigned (July, 1862) to raise seven regiments of Missouri troops for the Union army Promoted major general of volunteers in Nov, 1862, he served with distinction in the Vicksburg, Chattanooga, and Atlanta campaigns Grant and Sherman considered him the ablest by far of the political generals While holding his military commission, Blair was also a member of the 38th Congress until June, 1864, when he was forced to yield his seat to the opponent who had successfully contested his election After the Civil War, Blair was denied political preferment by the radical Republicans and in 1868 ran for Vice President on the unsuccessful Democratic ticket headed by Horatio Seymour Cooperating with the Liberal Republicans, he helped overthrow the radicals in Missouri in 1870, when he was elected to the state legislature, which, in turn, sent him to the U S Senate (1871–73) See W E Smith, The Francis Preston Blair Family in Politics (1933), B J Hendrick, Lincoln's War Cabinet (1946)

Blair, James, 1656–1743, Church of England clergyman, missionary to colonial Virginia, and founder of the College of WILLIAM AND MARY, b Scotland At the request of the bishop of London, Blair came to Virginia in 1685 to revive and reform the Church in the colony In 1689 he was named deputy, or commissary, of the bishop in Virginia He traveled widely to reorganize parishes and to encourage the clergy He went to England (1691) to petition for a college, which when chartered in 1693 was named William and Mary after the monarchs Blair was made president for life In 1694 he was appointed by the king to the Virginia council, of which he was a lifelong member (except for a brief period) and its president in 1740–41 With Henry Hartwell and Edward Chilton, Blair wrote The Present State of Virginia and the College (1727, ed by H. D. Farish, 1940).

Blair, Montgomery, 1813–83, U S Postmaster General (1861–64), b Franklin co, Ky, grad West Point, 1835, son of Francis P Blair (1791–1876) and brother of Francis P Blair (1821–75) After serving against the Seminole Indians, he resigned (1836) from the army, studied law at Transylvania Univ, and in 1837 settled in St Louis as the legal and political protégé of Senator Thomas H Benton He became a successful lawyer and held several public offices, including the mayoralty (1842–43), before moving to Washington, D C He was the first U.S solicitor in the Court of Claims (1855–57), and as counsel for Scott in the famous DRED SCOTT CASE—one of his many appearances before the U S Supreme Court—he won a national reputation. Their free-soil views had brought all the Blairs from the Democratic into the new Republican party, and in 1860 Montgomery presided over the party's Maryland convention and was a delegate to the national convention at Chicago which nominated Lincoln In Lincoln's cabinet he was allied with Gideon Welles and other moderates in opposition to the radical Republicans, Salmon P Chase and Edwin M Stanton Although Blair ably administered the Post Office Dept, the President, to appease the radicals before the election of 1864, was forced to request his resignation Ever loyal to Lincoln and well aware of the political necessity involved, he retired gracefully and campaigned vigorously for Lincoln's reelection. After the Civil War he supported Andrew Johnson against the radicals, returned to the Democratic party, and was one of Samuel J Tilden's counsel in the disputed election of 1876 See W. E Smith, The Francis Preston Blair Family in Politics (1933), B J Hendrick, Lincoln's War Cabinet (1946).

Blair, Robert, 1699–1746, English poet and clergyman, author of The Grave (1743), a long blank-verse poem on death, one of the early examples of the "graveyard school" of poetry

Blair, city (pop 3,289), co seat of Washington co, E Nebr, on bluffs overlooking the Missouri N of Omaha, founded 1869 It is a farm trade center with small manufactures Dana College (founded 1886 by Danes) is here

Blair Atholl (ăth'ŭl), village, Perthshire, Scotland, at the confluence of the Garry and the Tilt Blair Castle, the seat of the duke of Atholl, dates from the 13th cent and figured in 17th-century conflicts Annually in September there is a Highland Gathering in the village

Blairmore, town (pop 1,767), SW Alta, on the Crowsnest river and SW of Calgary It is in a coal-mining area

Blairstown, unincorporated village (pop 603), NW N J, on Paulins Kill and NE of Easton, Pa It is a summer resort Blair Academy (1848), a private school for boys, is here

Blairsville, industrial borough (pop 5,002), SW Pa, on the Conemaugh and c 40 mi E of Pittsburgh, settled c 1792, laid out c 1819, inc 1825 It produces coal, clay, enamelware, and railroad cars

Blaise or Blase, Saint (both blāz), 4th cent, Armenian martyr, a bishop Because he is said to have saved the life of a boy who had swallowed a fishbone, he is invoked against sore throats Feast Feb 3

Blake, Frederic Columbus, 1877–, American physicist, b Decatur, Ill, grad Univ of Colorado (Ph B, 1901), Ph D Columbia, 1905 He was professor of physics at Ohio State Univ (1912–46) He is known for his research in electric waves and X rays, his spectrographic studies of crystals and alloys, and his investigation of the conductivity of metals in magnetic fields

Blake, Nicholas see DAY LEWIS, CECIL

Blake, Robert, 1599–1657, English admiral A Bristol merchant before he sat in the Short Parliament (1640), he became a land commander in the civil war, defending Bristol, Lyme, and Taunton against royalist attacks (1643–45) Appointed a general at sea (1649), he proved that naval training was not necessary for native genius by a brilliant career in his middle age In 1650 he nearly destroyed the royalist fleet under Prince RUPERT and captured a large Portuguese fleet off the Tagus In 1652 he recovered the Scilly Islands and Guernsey and Jersey In 1652 in two major engagements he defeated the Dutch In 1654 he exacted reparations from the North African states for injuries to English shipping and established British power in the Mediterranean In 1656 he destroyed a Spanish treasure fleet, and the next year he sank a Spanish naval force Made a member of the council of state in 1651 and a commissioner of the admiralty, he helped to develop the effective Commonwealth navy See his letters (ed by J R Powell, 1934), biography by R H Beadon (1935)

Blake, William, 1757–1827, English artist and poet, b London He was the son of James Blake, a hosier, who sent him, at the age of 10, to a drawing master and who encouraged his artistic tastes At 14 Blake was apprenticed to James Basire the engraver, with whom he stayed until 1778 After attending the antique class at the Royal Academy, which he felt stifled his imagination, he set up for himself as an engraver In 1782 he married Catherine Boucher, whom he taught to read and write and who learned to assist him in his work as artist and poet Blake's life, except for three years at Felpham spent preparing illustrations for an edition of Cowper, was passed quietly in London An artist as well as a poet, he was able to produce a series of unique books, and, except for Poetical Sketches (1783), he himself published all his books from copper plates, on which he engraved both the text of his poems and his drawings These were hand tinted either by himself or by his wife Thus he produced Songs of Innocence (1789), supplemented by Songs of Experience (1794), The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (1790), and the "Prophetic Books," The Book of Thel (1789), America (1793), The Book of Urizen (1794), The Book of Los (1795), Milton (1804), and Jerusalem (1804) Blake's power as an engraver lay in his mastery of design fused with a metaphysical imagination so intense he often had visions Among his notable designs are those for Edward Young's Night Thoughts, Robert Blair's Grave, the book of Job, and Dante's Divine Comedy and some recently discovered designs for Thomas Gray's poems He also left many remarkable water colors As a poet Blake's reputation rests on the Songs of Innocence and the Songs of Experience Among the best known of his poems are "Piping down the Valleys Wild," "Never Seek to Tell Thy Love," and "The Tiger" See The Poetry and Prose of William Blake (ed. by Geoffrey Keynes, 1927), biography by Alexander Gilchrist (1863, latest ed, 1942), Dennis Saurat, Blake and Modern Thought (1929); Mark Schorer, William Blake (1947), Bernard Blackstone, English Blake (1949)

Blakelock, Ralph Albert, 1847–1919, American landscape painter, b New York city, son of a doctor Educated for a medical career, he abandoned it for painting, in which he was largely self-taught His life was one of hardship and financial worry and he had a large family In 1899 he became insane, and although he was released from an asylum in 1916 and accorded wide recognition, he did not paint again Blakelock's landscapes are painted in great detail with strong lights and silhouetted dark masses and express a melancholy and romantic temperament Many of them contain small Indian figures He is particularly noted for his moonlight effects Among his well-known works are Brook by Moonlight (Toledo Mus of Art), Indian Encampment and Pipe Dance (Metropolitan Mus), and Sunset and Moonrise (National Mus, Washington, D C)

Blakely, 1 City (pop 2,774), co seat of Early co, SW Ga, near the Chattahoochee river, founded 1821 It is a trade and processing center in a lumber, pecan and peanut area Indian mounds are near by 2 Residential borough (pop 8,106), NE Pa, near Scranton, inc 1867

Blakeslee, Albert Francis, 1874–, American botanist, b Geneseo, New York He received his doctorate at Harvard (1904) and was a member of the faculty until 1907 After several years as professor at Connecticut Agricultural College (now the Univ of Connecticut), he joined the staff of the Carnegie Institution of Washington at Cold Spring Harbor, N Y, and later served as its director (1936–41) In 1943 he became director of the Smith College Genetics Experiment Station From his earliest research, the discovery of sexual reproduction in bread molds, his contributions to botany and genetics were of far-reaching significance His study of the inheritance and geographical distribution of the jimson weed, Datura, has provided important information concerning chromosome behavior, gene balance, and species evolution He introduced the use of the alkaloid colchicine to increase the number of chromosomes in the plant cell He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences

Blanc, Louis (lwē' blăⁿ), 1811–82, French socialist politician and journalist, b Spain In his noted Organisation du travail (1840, Eng tr, Organization of Work, 1911), he outlined his ideal of a new social order based on the principle, 'From each according to his abilities, to each according to his needs" He advocated, as a first stage in the achievement of this goal, a system of social workshops controlled by workingmen with the support of the state His attacks on the Louis Philippe government in Histoire de dix ans (5 vols, 1841–44, Eng tr, The History of Ten Years, 1830–1840, 1844–45) stirred up agitation among the workers As a member of the provisional government of 1848 he insisted on the establishment of the social workshops (ateliers sociaux), but the plan was sabotaged under the leadership of Pierre Thomas Alexandre MARIE Implicated in the subsequent insurrection of the workers, Blanc fled to England, where he remained until 1871 In exile, he produced the 12-volume Histoire de la Révolution française (1847–64) He became (1871) a member of the national assembly and was later a leader of the left in the chamber of deputies Blanc's ideas, representing a link between utopian and scientific socialism, had great influence on the thought of later men, especially Ferdinand Lassalle and the German socialists See biography by Eduard Renard (1921), D C McKay, The National Workshops (1933)

Blanc, Mont see MONT BLANC

Blanca Peak (blăng'kŭ), 14,363 ft high, S Colo, highest of the Sangre de Cristo Mts of the Rockies It lies in that portion of the range which is known as the Sierra Blanca

Blanchard, Jean Pierre (zhăⁿ' pyĕr' blăshär'), or François Blanchard (frăswä'), 1753–1809, French balloonist In 1785 he made, with Dr. John Jeffries of Boston, Mass, the first crossing by air of the English Channel He is said to have made over 50 balloon ascents, including exhibitions in Philadelphia (1793) and New York city (1796) He is the reputed inventor of the parachute (1785)

Blanchard (blăn'chŭrd), town (pop 1,139), SW central Okla, near the Canadian river SW of Oklahoma City, settled 1906, inc 1907

Blanche of Castile (kăstēl'), 1185?–1252, queen of France and regent during the minority of her son, LOUIS IX Authoritarian and capable, she checked the coalitions of the great feudal lords and in 1230 frustrated the attempt of HENRY III of England to regain his father's lands in France She was a lifelong adviser to Louis With her younger son, Alphonse, she was regent again from Louis's departure to the Holy Land (1248) until her death.

Blanchester, industrial village (pop 1,785), SW Ohio, NE of Cincinnati Pumps, clothing, and canned goods are made here blanching, horticultural practice of depriving plants, e g, celery and endive, of light by covering with earth, paper, or boards, to keep them from forming chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of plants, and to make them more palatable The term blanching is also used in cookery, especially to refer to the whitening of almonds when their skins are removed by scalding

Blanco, Antonio Guzmán: see GUZMÁN BLANCO

Blanco Fombona, Rufino (rōōfē'nō blăng'kō fōm-bō'nä), 1874–1944, Venezuelan poet, essayist, and novelist, one of the leaders of modernismo Turbulently active in Venezuelan political affairs, he was several times imprisoned He lived in exile in France and Spain for a quarter of a century and contributed much toward spreading the knowledge of Spanish American literature abroad A prolific writer, who interpreted life and poetry as action, he satirized caustically politicians, the clergy, and Yankee imperialism His poems, such as the collection Cantos de la prisión y del destierro [songs of prison and exile] (1911), are superior to his novels, El hombre de hierro [the man of iron] (1905) and El hombre de oro (1916, Eng tr, Man of Gold, 1920), but he was most distinguished in the field of the essay Well known are "La evolución política y social de Hispanoamérica" (1911) and "El modernismo y los poetas modernistas" (1929)

Bland, Richard Parks, 1835–99, American statesman, b near Hartford, Ky He taught in rural schools in Kentucky and Missouri, before he went in 1855 to the gold fields of California He was a prospector, miner, lawyer, and local official in mining towns of California, Colorado, and Nevada, and after 10 years he returned to Missouri and small-town law practice He made his home in Lebanon, Mo, after 1869 and was in 1872 elected to the House of Representatives There he served (except for 1895–97) until his death, and there he was champion of Western interests and particularly of the free coinage of silver He was the author of the original bill that, after mutilating modifications by William B Allison, became the Bland-Allison Act of 1878 Bland was not satisfied with this or the succeeding compromise, the SHERMAN SILVER PURCHASE ACT of 1890 He was a leader of the Western radicals who took over the Democratic national convention at Chicago in 1896 He was there a candidate for the presidential nomination on the first three ballots, and in the election he worked hard but vainly for the victory of William Jennings Bryan See W V Byars, An American Commoner (1900)

Bland-Allison Act, 1878, passed by the U S Congress to provide for freer coinage of silver The original bill offered by Representative Richard P Bland incorporated the demands of the Western radicals for free and unlimited coinage of silver This was passed by the House but was unacceptable to the conservative Senate Senator William B ALLISON offered an amended version which went only part of the way to meet Western demands The act as adopted required the U S Treasury to purchase between $2,000,000 and $4,000,000 worth of silver bullion each month at market prices, this was to be coined into silver dollars, which were made legal tender for all debts Attempts of the free-silver forces to replace the act with provision for unlimited coinage were defeated, as were attempts of the gold-standard forces to repeal it altogether It remained law until replaced by the SHERMAN SILVER PURCHASE ACT of 1890

Blanding, town (pop 1,111, alt 6,105 ft) SE Utah, S of the Abajo Mts and N of the San Juan river Mountain streams are used for irrigation Near by are Natural Bridges and Hovenweep national monuments

Blandrata or Biandrata, Giorgio (jôr'jō blandrä'tä, byän–), c 1515–c 1588, Italian physician, the first exponent of Unitarianism in Poland and Transylvania. His liberal views caused his exile to Geneva, where he had bitter debates with Calvin He later went to Poland and was physician to Prince John Sigismund of Transylvania, whom he converted

Blane, Sir Gilbert, 1749–1834, Scottish physician He is noted for his work for the British navy in advancing measures of sanitation and introducing the use of lime juice as a preventive of scurvy He wrote Observations on the Diseases of Seamen (1795) and Elements of Medical Logic (1819)

Blankenburg, Thuringia, Germany see BAD BLANKENBURG

blanket, sheet of heavy woolen, or partly woolen, cloth for shawls, bed coverings, or horse coverings The blanketmaking of primitive people is one of the finest remaining examples of early domestic handicrafts The blankets of Mysore in India are famous for their fine, soft texture so delicate that it is said their 18 ft of length can be rolled inside a hollow bamboo rod The loom of the American Indian, though rude and simple in construction, can produce blankets so closely woven as to be waterproof The Navaho, Zuni, Hopi, and other Southwestern tribes are noted for their distinctive, firmly woven blankets The Navahos raise their own sheep for wool, which they card by hand, spin with distaff and spindle, and weave on a suspended loom, using a stick for a shuttle The blankets are characterized by geometrical designs woven with yarns colored with vegetable dyes—gray, white, and red predominating. The ceremonial Chilcat blanket of the Tlingit Indians of the Northwest, generally woven with a warp of cedar bark and wool and a weft of goats' hair, is curved and fringed at the end.

blanketflower. see GAILLARDIA.

blank verse see PENTAMETER

Blanqui, Jérôme Adolphe (zhārōm' ädôlf' blăkē'), 1798–1854, French economist Among his works are Résumé de l'histoire du commerce et de l'industrie (1826) and Histoire de l'économie politique en Europe depuis les anciens jusqu'à nos jours (1860)

Blanqui, Louis Auguste (lwē' ōgüst'), 1805–81, French revolutionist and radical thinker While a student in Paris, he joined a branch of the Carbonari, thenceforth he was prominent in every revolutionary upheaval in France until his death His life became a series of imprisonments and exile The Central Republican Society, organized by him in 1847, was one of the most powerful clubs in the February Revolution of 1848 An exile in Brussels (1864–70), Blanqui organized the extremist opposition against Napoleon III, in whose deposition (Sept 4, 1870) he was instrumental The important part played by Blanqui and his followers when in Oct, 1870, Paris expelled its moderate government, led his opponents to compromise on a government headed by Thiers Shortly before the proclamation of the COMMUNE OF PARIS Thiers had Blanqui arrested The commune, whose temporary success was largely Blanqui's work, vainly offered Thiers all its hostages in exchange for Blanqui He was released in 1879 and elected a deputy from Bordeaux His followers, the Blanquists, were finally absorbed in the Unified Socialist party Blanqui's social theories, stressing the class struggle and the dictatorship of the proletariat, profoundly influenced Karl Marx See Blanqui's Critique Sociale (1869) See also Neil Stewart, Blanqui (1939), and R W Postgate, Revolution from 1789–1906 (1920)

Blantyre (blăntī'ur), town (pop c 6,000), S Nyasaland, founded 1895 The mission headquarters of David Livingstone were established here in 1876, and the town was named for Livingstone's birthplace Blantyre is on a railroad to Beira Tea, tobacco, and wheat are exported

Blantyre (blăntī'ur), parish (pop 17,015), Lanarkshire, Scotland, SE of Glasgow It is in a coal-mining district, with engineering works and chemical manufacture David Livingstone was born here

Blarney, village, Co Cork, Ireland, near Cork He who kisses the Blarney stone, placed in an almost inaccessible position near the top of the thick stone wall of the 15th-century castle here, is supposed to gain marvelous powers of persuasion

Blasco Ibáñez, Vicente (vēthän'tā blä'skō ēbä'-nyāth), 1867–1928, Spanish novelist A republican and Socialist, he published in his native Valencia a radical journal, El pueblo His early novels laid in Valencia include Flor de mayo (1895, Eng tr, The Mayflower, 1921), La barraca [the cabin] (1898), Cañas y barro (1902, Eng tr, Reeds and Mud, 1928), and La catedral (1903, Eng tr, The Shadow of the Cathedral, 1909) He traveled in South America, planning to write a series of novels dealing with its countries, but at the outbreak of the First World War he returned to Spain His sensational war novel Los cuatro jinetes del Apocalipsis (1916, Eng tr, The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, 1918) made him world famous It was followed by Mare Nostrum (1918, Eng tr, 1919) Because of his political activities he died in exile

Blasdell (blāz'dul), village (pop 2,322), W N Y near Lake Erie S of Buffalo, inc 1898 Metal products are made here

Blase, Saint see BLAISE, SAINT

Blashfield, Edwin Howland, 1848–1936, American mural and genre painter b New York city, studied with Léon Bonnat in Paris He is best known for his many large decorative works including The Evolution of Civilization (Library of Congress) and decorations for the Appellate Courthouse, New York city, Youngstown, Ohio, courthouse, Baltimore courthouse, and the state capitols of Wisconsin, Iowa, South Dakota, and Minnesota He is the author of Mural Painting in America (1913) and, with his wife, of Italian Cities (1900, new ed, 1913) He collaborated with his wife and with A A Hopkins in an English edition of Vasari's Lives of the Painters (1897)

Blasket Islands, group of rock islets, off SW Ireland, in Co Kerry The lighthouse can be seen for 23 mi Only Great Blasket, the largest, is inhabited (pop c 150), here the rocks rise to 937 ft It was the stronghold of Piaras Ferriter, the last Irish chieftain to surrender to Cromwell Fishing is the main occupation, living conditions are primitive, and the population is decreasing See Maurice O'Sullivan, Twenty Years a-Growing (1933), Michael Cremin, The Islandman (1935), Robin Flower, The Western Island (1944) blast furnace, structure used chiefly in smelting, i e, for the extraction of metals, such as iron and lead, from their ores The principle involved is that of the reduction of the ores by the action of carbon monoxide, i e, the removal of oxygen from the metal oxide in order to obtain the metal Blast furnaces differ in construction The one used in the production of iron consists of a chimneylike structure (usually 80–100 ft high) made of iron or steel and lined with firebrick It is narrow at the top, increasing in diameter downward, but narrowing again suddenly almost at the bottom, to form the hearth or crucible Here the fine molten products are caught. The furnace is fed from the top with definite quantities (the charge) of ore, coke, and flux Preheated compressed air is introduced at the bottom through pipes (tuyères) entering just above the crucible The air passes upward through the solid mass The coke is oxidized to carbon dioxide, which changes to carbon monoxide at the high temperatures The carbon monoxide then reduces the ores and, taking on oxygen, reverts to carbon dioxide This gas, together with unused carbon monoxide, nitrogen, and other constituents of the air originally introduced, is led off through a pipe from the top of the furnace and, being still at high temperatures, is employed to heat the stoves into which fresh air for the process is brought As the operation proceeds, the mass in the furnace becomes molten and descends into the crucible Here the iron sinks to the bottom, and the slag, being lighter, floats on top The slag is drained through a pipe in the upper portion of the crucible, while the iron is tapped from below and run into sand molds to harden The product is known as pig iron or cast iron The blast furnace used in the extraction of lead from its ores is not as tall as that used for iron Copper ore treated in a blast furnace yields a copper matte, from which only a part of the impurities are removed blasting, the shattering, breaking, or splitting of rock or other material by the discharge of an explosive placed within or in contact with the solid mass It is a necessary part of many engineering operations An ancient method of breaking rock was carried out by heating the rock by fires and then pouring water on it, the sudden contraction resulting in shattering or cleavage Modern methods of blasting may be divided into four operations —drilling the holes to receive the charge, placing the charge, tamping the hole, and igniting or detonating the charge The location, size, and number of holes drilled depend upon local conditions and the nature of the work The holes vary from 1 to 3 in in diameter and from a few inches to 20 ft or more in depth Black-powder charges are in paper cartridges about 8 in long and are placed loosely in the hole, with sufficient length of fuse to reach from the charge to a safe and convenient distance on the surface The fuse is a waterproofed cord with a core of gunpowder After the charge is placed, the hole is tamped or packed tightly with clay or other material to prevent discharge up through the hole Most risks in firing are now eliminated by the use of a detonating cap of mercury fulminate exploded electrically Black powder is used in coal mining Other explosives used for blasting are dynamite (also used in mines) and ammonium nitrate (used in quarries and open pits)

Blastus [Gr, =sprout], Herod's chamberlain, mediator for the Tyrians and Sidonians Acts 12 20

Blatchford, Robert, 1851-1943, English journalist He converted many English workers to socialism by his newspaper writings, many in his own paper, the Clarion (1891–1915?), and in his books, the most famous of which was Merrie England (1894) See his autobiography, My Eighty Years (1931)

Blavatsky, Helena Petrovna (bluvät'skē), 1831 91, Russian theosophist and occultist She was the daughter of a German nobleman named Hahn who had settled in Russia and the granddaughter of Princess Dolgorouki At the age of 17 she was married to an elderly husband, whom she soon left She traveled widely in India, Canada, and the United States In 1873 she went to New York, and in collaboration with prominent persons interested in spiritism she founded (1875) the Theosophical Society In 1877 she wrote Isis Unveiled, which became the textbook of her followers In 1879 she went to India and made her headquarters at Madras, where she was active in theosophical organization and propaganda She demonstrated many supernormal phenomena, which were accepted as miracles by her followers, of whom there were at her death 100,000 The day of her death is celebrated as "White Lotus Day" by her disciples See bibliography under THEOSOPHY See her Personal Memoirs (comp by M K Neff, 1937), a harshly critical work is G M Williams, Priestess of the Occult (1946)

Blawnox, industrial borough (pop 2,162), SW Pa on the Allegheny and ENE of Pittsburgh, settled 1867 Steel and iron alloys are made here

Blaydon, urban district (1931 pop 32,263, 1947 estimated pop 30,620), Durham, England, on the Tyne and near Newcastle It manufactures iron and steel goods, bricks, bottles, and the by-products of coal from near-by mines blazing star or button snakeroot, any plant of the genus Liatris (or Lacinaria), showy North American perennials The blossoms, rosy-purple or white are in somewhat feathery heads along a usually wandlike stalk Medicinal use has been made of a few species by both Indian and white man Some are called gay-feather, blazing star and button snakeroot are also names for other plants.

blazonry (blā'zŭnrē), science of describing or depicting armorial bearings The introduction, in the Renaissance, of artificial rules and the adoption of fanciful medieval terms and locutions, derived and corrupted from Norman French, have complicated the science, particularly in England The chief part of blazonry is the description of the ESCUTCHEON or shield, the essential part of the coat of arms. This involves the description of the color of the field on which the other devices are displayed The shield is often quartered, as when the arms of husband and wife are combined, in that case the first and fourth quarters are identical, and the second and third quarters are identical Arms are identified by their charges, most common among these are the ordinaries, marked out by lines of division, e g , a cross, a chief (a band occupying the top third of the shield), a fess (a band athwart the shield), and a bend (a band aslant the shield) Other characteristic charges are heraldic animals or flowers, e g , the lion, the fleur-de-lys, and the trefoil The arms of younger sons should, in theory, show "differences", thus a second son should display a crescent in his field The bend sinister (a band running from the upper right to the lower left of the shield) is an ordinary, not a difference, and it does not necessarily (as is popularly believed) indicate illegitimacy, which is usually blazoned by a wavy border around the shield Other elements in blazonry are the description of the CREST above the shield and of the motto The tinctures or colors used in blazonry are gold (or), white or silver (argent), red (gules), blue (azure), green (vert), purple, and black (sable) If shown in black and white, colors are indicated by conventional shadings and dots A good coat of arms should not resemble a rainbow Few persons using coats of arms are entitled to them, except in England, where blazonry remains the special study of the HERALDS' COLLEGE See also HERALDRY

bleaching, process of whitening by chemicals or by exposure to sun and air, commonly applied to textiles, paper pulp, wheat flour, petroleum products, oils and fats, straw, hair, feathers, and wood Chemical methods include oxidation, as by hypochlorites, ozone, and the per-compounds, reduction, as with sulphur dioxide, and Absorption, as by bone charcoal used to decolorize sugar solutions Textiles have always been grass bleached In Europe from the Crusades to the 18th cent the Dutch virtually monopolized the industry They perfected a technique of alternately steeping goods in alkaline solutions and grassing (crofting) them, then removing excess alkalinity in sour milk, in later times they substituted dilute sulphuric acid for the milk In 1785 the French chemist Berthollet suggested the commercial application of chlorine for bleaching, and in 1799 Charles Macintosh invented bleaching powder, or chloride of lime, the first of the modern chemical bleaches Bleaching processes vary for different fibers Cotton, naturally a grayish yellow, contains waxy and oily impurities which interfere with the action of dyes It must be scoured and boiled in huge kettles (kiers) before bleaching Linen contains more coloring and impurities than cotton Grass bleaching has been combined with or superseded by chemical methods, which are deleterious unless rigidly controlled Four degrees, ranging from quarter to full bleach, are recognized in the industry Full bleach is reputed to weaken the fiber as much as 20 percent Since chlorine bleaches react with the protein of animal fibers, silk and wool are commonly bleached with hydrogen peroxide Although sulphurous acid or sulphur fumes are also used for wool, they do not permanently whiten it For effective bleaching, wool must first be scoured and silk must be degummed Common bleaching agents used domestically are Javelle water and other chlorine mixtures

Bled, resort, Slovenia, N Yugoslavia, beautifully situated in the Julian Alps and on the small Lake of Bled In the vicinity are a medieval castle, a former royal villa, and a church on an island bleeding, term used to denote both hemorrhage and purposeful removal of blood from the body (bloodletting, venesection, or phlebotomy) Bloodletting was formerly employed as a method of treatment for many diseases and is still occasionally practiced See also HEMOPHILIA and HEMORRHAGE bleeding heart, perennial garden flower (Dicentra spectabilis), related to the Dutchman's-breeches but native to Japan In the spring it has rosy (sometimes white), drooping, heart-shaped flowers

Bleibtreu, Karl (blīp'troi), 1859–1928, German playwright and critic He was an associate of M G Conrad in the struggle for realism in German literature and was cofounder with Conrad of the Gesellschaft, a monthly journal He produced an important critical volume, Der Revolution der Literatur (1886), novels, two plays about Napoleon (1888), two about Byron, Lord Byrons letzte Liebe [Lord Byron's last love] (1886) and Seine Tochter [his daughter] (1886), Dies Irae (1884), a fine picture of the battle of Sedan, stories, and much controversial criticism

Blekinge, Swed. Blekinge län (blā'kĭng-ŭ lĕn'), county (1,173 sq. mi.; pop 146,908), SE Sweden, on the Baltic coast It is coextensive with the historical province of Blekinge, conquered from Denmark by Charles X of Sweden in 1658 The county seat is KARLSKRONA Blekinge, with its cultivated valleys, is "the garden of Sweden."

blende. see SPHALERITE

Blenheim (blĕn'ŭm), Ger Blindheim (blĭnt'hĭm), village, Swabia, W Bavaria, on the Danube and E of Ulm Between here and near-by Hochstädt the duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene of Savoy defeated (Aug 13, 1704) the French and Bavarians under Marshal Tallard in one of the most important battles of the War of the Spanish Succession

Blenheim, town (pop 1,952), S Ont , SE of Chatham, first settled 1845 It is a farm center

Blenheim Park, estate, Oxfordshire, England, near Woodstock, seat of the duke of Marlborough In Queen Anne's reign a government grant was made to provide the estate and its castle (designed by Sir John Vanbrugh) for the victor of the battle of Blenheim

Blennerhasset, Harman, 1765–1831, Anglo-Irish pioneer in America, an associate of Aaron Burr, grad Trinity College, Dublin, 1790 Wealthy and gifted, he fell in love with and married his beautiful niece, Margaret Agnew The couple was ostracized, and in 1796 Blennerhasset sold his estates and emigrated to the United States, where he bought (1798) part of what came to be called Blennerhasset Island There he lived as a gentleman scholar interested in experiments in physics until Aaron Burr visited him in 1805 and won his interest in the Western schemes Blennerhasset advanced money to Burr When President Jefferson pronounced Burr a traitor, the local militia gathered threateningly Blennerhasset fled (Dec , 1806) down the river and was taken into custody He was released after the government failed to convict Aaron Burr, but his fortunes were ruined After a disastrous failure in trying to run a Mississippi plantation, he attempted a career as a lawyer in Montreal, returned to England in 1822, and died on Guernsey

Blennerhasset Island, in the Ohio river, near Petersburg, W Va , and Belpre, Ohio On it Harman Blennerhasset built at great expense a mansion and a laboratory for his study Connection with the schemes of Aaron Burr, however, brought the local militia The mansion was wrecked and later destroyed by fire See N F Schneider, Blennerhasset Island and the Burr Conspiracy (1938)

Blériot, Louis (lwĕ' blārō'), 1872–1936, French aviator and inventor He devoted the fortune acquired by his invention of an automobile searchlight to the invention and construction of monoplanes After making several short-distance records, he was the first to cross (July 25, 1909) the English Channel in a heavier-than-air machine He was noted also as an airplane manufacturer

Blessington, Marguerite, countess of, 1789–1849, Irish beauty and author The daughter of Edmund Power, she was married at 14 to Captain Farmer and, after the death of this cruel gentleman, married the earl of Blessington (1818) In 1822 she began a liaison with Count d'ORSAY (husband of her stepdaughter), and with him, after the earl's death, she set up a brilliant salon at Gore House, Kensington D'Israeli, Bulwer-Lytton, and Walter Savage Landor were among her friends To meet expenses, she wrote many novels and left a vivid record in her Conversations of Lord Byron (1834) See Michael Sadleir, The Strange Life of Lady Blessington (rev ed , 1947)

Blest Gana, Alberto (älbĕr'tō blĕst' gä'na), 1830–1920, Chilean novelist, generally considered the greatest of the 19th-century Spanish American realists Though he spent most of his life abroad, his novels, social and historical, all depict Chilean scenes Minute realistic description and strong character delineation mark his fictional attack on the modes and manners of the aristocracy and the upper middle class His Aritmética en el amor (1860) was followed by his masterpiece, Martín Rivas (1862, Eng tr , 1918) For 34 years when he was concerned with ambassadorial duties, he wrote little, but in 1897 he returned to the novel with a story of the Chilean revolt against Spain, Durante la reconquista

Blicher, Steen Steensen (stän' stän'sun blē'kûr), 1782–1848, Danish poet and novelist The first Danish realist, he was slow to gain recognition but has become one of the greatest names in Danish literature. The Diary of a Parish Clerk (1824), E Bindstouw (1842), and his collected short stories are all about the Jutland countryside, some in native dialect Some of his stories have been translated by H. A Larsen as Twelve Stories (1945)

Blida (blē'dä), town (pop 29,735), N Algeria, SW of Algiers It is an orange-producing center of the Tell region.

Bligh, William (blī), 1754–1817, British admiral Early in his career he was sailing master on Capt James Cook's third voyage. Bligh is chiefly remembered for the mutiny (1789) on his ship, the BOUNTY, but he later had a notable career He was a commander in the French wars, then was governor of New South Wales (1805–1808), where he was briefly imprisoned (1808) by army mutineers in the so-called Rum Rebellion Bligh was made a rear admiral in 1811 and a vice admiral in 1814 A brave and able officer, he was handicapped in dealing with men by his difficult temper See biography by George Mackaness (1931), Mackaness, Captain William Bligh's Discoveries and Observations in Van Diemen's Land (1943); H V Evatt, The Rum Rebellion (1938) blight, name for various diseases of plants caused by bacteria, viruses, and other organisms and resulting in withering and death of the plants

blimp see AIRSHIP.

Blind, Karl (blĭnt), 1826–1907, German revolutionist He wrote on politics, history, literature, and especially Germanic folklore and ethnology Arrested for his part in the uprisings of 1848–49, he was later freed and from 1852 lived in England He was stepfather of Mathilde Blind

Blind, Mathilde (blĭnd), 1841–96, English poet and biographer Born in Mannheim, she came to London about 1849 Her poetry includes Poems by Claude Lake (1867), The Prophecy of St Oran (1881), The Heather on Fire (1886), and The Ascent of Man (1889) She wrote biographies of George Eliot (1883) and Mme Roland (1886) and made a translation (Old Faith and New, 1873) of D F Strauss's work and of the journal of Marie Bashkirtsev (1890)

Blind Harry or Henry the Minstrel, fl late 15th cent , supposed Scottish poet, traditionally a blind and humble minstrel He is said to have been the author of a largely apocryphal life in verse of Sir William WALLACE (ed by James Moir, 1889) The poem, 11,858 lines in heroic couplets, was immensely popular in Scotland and had great influence on Scottish national spirit See Moir edition (1889), W H Schofield, Mythical Bards and the Life of William Wallace (1920)

blindness, lack or loss of sight Blindness may be caused by trauma, pathological conditions (e g , lesions of the brain or optic nerve), Bright's disease, hemorrhage into the retina (as in diabetes), CATARACT, GLAUCOMA, and diseases of the retina COLOR BLINDNESS is an inability to distinguish colors, most commonly red and green Snow blindness is a temporary condition resulting from a burning of the cornea caused by the reflection of sunlight on snow Night blindness results from a deficiency of vitamin A See also BRAILLE SYSTEM

Blind River, town (pop 2,619), S Ont , on North Channel of Lake Huron and E of Sault Ste Marie It has a good harbor and several lumber mills

Blind Tom, d 1908, American Negro pianist, whose name was Thomas Greene Bethune Untrained and mentally unbalanced as well as blind, he was able to play correctly the most difficult compositions after hearing them once For more than 40 years he was known in vaudeville circuits See Vernon Loggins, The Negro Author (1931)

Bliss, Daniel, 1823–1916, American missionary, founder of Syrian Protestant College (now the American Univ) at Beyrouth, b Franklin co , Vt , grad Amherst, 1852, and Andover Theological Seminary, 1855 He went to Syria, returning in 1862 to secure funds and a charter for the college, which was opened in 1866, he was its president until 1902 See his Reminiscences (ed by his son, 1920) His son, Howard Sweetser Bliss, 1860–1920, b Syria, grad Amherst, 1882, and Union Theological Seminary, 1887, succeeded him as president and enlarged and liberalized the college

Bliss, Eleanor Albert, 1899–, American bacteriologist, b Jamestown, R I , grad Bryn Mawr (B A , 1921) and Johns Hopkins Univ (Sc D , 1925) In 1925 she became bacteriologist at Johns Hopkins and in 1940 she was appointed associate in preventive medicine there She discovered a minute hemolytic streptococcus of the serological group known as group F and is an authority on the use and mode of action of the sulfonamide compounds (sulfa drugs) With Perrin H Long she is co-author of Clinical and Experimental Use of Sulfanilamide, Sulfapyridine, and Allied Compounds (1939)

Bliss, Howard Sweetser · see BLISS, DANIEL

Bliss, Philip Paul, 1838–76, American evangelist and writer of gospel songs A fine baritone voice and a handsome presence aided him in his work, and his songs became tremendously popular After the publication of his Gospel Songs (1874) he became associated with Dwight L Moody and joined Ira D Sankey in producing a series of songbooks called Gospel Hymns, the first of which appeared in 1875 Among his songs are Hold the Fort, Let the Lower Lights Be Burning, and Jesus Loves Me

Bliss, Porter Cornelius, 1833–85, American explorer and adventurer His father was a missionary to the Seneca Indians on their reservation at Cattaraugus, N.Y , and Bliss was born there After graduating from Hamilton College he became (1861) private secretary to James W Webb, U S minister to Brazil, and in 1862 he went to Argentina There he explored the Gran Chaco for the Argentine government, which published his authoritative reports In 1866 he went to Paraguay as private secretary to Charles A. WASHBURN, U S. minister there. He contracted with Francisco Solano López to write a history of Paraguay, but after López became engaged in the War of the Triple Alliance, Bliss was imprisoned and tortured for three months on suspicion of being a spy Released at the demand of the United States, he was exonerated of the charge by the House Committee on Foreign Affairs He was secretary of the American legation in Mexico (1870–74) and wrote much on the history and archaeology of that country

Bliss, Tasker Howard, 1853–1930, American army officer and statesman, b. Lewisburg, Pa., grad West Point, 1875 He was (1898) chief of staff to Gen James H Wilson in the Puerto Rico campaign of the Spanish-American War, served (1898–1902) as collector of customs in Cuba, and in 1902 negotiated the treaty of reciprocity between Cuba and the United States Several important administration appointments followed in the United States and in the Philippines, and he was appointed assistant chief (1915) and then (1917) chief of staff of the U S army He helped work out the mobilization plans followed after the U S entry in the First World War President Woodrow Wilson promoted (1917) him general and appointed him to the Allied Supreme War Council As a delegate at the Paris Peace Conference, Bliss urged the admission of Germany and the USSR in the League of Nations and advocated post-war disarmament. See biography by Frederick Palmer (1934)

Blissfield, village (pop 2,144), S Mich., on the Raisin and SW of Detroit, in a farm area, settled 1824, inc 1875 Sugar and canned goods are made.

blister rust or white-pine blister rust, highly destructive disease of the white pine tree caused by a parasitic fungus which, introduced from Europe, spread over the United States and Canada to the far western regions Currant and gooseberry bushes are the alternate hosts, and in order to interrupt the life cycle of the fungus the growing of these bushes near white pine is discouraged After the hyphae (branching filaments) have penetrated the tissues of the pine, whitish blisters which later discharge yellow spores are formed on the stem

Bluxen, Karen see DINESEN, ISAK

blizzard, term which probably originated in the Middle Western United States and is popularly applied in many parts of the world to any severe winter storm with a high wind, driving snow, and very low temperatures In the United States, blizzards are most frequent and intense in the N Great Plains states but occur as far south as Texas and as far east as New York bloc, parliamentary. The term bloc, popularized by Clemenceau c 1899, described an alliance of deputies in the chamber and of their several parties united against the wave of reactionary and anti-republican sentiment revealed by the DREYFUS AFFAIR and its ensuing controversies The bloc has been a common device in countries whose legislatures are made up of the representatives of many parties It tends to promote the effect of bipartisan government by creating two loose groups of "left" and "right" In nominally bipartisan legislatures, such as those of the United States, blocs are smaller groups, usually promoting a specific economic or social panacea or interest, such as the farm bloc, the silver bloc, the "wet" and "dry" blocs during prohibition, and various veterans' groups See Arthur Capper, The Agricultural Bloc (1922), D W Brogan, Development of Modern France, 1870–1939 (1940)

Bloch, Ernest (blŏk), 1880–, Swiss-American composer Among his teachers were Jaques-Dalcroze and Ysaye He taught at the Geneva Conservatory, 1911–15, and at the Mannes School, New York, 1917–19, he was director of the Cleveland Institute of Music, 1920–25, and of the San Francisco Conservatory, 1925–30. He later taught at the Univ of California Most of his work is filled with intense Hebraic feeling, as in the Hebrew rhapsody Schelomo and the Israel Symphony (both 1916) Other outstanding works are an opera, Macbeth (1909), a concerto grosso, for string orchestra and piano (1925), his America Symphony (1927), a setting of the Jewish service (New York, 1934), and A Voice in the Wilderness, for cello and orchestra (1937) Many prominent American composers are among his pupils. See David Ewen, The Book of Modern Composers (1942)

Block, Adriaen, fl 1610–24, Dutch navigator Eager to establish an Indian fur trade, Amsterdam merchants sent Block and another Dutch navigator (1613) to explore the region discovered by Henry HUDSON After wintering near Albany, Block sailed into Long Island Sound (1614), which, he may have been the first European to enter, and came through the passage which he named Hellegat (Hell Gate) He discovered the Connecticut river, sailed past and named Block Island, and explored Narragansett Bay. Block made the Figurative Map of 1614, showing details of the southern coast of New England and showing Long Island and Manhattan as separate blockade, use of naval vessels to cut off access to a port or other place on a coast The term is rarely applied to a land siege. Blockades are used, generally in time of war, to prevent neutral shipping from reaching enemy ports In the Napoleonic Wars there were grave abuses of the right of blockade, with both France and England declaring blockades of one another's coasts although they were unable to enforce them fully Neutral ships were thus placed in constant danger of seizure The elimination of such practices was the purpose of the reforms of blockade law established (1856) by the Declaration of Paris (see PARIS, DECLARATION OF). Blockades henceforth were to be announced to all affected parties and would be legal only if they were effective and were enforced against all neutrals Ships might be seized only when actually attempting to run the blockade These laws worked effectively in the Union blockade of Confederate ports in the Civil War They proved unsuitable in both world wars and were generally disregarded The United States has always refused to recognize blockades unless they were effective.

block and tackle see PULLEY.

block book. About the middle of the 15th cent, before and after the invention of printing from movable types, some books were printed in Europe by another process, from engraved wood blocks, with one block for each page Such printing of books from engraved wood blocks was done earlier in China, and the practice has a richer history in the Orient than in the Occident, partly because the great number of characters used in Chinese writing adds to the difficulties of printing from movable types Chinese and Japanese illustrated block books are often beautifully printed in colors European block books, on the contrary, were typically crude and inexpensive The best known block book is the Biblia pauperum [poor man's bible] blockhouse, small fortification, usually temporary, serving as a post for a small garrison. Blockhouses seem to have come into use in the 15th cent to prevent access to a strategically important objective such as a bridge, a ford, a pass, or a landing beach Later the term was broadened to include all detached and isolated small forts, especially those in country just captured from an enemy The typical structure came to be one of two stories with an overhanging second story, it had loopholes on all sides for gunfire In the North American colonies, blockhouses were built of timber or stone in New England and of logs banked with earth in the South and the West, they were used in frontier communities as protection against the Indians Many early communities grew around the blockhouses The frontier blockhouses were frequently surrounded by palisades and thus were technically stockaded forts In the Civil War a chain of hastily constructed blockhouses protected communications in W T Sherman's Atlanta campaign In the South African War the British used prefabricated blockhouses New materials, especially corrugated iron and concrete, came to be used, but the blockhouse sank in importance in the First World War The principal use in present-day military fortification is for defense by isolated units against rifle and machine-gun fire

Block Island, 7 mi long and 3½ mi wide, off S Rhode Island, in Newport co., at the east entrance to Long Island Sound between Point Judith, R I., and Montauk Point, N Y The surface is glaciated, with low hills and scores of ponds, it has been almost entirely deforested but has peat deposits The island is a popular summer resort, favored for yachting and fishing, and has some farming It was visited by Adriaen Block in 1614 and settled in 1661 There are two lighthouses New Shoreham town (pop 848), incorporated in 1672, is coextensive with the island.

block printing see CALICO PRINTING.

Blocksberg see BROCKEN

block-signal system. see SIGNALING

Blodgett, Katharine Burr, 1898–, American chemist, b Schenectady, N Y., B A Bryn Mawr, 1917, Ph D Cambridge Univ., 1926 In 1918 she became research physicist for the General Electric Company, where she worked with Irving Langmuir on tungsten filaments and later on monomolecular layers A specialist in surface chemistry, she coated glass with layers of barium stearate to reduce reflection and increase transmission of light, thus producing nonreflecting glass

Bloemfontein (blo͞om'fŏntān'), city (pop. 83,296), capital of the Orange Free State and judicial capital of the Union of South Africa; founded 1846. It was the capital of the former Orange Free State Republic It is a junction of rail, road, and air travel The city has a large museum specializing in archaeology and two colleges There are railroad workshops, food-processing plants, and small factories

Blois (blwä), city (pop. 21,666), capital of Loir-et-Cher dept., central France, beautifully situated on the Loire It is one of the great historical towns of France The counts of Blois emerged in the 10th cent as the most powerful feudal lords of France. Their line began with Thibaut the Cheat, who by various means acquired TOURAINE and CHARTRES, his successors added (11th-12th cent.) CHAMPAGNE, BRIE, and other lands, though in the west they were checked by the counts of ANJOU. In 1152 the count became count of Champagne, and shortly afterward Blois and Chartres passed to a cadet branch (Châtillon) through female succession. The last count of Blois, childless and heavily in debt, sold his fief to Louis, duc d'ORLÉANS, who took possession in 1397 With the accession (1498) of Louis's grandson, Louis XII, as king of France, the countship passed to the crown as part of ORLÉANAIS The famous Renaissance château at Blois was built largely by Louis XII, Francis I, and Gaston d'Orléans. Most of the 17th-century additions were designed by François MANSART. In the château Louis XII was born and several States-General of France were held, notably in 1576–77 and in 1588, Henri, duc de GUISE, was assassinated in the château during the meeting of the States-General of 1588 It was the residence of several kings and queens of France, including Mary Queen of Scots and Catherine de' Medici Blois was the birthplace of Denis Papin, inventor of a steam engine, and of the historian Augustin Thierry The Treaties of Blois, signed here in 1504–5 by Louis XII, were a temporary settlement of the ITALIAN WARS

Blok, Aleksandr Aleksandrovich (ŭlyĭksän'dur ŭlyĭksän'drŭvĭch blôk'), 1880–1921, Russian poet, greatest of the Russian symbolists A disciple of Vladimir Soloviev, he voiced in the cycle Beautiful Lady (1904), written before the 1905 revolution, the mystical yearning of the Russian people He embraced the Revolution of 1918 and wrote its epic in The Twelve (1918, Eng tr, 1920), a powerful poem in which Christ appears in the streets of Petrograd to lead 12 Red guardsmen toward freedom The Scythians (1920, Eng tr in Russian Poetry, 1927) is directed against the Western allies who were fighting the Bolsheviks Other works which have been translated are the Pierrot comedy The King in the Square (1906–7, Eng tr., 1934), The Rose and the Cross (1913, Eng tr in Slavonic Review, Vol XII, 1933–34), a poetic drama of medieval France, The Song of Fate (1909, Eng tr in Poet Lore, Vol XLIV, 1938), The Spirit of Music (Eng tr., 1946), and other short poems See Alexander Kaun, Soviet Poets and Poetry (1943)

Blomfield, Sir Reginald, 1856–1942, English architect His designs chiefly adhered to the traditions of the Renaissance and Georgian periods His London work includes the Air Force War Memorial, the Imperial War Cross, the United University Club, Carlton Club, and the Goldsmiths' College Blomfield was one of the architects associated in the new treatment of Regent St and Piccadilly Circus He built a number of war monuments including the English Memorial Church and the Menin Gate Memorial, both at Ypres, Belgium and was chief architect of the Imperial War Graves Commission Also included in the large mass of his work are new buildings for Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford, and a number of country houses Blomfield's writings include The Formal Garden in England (with F I Thomas, 1892), History o Renaissance Architecture in England (1897), and History of French Architecture (2 vols, 1911–21), all of which have become standard reference works

Blomidon, Cape (blŏm'ĭdun), promontory, 670 ft high, on the coast of Nova Scotia, extending into Minas Basin in the Bay of Fundy

Blondel, François (frăswä' blôdĕl'), 1617-86, French architect His noted work is the triumphal arch called the Porte Saint-Denis (1672), in Paris In 1672 he became director of the Academy of Architecture Blondel's writings, which exerted great influence, include Cours d'architecture (1675–83) and Nouvelle Manière de fortifier (1684) His nephew, Jacques François Blondel (zhak), 1705-74 opened in 1743 the first French private school of architecture, as a result, he became architect to the king He devised plans of civic beautification for the cities of Metz and Strasbourg and did monumental work in both, including the town hall and the Place d'Armes at Strasbourg and the west portal of the cathedral at Metz. His L'Architecture française (1752) is valuable for its engraved views of buildings which no longer exist

Blondel de Nesle (blŭn'dĭl du nĕl', Fr. blôdĕl' du nĕl'), fl. late 12th cent., French troubadour, a favorite of Richard I He accompanied Richard on crusade in 1190. Legend relates that after Richard was captured and imprisoned by Leopold II, margrave of Austria, in 1193, Blondel, wandering through Germany, sang a song known only to him and his lost master, until Richard answered from his prison, and Blondel was able to rescue him

Blood, Benjamin Paul, 1832–1919, American poet and philosopher He spent most of his life in or near his birthplace at Amsterdam, N Y. His philosophy found its final expression in Pluriverse (1920), published shortly after his death.

blood, the circulating fluid of the body, consisting of a colorless fluid, the plasma, which contains fibrinogen (see CLOTTING OF BLOOD). Contained in the blood are a variety of cells, red blood corpuscles, white blood corpuscles, and blood platelets Also circulating in the blood are hormones, products of the endocrine glands. The blood brings nutriment and oxygen to the body tissues and carries away carbon dioxide and other waste material The red cells contain hemoglobin, an iron compound, which gives the blood its red color. The interchange of oxygen and carbon dioxide in the lungs and body tissues is a function of the red cells. The white cells are active in combating infection, and their number increases during infectious diseases. The platelets play an important role in the clotting of the blood. Four blood groups were first determined by LANDSTEINER (1909). Recognition of blood groups was of vital importance, since in giving a BLOOD TRANSFUSION the blood group of the donor must be compatible with that of the recipient. Like other tissues of the body, the blood is subject to disease, its chemistry being affected by such diseases as DIABETES and JAUNDICE.

blood clotting see CLOTTING OF BLOOD

blood feud see VENDETTA

bloodhound, hound with long, soft, low-set ears and thin, loose skin falling in folds around the head and neck. The coat may be black and tan, red and tan, or tawny. Adult dogs are usually from 25 to 27 in. high at the shoulder, and the average weight is about 90 lb. Bloodhounds are docile and affectionate. Their remarkably acute sense of smell makes them valuable for following a trail in police work and also for hunting. The bloodhound is believed to represent an ancient breed known in the Mediterranean region before the Christian era. It was known in England in the 15th or 16th cent.

Blood Indians: see BLACKFOOT INDIANS

blood letting: see BLEEDING.

blood poisoning: see SEPTICEMIA.

blood pressure, the pressure exerted by the blood upon the arterial walls. It is dependent upon the heart action, elasticity of the arteries, capillary resistance, and the volume and viscous quality of the blood. During the contraction of the heart (systole), the maximum pressure is achieved, and during relaxation of the heart (diastole), the minimum is reached. The blood pressure is measured in millimeters of mercury, by means of an instrument known as a sphygmomanometer. Systolic blood pressure in the healthy individual, depending on age, ranges normally between 100 and 140 mm. A temporary elevation of blood pressure may be caused by physical activity, nervous strain, or emotional outbursts, e.g., rage and fear. Persistent hypertension may be due to an adrenal gland tumor, in such a condition, the blood pressure is lowered only by excision of the tumor. High blood pressure is commonly found in obese individuals and is also associated with arteriosclerosis and nephritis. General symptoms of hypertension are headache, dizziness (vertigo), blurred vision, and nosebleed. The treatment usually advised is rest, low salt intake, reduction of weight in obese individuals, freedom from emotional strain and sedation. Glandular therapy has resulted in the reduction of high blood pressure, e.g., in the treatment of hypertension associated with the menopause. Surgery has, in some cases, been used to lower the blood pressure in relatively young individuals. Although the etiology of hypertension has been determined only in the case of adrenal tumor, it has been established experimentally that constriction of the blood vessels of the kidneys results in high blood pressure.

bloodroot, low, early-spring-blooming North American wild flower (Sanguinaria canadensis) found in woods. It has a comparatively large white blossom and a gray-green lobed leaf, which enfolds the stem until blossoming time. The perennial rootstock was until recently an official drug in the U.S. Pharmacopoeia; it contains an acrid orange-red poisonous juice used by Indians as a dye and a skin stain.

bloodstone or heliotrope, green CHALCEDONY spotted with red JASPER, used as a gem stone. It is obtained from India and Scotland.

blood transfusion, transfer of blood from the venous system of one person into that of another or from one animal to another of the same species. Transfusions are given, for example, when a large amount of blood has been lost as a result of injury and in certain diseases. In order for the transfusion of human blood to be successful, the blood of the donor and that of the recipient must be compatible, i.e., one must not cause clumping or agglutination of the red blood cells of the other. Such clumping (resulting in fatalities) can be caused by the agglutinating substances present either in the red blood cells or in the blood serum, and the division of the blood of humans into four major groups is based on the kinds of such substances present. These groups are designated in the Landsteiner (for Karl Landsteiner) or International classification as O, A, B, and AB and in the Jansky system as I, II, III, and IV, the Moss system differs in that group IV corresponds to group I or O, and group I corresponds to IV or AB. People having type O blood are sometimes called universal donors because the red cells of this blood are not agglutinated by the serum of the blood of any other group. Those having blood of the AB group are sometimes called universal recipients because the serum of this blood does not cause agglutination of cells of any of the other groups. However, when transfusions are given, it is considered important that the blood of donor and recipient be of the same group; the so-called universal groups are generally used with blood of a different group only when circumstances prevent closer matching. In addition to testing the blood of donor and recipient to determine the blood group, blood is usually tested also for the RH FACTOR. When plasma (liquid part of the blood minus red corpuscles) only is used, it is not necessary to determine the blood group.

Bloody Assizes: see JEFFREYS, GEORGE, 1ST BARON JEFFREYS OF WEM

Bloomer, Amelia Jenks, 1818–94, American reformer, b. Homer, N.Y. She was editor (1848–54) of the Lily, first published in Seneca Falls, N.Y., and devoted to woman's rights and to temperance. In 1851 she recommended and adopted the reformed dress of short skirt and full trousers introduced by Elizabeth Smith Miller. Because she advertised it in the Lily and wore it in her lecture work, it became universally known as the Bloomer costume. See biography by her husband, D.C. Bloomer (1935).

Bloomer, city (pop. 2,204), W. Wis., N of Eau Claire, settled before 1850, inc. 1920.

Bloomfield, Leonard, 1887–1949, American linguist, b. Chicago, grad. Harvard, 1906, Ph.D. Univ. of Chicago, 1909. He was professor at Ohio State Univ. (1921–27), at the Univ. of Chicago (1927–40), and at Yale (from 1940). Bloomfield's specialty for years was Germanic languages especially in their comparative aspects. He became interested, however, in languages from a scientific, descriptive viewpoint. His masterpiece, Language (1933), is a standard text. It had a profound influence on linguistics, for it was a clear statement of principles that became axiomatic, notably that language study must always be centered in the spoken language, as against documents, that the definitions used in grammar should be based on the forms of the language, not on the meanings of the forms, and that a given language at a given time is a complete system of sounds and forms which exist independently of the past—so that knowing the history of a form does not explain its actual meaning. Others of his works are Tagalog Texts with Grammatical Analysis (1917), Menomini Texts (1928), and Linguistic Aspects of Science (1939).

Bloomfield, Maurice, 1855–1928, American philologist, b. Bielitz, Austria (now Bielsko, Poland). He studied at the Univ. of Chicago, Furman Univ. (M.A., 1877), and Johns Hopkins (Ph.D., 1879). He taught Sanskrit and philology at Johns Hopkins, compiled A Vedic Concordance (1906), and wrote the standard Religion of the Veda (1908), as well as many monographs valuable to Orientalists.

Bloomfield, Robert, 1766–1823, English farm laborer and poet, remembered chiefly for one extremely popular poem, "The Farmer's Boy" (1800). See his works (with biographical sketch, 1824).

Bloomfield. 1 Town (pop. 4,309), N. Conn., near Hartford, settled c. 1660, inc. 1835. 2 Town (pop. 2,270), co. seat of Greene co., SW. Ind., SW of Bloomington. Furniture is manufactured here. 3 City (pop. 2,732), co. seat of Davis co., SE. Iowa, S of Ottumwa near the Mo. line, inc. 1863. It is the center of a fine grazing area, much wool is produced. The James B. Weaver homestead is preserved. Near by is Lake Wapello State Park. 4 City (pop. 1,208), co. seat of Stoddard co., SE. Mo., SW of Cape Girardeau, in a farm and timber area, settled 1824 on the site of an Indian village. 5 City (pop. 1,467), NE. Nebr., near the Missouri, W of Sioux City, Iowa, settled 1890. 6 Town (pop. 41,623), NE. N.J., adjoining NW. Newark, inc. 1900. Electrical equipment, chemicals, and industrial control devices are made here. Its Presbyterian church dates from 1796. Randolph Bourne was born here.

Bloomfield Hills, residential city (pop. 1,281), SE. Mich., near Pontiac, settled c. 1819, inc. as a village 1926, as a city 1932. It is the seat of CRANBROOK FOUNDATION.

Bloomgarden or Blumengarten, Solomon, pseud. Yehoash (yĕhō'ash), 1870–1927, American writer in Yiddish, b. Lithuania. He came to America in 1891 and, except for 10 years in Colorado (1900–1910), lived chiefly in New York city. Volumes of his poetry, which holds a high place in Jewish-American literature, include Through Mist and Sunshine (1913) and In the Weaving (2 vols., 1919–21). The Feet of the Messenger (1921) was translated into English (1923). His greatest work was the translation of the entire Old Testament from Hebrew into Yiddish. With Charles D. Spivak he compiled a Hebrew-Yiddish dictionary (1911).

Bloomingdale, borough (pop. 2,606), N.N.J., NW of Paterson, inc. 1918.

Blooming Prairie, village (pop. 1,205), SE. Minn., NW of Austin, in a farm region.

Bloomington. 1 City (pop. 32,868), co. seat of McLean co., central Ill., SE of Peoria, settled 1822, inc. 1839. It is an important rail, commercial, and industrial center in a rich farm area and near coal fields. The establishment of Illinois Wesleyan Univ. (1851), the arrival of the railroad (1854), and the founding of Illinois State Normal Univ. (1857, at adjacent Normal) stimulated the city's growth. In 1856 the first Republican state convention met here, and Abraham Lincoln made his famous "lost speech" (no copy of which is known to exist). An annual Passion play is held. 2 City (pop. 20,870), co. seat of Monroe co., S. central Ind., SW of Indianapolis, settled 1818. It is industrially important because of near-by large limestone quarries and the extensive manufacture of furniture. The city is the seat of INDIANA UNIVERSITY.

Bloomsburg, industrial town (pop. 9,799), co. seat of Columbia co., E. Pa., on the Susquehanna river and SW of Wilkes-Barre, settled 1772, laid out 1802, inc. 1870. On the site of a former Indian village, it is the only incorporated town in the state. Its industries include silk and carpet weaving. It is the seat of a state teachers college. Forts Jenkins and McClure are near by.

Bloomsbury, residential district in Holborn and St. Pancras metropolitan boroughs, W. London, England. In Bloomsbury are the British Museum and the Univ. of London. Bloomsbury contains numerous squares and gardens (including Bedford Square, Russell Square, and Bloomsbury Square, laid out on the Bedford estate in the 18th cent.). Many artists, writers, and students live in the district.

Blossburg, borough (pop. 1,955), N. Pa., N of Williamsport, settled c. 1802. Bituminous coal is mined here.

Blount, James Henderson (blŭnt), 1837–1903, American public official, b. Jones co., Ga. U.S. Representative from Georgia (1873–93), he was chosen by President Cleveland as a special commissioner to the Hawaiian Islands in 1893. There the creation of an American-fostered provisional government, under Sanford B. DOLE, in opposition to Queen LILIUOKALANI had caused a crisis. After investigation Blount declared against the provisional government, and in consequence Cleveland withdrew the treaty of annexation concluded with the provisional government, recalled the American minister, and appointed Blount U.S. minister instead.

Blount, William, 1749–1800, American statesman, b. near Windsor, N.C. He served in the American Revolution and later became a legislator in North Carolina, a member of the Continental Congress (1782–83, 1786–87), and a delegate to the Federal Constitutional Convention (1787). Washington appointed (1790) him governor of the Territory South of the River Ohio (present Tennessee), and there he also acted (1790–96) as superintendent of Indian affairs. Blount handled this dual position well until financial difficulties forced him into a plan whereby frontiersmen and Indians were to help the British conquer West Florida. Before the plan was discovered he presided over the Tennessee constitutional convention (1796) and became one of the state's first U.S. Senators. When the Florida plot was discovered he was expelled (1797) from the Senate. While impeachment proceedings (later dropped) were being instituted, Blount was elected (1797) to the Tennessee senate.

Blountstown, city (pop. 1,931), co. seat of Calhoun co., NW. Fla., on the Apalachicola river, in a timber area, founded c. 1823. It is a lumber and naval-stores center.

Blow, John, b. 1648 or 1649, d. 1708, English composer. He was organist at Westminster Abbey from 1668 to 1679, when he was succeeded by his pupil Henry Purcell. Blow returned after Purcell's death in 1695. He is remembered chiefly for his masque Venus and Adonis and for his church music.

Blow, Susan Elizabeth, 1843–1916, American educator, b. St. Louis. After study in New York under a disciple of FROEBEL, she opened in Carondelet (now in St. Louis) the first successful public kindergarten (1873) and a training school for kindergarten teachers (1874). Among her books are Symbolic Education (1894), Educational Issues in the Kindergarten (1908), and a translation of Froebel's Mutter- und Kose-Lieder (called Mother Play) in two volumes (1895).

blowfly, name for certain flies of the order Diptera, chiefly of the family Calliphoridae, species of which are also known as bluebottle and greenbottle flies. The larvae feed mainly on decaying flesh and other organic matter. Some are useful as scavengers, but others cause suffering and death in wild and domestic animals and man by invading living tissue through wounds. Formerly the maggots of certain species were used to cleanse wounds and to treat infections of the bone, but this practice has been generally replaced. Of similar scavenging habits are many of the related family Sarcophagidae, usually known as flesh flies. Some of these parasitize other insects.

blowgun, hollow tube from which a dart or an arrow is blown by a man's breath. Blowguns were commonly used by Indians of N. South America and are still employed by some tribes of the Amazon and Guiana regions, where the arrows blown are poisoned, often with curare. Blowguns are also known in various other parts of the world, notably in Malaya and Indonesia. Some of the Indian tribes of E. North America also used blowguns.

blowpipe, in its simplest form in the laboratory, a hollow tapering metal tube through the wide end of which air is blown by the operator while the other end is introduced into the flame of the gas burner A jet of flame results, causing OXIDATION when the blowpipe tip is introduced into the outer portion of the gas FLAME or reduction when the portion just inside this is utilized The material to be treated usually is placed upon a block of compressed charcoal which has been hollowed out slightly to receive it The flame produced by the blowpipe is then directed upon it A bellows or other apparatus is often employed to produce a steady, continuous stream of air In the OXYHYDROGEN blowpipe a stream of hydrogen is burned in oxygen An intensely hot flame results The OXYACETYLENE TORCH involves the same principle but employs acetylene instead of hydrogen Both are employed in WELDING

Bloy, Léon (lāō' blwa'), 1846–1917, French author A Roman Catholic and a social reformer, Bloy was known for his savage attacks against society and his power of persuasion Two novels, Le Désespéré [the hopeless one] (1886) and La Femme pauvre (1897, Eng tr , The Woman Who Was Poor, 1939), are autobiographical His Salut par les Juifs (1892) is a tribute to the Jews His correspondence of which only Lettres à la fiancée (1922) has been translated (1937) into English, constitutes a major portion of his work See his Pilgrim of the Absolute (selections by Raissa Maritain, Eng tr , 1947) See study by Albert Bégum (Eng tr , 1947)

Blücher, Gebhard Leberecht von (blōō'khur, Ger gĕp'hart lā'burĕkht fŭn blū'khur), 1742–1819, Prussian general, one of the outstanding military opponents of Napoleon An officer in the army of Frederick the Great, he incurred the displeasure of the king and resigned, to return to service only after Frederick's death He was prominent in the disastrous campaign of 1806, surrendering to the French near Lübeck In the dark days that followed he helped Freiherr vom STEIN and Fürst von Hardenberg re-create the Prussian opposition to Napoleon and became a leader in the War of Liberation Although ill and subject to delusions, he won brilliant victories at Wahlstatt and Mockern and played an important part in the defeat of the French at Leipzig Crossing the Rhine, he led his army to Paris In the WATERLOO CAMPAIGN of 1815, he was defeated at Ligny but arrived at the battle of Waterloo in time to make it an overwhelming victory In 1814 he was made prince of Wahlstatt

Blücher, Vasily Konstantinovich (vŭsyĕ'lyĕ kŭnstäntyĕ'nuvĭch), b 1889, Russian general, whose real name is unknown He served in the tsarist army, joined the Bolsheviists in the Russian Revolution, rose rapidly to high command and defeated (1920) Baron Wrangel Sent to China as military adviser to the KUOMINGTANG government (1924), he served under Chiang Kai-shek until Chiang's break with the Communists He was known in China as General Galen Blücher, who enjoyed tremendous prestige, subsequently was made a marshal and was military commander in the Far Eastern Area of the USSR until 1938

Bluebeard, nickname of the chevalier Raoul in a story by Charles Perrault In the story Bluebeard's seventh wife, Fatima, yielding to curiosity, opens a locked door and discovers the bodies of her predecessors She is saved from being also slain by the timely arrival of her brothers, for whose coming her sister Anne watched in a tower Bluebeard was possibly based on the career of the seigneur de Retz, but the story occurs in the folk tales of several countries It was used in a play by George Colman, the younger, and in an opera by Offenbach

bluebell, name for several plants, particularly the HAREBELL (bluebells-of-Scotland), VIRGINIA COWSLIP (Virginia bluebell), wood hyacinth (see SQUILL), and BELLFLOWER blueberry, plant of the large genus Vaccinium, shrubs (rarely small trees) of wide distribution They have small flowers and blue or black, usually edible berries that are often confused with the related HUCKLEBERRY Blueberries were a favorite food of the Indians, who ate them fresh or dried for winter use The berries have been an article of commerce since early days, but only within recent years have efforts been made to improve the wild berry by breeding and cultivation Even care of wild patches usually greatly increases the yield The high-bush blueberry (Vaccinium corymbosum), native to North America from Minnesota eastward, is the species most often cultivated, and improved varieties are now grown in the East and West. Several blueberries are cultivated (they require acid soil) for the brilliant foliage in the fall Various species are sometimes called bilberry or whortleberry The "huckleberry" of florists, sold for greenery, is a West Coast evergreen species, V ovatum, called box blueberry bluebird, North American migratory bird of the thrush family The eastern bluebird is among the first spring arrivals in the North It is about 7 in long, with plumage on the upper parts which appears a vivid blue in bright light, a cinnamon-red breast, and white under parts The female's coloring is duller It usually nests in orchards, on the edge of woodlands, and where nesting boxes are available As a destroyer of insects it is of great value It eats some wild fruits Its cheerful call is a series of two or three notes, and its song is a soft, sweet warble Related birds are the mountain, the Western, the azure, and the chestnut-backed bluebirds The bluebird as the symbol of happiness is used by Maeterlinck in his play The Blue Bird

bluebonnet or buffalo clover, early-spring-blooming plant (Lupinus subcarnosus or texensis) that has been made the floral emblem of its native state, Texas, where it carpets the plains with its blue blossoms The bluebonnet has typical LUPINE flowers and leaves In Scotland the name is given to the CORNFLOWER

Blue Cross plans see HEALTH INSURANCE

Blue Earth, city (pop 3,702), co seat of Faribault co , S Minn , on the Blue Earth river near the Iowa line, platted 1856, inc 1874 It is a trade center in a diversified farm area

Bluefield, city (pop 20,641), extreme S W Va , on the Va border contiguous to Bluefield, a town (pop 3,921) in Virginia, settled 1777 It is the shipping point for the Pocahontas coal field A state teachers college for Negroes is in the West Virginia section, and Bluefield College (junior) is across the line in Virginia Pinnacle Rock State Park is near by

Bluefields, Caribbean port (1946 estimated pop 10,741), SE Nicaragua, on Bluefields Bay Nicaragua's chief eastern port, Bluefields has docks at El Bluff across the bay, import-export traffic uses the Río ESCONDIDO and the Franklin D Roosevelt Highway between the coast and Managua, the capital Chief exports are bananas, hardwoods, rubber, and gold A rendezvous for English and Dutch buccaneers in the 16th and the 17th cent Bluefields became (1678) the capital of a British protectorate over the MOSQUITO COAST Nominally returned to Nicaragua by the CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY (1850), Bluefields was finally annexed by José Santos ZELAYA in 1894 It was threatened (1910) with bombardment by a U S warship on the grounds that Nicaraguan government forces, attempting to quell a rebellion, were endangering American lives and property, during U S intervention, marines were stationed there (1912–25, 1926–33)

bluefish, stout-bodied, delicately flavored food fish (Pomatomus saltatrix) of the warm waters of the Atlantic and Indian oceans It is deep bluish, tinged with green above and silvery below Adult fish weigh from 10 to 25 lb , and some reach a length of 3 ft The teeth are strong Bluefish wander erratically in schools, pursuing the menhaden and other fish on which they feed They destroy far more than their requirements

bluegrass, any species of the genus Poa, a large and widely distributed genus of grasses of economic importance In general bluegrasses are perennial with fine-leaved foliage, in some species of a bluish-green color Most species seem to grow best in moist, fairly cool conditions The various species are important as pasture, hay, and lawn grasses One of the best known and most important is the sod-forming Kentucky bluegrass or June grass (Poa pratensis), usually thought to have been introduced from the Old World but now widely naturalized in the United States, Kentucky is known as the Bluegrass State because it is so prevalent there Bluegrasses are sometimes called spear grass and meadow grass

Blue Hill, town (pop 1,343), S Maine, settled 1762, inc 1789 Its principal village, Blue Hill, is a resort on the west shore of Blue Hill Bay opposite Mt Desert Island The region has yielded copper and other minerals and diatomaceous earth, and pottery is made Franz Kneisel's studio here was converted into a concert hall

Blue Island, residential and industrial city (pop 16,638), NE Ill , just S of Chicago, settled 1835, inc 1843 It has railroad yards and shops, brick and tile factories, ironworks and steelworks, and canning and packing plants

blue jay, familiar bird of central and E North America, allied to the crow, the raven, and the magpie Almost a foot long, it is handsome and conspicuous Its upper parts, including the crest, are grayish violet blue The wings and tail are bright blue with black and white markings, the neck is collared with black, and the under parts are gray and white Except during the nesting season the blue jay creates a din with raucous cries of "jaay" and with hawklike screams and other imitative sounds Less familiar are his musical, flutelike notes Some winter in their northern range, but many travel southward They feed on larger insects and other small invertebrates and on seeds and nuts (especially acorns and beechnuts), but they also eat some birds' eggs and nestlings Related southern birds are the Florida and Semple's blue jays blue laws. This term for Puritanical legislation regulating public and private morals originated in A General History of Connecticut (London, 1781), by the Rev Samuel A Peters, formerly of Hebron, Conn An Anglican clergyman in a region overwhelmingly devoted to Congregationalism and a Loyalist surrounded by Sons of Liberty, he found it expedient to flee to England in 1774 In his history, hardly flattering to Connecticut but not totally unjust, he gave an account of the code of "Blue Laws," which, he claimed, was still operative there Subsequently the term came to refer specifically to the legislation of the theocratic New Haven colony in the 17th cent Today the term is somewhat loosely applied to any legislation rigorously restricting personal conduct Although Peters's account of the blue laws was highly exaggerated, it contained a large element of truth New Haven and the other Puritan colonies of New England all had rigid laws proscribing not only Sabbath-breaking, breaches in family discipline, drunkenness, and sexual transgressions, but also excesses in dress (aimed at the lower orders, who were not to ape the fashions of their betters) and harmless and even profitable diversions Such restrictive measures did not, however, originate with the New England Puritans, nor were they unique among American colonists in having them. Sabbatarian and sumptuary laws had been common on the Continent since the Middle Ages, and with the growth of Puritan sentiment in England in the reigns of James I and Charles I repressive moral legislation was widely adopted Properly speaking, however, the term "blue laws" pertains only to American legislation Laws of this sort were common to some degree in practically every American colony, though they flourished most in New England With the dissolution of the Puritan theocracies after the American Revolution, blue laws declined and disappeared Many of them lay forgotten in the statute books only to be resurrected much later to plague another generation of Americans They were not widely revived until the appearance in the 19th cent of local and state laws prohibiting the manufacture and consumption of intoxicating liquors, which culminated in the short-lived experiment of national prohibition The nation-wide contempt for the unpopular Eighteenth Amendment had a valid precedent in earlier days, for the ordinary colonial consistently violated the blue laws, as the impressive lists of convictions and punishments in ancient archives reveals With prohibition early in the 20th cent also came a host of other laws regulating private conduct Many states for a brief period even forbade the sale of cigarettes (early Connecticut had also banned the use of tobacco until the weed became important to its economy) Laws abolishing secular amusements as well as all unnecessary work on Sunday and laws providing for strict local censorship of books, plays, moving pictures, and other means of instruction or entertainment were also enacted Although much of this legislation has been softened if not repealed, there are still many areas and communities in the United States, generally those where religious fundamentalism is strongest, which retain blue laws See G A Myers, Ye Olden Blue Laws (1921)

Blue Mountains, wooded range, NE Oregon and SE Wash , c 6,500 ft high, in the midst of basin lands

Blue Nile, Arabic Bahr-el-Azrak, river, c 950 mi long, rising in Lake Tana in NW Ethiopia at an altitude of c 5,800 ft It is the chief affluent of the Nile The river flows rapidly S and W through Ethiopia, where many tributaries feed it It then follows a slow northerly course through the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, where, at Khartoum, it joins with the White Nile to form the NILE

Blue Point, unincorporated village (pop 1,234), on S Long Island, SE N Y , on Great South Bay and near Patchogue Blue-point oysters take their name from Blue Point

blueprint, the blue and white print of an architect's or engineer's plans, used commonly as a working drawing during building or manufacturing The plan is first drawn to scale on a special paper or substance through which light can penetrate The drawing is then placed over so-called blueprint paper prepared by treating paper with a mixture of potassium ferricyanide and ammonium ferric citrate When the drawing and the blueprint paper thus attached are exposed to a strong light, the ferric salt not lying beneath the lines of the drawing, and hence unprotected, is changed to a ferrous salt which reacts with the ferricyanide to form Turnbull's blue This blue is the background of the finished print The ferric salt under the lines of the drawing, and hence protected from the light, remains unchanged and is dissolved away during the washing in water which must follow exposure As a result the lines of the original drawing appear white in the finished blueprint

Blue Rapids, city (pop 1,433), NE Kansas, at the confluence of the Little Blue and Big Blue rivers NW of Topeka, laid out 1869, inc 1872 It has a gypsum mine and plant

Blue Ridge, city (pop 1,362), co seat of Fannin co , N Ga , near the Tenn.–N.C line, in Chattahoochee National Forest, inc 1887 It is a trade and shipping center for a farm, lumber, and mine area The railroad's coming (1895) stimulated its growth

Blue Ridge, range of the Appalachian system, west of the piedmont, extending from NW Maryland just above Harpers Ferry, W Va , southwestward through Virginia and North Carolina into N Georgia The range is narrow in the north (10–12 mi. wide), broadening to a maximum width of 70

mi in the south, where it reaches altitudes of c 5,000 ft The region is noted for its scenery, especially the section along the Skyline Drive in Virginia which traverses the Shenandoah National Park. The Blue Ridge Parkway (almost completed), extending c 500 mi south from the Skyline Drive, connects the Shenandoah and Great Smoky Mountains national parks See Jean Thomas, Blue Ridge Country (1942)

blues, in music, a type of song with a sad or desperate text set to a slow, melancholy sort of tune Its origin was in Negro work songs, spirituals, and sorrow songs, popularized by W C Handy's Memphis Blues (1912) and St Louis Blues (1914), it has become part of modern JAZZ There are instrumental blues as well as the original vocal type For bibliography, see JAZZ

Blues and Greens, political factions in the Byzantine Empire in the 6th cent They took their names from two of the four colors worn by the circus charioteers Their clashes were intensified by religious differences The Greens represented MONOPHYSITISM, the Blues, orthodoxy In 532 the two factions joined in the Nika sedition against Emperor JUSTINIAN I and Empress THEODORA Thanks to Theodora's sang-froid, the revolt was put down by Belisarius, whose troops killed some 30 000 rebels

bluestocking, originally a derisive term applied to certain 18th-century women of intellectual pretensions In the middle of the century Mrs Elizabeth Vesey held "conversations" of groups of cultivated people, and the custom was extended by Hannah MORE, Elizabeth MONTAGU, Elizabeth CARTER, and others Boswell's Life of Dr Johnson says these "bluestocking clubs" were given the name because one Benjamin Stillingfleet attended in blue stockings, or ordinary, as opposed to formal, dress In time the name bluestocking was applied solely to the ladies See Hannah More's poem, "Bas Bleu, or Conversation" (1786), E R Wheeler, Famous Bluestockings (1910)

bluestone, slate-colored sandstone found in New York state which is used for building, flagstone paving, and when broken up into small pieces, for garden paths and roadways It was widely used for many years after quarrying was begun in 1836 The term bluestone is used also to describe BLUE VITRIOL

bluet (blo͞o'ĭt), innocence, or quaker-ladies, delicate little North American wild flower with a single blue (or sometimes white), four-parted and yellow-eyed blossom appearing in the spring The plant, botanically Houstonia caerulea, may be grown in the garden Other plants are sometimes called bluets, particularly other species of Houstonia and the CORNFLOWER

blue vitriol (vĭt'rĭ-ŭl) or bluestone, common blue crystalline substance, an important hydrous salt of copper, called cupric sulphate and less exactly copper sulphate It is a compound of copper, sulphur and oxygen, linked with five molecules of water This blue crystalline form is produced from the white anhydrous salt, also known as cupric sulphate, when this white salt crystallizes out from an aqueous solution When the blue crystals are heated the water of crystallization is driven off, and the anhydrous form is produced Blue vitriol occurs in nature in the mineral chalcanthite Commercially, copper sulphate is prepared by the action of warm dilute sulphuric acid on copper in air It is used in copperplating, as a mordant in dyeing, in batteries, in the preparation of FEHLING'S SOLUTION, BORDEAUX MIXTURE and BURGUNDY MIXTURE In very small quantities it is used to destroy certain algae in reservoirs A sandstone found in New York state is also called BLUESTONE

Bluff, borough (pop 2,059), on the south coast of South Island, New Zealand, on Foveaux Strait It is the port for Invercargill The exports are oysters, fish, granite, and quartz It was formerly called Port Macquarie

Bluffton, 1 City (pop 5,417), co seat of Wells co, NE Ind, on the Wabash and S of Fort Wayne, settled 1829, inc 1858 It is a dairying center 2 Village (pop 2,077), NW Ohio, between Lima and Findlay, in a limestone quarry area, settled 1833, inc 1861 It has a large Mennonite population and a Mennonite school, Bluffton College

Blum, Léon (lāⁿ' blo͞omˊ), 1872-1950, French Socialist statesman and writer Blum entered politics during the Dreyfus Affair and rose to party leadership In 1936 he brought about the coalition of Radical Socialists, Socialists, and Communists in the Popular Front, which won an overwhelming electoral victory The Popular Front government, headed by Blum, passed laws providing for a 40-hour week, collective bargaining and compulsory arbitration, reorganized the Bank of France, and proposed to nationalize major industries Conservative opposition to Blum's fiscal measures brought about his resignation (1937) Blum served as vice premier (1937-38) under Camille CHAUTEMPS, was briefly premier in 1938, and later voiced his opposition to the Munich Pact Arrested (1940) by the Vichy government, he was among the defendants in the abortive war guilt trial held at RIOM in 1942 Blum was transferred to German custody and was imprisoned in Austria until the end of the war After negotiating (1946) a credit agreement with the United States, he again was premier for two months in 1946–47, heading a Socialist cabinet Among French Socialists, Blum gradually came to represent the moderate wing His writings include the early work, Marriage (Eng tr, 1937), and For All Mankind (Eng tr, 1946)

Blum, Robert Frederick (blo͝om), 1857–1903, American painter, etcher, and illustrator, b Cincinnati, studied at the McMicken School of Design, Cincinnati, and at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts Apprenticed in boyhood to a lithographer, he became a skillful etcher His versatility extended to the use of various media in painting—pastels and water colors as well as oil—and to pen-and-ink illustrating After 1879 he made frequent trips to Europe Commissioned by Scribner to illustrate Sir Edwin Arnold's Japonica, Blum lived in Japan, 1890–93, his later work shows the influence of this sojourn In mural decoration his friezes Music and The Dance are especially noted, painted for the Mendelssohn Music Hall, these are now in the Brooklyn Museum Other works include The Ameya (Metropolitan Mus) and The Lace-Makers (Cincinnati Art Mus) At the Cincinnati Art Museum is a special wing devoted to his work

Blume, Peter (blo͞om), 1906–, American painter, b Russia He came to the United States in 1911 and was educated in Brooklyn He later studied at the Art Students League of New York and the Beaux-Arts After working as a subway newspaper vendor, in a jewelry factory, and as a lithographer's apprentice, in 1932 he received a Guggenheim fellowship, and two years later his South of Scranton took first prize at the Carnegie International Exhibition Since then his work has been much discussed Variously classified as expressionist or surrealist, it is highly individual and aims at giving a picture of his own inner thoughts and dreams Blume's pictures have gayety and a rich and varied pattern His fantasies, including the antifascist Eternal City (1938), and The Rock (1949), are painted with precision and detail, in clear, brilliant colors His paintings are in the Museum of Modern Art and Whitney Museum, New York, and in the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts

Blumenbach, Johann Friedrich (yōhänˊ frēˊdrĭkh blo͞oˊmənbäkh), 1752–1840, German naturalist and anthropologist He introduced and developed the science of comparative anatomy in Germany His De Generis humani varietate nativa (1775) marked the beginnings of physical anthropology and provided the five divisions of mankind which have been the basis of all subsequent racial classifications An analysis of an extensive skull collection, published as Collectio craniorum diversarum gentium (1790–1828), established craniometric study Other works are Handbuch der Naturgeschichte (1780) and Handbuch der vergleichenden Anatomie und Physiologie (1804)

Blumengarten, Solomon see BLOOMGARDEN, SOLOMON

Blunden, Edmund Charles, 1896–, English poet and critic From 1924 to 1927 he was professor of English literature at Tokyo Univ, and after 1931 fellow and tutor in English literature at Merton College, Oxford Besides being a poet of rural England, he is a scholarly critic and editor of John Clare Vaughan, Lamb and Coleridge and biographer of Leigh Hunt (1930), Thomas Hardy (1942), and Shelley (1946)

Blunt, George William, 1802–78 American hydrographer, son of Edmund March Blunt, a pioneer publisher of nautical books and charts in Newburyport, Mass He established himself in a similar business in New York in 1821 From 1833 until his death he was first assistant in the U S Coast Survey He served also for 42 years on the Board of Pilot Commissioners and did much to put through needed reforms in the U S Lighthouse Service His firm published the numerous editions of Bowditch's Navigator, Blunt's Coast Pilot, and nautical charts of the entire world The copperplates of these maps and the copyrights to the Navigator and Coast Pilot were later purchased by the U S Hydrographic Office when that bureau began its publication work

Blunt, James Gilpatrick (gĭl-) 1826–81, Union general in the Civil War, b Hancock co, Maine After studying medicine, he practiced in Ohio and later in Kansas, where he became associated with John Brown in antislavery activity Blunt served in the Union forces throughout the war and was made a brigadier general in 1862 The border region of Kansas, Missouri, and Arkansas was the principal scene of his activity He was victorious at Old Fort Wayne (Oct, 1862) and at Cane Hill (Nov, 1862) With Gen F J Herron, he drove back Hindman at PRAIRIE GROVE (Dec, 1862) In 1864 Blunt was instrumental in repulsing Sterling Price's raid

Blunt, Wilfrid Scawen (skōˊĭn), 1840–1922, English poet and political writer After a brief period in the diplomatic service, Blunt resigned and began a colorful career of travel and political crusading He championed Indian, Egyptian, and Irish home rule, being the first Englishman to be imprisoned for such activities in Ireland Reared a Roman Catholic, he later became deeply sympathetic with Mohammedan beliefs, though he died professing no religion His poetry includes The Love Sonnets of Proteus (1881) and The Wind and the Whirlwind (1883) See Blunt's My Diaries (1919–20), biography by Edith Finch (1938)

Bluntschli, Johann Kaspar (yōˊhän käsˊpär blo͝ontˊshlē) 1808–81, Swiss jurist and political scientist Trained at the Univ of Berlin, he taught law at Zurich and later at the German universities of Munich and Heidelberg He expounded the organic theory of the state in Allgemeines Staatsrecht (2 vols, 1851–52, partial Eng tr, 1892), carrying the theory to a complete equation of the life of a state and the life of a person In a later work, Deutsches Privatrecht [German private law] (2 vols, 1853–54), he glorified the Germanic as opposed to the Roman elements in German law He was also of some political importance in Baden as a spokesman of the Protestant bourgeoisie favoring unification of Germany under Prussia, and he was one of the founders of the Institute of International Law at Ghent

Blyth (blīth), municipal borough (1931 pop 31,680, 1947 estimated pop 34,110), Northumberland, England It is a coal-mining center and a seaport with fishing and shipbuilding

Blythe, David G, 1815–65, American portrait and genre painter, b East Liverpool, Ohio Most of his work is in private collections Janvary Bulls (Yale Univ) is characteristic in its spirited satire See Dorothy Miller, The Life and Work of David G Blythe (1950)

Blythe (blīth), city (1940 pop 2,355, 1946 special census pop 3,813), SE Calif, near the Colorado river, in an irrigated cotton, alfalfa, and melon area, laid out 1910, inc 1916

Blytheville (blīthˊvĭl), city (1940 pop 10,652, 1948 special census pop 15,091), a co seat of Mississippi co NE Ark, near the Mississippi river, settled c 1854, inc 1891 It is the trading and industrial center of the state's richest cotton area, soy beans and feed crops are also produced

Boabdil (bōänbədēlˊ), d 1538, last Moorish king of GRANADA in Spain (1482–92) After valiant resistance he was defeated by Ferdinand and Isabella and fled to Morocco

boa constrictor (bōˊə kənstrĭkˊtər), South American nonpoisonous constrictor snake of the same family as the ANACONDA and the PYTHON It is rarely more than 12 ft long An agile climber, it descends from trees to capture birds and mammals, which it kills by constriction before it eats them

Boadicea (bōˊədĭsēˊə), d A D 62, British queen of the Iceni (or Norfolk), also called Boudicca Her husband, Prautagus, died in A D 61, putting his family under the protection of the Roman emperor Their property confiscated by the procurator and the people oppressed by the soldiers, the Iceni revolted Boadicea led them in sacking Colchester, London, and Verulam (St Albans) Her army was crushed by the legate C Suetonius Paulinus, and Boadicea took poison

Boanerges (bōˊənûrˊjēz) [Gr, =sons of thunder] sons of Zebedee see JAMES, SAINT, and JOHN, SAINT

boar see SWINE

Boardman, Thomas Danforth, 1784–1873, American pewterer, b Litchfield, Conn, of Danforth family and training He used as a touch mark his initials or name within a rectangle or associated with a spread eagle and occasionally an X indicating first quality, following the English custom He was later associated with his brother Sherman Boardman, and the firm's mark was TD & SB Their work was of excellent craftsmanship in accordance with the best early traditions Examples are preserved in the Morgan Collection of the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, Conn See Charlotte Goldthwaite, Boardman Genealogy (1895)

Boas, Franz (bōˊəz), 1858–1942, American anthropologist, b Minden, Germany Ph D Univ of Kiel 1881 He joined an expedition to Baffin Land in 1883 and found through observation of the Central Eskimo, the field of his future interests In 1886 he began investigations of the Indian tribes of British Columbia, an area which was long to engage his attention In 1889 he secured at Clark Univ his first post in the United States From 1892 to 1894 he served as curator of anthropology for the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago He was associated with the American Museum of Natural History from 1895 to 1905 He began to lecture at Columbia Univ in 1896 and became, in 1899, its first professor of anthropology His retirement 37 years later did not mark the end of active service to his field No one has more greatly influenced American anthropology His approach was independent of theoretical preconceptions, and his insistence on a rigorous methodology served to establish firmly the scientific validity of his contributions He reexamined the premises of physical anthropology and pioneered in applying statistical methods to biometric study. He was an early contributor to stratigraphic archaeology in Mexico As a philologist, he emphasized the importance of language analysis from the point of view of its internal organization In the cultural field, he maintained an empirical stand, becoming identified with no single theoretical school but affording constructive criticism to them all The number and the eminence of anthropologists who received guidance and training from Boas insure the long continuance of his influence as a teacher In addition to his many monographs, his works include The Mind of Primitive Man (1911), Primitive Art (1927), Anthropology and Modern Life (rev ed, 1932), he edited General Anthropology (1938)

boat, small, open vessel propelled by sail, oar, pole, paddle, or motor The use of the term boat for larger vessels, though common, is somewhat improper, but the line between boats and ships is not easy to draw A number of special types of boats are also generally referred to by their individual names rather than by the generic term, e g , the CANOE, the kayak (the Eskimo dekked canoe), and the umiak (the Eskimo open boat) Some boats may be quite large and may be useful not only for river but also for ocean traffic, as in the islands of the S Pacific and along the Asiatic coast Boats are in general known at least in the simple form of dugouts and rafts to all peoples dwelling on waterways, no matter how low their material culture, and they have been known since prehistory The ancient Egyptians had quite manageable boats made of acacia wood and held together with pegs Today wooden boats are built in three ways with fore-and-aft planks laid with edges meeting smoothly and not overlapping (carvel built), with fore-and-aft planks laid with edges overlapping like weather boarding (clinker built), and with planks running diagonally, the inside planks running in the opposite direction from the outside planks Outrigger boats are known in many parts of the world, the outrigger, intended to stabilize the boat, is usually a piece of wood which rests on the water parallel to, and some feet from, the boat, to which it is attached by projecting arms above the water The types of boats known in various parts of the world are almost infinite The Chinese junk is usually called the largest type of boat and is sometimes classified as a ship It and the sampan (a sort of skiff that usually has a mat-covered cabin with living quarters) are to be seen in all the river and coastal waters of the Far East A special, highly ornamental sampan used for ceremonial purposes is the dragon boat The energetic Arab merchants in the Middle Ages pushed their trade (and their religion) all over the shores of S Asia and E Africa in the lateen-rigged dhow, in which they covered incredible distances. The ancient GALLEY was usually propelled by oars and was a typically Mediterranean vessel The gondola, the flat-bottomed, raftlike boat of the Venetian canals is one of the more familiar local types of Mediterranean boats Because the Northern seas were stormier, the viking boats, which the Norsemen were building by the 5th cent A D , were somewhat sturdier Clinker building is supposed to have started with them These Norse boats, deckless or half-decked, with elevated stem and stern, took the piratical conquerors securely to all the coasts of Europe and across the difficult N Atlantic The later rugged whaleboat was developed from the viking type of construction Whaleboats came to be used for numerous purposes, and the fishing boats of the North Sea and the Baltic Sea, also built on the viking principles, are roughly similar to whaleboats The types adapted for being carried on ships, for harbor transport, and for pleasure are as varied as their uses, appearing in a bewildering number of forms such as the launch, the cutter, the coracle, the pinnace, the dinghy, the gig, the catboat, the punt, the scow, and the several types of collapsible boat (usually of rubber or canvas) For boat racing, see ROWING See also HOUSEBOAT, LIFEBOAT, MOTORBOAT, TUGBOAT

boating, as a sport, includes canoeing, iceboating, motorboating (see MOTORBOAT), yachting, and ROWING The CANOE dates back to prehistoric man, the rowboat (propelled by oars) to ancient times, and the iceboat (a vehicle on runners to which sails are attached) to the Norsemen Canoeing, rowboating, and iceboating did not become organized sports until the 19th and 20th cent The YACHT, however, was devised purely for pleasure and sport by the Dutch in the 16th cent Today, several international races are held to determine boating championships The most prominent races are the International Challenge Cup race, for canoeing, the Stuart International Cup race, for iceboating; the Harmsworth Trophy and the Golden Cup races, for motorboating, and the America's Cup race, for yachting

Boaz (bō'ăz) [Heb ,=fleetness] 1 Ruth's husband, ancestor of David Ruth 2, 3, 4 Booz Mat 1 5, Luke 3 32 2 Pillar of Solomon's Temple See JACHIN AND BOAZ

Boaz, town (pop 1,927), NE Ala , in the mountains NNW of Gadsden, in a farm and cotton area, settled 1878, inc 1891 A junior college is here

Bobadilla, Francisco de (fränthō'skō dā bōbädē'lyä), d. 1502, Spanish colonial governor He superseded Columbus in the West Indies (1500) and sent him home in chains. Recalled in 1502, he was drowned on the voyage to Europe.

bobbin, implement on which thread is wound, used in sewing, spinning, weaving, and lacemaking Sometimes the wooden spools of sewing thread are called bobbins The bobbin of a sewing machine is a metal cylinder, with a flange at each end, on which the lower thread is wound to be carried through the shuttle to the seam In some primitive hand weaving the weft was wound on a bobbin flanged at one end and passed or carried by it through the warp In tapestry weaving, bobbin looms are essential, as weft strands of different colors must go back and forth for the distance required by the design, somewhat in the manner of an embroidery needle darning in a pattern In making pillow lace, bobbins form an important part of the equipment, as each thread of the pattern requires a different bobbin, intricate patterns call for hundreds of bobbins to hold the fine thread in order Bobbins for lacemaking are made in various shapes and sizes, of a variety of materials, as walnut, rosewood, boxwood, and olivewood, glass, metal, ivory, coral, malachite, and bamboo, and are ornamented with carving, painting, or engraving See Gertrude Whiting, Tools and Toys of Stitchery (1928)

bobbin lace see LACE

Bobbio (bôb'bēō), town (pop 1,787), Emilia e Romagna, N central Italy, 25 mi SW of Piacenza St COLUMBAN founded here in 612 the oldest monastery of N Italy From the 9th to the 12th cent , under the Benedictines, it was a center of European cultural life The manuscripts of its invaluable library were dispersed in the 15th and 16th cent bobcat, small lynx found in most parts of the United States, S Canada, and parts of Mexico It is light reddish-brown, spotted, and smaller than the more grayish Canada lynx It is a powerful, stealthy, usually nocturnal hunter It is known also as the bay lynx, red lynx, and wildcat

Bobcaygeon (-kā'jun), town (pop 1,002), S Ont , on an island between Sturgeon and Pigeon lakes and NW of Peterborough For many years a great lumber center, it is now chiefly a distributing point for the Kawartha Lakes resorts

bobolink, name in the N United States and Canada of an American songbird related to the blackbird and the oriole It is known farther south as the reed bird and the rice bird In spring the plumage of the male is black except for the white shoulders and lower back and buff nape After the breeding season the male assumes yellowish brown-streaked plumage like that of the female, and his former joyous singing is reduced to a single call note Bobolinks winter in South America In the north they are insectivorous, but as they migrate they gorge on rice in the eastern wild-rice marshes and in cultivated fields in South Carolina and Georgia and become so fat that they are hunted as game birds The bobolink is the subject of Bryant's poem "Robert of Lincoln "

Bobruisk (bŏbrōō'ĭsk), city (pop 84,107), capital of Bobruisk oblast, Belorussia, on the Berezina river It is a rail junction and has lumber, food, and clothing industries

bobsledding, winter sport in which a bobsled—an open steel-bodied vehicle, with sledlike runners, which accommodates two or four persons—hurtles down a course of snow-surfaced, steeply banked, twisting inclines The crew of a four-man bobsled is composed of a driver and three bobbers, the last one being the brakeman Bobsledding, an offspring of tobogganing, was developed at St Moritz, Switzerland, in the late 19th cent The sport has been included in the Olympic games since 1928 The Mt Van Hoevenberg run at Lake Placid, N Y , is the outstanding course in North America

bobwhite, American game bird of the same family as the pheasant and the partridge The eastern bobwhite is about 10 in long It has plumage of mixed brown, black, and white in the male and brown and buff in the female, which makes it almost invisible against the vegetation of weedy fields and edges of woodland Bobwhites feed on insects and weed seeds During much of the year they travel in coveys, sleeping at night in a compact circle, tails to the center Thus they can fly out in all directions if alarmed Each male chooses a territory in which to nest in spring when the coveys separate and whistles "bob-white" to attract a mate and to drive away other males The large brood follows the hen like chicks Bobwhites can be raised on farms and increase rapidly when protected, but suffer great destruction by hunters. They are often called quail or partridge See H L Stoddard, The Bobwhite Quail (1931).

Boca, La (la bō'kä), town (pop. 4,035), central Panama, near Balboa, at the Pacific end of the Panama Canal

Boca Tigris see CANTON, river

Boccaccio, Giovanni (jōvän'nē bōk-kät'chō), 1313–75, Italian poet and novelist, author of the DECAMERON, one of the world's great books. He was born in Paris, the natural son of a Tuscan merchant by a French woman. He was a contemporary of Petrarch and was born before Dante's death. His early youth was spent at the family home in Certaldo, not far from Florence, where he is buried He was sent to Naples c.1330 by his father. Here he won the friendship of Petrarch, and his genius flowered He fell in love with Maria d'Aquino, natural daughter of King Robert, and wrote (c 1340) at her instance Filocolo, a long romance in prose The Teseide is a heroic poem in the style of the Aeneid In La Fiammetta (written c 1344), another prose romance, Fiammetta (Maria d'Aquino) recounts her love for Panfilo (Boccaccio) and his desertion of her Filostrato tells in verse the story of Troilus and Cressida, it was drawn upon by Chaucer Amorosa visione and Ninfale fiesolano are allegorical works in verse The Corbaccio, also in verse, is a satire on women Boccaccio was recalled by his father to Tuscany in 1341 There his later works were written Boccaccio's admiration for Dante inspired him to write a biography of the poet, one of his early works In his last years he received an allowance from the city of Florence as a public expositor of the Divine Comedy It is as one of the world's earliest and greatest storytellers that Boccaccio lives For selections of his verse in English, see Lorna de' Lucchi, An Anthology of Italian Poems (1922), and D G Rossetti, The Early Italian Poets (1861) See biographies by J A Symonds (1895), Catherine Carswell (1937), and Francis MacManus (1947), N E Griffin and A B Myrick, The Filostrato of Giovanni Boccaccio (1929), C G Osgood, Boccaccio on Poetry (1930)

Boccherini, Luigi (lwē'jē bōk-kĕrē'nē), 1743–1805, Italian composer He was cellist at the court of Spain from 1768 until his death and composed prolifically, mostly chamber music A delicate lyricism characterizes his work

Bocheru (bōk'ŭrōō), descendant of Saul 1 Chron 8 38, 9 44 Perhaps the name should be translated "first-born", cf BECHER 1

Bochim (bō'kĭm) [Heb ,=weepers], unknown place. Judges 2 1,5

Bochum (bō'khōōm), city (1939 pop 305,485, 1946 pop 246,777), in the former Westphalia prov , NW Germany A center of the RUHR iron and steel industry, the city was heavily damaged in the Second World War

Bock, Fedor von (fā'dôr fŭn bôk'), 1880–1945, German field marshal In the Second World War he commanded in Poland and in the Low Countries and entered Paris in June, 1940 Commanding the central Russian front, he failed to take Moscow (1941) He was retired in 1942 He was killed, presumably, by stray Allied bullets

Bockelszoon or Bockelson, Jan, see JOHN OF LEIDEN

Böcklin or Boecklin, Arnold (both är'nôlt bŭk'lēn), 1827–1901, Swiss painter, studied in Düsseldorf, Brussels, Paris, and Rome Most of his life was spent in Germany and in Italy From 1860 to 1862 he was professor at the Weimar Academy His carefully constructed paintings are largely classical in theme but reveal a romantic sentiment and fantasy Among his well-known paintings are The Island of the Dead (Metropolitan Mus) and Chase of Diana and mythological frescoes (Basel) In later life Böcklin enjoyed a high reputation and considerable influence in Germany

Bocskay, Stephen (bôch'kĭ), Hung Bocskay István (ĭst'vän), 1557?–1606, Hungarian noble, voivode (1604–6) and prince (1605–6) of Transylvania Seeking to secure the independence of TRANSYLVANIA, he supported his nephew, Prince Sigismund BATHORY, first against the pro-Turkish, then against the pro-Hapsburg, faction of nobles Sigismund having abdicated (1602) in favor of the king of Hungary (Emperor Rudolf II), Stephen Bocskay in 1604 led a revolt with Turkish support against Rudolf's attempt to impose Roman Catholicism on Hungary Stephen then acknowledged the sultan as his suzerain, but refused his offer of recognition as king of Hungary In 1606 he negotiated with Archduke (later Emperor) MATTHIAS a treaty at Vienna which legalized the partition of Hungary between the Hapsburgs (as kings), the sultan, and Transylvania The old and sacred Hungarian crown of St Stephen was returned to Pressburg (now Bratislava), the capital of Hapsburg-held Hungary The importance of the treaty, which was soon afterward supplemented by a peace between Austria and Sultan AHMED I, lay in the guarantee of religious freedom for Hungary Stephen was recognized as prince of Transylvania To avoid paying tribute to the sultan, he presented him with a large gift He died as he was proposing to renew hostilities against the Hapsburgs.

Bodanzky, Artur (bōdän'skē), 1877–1939, Austrian-American conductor He was assistant to Mahler at the Vienna Opera (1903) and conducted at Mannheim from 1909 to 1915 He then became conductor of German operas at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, succeeding Toscanini and Alfred Hertz He translated Mozart's Don Giovanni into German and revised (1917) Weber's Oberon

Bode, Johann Elert (yō'hän ä'lĕrt bō'dŭ), 1747–1826, German astronomer His interest in the heavenly bodies began in his boyhood, when he constructed his own telescope Before he was 20, he had calculated an eclipse of the sun. From 1772 to 1825 he was astronomer of the Academy of Science, Berlin, and from 1786, director of the Berlin Observatory. He is celebrated as the founder (1774) of the Astronomisches Jahrbuch, but his most noted contribution to astronomy is the Uranographia (1801), a collection of star maps and a catalogue of 17,240 stars and nebulae, 12,000 more than had appeared in earlier charts In 1772 he devised a formula to express the relative distances of the planets from the sun The same device had been thought out earlier by J D Titius of Wittenberg, but it is known as Bode's law

Bode, Wilhelm von (vĭl'hĕlm fŏn), 1845–1929, German art critic and writer He abandoned law for art and archaeology in 1869 In 1872 he was made assistant in the Berlin Museum, in 1883, director of the department of Christian sculpture, and in 1890, director of the gallery of paintings Under his supervision the museum grew into one of the world's greatest collections From 1905 to 1920 he was director general of the royal museums of Prussia His advice was sought by museums and collectors in Germany and abroad His books include Rembrandt (with Hofstede de Groot, 8 vols , 1897–1900, Eng tr , 1906) and Florentine Sculptors of the Renaissance (1902, Eng tr , 1909)

Bodel, Jehan (zhäⁿ' bōdĕl'), b c 1165, French trouvère of Arras He is author of the first long play entirely in French, a mystery entitled Le Jeu de Saint-Nicolas He contracted leprosy c 1202.

Bodenbach, Czechoslovakia see PODMOKLY.

Bodensee. see CONSTANCE, LAKE OF

Bodenstein, Andreas Rudolf see CARLSTADT.

Bodh Gaya, India see BUDDH GAYA

Bodin, Jean (zhäⁿ' bōdĕ'), 1530–96, French social and political philosopher He studied at Toulouse and had a successful legal career His religious tolerance in a period of fanatic religious warfare drew upon him accusations of being a free thinker Bodin's reputation, steadily increasing in recent years, is based chiefly on Les Six Livres de la république (1576, Eng tr , The Six Bookes of a Commonweale, 1606) This may be said to be the first attempt at formulating a modern and scientific philosophy of history He foreshadowed Hobbes by stating the necessity of the absolute sovereignty of monarchs, subject only to the laws of God and nature, and he anticipated Montesquieu by insisting on the importance of environment in shaping laws, customs, beliefs, and events Bodin is also important in the development of economic theories Though he shared many views of the mercantilists, he pointed out that the rise of prices was a function not merely of the debasement of the coinage, but also of the amount of currency in circulation See Beatrice Reynolds, Proponents of Limited Monarchy in Sixteenth Century France· Francis Hotman and Jean Bodin (1931)

Bodleian Library (bŏd'lēŭn, bŏdlē'ŭn), at Oxford Univ The original library, destroyed in the reign of Edward VI, was replaced early in the 17th cent , chiefly through the efforts of Sir Thomas Bodley, who gave it valuable collections of books and manuscripts and in his will left a fund for maintenance Other patrons of letters soon followed his example The library receives a copy of every book published in Great Britain Besides its books, it has a collection of over 40,000 manuscripts, especially rich in biblical, rabbinical, and Arabic material A new building, started in 1937, was opened in Oct , 1946

Bodley, George Frederick (bŏd'lē), 1827–1907, English architect One of the most prominent and prolific ecclesiastical architects of his time, Bodley was a pupil of Sir George Gilbert Scott, an adherent of the Victorian Gothic revival Influenced by his friendship with William Morris and the other Pre-Raphaelites, he did much to foster good taste in the applied arts Among his many works is Queens' College Chapel at Cambridge His secular buildings include additions to Magdalen and other colleges at Oxford and the London school-board offices Besides his English work, he designed cathedrals in Tasmania, in San Francisco, and, in association with his pupil James Vaughan, the Cathedral of St Peter and St Paul in Washington, D C See B F L Clarke, Church Builders of the Nineteenth Century (1938)

Bodley, Sir Thomas, 1545–1613, English scholar and diplomat, organizer of the BODLEIAN LIBRARY at Oxford Univ After four years as gentleman usher and envoy of Queen Elizabeth, he spent 17 years restoring the library of Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, this later was called the Bodleian See Sir Thomas Bodley, Letters to Thomas James, First Keeper of the Bodleian Library (ed. by G W Wheeler, 1926)

Bodmer, Johann Jakob (yō'hän yä'kôp bōd'mûr), 1698–1783, Swiss critic, poet, and editor He was professor (1725–83) of Swiss history at Zurich He founded with Johann Jakob Breitinger the weekly critical journal, the Diskurse der Mahlern This review, with its new literary ideas, helped pave the way for Klopstock, Goethe, and Schiller Bodmer's poetry is of lesser importance than his critical writings, his translation of Paradise Lost, and his editions of the minnesingers and the Nibelungenlied

Bodø, Nor Bodø (bō'dû"), city (pop 6,344), co seat of Nordland co , NW Norway, within the Arctic Circle It is a North Sea port serving the SULITELMA mines Two thirds of Bodo were destroyed during the German invasion of Norway (1940)

Bodoni, Giambattista (jämbät-tē'stä bōdō'nē), 1740–1813, Italian printer He was the son of a printer and worked for a time at the press of the Vatican At Parma, under the patronage of the duke of Parma, he produced stately quartos and folios with impressive title pages and luxurious margins He designed many type faces and, with BASKERVILLE in England and François Ambroise DIDOT and Firmin Didot in France, was a leader in originating "modern," pseudoclassical type faces, distinguished from the "old style" of CASLON and others by emphasizing the contrast of light and heavy lines and by long, level serifs Bodoni received high honors from sovereigns, including Napoleon His books were frankly made to be admired by the affluent, not to be studied or read He was apparently indifferent as to the quality of the text he printed and as to editing and proofreading As masterpieces of typography, the place of his books has not been unchallenged William Morris, for example, found their frigid mechanical perfection a climax of modern ugliness

body snatching, the act of stealing dead bodies from graves and morgues Before cadavers were made available for dissection and study by medical students, traffic in stolen bodies was profitable Those who engaged in the illicit practice were sometimes called resurrectionists, they were active from about the early 18th cent to the early 19th cent Public opposition to any dissection of bodies was further aroused by discovery of the resurrectionists' activities, outbursts of violence occurred in Europe as well as in America Robert Knox, an eminent anatomist, became a victim of public attack because a body which he had purchased for dissection proved to be that of one of a number of victims murdered by William Hare and an accomplice named Burke for the purpose of selling the bodies, the murderers were brought to trial (1828), but although Knox was considered entirely blameless he suffered much This and other similar cases led to the passage (1832) in Great Britain of the Anatomy Act which permitted the legal acquisition by medical schools of unclaimed bodies The Diary of a Resurrectionist (ed by J B Bailey, 1896) is an account of body snatching In the United States dissection of the human body was practiced from the middle of the 18th cent , riots and acts of violence frequently occurred in protest against lecturers on anatomy and medical students, who reputedly dug up bodies for study Unauthorized removal of bodies later became a punishable offense, and legal provision was made for supplying the needs of medical schools

Boece, Roman philosopher see BOETHIUS

Boece (bōēs', bois) or Boethius, Hector (bō'thē'ŭs), c 1465–c 1536, Scottish scholar He studied at the Univ of Paris, where he knew Erasmus, and in 1498 he went to Aberdeen as the first principal of the new university He wrote two Latin works, a collection of biographies of the bishops of Mortlack and Aberdeen (1522), and his chief work, a history of Scotland (1527) The history, which is not historically accurate, was in the 16th cent translated into a metrical Scottish version by William Stewart and a better-known prose Scottish version by John Bellenden See J B Black and W D Simpson, Quartercentenary of the Death of Hector Boece (1937)

Boecklin, Arnold: see BÖCKLIN, ARNOLD

Boeheim, Martin see BEHAIM, MARTIN

Boehler, Peter (bō'lûr), 1712–75, missionary and bishop of the Moravian Church, b Germany, educated at the Univ of Jena In 1738 he went to Savannah, Ga , at the request of Graf von Zinzendorf, to minister to the Moravians there and to organise missions among the slaves In 1740 fear of the Spaniards prompted Boehler to guide a group of Moravians to Pennsylvania, here Nazareth and Bethlehem were founded He returned to England and organized a new company of emigrants, the "Sea Congregation," which he brought to Bethlehem in 1742 From 1747 to 1753 he was superintendent of the Moravian Church in England and was made a bishop in 1748 From 1753 to 1764 Boehler was in America, directing the founding of new Moravian settlements

Boehm, Sir Joseph Edgar (bām), 1834–90, English sculptor, b Vienna After studying in Rome and Paris he worked as a medalist in Vienna In 1862 he established himself in England There he had great success as a portrait sculptor In 1869 he made a colossal statue of Queen Victoria for Windsor Castle There are 23 of his portrait busts in the National Portrait Gallery, London He is perhaps best known for his statue of Carlyle at Chelsea and of John Bunyan at Bedford and for his tomb figures of Dean Stanley and the earl of Shaftesbury in Westminster Abbey.

Boehm, Martin (bām), 1725–1812, American evangelical preacher, b Conestoga, Pa. He was the son of a Palatinate Mennonite who settled in Lancaster co , Pa Boehm became a Mennonite preacher c 1750 and a bishop in 1759 A personal conversion resulted in dissatisfaction with the formalism of his denomination and his adoption of a more evangelistic type of preaching He was excluded from the Mennonite Church In association with Philip William OTTERBEIN, whom he met c 1768, he traveled as an evangelist through Pennsylvania, Maryland, and into Virginia, attracting large audiences, especially in the German settlements Boehm was allied with the Methodists for a time, but finally became one of the founders of the United Brethren in Christ, of which he was elected bishop at the first annual conference in 1800

Boehme or Böhme, Jakob (bē'mu, Ger yä'kôp bû'mu), 1575–1624, German religious mystic, a cobbler of Görlitz, in England called also Behmen He was a student of the Bible and was influenced by Paracelsus In his first work, Aurora (1612), he proclaims God as the origin of all creation, in all aspects of which God is manifest Evil results from the striving of single elements of Deity to become the whole, so that conflict ensues as man and nature strive to achieve God, who, in himself, contains all antithetical principles Boehme claimed divine revelation Societies of Behmenites were formed in England, and his work was well known in Germany and Holland The Quakers in England absorbed many of Boehme's followers

Boeotia (bē-ō'shu), Gr Voiotia, region of ancient Greece It lay N of Attica, Megaris, and the Gulf of Corinth The early inhabitants were Thessalians, and legend says they were subject to the Hellenes until CADMUS founded THEBES, which became the capital of an oligarchical republic Actually a number of small cities scattered over the rough country —mountainous in the south, hilly in the north—may have had a sort of confederacy before the Boeotian League was formed (about the 7th cent B C) Thebes dominated the region and the league from the beginning It stood on a sizable plain, as did one of its rivals, Orchomenus The other rival cities were Plataea and Thespiae The history of Boeotia is largely a record of the vain attempts of these cities to escape the domination of Thebes and the attempts of Thebes to prevent encroachments on the region by others of the great city-states Boeotia, therefore, was the scene of various important battles—PLATAEA, LEUCTRA, CORONEA, and CHAERONEA. Athens was able to break up the Boeotian League in 457 B C and attach most of the cities to the Athenian empire, but only briefly Thebes returned to power Later, after the victory of EPAMINONDAS over the Spartans, the history of Boeotia was completely swallowed in that of Thebes The Athenians taunted the Boeotians with being dull and slow-witted, they did not even make an exception for the Boeotian HESIOD but were forced to make one for the mighty PINDAR

Boer (bōōr, bôr) [Dutch,=farmer], inhabitant of South Africa of Dutch descent It is estimated that over 1,000,000 of the people of the Union of South Africa (see SOUTH AFRICA, UNION OF) are Boers The Boers first settled (1652) in what is now CAPE PROVINCE After Great Britain annexed (1806) this territory, many of the Boers departed (1835–40) on the Great Trek (see TREK) and created republics in NATAL, the ORANGE FREE STATE, and the TRANSVAAL Hostility between the Boers and the British resulted in the SOUTH AFRICAN WAR (1899–1902), after which the Boer territories were annexed and the Union of South Africa formed Afrikaans, the local form of Dutch (see LANGUAGE, table), is an official language of the Union along with English There has been some tension between the South Africans of British descent and the Boers, particularly in the times of the First and Second World Wars

Boerhaave, Hermann (bōōr'hävu), 1668–1738, Dutch physician and chemist He was the most renowned practitioner and teacher of his time From 1701 he taught medicine, botany, and chemistry at the Univ of Leiden, where he introduced the method of clinical teaching He wrote Institutiones medicae (1708) and Elementa chemiae (1732)

Boerne (bōr'nē), city (pop 1,271), co seat of Kendall co , S central Texas, on Cibolo Creek and NW of San Antonio, founded c 1850 by Germans, inc as a city 1909 It is a trade center for sheep, goat, and cattle ranches, and its clear air and rugged hills attract tourists Cascade Caverns are near by.

Boeroe, Indonesia see BURU

Boer War. see SOUTH AFRICAN WAR

Boethius, Boetius, or Boece (Anicius Manlius Severinus Boethius) (bō'thēus, bō'shus, bōēs'), c 475–525, Roman philosopher and statesman A notable figure in the public life of Rome, where he was consul in 510, he was honored by the people and by Theodoric, king of the Ostrogoths, whose able minister he became Late in Theodoric's reign false charges of treason were brought against Boethius, who, after imprisonment in Pavia, was sentenced without trial and put to death While in prison he wrote his greatest work, De consolatione philosophiae, partly in verse and partly in prose

His treatise on ancient music, De musica, was long studied with veneration and strongly influenced the course of musical development After his death, certain theological works that were much read were attributed, probably wrongly, to Boethius Thus he was given added repute as a theologian of the Christian faith Learned in the study of the Greek philosophers, he made translations of some of Aristotle's writings and wrote commentaries on some The Consolation of Philosophy was published in the original Latin in various editions, one of the best being the Peiper edition, Leipzig, 1871 It was also translated a number of times—into Anglo-Saxon by King ALFRED, into English by Chaucer and others, including, it is said, Queen Elizabeth A late translation is by H R James, 1897. See H F Stewart Boethius (1891), H. R. Path, The Traditions of Boethius (1935)

Boethius, Hector see BOECE, HECTOR

Boethus (bōĕ'thus), fl 1st half of 2d cent. B C., Greek sculptor of genre subjects and worker in silver He seems to have worked at Rhodes In the writings of Pliny and Pausanias he is mentioned as having made a bronze figure of a boy struggling with a goose and a statue of a seated boy at Olympia The boy with the goose, in the Louvre, is probably one of several existing copies of his figure, the familiar SPINARIO (boy extracting a thorn from his foot) is possibly a copy or an imitation of another statue Boethus is known to have made

Boetus, Roman philosopher see BOETHIUS

Boex, Joseph Henri Honoré, and Séraphin Justin François Boex see ROSNY, J H , AÎNÉ

bog, a very old lake without inlet or outlet which becomes acid and is gradually overgrown with a characteristic vegetation (see also SWAMP) Peat moss or SPHAGNUM grows about the edge of the open water of a bog (PEAT is obtained from old bogs) and out upon the surface With its continued growth, the moss forms a mat upon the water in which other bog plants find a foothold, and humus and soil are slowly built up on the body of the water Because of this formation bogs are sometimes treacherous (quaking bogs shake under the weight of a man) and have occasionally resulted in fatalities when man or animal breaks through the vegetative crust From their extreme acidity, bogs form a natural preservative and have been found a valuable reservoir of animals and plants of earlier times Typical bog plants of today include, besides sphagnum, many orchids, the pitcher plant, sun dew, and cranberry (old bogs are utilized for cranberry cultivation) Because of the reclamation of old boglands by drainage and by their natural filling in, bogs in America are becoming rare, and with them their unique flora

Bogalusa (bōgulōō'su), city (pop 14,604), SE La , near the Pearl river, founded 1906 by lumber interests, inc 1914 Paper, furniture, and tung oil are the chief manufactures There are also pine nurseries and a forestry school

Bogardus, Emory Stephen (bōgär'dus), 1882–, American sociologist, b near Belvidere, Ill., grad. Northwestern Univ (B A , 1908, M A , 1909), Ph D Univ of Chicago, 1911 After 1911 at the Univ of Southern California he organized the department of sociology and from 1923 to 1929 he headed the school of social welfare there In 1927 he became editor of the Journal of Sociology and Social Research His textbooks on sociology and social psychology gained great popularity. He also wrote many other works in sociology

Bogart, Ernest Ludlow (bō'gart), 1870–, American economist, b Yonkers, N Y He was head of the economics department at the Univ of Illinois and president (1931) of the American Economic Association His books include Economic History of the American People (1930, 4th ed , 1947)

Bogdanov, A. (bŭgdä'nŭf), pseud of Aleksandr Aleksandrovich Malinovski (ŭlyĭks,in'durŭlyĭksan'-drùvich mŭlyĭnôf'skĭ), 1873–1928, Russian social philosopher and economist He was a leader (1903–9) of the left wing of the Russian Social Democratic party and after 1905 an active revolutionist With the establishment of the Soviet government he became a leader in education and the "proletarian culture" movement His writings in Russian include several books on philosophy and economics

Bogert, Marston Taylor, 1868–, American organic chemist, b Flushing, N Y He taught at Columbia Univ from 1894 and became professor emeritus in 1939 He has been affiliated with many government agencies and with several government departments in both executive and advisory capacities From 1942 to 1945 he served on the War Production Board His work in the synthesis of organic compounds, particularly of the aromatic compounds, has won international recognition

Boggs, Frank Myers, 1855–1926, American marine painter, b Springfield, Ohio, pupil of Gérôme in Paris He is represented in many French public and private collections Among paintings in American galleries are A Rough Day at Honfleur (Mus of Fine Arts, Boston) and On the Thames (Metropolitan Mus)

Boggs, Lilburn W., 1792–1860, governor of Missouri, b. Lexington, Ky. After serving as state senator (first elected in 1826) and lieutenant governor (elected in 1832), he defeated (1836) William H ASHLEY for the four-year term as governor Boggs established a new state bank, pushed through the completion of a new capitol, and saw the state university chartered, but he was severely criticised for his uncompromising attitude toward the MORMONS, who were driven from Missouri He later moved to California, where, following the ouster of Mexican authorities, he was the chief civilian authority in N California until the state government was established Boghazkeu (bō'ghäskû'ĕ), village, N central Asiatic Turkey. Here were found the principal Hittite inscriptions, and the place seems to have been the chief of the Hittite capitals It is also, by tradition, the site of Pteria, where Croesus and Cyrus the Great fought a great battle The ancient inscriptions were found (1906–7) by Hugo Winckler. The name of the village is also written Boghazkoy.

bog iron ore see LIMONITE

Bognor Regis (bŏg'nur rē'jĭs), urban district (1931 pop 13,521, 1943 estimated pop 19,890), Sussex West, England It is a seaside resort At Felpham, an adjoining village, is the cottage where William Blake lived for three years

Bogomils (bō'gŏmĭlz) original group of the CATHARI They flourished in Bulgaria and the Balkans from the 10th to the 15th cent and even reached Byzantium Their creed, adapted from the PAULICIANS and modified by other Gnostic and Manichaean sources, is attributed to Bogomil, a priest of the 10th cent The movement was intensely nationalistic and political as well as religious and reflected resentment of Byzantine culture, Slavic serfdom, and imperial authority They were known in various countries as Babuns, Phundaits, and Patarenes In the 12th cent the Patarenes were dominant in Bosnia and neighboring lands and began to proselytize in Italy From there, Cathari converted the ALBIGENSES of France Through the combined efforts of the Western and Eastern churches and of the Holy Roman and Byzantine empires, the Bogomils were weakened and suppressed They vanished in the expansion of Islam, but bits of their ideas and folklore lingered long in Slavic lands See V N Sharenkoff, A Study of Manichaeism in Bulgaria (1927)

Bogorodsk, RSFSR see NOGINSK

Bogotá (bōgōtä'), city (pop 325,658), central Colombia, capital and largest city of Colombia. The region was a Chibcha center before the city was founded by JIMÉNEZ DE QUESADA on Aug 6, 1538 and called by him Santa Fe de Bogotá (a name derived from the Chibcha chief, Bacatá) It is in a broad valley high (alt 8,660 ft) in the eastern cordillera of the Andes Surrounding mountains rise some 2,000 ft above this green and fertile valley, where several rivers join to make the Río Bogotá, a tributary of the Magdalena Bogotá has considerable rainfall and a cool climate Until the first commercial air transportation in South America was begun here in 1919, it was, however, accessible only by a journey of more than a week up the MAGDALENA or across the central and western cordilleras from BUENAVENTURA As capital of the colonial viceroyalty of New Granada and headquarters for the scientific investigations of José Celestino Mutis and others, as well as the site of the first astronomical observatory in South America, the city was an early intellectual center of the arts and scientific learning, Alexander von Humboldt in 1801 called it the Athens of America The tradition has been maintained, outstanding among many cultural institutions are the new national observatory and the university The intellectual force of the French Revolution was felt early in Bogotá, where Antonio NARIÑO was a forerunner of the revolt of Spanish America against Spain The actual leader of the first successful revolt in Bogotá in 1810 was José Acevedo y Gómez, and later Simón Bolívar and Santander were prominent in the city It was made capital of Greater Colombia when independence was won and after the dissolution of the union remained the capital of Colombia It has grown as the political, financial, and social but not the economic capital of the republic, while there is some industrial and considerable commercial activity, better location and more extensive resources have given BARRANQUILLA and MEDELLÍN industrial advantages Bogotá has broad modern avenues and narrow colonial streets and bright modern office buildings and handsome Spanish colonial churches In April, 1948, during the Ninth International Conference of the American States, a riot broke out after the assassination of the liberal leader, Jorge Eliécer Gaitán, and resulted in considerable damage The conference, however, continued and resulted in the founding of the Organization of American States

Bogota (bugō'tu), borough (pop 7,346), NE N J., SE of Hackensack, inc 1894 Corrugated containers are made here

Bogucice, Poland see KATOWICE.

Bohan (bō'hăn) [Heb ,=thumb], son of Reuben. Joshua 15 6, 18 17.

Bohemia, Czech Cechy (chĕkhĭ), westernmost province (20,102 sq mi ; pop 5,627,181) of Czechoslovakia PRAGUE is capital of both Czechoslovakia and Bohemia The SUDETES separate Bohemia from Silesia on the northeast, the ERZGEBIRGE, from Saxony on the northwest, and the BOHEMIAN FOREST, from Bavaria on the west In the south, Bohemia borders on Austria, and in the east on Moravia Bohemia is drained by the Elbe and the Moldau. Its hills and rolling plains are very fertile, producing grain, flax, fruit, and the famous hops used in the breweries of PILSEN Mining (coal, silver, copper, lead, and, at JACHYMOV, radium and uranium) and textile and glass manufactures are particularly important in the mountain districts Prague is the center of a region of heavy industries, including the city of KLADNO Bohemia is also famous for its spas and beautiful resorts, among which CARLSBAD and MARIENBAD are the most celebrated Since the expulsion, after 1945, of most of the German-speaking minority, the population is overwhelmingly Czech Bohemia is named after the Boii, a people, probably Celtic, who were displaced (1st–5th cent A D) by Slavic settlers, the Czechs Subjugated by the Avars, the Czechs freed themselves under the leadership of Samo, a Frank, who ruled them till his death (c 658) The legendary Queen Libussa and her husband, the peasant PREMYSL, founded the first Bohemian dynasty Christianity was introduced (9th cent) by SS CYRIL AND METHODIUS while Bohemia was part of the ephemeral empire of Moravia St WENCESLAUS (d 935), the first great Bohemian ruler, acknowledged himself a vassal of the Holy Roman Empire Later Premyslide rulers acquired MORAVIA and most of SILESIA German influence in Bohemia increased with the growth of the towns and the rising trade between East and West Silver, mined chiefly at KUTNA HORA, greatly added to the wealth and prestige of the dukes, who by the 12th cent began to take part in the imperial elections In 1198 OTTOCAR I was crowned king of Bohemia, and the royal title became permanently attached to the crown The conquests and acquisitions of OTTOCAR II (1253–78) brought Bohemia to the height of its power and its greatest extent (from the Oder to the Adriatic) Ottocar fostered German immigration in order to strengthen the towns against the nobles His defeat by RUDOLF I of Hapsburg cost Bohemia all his conquests After the Premyslide line became extinct (1306), JOHN OF LUXEMBURG was elected king in 1310 The reign of his son, Emperor CHARLES IV (1346–78), was the golden age of Bohemia His Golden Bull (1356) permanently established the kings of Bohemia as ELECTORS In the reigns of his successors, Emperors WENCESLAUS and SIGISMUND, religious, political, and social tensions exploded in the movement, both religious and nationalist, of the HUSSITES The resulting HUSSITE WARS led to the defeat (1434) of the radical TABORITES at the hands of the UTRAQUISTS—the moderate Hussite wing favored by the great nobles In 1436, by the so-called Compactata, the Utraquists returned to communion with the Roman Catholic Church and established Utraquism as the national religion of Bohemia Meanwhile the crown had passed to ALBERT II, a Hapsburg, and from him to LADISLAUS V of Hungary (in Bohemia Ladislaus I) GEORGE OF PODEBRAD actually ruled for Ladislaus and was elected to succeed him as king in 1458 On his death (1471) the crown reverted to the kings of Hungary—ULADISLAUS II (Ladislaus II), MATTHIAS CORVINUS, and LOUIS II The nobles profited from the disorders of the period and in 1487 secured for themselves vast privileges, reducing the peasantry to virtual serfdom The accession (1526) of Archduke Ferdinand (later Emperor FERDINAND I) began the Hapsburg domination of Bohemia which ended only in 1918 Ferdinand began the gradual process by which Bohemia was deprived of self-rule He also introduced the Jesuits in order to secure the return of Bohemia to Roman Catholicism The religious situation in Bohemia remained explosive The conservative wing of the Utraquists having become almost indistinguishable from the Roman Church, there had arisen a frankly Protestant movement, the Bohemian Brethren (see MORAVIAN CHURCH) The Brethren and their close allies, the Lutherans, had made great gains and won from Ferdinand's successor, Emperor Maximilian II, equality with the Utraquists by inducing him to declare (1567) that the Compactata no longer were the law of the land RUDOLF II was furthermore forced to grant freedom of religion by the so-called Letter of Majesty (Majestätsbrief) of 1609 When, in 1618, Emperor Matthias disregarded the Majestätsbrief, members of the Bohemian diet revolted and emphasized their position by throwing two imperial councilors out of the windows of Hradcin Castle (Defenestration of Prague, May 23, 1618) Matthias's son (later Emperor FERDINAND II) was declared deposed and FREDERICK THE WINTER KING was elected king of Bohemia Frederick and the Protestants were crushed in the battle of the WHITE MOUNTAIN (1620) by Ferdinand II The Protestants were suppressed, and in 1627 Bohemia was formally declared a Hapsburg crownland, its diet being reduced to a consultative role In the THIRTY YEARS WAR, which was closely connected with these events, Bohemia was laid waste, and after the Peace of Westphalia (1648) a series of ruthlessly repressive measures was enacted Forcible Germanisation, oppressive taxation, and absentee landownership reduced the Czechs, except a few favored magnates, to degradation and misery The suppression (1749) of the separate chancellery at Prague by MARIA THERESA and the introduction of German as sole official language completed the process JOSEPH II, though he freed the serfs and permitted freedom of worship, drew upon himself the hatred of the Czechs for his rigorous Germanisation of the country His successor, LEOPOLD II, tried to conciliate the Czechs, he was the last ruler to be crowned king of Bohemia (1791) The 19th cent brought a rebirth of Czech nationalism Under the leadership of PALACKY a Slavic congress assembled at Prague in the Revolution of 1848, but by 1849 absolute Austrian domination had been forcibly restored The establishment (1867) of the AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN MONARCHY thoroughly disappointed Czech aspirations Concessions were made (1879) by the Austrian minister TAAFFE, Czech delegates entered the parliament at Vienna However, full independence was now the Czech aim This was reached at the end of the First World War under the guidance of T G MASARYK, founder of CZECHOSLOVAKIA See FRANZ, Graf von Lützow, Bohemia (1896), Frantisek Palacky, Geschichte von Böhmen (5 vols, 1836–67), Adolf Bachmann, Geschichte Böhmens (2 vols, 1899–1905), R J Kerner, Bohemia in the Eighteenth Century (1932)

Bohemian Forest, Czech Český Les (chĕs'kē lĕs'), Ger Böhmerwald (bō'murvalt), mountain range along the border of Bohemia, Czechoslovakia, and Bavaria, Germany The Czech name for its southern section is Sumava (shōō'mävu) A thickly wooded area, it reaches its highest point in the Arber, 4,780 ft high, in Bavaria

Bohemian literature see CZECH LITERATURE

Bohemond I (bō'humŏnd), c 1056–1111, prince of Antioch (1099–1111) a leader in the First CRUSADE, elder son of ROBERT GUISCARD With his father he fought (1081–85) against the Byzantine emperor ALEXIUS I When his father's duchy of Apulia passed to his younger brother Roger, Bohemond made war and finally obtained S Apulia as a fief In 1096 he went on crusade He swore the oath of fealty to Alexius at Constantinople (1097) and in 1098 at the siege of ANTIOCH devised the stratagem by which the city was captured He subsequently made himself prince of Antioch, over the opposition of Raymond IV of Toulouse, leader of the crusade, and in defiance of his oath to Alexius Captured by the Moslems (1100), he was released in 1103, and in 1109 he was defeated by them at Harran Returning to Europe, he married the daughter of Philip I of France and secured support for a crusade against Alexius, by whom he was defeated (1108) and forced to reaffirm his vassalage He did not return to Antioch, and his relative Tancred was regent for him See biography by R B Yewdale (1925)

Böhlau, Helene (hĕlä'nu bū'lou), 1859 , German novelist Born and reared in Weimar, she wrote charming stories of Goethe's time, Ratsmädelgeschichten [tales of a councilor's child] (1888) and Altweimarische Geschichten [Old Weimar tales] (1897, 1903) She married a European who became a Moslem and spent her life in the Near East Her realistic novels, often feministic in tone, include Das Recht der Mutter [a mother's right] (1897) and the autobiographical Isebrus (1911)

Böhl de Faber, Cecilia see CABALLERO, FERNÁN.

Bohm, Max (bōm), 1868–1923, American marine, figure, and mural painter, b Cleveland, studied at the Cleveland School of Art and in Paris His earlier marine pieces, such as Crossing the Bar and En Mer, were exhibited with success at the Paris Salon For 12 years he painted and lectured in London and Paris and in 1911 produced his celebrated group portrait, The Family (Luxembourg Mus, Paris) Nature and Imagination and The Evening Meal are in the Metropolitan Museum He is also represented in the National Gallery, Washington, D C , Detroit and Minneapolis art galleries, the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, and the Cleveland courthouse

Böhme, Jakob see BOEHME, JAKOB

Böhmerwald see BOHEMIAN FOREST.

Böhmisch-Leipa, see CESKA LIPA

Böhm von Bawerk, Eugen (oigän' bŏm' fŭn ba'vĕrk), 1851–1914, Austrian economist, a leader of the so-called Austrian school Rejecting the standard theory of value, he believed in a system founded on a final utility concept and held that interest results from a low valuation of future goods as compared with present goods His books, Kapital und Kapitalzins (2 parts, 1884–89, Eng tr , Capital and Interest, 1890) and Positive Theorie des Kapitales (1889), embodied his beliefs.

Bohol (bōhōl'), island (1,491 sq mi , 1939 pop 449,549), Philippine Islands, N of Mindanao and between Cebu and Leyte. Rice, corn, and hemp are grown, and manganese is mined

Bohr, Niels Henrik David (nēls' hän'rēk dä'vōdh bōr'), 1885–, Danish physicist, Ph D Univ of Copenhagen, 1911 He carried on research on the structure of the atom at the Cavendish Laboratory under Sir James J Thomson and at Manchester under Lord Ernest RUTHERFORD Bohr developed the concept that the atom consists of a small nucleus (in which almost the whole mass of the atom is contained) and electrons which travel in planetary orbits about the nucleus and at some distance from it He reconciled the quantum theory with this concept of atomic structure In 1916 Bohr became professor of theoretical physics at the Univ of Copenhagen, and in 1920 he was made director of the Institute of Theoretical Physics, which he was instrumental in founding He received the 1922 Nobel Prize in Physics When he visited the United States in 1938 and 1939, Bohr told American scientists of his belief, based on experiments reported by German scientists, that the uranium atom could be split into approximately equal halves This was verified by scientists at Columbia Univ Bohr returned to Denmark but fled from the Nazi-occupied country in 1943 He gave valuable assistance in the atomic-bomb research at Los Alamos, N Mex , and in 1945 again returned to Denmark His writings include Theory of Spectra and Atomic Constitution (1922) and Atomic Theory and the Description of Nature (1934) See Helge Holst and H A Kramers, The Atom and the Bohr Theory of Its Structure (Eng tr , 1923)

Bohrod, Aaron (bō'rŏd), 1907–, American painter, b Chicago, studied at the Art Institute of Chicago and in New York under John Sloan, Boardman Robinson, and Kenneth Hayes Miller He was awarded two Guggenheim fellowships His well-known Landscape near Chicago is characteristic in its portrayal of the backyards of American civilization Bohrod is represented in the Art Institute of Chicago, Univ of Chicago, and Whitney Museum, New York

Böhtlingk, Otto von (ō'tō fŭn bŭt'lĭngk), 1815–1904, German philologist He was the senior editor of an important Sanskrit lexicon (7 vols , 1855–75)

Bohun, Henry de, 1st earl of Hereford (bōon, hĕ'rufurd), 1176 1220, English nobleman, grandson of Humphrey de Bohun, founder of a great Norman family in England Although King John had granted Henry de Bohun the marcher lordship of Hereford in 1199, Henry was one of the barons who forced the king to accept the Magna Carta in 1215 and fought against him in the ensuing civil war He died on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

Bohun, Humphrey V de, 2d earl of Hereford and 1st earl of Essex, d 1274, English nobleman, son of Henry de Bohun A member of the household of Henry III, he inherited the earldom of Essex from a maternal uncle, and in 1242 he went with Henry III on his French campaign Later, however, he joined the baronial party (1258) and was one of 24 men appointed by the Parliament at Oxford to reform the government In the BARONS' WAR he led the barons of the Welsh Marches who returned (1263) to the side of the king against Simon de Montfort, and he was captured (1264) at Lewes. He survived to enjoy the king's favor

Bohun, Humphrey VII de, 3d earl of Hereford and 2d earl of Essex, d 1298, English nobleman He was constable of England and with Roger Bigod, earl of Norfolk, led the baronial opposition to Edward I which forced the king to sign the important confirmation of the charters (1297)

Bohun, Humphrey VIII de, 4th earl of Hereford and 3d earl of Essex, 1276 1322, English nobleman; son of Humphrey VII de Bohun One of the lords ordainers who attempted to curb Edward II (1310), he helped in the execution (1312) of the hated Piers GAVESTON He fought for Edward at Bannockburn (1314), was captured, and was exchanged He was killed at Boroughbridge fighting on the baronial side against the king and the two Hugh le Despensers

Bohuslan, Swed Bohuslän (bōō'hŭslĕn), historical province of SW Sweden, conquered from Denmark by Charles X of Sweden in 1658 It is now administratively part of GOTEBORG AND BOHUS CO In early times it was known as Viken, numerous prehistoric remains have been found The events described in Beowulf took place mainly in Bohuslan

Boiardo or Bojardo, Matteo Maria (mat-tā'ō marē'a bōyar'dō), c 1434–1494, Italian poet, count of Scandiano He was a favorite at the court of Ferrara and was governor of Modena and Reggio Besides a comedy, Timone, he wrote lyric verse and the famous epic, Orlando Innamorato The vigorous beauty of this transformation of the ROLAND story was lost in the revision of the poem by Francesco Berni which supplanted Boiardo's own work until the 20th cent Boiardo left his Orlando unfinished ARIOSTO continued the story in Orlando Furioso

Boieldieu, François Adrien (fräswä' ädrĕē' bwaldyû'), 1775–1834, French composer He had studied with the organist of the cathedral in Rouen and had composed one successful opera, Le Calife de Bagdad (1800), when he went to St Petersburg and conducted (1803–11) the Imperial Opera After his return to Paris his graceful, romantic opéras comiques—such as Jean de Paris (1812) and his masterpiece, La Dame blanche (1825)—were very popular He taught piano, and later composition, at the Paris Conservatoire

boil or furuncle, painful infection in the skin, caused by bacteria (usually Staphylococcus aureus) The bacteria enter by way of sebaceous glands or hair follicles Infection occurs more readily in areas subject to local irritation (e g , by a collar or a belt) and in individuals who have been weakened by diseases such as diabetes, nephritis, and typhoid fever Boils usually appear as small red elevations, tender to touch, which gradually grow larger, becoming progressively more painful The center of the boil becomes white or yellow because of the presence of pus, which will eventually discharge spontaneously It is dangerous to incise or squeeze a boil located on the face, lips, or nose because of the rapid spread of infection which may follow such treatment The application of hot, moist dressings in order to localize the infection preparatory to incision by a physician is an accepted method of treatment Autogenous vaccines have been successfully administered, especially in recurring cases

Boileau-Despréaux, Nicolas (nēkôlä' bwälō'-dāprā'ō'), 1636–1711, French literary critic and poet He is the author of L'Art poétique (1674), a verse treatise on poetics, Le Lutrin (1683), a mock epic, Satires (1st collected ed , 1716) and Epîtres (1st collected ed , 1701), after Horace, and Les Héros de roman (1688), a dialogue in literary criticism Boileau was the spokesman of CLASSICISM, drawing his principles from his contemporaries, especially his friends—Racine (his colleague as royal historiographer), Molière (whom he defended against defamers), and La Fontaine Later he was regarded as a literary lawgiver, revered in the 18th cent , detested by the romantics Boileau's poetic repute rests on realistic satires of manners, Le Lutrin, Satire III, Satire VI, and Satire X A master of epigram, he was a zealous polemicist, notably in quarrels with DESMARETS and PERRAULT See edition of Les Héros de roman by T F Crane (1902), Sister Marie Philip Haley, Racine and the "Art poétique" of Boileau (1938)

boiler, device for generating steam It consists of two parts, the firebox, or furnace, in which fuel is burned, and the boiler proper, an enclosed vessel in which water is heated and changed to steam A STEAM ENGINE is driven by the steam generated under pressure in a boiler The amount of steam which can be generated per hour depends upon the extent of combustion of the fuel in the firebox and upon the heating-surface area of the boiler proper Since the extent of combustion of the fuel in a firebox is largely dependent upon the quantity of air available, i e , upon the draft, a sufficient supply of air is an important consideration in boiler construction In some large installations the incoming air is preheated by the waste heat of the flue gases, and in order to increase the speed of combustion a forced draft (air at higher than atmospheric pressure) is often used Two types of boilers are most common—fire-tube boilers, containing long steel tubes through which the hot gases from the firebox pass and around which the water to be changed to steam circulates, and water-tube boilers, in which the conditions are reversed The SAFETY VALVE is used to prevent explosions by releasing steam if the pressure becomes too great The construction of boilers in the United States is governed by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers' Boiler Code, which gives specifications for materials, sizes, and parts See G F Gebhardt, Steam Power Plant Engineering (6th ed , 1925), T W Croft, ed , Steam Boilers (revised by R B Purdy, 1937) boiling point, that temperature at which a substance changes its state from liquid to gas The change is accompanied by the characteristic bubbling commonly described as "boiling" Under standard pressure (15 lb per square inch) different chemical elements and compounds undergo this change at different temperatures, each substance having, at that pressure, a specific boiling point which is included among its properties Change in the pressure on a liquid affects the boiling point If this pressure is decreased, the boiling point is lowered For example, water will boil at a lower temperature at the top of a mountain where the atmospheric pressure on its surface is less than it will at sea level where the pressure is greater In the laboratory, liquids can be made to boil or vaporize at temperatures far below their normal boiling points by heating them in vacuum flasks under greatly reduced pressure On the other hand, if the pressure is increased the boiling point is raised, the liquid vaporizing at a higher temperature For this reason, it is customary when the boiling point of a substance is given to include the pressure at which it is observed, if that pressure is other than standard, i e , 15 lb per square inch When the temperature of a substance has been raised to its boiling point and heat is applied continuously, no further rise in temperature is observed until all the liquid has been changed to a gas, i e , until VAPORIZATION is complete The tiny bubbles first seen when the temperature of a liquid is raised are composed of the gases, such as air, that are held in solution in the liquid. Later, however, when these have been driven off larger bubbles appear about the point at which the heat is being applied These are composed of the vapor of the substance As the pressure of the vapor increases they are able finally to overcome the downward pressure of the atmosphere and force their way upward through the liquid to escape at the surface

Boisbaudran, Paul Émile Lecoq de (pôl' āmēl' lukôk' dŭ bwäbôdrā'), 1838–1912, French discoverer of the elements GALLIUM, SAMARIUM, and DYSPROSIUM He also made contributions in the field of spectroscopy

Boisbrûlés (bwabrülā') [from Fr =burnt wood], name given the part-Indian descendants of the fur traders in W Canada, because of their dark complexion The Bois-brûlés or Brulés were in the early 19th cent an important social group in the West and were particularly notable in the Red River Settlement and in Riel's Rebellion In the later 19th cent they were absorbed into the generality of the population

Bois de Boulogne (bwä' du bōōlō'nyu), park in Paris, bordering on the western suburb of Neuilly-sur-Seine A favorite pleasure ground, it contains the race courses of Auteuil and Longchamps and many delightful promenades and bridle paths

Boise (boi'sē, -zē), city (pop 26,130), state capital, and co seat of Ada co, SW Idaho, largest city of the state, on the Boise river A gold rush to the Boise Basin and the establishment of a military post in 1863 led to the founding of Boise City, which grew as a distributing center for miners and became capital of Idaho Territory in 1864 Later, particularly with the building of Arrowrock Dam (1911–15), the region was developed for farming, and Boise drew wealth from orchards and fields rather than mines The BOISE PROJECT has increased the agricultural yield The city has creameries, mills, packing plants, and the like and is a communications center It is not on the site of the fur-trading post, Fort Boise (see BOISE, FORT)

Boise, river rising in three main forks in SW Idaho, in the mountains E of Boise The North Fork and the Middle Fork meet some miles above the junction with the South Fork, which is a few miles above Arrowrock Dam The united stream flows generally NW past Boise, Caldwell, and Parma, to join the Snake river at the Oregon border The river was first explored by the Astorian expedition under Wilson P Hunt in 1811 and was in early days called Reed's river (see BOISE, FORT) Today it is utilized in the BOISE PROJECT

Boise, Fort, fur-trading post, SW Idaho John Reed, a trader from Astoria, established near the mouth of the Boise a post at which he was killed (1814) by the Indians, consequently the Boise was in early times called Reed's river Probably near this site Donald McKenzie founded (1820) a short-lived post In 1834 the Hudson's Bay Company built Fort Boise on the Boise a few miles from its mouth to rival Fort Hall (see HALL, FORT) In 1838 it was moved to the east bank of the Snake near the mouth of the Boise It was much visited by Indians, travelers, and Oregon-bound settlers Partly destroyed by flood in 1853, it was abandoned in 1855.

Boise City, town (pop 1,144), co seat of Cimarron co, NW Okla, in the Panhandle wheat-growing and dairying area, inc 1925

Boise project, SW Idaho and E Oregon, in the Boise, Payette, and Snake river valleys Developed by the Bureau of Reclamation, it irrigates some 400,000 acres The Arrowrock division, between the Boise and Snake rivers, is supplied with water by several dams Arrowrock Dam (built 1911–15) in the Boise river, E of Boise, is 354 ft high and 1,100 ft long and forms a reservoir c 17 mi long The three Deer Flat dams create Lake Lowell near Nampa, a canal brings water from the Boise The Anderson Ranch Dam (est 1948) in the South Fork of the Boise is 456 ft high and 1,350 ft long and will supply the Arrowrock division with supplemental water and power The small Notus division, N of the Boise between Caldwell and Notus, gets water from the return flow of the Arrowrock division, from Lake Lowell, and from the Payette division The Payette division, between the Boise and the Payette, has the Black Canyon Diversion Dam (est 1924) in the Payette near Emmett, the Deadwood Dam (est 1931) in the Deadwood river, a tributary of the Payette, c 25 mi SE of Cascade, and the Cascade Dam (est 1948) in the North Fork of the Payette near Cascade The plant at Black Canyon supplies some power to the MINIDOKA PROJECT and to the OWYHEE project

Boisguilbert, Pierre le Pesant, sieur de (pyĕr' lŭ puzä' syür' dŭ bwägělbĕr'), 1646–1714, French economist and statesman A local official of Rouen after 1689, he became a national figure when he insistently forced his advice on Chamillart, controller general to Louis XIV Seeing the results of military expenditures in heavy taxation and oppression of the poor, Boisguilbert argued that consumption by the masses is as important to the national economy as their production and urged an income tax of 10 percent, particularly in Le Detail de la France (1695) and Factum de la France (1707). Chamillart had him exiled for six months in 1707. See biography by H V Roberts (1935)

Bois-le-Duc, Netherlands see 's HERTOGENBOSCH.

Boito, Arrigo (är'rēgō bō'ētō), 1842–1918, Italian composer and librettist His opera Mefistofele (1868; revised 1875), although a failure, is considered important as a step toward the stylistic maturity of Italian opera His masterpieces are his librettos for Verdi's Otello and Falstaff He also was librettist for Ponchielli's Gioconda and wrote a few novels and poems

Bojardo, Matteo Maria, see BOIARDO

Bojer, Johan (yō'han boi'ur), 1872–, Norwegian novelist and dramatist His first work, A Procession (1896), was well received With The Power of a Lie (1903, Eng tr, 1938) and The Great Hunger (1916, Eng tr, 1918) his reputation as a portrayer of Norwegian contemporary life was established in Europe and America In The Last of the Vikings (1921, Eng tr, 1923), a story of the Lofoten fishermen, and in Folk by the Sea (1929, Eng tr, 1931, American title, The Everlasting Struggle), Bojer exhibited greater depth of characterization and won the long-delayed recognition of Norwegian critics Among his later novels are By Day and By Night (1935, Eng tr, 1937) and The King's Men (1938, Eng tr, 1940) See Carl Gad, Johan Bojer (Eng tr, 1920)

Bok, Edward William, 1863–1930, American editor, b Helder, Netherlands He was brought to the United States in 1870 As editor, 1889–1919, he made of the Ladies' Home Journal one of the leading magazines in America for women, introducing many features since common in women's magazines Of his several books, his autobiographical Americanization of Edward Bok (1920) was most popular and won a Pulitzer Prize He gave liberally to further peace, endowed the Woodrow Wilson professorship of literature at Princeton, and underwrote broadcasts of the Philadelphia Orchestra to schools He is buried at the base of the memorial Singing Tower, Iron Mt, Fla

Boker, George Henry (bō'kur), 1823–90, American poet and playwright, b Philadelphia, grad Princeton, 1842 Calaymos, his first drama, was produced in London in 1849 and in Philadelphia in 1851 The Betrothal was given in Philadelphia in 1850 His best plays were Leonor de Guzman (1853) and Francesca da Rimini (1855), based on the story of Francesca and Paolo His sonnets rank high in American literature See his Plays and Poems (2 vols, 1856) and Sonnets (ed by E S Bradley, 1929), biography by E S Bradley (1927)

Bokhara, Uzbek SSR see BUKHARA

Boksburg (bŏks'bûrg), city (pop 53,451), S Transvaal, Union of South Africa, in the Witwatersrand It is a gold- and coal-mining center

Bol, Ferdinand (fĕr'dĭnänt bōl'), 1616–80, Dutch portrait and religious painter He studied with Rembrandt in Amsterdam, and his early work has sometimes been confused with that of his master Later, as a successful portrait painter in Amsterdam, he developed a cooler palette and more surface finish Splendid examples of his work are in many European galleries, particularly those of Germany and the Netherlands Among his well-known works are The Women at the Sepulcher (Copenhagen), Regents at the Leprosy Hospital, his masterpiece (town hall, Amsterdam), and Regents of the Poor House and Portrait of Admiral de Ruyter (Rijks Mus)

Bolan Pass or Bholan Pass (both bōlan'), N central Baluchistan prov, W Pakistan The pass, c 5,880 ft at its highest, is used by the railroad and the highway running from Quetta to the frontier of Afghanistan The Bolan Pass was repeatedly a route for invading India

Boldini, Giovanni (jōvän'nē bōldē'nē), 1845–1931, Italian painter His work is brilliant and sparkling and essentially Parisian His portraits of women are especially noteworthy Among his chief works are The Dispatch Bearer and Gossip (Metropolitan Mus), Kitchen Garden, Portrait of a Lady (Luxembourg Mus, Paris), and a portrait of Whistler (Brooklyn, N Y, Mus)

Boldrewood, Rolf see BROWNE, THOMAS ALEXANDER

bolero (bōlā'rō), national dance of Spain, introduced c 1780 by Sebastian Zerezo, or Cerezo Of Moorish origin, it resembles the FANDANGO It is in 2-4 or 3-4 time for solo or couple dancing and is performed to the accompaniment of castanets, guitar, and the voices of the dancers Ravel's Bolero is in this rhythm

Boleslaus I (Boleslaus the Brave) (bō'lĭslôs), Pol Boleslaw Chrobry, c 966–1025, Polish ruler (992–1025), the first to call himself king He succeeded his father, MIESZKO I, as duke of Poland, seized the territories left to his two brothers under their father's will, and conquered land from Bohemia, Hungary, and Pomerania In 1000 he obtained the elevation of GNIEZNO into a metropolitan see, thus emancipating the Polish church from German control After the death of Emperor Otto III, Boleslaus overran Meissen and the East Mark, when Emperor HENRY II refused to confirm him in possession of these territories, he seized Bohemia (1003) Expelled from Bohemia in 1004, Boleslaus repelled a series of invasions of Poland and under the Peace of Bautzen (1018) received Lusatia as a fief of the Holy Roman Empire. Subsequently he campaigned successfully against Kiev. Though Boleslaus failed in his attempt to unite all northern Slavs under Polish leadership, he ranks among Poland's foremost rulers He reorganized the country's administration, systematized taxation, and created a large standing army His successor was MIESZKO II

Boleslaus II (Boleslaus the Bold), Pol Boleslaw Smialy, c 1039–1081, Polish ruler (1058–79), king of Poland (1076–79), son and successor of Casimir I He asserted Polish power in Bohemia, Hungary, and South Russia by interfering in their civil wars As a reward for his submission to papal guidance in his foreign policy he was crowned king in 1076, however, he became involved in a sharp conflict with the Polish clergy and nobility and killed (or procured the death of) Stanislaus, bishop of Cracow Excommunicated and deprived of his title by Pope Gregory VII, he fled to Hungary, where he died in obscurity His brother, Ladislaus Herman, succeeded him

Boleslaus III, 1085–1138, king of Poland (1102–38) The kingdom had been divided by his father, Ladislaus Herman, between him and his bastard half brother Zbigniew, who was supported by the emperor and other powers, Boleslaus defeated Zbigniew and reunited the kingdom He routed (1109) Emperor Henry V at Hundsfeld and warred against Bohemia, Hungary, and Kiev Having also extended his sway over Pomerania, which MIESZKO II had lost to Denmark, Boleslaus entrusted the Christianization of its inhabitants to the bishop of Bamberg In 1135 he signed at Merseburg a treaty with Emperor Lothair II, under which he was invested with Pomerania and Rügen as fiefs of the empire Vainly seeking to prevent the disintegration of his kingdom, Boleslaus altered the law of succession of his dynasty (see PIAST) Among his sons, CASIMIR II was the most notable Boleslawiec, Lower Silesia see BUNZLAU.

Boleyn, Anne (bōō'lĭn), 15077–1536, queen consort of HENRY VIII, his second wife and the mother of Queen Elizabeth. She was the daughter of Sir Thomas Boleyn, later earl of Wiltshire and Ormonde, and on her mother's side she was related to the Howard family. After spending some years at the French court, she returned to England and came to the English court in 1521 Soon Henry fell deeply in love with her Whether he had already determined to divorce Katharine of Aragon before he met Anne cannot be determined, but in 1527 a commission was organized to inquire into the validity of Henry's first marriage By 1532 Anne was already his acknowledged mistress, and they were secretly married in Jan, 1533 In April the convocation of the Church declared Henry's marriage to Katharine null and void, and Anne was crowned queen The marriage was extremely unpopular in England and was not recognized in Europe The birth of Anne's only child, Elizabeth, born in 1533, did nothing to revive Henry's passion for his wife, which was already cooling Determined to marry Jane Seymour, Henry had Anne brought to trial in 1536 for adultery with various men, including her brother Whether she was guilty has never been determined, but a court, headed by her uncle Thomas Howard, duke of Norfolk, condemned her, and she was beheaded Two days before her death her marriage was declared void by the Church of England See the often published love letters of Henry VIII, biography by Paul Friedman (1884), Albert F Pollard, Henry VIII (1902) For fiction concerning Anne, see Francis Hackett, Queen Anne Boleyn (1939), and a play by Maxwell Anderson, Anne of the Thousand Days (1948)

Bolgari. see BULGARS, EASTERN

Bolingbroke, Henry of see HENRY IV (England)

Bolingbroke, Henry St. John, Viscount. see ST JOHN, HENRY

Bolintineanu, Dmitri (dumē'trē bō"lēntēnyä'nōō), 1826–72, Rumanian novelist, playwright, and journalist He is best known for his poetry contained in Rumanian Melodies (1858)

Bolitho, William (bōlĭ'thō), 1890–1930, British journalist and author, b Capetown, South Africa. His real name was William Bolitho Ryall After a poverty-stricken youth, he studied at the university in Capetown, worked his way to London, fought in the British army, and became a writer for London and New York newspapers His books include political comment, such as Italy under Mussolini (1926), and the collected biographical studies, Murder for Profit (1926) and Twelve against the Gods (1929) A play, Overture—1920, was produced in New York in 1930 after his death. See biographical novel by his wife, Sybil Bolitho, My Shadow as I Pass (1934)

Bolívar, Simón (bōlē'vär, Span. sēmōn' bōlē'vär), 1783–1830, South American revolutionist, called the Liberator, b Caracas, of a wealthy Creole family. When the revolution against Spain broke out in 1810, he became an enthusiastic patriot, but in 1812 a combination of circumstances brought about the defeat of his force at Puerto Cabello This ill fortune strengthened discord among the revolutionists, and Bolívar was one of the men who seized and imprisoned the leader, Francisco de MIRANDA. Bolívar went to Cartagena, where he cooperated with the forces of Antonio NARIÑO and won notable victories. The patriots were, however, scattered and crushed again in 1815 by a royalist army under Pablo MORILLO. Bolívar, escaping to the West Indies, continued the struggle and returned with a band of guerrilla fighters in Dec., 1816. He captured Margarita Island, occupied part of the lower Orinoco basin, and at Angostura (now CIUDAD BOLÍVAR) a congress elected him president of Venezuela. Here in 1819 he conceived a bold plan of splitting the royalist forces. With a large force—made up largely of llaneros under SANTANDER and PÁEZ—he crossed the flooded Apure valley, climbed to the bitterly cold Andean passes and defeated the surprised Spanish forces at BOYACÁ. He was elected president of Colombia or Greater Colombia (present Colombia, Venezuela, Ecuador, and Panama). In June, 1821, his victory at Carabobo sealed the freedom of the north, and Bolívar entered Caracas in triumph, but Ecuador was not taken from the Spanish until he and José Antonio de SUCRE won the battle of Pichincha in May, 1822. Bolívar then undertook to free Peru and the present Bolivia, where the forces of that other great liberator, the Argentine José de SAN MARTÍN, were already operating. At Guayaquil in July, 1822, there were secret meetings of Bolívar and San Martín. Just what occurred there is unknown, though speculation still continues after a century and a quarter. The upshot, in any case, was the withdrawal of San Martín. Bolívar was the commander in chief of the patriot forces that won at Junín in 1824. A little later the battle of AYACUCHO marked the final triumph of the revolution in South America. Bolívar was without rival as the most powerful man of the continent. The president of Greater Colombia, he also organized the government of Peru and created Bolivia. In 1826 he expanded his vision of a united Spanish America further by calling a conference of all the new republics at Panama, though little was actually accomplished, the meeting was the beginning of Pan-Americanism. There was much murmuring against his power and his somewhat highhanded methods, he was widely accused of imperial designs, and revolts and separatist movements shook the union. Bolívar declared himself dictator in 1828, and the next night, Sept. 24, 1828 ("the September night"), he barely escaped assassination by jumping from a high window and hiding. He was successful in a campaign against Peru to prevent Peruvian interference in Bolivia and Colombia, but he could not halt the crumbling of Greater Colombia. Venezuela and Ecuador seceded, and Bolívar, broken in health and disillusioned ("We have ploughed the sea," he said), resigned the presidency in 1830. Soon afterward he died of tuberculosis near Santa Marta. He died poor and bitterly hated, but it was not long before South Americans again began to pay tribute to this passionate, headstrong idealist, who is today revered as the greatest of Latin American heroes. See biographies by T. R. Ybarra (1929), Hildegarde Angell (1930), Thomas Rourke (1939), and Gerhart Masur (1948).

Bolívar (bōlē'vur). 1 City (pop. 2,636), co. seat of Polk co., SW Mo., N of Springfield, in a farm and horse-raising area of the Ozarks, inc. 1867. Southwest Baptist College (junior, coeducational) is here. In July, 1948, President Gallegos of Venezuela dedicated a statue of Simón Bolívar, for whom the city was named. 2 Village (pop. 1,344), W N.Y., near the Pa. line E of Olean, in an oil region, inc. 1882. 3 Town (pop. 1,314), co. seat of Hardeman co., W Tenn., near the Hatchie river and SSW of Jackson, in a farm and timber area, founded 1824. A state hospital for the insane is in the area.

Bolivia (bulĭ'vēu, bō-, Span. bōlē'vyä), republic (412,772 sq. mi., pop. c. 3,500,000), W South America. SUCRE is the legal capital, but LA PAZ is the political as well as the financial and commercial focus of the nation, other cities of importance are COCHABAMBA and ORURO. One of the two inland countries of South America (Paraguay, the other, has ocean shipping), Bolivia is shut from the Pacific in the west by Chile and Peru, it also borders in the east on Brazil and Paraguay and in the south on Argentina. To the traveler Bolivia seems only a mountain country and, indeed, the population is centered in the highlands and the plateaus, as are the industries and the means of communication, but actually more than half of Bolivia is tropical. The western part of the republic is Andean, but all of the east is low and hot. In the northeast the tropical jungles join the selvas of the Amazon basin, and the rivers are part of the huge Amazon system. The BENI and its tributary (the Madre de Dios), the MAMORÉ, and the GUAPORÉ (for some distance the border with Brazil) all belong to the drainage basin of the MADEIRA. These streams go through dense rain forest that was once important for wild-rubber production, but was even then unsettled and not much exploited. The region (called the YUNGAS) may be potentially fertile for agriculture, but its value is actually unknown, its population consists mostly of sparse Indian tribes still in a state of very low material culture. There is only one city of real size, SANTA CRUZ, in the south. In the southeast the low, hot land merges into the CHACO. Here are the Bolivian oil fields, and here Bolivia was involved in the last of its disastrous border wars. Most of its large claims to the Chaco have now disappeared, but there is still a good-sized Bolivian section of the semiarid, broken plains. In the west the peaks of the ANDES soar. Here the mountain system reaches its greatest width. It is divided roughly into two cordilleras, the western one tracing with its high summits and extinct volcanoes the western border with Chile, the eastern running roughly north and south in many folded and broken ranges across the center of the country. Between the two is a high plateau (the Altiplano), most of it over 12,000 ft. above sea level—bleak, barren, and windswept. It is divided by mountain spurs, and many of the sections have dry salt bases or brackish lakes for want of drainage. In the south is the extensive salt plain, the Salar de Uyuni. In the north is the great basin of Lake TITICACA, the high, cold lake that Bolivia shares with Peru. Lake POOPÓ, wholly in Bolivia, discharges into the larger lake by the DESAGUADERO. This bleak country of the Titicaca area was the home of one of the great pre-Columbian civilizations of the Americas, but it has today sunk greatly in importance. The eastern mountains hold what has proved the modern wealth of Bolivia—its minerals. Here among the complex chains (marked by three major ranges, the Cordillera Oriental, the Cordillera Real, and the Cordillera Central) are some of the richest mines of the world. Tin is the most notable product today, but silver was once the queen metal, and copper, wolframite, bismuth, antimony, zinc, lead, and gold are also taken from the rocky mountains. Some of the names of the mining towns, notably Potosí and Oruro, are world famous. The eastern mountains rise to the cold forbidding heights of the PUNA and have majestic, snow-capped peaks such as ILLAMPÚ and ILLIMANI in the Cordillera Real (both looking westward to Lake Titicaca). From the puna the headstreams not only of the Madeira-Mamoré system but also of the Chaco rivers, such as the Pilcomayo and the Bermejo, cut their way eastward, carving deep gorges and long fingerlike valleys. In these deep-cut valleys are some of the garden spots of Bolivia—Sucre, Cochabamba, and TARIJA. Practically all the cities of the republic are in valleys or enclosed plateaus on the edges of these eastern mountains, and in this region most of the white population is concentrated, the plateaus and valleys of the western slopes, with their Indian towns, are sometimes considered economically and socially part of the Altiplano. Although the whites and the Cholos (as mestizos are called in Bolivia) maintain economic, political, and social hegemony, more than half the population of Bolivia is pure Indian. In the eastern yungas there are many tribes still almost completely untouched by white culture, but in the more settled regions most of the people are at least nominally Roman Catholic and have taken over some Spanish civilization, though Indian languages and Indian customs persist. The Altiplano was a center of Indian life even before the days of the INCA, but the AYMARA had been conquered and absorbed into the Inca empire long before the Spanish Conquest began with the landing of Francisco Pizarro in Peru. Two of his brothers, Gonzalo and Hernando PIZARRO, were the leaders in the conquest of Bolivia in 1538. Uninviting though the high, cold country might seem, Bolivia, or Upper Peru as it was called, attracted the Spanish when its great mineral wealth was revealed. As early as 1545 an Indian discovered the incredibly rich silver mine Cerro de Potosí. Spanish exploiters poured in, and the dependence of Bolivia on exportation of minerals was begun. The system of social inequality was also established with the mines and obrajes [textile mills] owned by Spaniards and their creole descendants but worked by Indians under duress. Some great landholdings were also established with Indians as laborers, and the pastoral and agricultural Indians not included in the system were ignored in society and in government. Emphasis on the quick wealth of the mines also caused indifference to other development, even to transportation except for just sufficient means to remove the dug-up riches from the mines. Difficulties of terrain, hindering unity and preventing development, helped also to make Bolivia purely "colonial." These conditions did not alter when the region was made into the audiencia of CHARCAS. This was attached to the viceroyalty of Peru until 1776, when it was transferred to the viceroyalty of La Plata (or the viceroyalty of Buenos Aires). The revolution against Spanish control came early, with an uprising in Chuquisaca on May 25, 1809, but the move was abortive, and Bolivia remained under Spanish control until after the great liberating moves of José de SAN MARTÍN and Simón BOLÍVAR and was not won for the revolutionists until the victory (1824) at AYACUCHO of José Antonio de SUCRE. Independence was formally proclaimed in 1825, and Bolívar drew up in 1826 a constitution for the new republic. Upper Peru became Bolivia, and Chuquisaca became Sucre. Because the audiencia of Charcas had vague though extensive claims to territory, Bolivia inherited ambitions and territorial claims that proved disastrous, leading to warfare and ultimate loss. At the time of independence Bolivia had a seacoast, more extensive lands in the Amazon basin, and claims to much of the Chaco, in little more than a century all these were to go. The confused and quarrelsome internal history was well begun by the opposition to the first president, Sucre, who resigned in 1828. Conflicting personal, political, and military aspirations were to plague Bolivia steadily. President Andrés SANTA CRUZ, desiring to reunite Bolivia and Peru, invaded Peru and in 1836 established a confederation of the two countries, which was dissolved in blood on the battlefield of Yungay three years later, when he was defeated by Peruvians and Chileans. Though a number of the presidents, notably José BALLIVIÁN, made efforts to build the national strength and reform administration, the underlying conditions were such that honest reform was hard to achieve and the temptation to wholesale corruption was always strong. The nitrate deposits of ATACAMA in Bolivia's maritime province proved valuable, but the mining concessions were given to Chileans. Trouble over them in the administration of Hilarión DAZA precipitated (1879) the War of the Pacific (see PACIFIC, WAR OF THE). The result for Bolivia was the loss of Atacama to Chile. The next serious territorial loss was in the east, where the little-known region of the ACRE river became valuable because of its wild rubber. There was trouble with Brazil over this remote area, which Bolivia, under President José Manuel PANDO, yielded to Brazil in 1903 for an indemnity. Attempts at reform and reorganization (notably by Ismael MONTES) were overshadowed in the 20th cent. by military coups, rule of dictators, and bankruptcy. Recurrent lack of money led to foreign loans, such as the Nicolaus loan from North American bankers, and these sometimes cost exorbitant rates and in turn led to an increase of foreign influence, strengthened by foreign interests in the mines and the minerals (including oil concessions). The attempts to make Bolivia less "backward" did not meet with much success, though the mines did yield great fortunes (such as the fabulous wealth of Simon I. Patiño). Military adventures continued and contributed to the outbreak of another disastrous territorial war, this time with Paraguay over the Chaco. Fighting began in 1932 and ended in 1935 with both nations exhausted and Bolivia stripped of most of the territory claimed in the Chaco (by the peace treaty of 1938). The war and the consequent economic strains had left conditions much worse than before, and the rivalry of political parties, right, moderate, and left, with their programs for curing the ills were complicated by the large role played by the army in coups and counter-coups. Little was accomplished. The coming of the Second World War proved a boon to Bolivian economy by enlarging demands for tin (especially after Asiatic sources were cut off by the Japanese) and wolfram. The developing petroleum fields of SE Bolivia had already attracted considerable attention, particularly from Brazil and Argentina, and the rights of a U.S. company had been expropriated by the Bolivian government in 1937. The oil fields played a large part in the building of railroads to connect Bolivia with Brazil and Argentina. The impouring of money in the wartime was accompanied by a rise in prices that aggravated the restiveness of miners over bad working conditions. A serious crisis in Dec., 1942, came when a strike of miners at the Catavi mine was suppressed with the death of a number of workers. A series of other strikes followed in the succeeding years. The government was accused in the years before the Second World War and in the first part of the war of being strongly pro-German (there is an influential element of German descent in Bolivia), but after a new government was installed in 1940, the German minister was expelled (1941) for subversive activities. Bolivia broke relations with the Axis in 1942 and declared war in 1943. The important German-owned air service had already been expropriated. In Dec., 1943, the nationalistic and rightist MNR (Movimento Nacional Revolucionario) took power, but the government was not recognized by the other American nations (except Argentina) until June, 1944, after pro-Axis elements had officially been removed. Bolivia became a member of the United Nations. Extensive U.S. aid for developing Bolivia—and increasing the supply of minerals needed by the United States—in the war was continued to some extent after the war. Argentine influence, however, grew much stronger. The moderate government established in 1947 was faced with opposition from the rightists and from the extreme left. There were two serious revolutions of the MNR in 1949, and after trouble early in 1950 the Communists were banned. Strikes continued and there were Indian uprisings. Yet even the difficulties, which were far from minor, had a hopeful aspect in showing that long apathy was ended. New rail and highway communications were bringing Santa Cruz and E Bolivia into the orbit of world trade. Investigation led to plans for reducing the high rate of illiteracy (80 percent), and Indian revolts were sharpening attempts to alleviate the Indians' lot Though minerals still account for some 90 percent of Bolivian exports, though industry and hydroelectric power are little developed (with only a few flour and textile mills and factories producing such items as alcohol, beverages, shoes, and tobacco products), movements have been begun to use the oil of Santa Cruz for Bolivian development and to enlarge Bolivian agriculture See Paul Walle, Bolivia (Eng tr, 1914), Herbert Kirchhoff, Bolivia Its People and Scenery (1944), A P Whitaker, The United States and South America the Northern Republics (1948)

Bollandists (bŏl'ŭdĭsts), group of Jesuits in Belgium, named for their early leader, Jean Bolland, a Flemish Jesuit of the 17th cent They were charged by the Holy See with compiling an authoritative edition of the lives of the saints, the monumental Acta sanctorum, which is still being constantly brought up to date

Boller, Alfred Pancoast, 1840–1912, American civil engineer, b Philadelphia He was consulting engineer for the Singer and the Metropolitan Life Insurance buildings in New York city and designed bridges crossing the Thames (at New London, Conn), the Harlem (in New York city), the Monongahela (at Pittsburgh), and the Mississippi (at St Louis)

Bolley, Henry Luke, 1865–, American plant pathologist, b Dearborn co , Ind He is noted for his work on organisms causing diseases of crop plants (including the discovery of the cause of potato scab), for his methods of preventing oat smut bunt of wheat, and other diseases, and for developing varieties of wilt-resistant flax and rust-resistant wheat boll weevil (bōl) or cotton boll weevil, snout beetle probably of Mexican or Central American origin, first observed in Texas in 1892 Since then it is said to have caused losses as great as $200,000,000 a year to the cotton crop The adult is about one quarter inch long, grayish when young and black when older The eggs are laid in holes made by its long snout in the buds or developing bolls The larvae feed on the growing cotton fibers, making the boll useless Some adults survive the winter in sheltered places Control methods include dusting the cotton fields with calcium arsenate by airplanes or other means, planting an early crop, and destroying infected plants in the fall See Cotton or Boll Weevils (U S Dept of Agriculture, Miscellaneous Publication 484)

bollworm (bōl'–), name for two cotton pests One, the pink bollworm, is the larva of a small dark brown noctuid moth, probably native to India and found in most cotton-growing regions of the world It was introduced into Mexico in cotton seed from Egypt and was carried to Texas, where it was first observed c 1917 The larva feeds on the blossoms, the lint and the seeds In infected areas an annual loss of from 20 to 50 percent of the value of the crop results Some control is achieved by quarantine, by fumigation of gins and storage places, by burning old stalks and bolls, and by the use of arsenic compounds The corn-ear worm, another noctuid moth larva, attacks corn, tomatoes, tobacco, and cotton Often called cotton bollworm, it burrows through the bolls and causes great losses

Bologna, Giovanni da (jōvän'nē dä bōlō'nyä), 1524–1608, Flemish sculptor, whose real name was Jean Bologne or Boulogne Though born in Douai, France, he is identified chiefly with the Italian Renaissance as one of its greatest sculptors He is also called Il Fiamminga [the Fleming] His masterpiece, Flying Mercury, is in the Bargello, Florence Almost equally fine is The Rape of the Sabines (Florence), which exerted a profound influence upon late Renaissance sculpture Among his other works are the equestrian statues in Florence of the Medicis, one of Ferdinand I (see Browning's "The Statue and the Bust") and another of Cosimo I, and two fountains in the Boboli Gardens, Florence, the bronze doors of the cathedral in Pisa, a Neptune fountain in Bologna, the colossal statue Apennines at Pratolino, and many crucifixes and statuettes in gold and silver

Bologna (bŭlŏ'nu, Ital bōlō'nyä), city (pop 226,771), capital of Emilia e Romagna and of Bologna prov , N central Italy, at the foot of the Apennines and on the Aemilian Way It is a cultural and commercial center and an important agricultural market Of pre-Roman origin, it passed (6th cent) under Byzantine rule and (8th cent) to the papacy, but in the 12th cent a strong free commune was established The victory of Bologna over Emperor FREDERICK II at Fossalta (1249) added political power to its intellectual prestige The famous university originated with its Roman law school (founded late in the 11th cent), where IRNERIUS and ACCURSIUS taught, the medical and theological faculties and courses in the liberal arts were added in the 14th cent Medieval Bologna was one of the truly great centers of learning in Europe, it continued its tradition in the 17th and 18th cent , when Malpighi and Galvani taught here, and it is still enjoying a very high reputation Printing has flourished in Bologna In politics, the rivalry between Guelphs and Ghibellines enabled several ambitious families to seize the power (14th–15th cent) The Pepoli were succeeded by the Visconti of Milan, and—after a short period of papal domination—by the BENTIVOGLIO (1446) In 1506 Pope Julius II reestablished the papal rule, which was interrupted in 1797, when Bologna was made the capital of the Cispadane Republic, and resumed in 1815 after the Congress of Vienna In 1860 Bologna voted its union with the kingdom of Sardinia As a vital railroad center and a key to the German line of resistance in the Second World War, Bologna was heavily bombed in 1944–45 The Gothic Church of St Francis (13th cent) and the Archiginnasio, once the seat of the university, are the most serious losses Bologna has retained a marked medieval aspect Many streets are arcaded, the town hall (13th–16th cent), the palace of King Enzio (13th cent), the palace of the Podestà (13th–15th cent), the two medieval leaning towers (named Asinelli and Garisenda after two noble families), and numerous fine churches of the 13th and 14th cent are among the most notable ancient buildings of the city Bologna has a municipal museum and an art gallery in which Bolognese artists (notably FRANCIA, the CARRACCI, and GUIDO RENI) are best represented On hills near Bologna are the Renaissance Church of San Michele (in Bosco) and a former Carthusian monastery

Bologne, Jean see BOLOGNA, GIOVANNI DA

bolometer see LANGELY, SAMUEL PIERPONT

Bolsena (bôlsā'nä), village, Latium, central Italy, on a picturesque crater lake and near the site of the second VOLSINII It has an imposing castle (12th cent), a cathedral, and several medieval buildings Here occurred (c 1265) a reputed miracle—a doubting priest saw blood flow from the Host at Mass—which helped to dramatize the newly established feast of Corpus Christi

Bolshevism and Menshevism (bōl'shuvĭzm, bŏl'–, mĕn'shuvĭzm), the two main branches of Russian SOCIALISM from 1903 until the consolidation of the Bolshevik dictatorship under Lenin in the civil war of 1917–20 The Workers' Social Democratic party, secretly organized in 1898 on the lines of the cell system, was based on the doctrines of MARXISM At a convention in 1903 it split into two groups The larger group, led by LENIN, was called the Bolsheviks [members of the majority], it advocated the immediate overthrow of the existing regime in Russia through a social revolution and the creation of a dictatorship of the proletariat The minority group, led by PLEKHANOV, was called the Mensheviks [members of the minority] The Mensheviks believed that Russia could not pass from its backward stage directly to the rule of the proletariat but that instead an intermediary democratic or bourgeois regime had to be developed first, as had been the case in Western Europe Although both groups retained their respective names, the Bolsheviks did not for long retain their numerical superiority over the Mensheviks However, the two groups were by no means the only Russian revolutionary movements, among their rivals were the non-Marxist Social Revolutionaries, a terrorist group, and the Constitutional Democrats, a liberal and intellectual reform movement Nor was there a clear-cut division between Bolsheviks and Mensheviks, many Socialist leaders, such as TROTSKY, passed from one group to the other and back again The Russian Revolution of 1905 was due to a common (though not cooperative) effort of all revolutionary and reformist movements In the first Duma of 1906, which was boycotted by the Socialists, the Constitutional Democrats were the strongest party, but in 1907 the Social Democrats (in theory still a single party) took part in the elections In the First World War, when the Bolsheviks were the chief pacifist propagandists, the cleavage between Bolsheviks and Mensheviks became increasingly pronounced Lenin's revolutionary doctrines had also become clearly defined, unlike the Mensheviks, he opposed cooperation with the bourgeois parties and believed in the formation of a small and select party as a revolutionary instrument rather than in the Mensheviks' attempt to appeal to the broad masses In the RUSSIAN REVOLUTION of 1917 the Mensheviks cooperated with the Kerensky regime However, after Lenin's return to Russia, the Bolsheviks gained (Nov , 1917) the majority in the Socialist party congress and in the soviets of Petrograd and Moscow and simultaneously overthrew the Kerensky government In 1918 they broke totally with the Mensheviks and formed the Russian Communist party, which within a few years either absorbed or "liquidated" the remnants of the Mensheviks For bibliography, see COMMUNISM, MARXISM, SOCIALISM

Bolton, Herbert Eugene, 1870–, American historian, b Wilton, Monroe co , Wis , grad Univ of Wisconsin (LL B , 1895), Ph D Univ of Pennsylvania, 1899 He taught history at the Univ of Texas (1901–9), Stanford Univ (1909–11), and the Univ of California (1911–44) and became an outstanding authority on Spanish colonial days in the West He edited and translated numerous important journals of Spanish soldiers and priests, widening the printed sources immeasurably, but he is perhaps better known for such works as Texas in the Middle Eighteenth Century (1921), The Spanish Borderlands (1921), Outpost of Empire (1931, the story of the founding of San Francisco), and the biographies, Rim of Christendom (1936, on Father Eusebio Francisco Kino) and Coronado (1949) For these sound studies of a colorful period Bolton employed a prose that reflected his own vigorous and colorful personality He also promoted the study of the history of the Americas as a unit of human development, for this purpose he wrote a syllabus, History of the Americas (1928), and a survey of the colonial period, Wider Horizons of American History (1939) He was also director from 1916 to 1940 of the Bancroft Library at the Univ of California

Bolton, Sarah Knowles, 1841–1916, American author, b Farmington, Conn , educated at Hartford Female Seminary She is remembered for her numerous volumes of biography written for young people, which include Poor Boys Who Became Famous (1885), Poor Girls Who Became Famous (1886), and Famous American Authors (1905) She and her husband were prominent in the temperance movement See her autobiography (ed by her son, 1923)

Bolton or Bolton-le-Moors (bōl'tun-lu-mōōrz'), county borough (1931 pop 177,250, 1947 estimated pop 166,090), Lancashire, England, NW of Manchester and on a small tributary of the Irwell Very early Bolton became known for textile making (woolen weaving was introduced by the Flemings in the 14th cent), but the modern industry dates from the late 18th cent , when spinning factories were built and a canal (1791) put through to Manchester The inventions of Arkwright and Crompton, who were born here, spurred its development Besides the great textile plants (calicoes and muslins especially), there are foundries, ironworks (there is coal in the vicinity), and paper and chemical factories

Boltraffio or Beltraffio, Giovanni Antonio (jōvän'nē äntō'nyō bōltrŏf'fyō, bĕl), 1467–1516, Italian painter, b Milan, pupil of Leonardo da Vinci He excelled in portraiture some of his best works being the portraits in the villa on the Isola Bella, in the Lago Maggiore, in the Brera, Milan, in the Frizzoni Collection, Bergamo, and at Cracow Other paintings include Madonna and Child (National Gall , London), Madonna Casio (Louvre), and the fine Madonna with the Vase of Flowers (Poldi-Pezzoli Coll , Milan)

Boltwood, Bertram Borden, 1870–1927, American chemist and physicist, b Amherst, Mass , grad Sheffield Scientific School, Yale, 1892 After graduate study at Leipzig and Yale (Ph D , 1897) he taught at Yale until his death, serving from 1910 to 1927 as professor of radiochemistry An expert in laboratory technique and apparatus, he gave much of his energy to planning and supervising the building of the Sloane Physics Laboratory and the Sterling Chemistry Laboratory, both at Yale His research in the field of radioactive elements resulted in several important discoveries He discovered that radium is a disintegration product of uranium the disintegration taking place through an intermediate element which he discovered and named ionium, that the ultimate disintegration product of uranium is lead, or an isotope of lead and that ionium and thorium were elements which, when in combination, could not be separated from each other by any known process, a conclusion which led to the discovery by others of elements since called isotopes He made a table, built up after an analysis of the proportion of lead in uranium minerals from various parts of the world and various geological ages, to determine the extent of disintegration and therefore the age of geologic strata in which uranium minerals are found He ascertained that actinium is also a disintegration product of uranium, but in a different branch from the ionium-radium-lead line, a discovery which has important bearings on the question of the origin of elements

Bolzano (bōltsä'nō), Ger Bozen (bō'tsun), city (pop 41,722), capital of Bolzano prov , TRENTINO-ALTO ADIGE, N Italy, on the Isarco near its confluence with the Adige It is the center of the German-speaking part of S Tyrol Beautiful Alpine scenery and mild climate make Bolzano a tourist and health resort, its position on the Brenner road has made it the chief commercial center of the region since the Middle Ages, when important fairs were held here A part of the bishopric of TRENT, Bolzano and the surrounding region were ceded (1513) to the Hapsburgs and subsequently followed the fortunes of TYROL Despite the German population Bolzano was awarded to Italy in 1919 The scenic charm of the city is enhanced by its many medieval houses and its fine 14th-century cathedral

Boma (bō'mu), town (pop 11,084), W Belgian Congo, a port on the Congo It exports coffee, cacao, palm oil, and rubber

Bombay (bŏmbā'), state (132,700 sq mi , pop 29,998,126), W central India, on the Arabian Sea It contains within its borders the Portuguese colonies of Goa and Daman Rough mountains—the Western Ghats—which are rich in timber, especially teak, edge the narrow coastal strip This area, with a very heavy rainfall and fertile alluvial soil, is a major source of India's rice supply Marathi-speaking people make up its dense population The southern inland region, a part of the Deccan, supplies the best Indian cotton and a heavy crop of millet Its relatively sparse population speaks Kanarese The northern inland region, with Gujerat-speaking inhabitants, produces high grades of cotton Except for manganese, building stone, and salt extracted from the sea, Bombay has no mineral resources Only a quarter of the people are engaged in industry, chiefly food processing and cotton spinning and weaving, or in trade Remains exist from the period (320–184 B C) when much of Bombay belonged to the Buddhist Maurya empire Buddhism was supplanted (c 5th cent A D) by Hinduism, which has been the major religion except during Moslem control (13th–18th cent) In the 16th cent, Portugal was the leading foreign power, but Great Britain predominated in the 17th cent and by the early 19th cent had formed approximately the present area into the Bombay presidency, which was subsequently made a province After 1947 all native states within the former provincial boundary joined Bombay, Baroda and Kolhapur were the largest Bombay (pop 1,489,883), the capital, on the island of Salsette just off the coast, is the only natural deepwater harbor of W India It is the seat of a university (founded 1857) The area was ceded (1534) to Portugal by the sultan of Gujerat Bombay, after it passed to Great Britain, was the headquarters (1668–1858) of the East India Company in India and during the American Civil War it expanded to meet the world demand for cotton and became the leading cotton-spinning and weaving center in all India Today it is a focus of rail systems extending throughout the country Cotton and vegetable-oil seeds are exported, and metals and machinery imported Outside the city on Salsette there are Buddhist caves The near-by small island of ELEPHANTA is noted for its antiquities

Bomoseen, Lake (bŏmūsēn'), 7½ mi long and 1½ mi wide, W Vt , largest lake wholly within Vermont Surrounded by wooded hills, it lies W of Rutland and is a popular summer resort

Bomu (bō'mōō), river rising in the southeast tip of French Equatorial Africa and flowing c 500 mi along the border of the Belgian Congo to the Ubangi river

Bon, Cape (bŏn), or Ras Addar (räs' ăd'ăr'), headland, NE Tunisia, projecting into the Mediterranean Sea toward Sicily The German forces in North Africa surrendered in May, 1943, to the Allies on the Cape Bon peninsula

Bona Dea (bō'nŭ dē'ŭ) [Latin, =good goddess], in Roman legend, earth-goddess worshiped only by women She is identified with Maia, Ops, DEMETER, and PERSEPHONE and has some likeness to Cybele She was called Fauna, for (according to various legends) she was the daughter, sister, or wife of FAUNUS Her name was never spoken before a man

Bonaire, Dutch West Indies see CURAÇAO

Bonanza Creek, stream of the Yukon which flows into the Klondike river at Dawson It was famous for placer mining in the days of the gold rush A stream in the Kootenay dist of British Columbia is also called Bonanza Creek

Bonaparte (bō'nŭpärt), Ital Buonaparte (bwōnäpär'tä), family name of NAPOLEON I, emperor of the French His father, Carlo Buonaparte, 1746–85, a petty Corsican nobleman, was a lawyer in Ajaccio He supported Pasquale PAOLI (1768–69), then changed sides and became one of the staunchest leaders of the pro-French party in Corsica Napoleon's mother, Letizia or Laetitia Ramolino Bonaparte (lätēt'sēä rämōlē'nō), 1750–1836, had simple virtues much admired by her son's followers At Napoleon's court she was given the title Madame Mère After the final downfall of Napoleon she found refuge in Rome The eldest of the children of Carlo and Letizia to survive infancy was Joseph Bonaparte (zhōzĕf'), 1768–1844 Having gained some note as French ambassador to Parma and to Rome and as a member of the Council of Five Hundred, Joseph negotiated a treaty with the United States (1800) and represented France at the peace negotiations at Lunéville (1801) and Amiens (1802). In 1806 Napoleon made him king of Naples, which Joseph administered very inefficiently, and in 1808 he was made king of Spain instead Thoroughly unsuccessful in defending his throne in the PENINSULAR WAR, he reluctantly abdicated in 1813 From 1815 to 1841 he lived mainly in the United States—at Bordentown, N J He died in Italy Napoleon I himself was born in 1769 His brother Lucien Bonaparte (lusyĕ'), 1775–1840, first became prominent as president of the Council of Five Hundred Joseph negotiated a treaty with the United States (1800) and represented France at the peace negotiations at Lunéville (1801) and Amiens (1802). In 1806 Napoleon made him king of Naples, which Joseph administered very inefficiently, and in 1808 he was made king of Spain instead Thoroughly unsuccessful in defending his throne in the PENINSULAR WAR, he reluctantly abdicated in 1813 From 1815 to 1841 he lived mainly in the United States—at Bordentown, N J He died in Italy Napoleon I himself was born in 1769 His brother Lucien Bonaparte (lusyĕ'), 1775–1840, first became prominent as president of the Council of Five Hundred He entered into close relations with Sieyès and took an important part in the coup d'état of 18–19 Brumaire (1799) By boldly haranguing the troops while the Council was about to outlaw Napoleon, who had lost his nerve, Lucien succeeded in dispersing the Five Hundred, the Directory was overthrown, and Napoleon became First Consul However, Lucien opposed the establishment of the empire, he married a commoner and went to live in Rome under the protection of Pius VII When Napoleon made the pope a prisoner, Lucien sought to flee to the United States (1810) but was captured at sea by the British and interned in England He returned to Italy in 1814, was made prince of Canino by the pope, and became reconciled with Napoleon, who was then in Elba Lucien returned to France in the Hundred Days, and after Waterloo tried to secure the throne for Napoleon II He died in exile in Italy His sister Elisa Bonaparte (ēlēzä'), 1777–1820, married Felix Pasquale Bacciochi, an insignificant captain of infantry Napoleon made her princess of Lucca and Piombino (1805) and grand duchess of Tuscany (1809) She was a competent administrator and was admired for her intelligence After Waterloo she lived in retirement Another brother, Louis Bonaparte (lwē), 1778–1846, was king of Holland (1806–10) He reluctantly married (1802) Hortense de BEAUHARNAIS Napoleon forced him to abdicate because Louis, more concerned for the interests of the Dutch people than for those of France, defied the ruinous Continental System He died in Italy His sister Pauline Bonaparte, 1780–1825, was Napoleon's favorite sister A woman of remarkable beauty but of a vain, frivolous character, she was the subject of considerable scandal, involving even her brother She accompanied her husband, General LECLERC on the expedition to Haiti and created a deep impression by her luxurious life in a castle on that unhappy island After Leclerc's death Napoleon arranged her marriage (1803) to Camillo Borghese, a member of the highest Roman nobility They soon agreed on a separation Pauline, made princess of Guastalla in 1806, fell into temporary disfavor with her brother because of her hostility to Empress Marie Louise, but when Napoleon's fortune failed, Pauline showed herself more loyal than any of his other sisters and brothers Another sister, Caroline Bonaparte, 1782–1839, went to France with the family in 1793 and married General MURAT (1800) Her ambition, joined with that of her husband, made her grand duchess of Cleves and Berg and later queen of Naples (1808–14) There she did much to stimulate art and letters and encouraged the recovery of the classical treasures of Pompeii and Naples Her restless ambition was still unsatisfied, the birth of Napoleon's son destroyed her hope of succession for her own son She and Murat entered upon intrigues with Napoleon's enemies but with no positive result After the fall of Napoleon, Metternich, who was passionately in love with her, tried to save Murat's throne Murat's rashness, however, led to his execution, and Caroline fled to Austria Jérôme Bonaparte (zhārôm'), 1784 1860, Napoleon's youngest brother, served in the navy and was sent to the West Indies On a visit to the United States he met Elizabeth PATTERSON, whom he married (1803), although, as a minor, he lacked the necessary consent Napoleon refused to recognize the marriage and had little difficulty in changing the mind of the flighty Jérôme for whom he made a new match with Catherine of Württemberg (1807) Jérôme became king of Westphalia (1807–13), fought in the Russian campaign, and led a division at Waterloo He was more remarkable for his extravagant irresponsibility than for administrative or military skill Leaving France after Waterloo, he returned in 1847 and received honors at the court of his nephew, Napoleon III There he was known as Prince Jérôme Of the second generation of the family perhaps the most important was NAPOLEON II, the son of Napoleon and MARIE LOUISE, although the son of Louis Bonaparte, Louis Napoleon, who became emperor as NAPOLEON III exercised a much greater influence on history Other later members of the house also became prominent Charles Lucien Jules Laurent Bonaparte (shärl, zhul lōrä'), 1803–57, prince of Canino, son of Lucien, lived in the United States from 1824 to 1833 and was important as a naturalist, particularly as author of American Ornithology (4 vols , 1825–33, in English) Pierre Napoléon Bonaparte (pyĕr napōlāō'), 1815–81, another son of Lucien, after an adventurous career as soldier of fortune became a French politician Though a republican he welcomed the empire of Napoleon III and lost his following In 1870 he killed the journalist, Victor Noir, in the heat of a quarrel but was acquitted of murder He was notoriously immoral as was his cousin Napoléon Joseph Charles Paul Bonaparte (pōl) 1822–91, commonly called Prince Napoleon or, more familiarly, Plon-Plon The son of Jérôme and Catherine of Württemberg, he was named as successor to his cousin Napoleon III, in case the emperor died childless He was, however, a liberal and an opponent of the emperor's measures in the early years of the empire His marriage (1859) to Princess Clotilde, the daughter of Victor Emmanuel II, was a move in Napoleon III's Italian policy Prince Napoleon became pretender to the throne after the death of the only son of Napoleon III, Napoléon Eugène Louis Jean Joseph Bonaparte (ûzhĕn', zhäl'), 1856–79, the Prince Imperial, who was killed while fighting the Zulus as a member of the British army Napoléon Victor Jérôme Frédéric Bonaparte (vēktôr', frādārēk') (Victor Bonaparte), 1862–1926, inherited the claims of Prince Napoleon, his father The daughter of Jérôme and Catherine of Württemberg, the princess Mathilde Bonaparte (mätēld'), 1820–1904, was of great prominence at the court of Napoleon III By his American wife, Elizabeth Patterson, Jérôme had a son, Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, 1805–70, from whom the American line is descended The most prominent of this line was Charles Joseph BONAPARTE See Frédéric Masson, Napoléon et sa famille (13 vols , 1897–1919), R McNair Wilson, Napoleon's Mother (1933), C E Macaartney and J G Dorrance, The Bonapartes in America (1939)

Bonaparte, Charles Joseph, 1851 1921, U S cabinet official, b Baltimore, grandson of Jérôme Bonaparte and Elizabeth Patterson A graduate of Harvard Law School, he became a lawyer and political leader in Baltimore He identified himself with reform causes, and President Theodore Roosevelt appointed him one of the commissioners to investigate conditions in the Indian Territory and in 1905 appointed him Secretary of the Navy In Dec , 1906, he shifted from this office to that of Attorney General, which he retained until the end of Roosevelt's administration He was active in suits brought against the trusts He was one of the founders, and for a time the president, of the National Municipal League See biography by J B Bishop (1922)

Bonar, Horatius (bŏn'ur), 1808–89, Scottish clergyman and hymn writer In 1837 he became minister to the North Parish, Kelso, in 1843 Bonar, with his congregation, seceded in the movement leading to the formation of the Free Church He wrote religious tracts and edited religious periodicals and collections of hymns, including Hymns of Faith and Hope (3 series, 1857–67) He is remembered, however, for his fine hymns, such as I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say

Bonar Law, Andrew see LAW, ANDREW BONAR

Bonaventure (bŏnuvĕn'chur) or Bonaventura, Saint (bō"năvăntōō'rä), 1221–74, scholastic theologian, cardinal of the Roman Church, Doctor of the Church, called the Seraphic Doctor, b near Viterbo, Italy His original name was Giovanni Fidanza He entered the Franciscan order, studied at the Univ of Paris under Alexander of Hales, then taught there until he was made (1257) general of his order and (1265) archbishop of Paris He died at the Second Council of Lyons, where he was a papal legate Among his early philosophic and theological works are commentaries on the Sentences of PETER LOMBARD and the "three little works"—Breviloquium (Eng tr , 1946), The Franciscan Vision (Eng tr , 1937) and De reductione artium ad theologam (Eng tr , 1939) He succeeded in assimilating Aristotle's learning to complete orthodox Augustinianism and was a proponent of strict REALISM His later mystical works bring the teachings of St BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX and HUGH OF SAINT VICTOR to full flower He emphasized the total dependence of all things upon God, and he wrote guides to mystic contemplation He also wrote the official and much-translated life of St Francis Feast July 14 See Étienne Gilson The Philosophy of St Bonaventure (Eng tr , 1938)

Bonaventure (bŏnuvĕn'chur), river of E Quebec, on the Gaspé Peninsula, rising in the Shickshock Mts and flowing 75 mi S to Chaleur Bay The river has trout and salmon fishing

Bonaventure Island, 2½ mi long and ¾ mi wide, off E Quebec, in the Gulf of St Lawrence c 3 mi N of Percé Rock, forming a natural breakwater between Percé and the gulf To Capt Peter John Duval, a privateersman, George III granted the island as a reward for service Descendants of Duval still live on the island Here is the largest bird sanctuary on the N Atlantic coast, mostly herring gulls, auks, crested cormorants, sea parrots, gannets, and kittiwake gulls

Bonavista, town (1945 pop 1,399), E N F , on the south coast of Bonavista Bay and N of St John's It is an important fishing center

Bonavista Bay, N F , one of the chief indentations of the northeast coast The bay is irregular and filled with islands There are a number of fishing towns of importance on its shores Bonavista Peninsula is on the south and ends in Cape Bonavista, which marks the southern entrance to the bay and is the reputed landfall in 1497 of John Cabot, the discoverer of Newfoundland The fishing town Bonavista is on the south shore of the bay and near the end of the peninsula

Bond, Carrie Jacobs, 1862–1946, American song writer, b Janesville, Wis As a child she displayed unusual musical gifts, but received very little training Later, widowed and living in poverty, she turned to the writing of songs (both words and music), giving concerts of them and even publishing them herself Eventually the popularity of such songs as I Love You Truly, Just a-Wearyin' for You, and A Perfect Day earned her a fortune See her autobiography, Roads of Melody (1927)

Bond, Sir Edward Augustus, 1815–98, English librarian He was connected for 50 years with the British Museum, first in the manuscript department and later (1878–88) as principal librarian He supervised the construction of wing for prints and provided for the printing of the British Museum catalogue He was a founder of the Paleographical Society and edited many historical documents

Bond, Elizabeth Powell, 1841–1926, American educator, b Clinton, N Y First an instructor (1866–

70) in calisthenics at Vassar, she later went to Swarthmore, serving as dean from 1890 until 1906 Her work at Swarthmore was important in promoting the development of coeducation in the East See her Words by the Way (2 vols , 1895–1901), biography by E C Johnson, (1927)

Bond, George Phillips, 1825–65, American astronomer, b near Boston, grad Harvard, 1845 He became the assistant of his father, William Cranch Bond, and in 1859 succeeded him as director of the Harvard College Observatory Much of his work was done in conjunction with his father While they were investigating Saturn together, George in 1848 discovered its eighth satellite, Hyperion His observations led him to reject the previously held theory that the rings of Saturn were of solid structure, though his hypothesis of their being in fluid state was in turn soon discarded His memoir on the Donati comet of 1858 in the Annals of the Harvard College Observatory, Vol III, remains the most complete description of a great comet which has been written His revision of his father's work on the Orion nebula was published posthumously His photographs of the moon when taken to Europe in 1851 created a sensation among astronomers there He was a pioneer in the use of photography in mapping the sky, determining stellar parallax, and measuring double stars He also used photographs for determining the comparative brightness of the planets See E S Holden, Memorials of William Cranch Bond and of His Son George Phillips Bond (1897)

Bond, Sir Robert, 1857–1927, Newfoundland statesman, b St John's, N F , educated in England and Scotland Entering the Newfoundland assembly in 1882, he was speaker (1884), colonial secretary (1889–97), and premier (1900-1909) The Hay-Bond Treaty (1902) for reciprocal trade with the United States failed of ratification in the U S Senate

Bond, Thomas, 1712–84, American physician, b Calvert co , Md After studying medicine in Paris he settled in Philadelphia, where with Benjamin Franklin he secured funds for establishing (1752) the first hospital in the country There Bond served until his death, inaugurating in 1766 the first course of clinical lectures

Bond, William Cranch, 1789–1859, American astronomer, b Portland, Maine He early aided his father in the trades of silversmith and clockmaker in Boston He soon became an expert in the making of chronometers and by 1812 was fashioning most of the superior ones used by ships sailing out of Boston He developed a passion for astronomy, and, turning part of his home into an amateur observatory, he devoted all his free time to it In 1815 he was sent by Harvard College to Europe to visit existing observatories and gather data preliminary to the building of an observatory at Harvard In 1839 the observatory was founded, and Bond supervised its construction and became its first director. In 1847 a 15-inch telescope, then matched by but one other in the world in size, was installed With it Bond made elaborate studies of sunspots, of the Orion nebula, and of the planet Saturn, publishing his results chiefly in the Annals of the Harvard College Observatory Together with his sons he developed the chronograph for automatically recording the position of stars, and he was a pioneer in the use of the chronometer and telegraph for determining longitude He and his son George Phillips Bond made the first practical use in America of Daguerre's photographic process applied to astronomy See E S Holden, Memorials of William Cranch Bond (1897) bond, in building, the method of tying together and giving strength to a masonry wall by overlapping adjacent masonry units, so that vertical joints of successive layers do not coincide. In brickwork, to which the term is especially applied, there are various bonds or standardized systems of breaking joints, all of which are combinations of bricks laid in two ways, stretchers (bricks laid with their length parallel to the face of the wall and exposing their long edges) and headers (laid at right angles to the face of the wall and exposing their ends) American bond, usually called common bond in the United States, is perhaps the most used, especially where appearance is unimportant, each sixth or seventh course is made up of headers, the other courses of stretchers In Flemish bond, much used for decorative purposes, each course consists of alternate headers and stretchers, each stretcher centered above and below a header In English bond the bricks are laid in alternate courses of headers and stretchers, each header centered over a stretcher or a joint Clip bond, or diagonal bond, is formed by clipping off the inner corners of the face stretchers and laying diagonal bonding bricks into the notches thus made, it presents a wall face made up wholly of stretchers Besides these four important bonds there are many variants and combinations used less often bond, in finance, usually a formal contractual obligation issued in writing as evidence of indebtedness It bears interest and promises to pay a certain sum of money to the holder on a definite date, and security is usually pledged against it. However, bonds are sometimes given to secure performance of a variety of matters other than the payment of a sum of money at a fixed date. Bonds which represent indebtedness are issued by corporations, other businesses, and governments and are sold to those wishing conservative investment They are generally regarded as a long-term obligation on the capital of the issuing body The contract is enforceable by law against a corporate debtor but may be unenforceable against a sovereign public debtor unless immunity is relinquished The bonds must be signed and have a seal of the issuer affixed Corporation bonds which are secured are designated usually according to the priority and extent of their claim against the assets upon which they have been issued The sale of bonds was employed successfully by the U S government as a device to secure funds to finance the prosecution of both world wars Government bonds are backed by the full faith and credit of the government issuing them, including its taxing power, and sometimes also by specifically designated security Unsecured bonds are called debenture or income bonds See Lawrence Chamberlain and G W Edwards, Principles of Bond Investment (rev ed , 1927), Gilbert Harold, Bond Ratings as an Investment Guide (1938), Leo Spurrier, Common Stocks and Bonds as Long-Term Investments (1941)

Bondfield, Margaret Grace, 1873–, British political and trade-union leader She was a Labor member of Parliament (1923-24, 1926–31), secretary to the minister of labor (1924), and under Ramsay MacDonald was minister of labor (1929–31) She wrote and lectured extensively on labor and socialist movements

bonding see INSURANCE

Bond Street, street in London, famous for its fashionable shops Sir Thomas Bond started building it c 1686, and many well-known people, including Sterne, Boswell, Nelson, and Swift, have lived on Bond St

Bone, Henry, 1755–1834, English enamel painter He decorated china at Plymouth and Bristol and later went to London, where he was employed in making small enameled pieces and miniatures In 1780 he exhibited his first picture at the Royal Academy, a large enamel portrait of his wife, which immediately established his reputation In 1800 he was appointed enamel painter to the English court, an honor which he enjoyed for many years

Bone, Sir Muirhead (mūr'hĕd), 1876–, British etcher and painter, b Glasgow In the First World War he was official artist at the Western Front and with the fleet in the North Sea He was official artist for the admiralty from 1940 to 1943 As draughtsman and dry-point etcher he has few equals among his contemporaries Old Spain (2 vols , with text by his wife, Gertrude Bone) was published in a limited edition in 1936 Bone was knighted in 1937

Bône (bōn), city (pop 77,675), NE Algeria, a Mediterranean port The Carthaginians founded a colony here, and the Numidian kings made it their capital It flourished as Hippo Regius or Hippone under the Romans and was a center of early Christianity, the episcopal see of St Augustine Hippo declined after its sack (430) by the Vandals In the Moslem period it became an early center of piracy and was sacked by the Pisans and the Genoese in 1034 It was of great commercial importance in the 17th and 18th cent Under France it has become prominent for exports of iron and phosphates bone, tissue which makes up most of the SKELETON of mammals and certain lower forms In most cases cartilage is first present, and later salts are deposited, resulting in the hard substance of bone Bones are long and thin or are flat and of various sizes Long bones are hollow and contain marrow, important in forming blood corpuscles Bones are covered with a membrane, the periosteum, from which comes the supply of blood vessels and nerves Bone, though apparently solid, is actually permeated with microscopic canals Disorders include FRACTURE, infection, RICKETS, and BOWLEGS

bone black see CHARCOAL

bone china, variety of porcelain, developed by English potters between 1750 and 1800 The clay is tempered with phosphate of lime or bone ash bone implements are first found in the Aurignacian phase of the PALEOLITHIC PERIOD There may have been earlier examples which, because of the perishable nature of bone, have escaped preservation Since bone cannot be successfully shaped by chipping or flaking, man had first to perfect carving and abrading tools of stone in order to utilize bone A tough, nonbrittle substance, it is adaptable for many uses Awls, needles, dart points, fishhooks, knives, and knife hafts are common manufactures Among contemporary peoples, the Eskimos are skilled and artistic workers in bone Bone is often used for buttons, knitting needles, and cutlery handles bone meal, finely ground bone used as a fertilizer for its content of phosphoric acid (20 to 25 percent) and nitrogen (2 to 4 percent) It is slow-acting and one of the safest of plant foods Bone meal is fed to farm animals to supply needed mineral food constituents

Boner or Bonerius, Ulrich (ōōl'rĭkh bō'nûr, bōnĕr'-ēŭs), 14th cent , Swiss fabulist, a Dominican monk He was the author of a collection of beast fables called Der Edelstein (c 1340), which were derived from Latin and German sources

boneset or thoroughwort, perennial composite-flowered North American herb (Eupatorium perfoliatum), having terminal clusters of small, chiefly white blossoms and pairs of leaves usually joined at their bases around the stem Indian and white man alike valued the plant for the bitter tea made from the leaves and flowers, used for treating colds, ague (whence the name agueweed), and fever, for which it was often cultivated in gardens It is still sold for medicinal purposes Other species of Eupatorium are often called thoroughwort and occasionally boneset, e g , the purple boneset or JOE-PYE WEED

Bonham (bŏn'ŭm), city (pop 6,349), co seat of Fannin co , E Texas, NE of Dallas and near the Red River, platted 1837 It processes and ships cheese, cotton, and truck A replica of an early trading post, Fort Inglish, is near by

Bonheur, Rosa (bŭnûr'), 1822–99, French painter of animals She won a first medal at the Salon of 1848 for her Plowing in the Nivernais (Luxembourg Mus , Paris) Her lifelike and conscientious pictures of animals gained her a wide popularity, particularly in England and America, where much of her best work is to be seen Among her well-known paintings may be cited Weaning the Calves and Horse Fair (both Metropolitan Mus) and Sheep in Repose (Wallace Coll , London)

Bon Homme Richard see JONES, JOHN PAUL

Boniface, Saint (bŏn'ĭfŭs, -fās), c 675–754', English missionary monk, called the Apostle of Germany, b Devonshire, England His English name was Winfrid He was educated in the monastery of Nursling, where he became abbot (717) In 716 he made his first trip to Friesland to aid the mission of St WILLIBRORD, but unsettled conditions forced his return In 718 he left England forever and went to Rome (719), where GREGORY II gave him the name of Boniface and blessed his mission He was consecrated bishop in 722 and archbishop in 732 For his missionary work in Thuringia, Hesse, Franconia, and Bavaria, he secured the support of CHARLES MARTEL In 741 he founded several bishoprics in these lands, which were by then strongly Christian After St Willibrord's death, Boniface appointed a bishop for Friesland In all his efforts Boniface was aided by religious and clerics whom he had consecrated Under his inspiration the monasteries of Reichenau (724), Murbach (728) and Fulda (744) were founded as centers of learning By 742 Boniface was accounted religious head of Austrasia He was consecrated archbishop of Mainz (745) He was martyred by pagans in Friesland Feast June 5

Boniface, Saint, d 1009, German missionary, known also by his lay name, Bruno of Querfurt He evangelized the Balts and died a martyr He is known as the Apostle of the Prussians Feast June 19

Boniface VIII, 1235-1303, pope (1294-1303), an Italian (b Anagni) named Benedetto Caetani, successor of St CELESTINE V and predecessor of BENEDICT XI As a cardinal he was independent of the factions in the papal court, and he opposed the election of Celestine Boniface was elected on Celestine's resignation, and his first years were bedeviled by those who had suffered from Celestine's retirement—the Neapolitans, the Colonna family, and the extreme Franciscans, among them Jacopone da Todi Boniface reigned in a time of crisis in Europe He wished to emulate St GREGORY VII and INNOCENT III, but he was no such statesman, and the times had changed He interfered in Sicily, but he was openly flouted when Frederick III and the Sicilians forced Boniface to recognize Frederick as king He brought CHARLES OF VALOIS into Italy to pacify Florence and succeeded only in stirring up more trouble Dante was exiled in this struggle of GUELPHS AND GHIBBELINES Boniface's contest with PHILIP IV of France was the principal feature of his career The pope tried to stop Philip from his illegal levies on the clergy by the bull Clericis laicos (1296), enunciating the principle that laymen might not tax clerics without the consent of the Holy See By Philip's maneuvers Boniface was forced to abandon his position, and by 1928 he was on publicly good terms with Philip The dispute began again in earnest in 1301 with the trial of Bernard SAISSET, and Boniface never again yielded Two of his utterances in the controversy are famous—the bull Ausculta fili (1301) which summoned a synod of French to meet at Rome to discuss the reformation of French affairs, and the bull Unam sanctam (1302), an extreme statement (not naming Philip) of the principle that Catholic princes as well as others are subject to the pope in temporal (moral) and religious matters Philip paid no attention, and in 1303 he sent Nogaret to Italy, soon proclaiming his intention of deposing the pope Nogaret found the pope at Anagni and bullied him, the pope stood firm and was slapped by Nogaret's companion, Sciarra Colonna The outraged people of Anagni thereupon drove out the soldiery; Boniface was rescued and escorted to Rome, a sick old man He died in a month Philip pursued Boniface dead as he had alive In 1310 he forced CLEMENT V to begin a process to determine whether Boniface was not really heretical, that accusation was abandoned, but Clement consented to repudiate such of Boniface's acts as had hurt Philip Boniface, an excellent canon lawyer, planned and promulgated a new revision of the code called the Sext (1298) He was the first to establish (1300) a holy year See biography by T S Boase (1933)

Boniface IX, c 1345–1404, pope (1389–1404), a Neapolitan named Pietro Tomacelli, successor of URBAN VI and predecessor of Innocent VII He was contemporary with the Avignon antipopes Clement VII (ROBERT OF GENEVA) and Benedict XIII (Pedro de LUNA) By vigorously supporting Lancelot against the house of Anjou in the wars over the Neapolitan throne he brought Naples under the Roman obedience He unified organization in the Papal States, crushed the republican sentiment in Rome, and fortified the city To raise money for political ventures he greatly extended the annates and developed the granting of indulgences for money He was therefore accused of simony

Boniface (bŏn'ŭfās), d 432, Roman general He defended (413) Marseilles against the Visigoths under Ataulf, but, having supported GALLA PLACIDIA in her struggle with her brother, Emperor Honorius, fled to Africa in 422 There, as semi-independent governor, he supported (424) VALENTINIAN III against the usurper John and was rewarded with the title count of Africa Recalled in 427, he refused obedience, and a civil war between Africa and the imperial government began This struggle paved the way for the invasion of Africa by the Vandals under Gaiseric (429) A truce was patched up between Africa and Rome, and Boniface attacked the Vandals He was defeated and besieged (430) at Hippo During the siege his erstwhile friend, St Augustine, died Beaten again in 431, he was recalled to Italy by Placidia to assist her against the general AETIUS Boniface defeated Aetius (432) but died of a wound received in battle The historian Procopius, without convincing evidence, made Boniface responsible for inviting the Vandals into Africa

Bonifácio, José (zhōōzā' bōnĭfa'tsēōō), 1763?–1838, Brazilian statesman, scientist, and author His full name was José Bonifácio de Andrada e Silva He studied in Europe and gained fame as a geologist in Portugal before returning (1819) to Brazil There he was active in the movement for a constitution and for emancipation of the slaves A minister under the regency of Pedro I, he became the guiding spirit of the movement that ended with Brazilian independence (1822) He was minister of the interior and of foreign affairs in the new empire, but when he and his brothers joined the opposition he was exiled (1823–29) He was later reconciled to Pedro I and served (1831–33) as tutor to Pedro II He is generally regarded as the chief founder of independent Brazil

Bonifacio (bōnĭfa'chō), town (pop 1,755), S Corsica, France, facing Sardinia across the Strait of Bonifacio (7 mi wide) The oldest town of Corsica, it was founded (c 828) on the site of a citadel built by Boniface I, count of Tuscany It later passed to Pisa and to Genoa There is a church (12th–13th cent) in Pisan style The city, surrounded by a rampart, is medieval in character

Bonifay (bōnĭfā'), town (pop 1,924), co seat of Holmes co , NW Fla , near the Ala line just E of the Choctawhatchee, in a livestock and farm area

Bonington, Richard Parkes (bŏn'–), 1801–28, English painter In 1817 the family moved to Calais, and his first art study was with Louis Francia, who taught him water color Bonington studied in Paris at the École des Beaux-Arts and in 1820 entered the studio of Gros There he formed a close friendship with Delacroix, who inculcated in him an interest in medieval subjects Bonington was the embodiment of the close link between the English landscape painters Constable and Turner and the budding school of French romanticists He won early recognition, receiving a gold medal at the Salon of 1824, but died of tuberculosis at the early age of 27 In him, England lost a very promising painter Perhaps best known for his water colors, Bonington also brought to his oil painting a directness and dexterity unusual in his day and was a masterly lithographer Represented in the Louvre and in most important British galleries, Bonington is best seen in the Wallace Collection, London The Metropolitan Museum has two marines and a landscape See Hugh Stokes, Girtin and Bonington (1923)

Bonin Islands (bō'nĭn), Jap Ogasawara-gunto, volcanic island group (40 sq mi , 1940 pop 7,361), N Pacific, 535 nautical mi S of Tokyo The largest and most important island is Chichi-jima, site of Port Lloyd, the chief harbor of the group The principal products are sugar cane, coca, and ornamental coral The majority of the inhabitants are Japanese, there are some Koreans and Formosans Discovered in 1543 by Spaniards, the islands were claimed by Japan in 1875 and placed under the Tokyo prefecture in 1880. After the group was surrendered in 1945 to the United States with Japan's defeat in the Second World War, it was occupied by American troops

Bonivard, François de see BONNIVARD, FRANÇOIS DE

Bonn (bŏn), city (pop 94,694), in the former Rhine Prov of Prussia, NW Germany, on the Rhine Dating from Roman times, it was the residence (1263–1794) of the electors of Cologne and the scene (1346) of the coronation of Charles IV as king of the Romans It is the seat of a famous university (founded 1784, suppressed 1797, reconstituted 1818) Bonn has preserved the house in which Beethoven was born The city passed to France in 1801 and to Prussia in 1815 It suffered much destruction in the Second World War The minster (11th–13th cent) and the electoral palace, housing the university, were severely damaged In 1948–49 delegates from the parts of Germany occupied by France, Great Britain, and the United States met here to write a constitution for Western GERMANY, of which Bonn became the temporary capital

Bonnard, Pierre (pyĕr' bônär'), 1867–1947, French painter, lithographer, and illustrator He early joined the Independents and from 1891 exhibited with them regularly A postimpressionist, he is known for his luminous and decorative use of color Bonnard is famous for his intimate interiors in oil and also for his lithographs and illustrations He is represented in galleries in France and the United States See study by Charles Terrasse (1927)

Bonnat, Léon Joseph Florentin (lāôn' zhôzĕf' flôrätăn' bônä'), 1833–1922, French portrait and historical painter He enjoyed many academic honors and is best known for his portraits of famous men, including Thiers, Victor Hugo, Pasteur, and Dumas fils Bonnat is well represented in the Luxembourg Museum, Paris, and the Metropolitan Museum

Bonner, Robert, 1824–99, American newspaper editor, b Londonderry, Ireland He emigrated to America in 1839 and learned the printer's trade on the Hartford Courant In 1851 he purchased the Merchants' Ledger in New York, renaming it the Ledger He published much fiction, paid unheard-of prices for articles by such people as Longfellow, Tennyson, and Dickens, and used unusual advertising methods He made his profits from circulation alone, which reached nearly 500,000 His wealth went largely for race horses, and he was probably the most prominent turfman of his day

Bonners Ferry, village (pop 1,345), co seat of Boundary co , N Idaho, on the Kootenai near the Canadian boundary, inc 1894 Long a lumbering town, it is now a farm center in a well-irrigated region In May, 1948, floods forced temporary evacuation of the village

Bonner Springs, city (pop 1,837), NE Kansas, on the Kansas river and W of Kansas City, inc 1898 Cement is made here

Bonnet, Charles (shärl' bônä'), 1720–93, Swiss naturalist and philosopher He was the first to describe parthenogenesis among aphids His works on plants contain misconceptions Among his books are Traité d'insectologie (1745) and Contemplation de la nature (1764–65)

Bonnet, Georges (zhôrzh), 1889–, French politician, a Radical Socialist As financial expert he was prominent at international conferences on reparations and other economic questions He was ambassador to the United States (1937) and several times finance minister, notably in the Chautemps cabinet (1937–38) His stringent fiscal policy and his demand for extraordinary powers caused the fall of the government As foreign minister (1938–39) and minister of justice (1939–40) and as member of the Vichy National Council (1941), Bonnet helped to draft the Munich Pact and championed appeasement of, and collaboration with, Germany

Bonnet, Joseph Élie Georges Marie (zhôzĕf' ālē' zhôrzh' märē'), 1884–1944, French organist and composer, pupil of Guilmant at the Paris Conservatoire He became organist at the Church of St Eustache, Paris, in 1906 and later toured Europe, the United States, and Canada as a concert organist He compiled an anthology, Historical Organ Recitals (6 vols , 1917–40), and composed a number of organ pieces

Bonne Terre (bŏnтär'), city (pop 3,730), E Mo , SW of St Louis, in a lead, zinc, nickel, cobalt, and limestone region, inc 1864

Bonneville, Benjamin Louis Eulalie de (bŏn'vĭl), 1796–1878, American army officer, trader in the Far West, b France, grad West Point, 1815 Service at frontier posts acquainted him with the fur trade In 1832, having obtained leave from the army and financial backing from New York moneyed men, he led an expedition of 110 men to the Green River rendezvous of fur traders and commenced three years of trade and exploration As a trader he was a failure, but he was not forgotten as a swaggering, colorful figure who helped to open the Rocky Mt country He took the first wagon train across South Pass Bonneville was restored (1836) to the army after his overstayed leave, served in the Mexican War and at frontier posts, and retired in 1861. Washington Irving added much to Bonneville's fame by writing The Adventures of Captain Bonneville, U S A

Bonneville Dam, NW Oregon, in the Columbia river, c 40 mi E of Portland, built 1933–37 by U S army engineers under the authorization of Congress The river is divided by Bradford Island, and the spillway dam in the north channel has an over-all length of 1,450 ft and a crest elevation of 187 ft above the lowest bedrock In the south channel are the powerhouse and the navigation lock The dam was designed for flood control, navigation, and power Ten generators (installed 1938–43) make this a major unit in one of the most important power developments of the United States

Bonnie Prince Charlie see STUART, CHARLES EDWARD

Bonnivard or Bonivard, François de (frăswä' du bônēvär'), c 1493–1570, Swiss hero of Byron's "The Prisoner of Chillon " As prior of St Victor, near Geneva, he supported the revolt of GENEVA against Charles III of Savoy, who kept him prisoner from 1519 to 1521, and again, at CHILLON, from 1530 to 1536, when the Bernese stormed the castle His chronicle of Geneva was first published in 1831.

Bononcini (bōnōnchē'nē) or Buononcini (bwō–), musical family of Modena, Italy Giovanni Maria Bononcini (jōvän'nē märē'ä), 1640–78, choirmaster of the Church of San Giovanni, was a composer and the author of a treatise on practical music (1673) His son, Giovanni Battista Bononcini (bät-tēs'tä), c 1672–c 1750, was a composer, chiefly of operas In London he was the associate and later the rival of HANDEL The opera Muzio Scevola (London, 1721) was a pasticcio by Bononcini Filippo Mattei, and Handel, Handel's act being judged the best After failing in his operatic ventures, and charged with plagiarism, Bononcini left England, spending the rest of his life in obscure wanderings Another son, Marc Antonio Bononcini (äntō'nyō), 1675–1726, wrote many operas produced in Venice, and one, Camilla (London, 1706), influenced the English fashion for Italian opera In 1721 he became musical director to the duke of Modena

Bonpland, Aimé Jacques Alexandre (āmā' zhäk' ălĕksä'drù bōplä'), 1773–1858, French naturalist He was with HUMBOLDT on his travels in Spanish America and wrote several works on the plants of Mexico and South America which he had collected on this journey For a time he was director of Empress Josephine's gardens at Malmaison His real name was Goujaud

Bonsels, Waldemar (val'dumär bōn'zĕls), 1881–, German traveler, novelist, and poet His Indian Journey (1912, Eng tr , 1928), his best seller The Adventures of Maya, the Bee (1912, Eng tr , 1922), and Heaven Folk (1915, Eng tr , 1924) as well as the trilogy Notes of a Vagabond (1918–23, Eng tr , 1931) and the novel Adventures of Mario (1927, Eng tr , 1931), were popular in both Germany and the United States, although somewhat florid and sentimental He has also written plays and short stories

Bontempelli, Massimo (mäs'sēmō bōntĕmpĕl'lē), 1884–, Italian novelist and critic At one time a convert to futurism and a dramatist, he is best known for his fiction—bizarre, intellectual, and beautifully written Among his works are the novels La vita operosa [the active life] (1920) and Il figlio di due madri [the son of two mothers] (1933) For translations, see F M Guercio, Anthology of Contemporary Italian Prose (1931) and The European Caravan (ed by Samuel Putnam and others, 1931) See also Domenico Vittorini, The Modern Italian Novel (1930)

bonus, an extra amount in money, bonds, or goods over what is normally due The term is applied especially to payments to employees either for production (wage incentive) in excess of the normal or as a share of surplus profits The wage incentive as evolved by Frederick W Taylor was designed not only to increase production but to reward the more skillful and more energetic workers The hourly or weekly wage was to be figured as payment for a standard rate of work, and the workers who exceeded this standard were to receive a bonus However, the system fell into disfavor with labor unions because rate cutting was often resorted to when bonuses became too high Industrial engineers of the 1930s realized that definite standards of accomplishment and quality must be set to make wage incentives workable Many firms have used an annual bonus plan for distributing abnormal profits to both salaried employees and wage earners In the Second World War the War Production Board recommended a bonus to all workers in direct proportion to the increase in production In the inflation following the war many employers paid a cost-of-living bonus to make the real wage equal to what it had been before The term is also applied to payments to soldiers in addition to regular pay and insurance Veterans of the First World War lobbied to obtain a bonus for their military service In 1924 each veteran received an adjusted compensation certificate entitling him to a payment averaging $1,000 to be made in 1945 In 1932 about 15,000 unemployed veterans formed the "Bonus Expeditionary Force" and marched to Washington to demand immediate payment of these certificates President Hoover ordered troops to oust them from Federal property In 1936 Congress passed a law permitting the veterans to exchange their certificates for cashable bonds. Most states voted veterans' bonuses after the Second World War See W W Waters, B E F the Whole Story of the Bonus Army (1933), C W Lytle, Wage Incentive Methods (rev ed, 1942), J K Loudon, Wage Incentives (1944), V D Kennedy, Union Policy and Incentive Wage Methods (1945).

Bonvalot, Pierre Gabriel Édouard (pyĕr' gabrēĕl' ādwär' bôvalō'), 1853–1933, French explorer and author In 1880-82 he visited central Asia, explored Kohistan, and returned to France by way of Bukhara, the Caspian Sea, and the Caucasus In 1886 he made the first crossing of the Pamirs, from Ferghana to Chitral, India He crossed Tibet from Lob Nor to Tengri Nor (1889), traversed Asia from Siberia to Tonkin (1889 90), and led an official mission to Entotto, Ethiopia His works include De Moscou en Bactriane (1884), De Paris au Tonkin à travers Tibet inconnu (1892), L'Asie inconnue (1896), and Marco Polo (1925) book The word book has come to have many meanings, e g , any collection of sheets of paper, wood, or other material sewed or bound together (such as a bankbook), a division of a written work (books of the Bible, books of Caesar's Gallic War), and an account (keeping books) The primary meaning today is, however, a written work either in manuscript or in printed form that is of substantial length A printed book is distinguished from a pamphlet in that it is larger (some would limit a book to works of more than 64 or more than 96 pages) It is distinguished from a periodical in that it is a unit and issued as such, thus an annual or yearbook may be considered either as a periodical or as a book The printed book is distinguished in size by the number of times the original large sheet of paper on which the type is printed has been folded, as folio, quarto, octavo, and duodecimo These sizes have, however, been standardized to measurements, the standard octavo book is, according to the American Library Association, not less than 20 cm and not more than 25 cm in height Books apparently did not come into existence for some time after writing was widespread, for the INSCRIPTION cannot be considered a book even under the widest definition Fragmentary early papyri represented literature in ancient Egypt and may possibly be considered as books, though it is customary to speak of the BOOK OF THE DEAD as the first of the Egyptian papyrus books The cuneiform tablets gathered into the great Assyrian library of Assur-bani-pal represented an enormous collection of works, but the book as we know it may be said to be derived from the Egyptian writings on papyrus The vast literature of the Greeks was mostly written on large sheets of papyrus, which were glued together and rolled up The rolls varied greatly in size, many of them were about 1 ft wide and about 30 ft long when unrolled The method of having the leaves held together in quires in the fashion of the modern book seems not to have originated until about the 2d cent A D The manuscripts in leaves are commonly called codices (though the term codex may also be loosely used for any ancient manuscript) Most of the active Roman production of books, therefore, was also in rolls From at least the early part of the 2d cent B C the more permanent vellum (a type of fine PARCHMENT) was also used for writing books, and this grew to be very popular in the Middle Ages when books were copied by monks in the scriptoria An astonishing number of copies of books were made by the method of writing by hand, and there was what might even be called a publishing industry in ancient Rome, but the production of books in great quantity had to await the introduction of printing, which was invented in China (where the first book may have been printed in the 9th cent) and was introduced to Europe in the 15th cent To a very large extent the history of the book was henceforth the history of PRINTING The development of the book and book printing was very rapid (see TYPE), and by the 16th cent the art and skill of bookmaking had reached great heights Bookselling emerged as a sizable business, which increased over the centuries with the spread of education and improvement of transportation The various forms of the book as we know them today emerged early, but developments in printing, binding, and design produced a bewildering number of variations See also LIBRARY, MANUSCRIPT, PUBLISHING, WRITING For a brief and excellent bibliography, see Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt, One Hundred Books about Bookmaking (1949). See R B McKerrow, An Introduction to Bibliography for Literary Students (1928), M Ilin, Black on White the Story of Books (1932), F G Kenyon, Books and Readers in Ancient Greece and Rome (1932), Edward Chiera, They Wrote on Clay (1938), Lawrence C Wroth, ed , A History of the Printed Book (1938), Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt and others, The Book in America (1939), Douglas C McMurtrie The Book (3d ed , 1943)

bookbinding The art and business of bookbinding began with the protection of parchment manuscripts with boards Papyrus had been in rolls, but sheets of parchment could be folded and fastened together with sewing. In the Middle Ages the practice of making fine bindings for these sewed volumes arose to great heights of skill, books were rare and precious, and some of the bindings were exquisitely beautiful The principle of folding and sewing together sheets in small lots, then combining those lots with tapes and sewing and fastening boards on the outside as protection, was the same in the medieval monastery as in the modern book bindery. The invention of PRINTING greatly increased the demand for the bookbinder's work—in fact, made it into an established business The best binding is still done by hand, the binding is made on the book In machine binding (called casing), the cover or case is made separate from the book and then glued to it The covering of the boards, usually called the binding, is usually of cloth, heavy paper, vellum, leather, or imitations of leather The preferred leathers are morocco and calfskin Calfskin bindings are sometimes decorated by marbling Tooling of the binding is either blind (i e , without metal or color) or in a color, a metal, or an imitation of a metal See Douglas Leighton, Modern Bookbinding (1935), Hellmut Lehmann-Haupt, ed , Bookbinding in America (1941), Douglas Cockerell, Bookbinding and the Care of Books (1948)

bookkeeping, the keeping of systematic and convenient records of money transactions, to record what the transactions were and when they took place and to reveal the amounts and sources of the losses and profits for any given period Proper bookkeeping should also reveal the nature and value of the assets and liabilities and the net worth of the business at the close of that period Such records are kept in columnar form, using separate columns for date, explanation, and value Other columns may be added In general two sets of columns are used, a money value being assigned to all assets and all liabilities of the business, the assets being placed in one set of columns and the liabilities in another set Such an arrangement is called double entry At any time the books may be "balanced" by totaling each column and subtracting the less total from the greater to give either a surplus or a deficit The result is called the net worth The process of analyzing all items into one set of columns or the other, i e , into the debit side or the credit side, is called journalizing, since the analyzed items are placed in a book called a journal or daybook, which is the book of first entry of transactions as they occur Separate accounts of persons or sections are kept in a book called a ledger The transfer of items from the journal to the ledger is called posting In large businesses the journal is at the outset broken into many sections, each concerning a separate function of the business, such as sales purchases, notes receivable, notes payable, sales return, purchases return, and cash Books from which or to which postings are made are known as principal books Books of another class are called auxiliary books Such are invoice, inventory, order, cash, sales, bill, and check books There is usually kept a "controlling account," in which all the minor accounts are totaled only, for ease in balancing At any time the state of a business may be ascertained by compiling a "balance sheet," which indicates the net worth by totaling the assets and liabilities of the business in two columns and showing a balance A profit and loss statement is the same thing in classified and detailed form and for a period between two balance sheets Single-entry bookkeeping enters all debits and credits in a single set of columns in a journal and labels each entry Dr (debit) or Cr (credit) Thus in a single entry only one element of a transaction is entered, in double entry both elements are entered Single entry fails to give detailed information as to the sources of gain or loss "Tabular" bookkeeping is a later form, using more columns, usually one for each department The "slip system" uses carbon copies of original entries to be arranged as convenient, or the slips themselves constitute the original entries and are kept in filing cases Card ledgers have each account on a separate card in a file case The slip system, card ledgers, and loose-leaf ledgers are adapted to the use of bookkeeping machines Such machines include those for registering cash sales, adding, multiplying, dividing, subtracting, card and loose-leaf ledger, order writing, billing, tabulation, and posting The Babylonians, Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans kept business records Double entry seems to have been first developed in the 14th and 15th cent by the north Italians, hence it has been called the Italian method Thence the system spread to the Netherlands, England, and elsewhere Single entry developed later In recent years bookkeeping has been greatly improved and many mechanical devices, such as those already mentioned, have been invented Vouchers, slips, and cards have taken the place of bound books, especially in large businesses See also ACCOUNTING

Book of Common Prayer, title given to the service book used in the Church of England and in other Anglican churches The first complete English Book of Common Prayer was published in 1549 under Edward VI Essentially it was a selection and translation from the BREVIARY and the MISSAL, with some additions from other sources It was made compulsory by an act of uniformity Revision, undertaken by Thomas CRANMER, resulted in the Prayer Book of 1552, which showed the influence of foreign reformers then resident in England, for it made possible a wide diversity of views regarding the Eucharist, all justified by this official service book This prayer book was in use only about eight months before Queen Mary's repeal legislation brought back the Latin rite In 1559, under Elizabeth, the Prayer Book of 1552 was restored in a slightly altered version From 1645 to 1660, under the Commonwealth and Protectorate, the prayer book was suppressed In a new revision after the Restoration, it was again declared the only legal service book for use in England by an act of uniformity (1662) Alterations in the 1662 revision were largely those making for liturgical improvement In England no further revision of importance has been adopted A revised form submitted to Parliament in 1927 was passed by the House of Lords but rejected by the House of Commons It was resubmitted (with certain modifications) in 1928 and again rejected In 1789, when the first General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church (see EPISCOPAL CHURCH, PROTESTANT) in the United States met, a revised version of the Book of Common Prayer was adopted, it embodied such changes as were required by the new conditions For greater flexibility in matters of worship and for conformity with present times, revised forms were prepared in 1892 and 1928 See histories of the prayer book by Percy Dearmer (1933) and Verney Johnstone, Ernest Evans, and L C Lewis (1949), J W Suter and G J Cleaveland, The American Book of Common Prayer (1949)

Book of Concord, name under which the collected documents of the authoritative confessions of faith of the Lutheran Church were published in 1580, the 50th anniversary of the Augsburg Confession The Apostles', Nicene, and Athanasian creeds were included with the particular confessions which had appeared from 1530 to 1580 These were the Augsburg Confession, Apology of the Augsburg Confession, Schmalkald Articles, Luther's Larger and Smaller Catechisms, and the Formula of Concord

Book of Kells see KELLS, Co Meath, Ireland

Book of the Dead, Egyptian text established in its present form in the XXVI dynasty (663-525 B C) The greater part of its charms, formulas, and other funerary literature, however, is found in pyramid inscriptions and in papyri dating from the XVIII dynasty (1580-1350 B C) It contains some account of the afterworld and many of the basic ideas of EGYPTIAN RELIGION The first English translation was by Samuel Birch, the most celebrated by Sir Peter Le Page Renouf

bookplate, a label pasted in a book to indicate ownership, called also ex libris [from the books of] The bookplate is usually of paper on which heraldic or other designs are engraved or printed A clay tablet (7th cent B C), reading, "Property of Assurbanipal, king of the world, king of Assyria," has been found The earliest printed bookplates date from c 1480 in Germany Dürer designed and engraved a number of bookplates In colonial America, Henry Dunster, the first president of Harvard (1640–54), had three different bookplates which he brought from England A Stephen Daye bookplate of 1642 may have been printed here, but the John Cotton plate of 1674 certainly was Paul Revere was well known for his bookplate engravings Another early American bookplate engraver was Nathaniel Hurd See J B L Warren (Lord De Tabley), Guide to the Study of Bookplates (1880), Walter Hamilton, Dated Book-Plates (1895), W G Bowdoin, The Rise of the Book Plate (1901)

bookworm, popular name for several insects which bore through books, e g , the drugstore beetle, the spider beetle, and the deathwatch beetle Damage is also done to books by the book louse, which is sometimes called deathwatch

Boole, George, 1815–64, English mathematician and logician He became professor at Queen's College Cork, in 1849 He wrote An Investigation of the Laws of Thought (1854) and works on calculus and differential equations boomerang (bōō'murăng), missile in the form of a curved club used as a weapon The boomerang of the Australian aborigines (from whom the name is derived) is made in two types The smaller boomerang (1½ to 2 ft long) is used only for sport and is made and thrown so that it describes a circle with a diameter of 50 ft or more and returns to the thrower Using it requires great skill The larger war boomerang does not return The boomerang is best known as an Australian implement, but throwing sticks have been (and are) used by various peoples across the world, such as the Egyptians, the Assyrians, natives of India (who developed ivory and steel boomerangs), and the early Indian inhabitants of the American Southwest Some bone implements found in Western Europe are usually thought to be throwing sticks used by prehistoric man there. The throwing knife used by some African natives works on the same principle,

Boone, Daniel, 1734–1820, American frontiersman, b Oley (now Exeter) township, near Reading, Pa The Boones, English Quakers, left Pennsylvania in 1750 and settled (1751 or 1752) in the Yadkin valley of North Carolina Daniel served as a wagoner in Braddock's ill-fated expedition (1755) against Fort Duquesne (Pittsburgh) and almost certainly took part in Gen John Forbes's successful march on the same place in 1758 He made a trip to Florida after that region became British territory in 1763, but his wife, the former Rebecca Bryant, whom he married in 1756, refused to settle there Thus was one of the few times she vetoed his plans, for she was a typically courageous frontier woman who more than fulfilled one third of Daniel's prescription for happiness—possession of "a good gun, a good horse, and a good wife" Boone did a little farming and much hunting, first visiting (1767) Kentucky on one of his long hunts He had first heard of Kentucky from John Finley, veteran Indian trader, during the Braddock campaign After Finley, 14 years later, turned up in the Yadkin valley as an itinerant peddler and repeated his marvelous tales, Boone, with a small party, explored (1769–71) the region thoroughly and was delighted at its prospects Indian attacks turned back his first colonizing attempt (1773), but in March, 1775, as advance agent for Richard HENDERSON and the TRANSYLVANIA COMPANY and with an armed band of 30 men, he blazed the famous WILDERNESS ROAD and founded Boonesboro (or Boonesborough) on the Kentucky river Henderson arrived in a few weeks with additional settlers, and later in the same season Boone guided a second party, including his family When Kentucky was made a county of Virginia in 1776, he was elected a captain of militia In the American Revolution, while on a saltmaking expedition to the Blue Licks on the Licking, Boone and his party were captured (Feb, 1778) by Shawnee Indians and taken to British headquarters at Detroit Highly regarded by the Indians he was adopted into the tribe Boone deluded his captors into thinking that he would prevail on the other settlers to surrender, but, after four months of captivity, he escaped in time to prepare Boonesboro for an attack, which failed A disgruntled element charged Boone with disloyalty, and though he was promptly acquitted and elected major, he left Boonesboro and, after collecting his family, which had returned to North Carolina after his capture, founded (1779) a new settlement, Boone's Station, near what is now Athens, Ky He was made lieutenant colonel of the militia and sheriff of newly organized Fayette co and was elected to the first of several terms as representative in the Virginia legislature After the American Revolution he moved to Maysville, where he dealt in land and kept a tavern Later he lived at Point Pleasant (now W Va) and around 1795 settled in what is now Nicholas co, Ky His titles to large tracts of land were adjudged imperfect, and despite his services to Kentucky, he lost his best holdings through ejectment suits Disgusted, Rebecca and he followed (1799) a son to Missouri, where the Spanish government granted him a large tract in the Femme Osage valley and made him district magistrate When the United States assumed jurisdiction over this territory after the Louisiana Purchase (1803), his land titles were again found to be defective, but the direct intercession of Congress restored part of his acreage His adventures became well known through the so-called autobiographical account which appeared in the widely read Discovery, Settlement, and Present State of Kentucke (1784), by John FILSON, and Lord Byron's verses on him in Don Juan gave his name international prominence The best biography is John Bakeless, Master of the Wilderness Daniel Boone (1939) See also biographies by R G Thwaites (1902) and Stewart Edward White (1922)

Boone 1 City (pop 12,373), co seat of Boone co, central Iowa, N of Des Moines and on the Des Moines river Laid out in 1865 by the railroad, it annexed (1887) the near-by rival town of Boonesboro (founded 1851) It is a railroad, industrial, and mining center with various manufactures and deposits of coal, clay, and gravel It has a junior college Ledges State Park is near by 2 Town (pop 1,788), co seat of Watauga co, W N C, in the Blue Ridge S of Bristol, Tenn, settled in the 18th cent It is a resort in a farm and livestock area Boone lies in territory once occupied by the WATAUGA ASSOCIATION The Appalachian State Teachers College is here, and a state fish hatchery is near by

Boonesboro, locality, central Ky, on the south bank of the Kentucky river and SE of Lexington It was an early settlement, named for Daniel BOONE, who built a small fort here (1775) under orders from the TRANSYLVANIA COMPANY, organized by Richard HENDERSON. It was the seat of government of Transylvania for several years and was frequently the object of Indian attacks

Booneville. 1 City (pop 2,324), a co seat of Logan co, W Ark, in a farm area of the Ouachita foothills Near by are the state tuberculosis sanatorium and the Ouachita National Forest 2 Town (pop 1,893), co seat of Prentiss co, NE Miss, S of Corinth, in a farm area, settled 1859, inc 1869. Sheridan won a Civil War battle here (1862)

Boonsboro, town (pop 938), NW Md, SE of Hagerstown It is famous for its Crystal Grottoes

Boonton, town (pop 6,739), N N J, NNE of Morristown, settled 1760, inc 1867 Boonton had the first bakelite factory Radio communication apparatus is made here

Boonville 1 City (pop 4,526), co seat of Warrick co, SW Ind, NE of Evansville, platted 1818 Its products include coal, tobacco, and flour Scales Lake State Forest is near by 2 City (pop 6,089), co seat of Cooper co, central Mo, on the Missouri river and W of Columbia, in a grain and livestock area The region was settled in 1810, the city laid out in 1817 Corncob pipes are manufactured Kemper Military Academy (junior college, 1844) and a state training school for boys are here A Civil War battle, resulting in Union victory, was fought near by, June 17, 1861 3 Village (pop 2,076), central N Y, N of Utica, settled c 1791, inc 1855 It is a trade center for a dairy region Walter D Edmonds was born here

Boötes (bō-ō'tēz) [Gr, =plowman], northern constellation which contains the bright star Arcturus It is one of the earliest constellations recorded In old star atlases it is represented by a man's figure holding with one hand two leashed dogs and bearing a spear or staff in the other hand

Booth, name of a family prominent in the SALVATION ARMY, founded by William BOOTH His wife, Catherine Mumford Booth (1829–90), whom he married in 1855, played a leading part in the foundation and development of the Salvation Army, particularly devoting herself to the work among women and children Their eldest son, Bramwell Booth (1856–1929), succeeded his father in 1912 as general of the Salvation Army Another son, Ballington Booth (1859–1940), first was commander (1885–87) of the Army in Australia and then was commander (1887–96) in the United States, where his wife, Maud Charlesworth Ballington Booth (1865–1948), shared his labors In 1896 they withdrew from the Salvation Army and founded the VOLUNTEERS OF AMERICA A daughter of William Booth, Emma Moss Booth-Tucker (1860–1903), was in charge (1880–88) of the international training homes of the Salvation Army She and her husband, Frederick St George de Latour Booth-Tucker (1853–1929), who had resigned from the India civil service to join the Salvation Army, jointly commanded the Army in the United States from 1896 until her death in 1903, upon their marriage he had added Booth to his name See also BOOTH, EVANGELINE CORY

Booth, Barton, 1681–1733, English actor The leading tragedian of his time, he won fame as Brutus, King Lear, and Henry VIII and as the Ghost in Hamlet He was engaged by Betterton at Lincoln's Inn Fields, 1700–1704, accompanied him to the new Haymarket Theatre in 1705, and became, by command of Queen Anne, one of the joint managers of Drury Lane c 1713

Booth, Charles, 1840–1916, English social investigator, pioneer in developing the social survey method Aided by such notable social scientists as Octavia Hill, Beatrice Webb and Graham Balfour, he made an exhaustive statistical study of poverty in London, showing its extent causes, and location This was published as Life and Labour of the People in London (17 vols, 1891–1903) Booth was also active in reform groups in the interest of the poor and aged His other writings include Old Age Pensions and the Aged Poor (1899) and Industrial Unrest and Trade Union Policy (1914) See Charles Booth a Memoir (1918)

Booth, Edwin, 1833–93, American actor, b Tudor Hall, near Bel Air, Md The second son of Junius Brutus Booth, he made his debut at the Boston Museum (1849) as Tressel to his father's Richard III After years of tours to California, Hawaii, and Australia, he appeared in New York (1857) as Sir Giles Overreach in Massinger's New Way to Pay Old Debts and as Richard III, with instantaneous success He created a profound impression as Lear, Richelieu, and Shylock In 1864, he leased the Winter Garden theater, New York, where a performance of Hamlet gave him fame His magnificent Shakesperian productions at the Winter Garden terminated in 1865, when his brother John Wilkes BOOTH assassinated Lincoln Edwin Booth was forced to retire, but returned (1866) to play Hamlet to enthusiastic audiences In 1869 he built the Booth Theatre, New York, where he continued his career, presenting such stars as Salvini and Ristori in Shakspere until his bankruptcy (1873) His English tours (1861–62, 1880–82), his association with Lawrence Barrett (1887–89), and his appearances with Helena Modjeska (1889–90) all met with success In 1891 he made his last appearance at the Brooklyn Academy of Music as Hamlet The founder and first president of the Player's Club, he bequeathed his New York home to this organization Booth had grace, gentleness, and a restraint that was rare in the theater of his time He was the first great American tragedian. See Lawrence Hutton, Edwin Booth (1893), Richard Lockridge, The Darling of Misfortune (1932), E M Royle, Edwin Booth as I Knew Him (1933), Otis Skinner, The Last Tragedian (1939), Stanley Kimmel, The Mad Booths of Maryland (1940)

Booth, Evangeline Cory, 1865–, general of the SALVATION ARMY, b England, daughter of William Booth At the age of 17, she began evangelistic preaching She was field commissioner of the Salvation Army in London for five years, commander of the Army in Canada from 1895 to 1904, and commander in the United States from 1904 to 1934 Miss Booth was general of the international Salvation Army from 1934 to 1939 Her works include Love Is All (1925), Songs of the Evangel (1927), and Woman (1930) See also BOOTH, family See biography by P W Wilson (1948)

Booth, John Wilkes (wilks), 1838–65, American actor, the assassin of Abraham LINCOLN, b near Bel Air, Md, son of Junius Brutus Booth and brother of Edwin Booth He made his debut at 17 in Baltimore, toured widely, and soon became a star, winning acclaim for his Shaksperian roles Unlike the rest of his family, Booth was an ardent Confederate sympathizer He had joined (1859) the Virginia militia company which assisted in the capture of John BROWN, but did not enter Confederate service in the Civil War Instead the charming egomaniac continued with his theatrical career in the North For some six months in 1864–65 he had plans to abduct Lincoln and carry him to Richmond, a scheme which was frustrated when Lincoln failed to appear (March 20, 1865) at the spot where Booth and his six fellow conspirators lay in wait On Good Friday, April 14, 1865, Booth, having learned that Lincoln planned to attend Laura Keene's performance of Our American Cousin at Ford's Theater in Washington on that evening, plotted the assassination of the President (a deed he probably first had in mind only a few days before). Vice President Andrew Johnson, and Secretary of State William H Seward Lewis Thornton Powell, who called himself Payne, guided by David E Herold, seriously wounded Seward and three others at Seward's house George A Atzerodt, assigned to Johnson, lost his nerve The main act Booth naturally reserved for himself His crime was performed a little after 10 P M, when he entered the presidential box unobserved, suddenly shot Lincoln, and vaulted to the stage (breaking his left leg in the process) shouting "Sic semper tyrannis! The South is avenged!" He then went behind the scenes and down the back stairs to a waiting horse upon which he made his escape Not until April 26, after a hysterical two-week search by the army and secret service forces, was he discovered, hiding in a barn on Garrett's farm near Bowling Green, Caroline co, Va The barn was set afire and Booth was either shot by his pursuers or shot himself rather than surrender Although it has been said that no dead body was ever more completely identified, the myth, completely unsupported by evidence, that Booth escaped has persisted (see, for example, Izola Forrester, This One Mad Act, 1937) For the fate of others involved, see SURRATT, MARY EUGENIA, and MUDD SAMUEL ALEXANDER See also D M De Witt The Assassination of Abraham Lincoln (1909), Lloyd Lewis, Myths after Lincoln (1929), Francis Wilson, John Wilkes Booth (1929), Asia Booth Clarke Booth's sister, The Unlocked Book (written 1874, pub 1938), Philip Van Doren Stern, The Man Who Killed Lincoln (1939), G S Bryan, The Great American Myth (1940)

Booth, Junius Brutus, 1796–1852, English actor After experience in the provinces (1813–15), he appeared at Covent Garden, playing Iago to Edmund Kean's Othello and, in 1817, Richard III, the first role to establish him as a rival of Kean In 1821 he came to the United States, where he spent most of his remaining life He had a full, rich voice and an imposing presence, and his portrayals of Richard III Shylock, Brutus, and Sir Giles Overreach made him one of the great figures in the 19th-century theater He had three sons, Edwin Booth, who surpassed him as an actor, John Wilkes Booth, and Junius Brutus Booth, Jr See Stanley Kimmel, The Mad Booths of Maryland (1940)

Booth, William, 1829–1912, English religious leader, founder and first general of the SALVATION ARMY, b Nottingham Converted at 15, he entered the ministry of the Methodist New Connexion Church in 1852, but in 1861 he began independent evangelistic work In 1865, with the able help of his wife, Catherine Booth, he started the East London Revival Society (soon known as the Christian Mission) in Whitechapel, London The Christian Mission developed in 1878 into the Salvation Army General Booth, a remarkable organizer, traveled widely, extending the field of labor to other parts of the world and winning recognition wherever he went His best-known book is In Darkest England and the Way Out (1890) See also BOOTH, family See biographies by G S Railton (2d ed, 1912), Harold Begbie (1920), and St John Ervine (1934)

Boothbay, boatbuilding town (pop 1,370), S Maine, S of Wiscasset, settled 1630, inc 1764 It grew as a shipping, shipbuilding, and fishing center and in the 20th cent. developed as a resort and artists' colony Boothbay Harbor, town (pop 2,121), was set off in 1889 A summer theater was opened in 1934 There is a Federal fish hatchery

Boothia Peninsula (bōō'thēu), N Canada, the northernmost tip of the North American mainland It is almost an island, being connected with the mainland only by the narrow Isthmus of Boothia Topographically and in climate it is like the islands of the Arctic Ocean Only a narrow strait separates it in the north from Somerset Island To the east the Gulf of Boothia separates it from Baffin Island The peninsula was discovered and explored (1829–33) by John Ross and named for a patron of the expedition, Sir Felix Booth Near the south west end the expedition of Sir John FRANKLIN ended in tragedy Roald AMUNDSEN explored the peninsula again in 1903–5 The north magnetic pole is in the peninsula

Bootle, county borough (1931 pop 76,770, 1947 estimated pop 67,480), Lancashire, England, near Liverpool and on the east bank of the Mersey It has extensive docks adjacent to those of Liverpool Besides shipping, its industries include tanning, engineering, and flour milling bootlegging, in the United States, the illegal distribution or production of liquor and other such products First practiced when liquor taxes were high, it was instrumental in defeating attempts to regulate the liquor business by taxation After the appearance of local and state option, "dry" territories were supplied with boot-legged liquor There was also some smuggling from foreign countries in order to evade customs duties In the period of PROHIBITION these activities increased greatly, and by the end of a decade they were well organized into a large illegitimate industry Much violence was connected with it Certain areas were dominated by gangs which fought to defend or extend their territories The retail outlet in the prohibition period was the "speak-easy," though a house-to-house delivery to established customers was also well developed A high degree of organization also prevailed in international liquor smuggling The combination of graft and violence accompanying this industry, especially in areas predominantly "wet," became so intolerable that it was an important factor in the final repeal of prohibition See James Barbican, Confessions of a Rum-Runner (1928), F F Van de Water, The Real McCoy (1931), Report on the Enforcement of the Prohibition Laws (1931) by the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement (Wickersham Commission)

Booz (bō'ŏz), the same as BOAZ 1.

Bopp, Franz (frants' bŏp'), 1791–1867, German philologist A professor at the Univ of Berlin from 1821 to 1864, he did research in many languages and earned an enormous reputation as a scholar by demonstrating the relationship of the Indo-European languages in his Vergleichende Grammatik [comparative grammar] (1833–52)

Bora, Katharina von see LUTHER, MARTIN

boracic acid. see BORIC ACID

Borah, William Edgar, 1865-1940, U S Senator, b near Fairfield, Ill , educated (1885–87) at the Univ of Kansas Admitted to the bar in Kansas in 1889, he became prominent after 1890 in law and politics at Boise, Idaho Shortly after election to the Senate, he in 1907 gained national attention by his prosecution of William HAYWOOD and two other I W W men who were accused of murdering (1905) ex-Governor Frank Steunenberg His long (1907–40) career in the Senate lasted until his death There he was outstanding as an orator, as an expounder of the Constitution, and as a Republican notable for his independent stands (he was sometimes called "the great opposer") He joined the Insurgent revolt against Taft and supported Theodore Roosevelt for the Republican nomination in 1912 but stopped short of joining the PROGRESSIVE PARTY Borah was one of the leaders in defeating Senate ratification of the Versailles Treaty and the League of Nations after the First World War When Woodrow Wilson's term ended and the Republicans came into power, Borah's influence grew From 1925 to 1933 he was chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, and his major interest was in foreign policy He early asked for recognition of the USSR, favored the collection of war debts, and opposed intervention in Latin American countries to protect U S investments An advocate of disarmament and the outlawing of war, he suggested the Washington Conference (see NAVAL CONFERENCES) of 1921–22 and the five-year naval "holiday" adopted by the Hoover administration in 1931 and promoted the Kellogg-Briand Pact, in 1939 he fought revision of the Neutrality Act. In domestic affairs, Borah staunchly favored prohibition. He spoke against economic monopoly and for enforcement of the anti-trust laws, but he was opposed to extension of governmental powers and in the administration of F D Roosevelt disapproved the NRA and many other New Deal measures The biography (1936) by C O Johnson is a sympathetic portrayal.

Borah, Mount [for William E Borah], peak, 12,655 ft high, central Idaho, in the Lost River Mts., highest known point in the state.

Boras, Swed Borås (bōō'rōs'), city (pop 51,651), Alvsborg co , SW Sweden, on the Viske river Incorporated in 1622, it is an important textile manufacturing center

borax [Arabic], compound of sodium, boron, and oxygen, a hydrated (see HYDRATE) crystalline salt When pure it appears as colorless or white monoclinic crystals which when heated change to a transparent glasslike substance Borax is widely and diversely used, e g , as a mild antiseptic, a cleansing agent, sometimes as a preservative, as a flux in the WELDING of metals and in soldering, in the manufacture of enamels and shellacs, in making pyrex glass, and in fixing colors on porcelain It occurs free in the United States in Nevada, Oregon, and California (Borax Lake in Death Valley) and in Tibet, where it is called tincal Practically the whole supply of borax for the United States is obtained from California, being prepared from the borates colemanite and ulexite, and by crystallization from solution In large doses borax is toxic (for antidote, see POISONING, table) In the borax bead test for metals in chemical analysis, borax is held in a loop of platinum wire and heated to a glassy "bead" This bead is then dipped in the substance to be tested and is heated again (oxidizing flame) The bead is colored according to the metal present, e g , if chromium is present the bead is colored green, if cobalt, blue, if copper, blue or green, if manganese, amethyst, and if nickel, brown

Borchgrevink, Carsten Egeberg (kär'stün ā'gubĕr' bôrk'grā"vĭngk), 1864–1934, Norwegian antarctic explorer He emigrated to Australia in 1888, and in 1894 he went south in a whaling vessel and at Cape Adare took part in the first landing on the continent of Antarctica In 1898 he left England in command of an expedition on the Southern Cross Disembarking at Cape Adare, he sent the ship back to New Zealand He and his companions were the first to spend a winter on the continent itself In the spring he explored the Ross Sea and did extensive mapping See his First on the Antarctic Continent (1901)

Bordeaux, Henri Charles Ferdinand Marie Dieudonné, duc de see CHAMBORD, HENRI, COMTE DE

Bordeaux, Henry (ärē' bôrdō') 1870–, French novelist, whose popular stories, witty and well written, were intended to propagate the virtues of family life They are usually laid in Bordeaux's own picturesque upper Savoy Typical of his novels is Les Roquevillard (1902, Eng tr , The Will to Live, 1915), and of his long short stories La Visionnaire

Bordeaux (bôrdō'), city (pop 238,653), capital of Gironde dept , on the Garonne It is the chief economic and cultural center of SW France Its active port is accessible to ocean-going ships from the Atlantic through the GIRONDE river Although Bordeaux has important shipyards and industries (particularly in machines and chemicals) its principal source of wealth is the wine trade Bordeaux WINE is the generic name of the wines grown in the Bordelais region MÉDOC (W of the Gironde), Graves and Sauternes (S of Bordeaux), and Côtes (E of the Gironde) are the collective names of the principal vineyards which furnish the entire world with superfine red and white wines The region is dotted with châteaux which give their names to many vineyards The Roman Burdigala, Bordeaux was the capital of the province of Aquitania and a prosperous commercial city, described by AUSONIUS, who was born here It became an archiepiscopal see in the 4th cent Its importance, fallen under Visigothic and Frankish domination, was revived when it became (11th cent) the seat of the dukes of AQUITAINE ELEANOR OF AQUITAINE, who was born here, precipitated through her successive marriages to Louis VII of France and Henry II of England the long struggle between the two nations which placed Bordeaux under English rule from 1152 to 1453 Its commercial importance dates from that period Reconquered by France, it became the capital of the province of GUIENNE Louis XI established the powerful PARLEMENT of Bordeaux and granted great privileges to the university founded (1441) by Pope Eugene IV The intellectual reputation of Bordeaux was made by Montaigne and by Montesquieu, who were born near by and were both magistrates in that city Bordeaux reached the height of its prosperity in the 18th cent Its relations with England were always close, many English firms exporting wine and spirits established themselves here Bordeaux was the center of the Girondists in the French Revolution and the site of the National Assembly of 1871 which established the Third Republic In 1914 and again in 1940 it was a temporary seat of the French government It suffered some damage in the Second World War, and many of the elegant 18th-century buildings (planned by Victor Louis, Jacques Gabriel, and others), which made the center of Bordeaux an architectural marvel, were injured The Gothic Cathedral of St André is undamaged. Bordeaux has several excellent art museums.

Bordeaux mixture, a FUNGICIDE made by combining bluestone (copper sulphate), lime, and water in varying proportions, widely used for spraying orchards, for seed treatment, and for dusting It was originated in France and was for a long time the most important fungicide in use According to the formula for use on most plants, 4 lb. of copper sulphate are mixed with 4 lb of lime and 50 gal of water For sal soda Bordeaux, see BURGUNDY MIXTURE

Borden, Sir Frederick William, 1847–1917, Canadian statesman, b. Cornwallis, N S , educated at King's College, N S , and Harvard Medical School. For some years he practiced medicine at Canning, N S He entered (1874) the Canadian House of Commons as a Liberal and served (1896–1911) as Laurier's minister of militia and defense Under his ministry, Canada took control from Great Britain of the naval bases at Halifax and Esquimalt Borden represented Canada on the imperial council of defense

Borden, Gail, 1801–74, American surveyor and inventor, b Norwich, N Y He was for six years a deputy surveyor in Mississippi, afterwards he joined the colony of Stephen F AUSTIN in Texas Here, besides farming, stock raising, and newspaper activities, he superintended the surveying of lands for Austin He laid out the city of Galveston and became collector of customs there In 1851 he returned to New York and spent his time working on a process of evaporating milk, which he patented in 1856 Jeremiah Milbank backed him financially, and the first evaporating plant was opened in 1858 During the Civil War his product was found to be of the greatest value for the army, and its use spread rapidly afterwards Borden subsequently also patented processes for concentrating apple juice and other fruit juices

Borden, Lizzie Andrew, 1860–1927, New England spinster, accused of killing her father and her stepmother, b Fall River, Mass Mr and Mrs Borden were hacked to death with an ax on Aug 4, 1892 Lizzie Borden was allegedly at the time in the barn, but she was accused of the murders and tried The trial (in which she did not testify) ended with a verdict of not guilty See Edmund Pearson, The Trial of Lizzie Borden (1937)

Borden, Sir Robert Laird, 1854–1937, Canadian statesman, b Grand Pré, N S Called to the bar in 1878 and created queen's counsel in 1891, he won a considerable reputation as a constitutional lawyer He was elected to the Canadian House of Commons for Halifax in 1896 and in 1901 succeeded Sir Charles Tupper as leader of the Conservative party He was in opposition until 1911, when with the downfall of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's government Borden became prime minister and headed a Conservative government until 1917 and a Union government until his retirement for reasons of health in 1920 He is remembered for his leadership in carrying Canada through the First World War and subsequently in defining the new status of the self-governing dominions in the British Empire Largely through his efforts the dominions were given separate representation in the League of Nations At his insistence also the peace treaties were separately ratified by the Canadian Parliament before they were signed by the king Though Borden resigned the premiership in 1920, his service to his country continued, he represented Canada at the conference in Washington (1921–22) and in the League of Nations He delivered the Rhodes Memorial Lectures at Oxford in 1927 and served (1927–31) as the first president of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs His Canadian Constitutional Studies (1922) and Canada in the Commonwealth (1929) are significant works See his memoirs (ed by Henry Borden 2 vols , 1938)

Bordentown, city (pop 4,223), W N J , on the Delaware between Trenton and Burlington and at the west end of the old Delaware and Raritan Canal, settled 1682, inc as a borough 1825, as a city 1867 In 1778 the British destroyed many buildings Joseph Bonaparte lived here (1816–39) Clara Barton's school (built 1739) was made a Red Cross memorial Among Bordentown's famous residents were Thomas Paine, Francis Hopkinson, Patience Wright, and Richard Watson Gilder The city has a state industrial school

Border, the, in British history, region about the boundary between England and Scotland From the coast near Berwick along the Tweed river through the Cheviot Hills and on to Solway Firth, the narrow, rugged country is dotted with sites of battles between Scots and English and between rival Border lords The wild country figures much in literature—in legend, in folklore, and particularly in the Border ballads

Border terrier. see TERRIER

Bordet, Jules (zhül' bôrdā'), 1870–, Belgian serologist and immunologist, M D Univ of Brussels, 1892 He became director of the Pasteur Institute in Brussels in 1901 and professor at the Univ of Brussels in 1907 With Octave Gengou he devised (1900) the technique of the complement fixation reaction (applied by Wassermann to the diagnosis of syphilis) and discovered (1906) the bacillus of whooping cough For his work in immunity he received the 1919 Nobel Prize in Medicine

Bordone, Paris (pä'rēs bôrdō'nā), 1500–1571?, Venetian painter of the Renaissance; pupil of Titian.

He excelled in portraits, but also painted mythological scenes and religious pictures The Fisherman Presenting the Ring to the Doge, his best-known painting, is in the Venice Academy, Christ and the Doctors is in the Gardner Museum, Boston, Diana and Minerva at the Forge of Vulcan are in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D C bore, inrush of water which advances upstream with a wavelike front It is caused by the progress of the incoming tide from a wide-mouthed estuary into its narrower portion The tidal movement tends to be slowed down as it reaches the shallower water and meets the river current and therefore piles up and forms a tidal wave In the Bristol Channel spring tides cause the water to rise to over 40 ft and produce a current of c 10 mi an hour Bores are found also in the Bay of Fundy, in Solway Firth, in the Severn, Seine, and Hooghly rivers, and in Hangchow Bay

Boreas (bō'rēus), in Greek legend, the north wind, son of ASTRAEUS and EOS

borecole see KALE

Borel, Félix Édouard Émile (fālēks' ādwär' āmāl' bôrĕl'), 1871–, French mathematician He is noted for his work in infinitesimal calculus and in the calculus of probabilities He was professor at the Univ of Paris (1904–41), director of the Henri Poincaré Institute (from 1927), and a representative in the French chamber of deputies (1924 36)

Borelli, Giovanni Alfonso (jōvän'nē alfōn'sō bôrĕlē), 1608–79, Italian physicist and astronomer He is reported to have been the first to point out the parabolic paths of comets He was professor of mathematics at both Pisa and Messina In his De motu animalium , a section of which was translated in 1911 as The Flight of Birds, he expounded his theory of the mechanics of flight

Boreman, Arthur Ingram, 1823–96, first governor of West Virginia (1863-69), b Waynesburg, Pa Admitted (1845) to the Pennsylvania bar, he moved in 1846 to Parkersburg Va (now W Va), where he became a prominent lawyer A member (1855 61) of the Virginia house of delegates, Boreman opposed secession and presided over the Wheeling Convention of June, 1861, which set up the loyal government of Virginia with Francis H PIERPONT as governor It was this government which consented to the partition of Virginia and on June 20, 1863, Boreman was inaugurated governor of the new state of West Virginia He was reelected in 1864 and 1866, but resigned in 1869 to enter the U S Senate, where he served until 1875

Borenius, Tancred, 1885 1948, art historian and teacher, b Finland He became (1922) professor of the history of art at University College, London From 1933 he directed the excavations of Clarendon Palace near Salisbury, England He was managing director of the Burlington Magazine from 1940 to 1945 His principal publications are The Painters of Vicenza (1909), Four Early Italian Engravers (1923), The English Primitives (1924), English Medieval Painting (with E W Tristram, 1927), The Iconograph of St Thomas of Canterbury (1929) Florentine Frescoes (1930), English Painting in the XVIIIth Century (1938), and Dutch Indoor Subjects (1946)

borer, name applied to various animals which are injurious because of their ability to penetrate plant or animal tissues Some borers among insects are beetles, e g , the flat-headed apple-tree borer, a serious pest of many shade and fruit trees, the roundheaded apple-tree borer, the bronze birch, the locust, the elm, the shot-hole, and the poplar borers Other boring insects are moths which are harmful in the larval stage, e g , the peach, the currant, the squash, the lilac, and the southern cornstalk borers and the European CORN BORER Some mollusks, e g , the SHIPWORM and the piddock, are sometimes called borers Much harm is done by the hagfish, or borer, a parasite which burrows into the bodies of other fish

Borga, Finland see PORVOO

Borger (bôr'gur), city (1940 pop 10,018, 1947 estimated pop 17,000), extreme N Texas, NE of Amarillo and near the Canadian river, in the Panhandle, inc 1926 After the discovery of oil in 1925, Borger grew as the industrial center of a vast natural-gas and oil field Here and near by are refineries, carbon-black plants, synthetic-rubber plants, and related undertakings

Borgerhout (bôr'khûrhout), suburb (pop 51,174) of Antwerp, Belgium

Borges, Jorge Luis (hôr'hā lwĕs' bôr'hās), 1899–, Argentine poet, b Buenos Aires, educated in Switzerland He was a conspicuous representative of ultraismo, a poetic movement later known as vanguardismo, which appeared in both Spain and Spanish America during the First World War It followed the decline of MODERNISMO and made use of bold images, daring metaphors, and pure poetry, divorced not only from the past but from factual reality Góngora was revived, and emotions and romanticism were banned Borges nevertheless, because of his love for his native land, often made use of creole subjects His best-known verses were collected in Fervor de Buenos Aires (1923) and Luna de enfrente (1925).

Borgese, Giuseppe Antonio (jōōzĕp'pā āntō'nyō bôrjā'zā), 1882–, Italian-American author, b near Palermo, Ph D, Univ of Florence, 1903 From 1910 to 1931 he taught at the universities of Rome and Milan An opponent of Fascism, he came to the United States in 1931 and was naturalized in 1938 He first taught at Smith College (1932–35) and then at the Univ of Chicago (from 1936) He is secretary of the Committee to Frame a World Constitution, he was the chief author of its Chicago draft (1947) All his activities— philosophic, poetic, political—are under the concept of spiritual unity or, in his word, "syntax " His works of criticism, fiction, and poetry include the novel Rubè (1921, Eng tr , 1923) and, written in English, Goliath the March of Fascism (1937), The City of Man (with others, 1940), and Common Cause (1943)

Borghese (bôrgā'zā), Roman family of ancient nobility It produced one pope, PAUL V, several cardinals, and many prominent citizens Scipione Cardinal Borghese built the fine Villa Borghese in Rome Camillo Borghese, a general under Bonaparte, married Pauline BONAPARTE

Borghese, Villa, or Villa Umberto I (vēl'lä ōōmbĕr'tō prē'mō), summer palace built by Scipione Cardinal Borghese outside the Porta del Popolo, Rome In 1806 it yielded much of its priceless art to Paris It is now government owned and has become the repository for many of the paintings from the Borghese Palace

Borghese Warrior, Greek statue of the 1st cent B C by Agasias It is a study of athletic form, representing a single figure on foot in the attitude of attacking a mounted opponent Discovered in the 17th cent , it was formerly in the Villa Borghese, but is now in the Louvre

Borgia (bôr'jə), Span Borja (bôr'ha), Spanish-Italian noble family, originally from Aragon When Alfonso de Borja, cardinal-archbishop of Valencia, was pope as Calixtus III (1455–58), several relatives followed him to Rome His nephew Rodrigo became pope as ALEXANDER VI, and Rodrigo's natural children were Cesare and Lucrezia Borgia To the Spanish branch of the family belonged St FRANCIS BORGIA and Francisco Borja (1581–1658), a Spanish general and viceroy of Peru The direct line of the family, whose senior members bore the title duke of Gandia, died out in the 18th cent

Borgia, Cesare or Caesar (chā'zärā), c 1476–1507, Italian soldier and politician, younger son of Pope ALEXANDER VI and an outstanding figure of the Italian Renaissance Throughout his pontificate Alexander VI used his position to aggrandize his son A cardinal at the age of 17, Cesare resigned the dignity after the death (1498) of his elder brother, the duke of Gandia, in whose murder he was probably involved He now began his political career as papal legate to France He struck an alliance with Louis XII who made him duke of Valentinois (see VALENCE), and married (1499) Charlotte d'Albret, a sister of the king of Navarre The French having overrun Italy (see ITALIAN WARS), Cesare, with his father's encouragement, subdued the cities of the ROMAGNA (1499 1500) one by one Made duke of Romagna (1501) by the pope, Cesare also seized (1502) Piombino, Elba, Camerino, and the duchy of Urbino and he crowned his achievements by artfully luring his chief enemies to the castle of Sinigaglia, where he had them strangled Cesare was struck in 1503 by the same poison (or illness) that suddenly killed his father, but he recovered His political power, however, had suffered a fatal blow By killing his enemies, packing the college of cardinals, pushing his conquests as fast as possible, and buying the loyalty of the Roman gentry, he had hoped to make his position independent of the papacy or at least to insure the election of a pope to his liking However, Pius III after a short reign was succeeded by JULIUS II, an implacable enemy of Cesare Borgia Louis XII now also turned against him Julius demanded the immediate return of what territory remained to Cesare and had him arrested Cesare escaped, first to Naples, then to Spain, and he finally found refuge (1506) at the court of the king of Navarre He died fighting for him at Viana His former possessions had passed under direct papal rule, thus, Cesare must be regarded as instrumental in the consolidation of the Papal States, even if that was not his purpose The model used by MACCHIAVELLI for his Prince, Cesare was cruel treacherous and unscrupulous to the highest degree, yet these qualities, according to Machiavelli, were always subordinated to his superior intelligence, reason, never passion, dictated his deeds His administration of the Romagna was far better and more just than that of his predecessors In his vices, Cesare was not an exception to his age, but he was exceptional in his systematic application of ruthless opportunism His career, as idealized by Machiavelli, foreshadowed somewhat the modern Fascist methods of government See biographies by H W Woodward (1913) and Rafael Sabatini (1923), J A. Symonds, The Renaissance in Italy

Borgia, Francis. see FRANCIS BORGIA, SAINT

Borgia, Lucrezia (lōōkrā'tsya), 1480–1519, famous figure of the Italian Renaissance; daughter of Pope ALEXANDER VI Her first marriage (1492) to Giovanni Sforza of Pesaro was annulled in 1497, and she was married to Alfonso of Aragon, natural son of Alfonso II of Naples Her brother, Cesare Borgia, had her second husband murdered in 1500, and in 1501 Lucrezia was married to Alfonso d'Este, who became duke of Ferrara in 1505 As duchess of Ferrara, Lucrezia at last escaped the vicious atmosphere of her family Her brilliant court attracted many artists and poets, notably Ariosto, and her beauty, kindness, and piety won her universal esteem Rumors of her participation in her family's poison plots, of incestuous relations with her father and brother, and of her supposed extravagant vices have been disproved Nevertheless, Lucrezia Borgia remains best known as portrayed in Victor Hugo's drama and Donizetti's opera, both based on these legends An excellent and scholarly biography is Ferdinand Gregorovius, Lucrezia Borgia (rev ed , 2 vols , 1875, in German, Eng tr , 1949)

Borgia, Rodrigo see ALEXANDER VI

Borglum, Gutzon (John Gutzon de la Mothe Borglum) (bôr'glum), 1867–1941, American sculptor, b Idaho, son of a Danish physician and rancher He studied at the San Francisco Art Academy and in Paris at Julien's academy and the École des Beaux-Arts His first commission after his return to New York in 1901 was the statue of Lincoln which stands in the rotunda of the Capitol, Washington, D C Other works of his earlier period were a statue of Henry Ward Beecher (Brooklyn), Mares of Diomedes (Metropolitan Mus), and figures of the apostles for the Cathedral of St John the Divine, New York city He designed and began carving (1916) a Confederate memorial on Stone Mt , Ga The work was interrupted by the First World War but was resumed in 1924 As the result of a controversy with the Stone Mountain Memorial Association, Borglum ceased working and destroyed his models His gigantic MOUNT RUSHMORE NATIONAL MEMORIAL in South Dakota was authorized by act of Congress in 1925 Borglum had finished the heads of the four Presidents (Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and Theodore Roosevelt) when he died The work was finished by his son Lincoln Borglum Borglum was a man of tremendous vitality and decided opinions which led him into frequent controversies His brother Solon Hannibal Borglum, 1868–1922, was also a sculptor noted especially for his portrayal of horses, cattle, Indians and cowboys

Borgognone (bôrgōnyō'nā) or Bergognone (bĕr–), fl 1450–1523, Italian painter, known also as Ambrogio Stefani da Fossano (ambrō'jō stäfä'nē dä fôs-sä'nō) His most important works are his frescoes in the Certosa of Pavia Paintings by him are in the National Gallery, London, the Louvre, the Metropolitan Museum and the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D C , but the greater number are in the churches of Bergamo, Lodi, Milan, and Pavia

Bori, Lucrezia (lōōkrā'shu bô'rē), 1887–, Spanish soprano, whose real name was Borja (Ital Borgia) She made her debut (1908) in Rome as Micaela in Carmen and so impressed Puccini that he asked her to sing in his Manon Lescaut opposite Caruso in Paris in 1910 She was leading soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, New York (1912–15, 1920–36) In 1935 she was made a director of the Metropolitan Opera Association Her repertoire includes American, French, Italian, German, and Russian operas

boric acid or boracic acid (burĭ'sĭk, bō–), white, crystalline, weakly acidic compound composed of boron, hydrogen, and oxygen It is somewhat soluble in hot water (about 1 part to 3 of water), but only slightly so in cold water In solution it is commonly used as a mild antiseptic and eye wash It is sometimes used in the glazing of pottery, in mixtures used for fireproofing, and in making enamels Its use as a preservative for foods is generally prohibited since it is poisonous It is present in small quantities in the hot vapors issuing from the ground in the MAREMMA region in Tuscany It is absorbed from these vapors by water, which upon being evaporated yields crystals of the acid Boric acid is prepared also by the action of sulphuric acid on a borax solution The term boric acid is applicable to any acid formed by boric oxide, but commonly designates the orthoboric acid to which other forms—as metaboric and tetraboric acid, formed when orthoboric acid is heated —revert in solution

Borinage (bôrēnazh'), region, S Hainaut, Belgium, surrounding Mons and extending west to the French border It is an important coal-mining district and was long known for the miserable condition of its miners

Boring, Edwin Garrigues, 1886–, American psychologist, b Philadelphia, grad Cornell Univ (M E , 1908, Ph D , 1914) He taught at Harvard from 1922 and from 1924 was director of the psychological laboratory there He wrote a History of Experimental Psychology (1929) and The Physical Dimensions of Consciousness (1933) and edited Psychology for the Armed Services (1945)

Boris I, d 907, ruler (khan) of Bulgaria (853–88) He was baptized (865) and introduced Christianity of the Greek rite among the Bulgarians. In 888 he abdicated and retired into a monastery. His son was Tsar Simeon I

Boris III, 1894–1943, ruler (tsar) of Bulgaria (1918–43), son of Tsar FERDINAND, on whose abdication he succeeded to the throne He ruled constitutionally until 1934, when he set up a military dictatorship under his premier, Kimon Georgiev In 1935 he dismissed Georgiev and began his personal dictatorship He turned toward the AXIS Powers, forced Rumania in 1940 to restore S DOBRUJA to Bulgaria, and joined the Pact of Berlin in 1941 His refusal, while visiting Hitler in Berlin, to declare war on Russia as well as on England and the United States, was followed by his mysterious death shortly afterward His son, SIMEON II, succeeded under a regency Boris was famous for his favorite recreation, which was to drive railroad engines

Boris Godunov · see GODUNOV, BORIS

Borislav (bŭrĕ'slŭf), Pol Borysław (bôrĭs'wäf), city (pop 41,683), W Ukraine, in the Carpathian foothills It is the center of a productive oil field and of the richest ozocerite deposits in Europe Natural gas is used in Borislav industry, while the oil is piped to DROGOBYCH. A town of Galicia, Borislav passed to Austria in 1772, to Poland in 1919, and to the USSR in 1945

Borlange, Swed Borlänge (bôr'lĕng-u), industrial city (pop 19,809), Kopparberg co, central Sweden There are ironworks and paper and lumber mills

Born, Bertrand de see BERTRAND DE BORN

Börne, Karl Ludwig (lōōd'vĭkh bûr'nu), 1786–1837, German journalist, of Jewish origin, whose real name was Lob Baruch He studied medicine and political science and held an official post in Frankfurt until, after the fall of Napoleon, racial discrimination was restored His writings, generally satirical in tone, were directed against censorship and toward the encouragement of German liberalism He and Heine are considered the initiators of the Jewish influence in German literature

Borneo, island (286,969 sq mi, estimated pop 3,080,000), largest of the Malay Archipelago and third largest in the world, SW of the Philippine Islands and N of Java It is largely jungle, the interior is mountainous, reaching its highest point at Mt. Kinabalu (13,455 ft.) in the north The coastal area is generally swampy and fringed with mangrove forests Many of the rivers are navigable, the largest being the Kapuas in the west and the Barito in the south The climate is hot and humid, annual rainfall is more than 100 in., and there is a prolonged monsoon season There are forests of such valuable timber as sandalwood and camphor and extensive tracts of sago palm and coconut Rice and rubber are important crops The island is rich in minerals; iron, copper, and diamonds are mined, and there are deposits of gold silver, lead, and antimony There are coal mines and extensive oil fields The fauna is roughly similar to that of Sumatra and includes the elephant, rhinoceros, deer, orangutan, gibbon, and lemur The inhabitants of Borneo are chiefly Dyaks who live in the interior, some of them still practice head-hunting In the coastal areas live the Malays, Javanese, and Chinese In 1521 the Portuguese visited Borneo, they were followed by the Dutch and the English Dutch influence was established on the west coast in the early 1800s and was gradually extended to the south and east The two Dutch residencies of West Borneo and South and East Borneo were established as part of the Netherlands East Indies These former Dutch territories (208,285 sq mi, pop 2,168,661), comprising over two thirds of the island, were reorganized in 1949 as part of Indonesia and divided into the five autonomous areas of West Borneo, East Borneo, Great Dayak, Banjar, and Southeast Borneo British influence remains centered in the north and northwest in BRUNEI and the colonies of SARAWAK and NORTH BORNEO

Bornholm (bôrn'hôlm), island (227 sq mi, pop 47,185), Denmark, in the Baltic Sea, 24 mi off the Swedish coast It is a low tableland, rocky and steep on the northern and western coasts Agriculture and fishing are the chief occupations, granite and kaolin are the main exports The principal town and port is Ronne

Bornier, Henri, vicomte de (ārē' vēkōt' du bôrnyā'), 1825–1901, French poet and dramatist His one great success was the verse drama, La Fille de Roland [the daughter of Roland] (1875), a treatment of the motive of Le Cid of CORNEILLE

Bornu (bôr'nōō), former native state, NE Nigeria, extending W and S of Lake Chad It was divided between Great Britain, France, and Germany at the end of the 19th cent The German portion in 1922 went to Great Britain as part of the British Cameroons mandate of the League of Nations The former state, ruled by a sultan, first rose in the 10th cent The natives of the region which it occupied are Moslems See Sir Richard Palmer, The Bornu Sahara and Sudan (1936)

Borobudur or Boroboedoer (both bō'rōbōdōōr'), ruins of a great Buddhist monument in central Java, Indonesia It is a huge truncated pyramid covered with intricately carved blocks of volcanic stone A seated Buddha within may be seen from three platforms above the terraces encircling the pyramid Borobudur probably dates from the 8th and 9th cent

Borodin, Aleksandr Porfirevich (ŭlyĭksan'dur pûrfē'rĭvĭch bôrôdyēn'), 1833–87, Russian composer, chemist, and physician He studied at the academy of medicine in St Petersburg, where he later taught chemistry His belief in higher education for women led him to found a school of medicine for women His musical education was not extensive, consisting mainly of study with Balakirev His principal works are two symphonies, several very fine songs, an orchestral tone poem, In the Steppes of Central Asia (1880), and an opera, Prince Igor, left unfinished, which Rimsky-Korsakov and Glazunov completed It was first performed in St Petersburg in 1890 He left an unfinished symphony, later set in order and scored by Glazunov See biography by Gerald Abraham (1927), M D Calvocoressi and Gerald Abraham, Masters of Russian Music (1936), V I Seroff, The Mighty Five (1948)

Borodino (bŭrŭyēnô'), village, RSFSR, W of Mozhaisk, on the route of Napoleon's march on Moscow Here, in 1812, the Russians under Kutuzov long and heroically resisted the French The battle, which cost some 80,000 casualties, is described in Tolstoy's War and Peace

Boroimhe, Brian see BRIAN BORU

boron (bō'rŏn) [New Gr from borax], chemical element (symbol=B, for physical constants, see ELEMENT, table), appearing as either a brownish to yellow crystalline solid or a brown amorphous powder (see ALLOTROPY) Boron resists corrosion in the air under ordinary conditions, but at high temperatures it burns to form an oxide and a nitride It forms compounds, organic as well as inorganic, e g, with oxygen, the halogens, nitrogen, phosphorus, carbon (the CARBIDE is less hard only than the diamond), and sulphur The element does not occur free in nature, but in its compounds, especially the borates, as the borate of calcium (colemanite) and the borate of sodium and calcium (ulexite) It occurs also in the mineral TOURMALINE The element itself is not used commercially, but BORAX and BORIC ACID (or BORACIC acid) are important compounds Boron is prepared in the laboratory by the reduction of the oxide by an active metal, such as potassium or aluminum In 1808 it was first isolated in France by Joseph Louis Gay-Lussac and Louis Jacques Thénard, and in the same year in England by Sir Humphry Davy

Borotra, Jean (zhäʼ bôrôtra'), 1898–, French tennis player b Biarritz Borotra, called by his admirers "the Bounding Basque," became a top-ranking tennis star in the 1920s The many championships that he won include the covered court title (1922, 1924, 1926, 1927) and the national championship (1924) of France as well as the U S indoor singles title (1925, 1927) He was a member of the French Davis Cup team (with Henri Cochet and René Lacoste) that defeated the U S team in 1927 and held the trophy until 1933 He was the minister of sports (1940–42) of the Vichy government

Borough, Stephen (bŭ'ru, bŭ'rō), 1525–84, English navigator Under Richard Chancellor's direction he was master of the Edward Bonaventure, the first ship to round (1553) North Cape and reach Russia by the arctic route Sebastian CABOT and others who had fostered the plan formed the Muscovy Company and established profitable trade with Russia Sailing again for them, Borough in a voyage of 1556–57 reached Novaya Zemlya and discovered the strait south of it leading to the Kara Sea He later made several other voyages for them and from 1563 to his death was chief pilot of the queen's ships in the Medway

Borough, William, 1536–99, British naval officer A younger brother of Stephen Borough, William accompanied him on early voyages and was himself a captain of the Muscovy Company As a naval officer he commanded a vessel under Sir Francis Drake at Cádiz and also fought against the Spanish Armada He wrote accounts of his voyages and a treatise on the variation of the compass and compiled several charts

borough see CITY GOVERNMENT

borough-English, a rule or custom in parts of England whereby land descended typically to the youngest son in preference to his older brothers The custom applies to land held in socage tenure and is differentiated from GAVELKIND and PRIMOGENITURE It was of Anglo-Saxon origin Borough-English was abolished by law in 1925

Borowski, Félix (bôrôf'skē), 1872–, Polish-American violinist, composer, music critic, and educator, b England, studied violin, piano, and composition at the Cologne Conservatory In 1897 he came to the United States as head of the composition department of the Chicago Musical College, of which he was president from 1916 to 1925 He was professor of musicology at Northwestern Univ from 1937 until his retirement in 1942 He wrote program notes for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra from 1908 Adoration, for violin, is best known of his compositions, which also include a piano concerto, three organ sonatas, the operatic satire Fernando del Nonsenseco (1935), orchestral music, and music in smaller forms.

Borromean Islands. see MAGGIORE, LAGO

Borromeo, Charles. see CHARLES BORROMEO, SAINT.

Borromini, Francesco (frănchäʼskō bôr-rōmēʼnē), 1599–1667, Italian architect, one of the leaders and a representative talent of the baroque period He was official architect of Rome from 1644 to 1655. His façade for the Church of Sant' Agnese in the Piazza Navona ranks as his best work He collaborated with Alessandro Algardi in the decoration of St Peter's

Borrow, George Henry, 1803–81, English writer and traveler He led a nomadic life in England and on the Continent, where he was an agent for the British and Foreign Bible Society His friendship with the gypsies, whose language he learned, resulted in The Zincali, or The Gypsies of Spain (1841, definitive ed, 1901) His most famous book is The Bible in Spain (1843), and his best is probably Lavengro (1851), with its sequel, The Romany Rye (1857) These works and Wild Wales (1862) are all based on his wanderings His other poems, tales, and translations are little known See Norwich edition of his works (ed by C K Shorter, 1923–24), biographies by W I Knapp (1899) and C K Shorter (1920), study by Edward Thomas (1912)

Borsippa see BIRS NIMRUD and BABYLONIAN RELIGION

Borstal system, British method of dealing with delinquents between the ages of 16 and 21 It originated (1902) at Borstal Prison, Kent, England, as a substitute for the indiscriminate punishment of young offenders In Borstals they are put to work under good conditions and given physical and vocational training Those who show sufficient improvement are paroled See William Healy and B S Alper, Criminal Youth and the Borstal System (1941)

Bortniansky, Dmitri Stepanovich (dumēʼtrē styĭpaʼnuvĭch bûrtnyanʼskē), 1751–1825, Russian composer, studied with Galuppi in St Petersburg and Venice After producing two operas in Italy, he returned to St Petersburg, where he became director of the Imperial Chapel Choir, for which he set a high standard He composed much fine church music Tchaikovsky completed in 1882 an edition of his works, published in 10 volumes

Boru, Brian see BRIAN BORU

Boryslaw, Ukraine see BORISLAV.

Borysthenes see DNIEPER

borzoi or Russian wolfhound, large, graceful dog used in Russia since the early 17th cent for hunting wolves and small game The dogs average about 30 in in height at the shoulder and weigh 75 to 105 lb, the head is long and narrow, the brisket deep, the back rises at the loins, and the tail is long The silky coat is usually white marked with lemon, tan, black, or gray

Bos, Jerom see BOSCH, HIERONYMUS

Bosanquet, Bernard (bōʼzunkĭt), 1848–1923, English philosopher, educated at Oxford He lectured there (1871–81) and at St Andrews (1903–8) His major works include A History of Aesthetic (1892), The Philosophical Theory of the State (1899), and The Value and Destiny of the Individual (1913) Bosanquet represents the idealistic reaction to British empiricism See biography by Helen Bosanquet (1924), J H Muirhead, ed, Bernard Bosanquet and His Friends (1935)

Bosboom-Toussaint, Anna Louisa Geertruida (ănʼä lōōēʼzä hăʼtē ōrʼdä bōsʼbōm-tōōsēʼ), 1812–86, Dutch novelist, b Alkmaar, of an old French family named Toussaint In 1856 she married Johannes Bosboom, a painter of reputation She wrote many successful historical novels, but one of her chief works treated modern life, this epistolary novel, Majoor Frans (1874, Eng tr, Major Frank, 1886), exhibits a real appreciation of the problems of women

Boscán Almogáver, Juan (hwänʼ bōskänʼ älmōgäʼvĕr), c 1495–1542, Spanish poet A Catalan aristocrat, he was a literary figure at the court of Ferdinand V and was a friend of Garcilaso de la Vega His fame rests on his introduction of Italian poetic forms into Spanish poetry, thus revolutionizing its traditional system of metrics Among his compositions, written in different combinations of the 11-syllable line, are sonnets and canciones He also translated Castiglione's Courtier His works were first printed in 1543

Boscath, the same as BOZKATH

Boscawen, Edward (bōskōʼun), 1711–61, British admiral He distinguished himself in the naval warfare against France at Portobelo (1739), Cartagena (1741), and Cape Finisterre (1747) He had little success in command of a sea and land force in India (1748–49) and as commander in chief in American waters in 1755, but he cooperated with AMHERST in the capture of LOUISBURG (1758) and he decisively beat a French fleet in Lagos Bay in 1759

Boscawen (bōsʼkwĭn, -kuwĭn), town (pop 1,663), S N H, on the Merrimack above Concord, settled 1734, inc 1760 It included Webster until 1860 C C Coffin, author of The History of Boscawen and Webster (1878), J A Dix, and W P Fessenden were born in Boscawen A monument on an island in the river marks the scene of Hannah Dustin's escape from her Indian captors The site of Daniel Webster's first law office (1805) is marked

Bosch, Carl (bôsh), 1874–1940, German chemist In 1935 he became chairman of the board of the I G Farbenindustrie He adapted the HABER PROCESS to achieve mass production of synthetic ammonia (for explosives and fertilizers) from nitrogen and hydrogen by means of high pressure For this work he shared with Friedrich Bergius the 1931 Nobel Prize in Chemistry

Bosch, Hieronymus (hĕrŏn'ĭmŭs bôs'), or Jerom Bos (yā'rôm bôs'), c 1460–1516, Flemish painter His family name was Van Aeken, his nickname derived from his birthplace 's Hertogenbosch, where he worked all his life Bosch is famous for the monstrous and diabolical little figures with which he peopled his pictures Men with funnels for heads, toads with men's faces, and hundreds of similar fantasies, realistically portrayed, abound in his works They delighted Philip II of Spain, and some of Bosch's best work is still in Madrid and in the Escorial The Temptation of St Anthony and The Last Judgment were favorite themes Two versions of The Adoration of the Magi are in Princeton Univ and the Metropolitan Museum of Art respectively See studies by Howard Daniel (1948) and Jacques Combe (1948)

Boscobel (bŏs'kŭbĕl), farm region in the eastern part of Shropshire, England The oak in which Charles II hid after the battle of Worcester was near Boscobel House, which is still standing

Boscobel, city (pop 2,008), SW Wis , on the Wisconsin and SE of La Crosse, inc 1873 Here in 1898 took place a meeting that led to the founding of the Gideons

Boscoreale (bŏs'kōrā-ä'lā), small town, Campania, S Italy, at the foot of Mt Vesuvius A celebrated collection of silverwork (1st cent A D), consisting mostly of plates and cups with relief ornamentation, was unearthed here in 1895 It is now in the Louvre

Boscovich, Ruggiero Giuseppe (rōōd-jā'rō jōōzĕp'pā bôs'kōvĭch), 1711–87, Italian mathematician, astronomer, and physicist He became a Jesuit and taught at Rome, Pavia, and Milan Later he was director of optics for the French navy An early advocate of Newton's theories, he wrote many works including one in which he introduced his molecular theory

Bose, Sir Jagadis Chandra, or Sir Jagadis Chunder Bose (jŭg'ŭdēs chŭn'drŭ bōs', chŭn'dŭr), 1858–1937, Indian physicist, educated in Calcutta and at Christ's College, Cambridge He was professor of physical science (1885–1915) at Presidency College, Calcutta, and founded the Bose Research Institute in Calcutta He is noted especially for his researches in plant life One of his inventions is the crescograph, a device for measuring plant growth Among his publications are Comparative Electro-Physiology (1907), Researches on Irritability of Plants (1913), The Physiology of Photosynthesis (1924), The Nervous Mechanism of Plants (1926), The Motor Mechanism of Plants (1928), and Growth and Tropic Movements of Plants (1929)

Bose, Subhas Chandra (shōōbh'ŭsh' chŭn'drŭ bōs'), 1897–1945, Indian nationalist, educated at Cambridge Leader of the left wing of the Indian National Congress party, he was in 1938 and 1939 its president In July, 1940, he was jailed by the British for his Axis sympathies in the Second World War, escaping (Jan , 1941), he fled to Germany In 1943 in Singapore, he headed a Japanese-sponsored "provisional government of India" and a "national army " He was killed in an airplane crash

Bosio, François Joseph, Baron (frŭswä' zhōzĕf' bä'rō' bōsyō'), 1769?–1845, French sculptor He was employed by Napoleon I to make the bas-reliefs for the column of the Place Vendôme and also as portraitist to the imperial family At this time he produced one of his best portrait busts—that of the Empress Josephine (Dijon) Louis XVIII made him court sculptor, and Charles X created him baron Of his larger works the most important are the equestrian statue of Louis XIV (Place des Victoires), the quadriga of the Arc de Triomphe du Carrousel, and Hercules Struggling with a Serpent (garden of the Tuileries)

Bosnia and Hercegovina (bŏz'nēŭ, hĕrtsŭgōvē'nŭ), Serbo-Croatian Bosna i Hercegovina (bŏs'nä ē hĕrtsĕg'ō'vēnä), autonomous republic (19,909 sq mi , pop 2,561,961), N Yugoslavia It consists of two component regions—Bosnia, in the north, with the cities of Sarajevo, Banja Luka, and Tuzla, and Hercegovina, in the south, with Mostar Sarajevo is the capital Mostly in the Dinaric Alps, the republic has two narrow outlets to the Adriatic Sea The Sava is the chief river Half of the area is forested, one fourth is cultivated The population, which is mainly agricultural, consists of Serbs and Croats and is divided among the Mohammedan, Roman Catholic, and Eastern Orthodox religions Bosnia was settled by Serbs in the 7th cent , it appeared as an independent country by the 12th cent but later at times acknowledged the kings of Hungary as suzerains Late in the 14th cent. it became an independent kingdom and annexed Hercegovina from Serbia The country was weakened by religious strife among Catholics, Orthodox, and BOGOMILS and in 1463 fell to the Turks The nobility and a large part of the population accepted Islam Difficult of access, the country long retained its medieval social structure Serfdom ended only in 1918 Refusal by the Porte to institute reforms led (1875) to a peasant uprising and was a factor in the Russo-Turkish War of 1877–78 The Congress of Berlin (1878) placed Bosnia and Hercegovina under Austro-Hungarian administration and occupation, though recognizing the theoretical sovereignty of the sultan When in 1908 the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, AEHRENTHAL, fully annexed the district, Serbian nationalism was aroused The assassination (1914), by a Serbian nationalist, of Archduke Francis Ferdinand at Sarajevo precipitated the First World War In 1918 Bosnia and Hercegovina were annexed to Serbia (see YUGOSLAVIA), the Yugoslav constitution of 1946 made the region one of the six People's Republics of Yugoslavia See B E Schmitt, The Annexation of Bosnia, 1908-1909 (1938)

Bosor (bō'sôr), the same as BEOR 1.

Bosporus (bŏs'pŭrŭs) [Gr ,=ox ford, in reference to the story of Io], strait, 20 mi long and 1,800 ft wide at its narrowest, separating European from Asiatic Turkey and joining the Black Sea with the Sea of Marmara Istanbul is situated on the Bosporus, which is lined by many villas and ancient castles The strait has been refortified by Turkey after the Montreux Convention of 1936 (see DARDANELLES) boss, in the United States, a powerful political leader and organizer The highly invidious meaning of the term dates from the exposure of the Tweed Ring in New York city in 1872 Until c 1850 the political boss was usually himself an officeholder Effective bosses have been frequent in American municipal government, less common in state government, and rare on the national level The growth of honest government tends to lessen the incidence and power of the bosses at all levels of politics While many bosses have had financial peculation as their aim, some have been personally disinterested or have even been in favor of honest government

Bosse, Abraham (äbrä-äm' bôs'), 1602–76, French engraver and painter He studied art in Paris and became a teacher of perspective in the Académie royale de Peinture et de Sculpture A prolific and skillful worker, he engraved more than 1,400 pieces He is best known for his faithful representation of French civil life and costumes during the period of Louis XIII Bosse wrote several valued treatises on art and perspective One of his rare paintings, The Foolish Virgins, is in the Cluny Museum, Paris See Georges Duplessis, Wonders of Engraving (1871), study by Antony Valabrègue (1892, in French)

Bosseron or Busseron, François Riday, 1740–91, patriot in the American Revolution, b probably Detroit He was long a merchant and a prominent figure at Vincennes and was at various times captain, major, commandant of the fort there, and mayor He is best remembered for the enormous help he gave to George Rogers CLARK in the capture of Vincennes (1779) by furnishing him with generous financial assistance, food, munitions, and military aid See M M Quaife, ed , The Conquest of the Illinois by George Rogers Clark (1920)

Bossi, Giuseppe (jōōzĕp'pā bôs'sē), 1777–1815, Italian painter and writer on art, author of the treatise Del Cenacolo di Leonardo da Vinci (1810) His cartoon of Da Vinci's Last Supper was used as the model for Raffaelli's famous mosaic at Vienna Bossi was secretary of the Brera Gallery, Milan, which he founded and organized

Bossi, Marco Enrico (mär'kō ānrē'ko), 1861–1925, Italian organist and composer He wrote, with G Tebaldini, Metodo di studio per l'organo moderno (1893) and excelled as a teacher He died at sea while returning from a successful American concert tour His most important compositions are those for organ

Bossier City (bō'zhur), town (pop 5,786), NW La , on the Red River opposite Shreveport, inc as a village 1907, as a town 1923 It has oil refineries, chemical plants, railroad shops, and cotton-processing plants The ruins of Confederate Fort Smith were made a memorial park in 1936

Bossuet, Jacques Bénigne (zhäk' bānē'nyŭ bōsüĕ'), 1627–1704, French prelate, one of the greatest orators in French history At an early age he was made a canon at Metz, he became bishop of Condom and was (1670–81) tutor to the dauphin (father of Louis XV), for whom he wrote his great Discourse on Universal History (1681, Eng trs , 1778, 1821), Politics Derived from Holy Writ (1709), and Treatise of the Knowledge of God and One's Self (1722) In 1681 he became bishop of Meaux Unrivaled for his eloquence, he is celebrated for his Funeral Orations (1689), particularly those on Henrietta of England, on her daughter, and on Condé, which are masterpieces of their kind He was also a great moralist, a magnificent stylist, and a powerful controversialist, brilliantly attacking Fénelon and the quietists, the Jesuits, and the Protestants See studies by Pierre Floquet (1864), G Lanson (1895), and Alfred Rebelliau (5th ed , 1909), biography by E K Sanders (1921)

Bostanai ben Chaninai (bōs'tanī bĕn khänēnī'), 602–660, first Jewish exilarch under Arabian rule He is the subject of many legends His first name is also spelled Bustanai

Boston, municipal borough (1931 pop 16,600, 1943 estimated pop 23,020), in the Parts of Holland, Lincolnshire, England, on the Witham and 4 mi from the Wash Once an important port, it is now a fishing center and a market for a rich lowland farm area St Botolph's Church is on the site of a 7th-century monastery, founded by St Botolph, for whom the town is named (Botolph's tun, or town) The 290-foot tower (called the Stump, because it does not come to a point) is a landmark Puritans under John COTTON sailed in 1633 from Boston to the Massachusetts Bay capital (renamed Boston) See A M Cook, Boston (1934)

Boston. 1 City (pop 1,099), SW Ga , E of Thomasville, in a farm, lumber, and livestock area, inc 1870 2 City (pop 770,816), state capital, and co seat of Suffolk co , E Mass , at the head of Boston Bay This, the largest city of New England, began when the elder John Winthrop in 1630 planted here the main colony of the MASSACHUSETTS BAY COMPANY From the start a center of American Puritanism, it had notable ministers, theocratic-minded statesmen, and a vigorous intellectual life The BOSTON PUBLIC LATIN SCHOOL was established in 1635, HARVARD UNIVERSITY was founded at nearby Cambridge in 1636, a public library was started in 1653, and the first newspaper in the Thirteen Colonies, the News-Letter, appeared in 1704 With its excellent port it gained ascendancy over the other cities of colonial New England As the American Revolution approached, Boston merchants and workers joined to oppose the British and the conservative Loyalists (see BOSTON MASSACRE, BOSTON TEA PARTY, FANEUIL HALL, ADAMS, SAMUEL, REVERE, PAUL) The battle of Bunker Hill (June 17, 1775) was the first large-scale battle of the Revolution, and Boston was under siege until the British withdrew in March, 1776 When the short depression after the war had passed, prosperous years continued until the middle of the 19th cent and shaped the Boston tradition Ships from the town, which became a city in 1822, made Boston known around the world The old families—the Cabots, the Lowells, the Lodges, and the rest—were supported by fortunes drawn from the sea and from mills built on New England rivers to make textiles and shoes They built substantial homes in the Beacon Hill-Back Bay region and patronized learning and arts and letters, making of Boston "the Athens of America " They also backed reformers, notably the ABOLITIONISTS, despite the generally conservative tone of their culture Their influence persisted long after the growth of industry brought many immigrants (mostly Irish at first) and Boston changed from a farm-surrounded commercial city to a noisy industrial metropolis The limits expanded to include cities and towns, some with traditions as long as Boston's own—Roxbury and West Roxbury (with the Roxbury Latin School Forest Hills Cemetery, and BROOK FARM), Dorchester (where Richard Mather had been the minister), CHARLESTOWN, Brighton, and Hyde Park The spiritual mantle of Boston spreads farther, over many near-by cities and towns such as Cambridge and Brookline It is a major financial center, a leading U S port, and a market for fish and for wool Industries are highly diverse, though traditionally boots and shoes, textiles, machinery, and foodstuffs are notable Boston products The population is polyglot, with many citizens of French Canadian Irish, Russian Jewish, and Italian backgrounds Yet the heterogeneous city of today cherishes the landmarks and monuments of the past the 17th-century house in which Paul Revere lived, Old North Church, famous in his story, Old South Meetinghouse a rallying place for patriots in the Revolutionary turmoil, the old statehouse, now a museum, Boston Common, the golden-domed statehouse, with its "front" designed by Charles Bulfinch, and the red-brick houses of Louisburg Square Other Boston churches are also famous—King's Chapel, where American Unitarianism was born in 1785, the Mother Church of Christian Science, and Trinity Church (1872–77), designed by H H Richardson and decorated by John La Farge The old Massachusetts Historical Society (1791) and the Athenaeum (1807) have had their later counterparts the Boston Public Library was founded in 1852, the New England Conservatory of Music in 1867, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1881 Museums include the Museum of Fine Arts and the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum Harvard Medical School is in Boston proper, as is the New England Medical Center The Massachusetts General Hospital (founded 1811), proud of its part in the development of anesthesia and of its building designed by Bulfinch, is highly esteemed Among the other educational institutions at Boston are SIMMONS COLLEGE and Emmanuel College, for women, BOSTON UNIVERSITY, Boston College

(mainly at CHESTNUT HILL, Mass); Northeastern Univ , the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy, and Wentworth Institute (mechanical arts) Among recent books on Boston are Lucius Beebe, Boston and the Boston Legend (1935), Esther Forbes, The Boston Book (1947), Cleveland Amory, The Proper Bostonians (1947), A C Lyons, Invitation to Boston (1947), R. N Linscott, ed , State of Mind: a Boston Reader (1948)

Boston fern, extremely popular house FERN (Nephrolepis exaltata bostonensis), a variety of a tropical sword fern derived from a particularly graceful drooping form found in a shipment of sword ferns received in Boston Other forms developed from this include a very finely divided feathery type

Boston ivy or Japanese ivy, tall-climbing woody vine (Parthenocissus tricuspidata) from the Orient, one of the most popular of city wall coverings Closely related to the Virginia creeper and sometimes called AMPELOPSIS, it climbs by disk-tipped tendrils and has three-lobed leaves—vivid in the fall

Boston Massacre, 1770, a pre-Revolutionary incident growing out of the resentment against the British troops sent to Boston to maintain order and to enforce the TOWNSHEND ACTS The troops, constantly tormented by irresponsible gangs, finally (March 5, 1770) fired into a rioting crowd and killed five men—three (including Crispus Attucks) on the spot, two of wounds later The funeral of the victims was the occasion for a great patriot demonstration. The British captain and his men were tried for murder, with Robert Treat PAINE as prosecutor, John ADAMS and Josiah QUINCY as lawyers for defense. They were acquitted

Boston Mountains, NW Ark , N of the Arkansas river, part of the Ozark plateau, rising to c 2,400 ft The White River has its source here.

Boston Museum of Fine Arts: see MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS, at Boston, Mass

Boston Port Bill see INTOLERABLE ACTS

Boston Public Latin School, at Boston, for boys, opened 1635, one of the oldest free public schools in the United States Many famous men attended the school, including five signers of the Declaration of Independence and four presidents of Harvard Univ See history by Pauline Holmes (1935)

Boston Public Library, founded in 1852, chiefly through the gift of Joshua Bates Its present building on Copley Square, designed by McKim, Mead, and White, was completed in 1895 The main hall is decorated with murals by Puvis de Chavannes Other rooms have murals by Edwin Abbey and John S. Sargent. The library's special collections include the Ticknor collection of Spanish and Portuguese literature and the libraries of John Adams and Nathaniel Bowditch Albert H Wiggin in 1941 donated his painting and etching collection

Boston Symphony Orchestra, founded in 1881 by Henry Lee Higginson, who was its director and financial backer until 1918 Its outstanding conductors have been Sir George Henschel (1881–84), Wilhelm Gericke (1884–89, 1898–1906), Arthur Nikisch (1889–93), Karl Muck (1906–8, 1912–18), Pierre Monteux (1919–24), and Serge Koussevitzky (1924–49) Charles Munch was appointed (1948) to succeed Koussevitzky on his retirement One of America's oldest orchestras, the Boston Symphony is considered by many to be one of the finest in the world Symphony Hall, built for its concerts, was opened in 1900 See M A De Wolfe Howe, The Boston Symphony Orchestra (1931)

Boston Tea Party, 1773 In the contest between British Parliament and American colonists before the Revolution, Parliament, when repealing the TOWNSHEND ACTS, had retained the tea tax, partly as a symbol of its right to tax the colonies partly to aid the financially embarrassed East India Company The colonists tried to prevent the consignees from accepting taxed tea and were successful in New York and Philadelphia At Charleston the tea was landed but held in government warehouses At Boston, three tea ships arrived and remained unloaded but Gov Thomas Hutchinson refused to let ships leave without first paying the duties A group of indignant colonists, led by Samuel Adams, Paul Revere, and others, disguised themselves as Indians, boarded the ships on the night of Dec 16, 1773, and threw the tea into the harbor In punishment Parliament passed the Boston Port Bill (see INTOLERABLE ACTS)

Boston terrier, small, smooth-haired, nonsporting dog It was developed in Boston, Mass , from crosses between the bull terrier (itself a cross between the English bulldog and a white English terrier) and the bulldog, in 1893 the breed was recognized by the American Kennel Club In color the dog is usually brindle with white markings, the body is compact (the weight from 15 to 25 lb), the ears erect, and the tail short Its gentle disposition makes it an excellent pet. See J. Z Rine, The Ideal Boston Terrier (1947).

Boston University, mainly in Boston, nonsectarian, private, coeducational; chartered 1869, opened 1871 It absorbed a Methodist theological seminary (opened 1841 at a school in Newbury, Vt) Its college of physical education (Sargent) is at Cambridge The first building on the Charles river campus was dedicated in 1939.

Bostwick, Arthur Elmore, 1860–1942, American librarian, b. Litchfield, Conn., grad Yale (B A., 1881, Ph.D , 1883). After teaching and serving on the editorial staff of several reference works, he became (1895) librarian of the New York Free Circulating Library He was librarian of the Brooklyn Public Library (1899–1901) and then head of the circulation department of the newly organized New York Public Library (1901–9) From 1909 until he retired in 1938, he served as librarian of the St Louis Public Library, expanding its usefulness and increasing its reputation. Bostwick's American Public Library, a classic of its kind, went through four editions See his autobiography, Life with Men and Books (1939)

Boswell, James (bŏz'wl), 1740–95, Scottish biographer, b Edinburgh, son of a Scottish judge Boswell studied law, but turned instead to literature. He first met Samuel Johnson on a trip to London in 1763 Boswell went on to Utrecht in the same year and then traveled about the Continent, where he managed to meet Rousseau, Voltaire, and Paoli He returned to Edinburgh in 1766 and was admitted to the Scottish bar, taking the title Lord Auchinleck Literature still exerted a strong hold on him, and he wrote two minor works, published in 1767, and his Account of Corsica (1768) He married in 1769 but continued his friendship with Johnson on visits to London In 1773 he became a member of Johnson's club Later in the same year the two toured Scotland, a visit which Boswell described in The Journal of a Tour of the Hebrides with Samuel Johnson, LL D (1785, complete ed , 1936) The Life of Samuel Johnson, LL D appeared in 1791 Popular at publication, this biography is now acclaimed as one of the world's greatest Boswell brought to biography a new and unparalleled technique, for not only did he record Johnson's conversations, but he tempered his selections with a fine sense of critical judgment The episodes in the biography are skillfully strung together with an eye and an ear for style and for contrast Gifted with a domineering figure for a subject, Boswell easily but subtly subordinated the society around Johnson with no loss of verisimilitude Many consider it a tribute to Boswell's art that Johnson is better remembered today as the hero of the biography rather than as the author of his own works That Boswell was an artist was doubted by Macaulay and other 19th-century critics—who held the loose-moraled Boswell to be a fool riding to fame on the shoulders of a great man—but simple reading of the biography and subsequent research have set aside this opinion as fallacious Boswell's Private Papers, purchased in 1927 from his descendant, Lord Talbot de Malahide, by Col Ralph H Isham, were published in a limited edition (18 vols , 1928–34) and edited by Geoffrey Scott and F A Pottle A second great collection of Boswell's papers was bought from Colonel Isham by Yale Univ in 1949 See C B Tinker, Young Boswell (1922), C B Tinker and F A Pottle, A New Portrait of Boswell (1927), D B Wyndham Lewis, The Hooded Hawk (1947)

Boswell, borough (pop 1,711), Somerset co , SW Pa , SW of Johnstown, inc 1904

Bosworth, Francke Huntington, 1843–1925, American laryngologist, b Marietta, Ohio, M D Bellevue Hospital Medical College, 1868 He was associated with Bellevue from 1876 and became professor emeritus in 1906 His works include Manual of the Diseases of the Throat and Nose (1881)

Bosworth Field, Leicestershire, England, near the town of Market Bosworth It is the scene of the battle (1485) at which Richard III was killed and the crown passed to his victor, the earl of Richmond (Henry VII)

botanic garden, place in which plants are grown for display and for scientific study An arboretum is a botanic garden devoted chiefly to the growing of woody plants The plants in botanic gardens are labeled, usually with both the common and the scientific names, and they are often arranged in cultural or habitat groups, such as rock gardens, aquatic gardens, desert gardens, and tropical gardens Botanic gardens perform diversified functions, e g , the collection and cultivation of plants from all parts of the world, experimentation in plant breeding and hybridization, the maintenance of botanical libraries and herbariums, and the administration of educational programs for adults and children Among well-known botanic gardens are the Arnold Arboretum, near Boston, Mass (est 1872 as part of Harvard Univ), Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Brooklyn, N Y (est. 1910), New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York city (est 1896 and affiliated with Columbia Univ), Highland and Durand-Eastman parks, Rochester, N Y , Bartram's Gardens, Philadelphia (founded 1728), U S Botanic Garden (est 1820) and the National Arboretum (est 1927), both in Washington, D C , Fairchild Tropical Garden, Coconut Grove, Fla (est. 1938), Garfield Park Conservatory, Chicago, Ill (est. 1907), Missouri Botanical Garden, St Louis, Mo (founded c 1860), Fort Worth Botanic Garden, Fort Worth, Texas (est 1933), Rancho Santa Ana Botanical Garden, near Anaheim, Calif (est 1927), Huntington Botanical Garden, San Marino, Calif.; Santa Barbara Botanic Garden, formerly Blaksley Botanic Garden, Santa Barbara, Calif (est. 1926); Montreal Botanical Garden, Montreal, Canada (est. 1932); Dominion Arboretum and Botanic Garden, Ottawa, Canada (est. 1886), the Royal Botanic Gardens, known as Kew Gardens, London, the Jardin des Plantes, Paris; and the botanic gardens at Buitensorg, Java See also BOYCE THOMPSON INSTITUTE. See Donald Wyman, The Arboretums and Botanical Gardens of North America (1947)

botany (bŏ'tənē), scientific study of plant life Botany and zoology together comprise the science of BIOLOGY Man's earliest concern with plants was in their use as foods Most of the major crop plants were under cultivation in the Neolithic period Knowledge of the medicinal properties of plants also began with early man The beginnings of systems of classifying plants are found in the work of Aristotle and especially in the writings of his pupil Theophrastus Dioscorides in the 1st cent wrote a work on materia medica which was an influential source through the 16th cent Albertus Magnus, in his De vegetabilibus, described numerous plants and suggested a classification based on a division into leafless and leafy plants, an advance over Theophrastus' division into trees, shrubs, and herbs From the latter part of the 15th cent to about the middle of the 17th cent the HERBAL was typical of botanical writings Explorations in the new world greatly increased the number of known plant forms and made more evident the need for a workable system of naming and classifying plants, a task undertaken by numerous scientists, among them Gaspar BAUHIN The classification of plants and animals and the system of binomial nomenclature established by LINNAEUS marked the greatest progress in systematics Botany developed through the work of many other investigators including Robert BROWN, A P de CANDOLLE, Hugo de VRIES, J J DILLENIUS, Leonhard FUCHS, Asa GRAY, Nehemiah GREW, Stephen HALES, John RAY, the JUSSIEU family, LAMARCK, MENDEL, Hugo von MOHL, and Julius von SACHS See H S Reed, A Short History of the Plant Sciences (1942), R H Platt, This Green World (1942) and Our Flowering World (1947), W N Clute, Useful Plants of the World (1943), H W Rickett, Green Earth (1943), A D Rodgers, American Botany, 1873–1892 (1944), F O. Bower and others, Botany of the Living Plant (4th ed , 1947), H N Moldenke, Brief Course in Elementary Systematic Botany for Gardeners (1947) and American Wild Flowers (1949), John Asch, The Story of Plants (1948), John Hutchinson and Ronald Melville, The Story of Plants and Their Uses to Man (1948), R. P Faulkner, Botany for Gardeners (1949)

Botany Bay, inlet, New South Wales, Australia, just S of Sydney It was visited in 1770 by Captain Cook, who at that time proclaimed British sovereignty over the east coast of Australia The bay was named by Cook and Sir Joseph Banks because of the interesting flora on its shores The site of the landing is marked by a monument on Inscription Point Though Australia's first penal colony was often called Botany Bay, its actual site was SYDNEY, 5 mi N on Port Jackson (Sydney Harbour)

Botev, Khristo (khrĭ'stō bō'tĕf), 1848–76, Bulgarian poet and patriot His father, a schoolmaster, sent him at 17 to Russia, where he remained until 1867 Later he lived in Rumania and there prepared himself for his part in the revolution against Turkish rule. He edited revolutionary journals, taught school, and wrote poetry When the revolt against the Turks broke out in 1876, Botev returned to Bulgaria with a band of his own organizing and fell in action His lyrics and ballads, imaginative and original, are filled with patriotic fervor botfly, name for a number of hairy flies with parasitic larvae The horse botfly usually lays its eggs on the hair of a horse, mule, or donkey Young larvae are carried by the tongue and lips into the mouth They migrate to the stomach and attach themselves to the lining Treatment by a veterinarian is required at this stage The lip or nose botfly and the throat botfly can be prevented from laying their eggs by lip and throat protectors All of the species cause serious damage to the digestive system The ox warble flies (botflies or cattle maggots), known as the heel fly and the bomb fly, lay their eggs on cattle and some other animals Injury to the animal results from the migration of the larvae through the flesh and from their presence during the winter and spring in swellings, called warbles, which they form on the back of the animal Each larva makes an opening in the warble which reduces the value of the hide for leather Treating the backs of the animals with an insecticide containing rotenone kills the larvae. The sheep botfly or sheep gadfly attacks sheep, goats, and deer and sometimes man Painting the animal's nose with pine tar repels the adult flies. A species of botfly found in North and South America is carried to humans by mosquitoes and other insects on which it lays eggs The larvae bore into the muscle tissue of the human. See Horse Bots and Their Control (U S. Dept. of Agriculture, Farmers' Bul. 1503); Cattle

Grubs or Heel Flies with Suggestions for Their Control (U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Farmers' Bul. 1596)

Both, Andries (än'drēēs bōt'), c.1608–c 1640, and Jan Both (yän), c 1618–1652, Flemish painters and etchers, brothers, pupils of their father, Dirk Both, a glass painter, and of Abraham Bloemart They went to Rome, where they often worked together, although each pursued an independent line and style Jan painted Italian landscapes in the manner of Claude Lorrain, Andries took Pieter van Laar as his model and painted animals and figures with great facility and fine coloring, sometimes introducing his figures in the landscapes of his brother with excellent effect and unity Good examples of their work are in the Madrid Museum, the Louvre, and the National Gallery, London Italian Landscape is in the Metropolitan Museum

Botha, Louis (bō'tu), 1862–1919, South African soldier and statesman, A Boer, he participated in the founding (1884) of the New Republic, which joined (1888) the Transvaal Although Botha had little previous military experience, he brilliantly commanded Boer troops in the South African War He besieged the British at Ladysmith and defeated their forces at Colenso. In 1900 he succeeded Joubert as commander of the Transvaal army and led its remnants in guerrilla fighting After the war (1902) he favored cooperation with the British Botha was (1907–10) premier of the Transvaal As the leader of the United South African, or Unionist, party, he was prime minister of the Union of South Africa from its organization (1910) until his death, and he was ably assisted by J C. SMUTS In the First World War, Botha declared that South Africa was a belligerent He suppressed a Boer revolt and in 1915 led the forces which conquered the German colony of South-West Africa See biography by Earl Buxton (1924), Basil Williams, Botha, Smuts, and South Africa (1946)

Bothnia, Gulf of see BALTIC SEA

Bothwell, James Hepburn, 4th earl of (hĕ'bûrn, bŏth'wul), c 1536–1578, Scottish nobleman, third husband of MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS He was a Protestant but was a strong partisan of Mary of Guise, mother of Mary Queen of Scots In 1562 Bothwell's old enemy, James HAMILTON, earl of Arran, accused Bothwell of proposing to kidnap the queen, and Bothwell was for a time imprisoned On his release he started for France, but was imprisoned for 18 months by the English He reached France and was recalled by Mary in 1565 to help her put down the rebellion by the earl of Murray, her half brother In 1566 Mary's secretary, David RIZZIO, was murdered by conspirators, among them her husband, Lord DARNLEY Thereafter she trusted only Bothwell and was with him constantly In Feb, 1567, Darnley was murdered The subsequent trial in which Bothwell was acquitted of the murder was a judicial mockery On May 15, Bothwell having divorced his latest wife, he and Mary were married The Scottish aristocracy now combined against Bothwell and attacked him, finally forcing Mary to give him up He fled to Denmark, where he was imprisoned and died insane See biography by Robert Gore-Brown (1937)

Bothwell (bŏth'wûl, bŏdh'–), parish (pop 60,660), Lanarkshire, Scotland, on the Clyde It is largely a residential district for Glasgow At Bothwell Bridge, in 1679, the Covenanters were defeated by royalists under Monmouth

Botolph, Saint (bŭtŏlf'), fl 7th cent , English abbot, for whom Boston, England, was named

bo tree [Pali,=wisdom] or pipal (pē'–) [Hindustani], fig tree (Ficus religiosa) of India held sacred by the Buddhists, who believe that Gautama received his divine powers under one of these trees, a ship of which was planted at ANURADHAPURA to become one of the oldest known trees The tree attains great size and age, the leaves, which hang from long flexible petioles, rustle in the slightest breeze Bo trees have been planted in subtropical parts of the United States

Botsford, George Willis, 1862–1917, American historian, b West Union, Iowa, grad Univ. of Nebraska (B A , 1884, M A , 1889), Ph D Cornell Univ , 1891 After some years (1895–1901) at Harvard, he taught (1901-17) ancient history at Columbia Univ He wrote monographs and scholarly works but is best remembered for his high school and college textbooks in ancient history, his Hellenic History (1922) was especially well received He collaborated with E G Sihler on a source book, Hellenic Civilization (1915)

Botta, Paul Émile (pōl' ämēl' bŏtà'), 1802–70, French archaeologist and government official He carried on his scientific researches while physician to Mohammed Ali of Egypt and later as consul successively in Alexandria, Jerusalem, and Tripoli When consular agent at Mosul he made his renowned discoveries of Assyrian inscriptions near Khorsabad He wrote Monument de Ninive (5 vols , 1849–50).

Böttger, Johann Friedrich (yō'hän frē'drĭkh bŭtkhûr), 1682–1719, German chemist and originator of Dresden china. When the Swedish invasion of Saxony occurred (1706), Böttger and his aids were removed from Dresden to protect the secret of the process. He developed a variety of glazes, including black and a delicate violet, later much used He made use of silver and gold in the decoration. His potteries were under royal patronage, and he was made director of the extensive works in 1708 He perfected white porcelain in 1715 The following year he was imprisoned because of an attempt to sell his secret.

Botticelli, Sandro (sän'drō bŏt'tĭchĕl'lē), c 1444–1510, Florentine painter of the Renaissance, whose real name was Alessandro di Mariano Filipepi (älĕssän'drō dē mārēä'nō fēlēpē'pē) The son of a prosperous tanner, he was apprenticed to Fra Filippo Lippi, whose influence is seen in such early works as Adoration of the Kings (National Gall , London) and Chigi Madonna (Gardner Mus , Boston) He established his reputation in 1478 with his Adoration of the Magi and the famous Spring (both in the Uffizi) and became a favorite painter of the Medici In 1481 he assisted in the fresco decorations of the Sistine Chapel Three of his biblical scenes are still there, although badly discolored On returning to Florence the following year he was at the height of his popularity and painted numerous frescoes (now lost) for Lorenzo de' Medici During the period 1481–97 he painted Venus, Pallas and the Centaur, Mars and Venus, his remarkable illustrations of the Divine Comedy in silverpoint and pen (Vatican Museum), a famous series of Madonnas including The Magnificat and Madonna of the Pomegranate (Uffizi), and two frescoes done for the Villa Tornabuoni (Louvre) The most celebrated works of his later period are Allegory of Calumny (Uffizi) and Nativity (National Gall , London). The latter is thought to show his championship of the lost cause of Savonarola, who with his two companions is shown embraced by angels in the foreground In his last years Botticelli devoted himself chiefly to religious painting and produced little, but he seems always to have enjoyed a high reputation His work, highly popular in his own day, has been variously appraised Its extreme individuality has found ardent adherents and detractors He was undoubtedly one of the greatest colorists of Florence and a master of rhythmic line The extreme refinement and poignancy of his conceptions have always found admirers Botticelli is represented in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D C (including Adoration of the Magi, once in Leningrad), the Metropolitan Museum, and the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston See studies by Wilhelm Bode (Eng tr , 1925) and Lionello Venturi (1937), Yukio Yashiro, Sandro Botticelli and the Florentine Renaissance (1929)

Bottineau, Pierre (pyĕr' bŏtēnō'), c 1817–1895, American frontier guide, b Red River (of the North) valley He was the son of a French Canadian fur trader and an Ojibwa woman An agent of the American Fur Company, he settled on a claim now in the business section of St Paul, Minn , and later was a guide in the Red River valley, in the Montana gold mines, and in British Columbia He was the guide to the party of Isaac I Stevens and other railroad surveying groups and was a scout in the Sioux wars

Bottineau (bŏtĭnō'), city (pop 1,739), co seat of Bottineau co , N N Dak , near the Canadian boundary W of the Turtle Mts , inc 1904 The state school of forestry is here

Bottrop (bŏt'rōp), city (pop 80,724), Westphalia, NW Germany It is a center of the Ruhr coal basin

Botts, John Minor, 1802–69, U S Representative from Virginia (1839–43, 1847–49), b Prince William co , Va An old-line Henry Clay Whig, he strenuously opposed Virginia's secession and took no part in the Civil War In 1866 he headed the Virginia delegation to the convention of Southern loyalists held at Philadelphia

botulism (bŏt'ûlĭzm), food poisoning caused by a toxin produced by a bacterium (Clostridium botulinum or Bacillus botulinus) The bacillus grows profusely in sealed jars or cans (where there is no air) if the resistant spores have not been destroyed by prolonged high temperatures in the canning process Boiling canned food for 15 min before eating it destroys the toxin The Clostridium botulinum may also flourish in sausage Symptoms of botulism may appear from 18 to 36 hr after consumption of poisoned food Gastrointestinal symptoms are relatively mild The toxin attacks the nervous system specifically, causing muscular weakness, visual disorders, and loss of ability to speak and swallow Early use of antitoxin serum is essential, or death may follow from respiratory paralysis

Botvinnik, Mikhail (mĕkhīl'yĭl' bŏt'vēnyĭk), 1911–, Russian chess player, b St Petersburg In 1925 he won a game from Capablanca at Moscow, and in 1946 he took first prize at Groningen, Netherlands He won the world's championship at Moscow in 1948 See biography by Fred Reinfeld (1946)

Botwood, town (1945 pop 2,744), NE N F , N of Bishop's Falls and at the mouth of the Exploits river Botwood airport, 40 mi southeast, was established in 1939 It is the final refueling base for passenger and mail planes on the northern transatlantic route before they take off for Ireland

Bouchard, Henry (ärē' bōōshär'), 1875–, French sculptor. His statues and groups often represent workers, in action or at rest—Iron-Workers, The Dockhand, The Blacksmith in Repose (Metropolitan Mus), and Fishermen. In collaboration with Paul Landowski, he made the monument of the Reformation, built into the old city walls of Geneva Of an entirely different character is the fountain group, Girl with a Gazelle, represented in bronze in the Metropolitan Museum

Bouchardon, Edme (ĕdmä' bōōshärdō'), 1698–1762, French sculptor, pupil of Guillaume Coustou He is well known for his fountain in the Rue de Grenelle, Paris, and for numerous works at Versailles, in the Louvre, and in Saint-Sulpice, Paris He was famous for the classical purity of his style

Bouché, Louis (bōōshā'), 1896–, American painter, b New York city Much of his youth was spent in France, where he studied under Jean Paul Laurens and others He was early known as a muralist, and he decorated the Dept of Justice and Dept of the Interior buildings, Washington, D C , and the lounge of Radio City Music Hall, New York His easel paintings are in museums in Washington, D C , and Columbus, Ohio, and in the Metropolitan and Whitney museums, New York A spirited realist, Bouché also painted abstract pictures He directed a successful firm of decorators

Boucher, François (frāswä' bōōshā'), 1703–70, French painter He studied with François Le Moyne but was more influenced by Watteau At 20 he won the Grand Prix, and from 1727 to 1731 he studied in Italy On his return he rapidly became the most fashionable painter of his day and a favorite of Mme de Pompadour He produced a vast number of pictures, decorations, tapestry designs, and fine etchings and enjoyed many academic and official honors including that of director of the Gobelins factory He is best known, however, as a decorator and above all for his decorations of boudoirs The Louvre and the Wallace Collection, London, excel in fine selections of his work He is well represented in America by his Peace and War in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, his Toilet of Venus and Birth and Triumph of Venus in the Metropolitan Museum, and his Voluptuary and Winter Scene in the New York Historical Society Fine examples of his work are in the Frick Collection, New York

Boucher de Crèvecœur de Perthes, Jacques (shäk', du krĕvkûr' du pĕrt'), 1788–1868, French writer and archaeologist He first showed that man had existed in the Pleistocene epoch A collector of Celtic and Roman relics, he discovered a human jawbone in the quarries of Moulin-Quignon in 1863 His writings include Antiquités celtiques et antédiluviennes (1847–64)

Boucherville (bōō'shurvĭl), village (pop 1,047), S Que , NE of Montreal on the St Lawrence It was founded in 1668 by Pierre Boucher A manor house built by him still stands in the vicinity; it is now owned by the Jesuits

Bouches-du-Rhône (bōōsh'-dü-rōn'), department (2,026 sq mi , pop 976,241), SE France, in Provence Named for the RHONE delta, it includes the island of CAMARGUE Marseilles (its capital), Aix-en-Provence, and Arles are the chief cities

Boucicault, Dion (bōō'sĭkōlt), 1822?–1890, British playwright and actor, b Dublin At 19 he had success with his play London Assurance at Covent Garden, London In 1853 he came to the United States with his wife, Agnes ROBERTSON, and wrote or adapted over 300 farces, comedies, and melodramas, in which he often acted with success The most notable of these were Grimaldi (1855), The Sidewalks of New York (1857), Dot (1859), adapted from Dickens's Cricket on the Hearth, The Octoroon (1859), The Colleen Bawn (1860), Arrah-na-Pogue (1864), The O'Dowd (1873), and The Shaughraun (1874) His Rip van Winkle (1865), adapted from Washington Irving's story, was later altered by Joseph Jefferson, who appeared in it for many years The growth of the traveling company with one play is due to Boucicault's influence See his Art of Acting (1916)

Boucicaut (bōōsēkō'), c 1366–1421, marshal of France and crusader against the Turks, whose real name was Jean le Meingre (shä' lu mĕ'gru) Captured by Bajazet I at NIKOPOL (1396), he was ransomed, in 1399 he helped Emperor MANUEL II to defend Constantinople against Bajazet He was governor (1401–7) of Genoa, then under French protection, was captured by the English at Agincourt (1415), and ended his days in England Boucicaut was the author of several ballads and other poems

Boudin, Eugène Louis (ûzhĕn' lwē' bōōdĕ'), 1824–98, French painter, son of a pilot His little landscapes and marines of Brittany, Normandy, and the Netherlands are much prized Rather gray in tonality, they are compelling in their out-of-door clarity and frankness Boudin is represented in the Luxembourg Museum, Paris, and the Metropolitan Museum and in many private collections

Boudinot, Elias (bōō'dĭnŏt), 1740–1821, American Revolutionary statesman, b Philadelphia A lawyer of Elizabethtown (now Elizabeth), N J , he took an active interest in patriot activities and was a member of the Continental Congress both before and after the adoption of the Articles of Confederation (1777–78, 1781–84). He ardently supported the Constitution and helped secure its ratification by New Jersey He was elected to Congress in 1789 and appointed director of the U S mint in 1795 He retired from public service in 1805 He was devoted to philanthropy, notably for the Indians, and he was first president (1816–21) of the American Bible Society He wrote a book supporting the theory that the Indians were the lost tribes of Israel See biography by J J Boudinot (1896)

Boufflers, Louis François, duc de (lwē' frāswä' duk' dŭ bōōflĕr'), 1644–1711, marshal and peer of France He served as a boy under Créqüy and Turenne His best-known exploits are his defense of Namur (1695), his defense of Lille against Marlborough and Prince Eugene (1708), and his skillful retreat from the field of Malplaquet (1709)

Boufflers, Stanislas Jean, marquis de (stänĕsläs' zhän' märkē' dŭ), 1738–1815, French author, usually called the chevalier de Boufflers His best-known work is Aline, reine de Golconde (1761), a romance See study by N H Webster (1916)

bougainvillaea or buginvillaea (both bōō"gŭnvĭl'ēŭ) [for L A de Bougainville], any plant of the genus Bougainvillaea, tropical American woody plants cultivated in the open in the South and under glass in the North Usually rampant, tall-growing vines, they have small flowers set off by showy petallike bracts mostly in shades of red or purple

Bougainville, Louis Antoine de (lwē' ätwän' dŭ bōōgĕvēl'), 1729–1811, French navigator He accompanied Montcalm to Canada as aide-de-camp and he later (1763–65) established a colony on the Falkland Islands, but had to surrender the settlement to Spain (1766) Accompanied by naturalists and astronomers, he made a voyage around the world (1767–69), visiting Tahiti, the Samoan group, and the New Hebrides, and rediscovering the Solomon Islands, the largest of which is named for him In the American Revolution he fought Admiral Hood at Martinique His name is also given to the strait between Bougainville and Choiseul Island, to a strait in the New Hebrides, and to the bougainvillaea vine Bougainville's Description d'un voyage autour du monde (2 vols , 1771–72, Eng tr , 1772) helped to popularize Rousseau's theories on the morality of man in his natural state and inspired Diderot to write (1772) his Supplément au voyage de Bougainville, a defense of sexual freedom

Bougainville (bōō'gunvĭl, Fr bōōgĕvēl'), volcanic island (3,880 sq mi , pop 50,000), S Pacific, largest of the SOLOMON ISLANDS It is NW of Guadalcanal Important harbors are at Kieta and on Empress Augusta Bay, exports are ivory nuts and tortoise shell The island was rediscovered (1768) by Bougainville and in 1884 became a German possession Occupied during the First World War by Australian forces, it was included (1920) in the Australian Mandated Territory of New Guinea (see NEW GUINEA, TERRITORY OF) The site of a large Japanese air base in the Second World War, Bougainville was the last major enemy stronghold in the Solomons

Boughton, George Henry (bô'tŭn), 1833?–1905, English-American genre and landscape painter, b England He grew up in Albany, N Y , studied in Paris, and lived mainly in London He enjoyed a long success in both London and New York Characteristic are his Puritans Going to Church (N Y Public Library) and A Puritan Girl, Edict of William the Testy, and The Two Farewells (all Metropolitan Mus) Boughton illustrated Irving's Rip Van Winkle and Knickerbocker History See study by A L Baldry (1904)

Bougie (bōōzhē'), city (pop 21,011), NE Algeria, a Mediterranean port E of Algiers It was a minor port in Carthaginian times and of little significance under the Romans, but Gaiseric made it the capital of the Vandals It later disappeared, but after being refounded by a Berber dynasty in the 11th cent , it became a leading port of the northern shores of Africa After Spanish occupation (1509–55) it was taken by the Turks and again declined France took it in 1833, and Bougie rose again The port has been extended, and the near-by mines developed Bougie ships not only iron and phosphates but also the agricultural produce of the hinterland of the Tell Two Berber forts and parts of the Roman and Berber walls recall the past

Bouguer, Pierre (pyĕr' bōōgĕr'), 1698–1758, French mathematician and hydrographer He made, in relation to the sun and moon, some of the first photometric measurements and invented a heliometer His works include Traité d'optique sur la gradation de la lumière (1729) and La Figure de la terre (1749).

Bouguereau, Adolphe William (adôlf', bōōgûrô'), 1825–1905, French painter Highly popular and honored in his day, he has been stigmatized as trivial and academic by many modern critics His most ambitious work is his large Apollo and the Muses in the foyer of the Opéra at Bordeaux Best known for his nudes, he was also popular as a painter of religious subjects His Birth of Venus and Consoling Virgin are in the Luxembourg Mus , Paris.

Bouillé, François Claude Amour, marquis de (frāswä' klōd' ämōōr' märkē' dŭ bōōyā'), 1739–1800, French general He distinguished himself in the American Revolution as commander in chief of French forces in the West Indies. Holding a command in Lorraine at the beginning of the French Revolution, he suppressed the garrison mutinies at Metz and Nancy (1790) with some severity, but was not able to restore complete discipline Bouillé was the pivotal figure in the plan for Louis XVI's escape from France, which failed (1791) at Varennes The affair is sometimes called the Conspiracy of Bouillé The general fled, and died in England His Mémoires sur la Révolution française were published in 1801 (Eng tr , 1797)

Bouillon, Frédéric Maurice de la Tour d'Auvergne, duc de (frādārēk' mōrēs' du la tōōr' dōvĕr'nyŭ duk' du bōōyô'), c 1605–1652, French general, son of Henri de Bouillon Brought up a Protestant, he campaigned in Holland under his uncle MAURICE OF NASSAU In 1635 he entered the service of France He rebelled against Richelieu in 1641, but after a reconciliation he was given command of the French forces in Italy (1642) Soon afterwards he was arrested in the CINQ MARS conspiracy and, in return for pardon, ceded to France the sovereign principality of Sedan, which his family had held He embraced Catholicism, went to Rome, and commanded the papal troops In 1649 he returned to France and took part in the FRONDE on the side of the princes In 1651, however, he submitted and exchanged Sedan and Rocourt, which he then held as fiefs, for other territories

Bouillon, Godfrey of see GODFREY OF BOUILLON

Bouillon, Henri de la Tour d'Auvergne, vicomte de Turenne, duc de (ärē', vēkôt', turĕn'), 1555–1623, marshal of France, diplomat, and Protestant leader He served with Henry IV against the LEAGUE but fled to Geneva when he was ordered arrested for his part in a conspiracy against the king (1603) Under Marie de' Medici he returned and entered the council of regency, from which he withdrew after a quarrel with the queen He participated in a series of pro-Calvinist intrigues but later retired to his independent duchy, which he had acquired through marriage in 1591 He founded a library and a Protestant college at Sedan Bouillon was the grandson of Anne de Montmorency and the father of TURENNE

Bouillon, town (pop 2,835), Luxembourg prov , S Belgium, in the Ardennes and near the French border Its ancient castle belonged to Godfrey of Bouillon, who sold (1095) the town to the bishop of Liége before his departure for the First Crusade Strategically situated, Bouillon often changed hands Nominally under the suzerainty of the prince-bishops of Liége, the town and environs passed (15th cent) to William de la Marck, the "Boar of the Ardennes," whose descendants assumed the titles duke of Bouillon and prince of Sedan The La Marck territories passed, through marriage, to Henri de Bouillon Bouillon was annexed to France from 1678 to 1815 The ducal title lapsed in 1732

Boulanger, Georges Ernest (zhôrzh' ĕrnĕst' bōōlāzhā'), 1837–91, French general and reactionary political adventurer After a brilliant military record in North Africa and Indo-China he played an important part in suppressing the Commune of Paris (1871) Minister of war in 1886, he became the popular leader of a nationalist movement, Boulangism, which foreshadowed modern fascism Appealing to the French desire for revenge against Germany, he gathered all the elements hostile to the Third Republic Though he was forced from his government post in 1887 and later deprived of his army command, his jingoism and his hysterical mass appeal gave him immense popularity Many royalists joined, though Boulanger saw himself as a future dictator rather than a restorer of kings He did, however, accept royalist financial contributions Such fanatic nationalists as Paul Déroulède urged the cause of "the man on horseback" Elected a deputy, Boulanger resigned in protest against the actions of the chamber and in 1889 won an overwhelming victory at the polls The time seemed ripe for a military coup d'état, but Boulanger, learning of a threatened prosecution for endangering the security of the state, suddenly lost his nerve and fled to Belgium, where he committed suicide in 1891 The Boulanger bubble burst, but the factors which had made it possible were the same that caused the Dreyfus Affair and which ultimately destroyed the Third Republic in 1940 Boulanger, "the man on horseback," is remembered in France as the symbol of a would-be Napoleon and military dictator See H S Gorman, Brave General (1942)

Boulanger, Gustave Rodolphe Clarence (güstav' rôdôlf' klärās'), 1824–88, French painter of Oriental scenes, studied with Delaroche He decorated the Foyer de la Danse of the Paris Opéra

Boulanger, Louis (lwē), 1806–67, French painter of the romantic school Among his best-known paintings are Mazeppa, Triumph of Petrarch, and portraits of Hugo, Balzac, and Dumas père

Boulanger, Nadia (nädyä'), 1887–, French musician, the outstanding contemporary teacher of composition, studied at the Paris Conservatoire She headed the composition department of the École normale de Musique, Paris, and of the American Conservatory, Fontainebleau In 1945 she was appointed professor at the Paris Conservatoire. As the teacher of such American composers as Walter Piston, Aaron Copland, Virgil Thomson, Roy Harris, and Marc Blitzstein, she has greatly influenced contemporary American music She has often visited the United States, as teacher, lecturer, organist, and conductor

Boulder, Australia see KALGOORLIE AND BOULDER

Boulder, city (pop 12,958, alt c 5,350 ft), co seat of Boulder co , N central Colo , NW of Denver and on Boulder Creek, laid out 1859, inc 1871 It is a summer and health resort (with mineral springs) and the rail and trade center for a mining and farming area The city is the seat of the Univ of Colorado (see COLORADO, UNIVERSITY OF)

boulder, any large, rounded mass of loose rock, whether shaped from its bed by weathering or transported from its original position by a glacier or by running water The presence of erratics—boulders transported and deposited on rock formations of a different structure and origin—is an important characteristic of DRIFT

Boulder City, town (pop c 2,500), S Nev , just W of HOOVER DAM, near Lake Mead Built as headquarters for the dam, it is a year-round tourist center

boulder clay, mixture of clay, gravel, and sand impregnated with boulders, either large or small In the Pleistocene epoch each glacier ground together the soils gathered in its progress, and the mixture was deposited where the glacier melted Boulder clay, one type of such mixture, is therefore also called ground moraine or till

Boulder Dam see HOOVER DAM

Boulle or Buhl, André Charles (both ädrā' shärl' bōōl'), 1642–1732, French cabinetmaker, the master of a distinctive style of furniture, much imitated, for which his name has become a synonym In 1672 he was admitted to a group of skilled artists maintained by Louis XIV in the Louvre palace, and thereafter he devoted himself to creating costly furniture and objects of art for the king and court Boulle's pieces, having in general the character of Louis XIV and Regence design, were built for the immense formal rooms of the period Boulle, a master of MARQUETRY, specialized in the inlaying of ebony with precious woods and mother-of-pearl Large areas were covered with tortoise shell, inlaid with arabesques of gilded brass He added splendid bas-relief compositions, as well as sculptured rosettes, masks, and acanthus scrolls, all in gilt bronze Superb examples of his art exist at Versailles, Fontainebleau, and the Louvre and in England at Windsor Castle and in the Wallace Collection, London The title cabinetmaker to the king passed to his four sons, Jean Philippe, Pierre Benoît, André Charles, and Charles Joseph

Bologne, Jean see BOLOGNA, GIOVANNI DA

Boulogne-sur-Mer (bōōlô'nyu-sür-mĕr'), city (pop 34,389, 1936 pop 51,011), Pas-de-Calais dept , N France, in Picardy It is an important fishing and commercial port on the English Channel From here the Romans sailed (A D 43) to conquer Britain, and here again NAPOLEON I assembled an invasion fleet (which never sailed) in 1803 5 In the Second World War it suffered more than 400 aerial bombings, the port and modern section were very badly damaged, but the old "upper city," which has preserved its medieval ramparts, was little harmed In the Cathedral of Notre Dame (built 19th cent , greatly damaged) is a replica (1875) of the famous wooden statue (burned 1793) of Our Lady of Boulogne, said to have floated into the port on a crewless bark in the 7th cent Still a great shrine of pilgrimage, the cathedral is surmounted by a huge cross and a beacon

Boulton, Matthew (bōl'tun), 1728–1809, English engineer and manufacturer In partnership with James Watt from 1775, he manufactured steam engines at the Soho ironworks near Birmingham In 1790 he patented a coining press Boulton minted copper coins for the East India Company and for several foreign governments and in 1797 established a new copper coinage for Great Britain See biography by H W Dickinson (1937)

bouncing Bet. see SOAPWORT

Boundary Peak, 13,145 ft high, SW Nev , in the White Mts near the Calif line It is the highest peak in Nevada

Bound Brook, borough (pop 7,616), N central N J , on the Raritan and NW of New Brunswick, settled 1681, inc 1891 Cornwallis defeated a colonial force here, April, 1777 Paint and chemicals are made in the borough Bound Brook has large orchid and gardenia nurseries

Bountiful, city (pop 3,357), N central Utah, N of Salt Lake City, settled 1847 by Mormons, inc 1855 This center of an irrigated farm area has an early Mormon chapel

Bounty, British naval vessel commanded by William BLIGH She set sail for the Pacific in Dec , 1787, to transport breadfruit trees from the Society Islands to the West Indies In April, 1789, a mutiny led by Fletcher Christian succeeded The commander and 18 of his crew were set adrift in a small open boat By remarkable seamanship they went c 4,000 mi and reached Timor in June There they bought another ship and proceeded to Batavia, and thence in Dutch ships to England. Some of the mutineers were later captured and were fined in England; three were executed. Other mutineers, perhaps under Christian, settled on PITCAIRN ISLAND, where all but one were later killed by natives See fictional accounts (based on fact) in Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, Mutiny on the Bounty (1932) and its sequels, Men against the Sea (1934) and Pitcairn's Island (1934) bounty, premium paid by the state for the production, export, or—rarely—import of certain goods A bounty, unlike a SUBSIDY, involves payment per unit of the product in question Under the mercantilist system, bounties were given for the production or export of favored goods and occasionally, as in 18th-century England, for the importation of goods from the colonies After 1800, bounties sometimes took the place of abolished protective duties Preferential transportation charges on export goods is the modern equivalent of a bounty on exports A bounty on production equals a protective tariff in aiding the manufacturer, save that it is more conspicuous and allegedly costs the community less Its use has been checked in the United States as a violation of the constitutional principle that money raised by taxation may be used only for public purposes Bounties have been granted by states for roads, canals, railroads, and other public works Bounties were frequently used by nations as an inducement to army enlistment, and bounties in the form of prize money are still in use in the British navy State governments in the United States give bounties for the killing of destructive animals See R A Hodgson, Introduction to International Trade and Tariffs (1932)

Bouquet, Henry (bōōkā'), 1719–65, British army officer in the French and Indian Wars A French Swiss, he entered the British service as a lieutenant colonel in 1755 and came to America in 1756 He distinguished himself as second in command to Gen John Forbes in the successful expedition against Fort Duquesne in 1758, and in PONTIAC'S REBELLION he decisively defeated the Indians in a hotly contested battle at Bushy Run (Aug , 1763) In 1764 Bouquet, on an expedition into the Ohio country, forced the Shawnee and other Indians to lay down their arms He was brigadier general commanding the Southern Dist at his death See A C Darlington, History of Colonel Henry Bouquet and the Western Frontiers of Pennsylvania (1920)

Bourassa, Henri (ārē' bōōrasa'), 1868–, Canadian political leader, b Montreal, son of Napoléon Bourassa (1827–1916), Canadian author, painter, and architect, and grandson of Louis Joseph Papineau He was elected as an Independent Liberal to the Canadian House of Commons in 1896 but resigned in 1899 in protest against sending Canadian troops to the South African War; he was almost immediately reelected by his constituents A man of education, with oratorical and literary gifts, he rallied around him various groups discontented with the regime of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and welded them into a powerful opposition party in Quebec which became known as the Nationalist party because it took the stand that Canada should hold aloof from diplomatic entanglements with Great Britain and the United States Opposing (1909–11) the bill to construct a Canadian navy, Bourassa withdrew enough support from Laurier to cause the fall of the 15-year-old government Several Nationalists were named to the new Conservative government of Sir Robert Laird Borden, but Bourassa declined office In 1910 he founded, as the Nationalist journal, the Devoir, a Montreal daily of which he was for many years the editor. He led French Canadian opposition to participation in the First World War, denouncing in violent terms the conscription act of 1917 He was reelected to the Canadian House of Commons in 1925, 1926, and 1930 He wrote several books which stated his position as a Nationalist

Bourbaki, Charles Denis Sauter (shārl' dunē' sōtā' bōōrbākē'), 1816–97, French general of Greek ancestry He distinguished himself in the Algerian campaigns, the Crimean War, and the Italian War of 1859 In 1862 he declined an offer of the Greek throne In the FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR he was at first commander of the imperial guard Then, put in command of the Army of the East by the provisional government, he failed in an attempt to raise the siege of Belfort and was forced to cross into Switzerland, where his troops were disarmed and interned (Feb 2, 1871)

Bourbon (bōōrbō'), royal family, originally of France, with branches which ruled Spain, the Two Sicilies, and Parma, a cadet branch of the Capetian dynasty It takes its name from the now ruined castle of Bourbon, at Bourbon-l'Archambault, Allier dept , which was the seat of a powerful family descended from Adhémar, a noble of the 9th cent Robert of Clermont, sixth son of Louis IX of France, married (1272) Beatrice, heiress of Bourbon, and thus is considered the founder of the royal line Robert's son, Louis, was created (1327) first duke of Bourbon The ducal title remained with the descendants of his eldest son until 1527, when Charles, duc de Bourbon, died without issue Because of his treason, his extensive fiefs (Bourbonnais, Marche, Auvergne, Forez) were seized by the crown and the ducal title was discontinued. A younger son of Louis, first duke of Bourbon, gave issue to the line of Bourbon-Vendôme The marriage (1548) of Antoine de Bourbon, duke of Vendôme, with Jeanne d'Albret added vast territories in S France (see ALBRET) and the title king of Navarre to his other fiefs (Vendôme, Périgord, Rouergue) From Antoine's brother, Louis I de Condé, the houses of CONDÉ and CONTI were issued Antoine's son became (1589) the first Bourbon king of France as HENRY IV, the older branches of Louis IX's issue having become extinct (see VALOIS) He was succeeded by his son, Louis XIII, and his grandson, Louis XIV Louis XIV's descendants ruled France (except during the French Revolution and the Napoleonic era, 1792–1814) until the deposition (1830) of Charles X (see FRANCE), with the death (1883) of Henri, comte de CHAMBORD, grandson of Charles X, the senior French branch of Bourbon came to an end From Louis XIV's brother Philip the cadet branch of Bourbon-Orléans (see ORLÉANS, family) is issued, it furnished one king, Louis Philippe (1830–48) and inherited the claim to the French crown in 1883 The line of Bourbon-Spain, Span Borbón (bōrbōn'), began with the accession (1700) of PHILIP V, a grandson of Louis XIV, to the Spanish throne He was succeeded by Ferdinand VI, Charles III, Charles IV, and FERDINAND VII, Ferdinand VII altered the Salic law of succession, introduced into Spain by Philip V, in favor of his daughter, ISABELLA II Her succession was contested by the partisans of Don Carlos, second son of Charles IV, and of his descendants (see CARLISTS) In 1875 relative order was reestablished when Isabella's son was crowned as Alfonso XII His son, Alfonso XIII, was deposed in 1931 and died in exile in 1941 His marriage with Victoria Eugenie of BATTENBERG brought HEMOPHILIA into his family His first and fourth sons died of minor accidents in 1938 and 1934 respectively His second son, Jaime, early renounced his right of succession, which thus appears to belong to Alfonso's third son, Don Juan (b 1913), who is free from the disease The line of Bourbon-Sicily came out of the Spanish line, it was founded by Ferdinand I of the Two SICILIES, who succeeded (1759) his father as king of Naples and of Sicily when the latter became king of Spain as CHARLES III His great-grandson, Francis II, abdicated in 1861, he had issue The house of Bourbon-Parma was established (1748) in the duchies of PARMA and Piacenza by Philip, a younger son of Philip V of Spain and ELIZABETH FARNESE Robert (1848–1907), fifth duke of the line, was deposed in 1860 Among his 18 children are Empress ZITA of Austria, SIXTUS OF BOURBON-PARMA, and Prince René, who married Princess Margaret of Denmark René's and Margaret's daughter, Anne, married (1948) King MICHAEL of Rumania

Bourbon, Antoine de (ātwan' dŭ), 1518–62, duke of Vendôme, king of Navarre through his marriage with JEANNE D'ALBRET, father of Henry IV of France Supposedly converted to Protestantism at the same time as his brother Louis I de CONDÉ, he proved an inveterate turncoat In 1561 he reembraced Catholicism and accepted the post of royal lieutenant general He was killed fighting the Protestants at Rouen

Bourbon, Charles, duc de (shārl', dŭk' du), 1490–1527, constable of France and governor of Milan He distinguished himself at the battle of Marignano (1515) Enmity, encouraged by the queen mother, LOUISE OF SAVOY, arose between King Francis I and the duke, who went over to Emperor Charles V, after long negotiations, in 1523 He fought against the French in Italy, notably at the battle of Pavia (1525), and was killed in an attack on Rome, which was sacked by his troops See biography by Charles Hare (1911)

Bourbon (bûr'bŭn, bōōr'–), town (pop 1,145), N Ind , SE of Plymouth It is a trading center for a farming area

Bourbonnais (bōōrbōnā'), region and former province, central France, in the northern part of the Massif Central It is now administratively divided into Allier dept and part of Cher dept The chief cities are Moulins, Montluçon, and Vichy The region is a largely arid plateau, used for grazing, with extensive cattle raising in the more fertile western section The counts (later dukes) of BOURBON held the Bourbonnais as an appanage until 1527, when Francis I of France confiscated it upon the death of the constable Charles de Bourbon

Bourbon-Parma, Bourbon-Sicily, and Bourbon-Spain · see BOURBON, family

Bourdaloue, Louis (lwē' bōōrdalōō'), 1632–1704, French preacher A Jesuit, he was called to Paris, where he won renown as one of the greatest orators of his day After the revocation of the Edict of Nantes he was sent to Languedoc on a mission to the Huguenots

Bourdelle, Émile Antoine (āmēl' ātwān' bōōrdĕl'), 1861–1929, French sculptor, son of a cabinetmaker of Montauban He went to Paris in 1884, where he studied successively under Falguière, Dalou, and Rodin Bourdelle differed sharply from Rodin in his preoccupation with the relation of sculpture to architecture Seeking his inspiration in archaic Greece and the Gothic, he achieved his greatest success in heroic and monumental works such as Hercules (Luxembourg Mus , Paris), of which the Metropolitan Museum contains a replica, his colossal Vierge d'Alsace, his bas-reliefs for the Théâtre des Champs Élysées, and his monument to Americans who died in the First World War (Pointe de Grave) He is also noted for his monuments to General Alvear at Buenos Aires and to the soldier dead at Montauban and for his numerous portrait heads Bourdelle is recognized as one of the greatest modern sculptors He is represented in the Metropolitan and Brooklyn museums

Bourdon, Sébastien (sābastyĕ bōōdō'), 1616–71, French painter Influenced by his predecessors and by Nicolas Poussin and Claude Lorraine, Bourdon produced large historical and religious paintings, such as The Downfall of the Magician Simon, for the cathedral chapter house of his native Montpellier, and Presentation to the Temple (Louvre)

Bourg, France see BOURG-EN-BRESSE

Bourgelat, Claude (klōd' bōōrzhula'), 1712–79, French founder of organized veterinary medicine He gave up the practice of law for which he was educated He persuaded the government to establish at Lyons a school of veterinary medicine, which he directed for several years, and also a school at Alfort, which became one of the finest in the world He wrote several authoritative works, including Éléments d'hippiatrique (1750–53)

Bourg-en-Bresse or Bourg (bōōrk'-ă-brĕs'), town (pop 21,169), capital of Ain dept , E central France, the chief city of BRESSE An important agricultural market, Bourg is also a gastronomic mecca The church (late 15th cent) of nearby Brou is one of the finest in France

Bourgeois, Léon (lāō' bōōrshwā'), 1851–1925, French statesman and social philosopher He held several cabinet posts, notably the premiership (1895–96), was a delegate to the First and Second Hague Conferences, a member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration, and one of the leading proponents of the League of Nations, in which he headed the French delegation In 1920 he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize In his influential book, Solidarité (1896), he advocated the intervention of public authority in order to bring about the ever more necessary solidarity within and among nations

bourgeoisie, (bōōrzhwäzē'), originally the name for the freemen in a French medieval town, extended to include the French middle class and subsequently that of other nations In the feudal social structure the bourgeoisie was known as the Third Estate Though the term dates only from the 13th cent and was not current in English until 1707, the bourgeoisie, if defined as the mercantile or trading class, has existed since the earliest recorded history, as witnessed by the trade regulations of Hammurabi's law code, c 2100 B C In the classical age, Solon, Pericles, and Demosthenes were bourgeois spokesmen in Greece, and the middle class flourished in Rome until the economic collapse of the 3d cent A D With the growth of trade at the end of the Middle Ages came the revival of bourgeois prominence In the early national monarchies of Western Europe the bourgeoisie promoted the interests of their class at the expense of the rival feudal orders of nobility and clergy In the 17th and 18th cent the bourgeoisie turned increasingly to principles of constitutionality and natural rights against the claims of divine right The English, American, and French revolutions derived largely from the desire of the bourgeoisie to rid itself of feudal trammels and royal encroachments on personal liberty and the rights of trade and property The doctrines of the modern democratic state hence have contained a strong element of bourgeois political philosophy Criticized in early stages of its growth by the satire of Boccaccio and Molière, the bourgeoisie in the 19th cent and later came under the polemical fire of socialism and communism at the same time that wars and economic dislocation were combining to render its position increasingly insecure In the United States, with its relative social mobility and resistance to class labels, the concept of the bourgeoisie has perhaps less meaning than in Europe Nevertheless, the influence of the middle class on U S economy, politics, and manners has been so strong as to approximate predominance The American middle class has been defined as consisting of farmers and small businessmen, the better paid industrial employees, and skilled individual workers, but in general is limited by no other consideration than the dictates of public opinion See F C Palm, The Middle Classes Then and Now (1936), A N Holcombe, The Middle Classes in American Politics (1940)

Bourges (bōōrzh), city (pop 41,597), capital of Cher dept , central France It manufactures clothes and arms Augustus made Bourges (then Avaricum) the Roman capital of Aquitania N of the Garonne (see GAUL), and it early became an archiepiscopal see and the capital of BERRY Charles VII, who in the first years of his reign was derisively called

"king of Bourges," resided here while most of France was in English hands In 1438 he promulgated the PRAGMATIC SANCTION of Bourges, which was revoked in 1461 by his son, Louis XI, who was born here. Louis XI founded (1463) the Univ of Bourges, where Jacques CUJAS later taught, it was abolished in the French Revolution The Cathedral of St Étienne (13th cent), one of the glories of French Gothic, is remarkable in that it has no transept Jacques CŒUR, whose splendid house still stands, and Louis Bourdaloue were born here

Bourget, Paul (pōl' bōōrzhā'), 1852–1935, French novelist His early novels were naturalistic, but Le Disciple (1889, Eng tr, 1901) marked a change This work attacks the scientific pretensions of naturalism as dangerous when applied to morals by recounting the disillusionment of a scientific skeptic (supposedly Taine) when he sees his favorite pupil destroyed by applying his master's theories to life Bourget from then on wrote in a Catholic and a strongly conservative tone His realistic psychological analysis and his classic style won him admiration, but the limitation of subjects (he treats only intellectuals, rich bourgeois, aristocrats) and the conservatism of his views restricted his popularity Representative of his more than 60 novels are Cruelle Énigme (1885, Eng tr, Love's Cruel Enigma, 1891), Cosmopolis (1893, Eng tr, 1893), Le Démon de midi [the noonday demon] (1914), and Le Sens de la mort (1915, Eng tr, The Night Cometh, 1916) He also wrote verse, plays, and critical essays See A L Guérard, Five Masters of French Romance (1916)

Bourget, Le, suburb (pop 7,327) of Paris, Seine dept, N France It has one of the airports of Paris Here Charles Lindbergh landed after his transatlantic flight (1927)

Bourget, lake, c 11 mi long, Savoie dept, E France It is famous for its scenic beauty AIX-LES-BAINS is on its shores

Bourgmont, Étienne Venyard, sieur de (ātyĕn' vāyar' syûr' du bōōrmō'), fl 1706–25, French explorer in the present United States He came to America c 1685 Because of an Indian uprising when he was acting commander in Detroit in 1706, he fled to the wilderness and traveled over the region of the lower Missouri river In 1719 the governor of New France sent Bourgmont back to France to report his discoveries, and in 1720 Bourgmont was made "commandant on the River Missouri" to block Spanish intrusion from the Southwest In 1724 he went westward and made a treaty with the Comanche somewhere in present W Kansas In 1725 he returned to France

Bourguignon, Le see COURTOIS, JACQUES

Bourignon, Antoinette (ätwanĕt' bōōrēnyō'), 1616–80, Flemish quietist In 1636 she fled from home to avoid a marriage urged by her father, spent a short time in a convent, and was in charge (1653–62) of an orphanage Believing herself divinely directed to restore the pure spirit of the Gospel, at Amsterdam (1667) she gathered a fanatical following Moving from place to place, she took her printing press with her and disseminated her quietistic teachings According to her alleged revelations, religion was a matter of internal emotion, not of faith and practice Her mystical ideas found particular favor in Scotland, where Bourignianism was declared a heresy (1711) and candidates for the ministry were required to renounce it before ordination Her autobiography was translated into English as The Light of the World (1696) See A R Macewen, Antoinette Bourignon, Quietist (1910)

Bournot, Sir John George (bōō'rĭnō"), 1837-1902, Canadian historian and political scientist, b Sydney, N S, grad Trinity College, Toronto, 1857 In 1860 he founded the Halifax Herald and was its editor for a time He was assistant clerk (1873–80) and chief clerk (1880–1902) of the Canadian House of Commons, but it is as an authority on the Canadian constitution and government that he is remembered His Local Government in Canada (1887), Manual of the Constitutional History of Canada (1888, rev ed, 1901), How Canada Is Governed (1895, revised by F Gisborne, 1918), and other books on Canadian government are still authoritative

Bourlamaque (bōōr'lumäk'), town (pop 1,545), W Que, near Val d'Or, mc 1934

Bourmont, Louis Auguste, comte de (lwē' gûst' kōt' dŭ bōōrmō'), 1773–1846, marshal of France An émigré, he fought against the French Revolution under Condé, in the VENDÉE, and as a leader of the CHOUANS Imprisoned in 1800, he escaped (1804) to Portugal, but in 1807 he was reconciled to Napoleon, whom he served in several campaigns In the Hundred Days, he deserted to the Prussians on the eve of Waterloo and joined the Bourbon standard Charles X made him minister of war (1829) and marshal (1830) He was successfully leading an army to Algeria, when the Revolution of 1830 made him an exile In 1832 he aided Caroline de BERRY in her feeble insurrection; in 1840 he returned to France under an amnesty.

Bourne, Francis (bōrn), 1861–1935, English prelate, cardinal of the Roman Church. He entered the priesthood in 1884 and later was made bishop coadjutor of Southwark (1896), bishop of Southwark (1897), archbishop of Westminster (1903), and cardinal (1911) He accomplished much by his moderate policies in avoiding difficulties between the Roman Catholic Church and the state in England

Bourne, Hugh (bōōrn), 1772–1852, English founder of the sect of Primitive Methodists In 1799 he joined the Wesleyan Methodists and became a local preacher In 1807 he began holding outdoor revival services, despite prohibitions by the Wesleyan Methodist Conference His adherents gathered around him to establish a new community, the first class of which was organized in 1810 In 1812 the name Primitive Methodists was adopted Within the lifetime of the founder the sect gained over 110,000 members In 1844–46 Bourne visited the United States, where he gathered large congregations

Bourne, Randolph Silliman (bôrn), 1886–1918, American writer, b Bloomfield, N J, grad Columbia, 1913 His two books on education, The Gary Schools (1916) and Education and Living (1917), show him as a serious and ardent disciple of John Dewey, whose pragmatism he attacked, however, when America entered the war Bourne's pacifist articles were published in the Seven Arts and collected posthumously as Untimely Essays (1919) Crippled and always fragile, he died during the influenza epidemic of 1918 The History of a Literary Radical (1920), edited with an introduction by Van Wyck Brooks, shows his strength as a philosopher and critic See biography by Louis Filler (1943)

Bourne (bôrn), summer resort town (pop 3,315), SE Mass, crossed by Cape Cod Canal, settled c 1640, set off from Sandwich 1884 The canal was bridged in 1935 See Betsey D Keene, History of Bourne from 1622 to 1937 (1937)

Bournemouth (bôrn'muth), county borough (1931 pop 116,797, 1947 estimated pop 139,560), Hampshire, England, on Poole Bay It has grown since the middle of the 19th cent from a small fishing village in the pine-wooded, sheltered valley of the Bourne to a fashionable resort and fine arts center It has an excellent sandy beach, a fine climate, and numerous parks Mary Shelley is buried in the parish churchyard

Bournville, village, Worcestershire, England, SW of Birmingham, built by George Cadbury as a GARDEN CITY for employees of his chocolate plant

Bourrienne, Louis Antoine Fauvelet de (lwē' ätwan' fōvulā' du bōōrēĕn'), 1769–1834, French diplomat and writer He was a friend and for a time (1797–1802) private secretary to Napoleon, and later he supported the Bourbon restoration His memoirs (10 vols, 1829) are untrustworthy, but vivid

Boursault, Edme (ĕdmä' bōōrsō'), 1638–1701, French dramatist and critic He was the literary opponent of Boileau and Molière and author of Le Mercure galant (1683), a successful comedy

bourse (bōōrs), term applied to a European STOCK EXCHANGE The first international bourse was established in Antwerp in the 16th cent The Paris bourse, dating from 1720, includes both the parquet, equivalent to the stock exchange and consisting of 70 members (who must be French citizens) ruled by a committee, and the coulisse, comparable to the American CURB MARKET, dealing in securities excluded from the parquet

Boursse, Esaias (äsä'yäs bōōr'su), c 1631–c 1672, Dutch painter of domestic interiors, somewhat after the manner of Pieter de Hooch Boursse traveled in Italy and in the East Indies, but settled in Amsterdam Among his few surviving works are Interior with Woman Spinning (Rijks Mus) and Woman Cooking (Wallace Coll, London)

Boussingault, Jean Baptiste Joseph Dieudonné (zhäN' bätēst' zhōzĕf' dyûdônā' bōōsĕgō'), 1802–87, French agricultural chemist As a young man he served under General Bolívar in South America He became, after his return to France, professor of chemistry at Lyons and later professor of agricultural and analytical chemistry at the Paris Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers His Économie rurale (1844) was later republished as Agronomie, chimie agricole, et physiologie (1860–64) and translated into English and German

Boutens, Pieter Cornelis (pē'tur kôrnā'lĭs bou'tuns), 1870–1943, Dutch poet His harmonious lyric verse, contemplative and sensitive, placed him among the foremost Dutch poets He made extensive translations, notably from Greek

Boutet de Monvel, Louis Maurice (lwē' môrēs' bōōtā' du môvĕl'), 1851–1913, French painter and illustrator, studied under Cabanel, Lefebvre, and Carolus-Duran Though he was well known for his portraits and historical paintings, his fame rests chiefly on his decorative illustrations for children's books and charming water colors, e g., Chansons et rondes pour les enfants, Chansons de France, La Vie de Jeanne d'Arc, and Nos Enfants He also painted a series of decorative panels from the life of Joan of Arc for the memorial church at Domremy

Bouts, Dierick or Thierry (dē'rĭk bouts', tyē'rē), c.1410–1475, Netherlandish primitive painter He may have worked with the Van Eycks, and while he does not equal them in power, his luminous panels have a calm beauty, particularly in the treatment of the landscape backgrounds, which gives him a high place among the painters of his period. An altarpiece of five panels (Church of St Peter, Louvain) and two panels representing the life of Emperor Otto III (Brussels) are his best authenticated works A fine portrait in the Metropolitan Museum is attributed to Bouts

Boutwell, George Sewall (bout'-), 1818–1905, American politician, b Brookline, Mass He served seven terms in the Massachusetts legislature between 1842 and 1851, was elected governor for the years 1851–52 by a coalition of Free-Soilers and Democrats, and was an organizer (1855) of the Republican party in Massachusetts As U S Representative (1863–69), Boutwell, a leading radical Republican, was for a time chairman of the Committee on Reconstruction, was one of the managers who handled the impeachment case against President Andrew Johnson, and delivered one of the final arguments before the Senate Secretary of the Treasury (1869–73), he represented one of President Grant's many poor appointments Although he had been (1862–63) the first commissioner of internal revenue, Boutwell knew little about finance His one absorbing interest was the reduction of the national debt, and he neglected more important problems His release of government gold defeated the famous attempt to corner the gold market on BLACK FRIDAY, Sept. 24, 1869, but the conspiracy need never have proceeded so far had he acted more promptly He was a U S Senator from 1873 to 1877. See his Reminiscences of Sixty Years in Public Affairs (1902), Allan Nevins, Hamilton Fish (1936)

Bouvard or Bouvart, Alexis (both alĕksēs' bōōvär'), 1767–1843, French astronomer He discovered eight comets His suggestion that the irregularities in the motion of Uranus are caused by an unknown planet outside the orbit of Uranus was proved correct by the discovery of Neptune by J C Adams and U J J Leverrier

Bouvet, Marie Marguerite (bōōvā'), 1865–1915, American writer, a teacher of French, b New Orleans She is known for her popular juvenile novels laid, for the most part, in foreign settings—Sweet William (1890), Bernardo & Laurette (1901), Clotilde (1908), and others

Bouvier, John (bōō'vēr), 1787–1851, American writer on law, b France He came (1802) to Philadelphia with his parents and later was a lawyer and journalist in Pennsylvania His Law Dictionary (1839), especially compiled for American lawyers, has been steadily brought up to date to the present He also wrote Institutes of American Law (1851)

Bouvines (bōōvēn'), village, Nord dept, N France, SE of Lille Here in 1214 PHILIP II of France defeated the joint forces of King John of England, Emperor Otto IV, and the count of Flanders

Bovey (bŭ'vē, bōvā'), village (pop 1,355), NE Minn, on Trout Lake NE of Grand Rapids and on the Mesabi iron range, mc 1921

Bow (bō) or Stratford le Bow, district of Poplar metropolitan borough, E London, England, named from a 12th-century arched bridge over the Lea There are relics of Roman occupation, and a 15th-century church is on the site of an earlier chapel A French convent near by is referred to in the Prologue of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales Bow was noted for china manufacture in the 18th cent

Bow, N H see CONCORD

Bow (bō), river of S Alberta It rises on the eastern slope of the Continental Divide and flows southeast through some of the most magnificent mountain scenery of North America (included in Banff National Park). It flows past Banff, emerges from the mountains in the canyonlike Bow River Pass, and continues past Calgary southeastward across the plains to its junction with the Oldman river to form the South Saskatchewan From Calgary westward to near its head its mountain valley is followed by the chief transcontinental line of the Canadian Pacific Railway bow (bō), implement used in playing instruments of the violin family Its name originated from the fact that in its early form it resembled an archer's bow It assumed its present characteristics in the years 1775–81 at the hands of François Tourte (1747–1835) He made the bow of Pernambuco wood, gave it the right curvature, and invented the device by which the horsehairs are held in place and tightened The violoncello and the bass viol are played with a bow which is shorter and heavier than the violin bow bow and arrow. The use of bows and arrows for hunting and for war probably dates back to the Paleolithic period in both Asia and Europe. It continued to be dominant until the introduction of gunpowder There were archers in ancient Egypt and Mesopotamia, and thousands of Persian arrows have been found on the battlefield of Marathon. Though the Greek phalanx and the Roman legion depended somewhat less on the use of the bow, Cretan archers in Roman service were famous. In the Middle Ages the infantry were armed with bow and arrow, and archery, always prominent, grew more so in the 14th cent with the rise of the foot soldier. A new weapon, the crossbow, was developed. It consisted of a bow set on a stock, and it was much stronger than an ordinary bow; it could fire stones and metal as well as darts and arrows It was, however, slow and difficult to work; even the arbalest, a late form equipped with a type of ratchet, was clumsy and slow. At the battle of Crécy (1346), English longbowmen, firing quickly from their man's-height bows, so thoroughly outclassed Genoese crossbowmen fighting for the French that they brought the crossbow into disuse soon afterward The speed of archers kept the bow and arrow in use in warfare even after gunpowder was introduced, for the old harquebus required much time for loading. The English were particularly noted as archers, and it is not surprising that Robin Hood was a folk hero In England the yew was favored as the wood for making bows In North America the Indians used hickory very widely, but wood of the Osage orange, native to Arkansas and Oklahoma, was so prized that bows made of it were important in commerce and the tree came to be called the bowwood The arrowheads used by the Indians were of flint, chipped by percussion and by pressure without the use of heat Flint arrowheads were also used by other peoples of Neolithic culture and were still somewhat used by the Persians, though even then metal arrowheads had become more common The bow and the arrow were much used as symbols in mythology and, therefore, in poetry

Bow Bells (bō), in the church of St Mary-le-Bow (Bow Church), Cheapside, London They are in mid-London, and tradition says that only he who is born within sound of these bells is a true Londoner, a "Cockney" They were the bells, according to legend, that called Dick Whittington back to London The fine steeple, over 222 ft high, was built by Christopher Wren when he rebuilt the church after the great fire, the crypt of the original Norman church, for the arches or bows of which the church is named, still stands The church was damaged in air raids in the Second World War

Bowditch, Henry Ingersoll (bou'dĭch), 1808–92, American physician, b Salem, Mass, M D Harvard, 1832, son of Nathaniel Bowditch He studied in Paris under Pierre C A Louis, whose monographs on fever and phthisis he translated into English in 1836 He was professor of clinical medicine (1859–67) at Harvard and contributed notably to public-health measures as a member (1869–79) of the Massachusetts state board of health and as author of Public Hygiene in America (1877) As a specialist in diseases of the chest, he found a direct correlation between dampness and the spread of tuberculosis and advocated the open-air treatment for that disease, his Young Stethoscopist (1846) was long in use He was influential in organizing an ambulance service in the Civil War and was a prominent abolitionist See biography by V. Y Bowditch (2 vols, 1902)

Bowditch, Henry Pickering, 1840–1911, American physiologist, b Boston, M D Harvard, 1868, grandson of Nathaniel Bowditch He studied abroad under Claude Bernard, J M Charcot, and K F W Ludwig In 1871 he established at Harvard, with his own apparatus, the first physiological laboratory in the country He attracted students of high caliber, collaborating with many of them in written works, and carried out important investigations of the heart, functional nerve blocking, and anthropometry As dean (1883–93) of the Harvard medical faculty he radically modernized the curriculum See biography by W. B Cannon (1924)

Bowditch, Nathaniel, 1773–1838, American navigator and mathematician, b Salem, Mass, father of Henry I Bowditch He had no formal schooling after the age of 10 In 1795 he went to sea, and on five long voyages he carried out his studies in navigation and as a result corrected some 8,000 errors in Moore's Practical Navigator, first published in America in 1799 A new edition appeared under Bowditch's name as The New American Practical Navigator (1802), since 1867 it has been published by the U S Hydrographic Office Bowditch made a translation (1829–39) of Laplace's Mécanique céleste See studies by A B Stanford (1927) and R E Berry (1941)

Bowdler, Thomas (boud'lûr, bŏd'–), 1754–1825, English editor He is best known for his Family Shakespeare (10 vols, 1818), an expurgated edition for family reading which, although attacked for its prudery, was reprinted many times Bowdler also edited for family reading Gibbon's History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire (1826) His deletions throughout these works gave rise to the term bowdlerize

Bowdoin, James (bō'dĭn), 1726–90, American statesman, b. Boston, grad Harvard, 1745 He was elected to the Massachusetts General Court in 1753 and served, except for brief periods of illness, until the outbreak of the American Revolution Illness prevented him (1774) from becoming a delegate to the Continental Congress, and John Hancock took his place. Bowdoin became a leading figure in the council which governed Massachusetts during the war, presided over the state constitutional convention in 1779, and in 1785 replaced Hancock as governor of the state. A conservative, he as governor played an active role in suppressing SHAYS'S REBELLION and also forwarded the movement toward a centralized national government Bowdoin College was named for him

Bowdoin College, at Brunswick, Maine, nonsectarian, for men, chartered 1794, opened 1802, named for James Bowdoin Nathaniel Hawthorne, Longfellow, Franklin Pierce, Robert E Peary, and other noted men are among the alumni

Bowdon (bou'dun), town (pop 1,024), NW Ga, W5W of Atlanta, in a farm area; settled 1830, inc. 1859

bowel see INTESTINE

Bowell, Sir Mackenzie (bō'ŭl), 1823–1917, Canadian statesman, b England He came to Canada with his parents in 1833 and later became a printer's apprentice on the Intelligencer of Belleville, Ont, and eventually its editor He served as a Conservative in the Canadian House of Commons (1867–92) and in the Senate (1896–1906) For two years (1894–96) he was prime minister, but in 1896 his cabinet was split by the resignation of half the ministers, and he himself was obliged to resign He was then chosen opposition leader in the Senate

Bowen, Elizabeth (bō'ĭn), 1899–, Anglo-Irish author, b Dublin In 1923 she married Alan Cameron Her subtle novels of British upper-class life include The Hotel (1927), The Last September (1929), The Death of the Heart (1938), and The Heat of the Day (1949) Also an accomplished short-story writer, she has written Look at All Those Roses (1941) and Ivy Grips the Steps (1946) Bowen's Court (1942) is about her family and home in Ireland

Bowen, Francis, 1811–90, American philosopher, b Charlestown, Mass, grad Harvard, 1883 He was a professor at Harvard and the proprietor and editor (1843–53) of the North American Review A proponent of philosophical idealism, Bowen is chiefly remembered for his Modern Philosophy from Descartes to Schopenhauer and Hartmann (1877)

Bowen, Henry Chandler, 1813–96, American publisher, b Woodstock, Conn, educated at Woodstock and Dudley academies A Congregationalist, he aided in establishing the Independent, a strong antislavery paper, and was proprietor from 1871 until his death He also owned the Brooklyn Union for a time

Bower, Walter (bou'ûr), d 1449, Scottish chronicler, abbot of Inchcolm monastery in the Firth of Forth He is reputed to have interpolated and continued the work of John of FORDUN The continuation (1153–1437) and the original are together known as the Scotichronicon, the source for much of the early history of Scotland

bower bird, any of several species of birds native to Australia and New Guinea which build, for courtship displays and as a playground, an arbor or bower of sticks or grasses Usually the males construct the bowers, some of which are large (3–8 ft high), while others are like small cabins or tents or runways The gardener bower bird makes a lawn around its bower Colored stones, shells, feathers, flowers, and other bright objects, which are replaced when they become withered or worn, are used to decorate the lawns and the bowers The satin bower bird prefers blue decorative articles The nest is built by the female away from the bower The birds are crowlike and lack the showy plumage of the related bird of paradise

Bowers, Claude Gernade (zhurnăd' bou'urz), 1878–, American journalist, historian, and diplomat, b Hamilton co, Ind After serving as editor of the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette (1917–23), Bowers, as editorial writer on the New York World (1923–31) and political columnist on the New York Journal (1931–33), was an influential spokesman for the Democratic party Ambassador to Spain (1933–39), Bowers remained in Madrid throughout the Spanish civil war In 1939 he became ambassador to Chile. Much of his historical writing, vigorous, well written, and deservedly popular, is frankly partisan, further praising or reappraising favorably the characters and accomplishments of Democratic leaders in the past, e g, The Party Battles of the Jackson Period (1922), Jefferson and Hamilton (1925), The Tragic Era (1929), Jefferson in Power (1936), and The Young Jefferson, 1743–1789 (1945) He has also written biographies of John W. Kern (1918) and William M. Evarts (1928), Beveridge and the Progressive Era (1932), and The Spanish Adventures of Washington Irving (1940) and edited The Diary of Elbridge Gerry, Jr (1927)

Bowers, Eilley Orrum, c 1827–1903, American frontier figure, b Scotland At 16 she married a Mormon bishop and came to Nauvoo, Ill, but she divorced her husband to marry another Mormon, Alexander Cowan, with whom she went (1855) to Genoa in present Nevada When in the time of tension with the U S government all Mormons were recalled (1857) to Salt Lake City, she remained, earning her living by running a boarding house for miners. Her claim in the Comstock Lode was next to that of Lemuel Sanford Bowers, whom she later married. They were among the first to get great wealth from the lode and they erected a great mansion in Virginia City, Nev. Shortly their mine gave out, and both of them died in poverty See Swift Paine, Eilley Orrum, Queen of the Comstock (1929)

Bowery, the (bou'urē) [Dutch Bouwerie=farm], section of lower Manhattan, New York city, between Chatham Square and Astor Place E of Broadway The Bowery, the street which gives the area its name, was once a road to the farm of Governor Stuyvesant, who is buried at St Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, an Episcopal church The mail route (est 1673) to Boston traveled the road By the 1800s and '70s it had many fine theaters Later the section became notorious for its saloons and dance halls, its swindlers and petty criminals, and finally for its derelicts See A F Harlow, Old Bowery Days (1931)

Bowie, James (bōō'ē), 1799–1836, hero of the Texas revolution, b Burke co, Ga He and his brother, Resin Bowie, were noted frontiersmen in the backwoods of Catahoula parish, La, before James went to Texas in 1828 There he became a leader among the American settlers in their opposition to the Mexican government, taking a conspicuous part in the trouble at Nacogdoches in 1832 When the revolution actually began in 1835, he was made a colonel and was an able commander Like William B Travis and David Crockett, he died bravely at the ALAMO Legend says the bowie knife was named after him or his brother

Bowie, William (bōō'ē), 1872–1940, American geodesist, b Annapolis Junction, Md, grad Trinity College, Hartford, Conn, 1893 He served the U S Coast and Geodetic Survey (1895–1937), directing the geodetic division from 1909 to 1936 and was president of the International Geodetic Association (1919–33) He is known also for his work in developing the theory of isostasy, which is concerned with the gravitational equilibrium of the various parts of the earth's crust He wrote Isostasy (1927)

Bowie (bōō'ē) 1 Town (pop 767), W central Md, between Washington, D C, and Annapolis The Bowie race track is here, and near by is a state teachers college for Negroes 2 City (1940 pop 3,470, 1947 estimated pop 5,000), N Texas, SE of Wichita Falls, founded 1882, inc 1892 The region, known for its poultry raising, also has dairy, truck, and other farms

bowlder see BOULDER

bowlegs or genu varum (jē'nū vā'rŭm), a deforming curvature of the legs, usually the result of RICKETS in early life The child tends to walk with the feet widely separated and the toes turned in Because of a disturbance in the calcium-phosphorus metabolism, a softening of the bones occurs, and as the child begins to walk, the weight of the body and the change of posture produce bowing of the legs In young children, it is desirable to keep the weight off the legs and to give gentle corrective manipulation several times a day In older children braces are of assistance In many cases, operative section of the bone (osteotomy) is the method employed for correction A diet rich in minerals (especially calcium and phosphorus) and vitamins (particularly vitamin D) is of primary importance

Bowles, Chester Bliss (bōlz), 1901–, U S administrator and governor of Connecticut (1949–), b Springfield, Mass, grad Yale, 1924, grandson of Samuel Bowles At first a journalist and an advertising man, Bowles was later (1942–43) state OPA director in Connecticut and then, as national OPA director (1943–46), headed control of wartime rationing, rents, and prices He served (Feb–June, 1946) as director of the Office of Economic Stabilization In 1948 he was elected governor of Connecticut

Bowles, Samuel, 1797–1851, American newspaper proprietor, b Hartford, Conn He founded the Springfield (Mass) Republican (1824), a weekly In 1845 it became a morning daily under the influence of his son, Samuel Bowles, 1826–78, b Springfield, Mass, who had joined the Republican at 17 At 25, when his father died, he was trained to take control His vigor, discipline, practical policies, and general editorial competence, together with the aid of an exceptional but small staff, made the Springfield Republican one of the half-dozen most influential newspapers in the United States Bowles, by urging the union of all antislavery groups into a single national party, opened the way for the establishment in New England of the Republican party and became one of its most ardent members He gave complete support to Lincoln and in the Reconstruction period denounced the legislation of the radicals and the carpetbaggers, favoring milder measures His condemnation of the political and financial corruption of the period approached muckraking, and he was once sued by James Fisk for libel In later life he traveled much for his health, sending letters back to his paper Those of his Western trip of 1865 were collected in Across the Continent (1865), and those of his sojourn in Colorado, 1868, in The Switzerland of America (1869). See G S Merriam, Life and Times of Samuel Bowles (2 vols, 1885) His son, Samuel Bowles, 1851–1915, b Springfield, Mass, was the third of the family to edit the Republican He maintained its high quality by close editorial direction, but did little writing himself.

Bowles, William Lisle, 1762–1850, English poet, cleric, and literary critic He became vicar of Bremhill, Wilts, in 1804, chaplain to the prince regent in 1818, and canon residentiary of Stratford in the cathedral church of Salisbury in 1828 His Fourteen Sonnets (1789), by their freshness, tenderness, and naturalness, won the admiration of Coleridge Other poetry includes The Battle of the Nile (1799), The Sorrows of Switzerland (1801), and The Spirit of Discovery (1804) In an edition of Pope, published in 10 volumes in 1806, Bowles included a sketch of the poet's life and strictures on his work He argued that Pope's poetry, since it did not draw its inspiration from nature, was not among the best, this led to an acrimonious controversy in which Bowles was assailed by Byron See Garland Greever, A Wiltshire Parson and His Friends (1926)

bowling, sport played on an indoor, regulation bowling alley The alley is constructed of polished wood and measures 62 ft 10½ in from the foul line to the edge of the pit and is between 41 and 42 in wide A ball with two or three finger holes, weighing from 10 to 16 lb , is thrown by a bowler at 10 maple pins, each of which is 15 in high, set in rows of increasing length (one through four) at the opposite end of the alley The game is therefore also called tenpins A bowling contest is divided into 10 frames, with two throws allowed a bowler in each frame Each pin knocked down counts one point A strike is scored when all the pins are knocked down on the first throw, a spare when they are all toppled over on the second A perfect game, 300 points, is made by 12 consecutive strikes Bowling originated in ancient Germany, probably as an early Christian rite The Dutch introduced the game in America, where it became popular in the 19th cent Bowling, which was played with varying numbers of pins (e g , in ninepins) throughout the ages, was standardized as a 10-pin game in 1895 when the American Bowling Congress was founded The A B C and the Woman's International Bowling Congress, founded in 1916, hold yearly championships and set the standards The games of duck pins, candle pins, and barrel pins are played on the same general principles as bowling, but much smaller balls and pins are used

Bowling Green 1 City (pop 14,585), co seat of Warren co , S Ky , on the Barren river and SSW of Louisville, founded 1780 It is a shipping and market center for an area producing tobacco, strawberries, corn, livestock, limestone, and some oil and has evaporated-milk, meat-packing, and other plants Early in the Civil War, Bowling Green was occupied by Confederates until the Federal advance under U S Grant and D C Buell forced them to retreat (1862) Western Kentucky State Teachers College (with the Kentucky Library of Folklore and a museum) and Bowling Green College of Commerce are here Near by is Lost River Cave, said to have been a hideaway for the James brothers and for Gen John Hunt Morgan To the southwest lie the ruins of a Shaker settlement established in 1800 2 City (pop 1,975), co seat of Pike co , NE Mo , SE of Hannibal, settled 1819 Rock and limestone quarries are in the area The city has a statue of Champ Clark, who lived here 3 City (pop 7,190), co seat of Wood co , NW Ohio, S of Toledo, in a productive farm area, settled 1833, inc 1855 There are several factories Bowling Green State University (state supported, coeducational), chartered in 1910 as a normal school, was opened in 1914 It became a college in 1929, a university in 1935 It has colleges of business administration, education, and liberal arts

bowls, ancient sport (the bocce of Caesar's Rome is still played by Italians), long popular in Europe, especially in England and Scotland It is also known as lawn bowling or bowling on the green It was played in America before the American Revolution (hence Bowling Green in place names), but later declined in popularity In 1879, however, Christian Schepflin, of Dunellen, N J , formed the Dunellen Bowling Club and brought about a revival of the game The usual bowling green, about 120 ft square, is divided into six alleys or rinks, each of which is 20 ft wide and 120 ft long A small white ball, called a jack, is thrown on the alley by one of the players at some spot not less than 25 yd from the bowling mat The object of the game is to roll a ball—weighing 3½ lb. and made biased in order to swerve while rolling—as close to the jack as possible and, if necessary, to dislodge balls previously thrown by opponents The sport called CURLING, played on ice, is related to bowls

Bowman, Isaiah, 1878–1950, American geographer, b Ontario, grad Harvard (B S , 1905), Ph D Yale, 1909 He taught geography at Yale (1905–15) and then became director of the American Geographical Society He led the first Yale South American expedition (1907), served as geographer-geologist on the Yale Peruvian expedition (1911), and led the American Geographical Society expedition to the central Andes (1913) He was chief territorial adviser to President Wilson at the Versailles conference and served the Dept of State as territorial adviser in the Second World War He was a member of the executive committee of the National Research Council from 1919 to 1929 and was its chairman from 1933 to 1935 He was president of Johns Hopkins Univ from 1935 until his retirement in 1948 His work on many commissions and boards included contributions as an active officer of the Explorer's Club, the Association of American Geographers, and the Council of Foreign Relations and as president, from 1931 to 1934, of the International Geographical Union His books include The Andes of Southern Peru (1916) and Desert Trails of Atacama (1924), a standard work, Forest Physiography (1911), The Pioneer Fringe (1931), first of a series on world frontier areas, The New World Problems in Political Geography (1922), and Design for Scholarship (1936)

Bowmanville (bō'–), town (pop 4,113), S Ont , on Lake Ontario NE of Toronto It is a manufacturing center with a good harbor

Bowne, Borden Parker (boun), 1847–1910, American philosopher, b Monmouth co , N J , grad New York Univ , 1871, and studied at Halle and Göttingen In 1876 he became head of the department of philosophy at Boston Univ and later served as dean of the graduate school These positions he held until his death In his philosophy, which he called personalism, he stressed the reality and freedom of the self and insisted on the central importance of personality His masterpiece, Metaphysics, appeared in 1882 Other works include The Philosophy of Herbert Spencer (1874), Principles of Ethics (1892), The Immanence of God (1905), Personalism (1908), and The Essence of Religion (1910)

Bowring, Sir John (bou'ring), 1792–1872, British statesman and linguist An extraordinarily versatile linguist, he is remembered for his anthologies and translations of poetry from many European and Oriental languages He was the editor of the works of Jeremy Bentham, whose friend he became in 1821 and whose principles he upheld as the first editor (1824) of the radical Westminster Review and as a member of Parliament (1835–37, 1841–49) He went on various missions in foreign countries for the government, was consul at Canton, and in 1854 was knighted and sent as governor to Hong Kong There he precipitated a war with China by ordering the bombardment of Canton in a dispute over the right of the Chinese to remove a Chinese pirate from a Chinese ship when that ship was registered by the British His Kingdom and People of Siam (1857) grew from his diplomatic mission in Siam See his Autobiographical Recollections (with a memoir by his son Lewin Bowring, 1877), G L Nesbitt, Benthamite Reviewing (1934)

Bow ware (bō), English porcelain, similar to CHELSEA ware It was made at Stratford le Bow from 1730 to 1776, when its factory was absorbed by the DERBY WARE pottery

bowwood see OSAGE ORANGE

box, any of numerous species of the genus Buxus, evergreen trees or shrubs native to the Old World and to Central America but widely planted and especially prized for clipped hedges Boxwood is close-grained, very strong, heavy, and hard It takes a high polish and is valued as a medium for wood engraving, carving, and turning and for making musical and mathematical instruments Commercial boxwood is supplied chiefly by England The common box (Buxus sempervirens) has several cultivated varieties It is slow-growing and has poisonous leaves

box elder, short-lived North American maple (Acer negundo) with compound leaves which are easily mistaken for poison ivy It is also known as ash-leaved maple Because of its rapid growth it is often planted as a shade tree The light soft wood is considered inferior but is used for woodenware, paper pulp, furniture, and interior trim Both Indians and white men have used the sap like maple syrup

boxer, dog, short-haired, sleek, muscular, and rather stocky, descended from a number of breeds of bulldogs Although similar dogs have been known in many parts of Europe from the 16th cent , the boxer as it is now known was developed chiefly in Germany from about the middle of the 19th cent It was little known in the United States until after 1935 In color the dog is usually some shade of fawn or brindle, less often it is white marked with black, fawn, or brindle Small erect ears, a slightly domed skull, and a protruding lower jaw are characteristic Alert, courageous, intelligent, and teachable, the boxer is valued as a guardian and companion It has proved an excellent seeing-eye dog See M G Denlinger, The Complete Boxer (1948)

Boxer Rebellion. In the second half of the 19th cent the Western powers and Japan established wide interests in China, nearly subjugating the country Emperor KWANG HSÜ attempted to meet the threat of Westernization by adopting modern ways himself and thus strengthening China, but his attempt was frustrated (1898) by the dowager empress, TZ'U HSI She favored resistance to the foreigners and tacitly encouraged an antiforeign military organization called I Ho Ch'üan [Chinese, =righteous, harmonious fists] or, in English, the Boxers About 1899 the Boxers began violent attacks on foreigners and Christians and in June and July, 1900, occupied Peking (now Peiping) and besieged the foreigners and the Chinese Christians there The siege was lifted in August by a composite force of British, French, Russian, American, German, and Japanese troops The Boxer Rebellion thus ended The Western powers and Japan agreed—because the hostilities occurred only in NE China and were not official but had been opposed by many local Chinese officials—that China should not be charged with waging war Nevertheless China was compelled (1901) to pay an indemnity of $333,000,000, to amend commercial treaties to the advantage of the foreign nations, and to permit the stationing of foreign troops in Peiping The United States later (1908) used some of its share of the indemnity for scholarships for Chinese students See G. N Steiger, China and the Occident (1927), P H Clements, An Outline of the Politics and Diplomacy of China and the Powers, 1894–1908 (1915)

Box Hill see DORKING, Surrey, England

boxing, the art of fighting with the fists, also called pugilism It is an ancient sport, mentioned by Homer and included in the original Olympic games Pugilism was popular with the Romans, who bound the fist with a knotted, and often metal-weighted, leather cestus The sport died out after the fall of Rome Royal patronage, in the form of betting on or offering prizes to the contestant, plus the ring prowess of James Figg and the first set of rules drawn up by Jack Broughton, helped revive the sport in 18th-century England, whence it spread to America Until the end of the 19th cent , bare fists were used In 1865, however, the marquess of Queensberry (see QUEENSBERRY, JOHN SHOLTO DOUGLAS, 8TH MARQUESS OF) introduced his celebrated code of boxing rules, which were more and more adopted after 1875 and became standard by 1889 This code called for boxing gloves, a limited number of three-minute rounds, the forbidding of gouging and wrestling, a count of 10 seconds before a floored man is called the loser, and various other features of modern boxing Professional boxing in the United States is governed largely by the rulings of the National Boxing Association and the New York State Athletic Commission Though boxing is conducted in Massachusetts and Maryland, those states, like New York, are not members of N B A Amateur boxing has become quite popular in recent years chiefly because of the Amateur Athletic Union and Golden Gloves tournaments Boxers today fight in a ring, or roped-off area, which is about 20 ft square Pugilists are divided into classes according to weight —flyweight (112 lb), bantamweight (118 lb), featherweight (126 lb), lightweight (135 lb), welterweight (147 lb), middleweight (160 lb), light heavyweight (175 lb), and heavyweight (over 175 lb) John L Sullivan was the bare-knuckles champion from 1882 to 1892 After the Queensberry rules were generally accepted, the recognized world's heavyweight champions were James J Corbett (1892–97), Robert Fitzsimmons (1897–99), James J Jeffries (1899–1910), Jack Johnson (1910–15), Jess Willard (1915–19), William H (Jack) Dempsey (1919–26), Gene Tunney (1926–28), Max Schmeling (1930–32), Jack Sharkey (1932–33), Primo Carnera (1933–34), Max Baer (1934–35), James J Braddock (1935–37), and Joe Louis (Joseph Louis Barrow, 1937 49) Other famous boxers include Henry Armstrong, Georges Carpentier, Benny Leonard, Battling Nelson, and Ray Robinson See Alexander Johnston, Ten and Out (1937), N S Fleischer, Heavyweight Championship (1949)

Boyacá (bōyäkä'), locality, N central Colombia, near Tunja Here on Aug 7, 1819, revolutionary forces under Simón Bolívar won the decisive engagement that assured the independence of present Colombia and Venezuela from Spain

Boyce, William, 1710–79, English composer In 1737 he was appointed conductor of the Three Choirs Festivals While earlier conductors had conducted from an instrument, usually the harpsichord, he inaugurated the modern practice of conducting without any instrument He became an organist of the Chapel Royal in 1758 His compilation Cathedral Music (3 vols , 1760–78) is his most important work

Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research, established in 1924 at Yonkers, N Y , through gifts of Col William Boyce Thompson There the institute has a large plot of ground on the hills near the Hudson river In the extensive laboratories and greenhouses, its staff of botanists, chemists, entomologists, and workers in other fields of plant science carry on experiments on various phases of plant life The institute has a fine library An arboretum of approximately 300 acres is maintained in Westchester co , and another with an area of c 1,000 acres at Superior, Ariz William CROCKER has been director of the institute since its founding boycott, concerted economic or social ostracism of an offender (individual, group, nation) to express disapproval or effect coercion The practice was named in 1880 after Capt Charles Cunningham Boycott, an English land agent in Ireland whose ruthlessness in evicting tenants led his employees to refuse all cooperation with him and his family.

In the United States the boycott is used chiefly in labor disputes, a typical example is the refusal of aggrieved employees to purchase goods or services of their employer and their effort to induce others to withdraw patronage (secondary boycott). Consumers' and businessmen's groups also resort to the method The boycott has been used as a weapon in political and racial issues Outstanding examples are the refusal of American colonials to buy British goods after the passage of the Stamp Act (1765), the Chinese boycott of U S goods (1905) because of the poor treatment of Chinese in America, and the passive resistance of Gandhi's followers against the British in India International boycotts ("economic sanctions") against aggressor nations were urged by the League of Nations before the Second World War The legal status of the boycott differs with various governments See H W. Laidler, Boycotts and the Labor Struggle (1914), Evans Clark, ed , Boycotts and Peace (1932)

Boyd, Belle, 1843–1900, Confederate spy in the Civil War, b Martinsburg, Va (now W Va) Operating (probably unofficially) in Martinsburg and Front Royal, she provided Gen T J. (Stonewall) Jackson with valuable information on Union activities in the Shenandoah Valley in 1862 In 1864, after being twice imprisoned and released, she went to England, supposedly with secret dispatches from Jefferson Davis to Confederate agents there Although she was not particularly pretty, Belle had a figure and personality which attracted many men The first of her three husbands, a Union officer who had been her captor, followed her to England to marry her After his death she took to the English stage (1866) and on her subsequent return to the United States toured widely, especially in the Middle West, giving dramatic talks about herself and sundry episodes of the Civil War She wrote Belle Boyd in Camp and Prison (1865) See L A. Sigaud, Belle Boyd, Confederate Spy (1945)

Boyd, Ernest, 1887–1946, American critic and author, b Dublin, Ireland In the British consular service from 1913, he resigned in 1920 and settled in New York, where he soon established his reputation He contributed editorials to the New York Evening Post and wrote for its Literary Review and for the American Mercury and the Bookman criticism on European literary tendencies, particularly those of Ireland and France His works include Contemporary Drama of Ireland (1917), Portraits, Real and Imaginary (1924), H L Mencken (1925), Guy de Maupassant (1926), and Literary Blasphemies (1927) He was editor and translator of the complete works of Maupassant and translator of many modern French and German authors

Boyd, James, 1888–1944, American author, b Dauphin co , Pa , grad Princeton, 1910, and Trinity College, Cambridge, 1912 He saw active service as an officer in the First World War and thereafter lived on his estate at Southern Pines, N C His fine historical novels are Drums (1925), with a Revolutionary War background, Marching On (1927), about the Civil War, Long Hunt (1930), Roll River (1935), and Bitter Creek (1939) During the Second World War, Boyd organized the Free Company, American authors whose gratuitously written plays were broadcast to counteract enemy propaganda Eighteen Poems was published posthumously in 1944

Boyd, Louise Arner, 1887–, American arctic explorer, b San Rafael, Calif She led a series of explorations for scientific study of the east coast of Greenland The expedition of 1933, sponsored by the American Geographical Society, was described in her Fiord Region of East Greenland (1935), on those of 1937 and 1938 a submarine ridge between Bear Island and Jan Mayen was made known, that of 1941 was undertaken for the National Bureau of Standards In the Second World War she was (1942–43) a technical expert in the War Dept She also wrote The Coast of Northeast Greenland (1948)

Boydell, John (boi'dĕl), 1719–1804, English engraver and print publisher, originator and builder of the Boydell Shakespeare Gallery He studied engraving in London and early began to amass his fortune with the publication of his engravings of views of England and Wales It is as the publisher of works by other engravers, however, that he is better known His activities reached their zenith in 1786, when he began the publication, by subscription, of prints illustrating Shakspere's works The leading English artists were commissioned and a gallery was built by Boydell to house the 170 works, which included three pieces of sculpture He was elected lord mayor of London in 1790 He died shortly before his property was sold by lottery

Boyden, Seth, 1788–1870, American inventor, b Foxboro, Mass The son of a forge and machine-shop proprietor, he early acquired a local reputation for his mechanical skill He improved his father's invention of a leather-splitting machine and made it commercially valuable He duplicated the European production of a lacquered leather and set up the first patent-leather factory in America in 1819 After six years of experiment he also solved the European secret of malleable cast iron and was granted his patent in 1831 Concentrating in later years on the building of locomotives and steam engines, he invented the first automatic "cut-off" governor A long list of minor inventions and processes is placed to his credit He developed the famous Hilton strawberry. Most of his work was done in Newark, N J

Boyer, Jean Pierre (zhäⁿ' pyĕr' bwäyä'), 1776–1850, president of Haiti (1818–43) A free mulatto, he fought under TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE and then joined the abortive insurrection of André RIGAUD After two years in exile, he returned with Leclerc's French army in 1802 but subsequently joined the patriots under Alexandre PÉTION who chose him as his successor The death of Henri CHRISTOPHE (1820) and the weakness of Spanish Santo Domingo to the east enabled Boyer to win the whole island by 1822 Compulsory labor was instituted In 1825 a French fleet forced Boyer to pay an indemnity of 150,000,000 francs in return for French losses, France then recognized Haitian independence Haiti's international financial embarrassment thus began, combined with the labor policy, it brought Boyer's overthrow and permanent exile

Boyertown (boi'urtoun), industrial borough (pop 3,983), SE Pa , E of Reading, inc 1866 It manufactures leather, metal products, textiles, and coffins

Boyesen, Hjalmar Hjorth (hyäl'mär hyôrt' boi'ĕsĕn), 1848–95, American writer, b Norway, educated at the universities of Leipzig and Christiania (Ph D , 1868) He came to America in 1869 and shortly became editor of Fremad, a Norwegian weekly published in Chicago In 1874 he became a teacher of German at Cornell, and in 1880 he went to Columbia, eventually gaining the chair of Germanic languages and literature His work includes Goethe and Schiller (1879) and Essays on Scandinavian Literature (1895), critical studies, Idyls of Norway (1882), poems, four excellent books for boys on Norwegian life, Gunnar (1874), a romance of Norwegian life, the more realistic Falconberg (1879) and The Mammon of Unrighteousness (1891), and Vagabond Tales (1899), short stories Ilka on the Hill-Top (1881), dramatized in 1884, had a long run in New York

Boyle, Charles, 4th earl of Orrery see ORRERY, CHARLES BOYLE, 4TH EARL OF

Boyle, Richard, 1st earl of Cork, 1566–1643, Irish statesman, b England He went to Ireland in early manhood and in 1604 for a small sum acquired Sir Walter Ralegh's large landholdings around Cork, Waterford, and Tipperary His energy and success in improving the lands, building mills, establishing ironworks and manufactures, founding towns, and creating trade were remarkable and won attention in England as well as in Ireland He was appointed (1629) one of the lord justices of Ireland and in 1631 became lord high treasurer of the kingdom In this position he came into conflict with Thomas Wentworth (later 1st earl of STRAFFORD), who was appointed lord deputy of Ireland in 1633 In their long struggle Strafford at first was successful in depriving Boyle of a large part of his privileges and income, but Boyle's patient marshaling of the forces of opposition to Strafford's Irish program was an important factor in the latter's downfall The sudden Irish rebellion of 1641 found Boyle prepared, and he managed to keep Munster loyal Two of his seven sons became well known, Roger Boyle, 1st earl of ORRERY, and Robert Boyle, the scientist See Dorothea Townshend, The Life and Letters of the Great Earl of Cork (1904)

Boyle, Robert, 1627–91, British natural philosopher and chemist, b Ireland, son of the 1st earl of Cork He was the first to distinguish between a chemical element and a compound, and he defined clearly the nature of a chemical reaction and of chemical analysis He is especially noted for what is known as Boyle's law, which states that as the pressure on a confined gas is increased the volume of the gas decreases in proportion (the temperature being constant) See study by L T More (1944)

Boyle, Roger, Baron Broghill and 1st earl of Orrery see ORRERY, ROGER BOYLE, 1ST EARL OF

Boylston, Zabdiel, 1679–1766, American physician, b Brookline, Mass He was privately educated in medicine and settled in Boston In an epidemic of smallpox in 1721 he was persuaded by Cotton MATHER to inoculate, thus introducing the practice into this country Beginning with his son and two slaves, he inoculated over 240 persons, of whom but six died Public sentiment, however, was against Boylston and Mather, their lives were endangered, and an attempt was made to bomb Mather's house Boylston visited England, and his Historical Account of the Small-Pox Inoculated in New England was published there in 1726

Boylston, town (pop 1,388), central Mass , near Wachusett Reservoir, settled 1705, set off from Shrewsbury 1786

Boyne, river of Ireland It rises in Co. Kildare in the Bog of Allen and flows 70 mi NE through Co Meath, passing Trim and Drogheda, to the Irish Sea 4 mi E of Drogheda In the battle of the Boyne, July 1, 1690, near Drogheda, the armies of William III defeated James II, who fled to France This victory is celebrated annually by Orangemen as having secured Protestantism as the state religion of Great Britain.

Boyne City, resort city (pop 2,904), N Mich , on Lake Charlevoix and S of Petoskey, inc as a village 1885, as a city 1907 It has a tannery

Boynton Beach, city (pop 1,326), SE Fla , on the Atlantic S of Palm Beach, inc 1920 It is a farm trade center and a bathing and fishing resort

Boyron, Michel see BARON, MICHEL

Boys' Clubs of America, federation of more than 300 clubs organized in 1906 in Boston as the Federated Boys' Clubs Its purpose is to provide leisure-time activities

Boy Scouts, organization of boys over 12 years old, founded in 1908 by Sir Robert BADEN-POWELL It was incorporated in 1910 in the United States, where its appearance was connected with earlier organizations—Beard's Sons of Daniel Boone (see BEARD, DANIEL CARTER) and Seton's Woodcraft Indians (see SETON, ERNEST THOMPSON) In the United States, James E West was chief scout from 1911 to 1943 From these beginnings the movement has spread throughout most of the world, with an organization and a program basically the same in every country It is nonmilitary and is without racial, religious, political, or class distinctions The unit is the troop, which is subdivided into patrols and is headed by a scoutmaster Scouts are divided into classes—tenderfoot and second- and first-class scouts The program of activities aims at a threefold development, mental, moral, and physical, it stresses outdoor knowledge and skills and embraces training in citizenship, nature lore, wood and camp craft, manual arts, lifesaving, and sports Boy Scouts have performed useful service in many civic projects, sharing in nation-wide safety-first and city-improvement campaigns, acting as assistant traffic patrols, and aiding in the prevention of forest fires During the Second World War, they salvaged waste, distributed government posters, distributed ration books, and performed other services An international gathering, called a jamboree, has been held several times since the first one at London in 1920

Boys Town, village (pop 254), E Nebr , near Omaha, inc 1936 The noted community was founded in 1917 by Mgr Edward J Flanagan (1886–1948) for homeless and abandoned boys

Bozeman, John M (bōz'mun), 1835–67, American pioneer A Georgian, he went to the Colorado gold fields in 1861 and to those in Montana in 1862 In the winter of 1862–63 he traveled with a companion from Bannack, Mont , to Colorado by a route lying E of the Bighorn Mts through lands reserved by treaty to the Indians Since the only other approaches to Montana from the east were the long, circuitous Missouri river or a trail leading N from the Overland Trail in Idaho (this route necessitated a double crossing of the Continental Divide), he was enthusiastic about his short cut, which became known as the Bozeman Trail Several parties, including one guided by Bozeman himself, used the trail in 1864, and in 1865–66 the Federal government built Forts Reno, Phil Kearney, and C F Smith to guard it However, after the FETTERMAN MASSACRE (Dec , 1866), the trail S and E of Fort C F Smith was abandoned In April, 1867, Bozeman was killed by Piegan Indians Bozeman Pass, where the trail crossed the Belt Mts , and Bozeman, Mont , were also named for him See G R Hebard and E A Brininstool, The Bozeman Trail (1922)

Bozeman, city (pop 8,665), co seat of Gallatin co , SW Mont , SE of Butte, inc 1883 Founded (1864) by John M Bozeman in the Gallatin valley, it is the center of a farming and stock-raising area Tourists stop here on the way to Yellowstone Park Montana State College (see MONTANA, UNIVERSITY OF) is in Bozeman

Bozeman Trail see BOZEMAN, JOHN M

Bozen, Tyrol see BOLZANO

Bozez (bō'zĕz) and Seneh (sē'nĕ) [Heb , =thorn], two cliffs, at the entrance to the ravine of Michmash (now the Wadi Suweinet) 1 Sam 14 4,5

Bozkath [Heb , =stony], place, SW Palestine Joshua 15 39 Boscath 2 Kings 22 1

Bozrah (bŏz'ru) 1 Important city of Edom, of unknown location The prophets often linked the name Bozrah with that of Edom Gen 36 33, 1 Chron 1 44, Isa 34 6, Jer 49 13,22; Amos 1 12, Micah 2 12 2 City of Moab, of unknown location Jer 48 24 The name Bozrah should not be confused with Bosra (Bostra)

Bozzaris, Marco or Markos (bōzä'rĭs, -zä'lĭs, Gr bôt'särēs), c 1788–1823, Greek patriot, b Epirus He joined ALI PASHA in 1820 and later was prominent in the Greek War of Independence, notably in the defense of Missolonghi (1822–23) and at Karpenisi, where he defeated the Turks with a handful of men but died in battle He is the subject of a poem by Fitz-Greene Halleck

Br, chemical symbol of the element BROMINE

Brabant (brŭbănt', Flemish brăbant', Fr brăbäⁿ'), province (1,268 sq mi , pop 1,784,547), central Belgium. Brussels is the capital Watered by the Dyle, Senne, and Demer rivers, it has a very fertile soil. Except in Brussels, the population is overwhelmingly Flemish-speaking The province occupies the southern part of the old duchy of Brabant.

Brabant, duchy of (brubănt'), former duchy, now divided between Belgium (Brabant prov. and Antwerp prov.) and the Netherlands (see NORTH BRABANT). It emerged (12th cent.) from the duchy of Lower Lorraine. Louvain, Brussels, and Antwerp were its chief cities. Malines, though geographically in Brabant, was part of Flanders. Brabant passed (1430) to Philip the Good of Burgundy. (For the history of Brabant from the death in 1477 of Philip's son, Charles the Bold, to 1795, see NETHERLANDS, AUSTRIAN AND SPANISH.) Like the rest of the S Low Countries, Brabant owed its extraordinary prosperity during the Middle Ages to its wool and other textile industries and to the commercial enterprise of its cities. The dukes, reduced to reliance on the generosity of the towns in order to finance their wars and their luxurious life, granted the towns virtual self-government and an ever-increasing share in the government of the duchy. This trend culminated in the grant (1356) of the charter known as the Joyeuse Entrée, so called because all subsequent dukes had to swear to it when they made their entry into Louvain after their accession. According to the charter, the dukes could not declare war, conclude an alliance, or coin money without the consent of the delegates of the clergy, nobles, and towns, who formed an assembly later known as the Estates of Brabant. This constitution remained essentially in effect until it was abolished (1789) by Emperor Joseph II.

Brač (brăch), Serbo-Croatian Brač (brach), Ital. Brazza (brät'tsä), Adriatic island (152 sq. mi.), Croatia, Yugoslavia, in Dalmatia. The small port of Supetar (Ital. San Pietro) is the chief town.

Bracara Augusta see BRAGA, Portugal.

Brace, Charles Loring, 1826–90, American social reformer, b. Litchfield, Conn., grad. Yale, 1846. He founded (1853) the Children's Aid Society of New York, a pioneer organization which established modern methods in child-welfare practice. Among his books are Short Sermons to Newsboys (1866) and Gesta Christi (1882). See biography by Emma Brace (1894).

brace and bit see DRILL.

Bracebridge, town (pop. 2,341), S Ont., N of Lake Simcoe. It is the center of Muskoka dist.

Bracegirdle, Anne, 1663?–1748, English actress. The favorite of Congreve and the delight of Colley Cibber, she had success in such parts as Portia and Cordelia, but gained fame when she was the first to play the roles of Belinda in Vanbrugh's Provok'd Wife and Angelica in Congreve's Love for Love. Eclipsed by Mrs. Oldfield, she retired in 1707 but in 1710 reappeared at the benefit for Thomas Betterton, under whom she had played in 1695. See Colley Cibber's Apology.

Bracken, John, 1883–, Canadian educator and political leader, b. Ellisville, Ont., grad. Ontario Agricultural College, 1906. He was professor of field husbandry in the Univ. of Saskatchewan (1910–20) and president of Manitoba Agricultural College (1920–22). Elected (1922) to the Manitoba legislature, he was premier of Manitoba for 20 years (1922–42). In 1942 he was chosen to lead the Conservative party in the dominion, which he renamed Progressive Conservative. Elected in 1945 to the Canadian House of Commons, he served as leader of the opposition until 1948, when he resigned. He is the author of several agricultural textbooks.

bracken see BRAKE.

Brackenridge, Henry Marie, 1786–1871, American writer, b. Pittsburgh, Pa., son of Hugh Henry Brackenridge. Admitted to the Pennsylvania bar in 1806, he moved to St. Louis and was there a lawyer and a journalist. His Views of Louisiana (1814) included his Journal of a Voyage up the Missouri River (also published separately in 1816), which recounted a journey with the fur trader Manuel Lisa and was one of the sources of Washington Irving's Astoria. Brackenridge became a well-known jurist and also is notable for his suggestion in a pamphlet South America (1817) of a policy foreshadowing the Monroe Doctrine. He was sent to South America to study political conditions and wrote an account in his Voyage to South America (1819). His Recollections of Persons and Places in the West (1834) is a valuable historical source.

Brackenridge, Hugh Henry, 1748–1816, American jurist and author, b. Scotland, grad. Princeton. He studied theology and law and served in the Revolution as chaplain. He wrote two patriotic plays and some verse. In 1781 he moved to Pittsburgh, where he founded (1786) the city's first newspaper, the Pittsburgh Gazette, and helped to establish the Pittsburgh Academy (now the Univ. of Pittsburgh). A leading Pennsylvania supporter of the Federal Constitution, Brackenridge later acted as peacemaker in the WHISKY REBELLION (1794). He was also a justice of the Pennsylvania supreme court from 1799 to his death, but he is best known as an author. His satirical and picaresque novel, Modern Chivalry (1792–97, with additions, 1813), pictures backwoods life and expresses the moderate democratic views of Brackenridge. Its lusty writing is much admired. He also wrote an account of the Whisky Rebellion and political tracts. See C. M. Newlin, Life and Writings of Hugh Henry Brackenridge (1932).

Brackenridge, industrial borough (pop. 6,400), SW Pa., on the Allegheny river and NE of Pittsburgh, inc. 1901. Its industries include coal mining and the manufacture of coke, stainless steel, and glass.

brackets see PUNCTUATION.

Brackettville, town (pop. 2,653), co. seat of Kinney co., W Texas, ESE of Del Rio, inc. 1928. Here are Fort Clark, an army post founded in 1852 and deactivated in 1946, and Las Moras Springs, which feed Las Moras Creek, a small tributary of the Rio Grande. Ranches produce cattle, sheep, and goats.

Brackley, Thomas Egerton, Viscount. see ELLESMERE, THOMAS EGERTON, BARON.

Bracquemond, Félix (fālĕks' brăkmôN'), 1833–1914, French engraver, painter, and decorator of ceramics. He is best known for his many etchings, both original and reproductions of famous paintings. He was particularly successful in his portraits and in the depiction of birds and animals. Bracquemond's new method of decorating porcelain won a merited success. He worked for the Sèvres and Limoges factories and maintained a ceramics studio in Paris.

Bracton, Henry de, d. 1268, English writer on law. He was the author of De legibus et consuetudinibus Angliae [on the laws and customs of England], a broad, philosophic treatise that is often called the most important work on English law before Sir William Blackstone. Sir Edward COKE and others used the work in their legal arguments against the king in the Puritan Revolution. See edition of De legibus by G. E. Woodbine (4 vols., 1915–42) and edition of Bracton's notebook by F. W. Maitland (3 vols., 1887).

Bradbury, William Batchelder, 1816–68, American organist and composer, b. York, Maine, pupil of Lowell Mason. He organized the Juvenile Music Festivals in New York, where he was organist of the Baptist Tabernacle from 1840 until 1847, when he went to Europe for further study. He started music conventions in New Jersey. In 1854 he began the manufacture of pianos with his brother. He compiled many popular collections of Sunday-school songs, and his own tunes, such as those for He Leadeth Me, for Just as I Am, without One Plea, and for Savior, like a Shepherd Lead Us, are still widely used.

Braddock, Edward, 1695–1755, British general in the French and Indian Wars. Although he served 42 years (1710–53) with the Coldstream Guards (which had also been his father's regiment), he had not done much active campaigning before 1754. However, he was reputed to have a good knowledge of European military tactics and was noted as a stern disciplinarian. Braddock was promoted major general in 1754 and in Feb., 1755, arrived in Virginia as commander in chief of the king's forces in North America. His immediate objective was the French stronghold at the forks of the Ohio (see DUQUESNE, FORT). With some 700 colonial militiamen, whom he regarded rather disdainfully, and over 1,400 British regulars, he moved across the Alleghenies from Fort Cumberland (now Cumberland, Md.), building a road (the foundation of the National Road) as he went. Braddock unwisely used heavy transport instead of pack animals, and the march was so slow that he feared the French would reinforce Duquesne before he could reach there. At Little Meadows, some 30 mi. along on the expedition to cover c. 110 mi., mostly through rough country, he adopted the suggestion of one of his aides-de-camp, George Washington, and, leaving the wagons behind with one of the two British regiments, he pushed ahead with an advance force amounting to about two thirds of his total complement. While crossing the Monongahela, Braddock was met (July 9, 1755) by a force of not more than 900 men—a few French and Canadians and many Indians—under Daniel BEAUJEU, who had been apprised of the advance. The British regulars, as unfamiliar with Indian-style fighting as their commander (although both had been given fair warning by the colonials), bolted from their column formation under the steady enfilading fire from a ubiquitous enemy safely concealed in ravines and behind trees. The affair turned into a bloody rout. Since the Indians paused to collect scalps and other trophies of war, the demoralized troops were able to rejoin the rear guard and both retreated safely to Fort Cumberland. Of the 1,459 actively engaged, 977 were killed or wounded, including 63 of the 89 officers, who—unlike the soldiers—fought bravely. Braddock himself had four horses shot from under him before he was mortally wounded (the story that he was intentionally shot by a colonial has been characterized as absurd). He died four days later at Great Meadows and was buried there, near the site of Uniontown, Pa. Washington, who acquitted himself well, had the satisfaction later of serving under John FORBES when that general took an abandoned Fort Duquesne. See D. S. Freeman, George Washington, Vol. II (1948).

Braddock, industrial borough (pop. 18,326), W Pa., on the Monongahela and SE of Pittsburgh; settled 1742, inc. 1867. Its industries produce machinery and steel (Carnegie Steel Company). In 1755 Gen. Edward BRADDOCK was defeated on the site by the French and Indians, and on Aug. 1, 1794, thousands of men in W Pennsylvania gathered on Braddock's Field in protest against the Federal tax on whisky.

Bradenton (brā'dŭntŭn), city (pop. 7,444), co. seat of Manatee co., SW Fla., on Tampa Bay at the mouths of the Braden and Manatee rivers, founded 1878, inc. 1903. It is a popular Gulf winter resort and a shipping point for truck and fruit. Near by are the ruins of Braden Castle (1850). At Ellenton, 4 mi. northeast, is the Gamble Mansion (now a state monument), which was the post-war refuge of Judah P. Benjamin, Secretary of State of the Confederacy.

Bradford, Andrew, 1686–1742, colonial printer of Pennsylvania, b. Philadelphia, son of William Bradford (1663–1752). Andrew learned the trade in his father's shop in New York, but in 1712 went to Philadelphia, where he established his own press and also became a bookseller. In 1719 he began publication of the American Weekly Mercury, the first newspaper in Pennsylvania and the third in the colonies. He was imprisoned at one time for publishing criticism of the council and assembly, but defended his own case for freedom of the press with credit. In 1741 he began publication of the short-lived American Magazine.

Bradford, Augustus Williamson, 1806–81, Civil War governor of Maryland (1862–66), b. Bel Air, Md., grad. St. Mary's College, 1824. His election in 1861 owed much to the presence of Federal troops at the polls, as did the approval of the new constitution of 1864, which abolished slavery. See W. B. Hesseltine, Lincoln and the War Governors (1948).

Bradford, Edward Hickling, 1848–1926, American orthopedic surgeon, b. Boston, M.D. Harvard, 1872. He was the first professor of orthopedic surgery at Harvard (1903–12), a founder of the Boston Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children (1893), and a leader in the establishment of the state hospital school at Canton (1905). With R. W. Lovett he wrote Treatise on Orthopedic Surgery (1890).

Bradford, Gamaliel, 1863–1932, American biographer, b. Boston. Handicapped by lifelong ill-health, he wrote unsuccessful poems, novels, and plays, not until his Lee the American (1912) did he perfect his original method of writing "psychographs," or short "portraits" of historical figures. A series of such works followed, including Confederate Portraits (1914), Union Portraits (1916), Damaged Souls (1923), Wives (1925), Darwin (1926), and Portraits and Personalities (ed. by M. A. Bessey, 1933). The autobiographical Life and I (1928) and his journal (1933) and letters (1934), both edited by Van Wyck Brooks, reveal his life and the development of his methods.

Bradford, John, 1510?–1555, English Protestant martyr, burned at Smithfield as a heretic in 1555. A complete collection of his writings, edited by Aubrey Townsend, was published in 1848–53.

Bradford, John, 1749–1830, pioneer printer of Kentucky, b. Virginia. He went to Kentucky c. 1779. Though without previous practical experience, he issued at Lexington on Aug. 11, 1787, the first number of the Kentucky Gazette, the first newspaper in the territory, and succeeded, despite many handicaps, in making it a creditable sheet. In 1788 he printed the Kentucke Almanac, the first pamphlet in the West, and, in 1792, the acts of the first session of the Kentucky legislature, the first book to be published in Kentucky. He aided in founding Transylvania Univ. and was (1799–1811) first chairman of the board. In 1826 he began to publish in the Gazette his "Notes of Kentucky," a valuable historical source, which continued until 1829.

Bradford, Roark, 1896–1948, American novelist, b. Lauderdale co., Tenn. He took up newspaper work in Atlanta and New Orleans and with an early short story won the O. Henry Memorial Award in 1927. A collection of Bible stories as told by Negroes, Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun (1928), was the basis of Marc Connelly's Pulitzer Prize-winning play The Green Pastures (1930). Other stories of Negroes and Negro life by Bradford include This Side of Jordan (1929), Ol' King David and the Philistine Boys (1930), How Come Christmas (1930), John Henry (1931, dramatized with music by Jacques Wolfe, 1939), and Kingdom Coming (1933).

Bradford, William, 1590–1657, governor of Plymouth Colony, b. Austerfield, Yorkshire, England. He early joined the separatist congregation at Scrooby and in 1609 emigrated with others to Holland, where, at Leiden, he acquired a wide acquaintance with theological literature. Bradford came to New England on the Mayflower in 1620 and in 1621, on the death of John CARVER, was chosen leader of the Pilgrims. He remained governor for most of his life, being reelected 30 times, in the five years he was able to beg off, he was chosen assistant. Bradford, though firm, used his large powers with discretion, and there were few complaints about his leadership. He maintained friendly relations with the Indians and struggled hard to establish fishing, trade, and agriculture. He stressed the obligations of the colonists to their London backers and was one of the eight colonial "undertakers" who in 1627 assumed Plymouth Colony's debt to the merchants adventurers. Given a monopoly of fishing and trading privileges, they finally discharged the debt in 1648 More tolerant (though he was no Roger Williams) of other religious beliefs than were the Puritan leaders of Boston, he was largely responsible for keeping Plymouth independent of the Massachusetts Bay colony His famous History of Plymmoth Plantation, not published in full until 1856, forms the basis for all accounts of the Plymouth Colony It reveals on every page the high character and sincerity of its author The editions of W T Davis (1908) and W C Ford (1912) are the best See also G F Willison, Saints and Strangers (1945)

Bradford, William, 1663–1752, British pioneer printer in the American colonies Born in Leicestershire, he served an apprenticeship under a London printer before emigrating (1685) to Philadelphia, where he set up the first press He added a bookstore in 1688 and was in 1690 one of the founders of the first paper mill in the colonies After a quarrel with the authorities that led to his arrest, he seems to have moved to New York city in 1693 There he was royal printer and issued some 400 items in the next 50 years In 1725 he began publication of the New York Gazette, the first New York newspaper

Bradford, William, 1722–91, American Revolutionary printer and patriot, grandson of William Bradford (1633–1752) He learned printing under his uncle, Andrew Bradford, in Philadelphia, and in 1742 he set up his own shop He established the successful Weekly Advertiser, which long competed with Benjamin Franklin's newspaper, the Pennsylvania Gazette He also printed a number of books and published (1757–58) the American Magazine and Monthly Chronicle In 1754 he established the London Coffee House in Philadelphia, this became the seat of the merchants' exchange Bradford opposed the Stamp Act and took an active part in opposition to British measures, becoming a leader of the Sons of Liberty He early advocated a continental congress and became official printer to the First Continental Congress Sacrificing his business, he became a major in the Continental army and took part in the campaign in New Jersey At Princeton he was so badly wounded that his health was shattered His son, Thomas Bradford (1745–1838), carried on the business and published the Merchants' Daily Advertiser See J W Wallace, An Old Philadelphian (1884)

Bradford, William, 1823–92, American marine painter, b Fairhaven, Mass He twice accompanied arctic exploring expeditions and is best known for his coast scenes and paintings of the frozen North Tracking a Whaler in Baffin's Bay (New Bedford Public Library) is a characteristic work

Bradford, village (pop 1,033), S Ont, on the Holland river and NNW of Toronto

Bradford, county borough (1931 pop 298,041, 1947 estimated pop 289,280) and city, West Riding of Yorkshire, England, W of Leeds and on a small tributary of the Aire It is a center of the worsted industry, the first mill was built in 1798 Other products are rayon and leather goods, machinery, automobiles, and chemicals There are coal and iron mines and stone quarries near by Noteworthy are the memorial hall, dedicated to Edmund Cartwright, St Peter's Church (1485), now the cathedral of the diocese of Bradford, the town hall (1873), and a technical college and art galleries

Bradford. 1 Village, Iowa see NASHUA 2 Village (pop 1,775), W Ohio, W of Piqua 3 City (pop 17,691), NW Pa, SE of Jamestown, N Y, near the N Y border, settled c 1823, inc as a borough 1873, as a city 1879 The growth of the city was initiated by the discovery of oil (c 1871), which is now its chief industry Its manufactures include steel couplings, furniture, and cutlery Allegheny State Park is near by, and the region is popular for hunting and fishing 4 Town (pop 1,507), E Vt, at the junction of the Waits river with the Connecticut, settled 1765

Bradlaugh, Charles (brăd'lô), 1833–91, English social reformer and advocate of free thought, a secularist He was editor of the weekly National Reformer for nearly a generation and was an early champion of woman suffrage, birth control, trade unionism, and other unpopular causes Mrs Annie BESANT was his coeditor and associate for several years until his opposition to socialism caused a permanent separation He won the right to take a seat in Parliament on affirmation instead of on the Bible oath as was theretofore required He wrote Land for the People (1877), The True Story of My Parliamentary Struggle (1882), and many controversial pamphlets See H Bradlaugh Bonner, Charles Bradlaugh (7th ed, 1908)

Bradley, Francis Herbert, 1846–1924, English philosopher He was educated at Oxford, where he became a fellow of Merton College in 1876 His works include Ethical Studies (1876), Principles of Logic (1883), and Appearance and Reality (1893) Bradley was an absolute idealist, holding that true reality is perfect and changeless His Collected Essays (2 vols) were published in 1935 See R D Mack, The Appeal to Immediate Experience (1945)

Bradley, Harold Cornelius, 1878–, American physiological chemist, b Oakland, Calif, B A Univ of California, 1900; Ph D Yale, 1905. He began to teach physiological chemistry at the Univ of Wisconsin in 1906 and became research director of the marine biological laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass, in 1910

Bradley, Henry, 1845–1923, English lexicographer He became one of the editors of the New English Dictionary (commonly called the Oxford English Dictionary) in 1889 and succeeded Sir James Augustus Henry Murray as chief editor in 1915

Bradley, James, 1693–1762, English astronomer, educated at Oxford His discovery of the aberration of light, announced in 1729, gave him a foremost place among contemporary astronomers His second important discovery, the nutation, or "nodding," of the earth's axis, was not made known until 1748, when it had stood the test of careful observations over a period of nearly 19 years In 1742 Bradley became astronomer royal Under his direction the observatory at Greenwich was supplied with new instruments

Bradley, Omar Nelson, 1893–, U S general, chief of staff, b Clark, Randolph co, Mo, grad West Point, 1915 He filled army administrative and academic posts before becoming (1943) deputy to Gen George PATTON, from whom he took over (1943) command of the 2d Corps He helped to wrest (1943) North Africa and Sicily from the Axis and led (1944) the U S 1st Army in the invasion of Normandy Given command (1944) of the newly created U S 12th Army Group, Bradley by his skillful and daring plans vastly aided the swift defeat of Germany He served (1945–48) as administrator of veterans' affairs, was appointed (Jan, 1948) chief of staff to replace Gen Dwight D EISENHOWER, and was named (Aug, 1949) first permanent chairman of the joint chiefs of staff

Bradley, village (pop 3,689), E Ill, S of Chicago near Kankakee, in a farm area, organized 1892 as North Kankakee, renamed and inc 1896 Furniture and farm implements are manufactured

Bradley Beach, borough (pop 3,468), E N J, a resort on the Atlantic S of Asbury Park, settled c 1858, inc 1893

Bradley University see PEORIA, Ill

Bradshaw, George, 1801–53, English map engraver and the originator of railway guides Bradshaw's Railway Time-Tables, first published in 1839, became Bradshaw's Monthly Railway Guide (first issued 1841) He afterwards published The Continental Railway Guide and others

Bradshaw, Henry, 1831–86, English librarian and antiquarian at Cambridge Univ He discovered, organized, and made known its treasures of manuscripts and incunabula, especially those in Gaelic—the Book of Deer and old Celtic glossaries—and the early Waldensian records in the Piedmont MSS He was dean of King's College from 1857 to 1865

Bradshaw, John, 1602–59, English regicide judge He was made president of the parliamentary commission to try Charles I only after other lawyers had refused the post His conduct in the trial was arbitrary; he even refused the king the right to speak in his own defense. For a short time he was loaded with privileges and was (1649–53) president of the council of state, but had to retire when Oliver Cromwell dissolved the council. He died before the regicides were prosecuted in the Restoration

Bradstreet, Anne (Dudley), c 1612–1672, early American poet, b Northampton, England She came to Massachusetts in the Winthrop Puritan group in 1630 with her father, Thomas Dudley, and her husband, Simon Bradstreet, both later governors of the state She deserves an honored place in American colonial literature because, in addition to raising a large family, she was the first American woman to devote herself to writing Her Tenth Muse Lately Sprung Up in America (London, 1650) was followed by Several Poems (Boston, 1678), which contains "Contemplations," probably her best work Her writings are often derivative, remarkable chiefly as the products of so new a settlement See her works (ed by J H Ellis, 1932), biography by H S Campbell (1891)

Bradstreet, John, c 1711–1774, British army officer in the French and Indian Wars A Nova Scotian, he was captured (1744) by the French and confined at LOUISBURG After his exchange he described the weaknesses of the fortress, and in 1745 Sir William Pepperell captured the stronghold For his services in the expedition, Bradstreet was promoted captain and made lieutenant governor of St John's, Newfoundland, a post he held permanently He led (1758) the successful expedition against Fort Frontenac, thereby cutting communications between the French forces in Canada and those on the Ohio; served (1759) under Lord Jeffrey AMHERST at Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and, in PONTIAC'S REBELLION, commanded the forces which garrisoned (1764) Detroit and other Western posts

Bradstreet, Simon, 1603–97, colonial governor of Massachusetts (1679–86, 1689–92), b Lincolnshire, England, grad Emmanuel College, Cambridge, 1620. He came to New England in 1630 and was assistant in the Massachusetts Bay Company for 49 years (1630–79) and secretary (1630–36) In 1634 Bradstreet was sent with four others to the Plymouth, New Haven, and Connecticut colonies to negotiate concerning the formation of the New England Confederation and on its organization was one of two Massachusetts representatives for 33 years After the Restoration, John Norton and he went to England and succeeded in persuading Charles II to confirm the colony's charter. His first period as governor was followed by the unsuccessful royal administration of Sir Edmund ANDROS Anne BRADSTREET was his wife

Brady, Cyrus Townsend, 1861–1920, American Episcopal clergyman and author, b Allegheny, Pa, grad Annapolis, 1883 He served as a chaplain during the Spanish-American War In 1898 he began writing and, although he continued his duties as a clergyman, produced some 70 volumes This output, chiefly fiction, included a number of popular biographies, some juvenile stories, a series called American Fights and Fighters, and The Conquest of the Southwest (1905)

Brady, James Buchanan, 1856–1917, American financier and philanthropist, called "Diamond Jim" Brady, b New York city He was a bellboy and messenger and then worked for the New York Central RR in various capacities He later was employed by a railroad-supply company, and his selling ability rapidly brought him a fortune He began collecting diamonds and other jewels and amassed 30 complete sets of jewelry estimated as worth well over $1,000,000 He was famed for his appetite and elaborate meals and was one of the best-known men in New York's Broadway night life In 1912 he gave to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where he received treatment, funds to found the James Buchanan Brady Urological Institute His will provided additional funds to the institute and also to the New York Hospital See biography by Parker Morrell (1934)

Brady, Mathew B., 1823–96, American pioneer photographer, b Warren co, N Y He learned the daguerreotype process from S F B Morse and opened (1844) his own photographic studio in New York city, which soon won him fame He published Gallery of Illustrious Americans (1850) In 1855 he experimented successfully with the wet-plate process The earliest of his many photographs of Lincoln were made in 1860 when Lincoln made his Cooper Union speech in New York When the Civil War opened, Brady secured permits from the authorities to accompany the armies with his photographic equipment Largely through his efforts an elaborate photographic record of the war has been preserved Many of the pictures are of actual battle scenes taken under fire In 1875 the government purchased part of Brady's collection, but the rest passed into private hands after the photographer's financial failure See Roy Meredith, Mr Lincoln's Camera Man (1946)

Brady, Samuel, 1756–95, American frontiersman He fought in several battles of the American Revolution but earned his name as a scout in the Ohio country under Daniel Brodhead and Anthony Wayne His exploits were the subject of much frontier legend

Brady, city (pop 5,002), co seat of McCulloch co, central Texas, on Brady Creek and ESE of San Angelo, settled c 1876, inc 1906 The city handles and processes turkeys, cotton, milk, wool, and mohair from farms and ranches in surrounding hills

Braekeleer, Henri de (brā' dŭ bra'kŭlār"), c 1840–1888, Belgian genre painter and etcher He studied with his father and with Leys His quiet, charming interiors are best seen in the museums of Brussels and Antwerp

Braga, Teófilo (tĕō'fēlō bra'gŭ), 1843–1924, Portuguese intellectual and political leader Born at Ponta Delgada in the Azores, he managed after a poverty-stricken childhood to get to the Univ of Combra in 1861 and there was a member of the positivist circle of Antero de Quental In 1871 he began to teach at the Univ of Lisbon He wrote voluminously on many subjects and in literary criticism tried to apply the principles of Comte to the history of Portuguese literature, his much-revised general work on the subject, however, grew less positivist and more nationalist with each revision and addition A republican and an anticlerical in politics, he served (1910–11) as president of the new republic of Portugal, but the period was one of unease and disappointment His influence—especially through his teaching—had an enormous effect on Portuguese intellectual life He was also notable as a collector of, and commentator on, Portuguese folklore and popular literature

Braga, city (pop 29,875), capital of Braga dist, NW Portugal, in Minho prov The ancient Bracara Augusta, it had considerable importance in Roman days, but was of much more importance in the Middle Ages as the see of the bishop of Braga, who rivaled the bishop of Toledo in power The city is still a religious center. In the old cathedral is the tomb of Henry of Burgundy Near by is a summer resort with the well-known Church of Bom Jesus do Monte Braga has minor industries

Bragança or Braganza (both brŭgăn'zu), town (pop. 6,977), capital of Bragança dist, NE Portugal, in Tras-os-Montes prov It is of interest because of its castle, seat of the Braganza family, long the kings of Portugal.

Braganza (brugăn'zŭ), royal house that ruled over Portugal from 1640 to 1910 and over Brazil from 1822 to 1889 It took its name from the castle of Bragança or Braganza Alfonso, the natural son of John I of Portugal, was founder of the line From him and the daughter of Nun'Alvares Pereira was descended the duke of Braganza who led the movement to throw off Spanish rule and became king as John IV in 1640 His daughter was Catherine of Braganza, queen of Charles II of England When Napoleon conquered Portugal, King John VI fled (1807) to Brazil, and Rio de Janeiro became (1808) the capital of the Portuguese Empire After he had returned to Portugal, Brazil declared (1822) its independence and was ruled as an empire under Pedro I and Pedro II until a revolution made it a republic in 1889 Portugal also became a republic in 1910

Bragg, Braxton, 1817–76, Confederate general, b Warrenton, N C , grad West Point, 1837 He fought the Seminoles and in the Mexican War was promoted lieutenant colonel for distinguished service at Buena Vista Resigning from the army in 1856, Bragg lived on his Louisiana plantation until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he was appointed a Confederate brigadier general and assigned to command the coast from Pensacola to Mobile Shortly after being promoted major general (Jan , 1862), he assumed command of Gen A S Johnston's 2d Corps, leading it in the battle of Shiloh (April) With Johnston's death, Bragg was made a general and, in June, he succeeded Beauregard in command of the Army of Tennessee His invasion of Kentucky (Aug–Oct , 1862) was unsuccessful, ending in retreat to Tennessee after Gen D C BUELL caught up with him at PERRYVILLE A reorganized Union army under Gen W S ROSECRANS was then sent against him and at MURFREESBORO (Dec 31, 1862–Jan 2, 1863) forced him to withdraw again In the CHATTANOOGA CAMPAIGN, Bragg, victorious in the battle of Chickamauga, laid siege to the Union army in Chattanooga, but in Nov 1863, Grant thoroughly defeated him and forced him to retire into Georgia Gen J E JOHNSTON took over his command (Dec) and Bragg went to Richmond, where he became military adviser to Jefferson Davis, with nominal rank as commander in chief of Confederate armies Late in 1864 he unsuccessfully opposed Sherman in North Carolina After the war he was chief engineer of Alabama and later lived in Texas, where he died See biography by Don C Seitz (1924), S F Horn, The Army of Tennessee (1941)

Bragg, Sir William Henry, 1862–1942, English physicist, educated at King William's College, Isle of Man, and Trinity College, Cambridge He served on the faculties of the Univ of Adelaide in Australia (1886–1908), the Univ of Leeds (1909–15), and the Univ of London (1915 23) From 1923 he was Fullerian professor of chemistry in the Royal Institution and director of the Davy-Faraday research laboratory In 1915 he shared with his son W L Bragg the 1915 Nobel Prize in Physics for their studies, using the X-ray spectrometer, of X-ray spectra and of crystal structure He became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1906 and served as president of the society from 1935 to 1940 In 1930 he was knighted Among his works are The World of Sound (1919), Concerning the Nature of Things (1925), Introduction to Crystal Analysis (1929), The Universe of Light (1933), Chemistry and the Body Politic (1935), and The Story of Electromagnetism (1942) With W L Bragg he wrote X Rays and Crystal Structure (1915, 4th ed , 1924)

Bragg, Sir William Lawrence, 1890–, English physicist, b Adelaide, Australia, educated in Australia and at Trinity College, Cambridge, son of W H Bragg He was professor of physics in Victoria Univ , Manchester, from 1919 to 1937 In 1938 he became professor of experimental physics at Cambridge and director of the Cavendish Laboratory He shared with his father the 1915 Nobel Prize in Physics for their studies with the X-ray spectrometer of X-ray spectra and of crystal structure In 1941 he was knighted Among his works are The Structure of Silicates (1930) and The Atomic Structure of Minerals (1937) With his father he wrote X Rays and Crystal Structure (1915, 4th ed , 1924)

Bragg, Fort see FAYETTEVILLE, N C

Bragi (bra'gē), Old Norse god of poetry, son of Odin and husband of Idun He was the scald of Valhalla

Brahe, Tycho (tī'kō bra'), 1546–1601, Danish astronomer, b Knudstrup, Scania (then part of Denmark) He became the most prominent astronomer of the late 16th cent By improving instruments and by his precision in fixing the position of planets and stars, he paved the way for future discoveries From Brahe's exact observations of the planets, KEPLER devised his laws of planetary motions Brahe's achievements included the study of a nova (first observed in 1572) in the constellation Cassiopeia and the discovery of a variation in the inclination of the lunar orbit and of the fourth inequality of the moon's motion He never fully accepted the Copernican system but made a compromise between it and the Ptolemaic system In the Tychonic system the earth was the immobile body around which the sun revolved and the five planets then known revolved around the sun. Brahe built on the island of Ven a castle, Uranienborg (1576–80), and an observatory, Stjarneborg (1584) Deprived of his revenues (1596), he left Ven (1597) and in 1599 settled near Prague under the patronage of the German emperor Rudolf II He published (1588) De mundi aetheri recentioribus phaenomenis, the second volume of a projected three-volume work on his astronomical observations, from an incomplete manuscript and notes Kepler edited Volume I, Astronomiae instauratae progymnastica (1602) Brahe's Astronomiae instauratae mechanica (1598) contained his autobiography and a description of his instruments. See biographies by J L E. Dreyer (1890) and J A Gade (1947).

Brahma, deity see HINDUISM

Brahmagupta (brä"mugōōp'tu), c 588–c 660, Hindu mathematician and astronomer He wrote in verse the Brahma-sphuta-siddhanta [improved system of Brahma], a standard work on astronomy containing two chapters on mathematics which were translated into English by H T Colebrooke in Algebra from the Sanskrit of Brahmagupta (1871) A shorter treatise, The Khandakhadyaka (Eng tr , 1934), expounded the astronomical system of Aryabhatta

Brahman or Brahmin (both brä'mŭn), member of the highest Hindu CASTE The priesthood and the task of expounding the scriptures of HINDUISM are reserved to Brahmans Brahmans also engage in other occupations where a person of lower caste might cause defilement, thus they are often cooks The intellectuals in Boston in the 19th cent , who were of the upper classes and also interested in Eastern literature, came to be called the Boston Brahmans

Brahmanism see HINDUISM

Brahmaputra (brumupōō'tru), river, c 1,800 mi long, rising in SW Tibet and flowing into India In Tibet, where it is called the Tsangpo, it runs c 700 mi generally east and is mostly navigable As the Dihang, it runs south c 150 mi in Assam, and then, turning west, with the name Brahmaputra, it flows through Assam and into East Bengal, to join the Ganges The united rivers empty through the many channels of the Ganges delta into the Bay of Bengal The river's lower course, sacred to Hindus, is an important waterway and the valley is very fertile, this section is called the Jamuna

Brahmin see BRAHMAN

Brahms, Johannes (brāmz, Ger yōhan'us brams'), 1833–97, German composer regarded as the outstanding figure of German romanticism, b Hamburg, son of an able double-bass player who gave him his early lessons At 20, a concert tour as pianist with Eduard Remenyi brought him to the notice of Joseph Joachim, who introduced him to Liszt and to the Schumanns, his lifelong friends Although his Piano Concerto in D Minor met with complete failure in Leipzig in 1859, he was later sufficiently successful to earn his living in Vienna (from 1863) by composing In his music the romantic impulse is restrained by a reverence for the spirit and forms of the past He composed in all forms except opera His earliest piano works were three sonatas (1852–53), but later he composed intermezzos, capriccios, ballades, and rhapsodies (1877–78, 1892–93) His First (1855–76), Second (1877), Third (1883), and Fourth (1884–85) symphonies are ranked among the greatest in symphonic literature Also noteworthy are his many lieder, his chamber music, Ein deutsches Requiem (1866) and Schicksalslied [song of destiny] (1868) for chorus and orchestra, the Violin Concerto in D (1878), and the Piano Concerto in B Flat (1878–81) His last works, published posthumously, were 11 chorale-preludes for organ See his letters (ed by Max Kalbeck, 1909), biographies by Walter Nieman (1929), R H Schauffler (1933), William Murdoch (1933), J L Erb (rev ed , 1934), and Karl Geiringer (rev ed , 1947), D C Mason, The Chamber Music of Brahms (1933)

Brahui (brä'hōōē), Dravidian language of Baluchistan See LANGUAGE (table)

Braid, James, 1795?–1860, English surgeon, writer on hypnotism and magic The first to use the term hypnotism instead of mesmerism or animal magnetism, he also demonstrated that it was achieved by suggestion His writings prepared the way for investigations into what was later called the unconscious mind

Braidwood, Thomas, 1715–1806, English educator, grad Univ of Edinburgh He established (1760) at Edinburgh the first school in Great Britain for deaf-mutes, moving it to London in 1783 under a royal grant

Braidwood, city (pop 1,354), NE Ill , S of Joliet, in a strip-mining area, inc 1873 John Mitchell was born here

Braila (brāē'la), city (pop 95,514), SE Rumania, in Walachia, on the lower Danube It is a commercial center and grain-shipping port Probably dating from Greek times, it was burned by the Turks (1462) and by Stephen the Great of Moldavia (1470), was taken by the Turks in 1544, and was restored to the principality of Walachia in 1828.

Braille, Louis (brāl', Fr lwē' brī'yŭ), 1809?–1852, French inventor of the Braille system of printing and writing for the blind Having become blind from an accident at the age of three, he was admitted at 10 to the Institution nationale des Jeunes Aveugles in Paris. Later he taught there In order to make his instruction easier, he chose Charles Barbier's system of writing with points, evolving from it a much simpler one He was interested in music as well and for a time played the organ in a church in Paris The Braille system consists of six raised points or dots in various combinations, 63 in all being possible It is in use, in modified form, for printing, writing, and musical notation for the blind See also BLINDNESS brain, a mass of nervous tissue in the cranium. The brain is enveloped by membranes (meninges), continuous with those that surround the spinal cord Its weight is slightly over 2 percent of the body weight The cerebrum, the upper and largest portion of the brain, consists of two equal hemispheres united by a mass of white matter, the corpus callosum The outer layer of the cerebrum, the cortex, consists of gray matter and is convoluted The cerebrum is the center of consciousness, sensation, and voluntary actions The cerebellum, which consists of a median and two lateral lobes, is behind the cerebrum and above the pons It plays an important role in the regulation of muscular tone and in the coordination of muscular activity The pons (or pons Varolii) consists of transverse fibers which join the lobes of the cerebellum and of longitudinal fibers which connect the cerebellum and medulla oblongata The medulla oblongata serves as a pathway for impulses from the brain to the spinal cord, with which it is continuous It has centers for control of respiratory, cardiac, vasoconstrictor, and reflex actions

Brainard, Daniel, 1812–66, American surgeon, b Oneida Co , N Y , M D Jefferson Medical College, 1834 He was a founder and organizer of Rush Medical College, Chicago, where he was professor of surgery from 1843 He invented a bone drill and made studies of fractures and deformities He died of cholera during an epidemic in Chicago

Brainerd, David, 1718–47, missionary to the American Indians, b Haddam, Conn Licensed to preach in 1742, he spent his brief years among the Indians, first in W Connecticut and later in Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey His diary was widely read and influenced many to enter the mission field Parts of the diary were published during Brainerd's lifetime, and in 1749 Jonathan EDWARDS published the hitherto unprinted portion

Brainerd, Ezra, 1844–1924, American botanist He achieved an international reputation for his scientific work in plant hybridity, especially the hybridity of North American violets He was president of Middlebury College from 1885 to 1908

Brainerd, city (pop 12,071), co seat of Crow Wing co , central Minn , on the Mississippi, settled 1870 inc 1881 It is an industrial and commercial center in an area of lumbering and lake resorts The courthouse contains a historical museum Not far is the Cuyuna iron range

Braintree, urban district (1931 pop 8,912, 1943 estimated pop 14,800), Essex, England It has textile factories and steelworks

Braintree, town (pop 16,378), E Mass , SSE of Boston, settled 1634, inc 1640 It included Quincy until 1792 Shoes and rubber and petroleum products are made here On April 15, 1920, in South Braintree, occurred the holdup and murders for which Sacco and Vanzetti were executed

Brain Trust, designation for a group of close advisers to F D Roosevelt when he was governor of New York and in his first years as President The name was given them because they were drawn from academic life This informal advisory group on the NEW DEAL included Raymond MOLEY, Arthur E MORGAN, O M W SPRAGUE, and Rexford G TUGWELL It disintegrated in President Roosevelt's first administration, but the term has remained in common usage for similar groups brake or bracken, tall fern of the genus Pteris (or Pteridium), having coarse, somewhat triangular-shaped fronds The common brake is widely distributed and is one of the best-known ferns, often becoming weedy It is considered poisonous to livestock when eaten in quantity, but the young shoots after cooking have been used for food, as have the rootstalks The brake has other uses as a source of tannin, for thatching, as bedding for stock, the rootstalk has been used for a beverage In plant lore, the brake is associated with the superstitions about "fern seed" (see FERN)

brake, device employed to retard or stop the motion of a mechanical body Generally friction is used to resist the motion and the kinetic energy of the body is thereby changed to heat energy Simple types of brakes consist of a block of wood or a shoe or slipper pressed against the rim of a wheel, the force being applied through a brake pedal or handle and multiplied by an arrangement of levers, a rope wound several times around an axle or a drum and pulled taut when braking is desired, and metal bands fitted around a drum attached to the wheel or the axle and controlled by a system of levers The mechanical brakes used on automobiles are of the last type; the foot brake usually regulates semicircular bands of metal applied around the outside of a drum which is attached to the axle, and the emergency brake is attached to shoes that press outward against the inside of the drum The surfaces of the bands and shoes are lined with various kinds of material (called brake lining) which is made especially to withstand the wear caused by friction The force applied to the pedal is transmitted by a system of levers, by cables, or by an arrangement based upon the principle of the hydraulic press and consisting of a cylinder and piston Brakes on freight cars have long been applied by means of a wheel extending above the top of the car and mounted on a shaft or axle the lower end of which is set against a lever that operates the shoes, when the wheel is turned its axle is screwed down against the lever and the brakes are set The friction-plate brake consists of a series of circular plates set one on top of another and so arranged that a screw regulates the friction between them The air brake, invented by George Westinghouse, was first used on passenger trains in 1868 It is now widely used on railroad trains The fundamental principle involved is the use of compressed air acting through a piston in a cylinder to set the brakes on the wheels The action is simultaneous on the wheels of all the cars in the train The compressed air is carried through a strong hose from car to car with couplings between cars, its release to all the separate brake units at the same time is controlled by the engineer An automatic feature provides for the setting of all the brakes in event of damage to the brake hose, leakage, or damage to individual brake units The brakes are released by admitting air on the other side of the piston Air brakes are used on subway trains, trolley cars, motorbuses, and trucks The vacuum brake depends upon the use of air for its application, the brake shoes being held off the wheels by the presence of a vacuum in the cylinder and set when air is admitted (deliberately or by accident) and the vacuum destroyed The hydraulic brake used in most modern automobiles commonly involves the use of a lever handle by which the hydraulic pressure is increased or decreased (see HYDRAULIC MACHINE) For machines driven by electricity, the electric motor is often used in braking Because the inertia of a machine keeps it in motion for some time after the current has been shut off, by a special arrangement the driving motor is kept rotating (thus causing a retarding effect) and its action changed to that of a generator The current it generates is used to operate electromagnets which by their attraction set the brakes A magnetic brake operates on the principle of the electromagnet, its release being effected by shutting off the electric current, the pressure exerted depends upon the strength of the magnet

Brakelond, Jocelin de see JOCELIN DE BRAKELOND

Brakpan (brăk'păn), city (pop 83,211), S Transvaal, Union of South Africa, on the Witwatersrand It is a gold- and coal-mining center, and there are ironworks It has a college

Bramah, Joseph (brăm'u, brä'-), 1748–1814, English mechanician and inventor In 1784 he took out his first patent on a safety lock, and in 1795 he patented his HYDRAULIC PRESS, known as the Bramah press He devised a numerical printing machine for bank notes and was one of the first to suggest the practicability of screw propellers and of hydraulic transmission

Bramante, Donato d'Agnolo (dōnä'tō dänyōlō brämän'tä), 1444?–1514, Italian architect and painter, also called Lazzari He first studied painting but soon confined himself to architecture, becoming one of the greatest architects of the High Renaissance His life may be divided into two periods, the years in Milan (1472–99) and the Roman period (1499 until his death) In Milan the churches of San Satiro and Santa Maria delle Grazie show his early manner In Rome his style acquired simplicity and monumental breadth as a result of his study and measurement of classic remains He was employed by Popes Alexander VI and Julius II Among his greatest works in Rome are the Cancelleria Palace, the small but perfect circular Tempietto in the courtyard of San Pietro in Montorio, and the cloisters of Santa Maria della Pace In 1503 Bramante's plans were selected for the construction of a new St Peter's to replace the original basilica The drawing, showing a Greek-cross plan, is preserved in the Uffizi Before his death the great piers and their arches and much of the vaulting had been completed The many artists who later worked upon the structure were responsible for alterations brought to Bramante's plans At the Vatican he constructed the long corridor uniting the Belvedere with the older palace and the court of the loggia.

Bramantino (brämäntē'nō), c 1455–c 1535, Lombard painter and architect His real name was Bartolomeo Suardi, he was called Bramantino from his master Bramante, whose style he imitated He was court painter to Francesco Maria Sforza. His works are noted for their fine architectural backgrounds Characteristic examples are Madonna and Angels and St Martin (both Brera, Milan) and Flight into Egypt (Santa Maria del Sasso, Locarno). The Metropolitan Museum has 12 panels attributed to Bramantino, both the Metropolitan Museum and the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D C , have Madonnas

bramble, name for plants of the genus Rubus, which includes the BLACKBERRY, RASPBERRY, and DEWBERRY In England the name is particularly used for the common English blackberry Other thorny shrubs are sometimes called brambles

Brampton, town (pop 6,020), co seat of Peel co , S Ont , NW of Toronto Its greenhouses are noted

Bramwell, residential town (pop 1,494), S W Va., NW of Bluefield, in a coal section, inc 1888

bran, outer coat of a cereal grain—e g , wheat, rye, corn,—removed from flour and meal by bolting or sifting Wheat bran is extensively used as a feeding stuff for farm animals Bran is used as food for humans (as a cereal or mixed with flour in bread), particularly to correct constipation Bran is also used in dyeing and calico printing

Branch, Anna Hempstead, 1875–1937, American poet and social worker, b New London, Conn , grad Smith, 1897, and the American Academy of Dramatic Art Her poem "The Road 'twixt Heaven and Hell" won the Century prize in 1898 for poems by college graduates Her published volumes of poetry include The Heart of the Road (1901), The Shore That Danced (1905), Rose of the Wind (1910), and Sonnets from a Lock Box (1929) Ridgely Torrence edited her Last Poems (1944) Her social service centered around Christodora House, New York city

Branchville, town (pop 1,351), S central S C , SSE of Columbia

Branco, Rio (rē'ō brang'kō), river rising in the Guiana Highlands and flowing S through Brazil to join the Rio Negro It gives its name to the Rio Branco territory of Brazil

Brancovan, Constantine (bran-kōvan'), 1654–1714, prince of Walachia In 1711 he negotiated with Peter I of Russia an alliance against his suzerain, Sultan Ahmed III, but he later withdrew Accused of treason, he was deposed and with his four sons was beheaded at Constantinople

Brancusi, Constantin (brän'kōōsh), 1876–, Rumanian sculptor In 1904 he went to Paris, where he worked under Mercié and Rodin He soon became known as one of the leading abstract sculptors of his period The Kiss (1908), Sleeping Muse (1910), and the portrait of Mlle Pogany have been the subjects of much controversy In 1927 he won a lawsuit against the U S customs authorities of the Port of New York which led to legal changes permitting the importation of abstract art free of duty His work is notable for its extreme abstraction, organic and frequently symbolic character, and subtle modeling He is equally successful in a wide variety of materials Bird in Space (1925, Mus of Modern Art, New York) is a characteristic work Others are in the museums of Cleveland and Chicago

Brand, Sir John Henry, or Jan Hendrik Brand (yän' hĕn'drik bränt'), 1823–88, president of the Orange Free State, b Capetown He was called to the English bar in 1849 and practiced law in South Africa In 1863 he was elected president of the struggling Orange Free State and immediately made war (1864–69) on the Basutos Reelected in 1869 (and at each election until his death), he refused (1871) to become president of both the Orange Free State and the Transvaal because of the Transvaal's anti-British policy

Brand, Sebastian see BRANT, SEBASTIAN

Brande, William Thomas (brănd), 1788–1866, English chemist In 1813 he succeeded Sir Humphry Davy as professor of chemistry at the Royal Institution With Michael Faraday, Brande was coeditor (1816–36) of the Quarterly Journal of Science and Art He wrote a long-standard Manual of Chemistry (1819) and a Dictionary of Pharmacy (1839) and edited the Dictionary of Science, Literature, and Art (1842)

Brandegee, Townshend Stith (–jē), 1843–1925, American botanist, authority on the flora of the American Southwest and of N Mexico Trained as an engineer at Yale, he served in that capacity with the Hayden and other surveys, collecting botanical specimens in his spare time His collection of Western timber is now part of the Jessup Collection in the American Museum of Natural History, New York city He did especially thorough work in the biology of Lower California and the California islands Much of his work was published in the University of California Publications His wife, Katherine Brandegee, 1844–1920, was curator of the herbarium of the California Academy of Sciences and often went on his expeditions. Memoirs and bibliographies of both are in the University of California Publications in Botany, Vol XIII (1926)

Brandeis, Louis Dembitz (brăn'dīs), 1856–1941, American jurist, b Louisville, Ky , grad Harvard Law School, 1877 A successful Boston attorney (1879–1916), Brandeis distinguished himself by investigating insurance practices and by establishing (1907) Massachusetts savings-bank insurance, after defending (1900–1907) public interest in Boston utility cases. He served (1907–14) as counsel for the people in proceedings involving the constitutionality of wages and hours laws in Oregon, Illinois, Ohio, and California Meanwhile, he successfully argued (1910–14) before the ICC against railroad-rate increases and opposed (1907–13) monopoly of transportation in New England In 1910 he was an arbitrator of a strike of New York garment workers (mostly Jewish), became aware of the Jewish problem, and afterward was a leader of the Zionist movement He served (1916–39) as Associate Justice on the Supreme Court, and with Oliver W HOLMES, he maintained a position of judicial liberalism His noted books are Other People's Money (1914) and Business, a Profession (1914) For selections of his writings, see Osmond K Fraenkel, ed , The Curse of Bigness (1945), and Alfred Lief, ed , The Social and Economic Views of Mr Justice Brandeis (1930) See biography by Alpheus T Mason (1946)

Brandeis University see WALTHAM, Mass

Brandenburg (brăn'dənbûrg, Ger. bran'dənbōrk), former province (1939 area 14,779 sq mi , 1939 pop 3,007,933) of Prussia, N Germany After the official dissolution of Prussia (Feb , 1947), Russian-occupied Brandenburg was raised to be a German state (10,415 sq mi , pop 2,527,492), Potsdam remained the capital At the Potsdam Conference in 1945 the parts of Brandenburg lying E of the Oder were placed under the administration of POLAND, pending a final settlement Drained by the Havel Spree, and Oder rivers, Brandenburg has many lakes and pine forests The generally flat and partly sandy soil yields chiefly potatoes, vegetables, and fruit Lignite and salt are among the scant mineral resources Berlin is situated in, but is not administratively part of, Brandenburg Other cities are Frankfurt-an-der-Oder, Brandenburg, and Cottbus The SPREE FOREST, in Lower LUSATIA, is inhabited by Slavic-speaking WENDS, remnants of the population which inhabited Brandenburg at the time of its acquisition (12th cent) by ALBERT THE BEAR The Slavic principalities had been previously subdued by Charlemagne but regained their independence Henry I conquered the region and made it the North Mark, which in 1134 was bestowed on Albert the Bear Actually, however, Brandenburg became Germanized and Christianized only after its last Slavic prince bequeathed it to Albert Albert's descendants, the Ascanians, ruled Brandenburg until their extinction in 1320 Emperor Louis IV, a Wittelsbach, gave the vacant fief to members of his own house, but Emperor CHARLES IV (who confirmed the margraves of Brandenburg as ELECTORS of the Holy Roman Empire) forced the Wittelsbachs to surrender it and conferred it (1373) on his son Wenceslaus. When Wenceslaus became (1378) German king, he gave Brandenburg to his brother, later Emperor SIGISMUND, who in 1415 transferred it to FREDERICK I of the house of HOHENZOLLERN Among Frederick's early successors were ALBERT ACHILLES, who introduced the law of inheritance of the Hohenzollern family, and Joachim II (1535–71), who accepted the Reformation in 1539 In 1614 Brandenburg acquired the duchy of CLEVES and other West German territories, and in 1618 the duchy of Prussia (roughly, the later EAST PRUSSIA) Though it suffered heavily in the Thirty Years War, Brandenburg emerged as a military power under FREDERICK WILLIAM, the Great Elector, who acquired E Pomerania and freed Prussia from Polish suzerainty His son, Elector Frederick III, in 1701 took the title king of Prussia as FREDERICK I The later history of Brandenburg is that of PRUSSIA

Brandenburg, city (pop 70,632), Brandenburg, N Germany, on the Havel Its industries produce trucks, textiles, machinery, and machine tools. Dating from the 10th cent , the Slavic Brennabor was conquered (12th cent) by Albert the Bear and gave its name to the margraviate, later the province, of Brandenburg

Brandes, Carl Edvard Cohen (bran'dus), 1847–1931, Danish critic, dramatist, and political leader, brother of Georg Brandes As a dramatic critic he wrote Danish Dramatic Art (1880), and Foreign Dramatic Art (1881) Among his plays are A Visit (1882), A Betrothal (1884), and Under a Vow (1891). A novel, Young Blood (1899), was suppressed In 1880 he was elected to the Folketing, became associate editor of Morgenblad, a party organ, and in 1906 was elected to the Landsting In 1909 and again in 1913–20, he was minister of finance He has influenced the literature, drama, and politics of Denmark

Brandes, Georg Morris Cohen, 1842–1927, Danish literary critic Brandes exerted an invigorating influence on literature, bringing to Denmark the wide currents of contemporary European thought After finishing Critiques and Portraits (1870), he traveled on the Continent, met Taine, John Stuart Mill, and Renan, and on his return wrote Main Currents in Nineteenth-Century Literature (6 vols , 1872–90, Eng tr , 1901–5), an attack on provincialism and reaction It aroused extreme opposition as well as enthusiasm His review the Nyttende Aarhundrede was discontinued after three years, and Brandes went to Berlin, where he came under Nietzsche's influence. While there he wrote the monographs Benjamin Disraeli (1878, Eng. tr., Lord Beaconsfield, 1880) and Ferdinand Lassalle (1881, Eng tr , 1911). He returned to Denmark in 1883, and his reputation as one of Europe's foremost critics was established with such works as William Shakespeare (1895–96, Eng tr , 1898), Goethe (1915; Eng tr , 1924), and Voltaire (1916, Eng tr , 1930) One of his last books was Jesus, a Myth (1925, Eng tr , 1926)

Brandon, Saint see BRENDAN, SAINT

Brandon, Charles. see SUFFOLK, CHARLES BRANDON, 1ST DUKE OF.

Brandon, city (pop 17,551), SW Man , on the Assiniboine river and W of Winnipeg The business center of the wheat-raising area of SW Manitoba, it has an extensive trade in farm products and machinery It is the seat of the annual provincial exhibition and of the Manitoba Winter Fair A dominion experimental farm adjoins the city Brandon College (Baptist) is here The city is named for the old Hudson's Bay Company post, Brandon House, built 17 mi farther down the river in 1794, but abandoned in 1814

Brandon. 1 Town (pop 1,184), co seat of Rankin co , S central Miss , just E of Jackson, in a truck area Near by are a natural-gas field and the state hospital for the insane (1935). 2 Town (pop 2,979), W Vt , NNW of Rutland and on Otter Creek, chartered 1761 Bog iron was discovered in 1810, and John Conant began to make cooking stoves here in 1820. Stephen A Douglas's birthplace is now a D A R headquarters Brandon is the headquarters for breeders of Ayrshire cattle The town, with its wide streets and old houses, is a resort center A state school for the feebleminded is here.

Brandt, Sebastian, see BRANT, SEBASTIAN.

brandy [for brandywine 'from Dutch, = burnt, i e , distilled, wine], strong alcoholic spirit distilled from wine or from marc, the residue of the wine press The most noted brandy is cognac, made from white grapes in the Charente district of France The label Cognac, fine champagne denotes the finest type of cognac, which comes from a small area about Cognac Brandy is manufactured commercially in other districts of France, notably Armagnac, and in Spain, Portugal, Australia, Italy, South Africa, and the United States Most fine brandies are distilled in pot stills constructed to retain the volatile ingredients The product is blended and flavored, then stored in casks (preferably oak), where it mellows and takes on a yellow color, it acquires a deeper tint from long storage or the addition of caramel syrup For consumption in the United States brandy must be matured in cask for at least four years Brandy made from marc is very potent and is inferior to wine brandy Liquor distilled from fermented beets, grains, or sugar cane is sometimes called brandy The term, qualified by the name of the fruit, is applied to spirits distilled from the fermented juice of fruits other than the grape, e g , peach brandy, cherry brandy, and plum brandy (slivovitz), which is extensively manufactured in the Balkans

Brandy Station, small trading center, Culpeper co , Va It was the scene of the greatest cavalry engagement of the Civil War (also called the battle of Fleetwood Hill), fought June 9, 1863. Alfred Pleasonton's Union cavalry surprised Jeb Stuart and gave a good account of itself before the approach of Confederate infantry forced a withdrawal across the Rappahannock This was the first clash of the GETTYSBURG CAMPAIGN

Brandywine, battle of, in the American Revolution, fought Sept. 11, 1777, along Brandywine Creek. The creek, formed by two small branches in SE Pennsylvania, flows southeast to join, near Wilmington, Del , Christina river, which empties into the Delaware The British under Sir William Howe were advancing on Philadelphia from Elkton, Md , and Washington, realizing that they would cross the stream, placed most of his army at Chadds Ford. Howe sent Knyphausen to feint an attack at Chadds Ford, while he himself, with Cornwallis, struck the American right flank, where Gen John Sullivan could not check the attack Washington ordered a retreat to Chester The British continued their advance and took Philadelphia (Sept 27, 1777) See H. S Canby, The Brandywine (1941)

Branford, borough (pop 2,235) in Branford town (pop 8,060), S Conn , on Long Island Sound E of New Haven, settled 1644, inc 1685 It grew as a shipping and fishing center and has small industries Some pre-Revolutionary houses remain

Brangwyn, Sir Frank (brăng'wĭn), 1867–, British painter, etcher, and designer, member of the Royal Academy of Arts In his youth he worked in the studio of William Morris and later traveled in the East and was influenced by Oriental art In addition to easel and mural paintings, he is well known for his etchings and his designs for stained glass, tapestry, and metalwork His chief works include Modern Commerce (Royal Exchange, London), a series of panels for Skinners' Hall, London, King John Signing the Magna Charta, a large mural in the courthouse, Cleveland, decorative panels for Rockefeller Center, New York, Sweetheart Seller (Carnegie Inst., Pittsburgh), and Burial at Sea (Glasgow Gall). His paintings are notable for their broad, free treatment, balanced composition, and decorative qualities. Among his best etchings are London Bridge, Bridge of Sighs, Notre Dame, Old Houses in Ghent, and The Paper Mill See W S Sparrow, Frank Brangwyn and His Works (1911), H E A Furst, The Decorative Art of Frank Brangwyn (1924)

Branksome, Roxburghshire, Scotland see HAWICK

Branly, Édouard (ādwär' brälē'), 1846–1940, French physicist and physician He was professor of physics at the Catholic Institute, Paris, from 1875 He developed (1890) a coherer for the detection of electric waves which was used by Marconi in his system of wireless telegraphy

Brannan, Charles Franklin, 1903–, U S Secretary of Agriculture (1948–), b Denver, LL B Univ of Denver, 1929 He became a specialist in irrigation and mining law In the Dept of Agriculture after 1935, Brannan, as Assistant Secretary (1944–48), improved water facilities and flood control He was also U S agricultural adviser to the UN Economic and Social Council from 1945. He succeeded Secretary Clinton ANDERSON, whose long-range farm policy he adopted

Brannan, Samuel, 1819–89, California pioneer, b Saco, Maine He was converted to Mormonism and edited a Mormon paper in New York before leading a party of Mormons who went by sea from New York to California. In 1847 he founded the first newspaper in San Francisco, the California Star Later he went to Sutter's Fort and got land holdings in Sacramento Again in San Francisco, he was a member of the city's first council Sam Brannan was active in the move to bring order to the lawless city and was an organizer and the first president (1851) of the Committee of Vigilance See J A. B Sherer, The First Forty-Niner (1925), P D Bailey, Sam Brannan and the California Mormons (1943), R V Scott, Samuel Brannan and the Golden Fleece (1944)

Branner, John Casper, 1850–1922, American geologist, b New Market, Tenn He made geological investigations in Brazil (1874–84), the results of these studies and of others made in later years were published with the first complete geological map of the country in Outlines of the Geology of Brazil (1919) Branner was professor of geology at Indiana Univ (1885–92), in 1887 he was appointed geologist of Arkansas, creating there a department which was a model for similar state work In his long association with Stanford, Branner was professor of geology (from 1892), vice president (1899–1913), president (1913–16), and president emeritus (from 1916) He made studies of earthquakes, both in North and South America, he was a founder and president (1910–14) of the Seismological Society of America

Branson, Edwin Bayer, 1877–, American geologist, b Belleville, Kansas, grad Univ of Kansas (B A , M A , 1903), Ph D Univ of Chicago, 1905 He taught at Oberlin College (1905–10) and from 1910 was professor and head of the department of geology at the Univ of Missouri His works include Conodont Studies (with others, 1933), Stratigraphy and Paleontology of the Lower Mississippian of Missouri (with others, 1938), and Geology of Missouri (1944)

Branson, resort city (pop 1,011), SW Mo , S of Springfield and near the Ark line It is in the Ozarks on Lake Taneycomo

Brant, Joseph, 1742–1807, war chief of the Mohawk Indians His Indian name is usually rendered as Thayendanegea He served under Sir William Johnson in the French and Indian War, and Johnson sent him (1761) to Eleazar Wheelock's Indian school in Lebanon, Conn Brant served (1763) under Johnson again in Pontiac's Rebellion In 1774 he became secretary to Guy JOHNSON, and in the American Revolution he did much to bind the Indians to the British and Loyalist side He fought at Oriskany (1777) in the Saratoga campaign. In 1778 he led the Indian forces when Walter BUTLER raided Cherry Valley, and the names of both were blackened by the massacre that followed He was an able leader in other raids After the Revolution, failing to get a settlement of the Indian land question in the United States, he got lands and subsidies for his people in Canada around the present Brantford, Ont He was a zealous Christian and preached Christianity, translating the Book of Common Prayer and the Gospel of Mark into the Mohawk tongue RED JACKET opposed him as a follower of the white man's ways See biography by W L Stone (1838)

Brant, Brandt, or Brand, Sebastian (zā'bäs'tyän brant'), 1458–1521, German didactic poet. He was born in Strasbourg and studied law at the Univ of Basel He taught there until in 1501 he returned to Strasbourg, where he became town clerk He had written various works in Latin and German when in 1494 was published the work for which he is remembered, Das Narrenschiff [the ship of fools], a series of satirical and moralizing poems in the vernacular Illustrated with woodcuts, it went through six editions in his lifetime and has been widely translated. See verse translation (with the woodcuts) by Zeydel (1944).

brant or brant goose, wild sea goose. The American brant breeds in arctic regions and winters along the Atlantic coast, rarely inland Its head, neck, and tail are black, the back brownish gray, and the under parts grayish white Hunters find the birds easy prey and their flesh good Eelgrass is their staple food, although of necessity they may seek other nourishment The Old World barnacle goose, so named because it was thought to grow out of barnacles attached to driftwood, is very similar to the brant and is an occasional visitor to North America The black brant migrates from its arctic breeding grounds to the Pacific coast White brant is a name sometimes given to the snow goose, and gray or prairie brant to the American white-fronted goose

Brantford, city (pop 31,948), co seat of Brant co , S Ont , on the Grand River and WSW of Hamilton It is one of the leading manufacturing cities of Canada, noted particularly for its large farm-implement factories Both city and county were named for the Mohawk chieftain Joseph BRANT, who led the Iroquois nations to this region after the American Revolution and who is buried in the old Mohawk Church near the city The city remains the official headquarters of the Six Nations, and an Indian Institute is here Alexander Graham Bell was living in Brantford in 1876 when he made his first successful experiment in the transmission of sound by electric wire, which resulted in the telephone A monument by W S Allward commemorates the event See F D Reville, History of the County of Brant (1920)

Branting, Hjalmar (yäl'mär brän'tĭng), 1860-1925, Swedish statesman A leader of the Social Democratic Labor party, he was finance minister in 1917 and premier in 1920, from 1921 to 1923, and again from 1924 until his death He supported the League of Nations and shared the 1921 Nobel Peace Prize with Christian Louis Lange

Brantley, town (pop 1,126), S Ala., on the Conecuh and S of Montgomery, in a farm and timber area, inc 1895

Brantôme, Pierre de Bourdeilles, seigneur de (pyĕr' dŭ bōōrdā'yu sānyŭr' du brätōm'), 1535?–1614, French courtier, soldier, and author of famous memoirs He accompanied Mary Stuart to Scotland, served in the Spanish army in Africa, joined the expedition of the Knights of St John against the sultan, and engaged in other errantry until an accident caused his retirement His memoirs, including Vies des hommes illustres et grands capitaines and his Livre des dames (published first in two parts as Vies des dames illustres and Vies des dames galantes, Eng tr , Lives of Fair & Gallant Ladies, 1933), form a racy and vivid account of his time

Branxholm, Roxburghshire, Scotland see HAWICK

Braque, Georges (zhôrzh' brak'), 1881–, French painter In 1905 he joined the fauvists and in 1908, with Picasso, launched CUBISM Since then his work has been consistently abstract in character His painting is notable for its restraint and subtlety both in color and design Braque is best known for his superb still lifes He is well represented in the Luxembourg Museum, Paris, the Art Institute of Chicago, the Museum of Modern Art, New York, and many other leading galleries See study by A E Gallatin (1943)

Bras d'Or Lakes (brä dôr'), arm of the Atlantic cutting deeply into Cape Breton Island, N S , and occupying much of the interior The district was the scene of important experiments in the early history of aviation In 1907 Alexander Graham Bell founded at Baddeck, on Big Bras d'Or Lake, the Aerial Experiment Association, and on Feb 23, 1909, J A D McCurdy piloted his airplane, the Silver Dart, a distance of half a mile

Brasenose College see OXFORD UNIVERSITY

Brashear, John Alfred (brăshēr'), 1840–1920, American maker of scientific instruments and educator, b Brownsville, Pa A mechanic by trade, he taught himself the art of making lenses and mirrors for telescopes Aided by the encouragement of Samuel P. Langley, he perfected his techniques From 1880 he devoted full time to the business of making astronomical instruments and became noted in the field. Active also in many civic and educational projects, he contributed to the growth of the Allegheny Observatory of the Univ of Pittsburgh and served as trustee and as chancellor (1902–4) of the university See his autobiography (1924), biography by H L Gaul and Ruby Eiseman (1940)

Brasher, Rex (brā'shûr), 1869–, American ornithologist, b Brooklyn, N Y , grad St Francis College, Brooklyn, 1884 He devoted his life to making life-size paintings of all North American birds in their natural colors The first edition of his Birds and Trees of North America (12 vols), with hand-colored plates, appeared in 1929

Brasidas (brā'sĭdŭs), d 422 B C , Spartan general in the PELOPONNESIAN WAR He first gained notice by saving (424 B.C) Megara from Athenian attack In that year he conducted an able campaign in Thrace, capturing Amphipolis and other cities and greatly weakening the Athenian cause In 422 he routed an Athenian army under CLEON attacking Amphipolis, but both he and Cleon were killed He was one of the greatest of Spartan commanders.

Brasov (brāshôv'), Ger Kronstadt, Hung. Brassó, city (pop. 82,984), central Rumania, in Transylvania, at the foot of the Transylvanian Alps A commercial center, it also has several industries (food processing, textiles, machinery, and lumber) Founded in the 13th cent by the Teutonic Knights, it was soon granted commercial privileges by the Walachian princes and in the 18th cent was the largest city of Transylvania, to which it had passed. Brasov has a large Gothic cathedral (14th cent) and several Lutheran and Orthodox churches (14th-15th cent.). Parts of the medieval city wall and the 17th-century citadel have remained intact Other ancient buildings are the council house (15th cent, restored 18th cent) and the 16th-century houses surrounding the market place The population includes c 18,000 Hungarians and c 8,000 Germans brass, name for a number of alloys having copper (60–90 percent) and zinc (10–40 percent) as the essential components The alloys are harder than copper, the degree of hardness varying with the proportion of zinc. Brass can be beaten or hammered into various shapes, rolled into thin sheets, drawn into wires, and machined and cast without difficulty. It is widely used in machines, it is fashioned into utensils and ornaments, and many scientific instruments are made in whole or in part of brass The properties of the alloy vary with the proportion of the two metals present Ordinary yellow brass contains about 70 percent copper and 30 percent zinc Cartridge brass (copper, 66–70 percent, zinc, 30–33 percent) serves as the alloy for cartridge cases Dutch metal (copper, 80–85 percent, zinc, 15–20 percent) is used as a substitute for gold leaf and, in the Netherlands, especially for gilding ornaments and toys Mannheim gold (copper, 75 percent, zinc, 25 percent) resembles gold Muntz metal (copper, 60–65 percent, zinc, 35–40 percent) is employed for making machine parts Pinchbeck (copper, 85–90 percent, zinc, 10–15 percent), named for its inventor, Christopher Pinchbeck, who introduced it in 1732 for use in making watches and clocks, also resembles gold Spring brass, used for springs, is made from ordinary brass hardened by special heating or by cold working Small amounts of iron and lead are present in some brasses, manganese is sometimes used as a deoxidizer.

brasses, monumental or sepulchral, memorials to the dead, in use in churches on the Continent and in England in the 13th cent and for several centuries following They are usually set in the pavement, but occasionally are placed upright against a wall or stand free upon a plinth There are two types—those with the figure, border, and inscription of brass inserts on marble or stone slabs, and those wholly or partly of brass or of mixed metal (latten) tablets having incised lines, filled with an enamel often colored The engraving usually presents a figure of the deceased Historical interest centers around the contemporary costumes, armor, heraldic designs, genealogy, and paleography revealed The value of the metal caused many brasses to be destroyed or converted to use for later memorials by reversing and reengraving as a palimpsest In France, they were virtually wiped out in 16th-century and subsequent disturbances Such brasses still exist in Belgium, especially in Bruges, in the Netherlands, and in Germany, where there are some exceptional 13th-century ones In England the churches of Ipswich, Norwich, London, Bristol, and elsewhere disclose several thousand examples covering the different periods of their use The majority are of native design and craftsmanship and of the inset type, incised ones usually indicate Flemish origin A few brasses are in Glasgow and Edinburgh churches See H W Macklin, Monumental Brasses (2d ed, 1891), W A Gawthorp, The Brasses of Our Homeland Churches (1923)

brasses, ornamental. Minor forms are mentioned in ancient Egyptian writings and in the Old Testament and were made also in classical times Many early bronzes of low zinc content have been mistaken for brasses, with which their history is interwoven Brasses were early used in the Far East and in India, which still produces highly decorated objects such as Benares ware In Europe the Meuse valley became in the 11th cent the center of ornamental work in copper and its alloys Although the production spread to most of Western Europe, the work was known well into the 16th cent as dinanderie, after Dinant, a Belgian town long the leader in this work Early dinanderie included ecclesiastical objects such as fonts, tabernacles, and lecterns and domestic articles such as the characteristic aquamanale, a vessel, often in the form of an animal, used for pouring water The brass chandeliers of Norway, Sweden, and especially Holland were widely exported. The 17th and 18th cent saw a multiplicity of small objects for domestic use, such as candlesticks, utensils, and hearth equipment

Brassey, Thomas, 1805–70, English railroad contractor and civil engineer He built major lines in England, France, Italy, Holland, Spain, Prussia, India, Australia, and South America See biography by Sir Arthur Helps (1872) His son was Thomas Brassey, 1st Earl Brassey, 1836–1918 He was secretary to the admiralty (1883–85), wrote the encyclopedic British Navy (1881) and many other works, and instituted the Naval Annual in 1886 He was created baron in 1886 and earl in 1911 His wife, Anna Brassey, Baroness Brassey, 1839–87, wrote travel books, including the popular A Voyage in the Sunbeam (1878), narrating the story of a world cruise on her yacht

Brasso: see BRASOV, Rumania

Brasstown Bald, peak, 4,784 ft high, N Ga, in the Blue Ridge of the Appalachians near the N C line, highest point in Georgia

brass wind instrument see WIND INSTRUMENT

Bratenahl (brā'tənôl), village (pop 1,350), NE Ohio, near Cleveland

Brathwaite, Richard (brāth'-), c 1588–1673, English poet His Barnabae Itinerarium (1638) was a doggerel travelogue of provincial England written in English and Latin The book was published under the pseudonym Corymbaeus, and its true authorship was not discovered until 1818 Other works include The English Gentleman (1630) and The English Gentlewoman (1631) See M W Black, Richard Brathwaite (1928)

Bratianu (brŭtsē'nōō) or Bratiano (-nō), prominent Rumanian family John Bratianu, 1821–91, shared in the Revolution of 1848, secured (1866) the election of Carol I to the throne, and headed a Liberal ministry (1876–88), which declared (1878) the full independence of Rumania from Turkey His son, John Bratianu, 1864–1927, succeeded him as leader of the Liberals and was premier (1909–11, 1914–18) He resigned rather than accept the humiliating peace terms offered by the Central Powers but regained his position in Dec, 1918, after the general armistice Representing Rumania at the Paris Peace Conference (1919), he resigned in protest against the minority clauses of the Treaty of Trianon with Hungary and the division of the Banat with Yugoslavia From 1922 until his death Bratianu was premier again, ruling Rumania as a virtual dictator, he prevented the accession of Carol II in 1927 He was succeeded as premier by his brother, Vintila Bratianu, who in 1928 was replaced by Julius Maniu Constantin Bratianu, also called Dinu Bratianu, 1889–, another member of the family, led the Rumanian National Liberal party after 1936 He opposed both the dictatorship of Ion Antonescu and the Communist regime

Bratislava (brä'tĭslä'vä), Ger Pressburg (prĕs'bōōrk), Hung Pozsony (pō'zhōnyō), city (pop 165,134), capital of Slovakia, Czechoslovakia, on the Danube and near the Austrian and Hungarian borders It has a large river port and varied industries and is the seat of a university (founded 1919) Dating from Roman times the city was chartered in 1291 From 1526 to 1848 it was the usual meeting place of the Hungarian diet, although Buda resumed its position as Hungarian capital after its recapture (1686) from the Turks Always an important trade center, Bratislava grew rapidly after its incorporation into Czechoslovakia and nearly doubled its population after 1919 The city is remarkable for its diversity of races and languages (Slovaks, Magyars, Jews, Czechs, Austrians) It has handsome modern buildings and streets and is rich in historical relics The old castle, above the Danube, dating from the 9th cent, was rebuilt in the 13th cent From that century also date St Martin's Cathedral, the Franciscan convent and church, and the old town hall The new town hall occupies an 18th-century palace, formerly the residence of the primates of Hungary, here in 1805 the Treaty of PRESSBURG was signed

Brattleboro, town (pop 10,983), SE Vt, on the Connecticut, from which it climbs steeply, chartered 1753 It grew near Fort Dummer, established in 1724 to protect settlers from Indians The town produces pipe organs (Estey's organ works date from c 1850), optical goods, paints, grain and wood products, and textiles, and there is a printing plant Brattleboro village, having mineral springs, became known as a resort in the 19th cent, winter sports developed later Brattleboro is headquarters of the Holstein-Friesian cattle breeders' association and has a school for the deaf and a hospital for the insane Rudyard Kipling married Caroline Balestier of Brattleboro in 1892 and lived at "Naulahka," north of the village William Morris Hunt, Richard Morris Hunt, Larkin Goldsmith Mead, William Rutherford Mead, Royall Tyler, and James Fisk also lived in the town, and John Humphrey Noyes was born here

Bratt system. see LIQUOR LAWS.

Brauchitsch, Walther von (vāl'tur fŭn brou'khĭch), 1881–1948, German field marshal Of a Prussian Junker family, he served in the First World War with the general staff and later remained in the Reichswehr In Feb, 1938, he became commander in chief of the German army, and in the Second World War he won swift victories (1939–40) in Poland, the Low Countries, and France and was made field marshal But reverses in Russia late in 1941 caused his dismissal. He died when awaiting trial as a war criminal.

Braun, Carl Ferdinand (kärl' fĕr'dēnänt broun'), 1850–1918, German physicist He was director of the physical institute, Strasbourg, from 1895; he conducted researches in electricity (an electrometer and a cathode-ray tube are known by his name) For his pioneering work on wireless telegraphy he shared with Marconi the 1909 Nobel Prize in Physics Braunschweig, Germany see BRUNSWICK.

Brauwer, Adriaen see BROUWER, ADRIAEN

Bravo, Nicolás (nēkōlās' brä'vō), d 1854, Mexican general He fought in the revolution against Spain, especially under Morelos y Pavón He adhered to the Plan of IGUALA but joined the revolution against the empire of Agustín de ITURBIDE A member of the provisional government of 1823–24, he was later vice president under GUADALUPE VICTORIA The revolution he led was put down by Vicente GUERRERO, and Bravo spent some time in exile, returning to aid Anastasio BUSTAMANTE in overthrowing Guerrero His later career was overshadowed by the rise of SANTA ANNA Bravo was one of the acting presidents who took power when Santa Anna withdrew in 1842, and under his guidance the centralist constitutional document, Bases orgánicas, was adopted in 1843

Brawley, city (pop 11,718), SE Calif, 8 of the Salton Sea, largest city in the IMPERIAL VALLEY, inc 1908 Anza Desert State Park lies to the west

Braxton, Carter, 1736–97, American Revolutionary patriot, signer of the Declaration of Independence, b King and Queen co, Va, educated at the College of William and Mary He lived (1757–60) in England, returned to America, and served in the house of burgesses (1761–71, 1775) and in the Continental Congress (1775–76, 1777–83, 1785)

Bray, Thomas, 1656–1730, English clergyman and philanthropist In 1695 he was selected by the bishop of London as his commissary to establish the Anglican church in Maryland Bray recruited missionaries and assembled parochial libraries for North America He sent out more than 30 parish libraries, which also served in many cases as circulating libraries He established similar libraries in England and Wales He founded (c 1698) the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge to carry on his work Bray visited Maryland in 1700 and was instrumental in the passage of a revised provincial Church Act (1702) He secured the charter (1701) for the noted Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts Rector of St Botolph Without, Aldgate, London, from 1706 until his death, he was interested in many religious and charitable enterprises, among which was the relief of prisoners in England, with which James Oglethorpe was also concerned In 1723 was founded "Dr Bray's Associates," a charity society, which, in 1730, was concerned in a petition for the charter of Georgia

Bray, parish, Berkshire, England, on the Thames river The ballad about the vicar of Bray, who became Catholic or Protestant according to the religion of the reigning monarch, is traditionally ascribed to the time of George I, but is often supposed to describe Simon Aleyn, vicar of Bray probably from 1540 to 1588

Bray, urban district (11,076), Co Wicklow, Ireland, on the Irish Sea and SE of Dublin It is a fishing center, seaport, and popular resort

Brazil (brəzĭl'), Port Brasil (brəzēl'), republic (3,288,043 sq mi, 1949 estimated pop 49,800,000), E South America, called in full the United States of Brazil The capital is RIO DE JANEIRO By far the largest of the Latin American countries, Brazil occupies nearly half the continent of South America, stretching from the Guiana Highlands in the north to the plains country of Uruguay and Paraguay in the south In the west it spreads into the jungles to border on Bolivia, Peru, and Colombia, and in the east it juts far out into the Atlantic toward Africa Its vast extent covers a great variety of land and climate, for although Brazil is mainly in the tropics (the equator crosses it in the far north and the Tropic of Capricorn crosses the south), the southern part of the great central upland is cool and yields the produce of temperate lands The people are also diverse in origin, and Brazil boasts that the new "race" of Brazilians is a successful amalgam of Indian, Negro, and European strains Most of the population is at least nominally Roman Catholic Though Portuguese is the official language, there are areas where other tongues persist—particularly German and Italian in the south and Indian languages of the Tupi or GUARANÍ family in the north The huge basin of the AMAZON river occupies all of the north and north central portions of Brazil with steaming, green jungles Though once they were famous for production of wild rubber, their hostility to man has kept them almost unexploited The chief city within the region itself is MANAUS, a seaport on the Rio Negro a thousand miles from the sea, and most of the few inhabitants are Indians of very low material culture. Most of the white settlements are on the banks of the great river itself and the margins of some of the tributaries Rubber is still gathered, and the rain forests yield exotic products (hardwoods, medicinal plants and roots, the skins of wild animals, copaiba, and Brazil nuts), but the huge state of Amazonas and the territories of Rio Branco, Amapá, Acre, and Guaporé are of potential rather than actual economic value Transport is limited to the air and the rivers, and even some of the great tributaries of the Amazon are rendered useless for travel by their great falls This fact explains the building of the Madeira-Mamoré RR deep in the jungle at the time of the wild-rubber boom when Brazil acquired ACRE Even now some of the tributaries of the Amazon, such as the Tapajós and the Xingú, are still imperfectly known Where the Amazon reaches its delta it is choked with islands The largest of these, Marajó, splits the river into two great arms, and on the southern arm, the Pará, is the city of BELÉM, the metropolis and largest port of Amazonia. It handles all the Amazonian products, including considerable cacao, tobacco, and hides East of the Amazon mouth there is the great seaward outthrust of Brazil, the region known as the Northeast The state of MARANHÃO, with its capital at São Luís, still has some of the Amazonian character, but is noted for the many babassu palms and the tropical and subtropical agriculture of its low coastal plain, with cotton, sugar, rice, and tobacco The Northeast was the center of the great sugar culture that for centuries dominated Brazil, making it a sugar empire, still recalled by the great crumbling plantation mansions and their now ruined slave quarters The Northeast has contributed somewhat disproportionately, too, to the literature and culture of Brazil In these states—Piauí, Ceará, Rio Grande do Norte, Paraíba, Pernambuco, Sergipe, and Bahia—the general pattern is narrow coastal plain (formerly supporting the sugar plantations and now given over to growing cotton, tobacco, rice, manioc, and other diversified crops) and a semiarid interior This interior, the sertão (plural sertões), with recurrent droughts, has created a serious problem The hardship of trying to live in the dry country has in the 19th and 20th cent driven many of the settlers (as in Ceará) to abandon their farms for the better regions of SE Brazil and leave the country to cattle and sheep ranches Irrigation projects are reclaiming some of the land, but still the cities on the coastal plain, PARNAÍBA, TERESINA, FORTALEZA, NATAL, JOÃO PESSOA, RECIFE, MACEIÓ, ARACAJU, and SALVADOR, maintain their place as the important centers The "bulge" of Brazil reaches its turning point at the Cape of São Roque To the northeast lie the island and islets of Fernando de Noronha territory, far out in the Atlantic. Natal, in Rio Grande do Norte, near the eastern tip, has in recent years become of tremendous importance in air travel because of its nearness to W Africa South of the "corner" of Brazil, the dominating pattern of Brazilian geography becomes notable The narrow and interrupted coastal lowlands are ended in the west by an escarpment that in some places actually reaches the sea Above the escarpment is the great Brazilian plateau The escarpment itself appears from the sea as a mountain range, generally called the Serra do Mar [coast range], and the plateau is interrupted by mountainous regions, such as that in Bahia which separates E Bahia from the valley of the São Francisco river, with its great Paulo Afonso Falls, formerly noted for scenic beauty and now more important as a source of hydroelectric power. From Bahia southward the east coast has the typical formation of the narrow coastal plain backed by the escarpment, making the interior hard of access The coast has a number of excellent harbors VITÓRIA in Espírito Santo, NITERÓI, capital of RIO DE JANEIRO state, Rio de Janeiro, the federal capital itself in the Federal District, one of the most beautiful and most capacious harbors in the world, SANTOS, the port of SÃO PAULO and the greatest coffee port in the world, FLORIANÓPOLIS in Santa Catarina, and PÔRTO ALEGRE in Rio Grande do Sul, the southernmost of the states, where the plateau ends and is succeeded by the plains of the Río de la Plata country In the east and southeast is the populous section of Brazil—the states that have in the 19th and 20th cent attracted the bulk of the European emigrants and have taken the hegemony from the old Northeast Rio de Janeiro is not only a great port but an industrial center, and the state of Rio de Janeiro has not only the thick-settled valley of the Paraíba river, running roughly parallel to the coast, but also the most recent planned economic developments, the Cidade dos Motores and the great steel center of VOLTA REDONDA It is São Paulo, however, that has taken the lead from the capital to become the most rapidly developing of the states, and the city of SÃO PAULO on the plateau has continued the vigorous and aggressive development that marked the region in the 17th and 18th cent, when the paulistas went out in the famed bandeirantes, groups of men searching for slaves and gold and opening the difficult interior They were largely responsible for the development of the gold and diamond mines of MINAS GERAIS and for the building of the old mining center of OURO PRÊTO, now succeeded by BELO HORIZONTE as capital of the second most populous state of Brazil Minas has iron reserves thought to be some of the finest in the world as well as industrial diamonds, manganese, semiprecious stones, and other mineral wealth. Settlement from São Paulo also spread southward, particularly in the 19th and early 20th cent when coffee from São Paulo's terra roxa [purple soil] had become the basis of Brazilian wealth, and coffeegrowing spread to PARANÁ That state, still being developed as frontier land, is famous also for its Paraná pines Its central portion produces mate (used as a beverage in the Río de la Plata country), and in the west Paraná runs out to the "corner" where Brazil, Argentina, and Paraguay meet at the natural marvel of the IGUASSÚ FALLS Paraná has some industries, principally based on agricultural processing The more southern states of SANTA CATARINA and RIO GRANDE DO SUL, developed to a large extent by German, Italian, and Slavic immigrants, also have processing based on the cotton, the hogs, and the cattle grown there Industry is, however, most strikingly developed in the city of São Paulo itself The people of São Paulo state have also continued frontier development not only in the state itself with the development of such frontier cities as Marília but also to the northwest in MATO GROSSO That state lies almost entirely on the plateau but falls in the west to the marshy flood plain of the Paraguay river on the Paraguay border It is still largely devoted to stock raising. Mate and quebracho also are exported, and the mineral development begun with gold in the 17th cent. is being continued with the exploitation of manganese around CORUMBÁ Agriculture is still largely a matter of farms around the capital, CUIABÁ, and the other cities, and there has been some argument as to how much the soil can yield, but Mato Grosso is progressing, the railroad to Bolivia crosses the state and the frontier of settlement is being pushed W from São Paulo. No such growth is yet taking place in the neighboring GOIÁS, to the east Despite mineral wealth, that rough inland state has been largely left untouched, and the mountains cutting the plateau are in the main unpeopled. Yet, with an ambitious eye to the future, Brazilians have planned at some time to put the capital of the country in this unexploited land The aggressive development and economic planning characteristic of Brazil today is in sharp contrast to the beginnings of Brazilian history, when the vast land lay neglected Whether or not it was known to Portuguese navigators in the 15th cent is still an unsolved problem, but the coast was visited by the Spanish mariner Vicente Yáñez PINZÓN before the Portuguese under Pedro Alvares CABRAL in 1500 claimed the land, which came within the Portuguese sphere as defined in the Treaty of Tordesillas (1494) Little was done to support the claim, though early woodcutters gathered the brazilwood that is supposed from its red color [Port brasa=glowing coal] to have given the name to the country as well as to the mythical Atlantic island The first permanent settlement was not made until 1532, and that was at SÃO VICENTE in São Paulo Development of the Northeast, which was to bear the colonial economic burden, was begun about the same time under Martin Afonso de SOUSA as first royal governor, 12 captaincies were established, stretching inland from the Brazilian coast Portuguese claims, somewhat lackadaisically administered, did not go unchallenged French Huguenots established themselves on an island in Rio de Janeiro harbor and were routed by a force under Mem de SÁ in 1567 The Dutch made their first attack on Bahia in 1632, and though this was not successful, the vigorous Dutch West India Company was able after 1632 to capture and hold not only Bahia and Recife but the whole of the Northeast, which was ably governed by Maurice of Nassau No aid was forthcoming from Portugal, which had been combined with Spain in 1580 and did not regain its independence until 1640 It was a naval expedition from Rio itself that drove the Dutch forth in 1654, and the success of the colonists helped to build up self-confidence among the settlers The Spanish also had played some part in the opening of Brazil, as in the voyage of Francisco de Orellana down the Amazon, and the western boundary of Brazil was the subject of perpetual dispute The Portuguese also had ambitions to control the Banda Oriental (present Uruguay) and in the 18th cent came into conflict with the Spanish there, the matter was not completely settled even by the independence of Uruguay in 1828 Meanwhile the sugar culture had come to full flower in the Northeast, where the plantations were furnishing most of the sugar demanded by Europe The native Indians were not suited to the backbreaking labor of the cane fields, and Negro slaves were imported in large numbers. They supplied not only labor but also one of the constituent elements of modern Brazil's population Dangerous dependence on a one-crop economy was somewhat lightened by the mines of the interior, particularly of Minas Gerais, where gold was discovered late in the 17th cent Mining towns sprang up, and Rio de Janeiro became an important harbor The weight of influence began to swing south, and by 1763 Rio de Janeiro supplanted Bahia as the capital Frontier development was slow, and there was some discontent The intellectual stirrings in Europe that preceded the French Revolution and the successful American Revolution brought on an abortive plot for independence among a small group of intellectuals in Minas; the plot was discovered and the leader, José da Silva Xavier called Tiradentes [tooth puller], was put to death Independence was to wait. With the Napoleonic invasion of Portugal, the king of Portugal, JOHN VI, had to flee (1807), and on his arrival (1808) in Rio de Janeiro that city became the capital of the Portuguese Empire The ports of the colony were freed of mercantilist restrictions, and Brazil took on great importance The king returned to Portugal, leaving his son behind as regent, but the Brazilians were not content to return to colonial status When pressure was brought by Portugal, the young prince acceded to the demands voiced by José BONIFÁCIO and on Sept 27, 1822, on the banks of the little Ipiranga (or Ypiranga) river uttered the "cry" of independence He became PEDRO I, emperor of Brazil, and thus easily was independence achieved Pedro, however, continued to be concerned with Portuguese affairs, and his rule in Brazil aroused increasing dissatisfaction In 1831 he had to abdicate in favor of his son, PEDRO II The reign of this popular and dashing emperor saw the foundation of modern Brazil Ambitions directed toward the south were responsible for involving the country in the war against the Argentine dictator, Juan Manuel de Rosas, and again in the War of the Triple Alliance directed against Paraguay Brazil drew little benefit from either, and far more important were the beginnings of large-scale European immigration which was to make SE Brazil the economic heart of the nation Railroads and roads were opened, today the region has an excellent transportation net The plantation culture of the Northeast was already crumbling by the 1870s, and the growth of the movement to abolish slavery, spurred by such men as Antonio de Castro Alves and Joaquim Nabuco, threatened it more The slave trade was abolished in 1850, and a law for gradual emancipation was passed in 1871 When Pedro II was in Europe and his unpopular daughter was governing Brazil, complete abolition was adopted in 1888 The planters thereupon abandoned the empire, and the growing republican movement triumphed By a bloodless revolution of 1889 the republic was established with Deodoro da Fonseca as first president The rivalry of the states and the power of the army in government, especially under much-hated Floriano Peixoto, caused the political situation to remain uneasy The expanding market for Brazilian coffee and more particularly the wild-rubber boom brought considerable wealth as the 19th cent ended, but the dangers of dependence on a single product were shown only too clearly when the creation of rubber plantations in the Far East brought the wild-rubber boom to a halt and left the whole Amazon region to decline after 1912 Brazil took part with the Allies in the First World War, declaring war in Oct., 1917, and shared in the peace settlement, but later (1926) withdrew from the League of Nations The flood of immigration reached its crest after the First World War, and Brazil was undisputed coffee queen of the world Again the collapse of the staple crop brought disaster This was reflected in politics A revolution in 1930 ended by placing Getulio VARGAS in power By changing the constitution (notably in 1937) and establishing a type of corporative state he centralized government and began a forced development of basic industries and diversification of agriculture His dictatorial rule, however, awaked much opposition and brought revolts The Second World War brought a new boom to Brazil, which joined the Allies on Aug 22, 1942, and under the leadership of Oswaldo Aranha took a large part in inter-American affairs. Brazilian products, such as rubber and minerals, were in great demand, and U S money was advanced to hasten the development of industry and diversified agriculture This cooperation continued after the war and after Vargas was overthrown (Oct., 1945) by a military coup d'état and Gen Eurico Gaspar DUTRA was elected president See H G James, Brazil after a Century of Independence (1925), João Pandiá Calogeras, A History of Brazil (Eng tr, 1939), Donald Pierson, Negroes in Brazil (1942), Gilberto Freyre, Brazil an Interpretation (1946, lectures at Indiana Univ) and The Masters and the Slaves (Eng tr., 1946), P E James, Brazil (1946), Lawrence F Hill, ed, Brazil (1947), George Wythe and others, Brazil an Expanding Economy (1949), B H Hunnicutt, Brazil World Frontier (1950), Fernando de Azevedo, Brazilian Culture (1950)

Brazil, city (pop 8,126), co seat of Clay co, W Ind, near Terre Haute In a mining area, it produces coal, brick, and tile It is a railroad center

Brazilian literature. The Portuguese had scarcely arrived in Brazil when they sat down to describe the wonders of the new and tropic land, creating a literature about Brazil. In this sense Brazilian literature may therefore be said to have begun in the middle of the 16th cent with the works of the Jesuit José de Anchieta, who wrote descriptions of the land in Portuguese and at the same time wrote for his Indian converts in their own tongue Other missionaries also penned descriptions and reports, and the plantation life of Brazil's Northeast was by the end of the 16th cent being enlivened with the writing of epics and satires These were modeled closely on the literary styles of peninsular Portuguese but are of interest to modern critics because of the new and local aspects, the growing "Brazilianism" in their works In the 17th cent when classicism was reigning in Portugal and the influence of the Spanish Góngora and Quevedo was strong, a young man from Bahia, Gregório de Matos Guerra, earned a name for himself by savage satiric attacks on all and sundry, and a Jesuit priest, Antonio Vieira (born in Portugal but brought to Brazil when a child) wrote so ably that he is considered by many the true master of Portuguese prose in the classic style In the 18th cent the Portuguese dramatist Antonio José da Silva, more commonly called simply O Judeu [the Jew], was born in Rio de Janeiro Late in that century a whole group of poets appeared in Minas Gerais, the most notable José Basilio da Gama, who wrote Uruguay, an epic on the campaign of the Portuguese against the Jesuit reductions in the Río de la Plata region, and Tomás Antonio Gonzaga, who wrote charmingly of pastoral love in his poem Marilia de Dirceo (1792) and bitterly of politics in Cartas chilenas (not published until 1845) The group also had something to do with introducing revolutionary ideas from France into Brazil, and thereafter the influence of France grew stronger and that of Portugal weaker With the coming of romanticism and its accent on nature, individual liberty, and highly personal lyrics, "Brazilianism" increased, and it is notable that the "founder" of Brazilian political independence, José Bonifácio, was also the author of romantic poems The romantic era in Brazilian letters is, however, generally dated a little later, from the appearance in 1836 of volumes of poetry by Domingos José Gonçalves de Magalhães, visconde de Araguaia, and by Manuel de Araujo Pôrto-Alegre It reached its apogee with the poetry of Antonio Gonçalves Dias, author of many lyrics (notably a much-quoted poem in praise of Brazil) and of an epic poem on the Indians A number of young poets sang sweetly (e g , Alvares de Azevedo) or vigorously (e g , Antonio de Castro Alves, who with Joaquim Nabuco led in the fight for abolition of slavery) Romanticism also brought the novel to flower José de Alencar idealized the Brazilian Indian in O Guarani (1857) and the later Iracema A somewhat more realistic note was struck by Alfredo d'Escragnolle Taunay in his noted novel Inocência (1872) Even more realistic was the earlier Memórias de um sargento de milicias (2 vols , 1854 55) by Manuel Antonio de Almeida This work was a forerunner of the realistic novels of the man generally considered the greatest of all Brazilian writers, Joaquim Maria Machado de Assis Pessimistic and yet humorous, the works of the great mulatto writer picture the evils of society without any attempt at reforming them Iaiá Garcia (1878), Memorias postumas de Braz Cubas (1881), Quincas Borba (1891), and Dom Casmurro (1900) all are generally accepted as masterpieces Contemporary with Machado de Assis were the Parnassian poets of Brazil, headed by Olavo Bilac, whose elegant word use and delicate music have kept his poems alive today The literature of the later 20th cent has dealt not with such art but with the material used by Machado de Assis, the interest has been more sociological, and the concern with Brazil and the distinctively Brazilian mixture of white, Indian, and Negro strains has been intensified The account of a pitiful uprising against the government is the basis for Euclides da Cunha's masterly picture of Brazilian problems in Os sertões (1902, Eng tr., Rebellion in the Backlands, 1944) The novels of José Pereira da Graça Aranha – the best known of them Canaan (1902)—also view the problems of Brazil gloomily Preoccupation with those same difficulties has distinguished the splendid sociological works of Gilberto Freyre, the judicious utterances of Ruy Barbosa, and the writings of present-day proletarian authors Jorge Amado and José Lins do Rego Even a Parisian-born art for art's sake movement called modernism, which rose in the 1920s, had a strong sociological bias The more conservative writers such as Erico Veríssimo, very well known in the United States, and the poets such as Jorge de Lima also are concerned with social questions, though political, psychological, philosophic, and religious interests make the views of Brazilian writers of today vary as widely as those of any other land See Isaac Goldberg, Brazilian Literature (1922), William Rex Crawford, A Century of Latin American Thought (1944), Erico Veríssimo, Brazilian Literature an Outline (1945), Samuel Putnam, Marvelous Journey (1948)

Brazil nut, seed of a tall, symmetrical tree of tropical America (Bertholletia excelsa) The tree is found especially in Brazil along the Amazon river and also grows plentifully along the Orinoco It attains a height of 100 to 120 ft and bears enormous glossy leaves The blossoms are cream colored, and the nuts are borne in a round woody seed pod as large as a man's head and so hard as to require the blow of a hammer to break it The nuts, 18 to 24 in a pod, packed radially together, are large, angular, and wrinkled, with hard, dark brown shell The meat is white, sweet, and very rich in oil

brazilwood, name given to several woods yielding a red dye, as the East Indian sapanwood (the first of the brazilwoods imported into Europe) and the South American redwoods The bright red wood takes a high polish and is used in cabinetwork and for violin bows Brazil is said to have acquired its name from a redwood resembling the Eastern brazilwood and found on the South American coast

brazing see SOLDER

Brazoria (brəzôr'ēə), town (pop c 900), S Texas, on the Brazos and SSW of Houston Founded in the 1820s, it was a thriving port in Stephen F Austin's colony and later a center of plantations in the Brazos bottom lands before it lost the county seat to Angleton and decline set in Time and hurricane ruined the old town, which was abandoned after present Brazoria was built on the railroad near by

Brazos (brä'zōs), river rising in "draws" on the Llano Estacado in E New Mexico and NW Texas The main headwater, the Double Mountain Fork, joins the Salt Fork, and the united stream is joined by the Clear Fork The general course of more than 800 mi is SE through Waco to the Gulf of Mexico at Freeport The rich "Brazos bottoms" of the Gulf Coast region supported many plantations in the early days of Texas The waters of the river and its tributaries are impounded for many municipal reservoirs In recent years the Brazos River Conservation District has developed projects for irrigation, flood control, and power, notably Possum Kingdom Dam (190 ft high and 2,740 ft long, completed 1940) near Graham and Whitney Dam near Hillsboro

Brazza, Pierre Paul François Camille Savorgnan de (pyĕr' pôl' fräswä' kämē'yu savôrnyä' du bräza'), 1852–1905, Franco-Italian explorer, whose real name was Conte Pietro Paolo Savorgnan di Brazza After a visit to the Gabun in West Africa (1873–74), he explored the Ogowe (1875) and discovered affluents of the Congo On his return to France he became naturalized, and the foreign office sent him back to Africa (1875) to establish French influence in Equatoria He founded Franceville (1880) at the confluence of the Ogowe and the Passa, reached Stanley Pool on the Congo, where he founded Brazzaville (1880), and made a treaty with Makoko, the Bateke king, over whose territory he established a French protectorate He proceeded down the Congo and met H M Stanley, who, on behalf of the International African Association, was also concluding treaties with native chiefs Brazza established a post on the Alima (1881) and, descending the Niari, returned to France (1882) In 1884 he returned to West Africa as commissioner and continued organizing France's new possessions until his recall in 1897

Brazza, island, Yugoslavia see BRAČ

Brazzaville (brä'zuvĭl, Fr brazavēl'), city (pop c 50,000), capital of French Equatorial Africa, on the Stanley Pool of the Congo It was founded in 1880 by the French explorer Brazza, for whom it is named It is opposite Leopoldville, and it is connected by rail with Pointe Noire on the coast Palm-oil products, hardwoods, and rubber are exported

Brea (brā'ə), city (pop 2,567), S Calif , SE of Los Angeles, in an oil and citrus fruit area, inc 1917

bread, universal article of food made by mixing crushed or ground grains, cereals, or other seeds with liquid and then baking The first bread may have been acorns or beechnuts crushed, mixed with water, and dried in the sun Breadmaking was an organized industry in ancient Egypt Grain was ground, mixed with water, and "breadmash" added as LEAVEN The Bible mentions leavened and unleavened bread The unleavened, or Passover, bread was, as it is today, like a plain water cracker Through the ages the importance of bread has been demonstrated by bread riots and by subjecting breadmaking to regulations, often harsh and restrictive, controlling adulteration, weight, and price Bakers' guilds were early established in Europe Breadmaking, formerly an activity of the household or the small bakery, has become, especially in the United States, a huge industry carried on in highly specialized and scientifically conducted plants In Western civilizations the staple bakery product is yeast bread made from wheat flour, either white (bolted) or entire (as in brown, graham, or whole-wheat bread) The standard white bread of the United States is made of flour, liquid, yeast, shortening, sugar, and salt Milk improves the flavor, nutritive value, and keeping qualities In the straight dough process, all ingredients are combined at one time, in the sponge and dough method, part of the flour is mixed with liquid and yeast, allowed to rise, and then combined with the remaining ingredients Nutritionists have recommended the use of whole-wheat breads, which provide valuable B vitamins and minerals, although they warn that bran may form roughage too coarse for some digestive tracts Wartime shortages gave impetus to the practice of enriching white bread with thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, iron, and sometimes milk solids and vitamin D Other flours used for bread, either alone or combined with wheat flour, include rye, barley, maize, buckwheat, sorghum, millet, potato, soybean, cassava, and rice Pumpernickel, a nourishing and somewhat acid rye bread, the staple of Westphalian peasants, is now widely made Corn meal is an ingredient of many breads, such as the Southern johnnycake and spoon bread (batter bread) and the unleavened Spanish-American tortilla, baked on a heated iron or stone See H C Sherman, Modern Bread from the Viewpoint of Nutrition (1942), L P DeGouy, The Bread Tray (1944), S C Prescott and B E Proctor, Food Technology (1937)

Breadalbane, John Campbell, 1st earl of see CAMPBELL, JOHN, 1ST EARL OF BREADALBANE

Breadalbane (brĕdôl'bān), picturesque, little-cultivated mountainous district, Perthshire, Scotland Its chief town is Aberfeldy

breadfruit, tropical tree (Artocarpus communis) and its fruit, for which it is cultivated The large, round fruits are a staple food in the tropics The cultivated kinds, generally seedless, are used in various ways, they are often baked and then they somewhat resemble bread A form with fertile seeds is called breadnut The wood, fiber, and a sticky substance of the tree are also variously utilized Breadfruit was introduced from Polynesia into the West Indies in the late 18th cent , the Bounty was carrying plants to Jamaica when the famous mutiny occurred

Bread Loaf Mountain, peak, 3,823 ft high, W Vt , E of Middlebury It is in a forest area belonging to Middlebury College, which holds here a summer session in writing and languages

breadroot or Indian breadroot, perennial plant (Psoralea esculenta) of the American prairies, valued by the Indians for the starchy tuberous root that was used as food The roots, sometimes recommended as a substitute for the potato, were dug in the summer and eaten raw or roasted, or they were dried for winter use in stews, puddings, and cakes The breadroot has bluish pealike blossoms and resembles in general the lupine, but usually may be distinguished by tiny dots in the foliage

Breakspear, Nicholas see ADRIAN IV

breakwater, a structure built to protect a harbor from the full force of waves and provide relatively quiet anchorage for ships The Isle of Wight forms a natural breakwater for Portsmouth and Southampton harbors Artificial breakwaters are generally of one of three types, a simple rock or concrete block mound, a rock foundation with a masonry superstructure, or a solid superstructure of masonry or concrete built straight up from the sea floor All breakwaters must be given constant attention, for a small hole rapidly becomes a large one When wood was very cheap in the United States, effective breakwaters were made on the large lakes, by floating wooden frames into a desired position and then filling them with loose rock until they sank One of the large breakwaters on the east coast of the United States is the Delaware breakwater

Bréal, Michel Jules Alfred (mēshĕl' zhül' älfrĕd' brāäl'), 1832–1915, French philologist He is best known for his Essai de semantique (1897), which gave great impetus to scientific interest in the field of semantics breast, anterior aspect of the frontal portion of the chest or thorax In man and in some other mammals, mammary glands develop on the chest wall, in the female these are capable of secreting milk Mammary gland tissue is composed of from 15 to 20 lobes resembling small bunches of grapes, ducts from these lead to the nipple Up to the time of puberty the mammary tissue remains undeveloped in both sexes At the onset of menstruation with its associated production of ovarian hormones, the female breast begins to develop During pregnancy, the glandular tissue becomes greatly distended After the birth of a child, milk is secreted by the mammary glands Development of mammary glands in the male is known as gynecomastia Pathology of the breast includes abscess, inflammation, cyst formation, and tumors (both benign and malignant) Tumors of the breast demand immediate surgery

Breasted, James Henry (brĕ'stĭd), 1865–1935, American Egyptologist, b Rockford, Ill , grad North Central College, 1888, M A Yale, 1890, Ph D Univ of Berlin, 1894 He began teaching at the Univ of Chicago in 1894 and was (1905–33) professor of Egyptology and Oriental history there He was also director of the Haskell Oriental Museum and after 1919 director of the Oriental Institute of the Univ of Chicago He made archaeological discoveries of great importance in Egypt and directed researches in Mesopotamia Besides many reports and monographs, he wrote some general works, including The Development of Religion and Thought in Ancient Egypt (1912) and The Dawn of Conscience (1933) Two of his textbooks were Ancient Times (1916, rev ed , The Conquest of Civilization, 1926) and History of Egypt from the Earliest Times to the Persian Conquest (1905) He translated and edited Egyptian historical sources in Ancient Records of Egypt (5 vols., 1906–7). Breas-ted's careful chronological system for ancient Egypt is widely accepted and is used in The Columbia Encyclopedia. His son, Charles Breasted, wrote a memoir of him, Pioneer to the Past (1943)

breathing: see RESPIRATION

Breaux Bridge (brō' brĭj), town (pop. 1,668), S La., WSW of Baton Rouge, in an area growing sugar cane, cotton, and vegetables, inc 1871 A large Negro settlement and a state park are near by Brébeuf, Jean de (zhäⁿ' dŭ brăbûf'), 1593–1649, French Roman Catholic missionary, one of the Jesuit martyrs of North America A Norman, he was sent to Quebec in 1625 and did missionary work among the Huron Indians The warfare of Huron and Iroquois caused the abandonment of his mission in 1628, and in 1629 on the surrender of Quebec to the English he went back to France In 1633 he returned to Canada and carried on his work among the Indians, enduring great hardships In 1649 the Iroquois took the Huron village and the mission Father Brébeuf and his colleague, Father Gabriel LALEMANT, were tortured to death He is one of the Martyrs of North America, canonised in 1930 Feast, Sept 26 or (among the Jesuits) March 16 See biography by F. X. Talbot (1949).

Brèche de Roland (brĕsh' dŭ rōläⁿ'), narrow gorge, SW France, in the central Pyrenees Its altitude is 9,170 ft It leads into the Cirque de GAVARNIE. Legend has it that Roland created the breach by smiting the rock with his sword

Brechin (brĕ'kĭn, -khĭn), burgh (pop 6,840), Angus, Scotland Its cathedral, part of which dates from the 12th cent., has an earlier round tower Brechin Castle, the seat of the Maule family, was taken (1303) by Edward I after a three-week siege The burgh's industries are linen and jute weaving and whisky distilling

Brecht, Bert (Bertolt Brecht) (bĕrt' brĕkht'; bĕr'-tôlt), 1898–, German dramatist and poet. He left Germany in 1933 and went to Russia, where he edited (1936–39) the Wort, an anti-Nazi magazine He came to the United States in 1941 His plays include Trommeln in der Nacht [drums in the night] (1923), Dreigroschenoper (with music by Kurt Weill, 1928), an adaptation of The Beggar's Opera and in turn adapted into English as The Three-Penny Opera (1933); and The Private Life of the Master Race (1944), a collection of one-act plays with an essay on Brecht by E R Bentley. He has written several books of ballads, the best of which is Hauspostille (1927). He is considered a leading expressionist writer

Breck, George William, 1863–1920, American mural painter, b Washington, D C He studied at the Art Students League of New York and (through a scholarship) at the American Academy in Rome (1897–1902), he was later director of the academy, 1904–9 His best-known works include a replica of Raphael's School of Athens in the auditorium of the Univ of Virginia, three symbolical medallions for the library of Whitelaw Reid, mosaics in St Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Rome, and two historical murals in the Flower Memorial Library, Watertown, N Y

Breck, James Lloyd, 1818–76, American Episcopal clergyman and missionary, b. Philadelphia, grad. Univ of Pennsylvania, 1838, and General Theological Seminary, New York city, 1841 In 1841 he established a seminary at Nashotah, Wis, with which he was connected until 1850, when he turned to missionary work among the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota In 1858, with Bishop Henry B Whipple, he founded at Faribault, Minn, the Seabury Divinity School and church schools for boys and girls. See T. I. Holcombe, An Apostle of the Wilderness (1903)

Breckenridge, Hugh Henry, 1870–1937, American painter, b Leesburg, Va He taught for many years in the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and was secretary of its faculty He had his own school in Gloucester, Mass Best known as a portrait painter, he also in later years painted abstractions

Breckenridge, Sophonisba Preston, 1866–1948, American pioneer social worker, educator, and author, b. Lexington, Ky, grad Wellesley, 1888, Ph.D. Univ. of Chicago, 1901 She was the first woman to be admitted (1897) to the bar in Kentucky, but abandoned the practice of law to enter social work at Hull House, Chicago, and to teach public welfare and administration at the Univ of Chicago after 1902 She was professor of social economy (1925–29) and then professor of public welfare from 1929 until her retirement in 1933. In 1934 she was president of the American Association of Schools of Social Work President Roosevelt sent her (1933) as a delegate to the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo, Uruguay, the first woman to represent the United States at an international conference Her published works include The Delinquent Child and the Home (with Edith Abbott, 1912), Family Welfare in a Metropolitan Community (1924), Public Welfare Administration in a Metropolitan Community (1927), and Women in the Twentieth Century (1933).

Breckenridge, 1 City (pop. 2,745), co. seat of Wilkin co, W Minn, on the Red River opposite Wahpeton, N.Dak., and W of Fergus Falls; laid out 1857, inc. 1908. It is a railroad center in a farm area. 2 City (1940 pop 5,826, 1947 estimated pop. 8,000), co. seat of Stephens co, N Texas, on Gonzales Creek and W of Fort Worth, settled 1876, inc. 1919 Its industries grew largely after oil and gas fields were discovered, but it is also a processing and manufacturing center for ranches and farms.

Breckinridge, John, 1760–1806, American statesman, b Augusta co, Va; grandfather of John Cabell Breckinridge John Breckinridge was educated at William and Mary College, and after he was admitted (1785) to the bar, he practiced law in Charlottesville, Va Elected (1792) to the U.S Congress, he soon resigned and removed to Lexington, Ky He was (1795–97) attorney general of the new state, and as a member (1798–1801) of the state legislature he secured (1798) the enactment of the Kentucky Resolutions (see KENTUCKY AND VIRGINIA RESOLUTIONS)—which Jefferson had drafted with Breckinridge's advice Breckinridge also prepared the stronger resolutions passed in the Kentucky legislature the next year in answer to the criticisms of the earlier resolutions. In the U S Senate (1801–5) he was a leading spokesman of Western interests and played an important role in the passage of legislation bringing about the Louisiana Purchase. He was appointed U.S. Attorney General by President Jefferson in 1805 and died in office

Breckinridge, John Cabell, 1821–75, Vice President of the United States and Confederate general, b Lexington, Ky, grad. Centre College, 1839 He studied law at Transylvania Univ and in 1845 began to practice in Lexington. Breckinridge served in the state legislature (1849–51) and in the House of Representatives (1851–55) He was chosen by the Democrats in 1856 as a Southern running mate for Buchanan As Vice President in a difficult period he distinguished himself by dignified and impartial presiding over the Senate When a division within the Democratic ranks occurred in 1860, he became the presidential candidate of the Southern faction. Breckinridge said that the territories alone had the right to determine the status of slavery within their borders Believing in secession as a right, he nevertheless disapproved of the course at that time He received 72 electoral votes in the November election. During the remainder of his term as Vice President, he attempted to secure the adoption of some compromise As Senator (elected 1859) in the special session of 1861 he consistently opposed Lincoln's war policy He failed in efforts to have Kentucky call a convention to act on secession When the state declared for the Union in Sept, 1861, Breckinridge offered his services to the Confederacy. Appointed brigadier general in Oct, 1861, he served with distinction throughout the war, mostly in the West On Feb 4, 1865, he was made secretary of war for the Confederacy When the South surrendered, Breckinridge fled to Europe via Cuba but was permitted to return in 1868 He devoted himself thereafter to private interests in Lexington See biography by Lucille Stillwell (1936)

Brecknock (brĕk'nŏk, -nuk) or Brecon (brĕk'un), municipal borough (pop 16,493), co seat of Brecknockshire, Wales, at the confluence of the Honddu with the Usk river and surrounded by hills It is of very early date Its castle, of which only fragments remain, was built in the 11th cent, Christ College, in the suburb Llanfaes, was founded in 1541 The priory church of St John (11th cent) became a cathedral in 1923 The city is a cattle market

Brecknockshire (brĕk'nŏkshĭr) or Brecon (brĕk'ŭn), inland county (733 sq mi, 1931 pop 57,775, 1948 estimated pop 53,802), S Wales The county town is Brecknock The region is mountainous, rising to its greatest height in the Brecon Beacons (2,910 ft) The river valleys (the Usk and the Wye) afford good sheep grazing, which, with dairy farming, constitutes the chief occupation of the county. Some coal and iron are mined near the southern border, and limestone is quarried There are iron and woolen manufactures The county was seized from the Welsh princes by the Normans in 1092 and was organised on the English shire system in 1536

Brecksville, village (pop 1,900), NE Ohio, S of Cleveland, in a farm area, settled c 1811, inc 1921

Brecon, Wales see BRECKNOCK; BRECKNOCKSHIRE

Breda (brädä'), municipality (pop 84,496) and town, North Brabant prov, SW Netherlands, 27 mi. SSE of Rotterdam. There are machine shops, foundries, and rayon and other manufactures. It has a 13th-century Gothic church (Groote Kerk) and a castle now serving as military academy and is the see of a Roman Catholic bishop Breda was besieged by the Spanish under Spinola for almost a year, the surrender (1625) of its heroic garrison was painted by Velásques.

Breda, Compromise of, 1566: see GUEUX.

Breda, Declaration of, 1660: see CHARLES II, king of England.

Breda, Treaty of, 1667. see DUTCH WARS.

Bredero, Gerbrand Adriaenszoon (hĕr'brănt ädrē-än'sōn brä'dĕrō), 1585–1618, Dutch dramatist. His masterpiece, De Spaansche Brabander [the Spaniard from Brabant] (1617), is a realistic comedy of Amsterdam life.

Bree, Mattheus Ignatius van (mätt'ēŏs ĭgnä'tsĭŏs vän brā'), 1773–1839, Flemish historical and portrait painter. In 1827 he became director of the Antwerp Academy. He is best known for such historical paintings as Death of Rubens (Antwerp).

breeding of plants and animals refers to the purposeful selection of certain parent organisms for propagation in order to improve the breed, variety, or strain. Selective breeding has been carried on by man to some extent since the domestication of plants and animals in the Neolithic period. In early Chinese civilizations rice crops were improved by selection, and in the early Indian civilizations of North and South America corn was thus improved Cattle, horses, dogs, and other useful animals were long bred by selection Breeding began to be established on a more scientific basis after the promulgation of the laws of inheritance by Gregor Mendel. Among plants, pure lines are established by self-pollinating a plant and planting the seed which it produces The choice plants are then self-pollinated and the process is repeated through a number of generations until a strain is developed which shows little variation In recent years it has been found that by making crosses between such established pure lines pure-line hybrids can be developed which have greater vigor than the pure lines and still retain uniformity of characters In the United States much of the corn is produced from pure-line hybrid seed. Animals are said to be pure bred if in the breeding strain desirable characters are transmitted through generations with a uniformity approaching that shown by pure-line plants The strains result from a series of crosses which involve considerable inbreeding. To prevent loss of vigor and reproductivity it is necessary to avoid too many crosses between very closely related animals Crosses are therefore made between strains within a breed and sometimes between certain breeds Within recent years artificial insemination has been employed, chiefly in breeding beef cattle, sheep, and hogs In this method the semen, which contains the sperm cells, is obtained from superior males, and after being diluted it can be used to inseminate many females Modern breeders of all animals select both parents with care Methods of developing new breeds and varieties of established breeds are chiefly hybridization and the breeding of individuals in which mutations occur by chance See also DOMESTICATION; GENETICS, HEREDITY.

Breed's Hill see BUNKER HILL, BATTLE OF

Breese (brēz), city (pop 2,206), S Ill, E of St Louis, in a farm and coal area, inc 1905

Bregenz (brā'gĕnts), city (pop 20,720), capital of Vorarlberg, W Austria, on the Lake of Constance It has large textile manufactures

Breisach (brī'zäkh), town (pop 2,093), S Baden, SW Germany, on the Rhine, in a wine district Fortified since Roman times and an imperial city after 1275, it long was a coveted prize because of its strategic position BERNHARD OF SAXE-WEIMAR took it in 1638 Louis XIV, who secured it for France in the Peace of Westphalia (1648), ceded it back to the emperor by the Treaty of Ryswick (1697), but built a new fort, Neuf-Brisach, on the opposite side of the Rhine The French held Breisach in 1703–14, recaptured it in 1744 and razed its fortifications, burned it in 1793, and gave it to Baden in 1805 Breisach was heavily damaged in the Second World War

Breisgau (brīs'gou), region, S Baden, SW Germany, including Freiburg and Lörrach dist After the extinction (1218) of the first house of ZÄHRINGEN, it was divided among various heirs, most of it passing to the Hapsburgs in 1368. Austria ceded it to Baden in 1805

Breit, Gregory (brīt), 1899–, American physicist, b Russia, grad Johns Hopkins, 1918 He came to the United States in 1915 and was naturalized in 1918. He taught in several universities and served with Carnegie Institution (as mathematical physicist from 1924 to 1929 and as research associate from 1929) From 1934 to 1947 he was professor of physics at the Univ of Wisconsin He took an active part in the uranium research program during the years 1940–43 and in research on the proximity fuse (1942–43) and related ballistics problems (1943–45)

Breitenfeld (brī'tunfĕlt"), village, Saxony, SE Germany, near Leipzig It gave its name to two battles in the Thirty Years War. Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden defeated the imperials under Tilly and Pappenheim in 1631, and the Swedes under Torstensson routed the imperials under Archduke Leopold William in 1642

Breithorn (brīt'hôrn), peak, 13,685 ft. high, Valais, Switzerland, in the Alps on the Italian border.

Breitmann, Hans: see LELAND, CHARLES.

Bremen (brā'mun, brĕ'-, Ger brā'mŭn), state (156 sq mi., 1948 estimated pop. 520,000), N Germany, on the North Sea about the mouth of the Weser. Its fortunes are those of its capital, the free Hansa city of Bremen (1948 estimated pop c 420,000), second largest port and an industrial and commercial center of Germany. Created in 825, the archdiocese under Archbishop ADALBERT (11th cent) included all Scandinavia, Iceland, and

Greenland. The archbishops held temporal sway over a large area between the Weser and the Elbe, but the city of Bremen itself was virtually independent as its importance grew It became in 1385 one of the leading members of the HANSEATIC LEAGUE, later accepted the Reformation, and in 1646 was made a free imperial city It was not affected when the archbishopric was assigned to Sweden by the Peace of Westphalia (1648) and ceded (1719) by Sweden to the elector of Hanover (George I of England). The city's trade—in later days particularly with the United States—grew and was encouraged by the founding (1827) of BREMERHAVEN and the establishment of the chief German shipping company, the Norddeutscher Lloyd. The "republic and Hansa city" of Bremen was a member of the German Empire and then of the Weimar Republic It was heavily damaged by 173 allied air raids in the Second World War Under U.S. occupation, Bremen and Bremerhaven were combined in a state, which in 1949 adhered to the West German state under the Bonn constitution Among the monuments of the city are the Gothic city hall (15th cent) and the statue of Roland, erected in 1404 as a symbol of the city's freedom, the Cathedral of Sankt Petri (begun 1043), and two partially destroyed churches—the Liebfrauenkirche (13th cent) and the Johanneskirche (14th cent). Many medieval buildings were destroyed

Bremen (brĕ'mun). 1 Industrial city (pop 1,708), NW Ga., W of Atlanta near the Ala line, inc 1883 Clothing is made here 2 Town (pop 2,179), N Ind , 88E of South Bend, in the mint-growing region 3 Village (pop 1,176), S central Ohio, on Rush Creek and E of Lancaster Glass products are made here

Bremer, Fredrika (frēdrē'ku brā'mur), 1801–65, Swedish writer, b Finland In her lifetime she was well known for her novels, but she is remembered more as a feminist, a Swedish women's organization is named after her Her early novels include The H Family (1829) and The President's Daughters (1834). Between 1849 and 1851 she traveled in America, recording her impressions in Homes in the New World (1853), a selection of the letters in this book was published as America of the Fifties (ed by A B Benson, 1924) Her later novels, such as Hertha (1856), deal with the emancipation of woman

Bremerhaven (brā'mūrhä'fun), city (pop 100,004), Bremen, N Germany, port on the North Sea at the mouth of the Weser Founded in 1827 by Mayor Johann Smidt of Bremen, it was the transatlantic port of Bremen and prospered in the 19th cent In 1939 it incorporated Wesermünde, to the north, which was formed in 1924 out of two cities and was in the 1930s a leading German port

Bremerton (brĕm'urtun), city (pop 15,134), NW Wash , on an arm of Puget Sound, founded 1891, inc 1901 Seat of the great Puget Sound navy yard, its population trebled during the Second World War

Bremond (brĭmŏnd'), city (pop 1,106), E central Texas, SE of Waco, in a farming area, inc 1938

Brenau College. see GAINESVILLE, Ga

Brendan, Saint, d 577?, Irish abbot of Clonfert, Co Galway A popular medieval story told how he traveled westward to wonderful islands—an Irish version of a widespread legend His feast is May 16 A different St Brendan (d 573) was a friend of Columba and founder of the monastery at Birr. The name is often written Brandon

Breneman, Abram Adam (brĕ'numun), 1847–1928, American chemist, b Lancaster, Pa , grad Pennsylvania State College, 1866 He was professor of chemistry at Pennsylvania State College (1869–72) and of industrial chemistry at Cornell Univ (1879–82) He discovered the Breneman process for making iron noncorrosive and was an authority on water analysis and the chemistry of ceramics

Brenham (brĕn'ŭm), city (pop 6,445), co seat of Washington co , S central Texas, NW of Houston, founded 1844 A center of rich Brazos valley plantations before the Civil War, it later became a solid German farm, dairy, and egg market with processing plants and small factories Blinn College (junior, coeducational) is here There are oil fields

Brennan, Alfred Laurens, 1853–1921, American illustrator, b Louisville, Ky He belonged to the group of highly skilled pen-and-ink artists which included Pennell, Abbey, and Blum His drawings, numbering over 7,000, are original and brilliant. See Joseph Pennell, Pen Drawing and Pen Draughtsmen (1920)

Brenner, Victor David, 1871–1924, American sculptor and medalist, b Russia, studied in Paris He came to the United States in 1890 The designs for the Lincoln penny, the seal of the New York Public Library, and portrait medallions of Theodore Roosevelt, Carl Schurz, and Whistler are among his works. He executed portrait tablets for Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, and for the Engineers' and the National Arts clubs, New York, portrait busts of Charles Eliot Norton for the Fogg Museum of Art, Cambridge, and of Samuel P. Avery for the Brooklyn Museum; and the Schenley Memorial Fountain, Pittsburgh.

Brenner Pass (brĕ'nŭr), Ital. Brennero (brĕn'nārō), Alpine pass, almost 4,500 ft high, connecting Innsbruck in Austria with Bolzano in Italy It was an important Roman route through which many invasions of Italy were made A carriage road was built in 1772, and the railroad was completed in 1867 The pass became the border between Italy and Austria after the First World War and was the scene of meetings between Hitler and Mussolini in 1940 and 1941

Brennus, fl c 389 B C , legendary Gallic leader He led his men in the pillage and siege of Rome His opponent was MANLIUS (Marcus Manlius Capitolinus) One legend of the capture of Rome tells that when the tribute the Romans had agreed to pay was being weighed a Roman complained Thereupon Brennus threw his sword on the scale, crying, "Vae victis!" [woe to the vanquished] His historical existence is dubious

Brennus, d 279 B C , Gallic leader He was in command of the band of Gauls (or Galatians) who invaded Greece in 279 B C. At first halted at Thermopylae, he later turned and took the pass He was wounded in an unsuccessful attack on Delphi and is supposed to have committed suicide on the northward retreat He is a shadowy figure

Brent, Charles Henry, 1862–1929, American Protestant Episcopal bishop, b Canada He was in 1901 consecrated first bishop of the missionary district of the Philippine Islands and was made bishop of W New York in 1918, he also served (1926–28) as bishop in charge of the American Protestant Episcopal churches in Europe Among his published works are The Mind of Christ (1908), The Sixth Sense (1911), Prisoners of Hope (1915), and The Mount of Vision (1918) See the selection by F W Kates, Things That Matter (1949)

Brent, Margaret, 1600–1671?, early American feminist With her two brothers and a sister, she left England to settle (1638) in St Mary's, Md , where she acquired an extensive estate, she was the first woman in Maryland to hold land in her own right Under the will of Gov Leonard Calvert, Margaret Brent was made executrix of his estates She also acted as attorney for Lord Baltimore As an important woman of affairs in the colony, she demanded (1648) a place in the colonial assembly Her claim was refused, and shortly thereafter she moved to Virginia but kept her Maryland estates See M E W Ramey, Chronicles of Mistress Margaret Brent (1915), E A Dexter, Colonial Women of Affairs (1924)

Brentano, Clemens (brĕnta'nō), 1778–1842, German poet, brother of Bettina von Arnim He lived a romantic, troubled life, both his career and his verse are in certain respects like those of Heine, who is indebted to him for the source of "Die Lorelei " A poet who cultivated the folk-song style, a dramatist, and author of fairy tales and such stories as Geschichte vom bravem Kasperl und dem schönen Annerl (1817, Eng tr , Honor, 1847), he is most important for the collaboration with his brother-in-law L J von Arnim which produced the folk-song collection Des Knaben Wunderhorn (1806–8) He is one of the first German romantics

Brentano, Elisabeth see ARNIM, BETTINA VON

Brentano, Franz (frants), 1838–1917, German philosopher and psychologist He was docent (1866–73) at Würzburg, where Stumpf was his student, and in 1874 he became professor of philosophy at Vienna In 1880 he retired to write and study His best-known book, Psychologie vom empirischen Standpunkte (1874), attempts to establish psychology as an independent science Brentano believed that mental processes were the data of psychology and were to be regarded as acts rather than as passive processes He influenced the Husserl school and Meinong

Brentano, Lujo (Ludwig Joseph Brentano) (lōō'yō, lōōt'vĭkh yō'zĕf), 1844–1931, German economist, nephew of Clemens Brentano An advocate of free trade and an economic system which would reconcile the profit motive with improved working conditions and wages for workers, he accompanied the statistician Ernst Engel to England in 1868 to study labor situations and trade unions His findings appeared in an introduction (reprinted 1870) to J T. Smith's English Gilds On Brentano's return to Germany he wrote a longer work on English guilds and trade unions, Die Arbeitergilden der Gegenwart (1871–72) From 1872 to 1917, he taught political economy successively at the universities of Breslau, Strasbourg, Vienna, Leipzig, and Munich

Brentford and Chiswick (chĭz'ĭk), municipal borough (1931 pop 62,618, 1947 estimated pop 60,160), Middlesex, England, where the Brent joins the Thames near London In 1016 Brentford was the scene of a defeat of the Danes by Edmund Ironside and, in 1642, of the royalists' victory over the parliamentarians Its industries include electrical engineering, the manufacture of pharmaceuticals, tires, and heating equipment, and shipping (the Grand Junction Canal terminates here) At Chiswick are Chiswick House, once the seat of the dukes of Devonshire, and the Church of St Nicholas, where Hogarth is buried William Morris lived and had his press here

Brentwood, urban district (pop 7,208), Essex, England It was early established in a wooded region on one of the main travel routes It has a grammar school founded in the mid-16th cent

Brentwood 1 Town (pop 2,433), W central Md , near Washington, D C , inc 1922 2 City (pop 4,383), E Mo , west suburb of St Louis, inc 1929 3 Residential borough (pop 7,552), W Pa., S of, and near, Pittsburgh, inc c 1915

Brescia (brĕ'shu, Ital brä'shä), city (pop 92,583), capital of Brescia prov , Lombardy, N Italy It is an industrial center with iron, steel, and machinery plants A Gallic town, it became a Roman stronghold, the seat of a Lombard duchy, and in the 12th cent an independent commune It suffered from internal and external strife, with constant change of rulers—among others, Verona, Milan, Venice, and Austria—until it united with Italy in 1860. In the 18th and 19th cent it was a revolutionary center, and in 1849 it heroically resisted the Austrians for 10 days The city has Roman remains, an 11th-century cathedral and a modern one, a medieval and a Renaissance town hall, and many baroque churches and palaces In the 16th cent there was a flourishing school of painting headed by G B MORONI and by MORETTO The city was heavily damaged during the Second World War

Breshkovsky, Catherine (brĕshkôf'skĭ), 1844–1934, Russian revolutionary, called "grandmother (babushka) of the Russian Revolution " The daughter of a noble family, she began on her father's estates the education of the peasants and other social reforms These, carried into a larger field, brought her over 30 years of imprisonment and of exile in Siberia Released from exile by Kerensky after the Revolution of 1917, she returned to Russia, but finding herself out of sympathy with the later Bolshevik regime, she left the country Her letters and memoirs were edited by Alice Stone Blackwell with the title Little Grandmother (1917) See her autobiographical Hidden Springs of the Russian Revolution (1931)

Breslau (brĕs'lou) or Wrocław, Pol Wrocław (vrôts'wäf), city (pop 170,656, 1939 pop 615,000), former capital of Lower Silesia, on the Oder and Ohle rivers It was transferred to Polish administration in 1945 (see SILESIA) Breslau probably was a Slavic settlement when, in the year 1000, it was made an episcopal see subordinate to the archbishop of Gniezno It became (1163) the capital of the duchy of Silesia, ruled by a branch of the Polish PIAST dynasty Sacked by the Mongols in 1241, Breslau was rebuilt by German settlers and developed as a trade center Passing (1335) to Bohemia, it came under Hapsburg rule in 1526, and went to Prussia in 1742 It grew considerably in the 19th cent , both in commercial and in industrial importance, and was the site of two large semiannual trade fairs There are metal, textile, food, and other industries Its university, founded in 1702, absorbed (1811) the university formerly at Frankfurt-an-der-Oder The city suffered heavy damage in the Second World War After 1945 the German inhabitants who had stayed behind were expelled and replaced by Poles The archiepiscopal see was left vacant after 1945 Breslau was made the capital of Wrocław prov (c 9,500 sq mi , pop 1,941,149), roughly equivalent to former Lower Silesia

Bressanone (brās-sänō'nā), Ger Brixen (brĭk'sun), town (pop 6,520), Trentino–Alto Adige, N Italy, on the Brenner road The town has a mixed German and Italian aspect Bressanone and its surrounding territories were ruled by prince-bishops from the 11th cent In 1803 the bishopric was secularized and passed to Austria as a part of TYROL The town passed to Italy with S Tyrol in 1919 Its many Gothic and baroque churches and monasteries give it a peculiarly religious atmosphere

Bressay (brĕs'ā), island (7,419 acres, pop 452), off N Scotland, one of the Shetland Islands It is E of Mainland island, with Bressay Sound between

Bresse (brĕs), region, E France, between the Ain and Saône rivers, now in Ain dept Bourg-en-Bresse is the capital A rich agricultural district, it is famous for its chickens and has splendid wines, e g , Moulin-à-Vent To the south is the Dombes, a district dotted with thousands of ponds, which is being gradually drained Bresse was part of the duchy of Savoy until 1601, when it was ceded to France along with Bugey (a district between the Ain and the Rhone) and the Pays de Gex All three were added to Burgundy prov

Brest, formerly Brest-Litovsk (brĕst'-lĭtôfsk'), Pol Brześć nad Bugiem (bzhĕshch' näd bōōg'yĕm), city (1931 pop 48,435), capital of Brest oblast, Belorussia, on the Western Bug It is an important rail and water transportation center Dating from at least the 11th cent , Brest passed to Russia in the third partition of Poland (1795) It had been ravaged through the centuries by Tatars, Teutonic Knights, and Swedes, but after its fortification (begun in 1831) by the Russians was considered impregnable The Germans took it in 1915 and in 1918 forced Russia to sign here the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk Brest reverted to Poland in 1921, but was ceded to the USSR in 1945 It remains an important military center. In 1596 the union of the Polish Orthodox and the Roman Catholic churches was signed here

Brest, town (pop 62,707), Finistère dept, NW France, on an inlet of the Atlantic into the tip of Brittany. It is a port and the chief naval station of France Brest dates from Gallo-Roman times, its spacious, landlocked harbor was created (1631) by Richelieu and was fortified by Vauban In 1694 the French here repulsed the English, and in 1794 the English under Lord Howe defeated the French fleet In the Second World War the Germans made Brest a submarine base Their heavily fortified submarine pens were subjected to terrific aerial bombardment, and while the pens showed but a few cracks, the city itself was almost destroyed The German garrison, after a costly siege, which added to the damage, capitulated to U S troops on Sept 20, 1944

Brest-Litovsk, Treaty of (brĕst'-lĭtôfsk'), separate peace treaty signed by Soviet Russia and the Central Powers, March 3, 1918, at Brest-Litovsk (now Brest, Belorussia) Subsequent to the separate armistice of Dec 5, 1917, long, bitter negotiations were conducted by Leon Trotsky for Russia, Richard von Kühlmann for Germany, and Count Ottokar Czernin for Austria-Hungary Trotsky at one point suspended negotiations, but Germany resumed warfare, and the Soviets—on the insistence of Lenin—accepted the German ultimatum, which set conditions even harsher than at first Before making peace with Russia the Central Powers signed (Feb 9) a treaty with the Ukraine, set up as a separate state In the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk, Russia recognized the independence of Poland, the Baltic states, Georgia, and the Ukraine, agreed to evacuate the Ukraine and to allow Germany to occupy Belorussia, ceded Kars, Ardahan, and Batum to Turkey, and promised to pay a large indemnity The general armistice of Nov 11, 1918, forced Germany to renounce the treaty, and Russia also declared it null and void The western frontiers of Russia were later agreed upon by a series of separate treaties See J W Wheeler-Bennett, The Forgotten Peace (American ed, 1939)

Brethren. For Brethren in Christ, see River Brethren, for Brethren of Christ, see Christadelphians, for Church of the Brethren and for German Baptist Brethren, see Dunkards, for Hutterian Brethren, see Hutterische Community, for Moravian Brethren, see Moravian Church, for Plymouth Brethren, see Plymouth Brethren, for River Brethren and Yorker Brethren, see River Brethren

Brétigny, Treaty of (brătēnyē'), 1360, concluded by England and France at Brétigny, a village near Chartres, France It marked a low point in French fortunes in the Hundred Years War John II, set free by the English at the price of 3,000,000 gold crowns, ceded to Edward III (without exacting feudal homage) Poitou, Aunis, Saintonge, Angoumois, Guienne, Gascony, Calais, and other territories The peace did not last, and by 1373 all but the Bordeaux district had been reconquered by Du Guesclin

Breton, André (ādrā' brutō'), 1896–, French surrealist poet, novelist, and critic Espousing Dadaism, he wrote Les Champs magnetiques (1921), an example of unconscious writing in which he collaborated with Philippe Soupault, and a collection of essays, Les Pas perdus (1924) He then turned to surrealism, issuing two manifestoes (1924, 1930), and became an extreme advocate of subconscious expression Nadya (1928), a novel, is autobiographical He also wrote Qu'est-ce que le surréalisme? (1934, Eng tr, What Is Surrealism? 1936)

Breton, Jules Adolphe Aimé Louis (zhülĕ' adôlf' āmā' lwē'), 1827–1906, French painter of rustic scenes and peasant life Well known are The Return of the Gleaners and Blessing the Fields (Luxembourg Mus, Paris), Song of the Lark (Art Inst, Chicago), and Religious Procession in Brittany and Peasant Girl Knitting (Metropolitan Mus) Breton was also the author of two autobiographies See Marius Vachon, Jules Breton (1899, in French)

Breton, Nicholas (brĕt'ŭn), 1551?–c 1623, English poet and miscellaneous writer of great range and prolificity His Passionate Shepherd (1604) and his lyrics in England's Helicon (1600) represent his best work See A Mad World My Masters and Other Prose Works (ed by Ursula Kentish-Wright, 2 vols, 1929), N E Monroe, Nicholas Breton as a Pamphleteer (1939)

Bretón de los Herreros, Manuel (mänwäl' brătōn' dā lōs ĕr-rā'rōs), 1796–1873, Spanish playwright and poet He wrote over 300 lyrical and satirical compositions, of which the most famous was Sátira contra las costumbres del siglo XIX [satire on 19th-century customs], about 100 original plays, and about 70 adaptations and translations of foreign plays In 1847 he was appointed director of the Biblioteca Nacional at Madrid Some of the comedies that made him the most popular dramatist of his time are A Madrid me vuelvo (1828), Marcela (1831), Muérete—y verás! (1837), La escuela de las casadas (1842), and La escuela del matrimonio (1852) They are witty and humorous sketches of the middle class of Madrid.

Breton literature (brĕ'tŭn), in the Celtic language of Brittany Until the 19th cent there were three types of literature—songs, stories, and plays, all popular and mostly of now forgotten authorship The plays (with examples dating back to c 1500) are local imitations of the late medieval French miracles They survived into the 19th cent As elsewhere in Europe, serious collecting of songs and stories began in Brittany in the 19th cent The first collection of importance was Hersart de la Villemarqué, whose carefully edited Barzaz Breiz, an anthology of poems, was attacked as was Macpherson's Ossian The old profession of ballad singing and storytelling scarcely survived the early 20th cent A cultivated literature began in the mid-19th cent, mainly in stories and verse Auguste Brizeux, whose French provincial verse had some reputation, was the best-known poet to use his native Breton Other poets were J Guillome, Prosper Proux, and Emil Ernault In the 20th cent a strong effort developed to encourage Bretons to use their own language, which was giving way increasingly to French Part of this movement was directed, especially by François Vallée and Roparz Hémon, toward expanding the Breton vocabulary into adequacy for translating any type of work A more strictly artistic interest characterizes the works of others, including the storytellers Jakez Rion and Yves Drézen, the playwright Tanguy Malemanche, and Xavier de Langlais and Louis Le Flo'ch, poets as well as prose writers, and, in the aberrant dialect of the Vannes district, the poets J P Calloc'h and Robert Le Masson and the storytellers Louis and Louise Herrieu and Louis Héno A few Breton works have been translated into French Most of the works of Anatole Le Braz, a connoisseur of Breton life and letters, have been translated into English

Bretonneau, Pierre (pyĕr' brutônō), 1778–1862, French physician He performed (1825) the first successful tracheotomy for laryngeal diphtheria, wrote a treatise (1826) distinguishing between scarlet fever and diphtheria (which he named), described typhoid fever, and stated (1855), the germ theory of disease (later established largely as a result of Pasteur's work)

Breton Succession, War of the, 1341–64 Duke John III of Brittany died in 1341 without heirs The succession was contested by his younger brother, John de Montfort, who was backed by Edward III of England, and by Charles of Blois, who had married Jeanne de Penthièvre, a niece of the late duke Charles and Jeanne were backed by Philip VI, John II, and Charles V of France The resulting war, which was an important episode of the Hundred Years War, ended, after several truces, with the battle of Auray (1364), in which Charles of Blois was defeated and killed, despite the support of his faithful follower, Bertrand du Guesclin The Montfort heir was recognized by France as rightful ruler of Brittany An attempt (1378–79) by Charles V to confiscate Brittany for the French crown met the resistance of the Bretons, including Jeanne de Penthièvre, and failed Du Guesclin, who commanded the royal army, made no serious effort to subdue Breton resistance

Brett, Reginald Baliol, 2d Viscount Esher see Esher, Reginald Baliol Brett, 2d Viscount

Bretton Woods Conference, name commonly given to the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference, held (July 1–22, 1944) at Bretton Woods, N H, in the White Mts The conference resulted in the creation of an International Monetary Fund ($8,800,000,000), to promote international monetary cooperation, and of an International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (authorized capital, $10,000,000,000) In Sept, 1946, they began operating, with 44 member states, of the larger states of the United Nations only Argentina and the USSR had failed to join

Breuer, Josef (yō'zĕf broi'ŭr), 1842–1925, Austrian physician He was the first to use (1880–82) the cathartic method to cure hysteria His therapy and theory, when developed by Freud, became psychoanalysis

Breuer, Marcel Lajos (broi'ŭr), 1902–, architect and furniture designer, b Hungary During the 1920s he was associated, both as student and as teacher, with the Bauhaus in Germany He was a practicing architect in Germany, England, and other countries from 1928 to 1937 Breuer became associate professor of architecture at Harvard Univ in 1937 and was a partner of Walter Gropius from 1937 to 1942

Breughel, family of painters see Bruegel

Brevard (brĭvärd'), town (pop 3,061), co seat of Transylvania co, W N C, in the Blue Ridge SSW of Asheville and near the S C line, inc 1867 It is a resort, with hosiery and cotton mills Brevard College (junior, coeducational) is here Pisgah National Forest is near by breviary (brē'vēĕr"ē, brĭv'-) [Latin, =shortening], in the Roman Catholic Church, prayer book containing all that is necessary for reciting the divine office (i e, the canonical hours) throughout the year The directions for Mass are in the missal, for other sacraments and for various services, in the ritual, and for the special services of bishops, in the pontifical. The modern Roman breviary (in Latin) is the result of normalization after the Council of Trent, some religious orders have their own editions In England the Sarum breviary (i e, that of Salisbury) was formerly used widely It is from the Sarum breviary that much of the Anglican morning and evening prayer is taken The breviary is primarily for priests, who are all required to recite the office daily

Breviary of Alaric (ă'lurĭk), Visigothic code of Roman law issued (506) by King Alaric II for his Roman subjects in Spain and S Gaul It is also known as the Lex Romana Visigothorum Based largely on the Theodosian Code and accompanied by valuable commentaries, it was intended to conciliate the Roman element of the population with the Germanic element, which was under the authority of the earlier code issued by Euric Although both codes were later superseded by the Forum Judicum of King Receswinth, the Breviary remained influential in preserving Roman law in the south and east of France See Germanic laws

Brevoort, James Renwick, 1832–1918, American landscape painter, b Westchester co, N Y His landscapes are painted with fidelity to nature, particularly in the treatment of perspective and atmospheric effects Among them are A Scene in Holland near Arnheim, Wild November Comes at Last, Storm on an English Moor, and New England Scene

Brewer, Ebenezer Cobham, 1810–97, English clergyman and writer He compiled many reference works, some of which passed through several editions These include A Guide to Scientific Knowledge (1850), Dictionary of Phrase and Fable (1870), Reader's Handbook of Famous Names in Fiction (1880), and Historic Note Book (1891)

Brewer, industrial city (pop 6,510), S Maine, on the Penobscot opposite Bangor, settled 1770, inc as a town 1812, as a city 1889 It has pulp and paper mills brewing see beer.

Brewster, Sir David, 1781–1868, Scottish physicist and natural philosopher, noted for researches into the polarization of light His dioptric system of improved lighthouse illumination was adopted by the English government He is generally credited with the invention of the kaleidoscope For 21 years he was principal of the United College of St Salvator and St Leonard, in St Andrews, Scotland, and in 1859 he became principal of the Univ of Edinburgh Brewster was a steady contributor to scientific publications Included in his numerous writings are A Treatise on Optics (1831), Life of Sir Isaac Newton (1828), More Worlds than One (1854), and his fuller Memoirs of the Life, Writings, and Discoveries of Sir Isaac Newton (1855)

Brewster, William, 1567–1644, English separatist and Plymouth colonist After studying briefly at Cambridge he became the chief member of the congregation at Scrooby which separated" from the Anglican Church in 1606, the members, after their migration to Holland in 1608, were known as Pilgrims On his press at Leiden he printed a number of religious books and tracts which were distributed throughout England Returning to England in 1617, he helped make arrangements for the Pilgrim migration to America and in 1620 embarked on the Mayflower with his wife, two sons, and two indentured boys Brewster, an elder of the church since Leiden days, was the sole religious leader of the Plymouth Colony until 1629, but since he was not ordained, he confined his ministry to services of prayer and praise only Although he held no lay offices, he was very influential, being one of the eight who undertook (1627) to discharge the debt to the colony's backers See G F Willison, Saints and Strangers (1945)

Brewster, William, 1851–1919, American ornithologist, b Wakefield, Mass His fine collection of North American birds is housed at Harvard He wrote several volumes on birds, including Bird Migration (1886) and Birds of Cambridge (1906) He kept journals of observations made at his Concord sanctuary, from these were compiled October Farm (1936) and Concord River (1937)

Brewster. 1 Resort town (pop 827), SE Mass, on Cape Cod, settled 1656, inc 1803 2 Village (pop 1,863), SE N Y, W of Danbury, Conn, settled 1850, inc 1894 It is a trade center for a rural and summer-residential area James Kent was born near here 3 Village (pop 1,534), NE Ohio, SW of Canton

Brewton, city (pop 3,323), co seat of Escambia co, S Ala, near the Conecuh and the Fla line It is a lumbering and agricultural center Fort Crawford was established here in 1818

Brezina, Otokar, Czech Březina (ô'tôkăr bzhĕ'zĭna), 1868–1929, Czech lyric poet of the symbolist school, whose real name is Vaclav Jebavy The first collection of his poetry, Mysterious Distances, was published in 1895 Four other volumes followed, the last in 1901, and then the flow of mystic, highly imaginative verse ceased. Although he is one of the greatest of Czech poets, none of his work has been translated into English.

Brian Boru or Brian Boroimhe (both: brĭ'un or brēn', bŭrōō' or burō') [Irish, =Brian of the boroma or kine counting, from a tribute he levied], 962?–

1014, high king of Ireland. He came of the royal house of Munster and at first ruled only Co Clare and Co. Tipperary but then subjugated all Munster, extended his power over Leinster, and in 1002 became high king of Ireland by right of conquest As his power increased, relations with the Norse rulers on the Irish coast grew steadily worse Sitric, king of the Dublin Norse, formed against Brian a coalition of Norse of Ireland, the Hebrides, the Orkneys, and Iceland as well as Brian's Irish enemies On Good Friday (April 23), 1014, Brian met and annihilated the allies at Clontarf near Dublin Soon afterward he was murdered in his tent Brian's victory broke the Norse power in Ireland forever, but also destroyed the unity he had achieved

Briançon (brōsôⁿ'), town (pop 3,483), Hautes-Alpes dept, SE France, in the Dauphiné Alps near the Italian border The fortifications and the church were built (17th cent) by Vauban

Briand, Aristide (ārēstēd' brēā'), 1862–1932, French statesman A lawyer and a Socialist, he entered the chamber of deputies in 1902 Having helped to draft the law (1902) for the separation of Church and state, he was made (1906) minister of education and worship to execute it He was ejected from the Socialist party for participating in a bourgeois cabinet but clung to his convictions and in 1909 became premier for the first of 11 times His liberalism laid him open to attacks from both right and left throughout the rest of his career One of the outstanding advocates of peace, Briand nevertheless headed (1915–17) two successive coalition cabinets in the First World War until the attacks of Clemenceau prevailed After an ineffectual attempt to negotiate for peace, Briand retired, and in 1921 emerged as a leading advocate of international cooperation The cabinet he headed in 1921 fell because of his unpopular criticism of the Treaty of Versailles and his moderate demands at international conferences However, Briand always upheld the French demand for security As foreign minister from 1925 to 1932 he was the chief architect of the LOCARNO PACT (1925) and the KELLOGG-BRIAND PACT (1928), and he shared the 1926 Nobel Peace Prize with Gustav Stresemann An impressive orator, Briand was a prominent figure in the League of Nations He advocated a plan for a United States of Europe See biographies by Valentine Thomson (1930) and Georges Suarez (3 vols, 1938–39, in French)

briar see BRIER

Briarcliff Manor, residential village (pop 1,830), SE N Y, in Westchester co, near Ossining, settled 1896, inc 1902 Briarcliff Junior College (for girls) and Edgewood Park school for girls are here

Briareus (brīā'rēŭs), in Greek religion, hundred-handed monster, also called Aegaeon bribery, corrupt tendering or receiving of anything of value in return for official action Any attempt to influence an officer in his official conduct by the offer of an award is bribery An attempt to give a bribe, even if it is not taken, and a solicitation of a bribe by an officer, even if it is not given, are both punishable as bribery At common law only a misdemeanor, bribery has been made a felony by statute in many jurisdictions of the United States It has also been extended to cover corrupt influencing of persons other than officials in the discharge of their duties or the exercise of their rights —e g, voters, witnesses, labor representatives, participants in games or sports, and business agents and employees Bribery generally differs from EXTORTION in that it requires a voluntary, not a coerced, payment and in that it requires the doing of an unlawful act brick, universally used structural material which, in modern times, is made by pressing clay into blocks and burning them to the requisite hardness in a kiln Bricks in their most primitive form were not burned, but were hardened by being dried in the sun. In that form they were utilized during many centuries and are used even today in regions with the proper climate Bricks probably existed in times of which no record remains Examples from approximately 5,000 years ago have been discovered in the Tigris-Euphrates basin, and the ancient races occupying this region may have been the first users of brick In Babylonia there was a lack of both timber and stone, and the thick clay deposited by the overflowing rivers was the only material adapted to building The Persians and the Assyrians used sun-dried blocks of clay for walls of great thickness, facing them with a protective coating of burned bricks The Egyptians and the Greeks used bricks to only a limited extent, as they had access to plentiful supplies of stone and marble The Romans manufactured burned bricks in enormous quantities and gave them an important role as a basic structural material for both simple and sumptuous buildings all through the Roman Empire Brick played an important part in early Christian architecture until the decline of the empire Whereas the Romans had usually concealed their brickwork beneath a decorative facing of stone or marble, the Byzantines devised a technique for exposing the brick itself and giving it a full decorative expression This in the 10th cent influenced the Romanesque buildings, and the rich and versatile brick styles of the Middle Ages were thus launched, attaining especially good results in Lombardy and in Germany, with bricks molded or carved into many special shapes and arranged in immensely varied patterns With the coming of the Renaissance, brick architecture developed into great effectiveness in England Since the Middle Ages, brickwork has been in constant use everywhere, adapting itself to every sort of construction and to every change of architectural style Good bricks are practically indestructible by fire or atmospheric action and more durable than stone Bricks were being produced in the American colonies in the early years of the 17th cent, and through the 17th and 18th cent the craftsmanship in bricks and brick buildings was hardly inferior to that of the same period in England At the beginning of the 19th cent, mechanical processes began to be patented and by the latter half of the century had almost entirely replaced the ancient hand-fashioning methods Contemporary bricks are rectangular blocks with the standard dimensions of about 2¼ by 3¾ by 8 in American manufacturers produce an enormous variety for widely different purposes.

bridal wreath. see SPIRAEA

Bride, Saint. see BRIDGET, SAINT

Bridewell (brīd'wul) [for St Bride's well], parish of central London, England, between Fleet St and the Thames The Bridewell house of correction, here until 1864, was on the site of a palace built by Henry VIII and, earlier still, of a Norman tower bridge. In ancient times and among primitive peoples a log was thrown across a stream, or two vines or woven fibrous ropes (the upper for a handhold and the lower for a footwalk) were thrown across, to serve as a bridge Later, arched structures of stone or brick were used, traces of these, built from 2000 to 4000 B C, have been found in Palestine The Romans built long arched spans, many of which are still standing In England the rather crude arched stone bridges had heavy piers (intermediate supports) which were a great obstruction to river traffic, and the roadway was often lined with small shops In the early days in the United States, since wood was abundant and cheap, the arched type of bridge did not develop Wood is now seldom used, since a wooden bridge is subject both to decay and to destruction by fire In the middle part of the 19th cent many bridges were built of cast and wrought iron Robert Stephenson designed and built the bridge across Menai Strait in North Wales (1850) Another bridge of this type is Victoria Bridge across the St Lawrence at Montreal The disadvantage of cast iron for bridges is its low tensile strength The development of the Bessemer process for converting cast iron into steel revolutionized bridgebuilding It became possible to design framed structures with greater ease and flexibility The use of the TRUSS, in various forms, soon became common practice and led to the vast structures of modern times Modern steel bridges are of many types The panel-truss bridge usually consists of a pair or more of parallel trusses, suitably braced, supporting a road on transverse beams A center-swing bridge is one which is mounted on a pier in the center of a stream or span, and can be mechanically swung in the direction of the river to allow water-borne traffic to pass through The CANTILEVER bridge has long been a favorite for long spans It is generally supported on two piers and two abutments (end supports) It has many advantages it is very rigid, the stresses in all its members can readily and definitely be determined, and it lends itself ideally to erection without the use of any temporary support One of the first and best examples of this type of construction is the bridge over the Forth at Queensferry, Scotland Two others are the Queensboro Bridge in New York and the St Lawrence River Bridge at Quebec The SUSPENSION BRIDGE is a pair of cables, or series of cables, passed across a river, securely anchored to piers at each side, and supporting a roadway A few of the larger suspension bridges in the United States are the Brooklyn, Williamsburg, and Bear Mountain bridges, the Ambassador Bridge across the Detroit river between Canada and the United States, the Delaware river bridge at Philadelphia, the GEORGE WASHINGTON BRIDGE across the Hudson river, and the GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE The steel-arch bridge is exemplified by that over the Kill Van Kull at Bayonne, N J The vertical lift bridge (see THIBOROUGH BRIDGE) consists of a simple span of the truss type, suspended between steel towers with wire ropes It is used over short spans where intermittent river traffic has to be maintained The bridge is counterweighted and raised between the towers when necessary, hoisting machinery being installed in the structure The bascule, or quadrant, bridge, also used for short spans across streams, consists of a rigid bridge of the trussed type, resting free on a pier on one side of the stream and mounted on a heavy quadrant on the other It is counterweighted and is designed to roll back on the quadrant, lifting the bridge clear of the stream A series of bridges for conveying a roadway or railroad across low-lying ground or across water is termed a VIADUCT In the transportation of men and equipment during war, where the means of crossing a stream or river is either nonexistent or has been destroyed by the enemy, military bridges play a vital part Sometimes they have been of the trestle type, built from any available material, or of the PONTOON type See also DRAWBRIDGE See Archibald Black, The Story of Bridges (1936).

bridge, a card game, derived from WHIST, played with 52 cards by four players who are divided into partners In the oldest form, bridge whist, now rarely played, the dealer or his partner names the trump suit or "no trumps" This form of bridge was played in the Middle East in the 19th cent and spread to Europe and America In another variation, developed by the British in India in the early 1900s, the highest bidder names trumps The game was originated for three players, but new rules and a fourth hand were added by the Bath Club and the Portland Club of London Auction bridge was extremely popular in England and America for 25 years The term bridge now usually means contract bridge, a form of auction bridge developed by Harold S Vanderbilt of New York in 1925 The rules encourage the player to make the best possible bid on every hand After 1927 the popularity of contract bridge, owing much to the activities of Ely CULBERTSON, was phenomenal, thousands of clubs were formed, international tournaments were held, and books and newspaper articles on the subject were read with great interest The bridge craze has since subsided somewhat, but tournaments and newspaper columns continue, and a knowledge of the game is still almost a social necessity in many circles of the English-speaking world The Whist Club of New York and the American Contract Bridge League issued a new code of laws in 1943, and new international contract bridge rules went into effect on Oct 1, 1948 See R L Frey, ed, The New Complete Hoyle (1947)

Bridgeburg, Ont see FORT ERIE

Bridgend (brĭd'jĕnd'), urban district (pop 10,029), Glamorganshire, Wales, on the Ogwr river It is a cattle market and manufactures electric transformers and pharmaceuticals There are remains of an ancient Norman castle and a 12th-century fortified church

Bridge of Sighs, covered stone bridge in Venice, Italy, built in the 16th cent to connect the ducal palace with the state prison The prisoners were led over the bridge directly to prison after trial in the ducal palace

Bridgeport. 1 City (pop 2,031), extreme NE Ala, on the Tennessee river, settled in the early 19th cent It has lumber and textile mills 2 City (pop 147,121), a co seat of Fairfield co, SW Conn, on Long Island Sound, settled 1639 from Fairfield and Stratford, inc 1836 Harbors are at the mouth of the Poquonock and in the Black Rock section The chief industrial city in the state, it produces ammunition, sewing machines, machinery, electrical equipment, tools, hardware, and other metal products It is a port of entry During the Civil War and the world wars it was especially important A statue in Seaside Park and the Barnum Institute of Science and History commemorate the showman who lived here and whose circus wintered here "General Tom Thumb" (Charles S Stratton) was born here The Univ of Bridgeport was organized as a junior college in 1927 In 1933 the first Socialist mayor and board of aldermen in Connecticut were elected at Bridgeport See Elsie N Danenberg, The Story of Bridgeport (1936) 3 City (pop 2,143), SE Ill, W of Vincennes, Ind, in a farm and oil area, inc 1865 4 City (pop 1,520), co seat of Morrill co, W Nebr, on the North Platte below Scottsbluff It is a trade center for an irrigated grazing, alfalfa, and sugar-beet area Near by are the buttes Courthouse Rock and Jail Rock 5 Village (pop 4,853), E Ohio, on the Ohio river opposite Wheeling, W Va, laid out 1806 as Canton by Ebenezer Zane, renamed 1836 6 Borough (pop 5,904), SE Pa, NW of Philadelphia, settled 1829, inc 1851 It has a coke plant, an ironworks, and woolen mills Dolomite is mined here for lime and flux 7 Town (pop 1,735), N Texas, on the West Fork of the Trinity and NW of Fort Worth, settled 1873, inc 1913 Coal mining was important to the town, which now has a brick plant and other minor industries Artificial Lake Bridgeport, a Fort Worth reservoir, is near 8 Cattle-shipping town (pop 1,581), N W Va, E of Clarksburg, in a grazing area, chartered 1816

Bridger, James, 1804–81, American fur trader, one of the most celebrated of the MOUNTAIN MEN, b Virginia He was working as a blacksmith in St Louis when he joined the Missouri river expedition of William H ASHLEY in 1822 From that time until the fur trade declined in the 1840s he was a trader and trapper in the mounains, getting to know most of the country N of the Spanish New Mexico and E of California He was associated with Thomas Fitzpatrick and Jedediah Smith in many of their journeys, and he is generally credited with being the first white man to see Great Salt Lake He was the guide for the party of Marcus Whitman, and in 1843 he and a partner, Louis

Vasquez, opened Fort Bridger on the OREGON TRAIL He there contributed greatly to the knowledge of the Oregon immigrants, but later he sold the post and was a guide, notably to Gen A S Johnston on the Mormon campaign in 1857, to an expedition to the present Yellowstone Park (a region he did much to publicize) in 1858–66, and to the surveying party of Gen G M Dodge for the Union Pacific RR He came to be famous for his talk, was a fine spinner of "tall tales," and was one of the most picturesque figures of the frontier See biographies by J Cecil Alter (1925) and Stanley Vestal (pseud of W S Campbell, 1946), Bernard De Voto, Across the Wide Missouri (1947)

Bridger, Fort see FORT BRIDGER STATE PARK

Bridges, Calvin Blackman, 1889–1938, American geneticist, b Schuyler Falls, N Y , grad Columbia (B S , 1912, Ph D , 1916) In his research he collaborated with T H Morgan, A H Sturtevant and H J Muller, the group which developed many of the concepts of modern genetics through their study of the fruit fly, Drosophila He continued with the Morgan group as a research associate of the Carnegie Institution of Washington from 1919 His contributions to modern genetics include the proof of the chromosome theory of heredity, formulation of the theory of genic balance, and the detailed study of giant salivary chromosomes in relation to the positions of genes He was co-author of The Mechanism of Mendelian Heredity (1915) and of a number of works on Drosophila

Bridges, Harry (Alfred Renton Bridges), 1900–, American labor leader, b Melbourne, Australia Arriving (1920) as an immigrant seaman in San Francisco, he became a longshoreman and militant labor organizer Bridges led (1934) the West Coast maritime workers' strike, which expanded into an abortive general strike, and in 1937 he became West Coast director of the C I O Proceedings in 1939 to deport him as a Communist alien ended when he was officially absolved of Communist affiliation The House passed (1940) a bill to deport him, but it was ruled (1945) illegal by the Supreme Court He became a citizen in 1945 He supported Henry Wallace for President in 1948 and was ousted as C I O regional head He was convicted and sentenced (1950) to a five-year term for swearing falsely at his 1945 naturalization hearing that he had never been a member of the Communist party

Bridges, Robert Seymour, 1844–1930, English poet laureate from 1913, educated at Oxford and St Bartholomew's Hospital In 1882 he abandoned medical practice to devote himself to writing, he produced short lyrics, long poems, dramas in verse, and critical studies of Milton (1893) and Keats (1895) In 1918 he published the poems of his friend Gerard Manley HOPKINS The Testament of Beauty (1929) is the best-known long poem by Bridges See studies by Albert Guérard, Jr (1942), and G S Gordon (1946)

Bridget, Saint, 453?–523?, Irish holy woman She is often called St Brigid, St Bride, or St Bridget of Kildare Not much certain is known of her, but she did found a great monastery at Kildare She is buried at Downpatrick with St Patrick and St Columba, and with them she is a patron of Ireland, hence her nickname Mary of the Gael St Bridget is associated notably with charity and justice Devotion to her was widespread in Great Britain before the Reformation, as witness many names, e g., Bridewell, Kilbride, Kirkbride, and McBride Feast Feb 1

Bridget of Sweden, Saint, c 1300–1373, Swedish nun She was a noblewoman of the court After she had brought up eight children, she separated amicably from her husband to devote herself to religion and founded an order (the Bridgettines) Her account of her numerous visions was widely read in the Middle Ages St Bridget is patron of Sweden She is sometimes called Birgitta Feast Oct. 8.

Bridgeton, city (pop 15,992), co seat of Cumberland co , S N J , on the Cohansey, settled 1686, inc 1864 It has glassworks and canneries Its 18th-century buildings include a Presbyterian church dating from 1792

Bridgetown, city (pop 13,345), capital of BARBADOS, British West Indies A port and a pleasant town with fine buildings and tourist attractions, it is a popular resort Sugar is refined, and molasses and rum made

Bridgetown, town (pop 1,020), N S , in the North Shore section, on the Annapolis river and NE of Annapolis Royal

Bridgeville. 1 Town (pop 1,180), SW Del , N of Seaford, inc 1871 It is a canning center in a fruit-growing region 2 Industrial borough (pop 4,459), SW Pa , SW of Pittsburgh, inc. 1901 It has a chemical plant and metal factories. Mining brought rapid growth in 1884

Bridgewater, Francis Egerton, 3d duke of, 1736–1806, pioneer in British inland navigation To facilitate transportation for his collieries he commissioned James Brindley to construct (1759–71) the first canal in England independent of any stream. It ran from Worsley to Manchester, and he later extended it to the Mersey at Liverpool.

Bridgewater, Francis Henry Egerton, 8th earl of, 1756–1829, English clergyman. His will left £8,000 to whoever should write a treatise on the goodness of God as manifested in the creation The executor divided the sum among eight persons, whose essays are known as The Bridgewater Treatises (1833–40)

Bridgewater, town (pop 3,445), SW N.S , at the head of navigation on the La Have river and W of Lunenburg Its chief industry is lumbering

Bridgewater 1 Rural and lumber town (pop 1,267), NE Maine, near the N B line N of Houlton, inc 1858 It is a port of entry 2 Industrial town (pop 8,902), SE Mass , S of Boston, settled 1650, inc 1656 Shoes, metal products, and grain feed are produced A state teachers college is here 3 Borough (pop 1,621), W Pa , near the junction of the Ohio and Beaver rivers NW of Pittsburgh, inc 1835

Bridgman, Elijah Coleman, 1801–61, first American Protestant missionary to China, b Belchertown, Mass , grad Amherst, 1826, and Andover Theological Seminary, 1829 He served as a missionary in China from 1830 until his death His Chinese Chrestomathy appeared in 1841, his Chinese translation of the Bible (in collaboration with M S Culbertson) was published posthumously in 1862

Bridgman, Frederic Arthur, 1847–1927, American genre and archaeological painter, b Tuskegee, Ala. He studied under Gérôme in Paris, where most of his work was done Among his best-known paintings are Funeral of a Mummy, The Procession of the Bull Apis (both Corcoran Gallery), and Awaiting His Master (Art Inst , Chicago)

Bridgman, Laura, 1829–89, the first blind deaf-mute to be successfully educated, b Hanover, N H. Under the guidance of Dr S G HOWE, of the Perkins Institution (now in Watertown, Mass), she learned to read and write and to sew so well that she eventually became a teacher of sewing at the school, where she remained until her death See biography by Laura E Richards (1928)

Bridgman, Percy Williams, 1882–, American physicist, b Cambridge, Mass , grad Harvard (B A , 1904, Ph D , 1908) From 1910 he taught at Harvard, as professor from 1919 He won the 1946 Nobel Prize in Physics for his work in high pressures He is known also for his studies of electrical conduction in metals and properties of crystals His works include The Logic of Modern Physics (1927, reissue, 1946), Physics of High Pressure (1931), and Nature of Thermodynamics (1941)

Bridgnorth, municipal borough (pop 5,151), Shropshire, England, on the Severn and SE of Shrewsbury A stone bridge gave the town its name Part of the town is on a hill The main industry is carpetmaking The castle, of which a ruined leaning tower remains, was built in 1101, a royalist stronghold in the civil war, it was destroyed by parliamentary forces in 1646 Richard Baxter was curate here, and Thomas Percy was born here

Bridgton, town (pop 3,035), SW Maine, NW of Portland, settled 1770, inc 1794 It is a resort center and produces lumber goods

Bridgwater, municipal borough (1931 pop 17,139, 1943 estimated pop 18,330), Somerset, England, a seaport on the Parrett The tides somewhat impede shipping The town's products include ham and bacon, paints, dry batteries, and bricks The site of the battle of Sedgemoor (1685) is near here

Bridlington (brĭd'lĭngtŭn, brĭdlĭng'tŭn), municipal borough (1931 pop 19,705, 1943 estimated pop 21,720), East Riding of Yorkshire, England It has a well-protected harbor on Bridlington Bay An Augustinian priory was founded in the reign of Henry I Bridlington Quay, a mile southeast, is a favorite resort, with mineral springs

Brie (brē), region, Marne and Seine-et-Marne depts , N France, E of Paris Rich in wheat and cattle, it is famous for its soft white cheese Many of its huge and nearly self-contained farms are fortress-like in their imposing architecture Meaux, Melun, and Château-Thierry are the main towns The former county of Meaux (E Brie) was combined (11th cent) with that of Troyes to form the county (later province) of CHAMPAGNE and Brie The smaller but richer western section (Brie française) forms part of the Île-de-France brief, in law, the statement prepared by the counsel, for either party to a case, of the pleadings, the legal points in issue, and the evidence, among other things In Great Britain a brief is prepared by a solicitor, whose duty it is to prepare the case for trial When this is done, and the brief handed to a barrister, the party is said to have been briefed, and the case from then on is in the hands of the barrister In the United States, since the attorney serves both of the above functions, the brief is used as an abridged statement for the court and the counsel of the other party The trial brief should contain the names of the parties and the pertinent facts concerning them, the pleadings in concise form, a chronological statement of facts, a summary of the questions in issue and the evidence regarding them An appeal brief contains a statement of the legal points appealed and a summary of the argument on these points, together with the authorities and cases relied on. A brief on appeal is usually printed and furnished to the court and opposing counsel A brief of title is the same as an ABSTRACT OF TITLE

Brieg (brĕk) or Brzeg (bzhĕk), city (pop. 7,744, 1939 pop. 31,419), Lower Silesia, a trade center on the Oder In 1945 it was transferred to Polish administration (see SILESIA) Chartered in 1250, Brieg was (1311–1675) the seat of a principality under a branch of the PIAST family The castle (13th cent , rebuilt 16th cent), the Renaissance town hall, and a church (13th–14th cent) were damaged in the Second World War

Brienne, Étienne Charles Loménie de: see LOMÉNIE DE BRIENNE, ÉTIENNE CHARLES

Brienz (brēnts'), village (pop 2,637), Bern canton, Switzerland, on the northeast shore of the Lake of Brienz It is a center of the Swiss woodcarving industry

brier or briar, name sometimes given any thorny plant, more specifically the SWEETBRIER and the greenbrier (see SMILAX) French brier or briarroot is a name for the root of the European white heath (Erica arborea), used for making brier pipes See also SAINT-CLAUDE

Brieux, Eugène (ûzhĕn' brēû'), 1858–1932, French dramatist His first great success was the comedy Blanchette (1892) He also wrote plays on family life and on political or social themes La Robe rouge (1900, Eng tr , The Red Robe), Maternité (1903), and L'Avocat (1922, Eng tr , The Accused) are among those produced in English Les Avariés (1901) created a sensation in New York as Damaged Goods, it was novelized by Upton Sinclair Brieux was elected to the French Academy See P V Thomas, The Plays of Eugène Brieux (1913)

Briey (brēā'), town (pop 2,539), Meurthe-et-Moselle dept , NE France, N of Nancy It is at the center of the huge Briey iron-ore basin (see LORRAINE)

Brig (brĭk), Fr Brigue (brēg), town (pop 3,278), Valais canton, Switzerland, at the north entrance to the Simplon Tunnel It is a junction of the SIMPLON, LÖTSCHBERG, and FURKA rail lines

brig, two-masted sailing vessel, square-rigged on both masts Brigs have been used in the past for coastal trade in most parts of the world They vary in length between 100 and 115 ft , with tonnages up to 350 A brigantine is somewhat smaller and is a two-masted vessel, square-rigged on the foremast and with a fore-and-aft mainsail and a square topsail on the mainmast A hermaphrodite brig is similar to the brigantine except that she carries fore-and-aft sails only on the mainmast, having no topsail

Briga : see BRIOUF AND TENDE

brigandage (brĭ'gəndĭj), robbery, blackmail, kidnaping, and plundering committed by armed bands Laxity in administration, social and political demoralization, economic or political oppression, and racial or religious antagonisms may give rise to brigandage, especially if the terrain of the district provides suitable hiding places for the bandits Inhabitants of an invaded state sometimes resort to brigandage, and those held under intolerable economic subjection adopt it as a means of retaliation In such societal conditions, the bandit is protected by a sympathetic public opinion, and, like Robin Hood, may become a popular hero, the symbol of resistance to tyranny Brigandage then becomes a mixture of violent spoliation and patriotism or altruism Brigandage more frequently flourishes during the disintegration of a state (as the decline of the Roman Empire), at the conclusion of a social era (as among the robber barons at the end of the feudal ages), after a great war, in the early stages of frontier settlement (as in early California and in the Australian bush), or on national borderlands (as in the Scotch border) When a strong, centralized authority develops, when a disciplined constabulary is organized, or when public disapproval of brigandage becomes manifest, it disappears The brigand leader, in a chaotic society, may extend his jurisdiction over a wide area, and although his end is entirely selfish, he can contribute to the social well-being by establishing a recognized authority He is more often, however, a simple bandit, pursued by the state until captured and executed The lawless lives of brigands and highwaymen have always held much interest for the law-abiding Legends of gallantry and heroism have gathered about many brigands, especially those who were the victims of social or political oppression, who were rebels rather than bandits Ballads and folk tales have grown about many leaders, and the names of brigands are known to all Dick Turpin, the highwayman, Hereward the Wake; Robin Hood, Stenka Razin, the Cossack; Fra Diavolo of Italy, and Jesse James of the United States

Briggs, Charles Augustus, 1841–1913, American clergyman, theologian, and educator, b New York city, studied at the Univ of Virginia, Union Theological Seminary, and the Univ of Berlin From 1875 until his death he was a member of the faculty of Union Theological Seminary, serving as professor of Hebrew and the cognate languages until 1890, when he was appointed to the chair of biblical theology The address on the authority of Holy Scripture which he gave at that time caused his trial for heresy (1892) before the New York presbytery Although acquitted, Dr. Briggs was suspended (1893) from the Presbyterian ministry by the General Assembly; thereupon Union Theological Seminary severed its relations with the Assembly. He later entered the Episcopal ministry Among his many books are A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Book of Psalms (2 vols , 1906) and Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament (with Francis Brown and S. R Driver, completed 1906)

Briggs, Clare A, 1875–1930, American cartoonist, b Reedsburg, Wis , studied at the Univ of Nebraska He won a national reputation with his contributions (1907–14) to the Chicago Tribune From 1914 until his death his cartoons appeared in the New York Tribune syndicate Among his best-known creations are "When a Feller Needs a Friend," "Ain't It a Grand and Glorious Feeling," "Somebody Is Always Taking the Joy Out of Life," "In the Days of Real Sport," and "That Guiltiest Feeling " His drawings are characterized by a simplicity of style and inoffensive humor and drollery that have been widely imitated

Briggs, Henry, 1561–1630, English mathematician He was the first professor of geometry at Gresham College, London (1596–1619), and Savilian professor of astronomy at Oxford (from 1619) After publication of Napier's work on logarithms in 1614, he suggested that the logarithms be tabulated to the base 10, and Napier agreed to the alteration Briggs wrote Arithmetica logarithmica (1624), a work containing logarithmic tables for 30,000 natural numbers to 14 places His logarithms are known today as common logarithms

Briggs, Le Baron Russell, 1855–1934, American educator, b Salem, Mass , grad Harvard, 1875 As a teacher at Harvard he developed, with Barrett Wendell, a prescribed and widely imitated freshman English course A number of able contemporary writers were influenced by his graduate course in creative writing He became professor of English in 1890 and of rhetoric and oratory in 1904 In 1891 he was appointed dean of the college and from 1903 to 1923 served as president of Radcliffe His works include School, College, and Character (1901), Routine and Ideals (1904), Girls and Education (1911), and Men, Women, and Colleges (1925) See R W Brown, Dean Briggs (1926)

Briggs, Lyman James, 1874–, American physicist, b Assyria, Mich , grad Michigan State College, 1893 He joined the Dept of Agriculture in 1896, serving the Bureau of Soils (until 1906) and the Bureau of Plant Industry (1904–6, 1912–20) From 1917 he was affiliated with the Bureau of Standards, as its director from 1933 to 1945 He has done special work in soil analysis and in aerodynamics and has studied the properties of liquids under negative pressures

Briggsville, Mass see Clarksburg

Brigham, Albert Perry, 1855–1932, American geographer, b Perry, N Y , M A Colgate Univ , 1882 After ten years in the Baptist ministry (1882–91) he became professor of geology at Colgate He published many articles and textbooks—Geographic Influences in American History (1903), a book which widely influenced history students and scholars, From Trail to Railway through the Appalachians (1907), and Cape Cod and the Old Colony (1920)

Brigham or Brigham City, city (pop 5,641), co seat of Box Elder co , N Utah, N of Ogden It was founded as Box Elder in 1851, and the name was changed to honor Brigham Young in 1856 Peach culture, begun in 1855, is the pride of the irrigated region, which is now served by the Ogden river project

Brigham Young University, at Provo, Utah, Latter-Day Saints, coeducational, opened as an academy 1875, chartered 1896, renamed 1903 It has colleges of applied science, arts and sciences, commerce, education, and fine arts, a research division, and a summer school on Mt Timpanogos

Brighouse, municipal borough (1931 pop 19,756, 1947 estimated pop 30,670), West Riding of Yorkshire, England, N of Huddersfield It is a center of woolen, cotton, and silk milling and produces carpets, leather goods, machinery, dyes, soap, and other products Stone quarries are near by

Bright, Sir Charles Tilston, 1832–88, English engineer In 1853 he laid the first cable between Ireland and Scotland, and in 1858 the first between Ireland and Newfoundland, he laid other cables in the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf and in the West Indies He was knighted in 1858

Bright, John, 1811–89, English statesman and distinguished parliamentary orator, b Rochdale, Lancashire, son of a Quaker cotton miller He and Richard Cobden were the greatest 19th-century champions of the middle class Generally liberal, humanitarian, and antiaristocratic, Bright had a laissez-faire philosophy and opposed regulation of working hours, public support of education, and, above all, the corn laws His policies were doubtless affected by his proprietorship of a cotton mill, but he nevertheless favored the North in the American Civil War. Entering Parliament in 1843, he became a leading figure there He never held the highest offices but was president of the Board of Trade (1868–70) and chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster (1880–82) Believing peace necessary for prosperity, he incurred unpopularity by opposing the Crimean War and later (1882) resigned as chancellor of the duchy because he disapproved the bombardment of Alexandria (see Egypt) He considered free trade the best aid to peace His greatest service was his fight for repeal of the corn laws in the Anti-Corn-Law League and in Parliament He was a major force in the struggles for parliamentary reform (1860–68), for disestablishment of the Church of Ireland (1869), and for Irish land reform, though he opposed Irish Home Rule See his speeches (ed by J E Thorold Rogers, 2 vols , 1868) and public addresses (also ed by Rogers, 1879) and his diaries (ed by R A J Walling, 1930), biographies by G M Trevelyan (2d ed , 1925), M E Hirst (1945), and A S Turberville (1948), J T Mills, John Bright and the Quakers (2 vols , 1935)

Bright, Richard, 1789–1858, English physician In London he was the leading consultant of his time, and he contributed many important clinical observations He was the author of the significant Report of Medical Cases (Vol I, 1827) This contained his description of certain forms of nephritis or kidney disease known generally as Bright's disease and of dropsy resulting from kidney disease as distinct from cardiac dropsy

Bright Eyes see La Flesche, Susette

Brighton (brī'tun), municipality (pop 39,789), Victoria, Australia, SSE of Melbourne and on Port Phillip Bay It is a resort

Brighton, village (pop 1,651), S Ont , NE of Toronto and on the Murray Canal leading from the Bay of Quinte to Lake Ontario

Brighton, county borough (1931 pop 147,427, 1947 estimated pop 154,600), Sussex East, England, on the English Channel and S of London, backed by the South Downs Until c 1750 it was a small fishing village called Brighthelmstone It became a fashionable resort, patronized by the prince of Wales (later George IV), who built the Royal Pavilion This was bought by the town in 1850 The promenade along the sea front, West Pier, Palace Pier, the Dome (formerly the royal stables, now an assembly room), and the aquarium are notable features Chiefly a resort, the borough manufactures shoes, biscuits, electrical appliances, asbestos, and flour Hove is a suburb See Osbert Sitwell and Margaret Barton, Brighton (1935)

Brighton 1 Town (pop 1,377), central Ala , near Bessemer 2 City (pop 4,029), co seat of Adams co , N central Colo , N of Denver, inc 1887 It is a shipping and processing center in a rich farm area and has a beet-sugar plant 3 City (pop 1,353), S Mich , between Detroit and Lansing, in a farm and resort area, settled 1832, inc as a village 1867, as a city 1928 4 Town (pop 1,754), NE Vt , a scenic region SE of Newport, chartered 1781, settled 1820, organized 1832 Island Pond is its center

Bright's disease, name applied to various forms of nephritis, both acute and chronic, described by Richard Bright (1827) Albumin is found in the urine, and sometimes blood and casts are present, edema or dropsy and hypertension are also among the symptoms characteristic of the disease There are a number of causes of the disease—some forms are produced by bacteria and other microorganisms (or by their toxins), e g , those causing scarlet fever, tuberculosis, and certain respiratory infections See W R Ohler, The Truth about Bright's Disease (1936), H A Christian, Bright's Disease (1948)

Brightwaters, village (pop 1,562), on the south shore of Long Island, SE N Y , near Bay Shore, laid out 1907, inc 1916

Brigid, Saint. see Bridget, Saint

Brigue and Tende (brēg, tād), Ital Briga and Tenda, two small districts (202 sq mi , 1936 pop 4,274), Alpes-Maritimes dept , SE France, on the French-Italian border They were ceded to France by Italy in the Treaty of Paris of 1947, along with several smaller frontier areas in the Mont Cenis and Mont Blanc regions Brigue and Tende are largely French-speaking The 1947 frontier crosses the strategic Col de Tende, a pass connecting Piedmont with the French Riviera

Brill or Bril, two Flemish painters and engravers, brothers Mattys Brill (mä'tĭs), 1550–83, early went to Rome and was employed by Gregory XIII in painting landscapes in fresco for the Vatican Paul Brill, 1554–1626, who studied in Rome with his brother, succeeded Mattys in the Vatican Paul became one of the finest Flemish landscape painters of his period, and his influence on the development of landscape painting was important He executed numerous works in oil and fresco in various Roman churches His colossal Martyrdom of St. Clement (Vatican) is among the most famous

Brill, Abraham Arden, 1874–1948, American psychiatrist, b Austria, grad New York Univ , 1901, M D Columbia, 1903 He came to the United States alone at the age of 13 After studies with C. G Jung in Switzerland, he returned to the United States in 1908 to become one of the earliest and most active exponents of psychoanalysis, being the first to translate most of the major works of Freud, as well as books by Jung He taught at New York Univ and Columbia, was a practicing psychoanalyst, and wrote Psychoanalysis Its Theories and Practical Application (1912) and Fundamental Conceptions of Psychoanalysis (1921)

Brill, Nathan Edwin, 1860–1925, American physician, b New York city, M D New York Univ , 1880 He was associated with Mt Sinai Hospital, New York, from 1893 and was professor at Columbia from 1910 Brill's disease, later identified as a mild type of typhus fever, owes its name to the fact that he first described it so clearly as to render it easily distinguishable

Brillat-Savarin, Anthelme (ätĕlm' brĕya'-savarĕ'), 1755–1826, French lawyer, economist, and gastronomist, famous for his witty treatise on the art of dining, La Physiologie du goût (1825) It has been frequently republished and was translated into English as The Physiology of Taste (1925, revised 1948) An émigré during the Reign of Terror, Brillat-Savarin spent some time in the United States

Brilliant, village (pop 1,683), E Ohio, on the Ohio river and S of Steubenville

Brillion (brĭl'yun), city (pop 1,200), E Wis , between Appleton and Manitowoc, settled 1850, inc as a village 1885, as a city 1944

Bril's disease see Brill, Nathan Edwin

Brimfield, town (pop 1,012), S Mass , E of Springfield, settled c 1706, inc 1731

Brinckle, William Draper (brĭng'klē), 1768–1862, American pomologist and physician, originator of many varieties of fruits He was one of the founders of the American Pomological Society

Brindaban (brĭn"dubŭn'), Bindraban (bĭn"drubŭn'), or Bindrabund (bĭn"drubŭnd'), town (pop 20,718), W central United Provs , India Legends about the youth of the Hindu god Krishna center about the town There are about 1,000 shrines, chiefly dating from the 16th cent , notably the elegant Red Temple of Krishna

Brindisi (brĭn'dēzē, brĭndē'zē, Ital brēn'dēzē), Latin Brundisium, city (pop 35,984), capital of Brindisi prov , Apulia, S Italy An Adriatic port, it has been noted since ancient times for its traffic with the Levant Its excellent harbor was a Roman naval station, a chief embarkation point for the Crusaders, and an important Italian naval base in the First World War One of the two columns marking the terminus of the Appian Way is still standing There are two Romanesque churches, a fine cloister, and a castle built by Emperor Frederick II Vergil died here

Brindley, James, 1716–72, self-taught English engineer, noted as a canal builder. His first canal (1759), built for the duke of Bridgewater, from Worsley to Manchester and later extended to Runcorn, was carried over the Irwell river by a fixed aqueduct, the first of its kind Among many others of his design was the Grand Trunk Canal connecting the Trent and Mersey rivers

Brinkley, city (pop 3,409), E Ark , near the White River, laid out c 1872 It is a cotton and lumbering center

Brinton, Daniel Garrison, 1837–99, American anthropologist, b Thornbury, Pa At the age of 50 he retired from medical practice to devote himself to anthropology He was already established as an authority on the American Indian His Myths of the New World (1868) asserted his opposition to the diffusion theory The American Race (1891) was the first comprehensive attempt at a systematic classification of the American Indian He was editor and compiler of the six-volume Library of Aboriginal American Literature (1882–85), which contains the celebrated Chronicles of the Mayas He made many significant contributions to American archaeology, linguistics, and the study of primitive religions From 1886 until his death he was professor of American archaeology and linguistics at the Univ of Pennsylvania.

Brinvilliers, Marie Madeleine d'Aubray, marquise de. see Poison Affair

Brion, Admiral de see Chabot, Philippe de

Brioscо, Andrea (ändrā'ä brōs'kō), 1470'–1532, Italian architect and sculptor, known also as Andrea Riccio [curly-headed], b Padua He designed the Church of Santa Giustina in Padua, but his fame rests chiefly on his works in bronze

briquette (brĭkĕt'), fuel made from powdered coal or coal dust, held together in a solid mass by some binding substance, as pitch, and shaped like small bricks (from which it gets its name) or in balls, lumps, or ovate form The coal dust is washed, mixed with the pitch, and molded See also peat

Brisbane, Albert (brĭz'bān), 1809–90, American social theorist and publicist, b Batavia N Y After studying with Charles Fourier in Paris, he returned to America to become an enthusiastic advocate of Fourierism His Social Destiny of Man (1840) aroused widespread interest, especially that of Horace Greeley, who gave him a column in the Tribune Brisbane was instrumental in the founding of the phalanxes at Brook Farm and Red Bank, N J The failure of most of the other phalanxes was disastrous for the Fourierist cause, but Brisbane reaffirmed his convictions in his General Introduction to the Social Sciences (1876) His wife edited and wrote an introduction to his autobiography, published posthumously as Albert Brisbane a Mental Biography (1893). Arthur Brisbane (1864–1936), editor of the New York Evening Journal and other Hearst papers, was his son

Brisbane, Sir Thomas Makdougall (brĭz'bŭn, -bān), 1773–1860, British soldier, astronomer, and colonial administrator, b Scotland He is generally remembered for the Australian river and city named for him during his governorship of New South Wales From 1793 to 1814 he served in Flanders, in the West Indies, in the Peninsular War, and in Canada, rising to be a brigadier general As governor of New South Wales (1821–25) he encouraged agriculture, land reclamation, exploration, and immigration, but his poor financial sense necessitated his recall He had built (1822) at Paramatta, near Sydney, an observatory where work was done (1822–26) resulting in the "Brisbane Catalogue" of 7,385 stars Returning to Scotland, he founded an observatory at Makerstoun, where valuable observations on magnetism were started (1841), these were incorporated into three volumes in the transactions of the Royal Society of Edinburgh He was made president of the society in 1833

Brisbane (brĭz'bun), city (pop 21,391, metropolitan pop 402,030), capital of Queensland, Australia, on the Brisbane river above its mouth on Moreton Bay It is the seat of the Univ of Queensland (1909), a national art gallery (1895), and a museum (1871) There are Anglican and Roman Catholic cathedrals Brisbane has steel and textile mills, automobile plants, and railway workshops The principal exports are wool, meat, gold, sugar, and coal The area was settled in 1824 as a penal colony, and the city was named for Sir Thomas Brisbane, governor of New South Wales

Briseis (brĭsē'ĭs), in the ILIAD, daughter of Briseus of Lynnessus She was captured in the Trojan War by ACHILLES, who made her his slave AGAMEMNON, forced to return CHRYSEIS to her father, took Briseis from Achilles instead The "wrath of Achilles" was aroused, and he sulked in his tent This story is a crucial point in the narrative of the Iliad

Brissot de Warville, Jacques Pierre (zhăk' pyĕr' brēsō' du vārvēl'), 1754–93, French revolutionist and journalist A lawyer of humble origin, he began his career by writing numerous pamphlets and books His Théorie des lois criminelles (1781) was a plea for penal reform The political pamphlets that followed brought about his exile He visited the Netherlands, Switzerland, England, and the United States In 1789 he returned to France and began to edit the Patriote français, which later became the organ of the GIRONDISTS (at first called Brissotins) Brissot, feeling that a war would spread the principles of the Revolution abroad, did much to foment trouble with his violent diatribes against monarchs In the Legislative Assembly his great influence on the conduct of foreign affairs was largely responsible for the French declaration of war in 1792 He was interested in humanitarian schemes and founded the abolitionist Société des Amis des Noirs (c 1788) Brissot originated the phrase which Proudhon later made famous, "Property is theft," but he was not consistent in condemning property rights, and his socialism went little further than demands of work for all He admired the American republic, founded the Gallo-American Society, and wrote Considerations on the Relative Situation of France and the United States (1788, in English) and The Commerce of America with Europe (1794, in English) The Jacobin victory over the Girondists resulted in his execution See Eloise Ellery, Brissot de Warville (1915)

Bristol, George Digby, 2d earl of see BRISTOL, JOHN DIGBY, 1ST EARL OF

Bristol, John Bunyan, 1826–1909, American landscape painter, b Hillsdale, N Y He painted many scenes of Florida and New England, such as Afternoon on the St John's River, View of Lake Champlain, and View of Mt Oxford

Bristol, John Digby, 1st earl of, 1580–1653, English diplomat He spent most of the years 1611–24 at the Spanish court and as ambassador conducted the prolonged negotiations for the marriage of Prince Charles (later CHARLES I) to the Spanish infanta Digby was made earl of Bristol in 1622, but the next year during the visit of Charles and the duke of Buckingham to Madrid, he offended both young men as he tried to perform his official duties The negotiations failed, and Bristol was recalled and confined to his house until he protested before Parliament and was impeached by the king (1626) He was then imprisoned in the Tower without trial until Parliament released him in 1628 Now a parliamentary leader, he was nevertheless a moderate, and as Parliament became more extreme, he became unpopular In 1642 he was committed to the Tower by Parliament He adopted the royalist cause after the outbreak of the civil war and fought at Edgehill Later he opposed continuing the war He died in exile in Paris Of his writings the best known is his Apology (1647) His son was George Digby, 2d earl of Bristol, 1612–77 At first a supporter of the parliamentary party in the civil war, he later fought with some distinction in the royalist forces Afterward he served Louis XIV of France On his return to England after the Restoration, he was ineligible for office because he had been converted to Catholicism. Having served Charles I in exile as secretary of state, he had some influence at court until his attempt to impeach Clarendon for treason failed in 1663 See biography by Dorothea Townshend (1924)

Bristol (-tul), county borough (1931 pop 403,948, 1948 estimated pop 435,000), and city, Gloucestershire, England, on the Avon at the confluence of the Frome and near the mouth of the Severn The city has good shipping facilities, in addition to its own docks, there are others at Avonmouth and Portishead A tunnel under the Severn carries the railroad to Wales Trade with Canada, the United States, the West Indies, and Ireland is extensive The imports include grain, sugar, fruits, oils, tobacco, hides, and cattle The chief manufactures are chemicals, metal castings, fertilizer, flour, paper, biscuits, tiles, and leather goods Airplane factories have existed here since 1910, and the city has given its name to various types of planes In 1838 the Great Western, one of the first two transatlantic steamships, was built here Bristol was connected with the colonization of Newfoundland and the voyages of Sebastian and John Cabot, to whom there is a monument on Brandon Hill Bristol's early importance was largely due to commerce with Africa and America—traffic in slaves, manufactured goods, and sugar The Church of St Mary Redcliffe was built in the 13th cent and rebuilt in the 15th There is a cathedral on the site of a 12th-century Augustinian abbey Bristol's schools include the Univ of Bristol (formerly University College), a grammar school of the 16th cent, the George Müller orphanage at Ashley Down, and the technical school of the Merchant Venturers' Association Thomas Chatterton and Robert Southey were born in Bristol, and Macaulay lived here for a time The city was subjected to heavy air raids in 1940 and 1941, resulting in many casualties and considerable damage Temple and Redcliffe, across the Avon, are parts of Bristol, and CLIFTON is a suburb See C M McInnes, A Gateway of Empire (1939)

Bristol 1 City (pop 30,167), central Conn, on the Pequabuck and SW of Hartford, settled 1727, inc 1911, coextensive with Bristol town, inc 1785 Clockmaking dates from 1790, also made here are ball bearings, tools, and other metal products 2 Fishing town (pop 1,355), S Maine, a resort near the coast S of Damariscotta, settled c 1626, inc 1765 It includes PEMAQUID and New Harbor Bristol became one of the principal trading posts of the Maine coast It was several times the object of attack by Indians and French in the 17th and 18th cent The naval fight between the Enterprise and the Boxer took place off Monhegan island near here in 1813 3 Town (pop 1,632), central N H, on the Pemigewasset and NNW of Concord, in a region of hills, lakes, and streams, inc 1819 See R W Musgrove, History of the Town of Bristol, New Hampshire (1904) 4 Industrial borough (pop 11,895), SE Pa, on the Delaware river opposite Burlington, N J, and 20 mi NE of Philadelphia, settled c 1681, laid out 1697, inc 1720 Its manufactures include paper, machinery and textiles Among old houses and churches here is the Friends Meetinghouse, built c 1710 5 Town (pop 11,159), co seat of Bristol co, E R I, on Narragansett Bay SE of Providence, inc 1681 Mt Hope Bridge connects the town with Portsmouth Originally in Plymouth Colony, it passed to Rhode Island in 1746 A monument near Mt Hope marks the place where King Philip fell, and there is a museum of Indian relics Bristol Harbor is used for yachts and coastwise fishing boats, the famous Herreshoff boat works were established in 1863 There is also a large worsted mill The town still has pre-Revolutionary buildings, including the Bosworth house (1680) Lafayette stayed at the Reynolds house in 1778 The 1938 hurricane caused heavy damage in Bristol See W H Munro, History of Bristol (1880) and Tales of an Old Seaport (1917) 6 City (pop in Tenn, 14,004, in Va, 9,768) on the Tenn-Va line, in the mountains, settled 1749 as Sapling Grove, inc as towns (Va town as Goodson, Tenn town as Bristol) 1856, as Bristol city 1890 Today the two cities, which are separate municipalities but economically a unit, are a rail and industrial center in a timber, farm, coal, and iron region Textiles are among Bristol's varied manufactures King College and two junior colleges for women (Virginia Intermont and Sullins) are here 7 Town (pop 1,939), W Vt, in the Green Mts, NNE of Middlebury and crossed by the New Haven river, chartered 1762, permanently settled 1786 Middlebury College's summer school of German is held here 8 City on the Va-Tenn border see BRISTOL 6

Bristol Avon see AVON 1, river, England

Bristol Channel, inlet of the Atlantic separating Wales and SW England, stretching 85 mi from its beginning eastward to the mouth of the Severn, where Cardiff, Wales, is on one side and Weston-super-Mare, Somerset, England, on the other It is 43 mi wide between St Ann's Head, Pembrokeshire, and Hartland Point, Devonshire Its chief bays are (in Wales) Milford Haven, Caermarthen, and Swansea and (in England) Barnstaple and Bridgwater Besides the Severn, the channel receives the Taff, Tawe, Towy, and Parrett rivers Pembroke, Swansea, Cardiff, Ilfracombe, Barnstaple, and Bideford are the chief cities on the channel, and it is the approach to Newport, Bristol, and Gloucester via the Severn

Bristow, Benjamin Helm (brĭ'stō), 1832–96, American cabinet officer, b Elkton, Ky, grad Jefferson (now Washington and Jefferson) College, 1851 He was admitted (1853) to the Kentucky bar Bristow, a Union officer in the Civil War, was a state senator (1863–65), U S attorney for the Kentucky district (1866–70), and the first U S Solicitor General (1870–72) In June, 1874, President Grant appointed him Secretary of the Treasury He thoroughly reorganized the department after the scandalous administration of William A RICHARDSON and strengthened his growing reputation by a courageous and successful prosecution of the powerful WHISKY RING However, he incurred Grant's hostility and was virtually forced to resign in June, 1876 There was a strong movement in the Republican party to run Bristow for President in 1876, but the nomination ultimately went to Rutherford B Hayes Removing to New York city in 1878, he spent the remainder of his life as a distinguished and successful lawyer

Bristow, George Frederick, 1825–98, American composer and violinist, b Brooklyn, N Y He played the violin (1842–80) in the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and conducted the Harmonic Society from 1851 to 1862 His opera, Rip van Winkle (New York, 1855), based on Washington Irving's story, was the second American opera publicly performed He championed native composers

Bristow, city (pop 6,050), E central Okla, SW of Tulsa, in an oil and gas region, settled c 1898

Britain, conventional name applied to Great Britain of the period before the Germanic invasions in the 5th and 6th cent After that time the island is said to consist of ENGLAND, WALES, and SCOTLAND Successive waves of migration or invasion in the history of the island were conditioned by its geography In the north and the west are mountains, heavily wooded and with a damp, cool climate The west and south, in contrast, are relatively low, with fertile plateaus and river valleys, with less rainfall, more sun, and greater productivity despite the large woodland areas Lying close to Europe, the lowland plain is easy of access, and harbors on the east and south are inviting The movements of British history have been largely from south and east to north and west Information about Britain before the Roman invasions is drawn from deductions from classical writers (especially Julius CAESAR), from linguistic facts, and from archaeological discoveries Remains of a megalithic culture (perhaps brought by Iberians) exist in dolmens and barrows and in the later stone circles at Stonehenge and Avebury By the time the Romans arrived in Britain (55 B C) all the British tribes were Celtic, Celtic invasions from the Continent are thus presupposed The pre-Celtic aborigines left no trace of their language, and little is known of their civilization The Picts in the north may have been Celtic or pre-Celtic Possibly the aborigines mined tin in Cornwall and used jet and gold in their ornaments The date of the introduction of Celtic language cannot be determined At any rate, at some time before the 6th cent B C the invading Celts brought to the prevailing British Bronze Age settlements an Iron Age culture similar to that of the Hallstatt culture and settled in the southeast In the southwest, an Iron Age culture of the later, La Tène type was established by traders from Brittany, and it prevailed in Wales and north into the highlands Another wave of invaders from France conquered and left examples of their beautiful La Tène art in the East Riding of Yorkshire and north into what is now E Scotland The relations of island and Continent were close, trading was brisk between them, and the tribal organization in Britain had many of the features of that of the Celts in Gaul, including the priests of their common religion, the DRUIDS The last important invasion by continental Celts was by the Belgae from Gaul c 75 B C They brought with them the deep plow, which turned the earth rather than scratching it, and the practice of coining money Their settlements were in E Kent and around the mouth of the Thames So close were their relations with Gaul that Julius Caesar undertook his conquest of Britain to prevent the Britons from sending troops against him and providing a haven for his enemies He landed briefly in 55 B C and tried to conquer Britain in 54 B C, but it was a century before Rome took a real interest in Britain In A D 43 the Emperor CLAUDIUS led an army into Britain and, dividing his legions, subdued the country S of York and E of Wales The three generals of the 1st cent in Roman Britain were able men—Aulus Plautius, Suetonius PAULINUS, and AGRICOLA By A D 85 Rome was mistress of Britain S of the Clyde A significant example of the native attitude toward Rome may be seen in the rising led by BOADICEA A revolt of the northern British, who drove the Romans S of the Humber, brought Emperor HADRIAN in 122. He subdued the island and erected a northern frontier, HADRIAN'S WALL. The Wall of ANTONINUS, erected farther north at the orders of ANTONINUS PIUS in 142, was not the boundary for long—by 200 the Romans had been driven S of Hadrian's Wall, and after that they confined themselves to strengthening and holding that rampart. The fact that the unity of the Roman Empire was showing strains and weaknesses thus already affected Britain, for the defeat of the Romans in the north was caused by Claudius Albinus's bid for power against SEVERUS. Albinus withdrew much of the garrison of the wall to fight for him on the Continent. Severus himself came to Britain after the wall was rebuilt and harried the Scots and Picts north of it. The heyday of Roman civilization in Britain was the 1st half of the 3d cent., the northern frontier was best defended, the raids from the east had not begun, and the Continent still enjoyed the Pax Romana. Britain was divided into two (later more) provinces, each well garrisoned. There were several important cities, among them Londinium (London), Calleva Atrebatum (Silchester), Venta Belgarum (Winchester), Eboracum (York), Camulodunum (Colchester), Deva (Chester), and Venta Silurum (Caerwent). The gridiron plan of the towns and the architecture of the public buildings show evidence of Roman engineers and architects. The ROMAN ROADS in Britain were primarily military and seem to have radiated from London, a trade center and possibly the provincial center of government, to other cities and to legionary forts (see ERMINE STREET, FOSSE WAY, and WATLING STREET). The older, less direct roads (see ICKNIELD WAY) continued in use too. In the country were some villas owned by persons of wealth—both Romans and Britons—who farmed their land with slave labor and leased holdings to tenants. The language of the towns and of the wealthy was probably Latin. The Romans brought their worship of their pagan gods with them, but did not oppose—in fact, adopted—the worship of some of the local Celtic deities as well. Christianity was early at home in Britain, and it was a Briton, Pelagius, who in Rome late in this period gave his name to a major Christian heresy. Manichaeism was also a popular minority religion in Britain as elsewhere in the empire. In 286 or 287 a subordinate of Emperor Diocletian, CARAUSIUS, set himself up as emperor of Britain, and it was not until 296 that Diocletian's official, Constantius, restored Roman rule. He had once more to rebuild Hadrian's Wall, and he reorganized Agricola's defenses in the west against the Irish. Fully as important, against the menace of Frankish and Saxon pirates he built forts along the so-called Saxon Shore, the southeast coast from the Wash to the Isle of Wight. This Constantius was the father of the emperor Constantine I, who was in Britain with his father and who is said to have had a British mother. After Constantine's death in 337 the northern barbarians made repeated raids, until in 368 there was a three-sided invasion concerted by them with the Saxons and Irish, of serious proportions. Valentinian sent Theodosius, who rebuilt Hadrian's Wall for the last time and pacified Britain, though he found serious infiltrations of new barbarian settlements in Britain and some disaffection among peasants and the natives who were Roman soldiers. By 383 the wall was overrun again, and the raids continued. (In an early 5th-century Irish raid St PATRICK was carried off.) But the officials of Rome and the comparatively few Roman residents were powerless to defend Britain much longer, and the traditional view is that c 410 Honorius told the Romano-Britons to rule themselves. Presumably both Romans and Britons regarded this as a temporary state, and the civil and military Romano-British organizations carried on. A Roman reoccupation may have taken place between 417 and c 429. A final appeal from Britain in 446 to Aetius for aid was refused. The end of Roman occupation meant the withdrawal of officials, but the Romanized Britons remained. As the system inherited from Rome gradually broke down, warring tribal kings such as VORTIGERN took over. A period of prosperity followed, but the barbarian and Celtic influences came to the fore. The Saxon raiders were more numerous, and by the end of the 5th cent. ANGLO-SAXONS and JUTES were not only raiding but also settling in Britain (see ENGLAND). Conflicts were inevitable, and sometime before the end of the 6th cent. many Roman towns and villas were deserted, though they give no evidence of violence. Arthur of Britain may historically have been a leader of armed resistance to the invaders. In the meanwhile the Christianization of the Scots and Picts was pushed in the 5th cent. by St Ninian, the Irish were converted by St Patrick, and the Welsh had St Illud, teacher of St David. As Christianity increased in the west and north, the pressure of invaders from those directions lessened. Also in the 5th cent.—and for some obscure reason—Britons migrated in considerable numbers to Brittany. Although the Romanization of S Britain seemed to disappear before the reviving tribal Celtic culture and though Britain was cut off from contact with Rome for nearly two centuries by the Germanic invasions, a residue of Roman influence remained in place names, in architectural ruins, and in the incalculable force of tradition. See F J Haverfield, Roman Occupation of Britain (1923) and Romanization of Roman Britain (1924), R E M Wheeler, Prehistoric and Roman Wales (1925), R G Collingwood, Roman Britain (rev ed., 1934), R G Collingwood and J N L Myres, Roman Britain and the English Settlements (2d ed., 1937), Sir C F Fox, The Personality of Britain (4th ed., 1943), Jacquetta Hawkes and Christopher Hawkes, Prehistoric Britain (1947), H. M. Chadwick, Early Scotland (1949).

britannia metal, silvery-white alloy of tin with antimony and copper, sometimes also with bismuth, lead, and zinc. It is very similar in appearance to, but is harder than, pewter. It is used widely for the manufacture of table utensils—spoons, forks, dishes, and pitchers.

Britannicus (Claudius Tiberius Germanicus Britannicus) (britā'nĭkus), A D 41?–A D 55, Roman prince, son of CLAUDIUS and MESSALINA, so called in honor of Claudius' conquests in Britain. After Claudius' marriage with AGRIPPINA, mother of NERO, Britannicus was set aside as heir in favor of Nero, after whose accession Britannicus was apparently poisoned. The death of Britannicus is the subject of Racine's drama Britannicus.

British Cameroons: see NIGERIA and CAMEROONS.

British Columbia, province (359,279 sq. mi., with water surface 366,255 sq. mi., 1941 pop. 817,861, 1948 estimated pop. 1,082,000), W Canada. Victoria is the capital, Vancouver is the largest city and chief port. Other centers include New Westminster, Trail, North Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo, Kamloops, and Nelson. Westernmost province of Canada, British Columbia is bounded on the east by Alberta, on the south by Montana, Idaho, and Washington, on the west by the Pacific, on the northwest by Alaska, and on the north by the Yukon and the Mackenzie dist., Northwest Territories. Off its deeply indented Pacific coast lie many islands, notably Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands. The province is almost wholly mountainous, the Rockies, which in the southeast form the boundary with Alberta, stretch through N British Columbia, and ranges and detached mountain groups in almost parallel array, rear their heights westward to the Coast Mts. along the Pacific. Chief of the many rivers which cut valleys through the mountains is the Fraser, which with its tributaries drains much of central and S British Columbia in its course to the Pacific. In this region also are the upper Columbia, the Kootenay, and other rivers. In the north the Peace, after racing through a mountain canyon, flows eastward through fertile, rolling prairies, while the Stikine, the Nass, the Skeena, and others wind westward to the Pacific. Innumerable long, narrow lakes lie all through the interior, among them Babine, Stuart, and François in the north, Quesnel in central British Columbia, and Kootenay, the Arrow Lakes, and Okanagan in the south. Large areas of central and N British Columbia are little settled, except for mining and logging camps and for farm centers in the wheat-and-cattle country of the Peace. Fur trapping is still carried on. A portion of the Alaska Highway cuts across NE British Columbia. The population of the province is largely concentrated in the south and on Vancouver Island. Farm country, some of it under irrigation, yields apples and other tree fruits, strawberries, raspberries, and other products. Dairying is also carried on. Lumbering is a major industry of British Columbia. Mining of the extensive mineral deposits—coal, copper, lead, zinc, gold, silver, wolfram, and some uranium—and fishing (salmon and herring especially) rank high in the provincial economy. Other industries include shipbuilding, woodworking, food processing, and metal smelting. Attracted by the favorable climate and by the expansion of industry during the Second World War, many newcomers settled in the province in the 1940s. With four Canadian national parks—Glacier, Mt. Revelstoke, Yoho, and Kootenay—and with some 50 provincial parks, British Columbia is host to thousands of tourists. The scenic wonders have not been known to white men for long. Late in the 18th cent., alarmed by the presence of Russian fur traders in Alaska, Spain dispatched (1774) an expedition under Juan Pérez, who sailed along the coast but did not make a landing, in 1775 the Hezeta and Quadra expedition was sent to the coast. In 1778 Capt. James Cook, under commission by England to search for the Northwest Passage, was at NOOTKA SOUND, where later (1788) John Meares, one of the earliest English fur traders on the Northwest coast, established a post. Meares fell into difficulties with the Spanish, who were attempting to make a settlement at Nootka Sound. This led to trouble between Spain and England, resolved by the Nootka Convention in 1790, and the way was opened for the British, who sent George Vancouver to Nootka. From 1792 to 1794 he explored and surveyed along the coast. In 1793 Sir Alexander MACKENZIE made his way through British Columbia on his epoch-making journey across the continent, to be followed early in the 19th cent. by other fur traders and explorers of the North West Company who crossed the mountains and established posts in the transmontane region they called New Caledonia. Chief among them were Simon Fraser, who founded Fort McLeod in 1905, and David Thompson. After the union (1821) of the Hudson's Bay and North West companies, the region became a preserve of the great company and was under the rule of the redoubtable John McLoughlin. From 1835 to 1844 Peter Skene OGDEN headed the fur trade in New Caledonia. In 1843 Victoria was founded, and in 1849 Vancouver Island was ceded by the Hudson's Bay Company and became a crown colony, of which Sir James DOUGLAS became governor in 1851. In 1858 he also became governor of the newly created colony of British Columbia on the mainland, and the supremacy of the Hudson's Bay Company was ended. The discovery of gold brought the great gold rushes—to the Fraser and Thompson rivers in 1858 and a little later to the Cariboo region—and a rather turbulent population. The miners pushed northward. The territory about the Stikine was made a separate political division in 1862 but in 1863 was added to British Columbia. From 1864 to 1866 Vancouver Island and British Columbia had separate governments, in 1866 they were combined, and in 1871 British Columbia became a province of the dominion of Canada. Delay in fulfilling a promise made by the dominion government to link British Columbia to E Canada by a transcontinental railroad created disaffection but the secession movement failed, and in 1885 the Canadian Pacific Railway reached Vancouver. A new gold rush came to the Kootenay country in 1887, and later there were strikes in the far north. British Columbia has been involved in several troubles between Great Britain and the United States and between Canada and the United States, notably the Oregon question (see OREGON), the SAN JUAN BOUNDARY DISPUTE, the controversy over the Bering Sea fur-seal fisheries, and the Alaska boundary dispute. The region attracted many Oriental immigrants, and friction resulted. Opposition to the Orientals—Chinese, East Indian, and Japanese—caused trouble also with the dominion government, but stoppage of the immigration was achieved, and in the Second World War many Japanese were removed from the province and relocated. Dukhobors also settled in British Columbia, but the newcomers in recent years have been mostly Canadian settlers from the Prairie Provs. The Univ. of British Columbia is at Point Grey, a suburb of Vancouver. See histories of British Columbia by H. H. Bancroft (1887), A. G. Morice (3d ed., 1905), F. W. Howay (1928), and T. A. Rickard (1948), Agnes Laut, The Cariboo Trail (1916), W. A. Carrothers, British Columbia Fisheries (1941), F. W. Howay and others, British Columbia and the United States (1942), Agnes Rothery, The Ports of British Columbia (1943).

British Columbia, University of, at Vancouver, provincially supported, coeducational, chartered 1908, opened 1915. It has faculties of agriculture, arts and science (with social work and teacher training), applied science (with engineering, forestry, and nursing), and law. There are botanical gardens, a forest-products laboratory, and an ethnographical museum.

British East Africa, inclusive term for KENYA, UGANDA, NYASALAND, TANGANYIKA, and NORTHERN RHODESIA.

British East India Company. see EAST INDIA COMPANY, BRITISH.

British Empire, at its height in the late 19th and early 20th cent., the greatest empire of the ancient or modern world in area, population, and resources. During the period of discovery in the 15th and 16th cent., England acquired its first colony, Newfoundland, in 1583. The foundations of the empire were not started, however, until the early 17th cent. with the chartering of the EAST INDIA COMPANY and the consequent strife with the Dutch and Portuguese in the East. English settlements were made also in North America and the West Indies. Two forces motivating English expansion then were trade and a desire to settle in new lands. In general the pattern of development was settlement to assert trading rights followed by consolidation of several settlements into a colony by agreements or conquest, the government of the colony to be directed by the colonial office in England with more or less regard for local customs. What seems to be an orderly process occurred more or less fortuitously, for the empire was begun and carried on by individuals and small groups, all developments were slow and were made to suit each local situation, and there were many blunders in the process. In the 17th and 18th cent., England regarded the colonies as designed to provide raw materials and markets according to the theories of MERCANTILISM. English NAVIGATION ACTS implemented these theories. Scattered islands and coaling stations were acquired as necessary links on the ocean routes between England and far possessions, and the navy was strengthened to protect trade and colonies. The English Parliament made laws and imposed taxes enforced by royal governors in the colonies, while colonial legislatures dealt only with local matters The refusal of the colonists' demands for freedom in government and trade resulted in England's loss of the Thirteen Colonies in the American Revolution The Canadian and Indian provinces conquered from the French in the SEVEN YEARS WAR remained, but it was not until the 19th cent after Lord Durham's report (1839) that the rigid colonial system was substantially changed Meanwhile, in the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars British sea power had been strengthened by such conquests as Ceylon and Malta and the Dutch settlement at the Cape of Good Hope The attitude of men in England toward the colonies was changing in the 19th cent The same movement which resulted in the Reform Bill of 1832 extending the English franchise was reflected in the desire to make the colonies ever more self-governing members of the empire The slave trade was abolished in 1833, and free trade became English policy in 1842–46, giving the colonies freedom to develop economically Indeed, development rather than exploitation was the policy of men who undertook systematic emigration to Australia and New Zealand Canada, the most advanced of the colonies, set the pattern of self-government by taking over direction of Canadian foreign policy in 1859 and became a dominion in 1867 In 1858 the long history of the East India Company ended, and INDIA came to be ruled by Parliament and crown In 1877 Queen Victoria was proclaimed empress of India, and in 1885 BURMA was added, as the other conquests had been, to India In the European race for colonies in the last 20 years of the 19th cent, Great Britain increased British holdings in Africa immensely and gained power in Egypt and acquired Malaya, Borneo, and over 100 islands in the Pacific, and part of New Guinea By the end of the century Great Britain controlled nearly one quarter of the world's population and area Protection of backward peoples and rivalry with other colonial powers complicated the problems of empire New dominions were created from the old colonies—Australia (1907), New Zealand (1907), Newfoundland (1907, joined Canada, 1949), and the Union of South Africa (1910) Through the IMPERIAL CONFERENCE, begun in 1887, this loose association was held together with the United Kingdom and met the test of the First World War successfully In the stress of war Egypt was declared a protectorate, and in the settlement after the war England received mandates over Tanganyika, PALESTINE, and IRAQ (surrendered 1932). Egypt regained independence in 1923, with the British reserving control of the Suez Canal, and dominion status was granted to the Irish Free State in 1921 The organization of the empire was changed officially to the British Commonwealth of Nations in the Statute of Westminster (1931) Actually this measure belatedly recognized the status achieved by the dominions in the war, in the Treaty of Versailles, and in the League of Nations The dominions were recognized as completely independent save for nominal allegiance to the crown In 1937 Burma was separated from India, and Ireland declared its independence from the British commonwealth except in external policy In the Second World War the dominions and the empire (except Ireland) voluntarily fought beside the United Kingdom and later aided Great Britain with loans and trade agreements After the Second World War the long and troubled mandate over Palestine was relinquished in 1948, and in the same year the independent Union of Burma was set up as a republic The dominions of India, Pakistan, and Ceylon were established in 1948, and in 1949 India became a republic within the commonwealth The republic of Ireland dissociated itself from the commonwealth also in 1949 Today the dependencies of the United Kingdom administered through the colonial office are the colonies and protectorates in the Mediterranean—Cyprus, Gibraltar, and Malta, in Africa—Kenya, Tanganyika, Uganda, British Somaliland, Zanzibar, Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Gambia, the Gold Coast, Nigeria, and Sierra Leone, in the Far East—Brunei, Hong Kong, Malaya, North Borneo, Sarawak, and Singapore, in the Indian Ocean—Aden, Mauritius, the Seychelles, and the Maldive Islands, in the Pacific Ocean—the British Solomon Islands, Fiji, the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, Tonga, and Pitcairn Island, in the Atlantic Ocean —Bermuda, the British West Indies, British Guiana, British Honduras, the Falkland Islands, and St Helena No two colonies are ruled by identical governments, for native traditions and institutions have in many places been used as far as possible They are governed by nominees of the government in London, that nominee assisted by a legislative council which is in some cases partially or wholly elected Southern Rhodesia is in a separate category, as a self-governing colony which has virtually attained dominion status, in all but foreign affairs and legislation concerning native affairs Protectorates have a lesser measure of self-government than Southern Rhodesia, they have no authority over foreign affairs and the acts of their governments are subject to veto by the crown. The commonwealth relations office administers three high-commission territories in Africa—Basutoland, Bechuanaland, and Swaziland. The mandates in Tanganyika, Togoland, and the Cameroons in West Africa formed after the First World War were placed under the trusteeship system of the United Nations in 1946, administered by the colonial office Great Britain is joint administrator with Egypt of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, with France of the New Hebrides; and with the United States of Canton Island and Enderbury Island The total population of the commonwealth, including all dependencies, is over 500,000,000, in an area of nearly 16 000,000 sq mi The true empire is in the colonial dependencies of the United Kingdom, the commonwealth association being voluntary and seemingly tenuous, but strong See Ramsay Muir, A Short History of the British Commonwealth (5th ed , 2 vols , 1934), Cambridge History of the British Empire, ed by J H Rose, A P Newton, and E A Benians (Vols I–II, IV–VIII, 1929–41), Basil Williams, The British Empire (2d ed , 1944), A B Keith, The British Commonwealth of Nations (rev ed , 1944)

British Guiana see GUIANA

British Honduras (hŏndŏō'rus, -dyŏō'-), British crown colony (8,598 sq mi , pop c 62,000), Central America The capital is BELIZE on the Belize river, and the colony is sometimes called Belize It is bounded on the north by MEXICO, on the south and west by Guatemala, and on the east by the Caribbean Generally low, with mangrove swamps on coast and cays, the land rises toward hills and mountains culminating in the Cockscomb Ridge (c 3,700 ft high) Though most of the area is heavily forested, yielding mahogany, cedar, and logwood, there are regions of fertile savannas and barren pine ridges In addition to woods, the chief products are chicle, coconuts, cohune nuts, and citrus fruits Export of bananas no longer flourishes because leaf blight has destroyed the plantations Many short rivers drain the land The people are predominantly Negro, but there are some Maya, some Carib, and Spanish Americans The status of British Honduras today is uncertain Once part of the Maya civilization, it was probably entered by Cortés on his march to Honduras in 1524–25, but the Spanish made no efforts at colonization Instead, British buccaneers began using the cays to prey on Spanish shipping, and the founding of Belize is credited to one of them, Wallace or Wallis, in the early 17th cent A few settlers began exploiting logwood, used to make dyes, and this became the principal early source of wealth Several times Spain contested British claims to sovereignty (though granting logging rights), but abandoned them after defeat in the battle of St George's Cay (1798) With independence in 1821, Guatemala claimed the territory, but signed a treaty in 1859 abrogating its sovereignty in return for adequate communications to be established by Great Britain between Belize and Petén The provisions were not carried out, nor were subsequent treaty changes effective In 1946 the dispute was brought to the attention of the United Nations See Major Sir John A Burdon, Archives of British Honduras, Vol I (1931), Ralph Hancock, The Rainbow Republics (1947)

British Isles see GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND

British Museum, the national repository in London for treasures in literature, science, and art It has departments of manuscripts, of printed books, of antiquities, of prints and drawings, and of coins and medals The museum was established by act of Parliament in 1753, its nuclei being the Cotton collection (see COTTON, SIR ROBERT BRUCE), the HARLEIAN LIBRARY, the Sir Hans SLOANE collections, and the royal library given (1757) by George II The institution was opened (1759) under its present name in Montague House, but the acquisition (1823) of the library of George III necessitated larger quarters, the first wing of the new building was completed in 1829, the quadrangle in 1852, and the great domed reading room in 1857 Other additions were built in 1885–87 and 1906–13 Sir Anthony PANIZZI began the printing of the library's catalogue The book collection is increased partly by the copyright law requiring the deposit of each book printed in the United Kingdom The natural history collection of the museum was transferred (1880–83) to buildings in South Kensington One of the exhibits of the Egyptian department is the basalt slab known as the ROSETTA STONE The Greek treasures include the ELGIN MARBLES In 1935 the Codex Sinaiticus, which had belonged to the tsar, was bought from the Soviet government During the Second World War valuable books and manuscripts were evacuated to a coal mine in Wales See J Penn, For Readers Only (1937), Arundell J K Esdaile, The British Museum Library (1946)

British New Guinea see PAPUA, TERRITORY OF

British North America Act, the constitution of the dominion of CANADA, sketched at the Quebec Conference of 1864 and finally passed by the British Parliament in 1867, to take effect on July 1 of that year It reverses the principle of the U S Constitution by giving only enumerated powers to the local (provincial) legislatures and the residual powers to the dominion, but its interpretation by the privy council has somewhat nullified this design by giving a very extended scope to the provincial power of "property and civil rights," and a doctrine of "emergency powers" has had to be invented in order to give the dominion the authority needed by a national government in time of war The power of amendment is still nominally vested in the British Parliament, which in practice, however, acts only on the request of the Canadian Parliament No amendments of a controversial character have yet been made The act makes both French and English official languages in Quebec and in the Parliament and courts of the dominion and guarantees separate schools, supported by taxation, for Catholics and non-Catholics in Quebec and some other provinces See W P M Kennedy, The Constitution of Canada, 1534 to 1937 (2d ed , 1938), E M Dawson, The Government of Canada (1947)

British North Borneo see NORTH BORNEO

British Somaliland see SOMALILAND

British South Africa Company see RHODESIA.

British thermal unit (B T U), the unit measurement of heat quantity in the English system, specifically the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water at its maximum density one degree Fahrenheit One B T U is approximately equivalent to the following 251 9 calories, 777 9 foot-pounds, 1055 joules, 107 5 kilogram-meters, 0 0002928 kilowatt-hours Fuels are valued according to the quantity of heat energy which they yield upon complete combustion This is commonly measured in B T U For example, a pound of good coal when burned should yield 14,000 to 15,000 B T U , a pound of gasoline or other fuel oil, approximately 19,000 B T U

British Togoland see TOGOLAND

British West Africa, inclusive term for BRITISH CAMEROONS, British TOGOLAND, GAMBIA, GOLD COAST, NIGERIA, and SIERRA LEONE

British West Indies see WEST INDIES

Britt, town (pop 1,813), N Iowa, W of Mason City, in a farm area, inc 1887 Dairy products are made here Britt is near Eagle Lake State Park

Brittany (brĭt'unē), Breton Breiz (brā'ĕs), Fr Bretagne (brută'nyu), region and former province, NW France, a peninsula between the English Channel on the north and the Bay of Biscay on the south It is now divided into five departments, Ille-et-Vilaine, Côtes-du-Nord, Finistère, Morbihan, and Loire-Inférieure The coast, particularly at the western tip, is an irregular, rocky, and indented line, with natural harbors (particularly Brest, Lorient and Saint-Malo) and numerous islands (particularly Ushant and Belle-Île-en-Mer) In the central section are the gentle hills of Brittany There are many small rivers, in the south, the Loire flows past NANTES (the largest city) to join the Atlantic at SAINT-NAZAIRE (the chief port) RENNES was the provincial capital Fishing, sailing, and agriculture are the main occupations The area, a part of ancient Armorica, was conquered by Julius Caesar in the GALLIC WARS and became part of Lugdunensis (see GAUL) It received its modern name when it was settled (c 500) by Britons whom the Anglo-Saxons had driven from Britain Breton, their Celtic language, is spoken in traditionalist Lower (i e , western) Brittany outside the cities (see BRETON LITERATURE) Breton history is a long struggle for independence—first from the Franks (5th–9th cent), then from the dukes of Normandy and the counts of Anjou (10th–12th cent), and finally from England and France In 1196 ARTHUR I, an ANGEVIN, was definitely acknowledged as duke King John of England, who presumably murdered him (1203), failed to obtain the duchy, which passed to Arthur's brother-in-law, PETER I (Peter Mauclerc) The extinction of his direct line led to the War of the BRETON SUCCESSION (1341–64) In the HUNDRED YEARS WAR, with which this conflict was enmeshed, the Breton generals DU GUESCLIN and CLISSON and, later, Duke ARTHUR III, played a vital part The unsuccessful rebellion of Duke FRANCIS II against the French crown led to the absorption of Brittany into France after the accession of his daughter, ANNE OF BRITTANY King Francis I formally incorporated the duchy into France in 1532 Its provincial PARLEMENT functioned at Rennes Never reconciled to centralized rule, Brittany was one of the early centers of revolt in 1789 However, its staunch Catholicism and conservatism soon transformed it into an antirevolutionary stronghold, the CHOUANS were never fully subdued, and in S Brittany and the neighboring VENDÉE the revolutionists resorted to ruthless reprisals (see NOYADES) Breton nationalism grew in the 19th cent and was fueled by the anticlericalism of the Third Republic The Breton autonomists, long successfully repressed by the French government, nevertheless resisted German bribes in the Second World War Brittany was liberated by U S troops in Aug , 1944, although German troops held out at Lorient and Saint-Nazaire until May, 1945 Brittany—especially the region known as CORNOUAILLE—has retained local traditions and characteristics which have made it attractive to tourists The old fishing ports and villages, the splendid processions and pilgrimages (e.g., AURAY), and the typical Breton stone calvaries are characteristic. Formerly ascribed to the DRUIDS, many megalithic monuments dot the Breton landscape, notably at CARNAC Much of the action in ARTHURIAN LEGEND takes place in Brittany, notably in the Forest of BROCÉLIANDE See F M Gosling, Bretons at Home (1925), A M. Mosher, Spell of Brittany (1920), P F Anson, Mariners of Brittany (1931).

Britten, Benjamin (Edward Benjamin Britten), 1913–, English composer, grad Royal College of Music, London, 1934 He began to compose while very young, and his Simple Symphony (1934) is based on material from early compositions. He is known principally for the choral works A Boy Was Born (1934) and A Ceremony of Carols (1942), the orchestral Variations on a Theme of Frank Bridge (1936), and the operas Peter Grimes (London, 1945) and The Rape of Lucretia (1946) His Sinfonia da Requiem was written during a visit to the United States (1939–43). Several song cycles were composed to poems of W H Auden He has also written music for moving pictures and for the theater, concertos, and chamber music

Britton, John, 1771–1857, English antiquary and topographer The long list of his writings includes biographies, critical works on art and literature, and the descriptions of landscapes and buildings for which he is famous The Beauties of Wiltshire (3 vols , 1801-25) was written with E W Brayley The two friends wrote part of Beauties of England and Wales (18 vols in 25, 1801–15), but because of difficulties with the publishers, they did not complete the series Britton was influential in the movement to preserve ancient monuments See his Auto-Biography (3 parts, 1849–50)

Britton, Nathaniel Lord, 1859–1934, American botanist, grad Columbia School of Mines, 1879 He taught geology and botany at Columbia, 1879–96 He was the New York Botanical Garden's first director and until his retirement in 1929 had a major part in its growth His own contributions, chiefly in the field of tropical botany, include hundreds of thousands of specimens, many of great rarity, gathered on his trips to the tropics His chief works include An Illustrated Flora of the Northern United States, Canada, and the British Possessions (with Addison Brown, 1896–98), Flora of Bermuda (1918), The Bahama Flora (with C F Millspaugh, 1920), and four volumes on cacti (with J N Rose, 1919–23)

Britton. 1 City (pop 2,239), central Okla , near Oklahoma City, inc as a town 1909, as a city 1933 2 City (pop 1,500), co seat of Marshall co , NE S Dak , NE of Aberdeen near the N Dak line It is the center of a rich farming and livestock country

Brive-la-Gaillarde or Brive (brēv'-lä-gāyard'), town (pop 30,000), Corrèze dept , S central France, on the Corrèze river, in Limousin It is an ancient place, noted for its many medieval buildings It is an agricultural center

Brixen see BRESSANONE, Italy

Brixham (brĭk'sum), urban district (pop 8,145), Devonshire, England, seaport on Tor Bay SE of Paignton Fishing and coast trade are important A statue commemorates the landing of William of Orange here in 1688 Not far away, on Windmill Hill, is a cave containing bones of animals and flint implements of the Paleolithic period

Brizeux, Auguste (Julien Auguste Pélage Brizeux) (ōgüst' brēzü', zhülyĕ', pälazh'), 1803–58, Breton poet, who wrote in Breton and in French He was an ardent supporter of the Breton literary revival, and his collection of Breton poems, Telen Arvor [the harp of Armorica] (1844), was an early contribution to it In French literature he was an admirer of Lamartine, Marie (1832) is an idyl of Breton life Les Bretons (1845) also is a long poem on Brizeux's countrymen.

Brno (bŭr'nō), Ger Brünn (brün), city (pop 273,127), capital of Moravia, Czechoslovakia It has important textile, machinery, and arms industries Brno is the seat of the Czechoslovak supreme court, of Masaryk Univ (founded 1919), and of Benes Technical College Until the First World War it was predominantly German-speaking; after 1945 most Germans were expelled from Czechoslovakia, and Brno is now entirely a Czech city In 1229 King Ottocar I of Bohemia confirmed the ancient charter of Brno, a model of liberal town government These rights were widened by later kings, and Brno flourished in the 13th and 14th cent In the Hussite Wars it sided with the Roman Church The city was besieged (1645) by the Swedes under Torstensson and was the headquarters (1805) of Napoleon I at the battle of near-by Austerlitz In the 19th cent it became one of the foremost manufacturing towns of the Austrian empire The famous fortress on the Spielberg (Czech Špilberk), a hill dominating the city, was long a dreaded political prison Frans von der Trenck and Silvio Pellico (who described it in Le mie prigioni) were its most celebrated inmates. In the old part of the city, the cathedral (15th cent), the old and the new town halls (Gothic, Renaissance, and baroque), and several fine Gothic and baroque churches, are architecturally interesting. Between the two world wars large modern sections were created, but they suffered greatly during the Second World War

Broach or Baroach (both· bŭrōch'), town (pop 55,810), NW Bombay state, India, a port near the Gulf of Cambay It was an important Buddhist center in the 7th cent Under the Rajput dynasty (750–1300) it was the chief port of India Cotton is the main export and textiles the leading manufacture

Broadalbin (brôdăl'bĭn), village (pop 1,399), E central N Y , N of Amsterdam; settled 1770, inc 1924

Broadbent, Sir William Henry (brôd'bĕnt), 1835–1907, English physician, educated at Owens College and Royal School of Medicine, Manchester, and in Paris He is known for his work on paralysis and aphasia and for Broadbent's hypothesis of hemiplegia (paralysis affecting one side of the body) In 1901 he was knighted See his collected papers (1908), biography by his daughter (1909)

broadcasting, the transmission by RADIO of speech and music in programs for the public In the United States it is usually chronicled from 1920 Station WWJ in Detroit began service in August of that year and the Harding-Cox election returns were transmitted by Frank Conrad over 8XK (later KDKA) in Pittsburgh The sale of "time" to advertisers (see ADVERTISING) started two years later, and the industry, as we now know it, was thereby established Radio became increasingly attractive as an advertising medium with the coming of network operation A coast-to-coast hookup was tentatively effected early in 1924, and expansion of both audience and transmission facilities continued rapidly Two of the major networks were in existence by 1927, and the number of stations had so increased as to cause serious traffic problems Legislation (see FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION) designed to meet these was enacted, and the government has since maintained some control over the technical and business activities of the industry However, commercial stations operating in the broadcast band now number nearly 2,000, and they are distributed among 107 channels at 10-kilocycle intervals from 540 to 1600 kilocycles The necessary doubling up (e g , over 100 stations transmit on 1400 kc) produces severe interference in many locations Replacement by FREQUENCY MODULATION service is doing much to relieve the crowding See also TELEVISION

Broad Church· see ENGLAND, CHURCH OF

Broad River, rising in W North Carolina, S of Asheville, and flowing southeast and then, after crossing the S C line, due south until it joins the Saluda near Columbia to form the Congaree

Broads, the, region of lakes and lagoons, extending from Lowestoft in Suffolk to NW of Yarmouth in Norfolk, England, connected by rivers (Waveney, Yare, and Bure) It is a great yachting center

Broadstairs and Saint Peter's, urban district (1931 pop 12,745, 1943 estimated pop 13,230), on the Isle of Thanet, Kent, England, on the Channel near Ramsgate It is a watering place and was once a retreat of Charles Dickens, whose residence here is now called Bleak House

Broadview, village (pop 1,457), NE Ill , residential suburb of Chicago, inc 1913 A veterans' memorial hospital is near by

Broadview Heights, village (pop 1,141), NE Ohio, S of Cleveland, inc 1926

Broadway (brôd'wā"), famous thoroughfare of New York city, one of its main arteries of traffic, and the longest street in the world It extends from Bowling Green near the foot of Manhattan island to Albany, 150 mi north Throughout its length within New York city Broadway is chiefly a commercial street At Wall St it runs through the financial center of the country, N of Union Square (14th St) it passes a clothing and merchandising section, entering the theater district at Times Square (42d St) Here it becomes the "Great White Way," illuminated at night by a garish profusion of many-hued electric signs Points of interest along Broadway are Trinity Church (Wall St), St Paul's Chapel, oldest church building in New York city (near City Hall), the Woolworth Building (at Barclay St), the Flatiron Building (23d St), Columbia Univ (116th St), the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center (168th St), the Broadway Temple, first skyscraper church in the city (174th St), and Van Cortlandt Park (at the north end of the city)

Broca, Paul (pôl' brôkä'), 1824–80, French pathologist, anthropologist, and pioneer in neurosurgery A professor in Paris at the Faculty of Medicine and at the Anthropological Institute, he was a founder of the Anthropological Society of Paris (1859) and of the Revue d'anthropologie (1872) An authority on aphasia, he localized the center for articulate speech in the convolution of Broca or Broca's area (the third convolution of the left frontal lobe of the brain). He originated methods of classifying hair and skin color and of establishing the ratio of brain to skull brocade [from Span , from Late Latin, =embossed], rich, decorative fabric, embossed with patterns which give the effect of embroidery The ground fabric is usually of silk, the raised design of silk or of silver, gold, or silver-gilt threads. Oriental brocades have been made from antiquity Chinese records show that they were known as early as A D 230 Some of these, though richly adorned with elaborate figures in metallic threads, are not true brocade, but are made in a manner similar to TAPESTRY weaving Oriental weavers in Syria and Persia had made rich stuffs with metallic figures, and their arts came with the Moors into North Africa and S Europe In the 14th cent , weavers in Venice, Genoa, and Florence made satin heavily brocaded with threads of gold In the 17th cent , Lyons competed with Genoa and Florence in the manufacture of the rare and beautiful stuffs used in courts and palaces England imported and used brocades in the 16th cent and began their manufacture at Spitalfields in the 18th cent , competing with Lyons The modern weaving of intricate designs has been much facilitated by the JACQUARD loom Brocatel is a coarse brocade with a high relief or repoussé effect and an extra set of weft yarns for backing

broccoli (brŏk'ulē) [Ital =sprouts], garden vegetable, a distinct form of the CAULIFLOWER, with loose, leafy, edible flower panicles It is a long-season vegetable and may be planted for spring use in the summer or early fall where the winters are not too severe It is cultivated like cauliflower

Brocéliande, Forest of (brōsālēäd'), in ARTHURIAN LEGEND, the home of Merlin in Brittany, France Of the once vast forest only the Forest of Paimpont, SW of Rennes, remains

Brock, Sir Isaac, 1769–1812, British general, Canadian hero of the War of 1812, b Guernsey, Channel Islands He served in the West Indies, the Netherlands, and Denmark before being ordered (1802) to Canada Placed in command (1806) of Upper and Lower Canada, he strengthened defenses and made plans for a navy In 1811 he was made major general and appointed administrator of Upper Canada Upon the outbreak of war, Brock joined forces with Tecumseh on the Western frontier and, moving boldly against Detroit, induced William Hull's capitulation at that post, thus inheriting quantities of supplies and gaining control of the upper lakes For this exploit he received a knighthood and the appellation "hero of Upper Canada " From Detroit he hastened to the Niagara frontier In a gallant and successful defense of Queenston Heights, where his forces were greatly outnumbered by those commanded by Stephen Van Rensselaer, he was mortally wounded while leading a charge See biographies by his nephew, F B Tupper (2d ed , 1847), and Matilda Edgar (rev. ed , 1926)

Brock, Sir Thomas, 1847–1922, English sculptor, student of Foley Usually classed as a romanticist, Brock enjoyed a long and successful career He became an Academician in 1891 and was knighted in 1911 His work shows dignity and restraint Well known are his bust of Longfellow (Westminster Abbey), his colossal Victoria Memorial, in front of Buckingham Palace, his Eve (National Gall , London), and his Black Prince (Leeds)

Brockdorff-Rantzau, Ulrich, Graf von (ōō'lrĭkh graf' fŭn brôk'dôrf-rän'tsou), 1869–1928, German diplomat Foreign minister in 1918 and 1919, he resigned rather than accept the terms of the Treaty of Versailles From 1922 till his death he was ambassador to Moscow

Brocken (brôk'un) or Blocksberg (blôks'bĕrk), granite peak, 3,747 ft high, in the former Prussian province of Saxony, central Germany, highest of the Harz Mts Popular legend makes it the meeting place of the Walpurgis Night or Witches' Sabbath A scene in Goethe's Faust is laid here

Brockport, village (pop 3,590), W N Y , on the Barge Canal and W of Rochester, in a farming region, inc 1829 It is the seat of a state teachers college Canning is done here

Brockton, city (pop 62,343), SE Mass , S of Boston, settled c 1700, set off from Bridgewater 1821, made a city 1881 Its shoe industry, begun in the mid-19th cent , has declined, but is still important An annual fair was inaugurated in 1874

Brockville, city (pop 11,342), co seat of Leeds and Grenville counties, S Ont , on the St Lawrence below the Thousand Islands In a rich dairy region, it is a port of call for river steamers between Toronto and Montreal It is a summer resort

Brockway, Howard, 1870–, American composer, b Brooklyn, N Y , studied in Berlin He taught at the Peabody Conservatory (1903–9) and at the Juilliard School of Music (1925–41) With Lorraine Wyman he compiled folk-song collections—Lonesome Tunes (1916) and Kentucky Mountain Songs (1920) His compositions, conservative in spirit and highly melodic, include a symphony (Boston, 1907), his Sylvan Suite (Boston, 1901) for orchestra, and shorter choral and instrumental works

Brockway, Zebulon Reed, 1827–1920, American penologist, b Lyme, Conn As superintendent of the House of Correction at Detroit, he tried to introduce, in 1869, the indeterminate sentence for first offenders His ideas were incorporated in a Michigan statute but were nullified by the courts He had a guiding hand in New York state legislation organizing the first state reformatory for adult males, built at Elmira, and was its first superintendent (1876–1900). He introduced a system of physical training, education, and trade instruction, with merits as incentives to good behavior The success of his Elmira experiments led to the introduction of the indeterminate sentence in other states He was the author of Fifty Years of Prison Service (1912)

Brockway, industrial borough (pop 2,709), NNW Pa, N of Du Bois, settled 1822, inc 1883 Its manufactures include clay products, bottles, and jars Its farms yield potato crops

Brocton, village (pop 1,293), W N Y, near Lake Erie and SW of Dunkirk, in a grape region, inc 1894 An annual grape festival is held Thomas Lake Harris founded (1867) here a short-lived community of the Brotherhood of the New Life

Broderick, David Colbreth (brŏ'dərĭk), 1820–59, American politician, b Washington, D C Brought up in New York city, he was active in Tammany Hall before moving in 1849 to California He became equally active in politics there, being a member of the state constitutional convention of 1849 He was elected to the state senate in 1850 and was chosen to preside over it in 1851 Broderick, who drew his support chiefly from Northerners, and U S Senator William M Gwin, leader of the pro-slavery element, fought bitterly for control of the Democratic party in the state Both were sent to the U S Senate in 1857 under a compromise by which Broderick was to have control of the Federal patronage However, President James Buchanan and Gwin ignored the understanding, and Broderick fiercely attacked them both He was killed by Chief Justice David S Terry of the California supreme Court, a Gwin man, in a famous duel, near San Francisco The eloquent eulogy by Edward D Baker at his elaborate funeral and editorial reverberations throughout the land made him the martyr of the Union cause in California See biography by Jeremiah Lynch (1911)

Brodhead, Daniel, 1736–1809, American Revolutionary officer and Indian fighter, b probably near Albany, N Y He was taken as an infant to Pennsylvania, where he later served as deputy surveyor general (1773–75) In the Revolution he commanded a detachment of militia in the battle of Long Island, was sent (1778) to Pittsburgh, and became commandant there in 1779 In that year he led an expedition up the Allegheny against the Indians, this was linked with the expedition of John Sullivan in New York When in 1781, the Delawares broke their treaty, he invaded their lands He was removed from his command but later was brevetted brigadier general He was (1798–1809) surveyor general of Pennsylvania

Brodhead (brŏd'hĕd'), city (pop 1,750), S Wis, near the Sugar river and the Ill line S of Madison, in a dairy and fertile farm area, inc 1891

Brodie, Sir Benjamin Collins (brō'dē), 1783–1862, English surgeon He studied and practiced surgery in London His Pathological and Surgical Observations on the Diseases of the Joints (1818) was effective in leading to less radical treatment and thus in reducing mutilation by amputation See his autobiography (1865) His eldest son, Sir Benjamin Collins Brodie, 1817–80, a chemist, is known chiefly for his studies of allotropic forms of carbon and his discovery of graphitic acid

Broglie (brōl), French noble family of Piedmontese origin, who settled in France in the 17th cent Victor Maurice, comte de Broglie (vĕktôr' môrēs' kôt' dŭ), 1647–1727, was marshal of France and fought in the wars of Louis XIV His son François Marie, duc de Broglie (frăswä' mărē' dük dŭ), 1671–1745, marshal of France, fought at Malplaquet (1709), in the War of the Polish Succession, and in the War of the Austrian Succession Louis XV conferred on him the ducal title inherited by his son, Victor François, duc de Broglie, 1718–1804, marshal of France, who distinguished himself in the War of the Austrian Succession and the Seven Years War Emperor Francis I made him prince of the Holy Roman Empire (1757), a title which remained in the family In the French Revolution he emigrated and commanded (1792) the army of the princes against the revolutionary forces Charles François, comte de Broglie (shärl), 1719–81, brother of Victor François, was ambassador to Poland (1752) and later headed the "secret cabinet" of Louis XV, the king's secret organization of political advisers and spies Achille Charles Léonce Victor, duc de Broglie (äshēl', läôs'), 1785–1870, grandson of Victor François, was a statesman and diplomat under Napoleon I and a leader of the moderate liberals after the Restoration He occupied several cabinet posts under Louis Philippe, was appointed ambassador to London in 1847, and retired in 1848 He married a daughter of Mme de Staël His son, Jacques Victor Albert, duc de Broglie (zhak', älbĕr'), 1821–1901, was a historian and politician He was a member of the national assembly (1871), ambassador to London (1871–72), premier (1873–74, 1877), and a monarchist leader in the senate He wrote Histoire de l'église et de l'empire romain au IVe siècle (6 vols, 1860–66), an apologia for the Church as preserver of civilization in the late Roman period; The King's Secret (Eng tr, 2 vols, 1879), based on the career of his great-granduncle, Charles François de Broglie, An Ambassador of the Vanquished (Eng tr, 1896), and Frederick the Great and Maria Theresa (Eng tr, 1883) He also edited the memoirs of his father (Eng tr, 2 vols, 1887) Among his grandsons are the eminent scientists Maurice, duc de Broglie, and Louis Victor, prince de Broglie (see separate articles)

Broglie, Louis Victor, prince de (lwē' vĕktôr' prĕs' dŭ brōl'), 1892–, French physicist He was professor at the faculty of sciences, Univ of Paris, from 1932 An authority on quantum mechanics and on the structure of matter, he received the 1929 Nobel Prize in Physics for his theory (1924) of the wave character of electrons His works include An Introduction to the Study of Wave Mechanics (1930, Eng tr, 1930), Matter and Light (1937, Eng tr, 1939), and Ondes, corpuscles, mécanique ondulatoire (1945)

Broglie, Maurice, duc de (mōrēs' dük' dŭ brōl'), 1875–, French physicist, brother of Louis Victor, prince de Broglie His contributions include notable work on X rays and in atomic physics, radioactivity, and electricity He became a member of the Academy of Sciences in 1924 and of the French Academy in 1934

Broken Arrow, coal-mining city (pop 2,074), NE Okla, SE of Tulsa, founded 1903

Broken Bow 1 City (pop 2,968), co seat of Custer co, central Nebr, in the sand-hill region, NW of Grand Island, settled 1880, organized as a town 1882, inc as a city 1888 It is a shipping center for a livestock and grain area 2 Lumber and farm town (pop 2,367), extreme SE Okla, near the Red River, settled 1910, inc 1912 A state forest lookout is here, and a state park near by

Broken Hill, municipality (pop 27,059), New South Wales, Australia, ENE of Port Pirie, its port Since 1884 it has been the principal center of silver-lead mining in Australia

broker, primarily one who negotiates a sale between two persons or firms A broker of this kind conducts individual transactions only, is given no general authority by his employers, discloses the names of the principals in the transaction to each other, and leaves to them the conclusion of the deal He neither possesses the goods sold nor receives the goods procured, takes no market risks, finances no operation, and transfers no title to goods or to anything else He earns his commission, or "brokerage," when the contract of sale has been made, regardless of whether the contract is satisfactorily executed He is paid by the party with whom he first negotiates In practice, merchants and other salesmen act as brokers at times Brokers are most useful in establishing trade connections in large industries in which many producers compete for a wide market, such as soft coal, fresh fruit, grain, and vegetables They operate in strategic cities and keep in active touch with the trade needs of their localities and with one another They are important in determining prices, routing goods, and guiding production and in these functions play a part similar to the highly organized exchanges Brokers also negotiate trades in property not directly affecting production Such are stock brokers and real-estate brokers Employment agents are really brokers, as they bring together the buyers and sellers of labor Merchandise brokers arrange sales between manufacturers and wholesalers or retailers, between producers and users of raw materials, and sometimes between two manufacturers Small concerns use brokers instead of maintaining their own sales forces Insurance brokers bring together the agents of insurance companies and those who wish insurance They are most useful to those needing several types of such protection and to those whose risks must be divided Real-estate brokers negotiate sales and leases of farms, dwellings, and business property and are usually money brokers and insurance brokers for their real-estate clients also Ship brokers keep informed of the movement of vessels, of cargo space available, and of rates for shipment and sell this information to shippers They serve tramp carriers, in the main, inasmuch as ship "lines" have their own agents Such brokers also serve as port agents, in which capacity they settle bills for stores and supplies, pay the wages of the crew, and negotiate insurance for the vessel and cargo They also arrange the sale of ships In the organized markets, such as grain and stock exchanges, commission merchants and straight selling displace brokerage in large part, but between cities and where there is no active exchange, brokers in grain and other commodities are active Members of organized exchanges usually act as commission merchants or trade on their own account However, in the New York Stock Exchange a group of members called "two-dollar brokers" act as brokers and perform the actual work on the exchange floor for representatives of commission houses, taking no responsibility In England bill brokers are now discount houses, buying and selling promissory notes and acceptances In the United States note brokers are now commercial paper houses, buying promissory notes from business men and selling them to banks Traders in acceptances and foreign bills of exchange are known in the United States as acceptance dealers. Customs brokers are not real brokers; they act as agents for importers in estimating duties and clearing goods The PAWNBROKER is a private money lender See P D Converse and H. W. Huegy, Elements of Marketing (3d ed., 1946).

Bromberg, Poland, see Bydgoszcz

Brome, Richard, d 1652, English dramatist He was supposed to have been educated by Ben Jonson—an influence evident in the realism of Brome's works His 15 plays include comedies of manners, romantic comedies, and romantic dramas The best of his plays are A Jovial Crew; or, The Merry Beggars (1641) and The City Wit, or, The Woman Wears the Breeches (1653)

brome grass, any plant of the genus Bromus, chiefly large, coarse grasses of a weedy nature, some, however, are useful as forage, and others are cultivated for decoration Some of the better-known bromes are the smooth brome (sometimes called awnless or Hungarian brome), often cultivated for pasture or for holding banks, rescue grass, a forage in the Southern states, and chess or cheat, a pest of grain-fields, formerly believed by some to be degenerate wheat Many species of brome grasses develop sharp barbed fruits at maturity that are injurious to stock, some having gained the name of ripgut grass, before maturity these are often used for forage without bad effect.

bromide (brō'mīd, -ĭd) [from bromine], a compound of BROMINE and some other element (except oxygen), a salt formed from hydrobromic acid Bromides are widely distributed in nature They are formed by the direct combination of bromine with the other element or by the neutralization of hydrobromic acid They are soluble in water, with the exception of the bromides of lead, mercury, and silver The bromides of potassium and sodium, used in medicine as sedatives, are the familiar "bromides" Silver bromide is one of the silver salts used in preparing the coating for photographic films and plates It is reduced when exposed to light, turning darker in direct proportion to the quantity of light It is used also on the surface of some printing papers (see PHOTOGRAPHY), those which act more rapidly are called "bromide papers" Magnesium bromide is a source of pure bromine Hydrogen bromide, a gas somewhat similar to hydrogen chloride, when in aqueous solution is hydrobromic acid In chemical analysis the presence of a bromide may be detected, first, by treating the unknown with chlorine, which, being more active than bromine, displaces the bromine from its bromide, then, by adding carbon disulphide, which takes on a reddish tinge indicating bromine In another test concentrated sulphuric acid is used, it reacts with the bromide finally to liberate bromine

bromine (brō'mēn, -ĭn) [from Gr, =smell], active nonmetallic element (symbol=Br, for physical constants, see ELEMENT, table) At ordinary temperatures it is a brownish-red liquid which gives off a similarly colored vapor with an offensive, suffocating odor It is slightly more than three times heavier than water It is soluble in water to some extent, the aqueous solution, called bromine water, acts as an oxidizing agent It is soluble also in alcohol, ether, and carbon disulphide It solidifies at -7°C and boils at 58 8°C Bromine eats away metals and exhibits corrosive action also upon the skin, destroying the tissue It is strongly irritating to the eyes and to the membranes of the nose and throat Bromine belongs to the HALOGEN family, being less active than either fluorine or chlorine but more so than iodine It forms compounds similar to those of the other halogens (see BROMIDE) Oxides of bromine are unstable, but two acids, hypobromous acid and bromic acid, which are compounds of hydrogen, bromine, and oxygen, are known with their salts Hydrobromic acid is the aqueous solution of hydrogen bromide Bromine does not occur free in nature but in combination with other elements, notably sodium, potassium, magnesium, and silver In compounds, it is present in sea water, in mineral springs, and in common salt deposits, e g, those at Stassfurt in Germany (see FRANK, ADOLF) It occurs in the United States principally in Michigan, Ohio, and West Virginia For commercial purposes, e g, as a source of anti-knock compounds for gasoline, bromine is extracted from sea water The element is obtained pure chiefly by the treatment of bromides (in solution) with chlorine, which displaces the bromine, by oxidation of hydrobromic acid, and by the electrolysis of a bromide The element was discovered, in sea water, by Antoine Jérôme Balard in 1826

Bromley (brŭm'lē), residential municipal borough (1931 pop 45,374, 1947 estimated pop 63,640), Kent, England, SE of London The 15th-century church was destroyed in the Second World War. H G. Wells was born in Bromley

Bromptonville, town (pop 1,672), SE Que, on the St Francis river and N of Sherbrooke. It is an important lumber center

Bromwich, England see WEST BROMWICH

bronchitis (brŏng-kī'tĭs) [as if New Gr, =inflammation of the windpipe], disorder of respiration resulting from inflammation in the bronchus and its branches (see LUNGS) caused by bacteria infection or by irritation from gases and other substances It often follows COLDS and is accompanied by cough, soreness of the chest, and sometimes fever Rest in bed and inhalations are helpful PNEUMONIA may follow a spread of infection Repeated attacks often result in stiff, dilated bronchi This condition of chronic bronchitis is often the cause of cough with expectoration, which becomes worse with age Chronic bronchitis is prevented by proper treatment of the disease in its early stages bronchoscope, instrument for examining the interior of the trachea and bronchi and for use in removing foreign bodies from the lungs, larynx, and gullet Gustav Killian in Freiburg, Germany, in 1895 was the first to experiment with such a device Chevalier Jackson adapted (1903) the bronchoscope to serve as an aid to the breathing of a patient during an operation and improved the system of illumination in the instrument

bronco · see MUSTANG

Brongniart, Adolphe Théodore (ădôlf' tāôdôr' brôn-nyar'), 1801–76, French botanist, son of Alexandre Brongniart He was a pioneer in the study of vegetable physiology and was author of an important work on vegetable fossils (1828–37) and of a valuable first account of pollen His classification of plants in the natural history museum at Paris was the basis of the system now used in Germany He helped establish the Annales des sciences naturelles and founded the Société botanique de France

Brongniart, Alexandre (alĕksā'dru), 1770–1847, French geologist, mineralogist, and chemist As director of the Sèvres porcelain factory from 1800, he created its reputation and established the principles of ceramic chemistry He is the author of Traité des arts céramiques et des poteries (1844) With Cuvier he studied and wrote on the geology of the Seine basin He made the notable division of reptiles into four classes

Bronson, city (pop 1,871), S Mich , S of Battle Creek, in a farm area, inc as a village 1866, as a city 1934 Metal fixtures are made The Sac Trail passed through here

Brontë, Charlotte (brŏn'tē), 1816–55, English novelist, Emily Jane Brontë, 1818–48, English novelist and poet, and Anne Brontë, 1820–49, English novelist They were the daughters of Patrick Brontë (1777–1861), an Anglican clergyman of Irish birth (the name was probably originally Brunty or Prunty), educated at Cambridge He was given a curacy of Thornton in 1815 and in 1820 became incumbent of Haworth, West Riding of Yorkshire His wife died in 1821, and her sister, Elizabeth Branwell, came to live in the parsonage but left the children much to themselves Maria and Elizabeth, the two oldest girls, were sent to a school for the daughters of poor clergymen, which later served as the model for "Lowood" in Jane Eyre In 1824 Charlotte and Emily were sent with them, but Maria and Elizabeth contracted tuberculosis (for which Charlotte held the school largely accountable), and they died within a few months of each other With a gift to their brother, Branwell, of wooden soldiers in 1826 the children started living in an imaginary world Their juvenilia, written in tiny script on small pieces of paper, continued until they were grown, these writings have been preserved and are a remarkable key to the development of literary genius in Charlotte and Emily In 1831 Charlotte was sent to Miss Wooler's school at Roe Head, where she formed two strong friendships, the only one of the sisters ever to do so She returned there as a teacher in 1835, accompanied by Emily, who, however, soon became ill and returned home In 1838 Charlotte came home to Haworth, and during the next few years the three sisters planned to establish a school. Emily and Charlotte spent 1842 at the Pensionnat Héger in Brussels, but returned home at the death of their aunt, who had willed them her small fortune Both girls were offered positions at the pensionnat, but only Charlotte returned in 1843, leaving the next year because, it is thought, of the jealousy of Mme Héger Charlotte's later novels The Professor and Villette reflect her experiences in Brussels Mr Brontë's failing eyesight and the steady decline of their brother, who had become a confirmed alcoholic and opium addict, saddened this period for the three sisters When Charlotte discovered Emily's poetry in 1845, Anne revealed hers, and eventually Poems (1846) by the three appeared under the pseudonyms Currer, Ellis, and Acton Bell. The book, published at their own expense, sold only two copies the first year, but in 1847 Emily's novel Wuthering Heights and Anne's Agnes Grey were published as a set, and although The Professor by Charlotte was rejected, her Jane Eyre (1847) was accepted and achieved tremendous success The year 1848 was marked by the deaths of Branwell (Sept) and Emily (Dec), in 1849 Anne, whose Tenant of Wildfell Hall had appeared in June, 1848, died at Scarborough, where she is buried. The identity of the sisters as authors was at first unknown even to their publishers, who learned it in 1848, and it was not until the publication of Shirley (1849)—when Charlotte's descriptions were recognised by a native of Haworth—that the identity of the Bell brothers was generally discovered At this time Charlotte made many friends in the literary world, wrote Villette (1853), and married (1854) her father's curate, Arthur Bell Nicholls She died after one year of happily married life The Professor (1857) was published posthumously A complete edition of Emily's poems from the original manuscripts, edited by C W Hatfield, appeared in 1941 See biography of Charlotte by Mrs Gaskell (2 vols , 1857), study of Emily by Romer Wilson (1928) and of the family by Clement Shorter (1908), Ernest Dimnet (1910), May Sinclair (1912), L L Hinkley (1945), and Lawrence Hanson and E M Hanson (1949), F E Ratchford, The Brontës' Web of Childhood (1941), for the juvenilia, publications of the Brontë Society

Brontosaurus (brŏntusō'rus) [Gr ,=thunder lizard], quadruped vegetarian dinosaur, probably over 70 ft long and over 30 tons in weight, with a long neck and tail It was apparently semiaquatic Bones of the Brontosaurus and other sauropods have been found in the Morrison formation of the late Jurassic or early Cretaceous in Colorado, Wyoming, and some other Western states

Bronx, the, borough (land area 41 sq mi , pop 1,394,711) of NEW YORK city, SE N Y , NE of Manhattan island and S of Westchester co , roughly identical with the southern part of the mainland peninsula rimmed by the Hudson, Harlem, and East rivers, coextensive with Bronx co Its first settlement was made (1641) for the Dutch West India Company by Jonas Bronck, a Dane Among the many bridges linking the borough to Manhattan and Queens are the Henry Hudson across Spuyten Duyvil, the Triborough to Manhattan and Queens, and the Bronx-Whitestone to Queens The Bronx, although it has some industry, is mainly a residential section Large areas are set aside for parks, notably Bronx Park (with its outstanding zoo and its botanic gardens) and Van Cortlandt and Pelham Bay parks The borough's colleges and professional schools include FORDHAM UNIVERSITY, parts of NEW YORK UNIVERSITY (with the Hall of Fame) and of HUNTER COLLEGE, MANHATTAN COLLEGE, and the New York State Maritime Academy Among other points of interest are the Yankee Stadium, the Bronx County Building, the Edgar Allen Poe cottage, and the Van Cortlandt House (1748)

Bronx, river of SE New York, c 20 mi long, issuing from Kensico Reservoir in Westchester co and flowing SSW through the borough of the Bronx, New York city, to the East River

Bronxville, residential village (pop 6,888), SE N Y , in Westchester co , N of Mt Vernon, settled 1664, inc 1898 It is part of the town of Eastchester SARAH LAWRENCE COLLEGE, Concordia Collegiate Institute (junior, coeducational), and a girls' private school are here

bronze, name for alloys of copper and tin and also for alloys of copper and certain other metals Sometimes silver, aluminum, zinc, or lead is added for increased brilliance or hardness Bronze is harder and more resistant to wear and to atmospheric and earth conditions than brass or either of its components (zinc and copper), therefore, before iron replaced it, it was used for implements, in a 7 or 9 to 1 alloy It was formerly employed for cannon and still is for gun metal, a 16 to 1 alloy The particularly sonorous quality of bronze makes it unsurpassed for bell metal, an alloy of copper and tin, used chiefly for casting bells It forms the best substance for machine bearings, pump valves, and the like and one of the most lasting for roofs, cornices, and architectural ornament and for funerary urns and caskets Above all its other uses, bronze is ideal for casting art works (the 90 to 1 alloy), it flows into all crevices of a mold, thus reproducing perfectly every detail of the most delicately modeled sculpture It is also most susceptible to the graver's tool and admirable for repoussé work Bronze, used in early times for objects later made of other materials, constitutes a record of ancient arts and life The Egyptians were familiar with bronze, cast and hammered, for utensils, armor, and statuary far in advance of the BRONZE AGE in Europe The Greeks were unexcelled in bronze sculpture Etruscan artisans in Italy were adept Examples of their work include a bronze chariot found at Monteleone (Metropolitan Museum of Art) and the Capitoline Wolf (Rome) The Romans carried off hundreds of bronze statues from Greece and made thousands themselves They employed bronze for doors and for furniture, utensils, and candelabra, of which some were recovered at Pompeii and Herculaneum Early medieval bronzes comprised chiefly utensils and domestic and ecclesiastical ornaments During the Renaissance, Italy became noted for her bronze doors, outstanding among which are the Ghiberti doors of the baptistery at Florence, and for statuary by such artists as Donatello, Verrocchio, and Cellini The work of Peter Vischer was influential in Germany France was known in the 18th cent. for gilded bronze furniture mounts Oriental artists have produced superb works from very early times Antique bronzes usually display a rich PATINA See G K Geerlings, Metal Crafts in Architecture (1929)

Bronze Age, period in the development of industry in which bronze was the chief metal It followed the Neolithic period and preceded the Iron Age The term is in general use, although recognized as inexact, as any name for a gradual change in human culture must be Stone did not cease to be used for implements and weapons when bronze was invented Rotary millstones, for example, were invented in the Bronze Age and are still used, many stone arrowheads have been found on the battlefield of Marathon, and stone mauls were used as weapons by Anglo-Saxons at Hastings and by Germans in the Thirty Years War Bronze was used for cannon in the 19th cent and is still much used It is true, however, that in Egypt, Europe, and SW Asia, where the development of industry has been studied most thoroughly, a fundamental change accompanied the beginning of the general use of bronze, and a like fundamental change accompanied the beginning of the general use of iron These changes occurred in different places at different times, first in Egypt and SW Asia and last in Scandinavia Egypt and SW Asia were clearly in the Bronze Age by 2500 B C Iron was first worked effectively by the Hittites c 1400 B C and did not come into general use until later The use of bronze reached Britain c 2000 B C , the use of iron, c 500 B C Ancient Crete is an example of a Bronze Age civilization After the great period of the island ended, the Cretan civilization continued in some outposts, e g , Troy The Trojan War, sometime before 1100 B C , was fought with bronze weapons, used both by Trojans and by Greeks For some purposes, e g , for plowshares, the Greeks even then used iron, the great period of Greek history was in the early Iron Age For the Greeks, the Trojan War may serve as a convenient boundary between the two ages The Bronze Age developed cities, including Babylon and the Egyptian cities, with great temples and palaces decorated by sculptors and painters The arch was a Bronze Age invention Though writing was known in the Neolithic period, its development was of the Bronze Age, when it was first extensively used, as in Babylon The wheel was a Bronze Age invention, unknown in the stone ages and unknown in the Western Hemisphere until brought by Europeans Bronze Age uses of the wheel included the chariot and the potter's wheel In the Bronze Age, oxen and horses were first used as draft animals Where the Bronze Age reached its fullest development, there was extensive commerce by land and by sea, and empires were established by warriors who used horses and bronze swords Some American Indians, as in Mexico, made use of bronze, but not extensively, there was no true Bronze Age in the Western Hemisphere In general, gold and copper were used before bronze, which is an alloy of copper and tin The term "Copper Age" is sometimes used for a period immediately preceding the Bronze Age, but the use of copper was of much less significance than the use of stone, bronze or iron The Copper Age may be included in the Neolithic period, for stone continued to be the usual material of implements and weapons See V G Childe, The Bronze Age (1930), Fay-Cooper Cole, The Long Road from Savagery to Civilization (1933), M C Quennel and C H B Quennel, Everyday Life in the New Stone, Bronze, and Early Iron Ages (3d ed , 1945) For the Bronze Age of mythology, see AGE

bronzing, term originally applied to the treatment of metals to simulate bronze or a bronze or copper PATINA It was extended to include wood, ivory, plaster, leather, and other materials treated to imitate bronze and is now applied also to any surface coloring of metals for decoration or protection Painting and electroplating are usually not included Mechanical bronzing may be accomplished by applying metallic powders, flakes, or leaf with a liquid size Chemical processes include immersion, rubbing, or spraying with solutions of metal salts, heating in a gaseous atmosphere to form an oxide film, and conversion of the metal surface to one of its compounds by electrolysis

Bronzino, Il (ēl brōntsē'nō), whose real name was Agnolo di Cosimo Allori (a'nyōlo dē kō'zēmō ălō'rē), 1502?–1572, Florentine painter, pupil of Jacopo da Pontormo He was court painter to Cosimo I de' Medici He painted the portraits of many celebrated men and women of the time, among them those of Cosimo (Metropolitan Mus) and his wife, Eleonora of Toledo (one in the Uffizi, another in the Wallace Coll , London), and of Dante, Boccaccio, and Petrarch His sacred and mythological paintings usually are greatly inferior to his portraits Descent of Christ into Limbo, his largest work, is in the Uffizi Other specimens of his paintings are in the Uffizi and Pitti galleries, Florence, the National Gallery, London, the Gardner Museum, Boston, and the Frick Collection, New York

Bronzino, Alessandro · see ALLORI, ALESSANDRO

Brook, Alexander, 1898–, American painter, b Brooklyn, N Y , of Russian parents In 1915 he entered the Art Students League of New York, where he remained some years, studying longest under Kenneth Hayes Miller After 1922, when he exhibited with his wife, Peggy Bacon, at Brummer Gallery, his work was widely shown and received many awards He received a Guggenheim fellowship in 1941 In 1940 he was divorced from his artist wife Brook served as instructor at the Art Students League and also conducted a summer school of painting at his home in Cross River, N Y His oils include still life, portraits, figure compositions, and landscapes His color is subtle, and his light and shade are effective Delicacy, economy of means, and a fine reserve mark his realistic style Brook is represented in principal galleries throughout the country He is the author of numerous reviews and articles on art Characteristic works are My Wife (Corcoran Gall), The Sentinels (Whitney Mus , New York), My Son Sandy (Metropolitan Mus) See monograph by E A Jewell (1931)

Brooke, Alan Francis, 1883–, British general Educated at Woolwich, Brooke entered service in the field artillery in 1902 In the First World War he served with distinction as an officer of artillery and in the 1930s made himself a master of mechanized warfare In the Second World War he commanded the 2d Army Corps in France until the evacuation of Dunkirk and was (1940–41) commander in chief of the British Home Forces From Dec , 1941, to 1946 he was chief of the imperial general staff and participated in the war conferences of Churchill, Roosevelt, and Stalin He was made Baron Alanbrooke in 1945 and Viscount Alanbrooke in 1946.

Brooke, Sir Charles Johnson see BROOKE, SIR JAMES

Brooke, Sir Charles Vyner see BROOKE, SIR JAMES

Brooke, Fulke Greville, 1st Baron, 1554–1628, English poet, patron of letters, and statesman He was a friend of Sir Philip Sidney and a favorite of Queen Elizabeth A Christian humanist, he wrote several didactic poems on philosophical subjects He is remembered for his Life of the Renowned Sir Philip Sidney (1652) See Poems and Dramas (ed by Geoffrey Bullough, 1939, reissue 1945)

Brooke, Henry, c 1703–1783, Irish author, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and studied law in London In 1735 he published a poem entitled Universal Beauty In his novel, The Fool of Quality (5 vols , 1765–70), the generous impulses of the natural state of man are contrasted, according to the theory of Rousseau, with the artificiality of a corrupt civilization See biography by H M Scurr (1927)

Brooke, Sir James, 1803–68, rajah of Sarawak on Borneo, b Bengal, of English parents After active service in Burma (1825–26), he retired from the army in India (1830) and, during a voyage to the East Indies, conceived a plan to suppress piracy He sailed in his yacht for Borneo (1838), and on the west coast there he assisted Muda Hassim, uncle of the reigning sultan, to suppress rebel Dyak tribes For his services he was made rajah by the sultan (1841) and proceeded to create a government and to put down head-hunting and piracy He was given a baronetcy by the British government and entrusted with the governorship (1847–57) of Labuan Chinese traders in opium precipitated a rising (1867), in which Kuching, the capital of Sarawak, was burned He was engaged sporadically in suppressing many tribal rebellions He was succeeded by his nephew, Sir Charles Johnson Brooke, 1829–1917 Sir Charles extended the authority of the government to all parts of the country, and by the abolition of slavery and encouragement of habits of industry he made the country productive and the people prosperous He was succeeded by his son, Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, 1874– Sir Charles was forced out of Sarawak in 1942 by the Japanese invasion In spite of the fact that his nephew, Anthony W D Brooke, acted as his heir apparent and head of the provisional government during the war, Sir Charles ceded Sarawak to the British government as a crown colony in 1946 See Lady Sylvia Brooke, Three White Rajahs (1939)

Brooke, John Mercer, 1826–1906, American scientist and naval officer, b Tampa, Fla , grad Annapolis, 1847. He served in the Coast Survey and at the naval observatory in Washington (1849–53) and taught at Virginia Military Institute (1865–1906) He invented a deep-sea sounding device which for the first time brought up specimens of the ocean's bottom for examination He was engaged in an exploring and surveying expedition to the Pacific Far North and in preparing its records and charts From 1858 to 1860 he made soundings on the route from California to China and surveyed parts of the east coast of Japan In 1861 he resigned from the U S navy and was made a commander in the Confederate navy Later he became chief of the Bureau of Ordnance and Hydrography His was the plan used for reconstructing the Merrimac into the iron-clad Virginia He invented the Brooke gun, one of the most successful Confederate artillery pieces

Brooke, Rupert, 1887–1915, English poet, educated at Rugby and at King's College, Cambridge He then spent several years in desultory study and travel and in 1913 went on a long journey to North America and the South Seas. He returned to England in 1914 At the outbreak of the First World War he joined the Royal Naval Division, served at Antwerp, and was in the Dardanelles expedition when he died of blood poisoning at the island of Skyros An athlete, handsome, charming, and witty, Brooke was universally sought in society His early fame and tragic death have made him an almost legendary figure Two slender volumes of poetry, Poems (1911) and 1914 and Other Poems (1915), contain only a few poems, ranging from awkward juvenilia to rapturous sensuousness hard to match in recent poetry. See his Collected Poems (1915), Arthur Stringer, Red Wine of Youth (1948).

Brooke, Stopford Augustus, 1832–1916, English clergyman and author, b Ireland, grad Trinity College, Dublin He became a clergyman of the Church of England in 1857 and was appointed chaplain to Queen Victoria in 1872, in 1880 he became a Unitarian minister He was an admirable critic, and besides several volumes of sermons his books include English Literature (1876), Poems (1888), The History of Early English Literature (2 vols , 1892), and Tennyson His Art and Relation to Modern Life (1894) See L P Jacks, Life and Letters of Stopford Brooke (2 vols , 1917)

Brook Farm, an "Institute of Agriculture and Education" at West Roxbury, Mass , was an experiment in group living which flourished between 1841 and 1847 Two transcendentalists, George Ripley and his wife, Sophia, founded Brook Farm in an attempt to combine "plain living and high thinking" The 192-acre farm was owned by a joint-stock company with 24 shares of stock at $500 each Each member was to share in the manual labor which should make the group self-sufficient and in the cultural advantages provided With such members as Nathaniel Hawthorne, John S Dwight, Charles A Dana, and Isaac Hecker and such visitors as Emerson, W H Channing, Margaret Fuller, and Orestes Brownson, intellectual life was stimulating Economically, the excellent school was the most successful part of the venture, agriculture showed little profit because of the sandy soil and the inexperience of the farmers The popularity of the doctrines of Fourier led to Brook Farm's conversion to a Fourierist phalanx in 1845, but the group did not long survive the financial disaster of the burning of the uncompleted and uninsured central building (1846) The members disbanded in 1847 The Harbinger (1845–49), printed at Brook Farm and edited by Ripley, was rather a Fourierist weekly newspaper than exclusively the organ of Brook Farm and was continued in New York with Parke Godwin as editor after 1847 See Lindsay Swift, Brook Farm (1900)

Brookfield. 1 Town (pop 1,345), SW Conn , between Danbury and the Housatonic, inc 1788 2 Village (pop 10,817), NE Ill , western suburb of Chicago, inc 1893 Near by is the Chicago Zoological Park 3 Dairying town (pop 1,393), S central Mass , WSW of Worcester, settled 1664, inc 1718 Quaboag Pond (a resort) and a pre-Revolutionary inn are in the town 4 City (pop 6,174), N central Mo , SW of Kirksville, founded 1859 It is a railroad shipping point, with division shops, in a farm and coal area Gen John J Pershing's boyhood home and a Pershing memorial park are at near-by Laclede

Brookhaven, city (pop 6,232), co seat of Lincoln co , SW Miss , SSW of Jackson, in a dairy and timber area, founded 1851 It is a dairy center A junior college for girls is here

Brookings, Robert Somers, 1850–1932, American businessman and philanthropist, b Cecil co , Md. He earned a fortune in business in St Louis, Mo , and retired in 1897 to devote himself to philanthropy As chairman of the corporation of Washington Univ from 1897 to 1914 he was primarily responsible for the rebuilding of that institution He founded the Brookings Institution in Washington, D C

Brookings, city (pop 5,346), co seat of Brookings co , E S Dak , N of Sioux Falls near the Big Sioux river, laid out 1879 A trade center in a farm area, the city is headquarters for the Cooperative Wool Growers Association It is the seat of SOUTH DAKOTA STATE COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE AND MECHANIC ARTS A bell tower equipped with aeronautical beacons serves the city's airport

Brookings Institution, at Washington, D C , founded by Robert S Brookings for research and education in the social sciences Chartered in 1927 under the present name, it comprises the Institute of Economics (founded 1922), the Institute for Government Research (founded 1916), and a research-training division (opened 1924 as a graduate school of economics and government)

Brookland, S C see WEST COLUMBIA

Brooklands, village (pop. 2,728), S Man , a suburb of Winnipeg.

Brooklawn, borough (pop 1,919), SW N J , on the Delaware near Camden, built in the First World War to house shipyard workers, inc 1924

Brookline (brŏŏk'lĭn), town (pop. 49,786), E Mass., a beautiful residential suburb of Boston It was included in Boston, as "Muddy River," before it was separately incorporated in 1705. Some old buildings remain Amy Lowell's home was here.

Brooklyn. 1 Town (pop 2,403), E Conn., ENE of Willimantic and on the Quinebaug, settled c.1703, inc. 1786. Electrical products and yarns are made here. 2 Village (pop. 2,158), SW Ill , on the Mississippi above East St Louis, inc. 1873. It is an all-Negro town. Its post office is Lovejoy. 3 Town (pop 1,408), E central Iowa, E of Des Moines, inc 1869 4 Borough (land area 71 sq mi., pop 2,698,285) of NEW YORK city, at the southwestern extremity of Long Island, SE N Y., coextensive with Kings co Although often called the City of Homes, Brooklyn is also an important industrial region, among its products are machinery, textiles, and paper and chemical goods The borough's extensive water-front facilities, center of an important foreign and domestic commerce, include the New York Naval Shipyard, commonly called Brooklyn Navy Yard, and the docks and warehouses of the Bush Terminal Brooklyn, Manhattan, and Williamsburg bridges span the East River, and subway tunnels underlie it Hollanders and Walloons settled about Gowanus and Wallabout bays in 1636 and 1637, about nine years later Dutch farmers established the hamlet of Breuckelen, near the present borough hall Becoming Brooklyn under the English, it was incorporated as a village (Brooklyn Ferry) in 1816, the township of Brooklyn was chartered as a city in 1834 Williamsburg was absorbed in 1855 and Brooklyn became the third largest city in the country. In 1898, when it became a borough of New York city, its population was c.1,000,000 In its growth it absorbed many settlements and villages, such as FLATBUSH, New Utrecht, and Gravesend (all settled in the 17th cent), until it included all of Kings co Among its numerous educational institutions are BROOKLYN COLLEGE, Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn (for men, 1854), PRATT INSTITUTE, SAINT JOHN'S UNIVERSITY, St Joseph's College for Women, Packer Collegiate Institute, and LONG ISLAND UNIVERSITY CONEY ISLAND and SHEEPSHEAD BAY are among its water-front resorts Floyd Bennett Field (U S navy) is on Jamaica Bay, and Fort Hamilton (built 1831 as a harbor defense) stands at the Narrows of New York Bay Near beautiful Prospect Park, the scene of fierce fighting in the Revolution (see LONG ISLAND, BATTLE OF), is the main building of the Brooklyn Public Library Also in that area are the Brooklyn Museum, the botanic gardens, and the Brooklyn Children's Museum, which, with the Brooklyn Academy of Music, are all under the direction of the BROOKLYN INSTITUTE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES Among the many structures which give the borough its appellation City of Churches are the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church of Flatbush (first structure, 1654, present building, 1796), St Ann's Episcopal Church (est 1784), and Plymouth Church, where Henry Ward Beecher preached Other points of interest include the invaluable historical library of the Long Island Historical Society, Ebbets Field (home of the Brooklyn Dodgers), and the Lefferts Homestead (1777) A noted newspaper, the Brooklyn Daily Eagle (begun 1841), had Walt Whitman as its editor in 1846–47 See R F Weld, Brooklyn Village, 1816–1834 (1938) and Brooklyn Is America (1950), H C Syrett, The City of Brooklyn, 1865–1898, (1944) 5 Village (pop 1,108), NE Ohio, near Cleveland, inc 1927

Brooklyn Bridge, SE N Y , southernmost of the bridges across the East River, between lower Manhattan and Brooklyn, built 1869–83 A suspension bridge, with a 1,595-foot span, it was the achievement of J A ROEBLING and his son W A ROEBLING

Brooklyn Center, village (pop 1,870), E Minn , between Minneapolis and Anoka, inc 1911

Brooklyn College of the College of the City of New York, coeducational, opened 1930 by merging branches of City and Hunter colleges Buildings were opened in 1937 on a site in Flatbush

Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, cultural institution founded in 1824 and reorganized and incorporated in 1890 It includes the Brooklyn Museum (designed by McKim, Mead, and White and erected between 1897 and 1925), a Children's Museum, the Brooklyn Academy of Music, and a 42-acre botanical garden The museum collections include the Tissot water-color drawings illustrating the life of Christ, a large collection of water colors by John Singer Sargent, American primitives, examples of the Hudson River school, and more than 100 sculptures by Barye Courses in the drama, music, fine arts, philosophy, psychology, sociology, political science, botany, astronomy, geology, geography, and electricity are available, lectures and concerts are given, and a forum and library are maintained. The Children's Museum contains natural history and ethnological collections

Brook Park, village (pop 1,122), NE Ohio, near Cleveland

Brookport, city (pop 1,247), S Ill , on the Ohio and NW of Paducah, Ky., inc 1888. It is a farm trade center Near by is a large U S. wicket dam

Brooks, Alfred Hulse, 1871–1924, American geologist, b. Ann Arbor, Mich., B.S. Harvard, 1894; son of Thomas Benton Brooks. He joined the U.S. Geological Survey and after 1898 served chiefly in Alaska, exploring and studying especially Alaskan mineral resources. Brooks Range is named for him

Brooks, Maria Gowen, 1795?–1845, American poet and dramatic writer, b Medford, Mass Her first collection of poems, Judith, Esther, and Other Poems (1820), was praised by Southey, who named her "Maria del Occidente," which she later used as a pseudonym While living in Cuba she wrote the epic Zophiel; or, The Bride of Seven (1833) and Idomen, or, The Vale of Yumuri (1843) Her poetry, especially the Ode to the Departed (1843), was es teemed both in America and abroad

Brooks, Noah, 1830–1903, American writer and journalist, b Castine, Maine He was joint publisher of the Daily Appeal in Marysville, Calif , where through contributions to the Overland Monthly he and Bret Harte became friends In 1862 he was the Washington correspondent of the Sacramento, Calif , Union and in that capacity formed a friendship with President Lincoln After the Civil War he returned to the West as managing editor of Alta California but in 1871 joined the staff of the New York Tribune and in 1876 moved to the New York Times From 1884 until his retirement in 1892 he edited the Newark, N J , Daily Advertiser Brooks wrote two first-class boys' books, The Boy Emigrants (1876) and The Boy Settlers (1891), his works also include a number of books about the life and times of Abraham Lincoln

Brooks, Phillips, 1835–93, American Episcopal bishop, b Boston, grad Harvard, 1855, and studied at the theological seminary at Alexandria, Va A gifted preacher and a man of broad and generous sympathies, fine spiritual qualities, and unusual charm, he won wide esteem After rectorships (1859–69) in Philadelphia, he entered (1869) upon his memorable ministry at Trinity Church, Boston, where a statue designed by Saint-Gaudens bears witness to Brooks's influence upon his times In 1891 he was consecrated bishop of Massachusetts His lectures at Yale were published as Lectures on Preaching (1877), and his Bohlen lectures in Philadelphia as The Influence of Jesus (1879) The Christmas hymn O Little Town of Bethlehem was written by him See Life and Letters (ed by A V G Allen, 2 vols , 1900), biography by William Lawrence (1930)

Brooks, Preston Smith, 1819–57, U S Congressman (1852–57), b Edgefield District, S C , grad South Carolina College, 1839 A lawyer and the nephew of Senator Andrew Pickens Butler, he is remembered as the man who in 1856 caned Charles SUMNER after Sumner had bitterly criticized Senator Butler The slander in Sumner's speech and the brutality in Brooks's action showed how the rift was widening between North and South Resigning, Brooks was promptly reelected

Brooks, Richard Edwin, 1865–1919, American sculptor, b Braintree, Mass , studied in Paris He attained the Salon in 1895 with his Song of the Wave (Metropolitan Mus) His statue of Col Thomas Cass (Public Gardens, Boston) won a gold medal at the Paris Exposition of 1900 He is represented by several portrait statues in Statuary Hall, Washington, D C , and in Seattle, Hartford, Conn , Baltimore, and other cities

Brooks, Thomas Benton, 1836–1900, American geologist, b Monroe, N Y He served on the geological survey of New Jersey (1864) and in 1865 went to work for the Iron Cliff Mine in Michigan, becoming vice president and general manager He made a noted survey of the district and devised a dial compass and dip needle for prospecting

Brooks, Van Wyck, 1886–, American critic, b Plainfield, N J , grad Harvard, 1908 His first book, The Wine of the Puritans (1909), presented the thesis that American culture has been profoundly influenced by the pervasion of Puritanism on the frontier and in industrial expansion The theme was developed in his subsequent books, which include America's Coming-of-Age (1915) and The Ordeal of Mark Twain (1920) His biographies of Henry James (1925) and Emerson (1932) were an innovation in criticism In 1937 he won the Pulitzer Prize in history for The Flowering of New England (1936) This cultural history of the United States was continued with New England Indian Summer (1940), The World of Washington Irving (1944), and The Times of Melville and Whitman (1947) He also wrote Essays Old and New (1948)

Brooks, William Keith, 1848–1908, American zoologist, b Cleveland, Ohio, grad Williams College (LL D , 1870) and Harvard (Ph D , 1875) He taught at Johns Hopkins from 1876 to 1903 His studies on the development and propagation of the oyster led to protective legislation by the state of Maryland He founded in 1878, and for some years directed, the Chesapeake Zoological Laboratory, prosecuting studies in the Chesapeake and West Indian waters His influence was probably greatest as a teacher His works include The Foundations of Zoology (1899)

Brooks, William Robert, 1844–1921, American astronomer, b England In 1857 he came to the United States An expert draftsman and mechanic, he applied his skill to astronomical research He often used telescopes of his own making At Red House Observatory, founded by him at Phelps, N Y , in 1874, he discovered 11 comets In 1900 he became professor of astronomy at Hobart College, Geneva His discoveries of comets reached 27 in all Brooks was also one of the pioneers in celestial photography

Brooks, town (pop 1,091), S Alta , NW of Medicine Hat, in an irrigated ranch area It has alfalfa seed processing and natural gas

Brooks Range [for Alfred H Brooks, geologist], N Alaska, separating the Yukon river basin from the watershed of the Arctic Ocean The range embraces many mountain chains (Baird, Davidson, De Long, Endicott and Melville), and averages 5,500 ft to 6,500 ft in elevation There are few settlements in the area, and transportation is almost entirely by air

Brooksville, city (pop 1,607), co seat of Hernando co , W central Fla , N of Tampa, in a dairy, fruit, and limestone area, inc as a city 1925 Near by are the Devil's Punch Bowl (an arid sink) and Weekiwachee Spring (with a rate of 100,000 gal a minute), which forms a navigable river flowing 12 mi to the Gulf of Mexico

Brookville 1 Town (pop 2,194), co seat of Franklin co , SE Ind , NW of Cincinnati and on the Whitewater river, settled 1804, platted 1808 In this farm trading center, Lew Wallace, soldier and author, was born The town has a large residential section with many old houses 2 Village (pop 1,653), SW Ohio, NW of Dayton 3 Industrial borough (pop 4,397), co seat of Jefferson co , W Pa , NE of Pittsburgh, settled 1801, laid out 1830, inc 1843 In an area yielding bituminous coal, it is a farm trading center with gas and oil industries Near it is Cook Forest, a large tract of virgin pine and hemlock

Brookwood, village, Surrey, England, near Woking It is the site of an American military cemetery where many soldiers of the First World War are buried broom, name for plants of two closely related and similar Old World genera, Cytisus and Genista, of the pea family They are mostly twiggy shrubs with abundant yellow or white (in Cytisus purple also) pealike blossoms The common or Scotch broom (Cytisus scoparius) is naturalized in parts of North America, the tops have been much used as a diuretic The canary broom or so-called genista of florists is Cytisus canariensis, a yellow-flowered evergreen shrub Species of the genus Genista include Genista tinctoria, called also dyer's-weed or woodwaxen, which yields a yellow dye A sprig of broom was the badge from which GEOFFREY IV of Anjou gained the name Geoffrey Plantagenet Other plants share the name of broom

broomcorn see SORGHUM

Brophy, Truman William, 1848–1928, American dentist, b Will co , Ill , M D Rush Medical College, 1880 He was professor (from 1883) and later dean at Chicago College of (Dental Surgery (now part of Loyola Univ) He devised a widely used operation for cleft palate and harelip He wrote Oral Surgery (1915) and Cleft Lip and Palate (1923)

Brosamer, Hans (hans' brō'zämur), c 1500–1554, German portrait painter and engraver One of the Little Masters, he is remembered chiefly for his copper engravings and woodcuts

Broschi, Carlo: see FARINELLI, CARLO BROSCHI

Brosse, Salomon de (sälōmō' du brōs'), 1565–1626, French architect He is chiefly known for Luxembourg Palace, which he built (1615–20) for Marie de' Medici The hunting château (1624–26) he erected for Louis XIII was the structure around which the palace of Versailles was later developed by Louis XIV In Paris, Brosse designed the west front of Saint-Gervais, and in Rennes, the Parliament House, now the Palais de Justice

Brosses, Charles de (shärl' dŭ brōs'), 1709–77, French scholar He was a friend of Buffon and a contributor to the Encyclopédie He wrote also an archaeological work on Herculaneum, letters concerning Italy, Histoire des navigations aux terres australes (1756), in which the names Australia and Polynesia were first used with reference to lands in the South Seas, Du culte des dieux fétiches (1760), a study of primitive religion, and Traité de la formation mécanique des langues (1765) He also collected and edited the fragments of Sallust's history of the Roman republic

Brotherhood of the New Life: see HARRIS, THOMAS LAKE

Brough, John (brŭf), 1811–65, Civil War governor of Ohio (1864–65), b Marietta, Ohio, studied briefly at Ohio Univ In 1844, after publishing newspapers in Marietta and Lancaster, he became joint owner and editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, which he made one of the leading Democratic organs in the West Brough served in the state legislature, and as state auditor (1839–45) he thoroughly reorganized Ohio's financial system Though a Democrat, Brough so vigorously supported the Union during the Civil War that the Republicans nominated him for governor in 1863, and he soundly defeated the Copperhead leader, Clement L VALLANDIGHAM. He was one of the more effective state leaders of the period See W B Hesseltine, Lincoln and the War Governors (1948)

Brougham, Henry Peter, 1st Baron Brougham and Vaux (brōōm, vōz, vôks), 1778–1868, British statesman, b Edinburgh As a young lawyer he helped to found (1802) the Edinburgh Review and wrote for it He entered Parliament in 1810, took up the fight on the slave trade, and opposed the orders in council restricting trade He won popular renown as attorney general to Queen Caroline (1820), and in the next decade he became a liberal leader in the House of Commons He not only proposed educational reforms in Parliament, but also was one of the founders of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge and of the Univ of London As lord chancellor he effected many legal reforms to speed procedure See Arthur Aspinall, Lord Brougham and the Whig Party (1927), biography by G T Garratt (1935)

Broun, Heywood Campbell (brōōn), 1888–1939, American newspaper columnist and critic, b Brooklyn, N Y , studied at Harvard, 1906–10 He was with the New York Tribune, 1912–21, and with the New York World, 1921–28, where his syndicated column, "It Seems to Me," began In 1928 he transferred it to the Scripps-Howard newspapers, including the New York World-Telegram, where it appeared until he moved it to the New York Post just before his death He constantly championed the underdog and criticized social injustices He was the first and very active president of the American Newspaper Guild from 1933 until his death His books include The A E F (1918), The Boy Grew Older (1922) and Gandle Follows His Nose (1926), novels, and a biography of Anthony Comstock (with Margaret Leech, 1927) He also collaborated in a revue, Shoot the Works (1931) It Seems to Me (1935) and Collected Edition (ed by H H Broun, 1941) give the best of his column See biography by Dale Kramer (1949)

Broussais, François Joseph Victor (frāswä' shôsēf' vēktôr' brōōsā'), 1772–1838, French physician In Paris he was professor at Val-de-Grâce military hospital from 1820 and at the Faculty of Medicine from 1830 He taught that excessive stimulation caused inflammation and that disease was spread from one organ to others by gastrointestinal mucosa His method of treatment, in vogue in the early 19th cent , was starvation and the application of leeches

Broussel, Pierre (pyĕr' brōōsĕl'), b c 1570, councilor of the Parlement of Paris under Louis XIII and Louis XIV His opposition to Mazarin's program of taxation made him popular The uprising after his arrest in 1648 caused his early release and marked the beginning of the first FRONDE In July, 1652, the Parisians chose him provost of the merchants, i e , virtual mayor He resigned in September in order to facilitate the reconciliation between the citizens and the court, and he died in obscurity

Broussonnet, Pierre Marie Auguste (pyĕr' marē' ōgüst' brōōsônā'), 1761–1807, French naturalist and physician He was professor of botany at Montpellier He is said to have been the first to bring Merino sheep and Angora goats into France His chief work is Elenchus plantarum horti montispelensis (1805)

Brouwer or Brauwer, Adriaen (ädr"rēän' brou'wur), c 1605–1638, Flemish painter of genre and rustic scenes He early went to Holland, where he studied with Frans Hals He acquired much of the latter's bold and vigorous manner and also his fondness for drink and low life His favorite subjects were tavern scenes Despite a very short and dissipated life, Brouwer left a considerable number of fine paintings, beautiful in color and spirited in characterization Among the most famous are The Smoker (Louvre), and The Sleeping Peasant (Wallace Coll , London) The Metropolitan Museum has his Head of a Man See study by F Schmidt-Degener (1908, in French)

Broward, Napoleon Bonaparte, 1857–1910, governor of Florida (1905–9), b Duval co , Fla Becoming interested in the drainage of the EVERGLADES, he made it a major issue in his successful campaign for governor in 1904, and this great undertaking was started in his administration

Browder, Earl Russell, 1891–, American communist, b Wichita, Kansas He became converted to Marxism as a boy, and after imprisonment (1917–19) for opposing the draft he joined (1919) the Communist party Following his return from two years in China he was general secretary of the party (1930–45), the party's candidate for President (1936 1940), and editor in chief of the Daily Worker (1944–45) In 1940 he was convicted of passport fraud and imprisoned, but he was freed by Franklin D Roosevelt in 1942 During the Second World War, he advocated greater cooperation with capitalism and headed the Communist Political Association, which briefly replaced the Communist party Opposition to his policies (1945) resulted in his removal from all party offices and from the party (1946) Among his works are Communism in the United States (1935), What Is Communism? (1936), The People's Front (1938), and War or Peace with Russia (1947)

Browere, John Henri Isaac, 1792–1834, American sculptor, b New York city He was noted for his life masks in plaster His plaster busts include those of John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, De Witt Clinton, and Dolly Madison

Brown, family of bankers in America Alexander Brown, 1764–1834, b Co Antrim, Ireland, moved (1800) to Baltimore There he was a cotton and tobacco exporter, and soon he became wealthy as an international banker He took his sons into partnership in the banking firm of Alexander Brown & Sons, sending William Brown, 1784–1864, to Liverpool, England He was knighted John Alexander Brown, 1788–1872, was sent to Philadelphia, and James Brown, 1791–1877, to New York, each establishing a branch of the firm Another son, George Brown, 1787–1859, remained in Baltimore, was a founder of the Baltimore & Ohio RR, and was (1827–34) the railroad's treasurer The fortunes of the Brown firm mounted rapidly, and for a generation the company, with world-wide connections, was the leading institution of its kind in America The father and all the sons were prominently identified with civic improvements and philanthropies See F R Kent, The Story of Alexander Brown & Sons (1925)

Brown, Aaron Venable, 1795–1859, U S Postmaster General (1857–59), b Brunswick co , Va , grad Univ of North Carolina, 1814 He became a lawyer in Tennessee, served in the state legislature and in Congress (1839–45), and was governor (1845–47) His administration of the Post Office under President Buchanan was notable for the establishment of better overland mail facilities

Brown, Alexander · see Brown, family

Brown, Alexander Ephraim, 1852–1911, American inventor b Cleveland, grad Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, 1872 He is noted especially for the Brown hoisting and conveying machine, patented in 1880, which revolutionized the handling of ore and coal on the Great Lakes

Brown, Alice, 1857–1948, American author, b Hampton Falls, N H She is best known for her delineations of New England characters in her books of short stories, e g , Meadow-Grass (1895) and Tiverton Tales (1899), in her play Children of Earth (1915), and in novels, among them The Story of Thyrza (1909) and The Prisoner (1916) She also wrote biographies of Mercy Warren (1896) and of her friend Louise Imogen Guiney (1921)

Brown, Benjamin Gratz, 1826–85, U S Senator (1863–67) and governor of Missouri (1871–73), b Lexington, Ky , grad Yale, 1847 An able lawyer of St Louis, Brown was a leader in the Free-Soil movement in Missouri and later helped form the Republican party there In the memorable Missouri election of 1870 Brown and his supporters defeated the radical Republicans, and he thus became prominent in the rise of the national Liberal Republican party He was the party's candidate for Vice President on the unsuccessful ticket headed by Horace Greeley in 1872

Brown, Charles Brockden, 1771–1810, American novelist and editor, b Philadelphia, of Quaker parents He was the first professional American novelist Although he first wrote Alcuin a Dialogue (1798), his memorable works are his novels, in which his interest in character development and abnormal behavior tentatively foreshadowed the psychological novel His plots echo William Godwin's Caleb Williams In his attempt to be realistic he gives pseudoscientific explanations for his mysteries, as he uses ventriloquism in Wieland (1798), his most popular novel The American scene was his favorite setting, used effectively in Edgar Huntly (1799) Other tales are Arthur Mervyn (2 vols , 1799–1800), Ormond (1799), and Clara Howard (1801) To support himself after 1800 he became a merchant, but also edited successively three periodicals, wrote political pamphlets, and projected a compendium on geography See biographies by D L Clark (1923) and H R Warfel (1949)

Brown, Elmer Ellsworth, 1861–1934, American educator, b Chautauqua co , N Y , grad Illinois State Normal Univ , 1881, and studied at the Univ of Michigan and in Germany He taught education at the Univ of Michigan (1891–93) and at the Univ of California (1893–1906) After directing the reorganization of the Bureau of Education, as U S commissioner of education (1906–11), he became chancellor of New York Univ returning in 1933 He wrote The Making of Our Middle Schools (1903) and A Few Remarks (1933)

Brown, Ernest William, 1866–1938, American mathematician, b Hull, England He was professor of mathematics at Haverford College (1891–1907) and at Yale (1907–32) He made notable contributions to astronomy with his lunar theory and the compilation of new tables of the moon's motion He wrote Treatise on the Lunar Theory (1896), A New Theory of the Moon's Motion (1897–1905), and Tables of the Motion of the Moon (1920)

Brown, Fay Cluff, 1881–, American physicist, b Fayette co , Ohio, grad Indiana Univ (B A , 1904), Ph D Princeton, 1908 He taught at the State Univ of Iowa (1909–19), served with the Bureau of Standards (1919–27), and from 1937 to 1940 was with the Museum of Science and Industry, Chicago In 1940 he joined the staff of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology He made special studies in a number of fields, including ballistics and radioactivity

Brown, Ford Madox, 1821–93, English historical painter, b Calais, France He was educated in Bruges and in Antwerp, where he studied with Wappers Though closely affiliated with the Pre-Raphaelites in London, he never joined the brotherhood Like theirs, his paintings created a stir because of their bright color and naturalism Well-known examples are Christ Washing Peter's Feet (National Gall , London), Work (Manchester Art Gall), The Last of England (Birmingham Gall), his series of 12 frescoes in the town hall of Manchester, depicting the history of that city See study by his grandson, F M Ford (1896)

Brown, Francis, 1849–1916, American educator and biblical scholar, b Hanover, N H., grad Dartmouth, 1870, and Union Theological Seminary, 1877, and studied in Germany, 1877–79 In 1879 he joined the faculty of Union Theological Seminary, becoming professor of Hebrew and the cognate languages in 1890 and president in 1908 He was the first in the United States to teach Assyrian In 1907–8 he was in charge of the American School for Oriental Study and Research in Palestine Among his works are Assyriology Its Use and Abuse in Old Testament Study (1885) and A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament (with S R Driver and C A Briggs, completed 1906)

Brown, George, U S banker see Brown, family

Brown, George, 1818–80, Canadian journalist and statesman, b Scotland In 1838 he came to the United States, but after five years in New York city, he settled in Toronto, Ont There he founded (1844) the Toronto Globe, which under his editorship became the most powerful political journal in Upper Canada He wholeheartedly supported Robert Baldwin and the movement for responsible government Elected in 1851 as a Reform member of the Canadian legislative assembly, Brown in time became leader of the "Clear Grits" faction, which opposed the influence of the French Canadians in the assembly He urged the secularization of the clergy reserves in Ontario, a national school system, the purchase of the Northwest Territories, and, in particular, representation by population instead of the equal representation for Quebec and Ontario as established by the Act of Union (1841) Brown played an important role in the movement for confederation Despite his personal and political hatred for Sir John A Macdonald, he joined (1864) "the great coalition" ministry and with Macdonald and others went to England in 1865 to urge Canadian confederation He resigned that year from the government because of his inability to work with Macdonald but later (1873) accepted appointment to the Canadian Senate See biographies by Alexander Mackenzie (1882) and John Lewis (rev ed , 1926)

Brown, George Douglas see Douglas, George

Brown, Henry Kirke, 1814–86, American sculptor, b Leyden, near Greenfield, Mass He studied with Chester Harding, then the leading painter of Boston, and in 1836 went to Cincinnati to become a portrait painter There he became interested in modeling and worked at various jobs in order to go to Italy to study He returned to America in 1846 and settled in New York city Some of his early works—Ruth, Adonis, Rebecca, and others—show the effect of the Italian neoclassicism of the period Indian and Panther and Aboriginal Hunter are the result of an interest in Western Indians In 1856 he completed his best work, the bronze equestrian Washington in Union Square, New York city Among his later works are four statues in Statuary Hall, the Capitol, Washington, D C He exerted a strong influence on his pupils, among whom was J Q A Ward

Brown, Jacob Jennings, 1775–1828, American general, b Bucks co , Pa In the War of 1812 he defeated (May, 1813) a British attempt to take Sackets Harbor and the next year became commander of the Niagara frontier Brown crossed the Niagara, took Fort Erie, and drove the British back towards York (present Toronto) On July 25, 1814, he fought the battle of Lundy's Lane, but later was forced to retreat back to Fort Erie when expected naval support from Isaac Chauncey did not materialize From 1821 to 1828 he was general in chief of the U S army

Brown, James, U S banker see Brown, family

Brown, John, 1744–80, American Revolutionary patriot, b Haverhill, Mass , grad Yale, 1771. He became a lawyer and joined the patriot cause He went (1774–75) to Canada as an agent for the Boston Committee of Correspondence in a fruitless effort to establish correspondence and to encourage the Canadians to revolt In the American Revolution, as a friend of Ethan Allen, he had a prominent part in the capture of Ticonderoga (1775), later led a small force into Canada and with Allen made a hopeless attack on Montreal before Richard Montgomery arrived, then took part in the Quebec campaign He fought against Burgoyne in the Saratoga campaign (1777), capturing Fort George In 1780 he was fighting against the Indians and Tories in the Mohawk valley when he was killed

Brown, John, 1800–1859, American abolitionist, Torrington, Conn. He spent his boyhood in Ohi His life was a succession of business failures, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, and New Yor before he became prominent in the 1850s A ardent abolitionist (he once kept a station the Underground Railroad at Richmond, Pa Brown in 1855 settled with five of his sons Kansas to help win the state for freedom He b came "captain" of the colony on the Osawatomi The success of the proslavery forces, particular their sack of Lawrence, aroused Brown, and order "to cause a restraining fear" he, with fo of his sons and two other men, deliberately mu dered five proslavery men living on the banks the Pottawatamie river In this he asserted he w an instrument in the hand of God His exploits a leader of an antislavery band received wide pu licity, especially in abolitionist journals, and "Old Brown of Osawatom. " he became national known Late in 1857 he began to enlist men f a project which he seems to have had in mi for some time and which took definite form at convention of his followers held at Chatham, Ont the next spring He planned to liberate the slav through armed intervention by establishing stronghold in the Southern mountains to which tl slaves and free Negroes could flee and when servile insurrections could be stirred up Early 1859 Brown rented a farm near Harpers Ferry, V (now W Va), and there collected his followers a arms On the night of Oct 16, with 21 follower he crossed the Potomac and without much resis ance captured the U S arsenal at Harpers Ferr made the inhabitants prisoners, and took gener possession of the town Strangely enough, he the merely settled down, while the aroused local milit blocked his escape That night a company of U marines, commanded by Col Robert E Lee, a rived, and in the morning they assaulted the e gine house of the armory into which Brown's for had retired Ten of Brown's men were killed in th resulting battle, and Brown himself was wounde News of the raid aroused wild fears in the Soutl and to the North it came as a great shock O Dec 2, 1859, Brown was hanged at Charles Tow His dignified conduct and the sincerity of his cau defense during the trial won him sympathy in th North and led him to be regarded as a martyr See biography by O G Villard (1910, rev ed 1943), J C Malin, John Brown and the Legend of Fifty-Six (1942)

Brown, John, 1810–82, Scottish essayist, grad Uni of Edinburgh He was a physician His writing w collected in Horae Subsecivae (3 vols , 1858–82) an included his unique picture of a dog, Rab and H Friends (1859), and a memoir of that gifted chil known to Walter Scott's circle as "Pet Marjorie, Marjorie Fleming (1863) See his letters (ed by h son and D W Forrest, 1907), biography by E T M'Laren (1901)

Brown, John Alexander, U S banker see Brown family

Brown, John Carter, 1797–1874, American book co lector and philanthropist, b Providence, R I , so of Nicholas Brown He began (c 1840) collectin books printed before 1800 relating to America 5,600-volume library of early Americana result (catalogued by J R Bartlett, 4 vols , 1865–71 Several thousand more volumes were added befor Brown's death He gave liberally to Brown Univ named for his father After the death of his son John Nicholas Brown, his library passed to Brow Univ , with funds and endowment for a speci building on the campus to house it It is know as the John Carter Brown Library

Brown, John George, 1831–1913, American genr painter, b England He is best known for h humorous studies of street urchins His First Cigc and Curling in Central Park are characteristic work His Meditation and The Music Lesson are in th Metropolitan Museum

Brown, Joseph Emerson, 1821–94, Georgia state man, b Pickens District, S C , grad Yale Law School, 1846 In 1857 he was elected governor c Georgia and was three reelected, serving through out the Civil War Brown was an ardent states rights Democrat who eagerly advocated secessior Equally persistent about states' rights in the Con federacy, he quarreled with Jefferson Davis ove the assumption of Georgia troops into the Con federate army, conscription, and the suspension c the writ of habeas corpus After the war Brow became a Republican, advocated acquiescence t Reconstruction, and gained great unpopularity He soon returned to the Democratic fold, however and in 1880 was appointed to the U S Senate sea of John B Gordon, who had resigned He wa continued in the Senate till his retirement in 1891 The triumvirate of Brown, Gordon, and Alfred H Colquitt ruled Georgia for many years See L B Hill, Joseph E Brown and the Confederacy (1939) B J Hendrick, Statesmen of the Lost Cause (1939)

Brown, Lancelot, 1715–83, English landscape gar dener and architect One of the first to break away from the formal geometric style of Lenôtre, he i considered one of the founders of the English nat uralistic school of landscape design

Brown, Mather, 1761–1831, American portrait and historical painter, b Boston He studied under Benjamin West in London and continued to work in England His portraits include those of George IV (Buckingham Palace, London), Queen Charlotte, Sir William Pepperrell, Cornwallis, and Presidents John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, a self-portrait belongs to the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester, Mass He is well represented in the National Portrait Gallery, London Marquis Cornwallis Receiving as Hostages the Sons of Tippo Sahib is his best-known historical work.

Brown, Moses, 1738–1836, American manufacturer and philanthropist, b Providence, R I He was associated with his brothers John, Joseph, and Nicholas Brown in the family's mercantile activities before establishing (1790), with Samuel SLATER, the first water-powered cotton mill in America. The moving of Rhode Island College, later Brown Univ , from Warren to Providence in 1770 was largely due to his influence, and he contributed generously to the college Moses Brown School in Providence, a leading preparatory institution for boys, was established (1819) by Quakers on land donated by him

Brown, Nicholas, 1769–1841, American manufacturer and philanthropist, b Providence, R I , grad Rhode Island College (renamed Brown Univ in 1804 for him), 1786 He extended the internationally known mercantile business of his father, Nicholas Brown (1729–91), and later his own firm, Brown and Ives, came to control most of the water power on the Blackstone river, where his uncle, Moses Brown, and Samuel Slater had pioneered in the cotton textile industry He was the treasurer (1796–1825) and long the benefactor of his alma mater Butler Hospital (1847) was founded by his bequest for the care of the mentally ill

Brown, Olympia, 1835–1926, American Universalist minister and woman-suffrage leader, b Prairie Ronde, Mich , grad Antioch College, 1860, and studied at the theological school of St Lawrence Univ She was the first woman in America to be ordained (1863) to the ministry For 30 years she was president of the Wisconsin Woman's Suffrage Association In 1873 she married Henry Willis, but retained her own name

Brown, Robert, 1773–1858, Scottish botanist and botanical explorer In 1801 he went as naturalist on one of Matthew Flinders's expeditions to Australia, returning (1805) to England with valuable collections In his Prodromus florae Novae Hollandiae et Insulae Van Diemen (1810) he described Australian flora A leading botanist of his day, he served as librarian to the Linnean Society and to Sir Joseph Banks and later as curator at the British Museum He observed BROWNIAN MOVEMENT in 1827 and discovered the cell nucleus in 1831 His studies of several plant families and of pollen were also notable

Brown, Roy, 1879–, American landscape painter He is represented in the Metropolitan Museum of Art and other leading galleries

