WHO'S WHO IN LIBRARY SERVICE

EDITED BY

C. C. Williamson and Alice L. Jewett

PREFACE

The need for a biographical directory of professional library workers has long been keenly felt in administrative and editorial offices, and particularly in the administration of library schools and other training agencies. A few leading librarians have found their way into Who's Who in America, but for the main biographical facts about a large majority of the leading professional librarians in the United States there has been no source to which to turn except for address and present position. Several library schools have published lists of their graduates from time to time, but only two such lists have attempted to give biographical data. These two exceptions were the Register of the New York State Library School, of which a fifth and final edition was published after that School was moved back to Columbia in 1926, and the Register of the Library School of the New York Public Library, published in 1929, which included all the graduates of that School from its establishment in 1911 until it was also merged with the School of Library Service in 1926.

The existence of these well edited and extremely useful biographical directories of the graduates of two of the leading library schools made all the more conspicuous the need for similar information in regard to the graduates of other schools. It was obvious, also, that to be thoroughly useful all such information should be contained in one volume which could be brought down to date from time to time.

The idea of a "Who's Who in Library Service" had its origin, therefore, in the need for a consolidated register of the graduates of all the library schools. Consultation with the directors of the older schools showed that they, too, were aware of the need and were willing to co-operate in its production. Publishers who might have been expected to assume responsibility for the publication of such a volume feared that however useful such a work might be in certain quarters they might not be able to sell enough copies to cover editorial and printing costs. Professional organizations, although recognizing the need of such a handbook, had equally valid reasons for not undertaking the task. Convinced of the importance to the library profession of a reasonably complete biographical directory of its leading members, the present editors decided to undertake its preparation and publication on their own personal responsibility.

In spite of the increasingly important role played by the professionally trained librarian ever since Melvil Dewey established his

School of Library Economy at Columbia College in 1888, it had to be recognized at once that a directory of graduates of the accredited library schools could not claim to be a "Who's Who in Library Service." It was therefore decided to add to the list of library school graduates those library workers who through other types of training or by means of experience alone had reached positions of professional importance.

The inclusion of non-graduate librarians introduced the difficult problem of selection. A consolidated directory of all graduates in active service of the existing accredited library schools did not involve the delicate and unwelcome task of deciding who should and who should not be admitted. Obviously it was impossible and undesirable to try to cover the whole body of library workers, trained and untrained, numbering perhaps 25,000 to 30,000.

The method of selection adopted was as follows. Letters were addressed to the librarians of all public libraries in cities having a population of 50,000 and over, explaining the project and making the following request:

"Will you be good enough to send us a list of the members of your professional staff who are not graduates of one of the accredited library schools, but who should in your judgment be included in the proposed "Who's Who." Please give on the enclosed sheet the names of such persons together with their titles or descriptions of the positions they hold in your library. Such persons will ordinarily have the position of assistant librarian, department head, branch librarian or supervisor. As a general rule, persons should not be included who have only a high school education. In order to insure a reasonable degree of uniformity in the selection of names from different institutions, the editors must of course reserve the right to omit any of the names proposed."

A similar letter was addressed to the library authorities in each state having any kind of supervision over the public libraries of the state, requesting them to submit lists of outstanding non-library school graduates in public libraries in places having less than 50,000 population. Another letter of the same tenor was addressed to the librarians of all colleges and universities belonging to the Association of American Universities.

A different plan had to be followed for school librarians, librarians of private libraries and various kinds of special librarians. For these groups the assistance of organizations and individuals widely acquainted with the libraries and the personnel in their particular fields was secured. Membership lists of the associations of law librarians and medical librarians, for example, were carefully checked and compared with lists prepared at the request of the editors by outstanding librarians in these fields. Officers of the Special Libraries Association aided materially in the selection of business and other special librarians. In every case the editors reserved the right to use or not to use any name suggested. Finally, the A.L.A. Handbook and lists of members and officers of other professional organizations were carefully checked to make sure that no individual was overlooked who because of his personal achievement or the importance of his position should be in the list.

This method of selecting non-library school graduates worked as well as could have been expected. It is believed that the results are on the whole satisfactory though it is recognized that a more objective and uniform basis of selection would have been desirable if it had been feasible. It will be easy for the critic to point out that since this or that person was included someone else holding a position in this or that library should have been included. That is inevitable. The editors have no wish to defend or excuse errors either of omission or commission. They merely beg critics to reflect on the difficulty of attaining anything approaching perfect consistency in selection without involving impossible delays and expense, and to send to the editorial office, 531 West 116th Street, New York, their carefully considered criticisms and suggestions for use in possible future editions.

The original intention was to include all graduates in active library service, ending with the classes of 1931, of the twenty-one library schools accredited by the Board of Education for Librarianship of the American Library Association. However, some deviations in the direction of selection on the basis of the importance of positions held had to be made in order to keep down the cost of publication. Original estimates of cost were based on 5000 names. Nevertheless, rather than arbitrarily eliminate many recent as well as some older library school graduates the list has been allowed to grow to a total of 5764, of which all but 1151 have completed at least one full year of training in one of the accredited library schools.

Each library school co-operated by sending information blanks to all its graduates. The percentage of response varied considerably among the different school groups. So far as possible second and even third requests were mailed either by the school itself or by the editorial office. By far the larger proportion of missing names of library school graduates may be attributed to failure on their part to return the question blank. Many of those who did not return the blank seem to have felt that they had not attained a professional status which justified them in permitting their names to appear in the directory. A few preferred to stay out rather than furnish this or that item of personal information deemed essential by the editors. Others apparently feared that by furnishing the information requested they might incur some obligation to purchase a copy of the volume, although every effort was made to have it clearly understood that no one whose name appears in the volume is under the slightest obligation to purchase a copy, personally or for his library, either of this or any future edition. A biographical directory should be made from the same point of view as a map. Cities large and small, important and relatively unimportant, are placed on a map not to please the cities nor as a mark of distinction or honor, but simply to furnish information to those who have need of it.

It seemed wise to include only persons in active professional library service or in some closely related work such as teaching library subjects and editorial or bibliographical work in the library field. This decision has unfortunately eliminated a few librarians of long and successful experience who were temporarily without a position because of the unusual unemployment conditions. For the most part, however, this rule has affected only married women whose employment is normally casual or on a part-time basis, those who have gone into other lines of work, and those who have actually retired or are approaching retirement. The policy of including only those actually engaged in strictly professional library service has resulted in the exclusion of trustees and many others, both within and without library walls, who are doing important work as financial and accounting officers or as specialists of one kind or another, but who are not or need not be primarily librarians. Graduates of library schools employed in foreign countries had finally to be omitted, except a small number in Canada and Americans on the staffs of such institutions as the American Library in Paris.

A surprisingly large number of names had to be excluded because the subjects were unwilling to furnish the information requested. Since the sole purpose of the publication is to give essential biographical information the editors could see no reason for listing persons who refused to give such facts as the date of graduation from college and the inclusive dates of all positions held. Although date of birth may be considered a fairly important piece of biographical data, no insistence was placed on furnishing even the year of birth for it was recognized that there might be some truth in the assertion that "Women and music should never be dated," quoted from Oliver Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer, by one woman correspondent.

The first edition is limited to 1000 copies. If every copy printed is sold the receipts will barely cover the actual outlay for preparation of copy, printing and distribution. The editors expect no financial return for their labor and will count themselves lucky if they do not have to go down into their pockets to meet a substantial deficit. If, however, in spite of the present poverty-stricken condition of libraries and librarians enough copies are sold to cover expenses a new edition will be published in three or four years. In anticipation of a demand for a new edition, continuous attention will be given to the list of names to be included. Additions will in the future be based exclusively on professional achievement. The editors therefore not only welcome but earnestly solicit suggestions of names to be added to the list, both of persons who should have been included in the present edition and of those who with the passage of time acquire the necessary professional stature.

The great majority of librarians addressed filled out the question blank neatly, accurately and legibly, not putting on the editorial staff the unpleasant task of trying to decipher illegible handwriting or to pick out the important from the obviously unimportant and irrelevant facts. But the number of exceptions was disconcertingly large. The utmost care has been exercised in the preparation of copy and many supplementary inquiries have been sent out in order to clear up doubtful points. On account of the expense involved it was not possible to submit final copy of each sketch to its subject before publication. Opportunity for correction will be given, however, before a second edition is published.

Drastic condensation and actual omission of information furnished was not necessary in many cases except under the heading of authorship. Most books have been included but space limits precluded the publication of long lists of pamphlets and articles often consisting of ephemeral newspaper statements or even of unpublished typewritten material. Not a few respondents overlooked the fact that they were asked to give references "only to articles of two pages or more published within two years." As a rule periodical articles published prior to 1930 have not been listed, and exceptionally long lists of publications have been covered by a general statement and representative titles. An effort has been made to secure enough bibliographical data to follow the form of imprint used in the United States Catalog.

Had the plan of the work and the space limitations made it possible to publish more of the supplementary material received, the volume would doubtless have been more interesting and possibly more useful. The editors regret that their painfully cramped style precluded the utilization of such human interest items as the following: "Here it is (the filled out question blank) and, between us, my degrees are the following: two happy marriages, one handsome daughter, one healthy granddaughter." Another letter, supplementing the question blank, which will be useful when the time comes to publish a volume on "Living Librarians" closes with this paragraph: "And I adore fishing, rock gardening, horseback riding, canoeing, golf, dancing, and theatre-going. I weigh 116 pounds, am as dark brown as a piece of mahogany, love big dogs, hate cats, and was nearly drowned last summer." It has seemed inadvisable for various reasons besides those of space to publish much of the information furnished under the heading of "additional data." There was a degree of uncertainty, for example, as to whether publication was desired by the librarian who wrote: "Am said to be quite good-looking for a man nearly seventy years of age"; or by one who added, "Sometimes get funny on serious occasions, such as the present, perhaps just to cover up embarrassment caused by not having a degree."

The necessary compactness of form has been achieved by a system of drastic abbreviations, most of which will be reasonably clear without the use of the key to be found on page 13. It is only in the names of the library schools that the need for brevity of entry led to the use of a form so short as to approximate a symbol rather than a simple abbreviation. The names of the twenty-one library schools occur so frequently that it was deemed wise for the sake of brevity to employ the following symbols whenever the name of the school was used in any connection:

CI	Carnegie Library School, Carnegie Institute of Technology

Responsibility for preliminary plans, for form of entry, and for editorial supervision has fallen almost entirely upon Alice L. Jewett, librarian of the Mount Vernon (N.Y.) Public Library, who had already shown her aptitude for work of this kind by her editorship of the final edition of the Register of the New York State Library School, preceded by a period of service as editor of Public Affairs Information Service. The project would not have been undertaken in the first place and certainly could not have been carried to completion without her painstaking and efficient work. The detailed process of editing returned question blanks, preparing copy and seeing the volume through the press has been in the hands of Ettie Goldberg, of the Class of 1931 of the School of Library Service, at present assistant librarian of the School. Responsibility for mistakes of plan and policy rest upon the editors; errors of fact will usually be traceable to the carelessness of the librarians themselves in filling out their blanks. But it is believed that a high level of accuracy has been maintained, thanks to the vigilance, intelligence and devotion of Miss Goldberg as editorial assistant.

As in any work of this kind, some of the entries will be out of date by the time the volume is published. A few of the subjects have thoughtfully sent in supplementary data and corrections, and all personal information appearing in the library press has been carefully checked and followed up when necessary by correspondence down to March, 1933. It is assumed, however, that the primary value of the directory lies not in its use as an up-to-date address list, but in the biographical data which, though it will need to be supplemented from time to time, does not change.
