of his costs begins from the date of judgment—Watkins v. Fox, 22 Cal. 943; Rothery v. Munnings, (1830) 1 B. & Ad. 15; the taxation of the costs is not condition precedent to the institution of the suit for costs by the attorney—Makham Lal v. Nalin, 35 Cal. 171 (175). But the Madras High Court is of opinion that after judgment is given it is the duty of the solicitor to see that the decree is properly drawn up, and the suit does not end until the costs are regularly taxed and inserted in the decree and the decree is issued—Narayana v. Champion, 7 Mad. 1. And it has been held in a later Calcutta case that the period of limitation for the attorney's action for the recovery of his costs runs from the date of the last work done by the attorney in relation to the suit in which he was engaged, and the work includes the taxation of costs in the suit and appeal in which the attorney has acted. The attorney's cause of action does not arise until the costs are taxed, for until taxation the amount payable by the client cannot be ascertained—Atul Chunder v. Lakshman, 36 Cal. 609.

A compromise between the parties not made through or certified to the Court is not a termination within the meaning of this Article. A solicitor was retained in July 1871, to execute a decree. In November 1871, a prohibitory order was made in the case, after which the solicitor did nothing more in the matter. In June 1872, the decree-holder and judgment-debtor settled the matters in dispute between them without the knowledge of the solicitor; but this compromise was not made through or certified to the Court which passed the decree. In a suit brought in December 1875, by the solicitor against the decree-holder to recover the amount of his bill of costs, it was held that the compromise did not terminate the business for which the solicitor was retained and that the plaintiff's claim was not barred by this Article—Hearn v. Bapu, 1 Bom. 505. But a compromise terminates a suit when the suit is disposed of in terms of the compromise and time will run from the date of the compromise—Venkatarama v. Zamindar of Sivagiri, supra.

In respect of "business", i.e., non-litigious matters, time runs from the termination of the business. If there are natural breaks in the business, separate bills may be sent in for each separate item of the business, and the period of limitation will run separately in respect of each item; hence later items cannot be relied on to save earlier ones—Phillips v. Broadley, (1846) 9 Q B. 744.

405. Costs:—The word "costs" in this Article does not mean only the out-of-pocket expenses of the legal practitioner but includes also the remuneration payable to him—Rajah of Vizianagram v. Narasinga Row, 29 I.C. 763 (Mad.).

85. For the balance due on a mutual, open and current account, where there have been reciprocal demands between the parties.	Three years.	The close of the year in which the last item admitted or proved is entered in the account; such year to be computed as in the account.

406. Mutual, open and current account:—An open account is one which is continuous or current, uninterrupted or unclosed by settlement or otherwise, consisting of a series of transactions. An account current is an open or running account between two or more parties or an account which contains items between the parties from which the balance due to one of them is or can be ascertained. Mutual accounts are such as consist in reciprocity of dealings between the parties, and do not embrace those having items on oneside only, though made up of debits and credits. An account under which one party has merely received and paid monies on account of the other is not a mutual account properly so called. Each party must receive and pay on account of the other. In such an account, each party should be able to say to the other "I have an account against you"—Ram Pershad v. Harbans, 6 C.L.J. 158; Fyzabad Bank Ltd. v. Ram Dayal, 4 P.L.T. 571, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 107; Daui Dayal v. Pearey, 50 All. 645, A.I.R. 1928 All. 236 (238); Tea Financing Syndicate v. Chandra Kumar, 56 Cal. 575; Ram Dhan v. Mahomed Dost, 12 Lah. 420, 134 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 241; Ebrahim Ahmed v. Abdul Haq, 8 L.B.R. 149, 27 I.C. 879; Gopal Rai v. Firm Harchand Ram, 3 P.L.T. 492, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 364; Joharmal v. Hiralal, 7 Pat. 238, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 221 (222); Bholat v. Motala, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 224, 177 I.C. 265. An account in which only one party lends is not a mutual account; an account which is settled is not an open account; an account which is closed is not a current account—Premji v. Sassoon, 29 Bom.L.R. 375, 102 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 125. Where the plaintiff treated the account with the defendant as finally closed and started a new account and treated it as entirely separate, the mere adding of the old balance later on, in order to avoid limitation, at the end of the new dealings would not make it an open account—Firm Bhagwan Das v. Firm Nand Singh, 28 P.L.R. 146, 100 I.C. 815, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 848 (849). Where there was no formal closing of the account, the account only being totalled each year and the balance due being carried forward, held that the account was an open one—Imrat v. Lal Chand, 75 P.R. 1910, 124 P.L.R. 1910, 79 I.C. 715. An acknowledgment closes an old account, which ceases to be open and current account by such acknowledgment—Tapi v. Shankarlal, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 222, 1939 N.L.J. 109, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 113, 184 I.C. 139. As soon as an account ceases to be open it becomes an account stated (Art. 64).

To constitute a mutual account there must be transactions on each side creating independent obligations on the other, and not merely transactions which create obligations on the one side, those on the other being merely complete or partial discharges of such obligations—Shiva Gowda v. Fernandez, 34 Mad. 513; Velu Pillai v. Ghose Mahomed, 17 Mad. 293; Kunhikuttiali v. Kunhammad, 44 M.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 278; Ratan Chand v. Asa Singh, 4 Lah.L.J. 217, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 188; Ram Dhan v. Mahomed Dost, 12 Lah. 420, 134 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 241; Ganesh v. Gyanu, 22 Bom. 606; Satappa v. Annappa, 47 Bom. 128 (136); Appa v. Ramakrishna, 53 Bom. 652, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 5 (11); Chittar Mal v. Behari Mal, 32 All. 11; Gopal Rai v. Firm Harchand Ram, 3 P.L.T. 492, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 364; Bhimbai Morarji & Co. v. Hargovind, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 270, 177 I.C. 442; Vidya v. Shanti, 1942 A.L.W. 321. For an account properly to be called a mutual account, there must be mutual dealings in the sense that both parties come under mutual liability to each other—Padwick v. Hurst, 18 Beav. 575.

The test of mutuality is, that the dealings between the parties should be such that the balance is sometimes in favour of one party and sometimes in favour of the other. An account which consists of entries of payments made by one party in deduction of a debt to another and of payments made by the latter on behalf of the former, is not a mutual account—Gopal Rai v. Firm Harchand Ram, 3 P.L.T. 492, 66 I.C. 30, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 364; Bhimbai Morarji & Co. v. Hargovind, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 270, 177 I.C. 442.

Thus, where the plaintiff alone has been the banker making advances and receiving part payments from time to time, and the balance has always been in plaintiff's favour, the account cannot be said to be a mutual account—Budh Ram v. Ralli Ram, 103 P.W.R. 1916, 37 I.C. 300; Kunhikuttiali v. Kunhammad, 44 M.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 278. Where there is only a solitary instance of deposit made by the defendant to his credit in the account opened in his name by the plaintiff, and the deposit is the only occasion on which he is in a position of being able to make a demand on the plaintiff, the existence of this solitary credit is not sufficient to show there was mutual and reciprocal dealings between the parties. The account cannot in such a case be said to be mutual account—Bholat v. Motala, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 224, 177 I.C. 265. Where the account of the plaintiff Bank showed that the defendant borrowed a sum of money, and on various dates during the period of the account certain sums were paid by the defendant which were all credited to the account and set off against the pre-existing debt, and the account never showed any balance in favour of the defendant, held that the account indicated nothing more than the record of a loan transaction, and the payments made by the defendant were made in part discharge of the obligation under which he lay with respect to the Bank; the account was not a mutual account within the meaning of this Article—Bank of Multan Ld. v. Kamta Prasad, 39 All. 33, 14 A.L.J. 949, 35 I.C. 199; Uma v. Bank of Bihar, 1941 P.W.N. 638, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 201, 197 I.C. 449 (case of payment of interest of overdraft amounts). Where the defendant made part payment from time to time of the price of goods supplied to him by the plaintiff and the amount of payment did not at any time exceed the amount due to the plaintiff, held that there were no reciprocal demands between the parties, and it was not a mutual account. The case fell under Art. 52—Lalji v. Ghast Ram, 7 O.W.N. 420, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 287 (288), 128 I.C. 276. Where periodical consignment of goods was made by the defendants to the plaintiff simply and solely on account of antecedent loans advanced by the plaintiffs and with a view to reduce the balance due thereunder, held that there was no mutuality and reciprocity between the parties, and the suit for recovery of the sums due did not fall under this Article—Shiva Gowda v. Fernandez, 34 Mad. 514; Lakshmanan v. Nalla, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 337, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 13, 1942 M.W.N. 561, 207 I.C. 133.

But where the plaintiff advanced money to the defendant and the latter consigned goods to the former for sale on commission, it was held that there were independent obligations on both sides, because there existed on the one side between the plaintiff and the defendant the relation of creditor and debtor, and on the other side between the defendant and the plaintiff, that of principal and agent; and the account between the parties was a mutual open and current account—Namberumal v. Kottayya, 14 M.L.T. 498, 21 I.C. 773; Bengal National Bank v. Jatindra, 56 Cal. 556, 33 C.W.N. 412 (417); Ratan Chand v. Asa Singh, 4 Lah.L.J. 217, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 188; Firm Behari Lal v. Har Narain, 92 I.C. 674, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 283; Ruldu v. Basant, 41 P.L.R. 809, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 356, 185 I.C. 805. In B. B. T. & Co., v. B. L. Bann, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 340 it was held that to constitute a mutual account it is sufficient if there be only one set of transactions, but that set creates alternately debits and credits which are to be set-off against one another. The plaintiff who owned a ginning factory, lent money to the defendants for buying cotton. The cotton, when purchased, was ginned and pressed by the plaintiff, who sold it on behalf of the defendants. The ginning and pressing charges as well as the principal and interest were debited to the defendants and the sale proceeds of the cotton bales were credited to the defendant's account as against advances made by the plaintiff, the commission earned and other items. Held that there was a mutuality of dealings—Madhab Motiram v. Jairam, 23 Bom.L.R. 540, A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 451, 63 I.C. 950. Where a man lends money in one capacity and in another capacity acts as an agent for the borrower, and the two accounts are put together, there is a mutuality of dealings between the parties, although the money may have been lent for the express purpose of enabling the borrower to provide business as commission agent to the lender. In such a case, Art. 85 applies—Dou Dayal v. Pearey, 50 All. 645, A.I.R. 1928 All. 236 (239), 108 I.C. 694. Where A supplies B with one kind of goods or work and obtains from him another kind, debiting him with the cost of the former and crediting him with the value of the latter, held that it was a case of mutual account—Srinath v. Park Pittar, 5 B.L.R. 550; Sitayya v.

Rungareddi, 10 Mad. 259. Where, by virtue of an agreement, advances were made from time to time by the plaintiffs to the defendant in lieu of his agreeing to consign tea crop to the plaintiffs for sale, the proceeds of such sale to be appropriated towards the advances, and it appeared from the account that certain sums were debited against the defendant as having been paid by the plaintiff, and certain consignment of tea were sent and the plaintiff credited the defendant with the sale-proceeds of tea but also debited him with a certain amount of commission, held that there was a mutual, open and current account between the parties. Under the agreement the making of advances and the consignment of tea were to be brought together into one account as items which would produce a balance. The tea sent by the defendant was not sent merely by way of discharging the defendant's debt but was sent in the course of dealings designed to create a credit to the defendant which when brought into the account would operate by way of set-off to reduce his liability, the obligation to account for the proceeds of the tea received being an independent obligation on the plaintiff, inspite of the fact that he was expected and intended to apply such proceeds in liquidation of his advances—Tea Financing Syndicate v. Chandra Kamal, 58 Cal. 649, 34 C.W.N. 1175 (1189), 133 I.C. 801, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 359 (reversing Tea Financing Syndicate v. Chandra Kamal, 56 Cal. 575). Where there are entries on one side showing cash advances, price of cloth sold, payments made to third persons on behalf of the defendants for things supplied and commission charged, for purchases made by the plaintiff for the defendants, and on the other side there are entries showing that the plaintiff firm received various kinds of grain from the defendants and having sold them in the market credited the proceeds to the defendant, the case comes under this Article—Abdul Haq v. Firm Shivaji Ram, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 338, 71 I.C. 259. Where the plaintiff sometimes borrowed money from the defendant, and the defendant sometimes borrowed from the plaintiff, held that there was a mutual account—Ganesh v. Gyanu, 22 Bom. 606. Where the balance, when the account was opened, was in favour of the defendant and later on as a result of borrowings from the plaintiff, the balance went against them, it was a mutual account—Mansa Ram & Sons v. Hira Lal, I.L.R. (1940) All. 147, 1940 A L.J. 51, A.I.R. 1940 All. 209. Where accounts have been kept from year to year extending over a period of 20 years in which the balance has been drawn every year but no formal adjustment has been made at any time between the parties, and there is nothing to shew that the payment made by the defendants to the plaintiff were mere part payments of the advances already made, held that this was really a business account on either side and that there was a mutual, open and current account—Satappa v. Annappa, 47 Bom. 128 (135), 24 Bom.L.R. 1284, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 82.

It is not necessary to constitute a mutual account that the accounts should be kept by both the parties. Where it was shewn that the accounts were going on between the parties, and balances were struck and entries were made sometimes to defendant's debit and sometimes to his credit, the mere fact that the accounts were kept by one party only was no sufficient cause for holding that the account was not a mutual, open and current account—Jas Ram v. Attachand, 16 P.R. 1916, 178 P.L.R. 1915, 30 I.C. 491. A employed B as his agent to manage certain boats for which he was to receive a commission. B alone kept accounts in which he credited the sums received from the hire of boats and debited the amounts which had been paid for their upkeep and the commission due to him. Held that this account showed reciprocal demands and that it fell under this Article—Lakshmayya v. Jagannatham, 10 Mad. 199.

In Madras, it has been held that it is not even necessary that an account in order to be a mutual account, should have been kept in writing.. It is sufficient if the dealings amonted to mutual debit and credit on both sides; and if the account is kept in writing, it is enough if one of the parties kept it so.—Lakshmayya v. Jagannatham, 10 Mad. 199.

The fact that the balance is a shifting one, sometimes in favour of the plaintiff and sometimes in favour of the defendant, though valuable as an index of the nature of the dealings, is not a decisive test as to the mutuality of the account—Ganesh v. Gyanu, 22 Bom. 606; Ram Pershad v. Harbans, 6 C.L.J. 158; Thupatti v. Ranga Charlu, 23 M.L.J. 516, 17 I.C. 48. A shifting balance is a test of mutuality but its absense is not conclusive proof against mutuality -Ram Pershad v. Harbans, 6 C.L.J. 158; Dau Dayal v. Pearey, 50 All. 645, A.I.R. 1928 All. 236 (238); Joharmal v. Hiralal, 7 Pat. 238, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 221 (222); Velu v. Ghosh, 17 Mad. 293; Ganesh v. Gyanu, 22 Bom. 606; Tapi v. Shankarlal, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 222, 1939 N.L.J. 109, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 113, 184 I.C. 139; Ruldu v. Basant, 41 P.L.R. 809, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 156, 185 I.C. 805. Although the criterion of shifting balance is not conclusive that the account did not start as or did not continue as a mutual one yet when an account has started as a mutual one, and thereafter one is always indebted to the other and the course of dealing between the parties consists merely of partial repayments of that indebtedness and incidental and passing small transactions creating independent obligations on one side, but insignificant in amount and never such as would by their nature be likely to result in that party being able in a position to make a demand on the other, the account ceases to retain its character of mutuality—Bhimbai Morarji & Co. v. Hargovind, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 270, 177 I.C. 442. Where the accounts consisted entirely of sums advanced by the plaintiff which were repaid from time to time by the defendant, and on two occasions by reason of a slight over-payment the balance shifted in defendant's favour, and the payments by the defendant were only made in repayment of his debts, it was held that the account was not mutual, and the suit was not governed by this Article—Gokuldas v. Radhakishan, 29 N.L.R. 20, 142 I.C. 123, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 50. If there is a balance in favour of either party, it follows that there must be mutual liabilities of both parties to each other. If the balance is always in favour of one party in the very nature of the transactions, then the case is one in which there are not separate mutual dealings. In order to prove a mutual, open and current account, it is sufficient to prove mutual dealings between the parties consisting of sales made or services performed by each party to or for the other, creating mutual duties or reciprocal demands—Kunhi Kuttiali v. Kunhammad, 44 M.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 278; Ram Pershad v. Harbans, supra. The mere fact that the defendants have been debtors throughout does not show that the accounts were not mutual. Whether an account is mutual or not depends upon the nature of the dealings between the parties. It is sufficient, for an account to be mutual, if the dealings are such that the balance might have been in favour of either party; it is not essential that the balance should in fact have been in favour of the defendants at some stage—Satappa v. Annappa, 47 Bom. 128 (135), 24 Bom. L.R. 1284, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 82; Bhimbai Morarji & Co. v. Hargovind, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 270, 177 I.C. 442; Vidya v. Shanti 1942 A.L.W. 321 or for the last few years —Gopi v. Chameli, I.L.R. (1938) All. 741, 1938 A.L.J. 773, A.I.R. 1938 All 504, 177 I.C. 115; Bholaram v. Smt. Jait, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 92. It is not necessary that the balance should actually shift from one side to the other; all that is necessary is that from the nature of the transactions it is capable of so shifting—Premji Virji v. Sir E. E. Sassoon, 29 Bom. L.R. 375, 102 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 125. The test for determining whether an account is a mutual one is, not that there must be a shifting balance, but that such was a possible and likely incident of mutual transactions in regard to which the account was kept—Basanta v. Chota Nagpur Banking Association, 26 Pat. 231, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 18. See also Kesava v. Ramanatha, A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 210, and Travancore Mica Co. Ltd., v. Keli, A.I.R. 1956 Trav. Co. 97.

It has been held that this Article is intended to apply to cases where an account has been going on between two parties, and balances have been struck from time to time, showing the amount due from one of such parties to the other; and the suit to which this Article is intended to apply is a suit brought by one of those parties against the other for the balance found to be due on that account—Laljee v. Raghunundun, 6 Cal. 447. But this Article does not require that the balances should have been actually struck; it simply requires that the accounts should be such that if the balances were actually struck at various times, the balances at those times should have been sometimes in favour of the plaintiff and sometimes in favour of the defendant.

It is not correct to say that an account is closed whenever a balance is struck, until it is re-opened by fresh dealings. Where it appears that there were mutual dealings and that though balances were struck from time to time these were mere acknowledgments and not agreements to pay, held that the case was not one of a closed account (Art. 64) but of a mutual, open and current account. The mere fact that there were no further transactions between the parties since the striking of the last balance, did not change the natre of the account: for it cannot be held that an account becomes closed whenever a balance is struck—Jwala Das v. Hukum Chand, 66 I.C. 387, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 316. A contrary view has been taken in Tapi v. Shankkarlal, 1939 N.L.J. 109, A I.R. 1939 Nag. 113, 184 I.C. 139, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 222.

407. Reciprocal demands:—An account is mutual when each has a demand or right of action against the other; and therefore unless both the parties could, during the currency of the account, each have said to the other 'I have an account against you' there can be no mutual account. And therefore, if the balance was sometimes in favour of the defendant but generally in favour of the plaintiff, the banker, the account would not be a mutual one—Hajee Sayud v. Ashrufoonnissa, 5 Cal. 759 (763); Joharmal v Hiralal, 7 Pat. 238, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 221 (222); Ram Sundar v. Amrit, 4 P.L.T. 424, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 242. Where there is no evidence that the defendant ever made or was in a position to make any sort of demand whatever upon the plaintiff, held that there was no reciprocal demand between the parties—Tea Financing Syndicate v. Chandra Kamal, 56 Cal. 575, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 641 (643). (Set aside in appeal, 58 Cal. 649). But it is not necessary that the parties in the course of their dealings should have made actual demands upon one another. This Article applies where the nature of the business between the parties is such as to give rise to reciprocal demands, i.e., where the dealings are such that sometimes the balance may be in favour of one party and sometimes in favour of the other—Naradas v. Vissandas, 6 Bom. 134; Khushalo v. Behari, 3 All. 523; Satappa v. Annappa, 47 Bom. 128 (136); Fyzabad Bank v. Ramdayal, 4 P.L.T. 571, 74 I.C. 831, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 107; Tapi v. Shankarlal, 1939 N.L.J. 113, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 113, 184 I.C. 139, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 222. Where the transactions sometimes resulted in profit and sometimes resulted in loss; at one time the account stood in favour of the defendant, at another time in favour of the plaintiff; held that there was reciprocity of demands between the parties and the account was not made up of items on one side only. The defendant was at one time in a position to say to the plaintiff that he had an account against him—Joharmal v. Hira Lal, 7 Pat. 238, A I.R. 1928 Pat. 221 (223), 107 I.C. 533. And this is so, even though during the last few years the balance has been always in favour of the plaintiff—Imrat v. Lal Chand, 75 P.R. 1910, 124 P.L.R. 1910, 7 I.C. 719; Gopi v. Chameli, I.L.R. (1938) All. 741, 1938 A.L.J. 773, A.I.R. 1938 All. 504. 177 I.C. 815. Where the accounts are such that the defendants could not have made any such demand during the currency of the account, the requirements of this Article have not been fulfilled—Hardilal v. Pukhar Das, 3 Lah.L.J. 362, 67 I.C. 933, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 256.

In order to apply this Article, it must be established that there have been mutual obligations and that it has been the intention of the parties that such obligations would be set off against each other. It is not of course necessary that there should be a direct evidence of a contract as such a contract can be gathered from the surrounding circumstances——Bishesher v. Baijnath, A.I.R 1938 Lah. 264, 178 I.C. 259.

408. Limitation:—The period of limitation runs from the close of the year in which the last item was admitted or proved. If a mutual, open and current account be adjusted in the middle of a current year, and in that year there is entered one item admitted or proved, limitation will run from the end of the year and not from the date of the adjustment—Ganesh Lal v. Sheogolam, 5 C.L.R. 211; Gurdinomal v. Usto, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 442, A.I.R. 1943 Sind. 26, 204 I.C. 481. Where the last item in a mutual, open and current account was advanced to the defendants within limitation but this item was advanced more than three years after the close of the year in which the last preceding item was entered, the suit is barred by limitation in respect of the previous account—Gobind Ram v. Jawala Ram, 1 Lah. 12, 55 I.C. 872.

An open mutual account will not be statute barred, if there is any item in it within the period of limitation, even though the earlier items may be beyond the period; because as long as the account is continued the statute of limitation does not apply—Foster v. Hodgson, (1812) 19 Ves. 183; Tea Financing Syndicate v. Chandra Kamal, 58 Cal. 649, 34 C.W.N. 1175 (1188), 133 I.C. 801, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 359. See also Montosh v. Central Calcutta Bank, 57 C.W.N. 852. But the plaintiff will have to prove that the balance struck is in fact due by production of the account book of that year. The balance is not proved by an entry of the same in the account book of the succeeding year—Bholaram v. Smt. Jiat, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 92. The statute is retarded by every fresh item falling within the period of limitation, and it makes no difference on which side the account is—Ord. v. Ruspini, (1797) 2 Esq. 569. See also Catling v. Skoulding, (1795) 6 T.R. 189.

86. (a) On a policy of insurance when the sum insured is payable after proof of the death has been given to or received by the insurers.	Three years.	(a) The date of the death of the deceased.
(b) On a policy of insurance when the sum insured is payable after proof of the loss has been given to or received by the insurers.	Three years.	(b) The date of the occurance causing the loss.

These clauses were substituted by sec. 122 of the Insurance Act, 1938 (4 of 1938) as amended by sec. 68 of the Insurance (Amendment) Act, 1941 (13 of 1941).

Prior to the change effected as aforesaid the Article stood as set out below:

86. On a policy of insurance, when the sum assured is payable im-	Three years.	When proof of the death, or loss is given to or received by the insurers mediately after proof of the death or loss has been given to or received by the insurers.		by or from the plaintiff or any other person.

408A. Time now runs under this Article not from the date when proof of death or loss is given to or received by the insurers but from the date of the death or loss. The policies affected are no longer described as those under which the sum is payable immediately after proof of the death or loss has been given to or received by the insurers. An agreement providing that a suit upon the policy must be brought within a time (e.g., three months or one year) which is shorter than that provided by Art. 86, is not void under sec. 28 of the Contract Act, and a suit brought after the stipulated period would not be maintainable—Baroda Spinning Co. v. Satyanarayan Insurance Co., 38 Bom. 344, 21 I.C. 694 (696); Hira Bhai v. Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co., 14 Bom.L.R. 741, 16 I.C. 1001; Ruby General Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Bharat Bank Ltd. A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 352; Giridhari Lal Hanumanbux v. Eagle Star & British Dominions Insurance Co. Ltd., 27 C.W.N. 955. See also South British Insurance Co. v. Brojo Nath, 36 Cal. 516, 13 C.W.N. 425, 2 I.C. 573; Saroj Bandhu Bhaduri v. Jnanada Sundari Debya, 36 C.W.N. 555 (558).

408B. The suit contemplated by this Article is only a suit by the insured against the Insurance company—Ramaswami v. Satyanarayana, A.I.R. 1958 A.P. 309.

87. By the assured to recover premia paid under a policy voidable at the election of the insurers.	Three years.	When the insurers elect to avoid the policy.
88. Against a factor for an account.	Three years.	When the account is, during the continuance of the agency, demanded and refused or, where no such demand is made, when the agency terminates.

409. A factor is an agent who is entrusted with possession of goods for sale or account of his principal.

Demand, Refusal, Termination of Agency:—See Notes 415 and 416 under the next Article.

The agency of a person entrusted to sell goods on behalf of the plaintiff does not terminate when the goods are sold and the money is received by the agent; therefore limitation does not begin to run when any portion of the goods is sold, but only from the date of demand made by the principal during the time the price remains unpaid by the agent—Babu Ram v. Ram Dayal, 12 All. 541; Fink v. Buldeo, 26 Cal. 715.

89. By a principal against his agent for moveable property received by	Three years.	When the account is, during the continuance of the agency, demanded the latter and not accounted for.	and refused or, when no such demand is made, when the agency terminates.

It should be noted that Articles 88, 89 and 90 apply to suits by principals against agents; suits by agents against principals are not provided for in these Articles.

410. Suit for account and money:—A suit for account will lie if the defendant is under an obligation to account and obligation to account arises only (i) if the person upon whom the obligation is sought to be imposed must have received some kind of property not belonging to himself (ii) that the person seeking to impose the liability must be the owner or must have some title to that property as would enable him to recover it, (iii) that the defendant must have received the property in his possession and control; and (iv) there must be fiduciary relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant—Ashutosh v. Arun, A.I.R. 1950 Dac. 13. This Article applies to a suit by a principal against his agent for an account and for any money that may be found due on such account being taken; the phrase "moveable property" includes money—Shib Chandra v. Chandra Narain, 32 Cal. 719; Hafezuddin v. Jadunath, 35 Cal. 298; Pran Ram v. Jagadish, 49 Cal. 250 (252), A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 355; Venkatachalam v. Narayanan, 39 Mad. 376; Jogendra v. Debnath, 8 C.W.N. 113; Madhab v. Debendra, 1 C.L.J. 147; Asghur Ali v. Khurshed, 24 All. 27 (P.C.); Annu v. Somasundara, 54 Mad. 654, 131 I.C. 165, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 185 (188). A suit for recovery of money found due on an account and a suit for account are really one and the same thing—Jhapajhannessa v Bamasundari, 16 C.W.N. 1042, 16 I.C. 414.

A suit by a principal against his agent for an account as a preliminary step to enable the principal to recover from the agent the moneys received by him and not accounted for, is governed by this Article, but so far as it seeks to obtain certain account papers from the agent, the suit is governed by Article 120 and the cause of action arises from the date when such papers are to be submitted to the principal according to the contract between them—Madhab v. Debendra 1 C.L.J. 147. Where a suit is instituted against an agent for the recovery of a definite sum, and there is a prayer that the amount stated in the plaint or any larger sum proved by the decision of the Court to be due by the agent may be decreed to be paid, it is virtually a suit for an account—Hurronath v. Krishna, 14 Cal. 147 (P.C.).

Even where there is a contract to render account year by year, a suit by the principal against his agent for such account is governed by this Article (which is more specific) and not by Art. 115 which is only a residuary Article relating to contract —Bhabatarini v. Sheikh Bhadur, 30 C.L.J. 90, 53 I.C. 675; Venkatachalam v. Narayana, 39 Mad. 376 (380); Pran Ram v. Jagodish, 49 Cal. 250 (253); Jogindra v. Chinai Muhammad, 4 Pat. 289, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 494, 89 I.C. 275; Madhusudhan v. Rakhal, 43 Cal. 248 (dissenting from Jogesh v. Benode, 14 C.W.N. 122, Debendra v. Sheikh Esha, 14 C.W.N. 121 and Easin v. Baroda, 11 C.L.J. 43). In the last three cases, as well as in Moti Lal v. Amin, 1 C.L.J. 211, the suit was held to be governed by Article 115.

A suit by plaintiffs against their step-mother for recovery of their father's property which she was managing on behalf of the family under an arrangement, is governed by this Article or Article 90, so far as the moveable property is concerned, and by Art. 120 or 144 in respect of immoveable property—Kally v. Dukhee, 5 Cal. 692. A suit for account by one daughter against another daughter who is appointed manager and lambardar during her lifetime under the terms of her father's will is governed by this Article. The managing daughter is in control of the interests of the other daughters in the estate with their consent and therefore this Article applies—Asharfi v. Ram, I.L.R. (1939) All. 594, 1939 A.L.J. 428, A.I.R. 1939 All. 442. A suit for accounts against the agent in respect of money alleged to have been improperly advanced by him to counsel for purposes of litigation of the principal is governed by this Article, and the agent is bound to prove that the moneys drawn by him for payment as illegal gratification to the counsel reached their destination—Fox v. Beni, 13 C.W.N. 212, 4 I.C. 556. A suit by a principal against an agent to recover a specified sum of money lent by the agent to persons to whom he was not authorized to lend the money falls under this Article and not under Art. 90, as such a suit is really a suit for a mere money-account—Muthiah v. Alagappa, 41 Mad. 1.

If after partition among the members of a joint Hindu family, one member collects the family debts which were left undivided at the time of partition, it may be implied that he realises the debts as an agent of the other members. Consequently a suit against him by the other members may fall under this Article. Art. 62 cannot apply—Yerukola v. Yerukola, 45 Mad. 648, 42 M.L.J. 507, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 150; Gabu v. Zipru, 45 Bom. 313. See Note 372 under Art. 62. This view has been upheld by the Privy Council in Virayya v. Adenna, 58 M.L.J. 245, 51 C.L.J. 136, A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 18 (21), 121 I.C. 205.

A suit by one co-owner of property against another who has received more than his share of the income of the joint property is governed by this Article if the suit is for accounts of agency, otherwise Article 120 would be the proper Article to apply—Sita Ram v. Narayan, 45 Bom.L.R. 424, A I.R. 1943 Bom. 216, 208 I.C. 340.

A suit by one partner for partnership accounts based on an express agreement between the partners to render accounts and to distribute the profits annually is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art. 89. No doubt every partner is deemed to be an agent of the partnership, but an individual partner cannot be regarded as an agent of another individual partner—Binjraj v. Kisanlal, 29 N.L.R. 34, 141 I.C. 277, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 127 (130).

Where a petrol pump and tank are provided by the principal to the agent for the sale of the petrol to be returned on the termination of the agency, the cause of action for return of the pump, tank and accessories arises on the termination of the agency and this Article applies. So a suit instituted beyond three years after the accrual of the cause of action is barred—Western India Oil Distributing Co. Ltd. v. Rathnasebapath, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 296, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 360, A I.R. 1948 Mad. 76.

411. Suit to enforce a charge:—Where immoveable properties were hypothecated to the principal by the agent as security for the proper discharge of his duty, a suit by the principal against the agent for recovery of the sum found due upon adjustment of accounts, by sale of the properties hypothecated, is a suit to enforce a charge under Article 132, and does not fall under this Article—Madhusudhan v. Rakhal, 42 Cal. 248 (dissenting from Jogesh v. Benode, 14 C.W.N. 122 where the suit was held to fall under Art. 116); Pran Ram v. Jagodish, 49 Cal. 250 (253); Hafezuddin v Jadunath, 35 Cal. 298; Troilokhya v. Abinash, 21 C.L.J. 459, 24 I.C. 18. But where the suit is simply for an account (and not to enforce any charge) it will fall under this Article, inspite of the fact that the agent has hypothecated certain properties to the principal—Suresh v. Nawab Ali, 20 C.W.N. 356, 29 I.C. 848. Where the agent executed a kabuliat in 1305 by which he hypothecated certain properties as security against defalcation and default, and was dismissed in 1306, but was re-appointed in 1307, and then committed defalcation and default in 1307 and 1308, a suit for account against him would be governed by Article 89; Art. 132 cannot apply as the agent's position in 1307 after dismissal and re-appointment could not be governed by the kabuliat of 1305 —Behari Lal v. Hara Kumar, 21 C.L.J. 458, 29 I.C. 748.

412. 'Not accounted for':—A suit contemplated by this Article is a suit in which accounts have to be taken; where accounts have been rendered, this Article has no application. Where an account has been taken and adjusted, and a sum of money has been found due from the agent to the principal, a suit to recover that sum is governed by Art. 64 or 115—Kesho Prasad v. Sarwan Mal, 21 C.W.N. 591, 25 C.L.J. 335.

413. Registered contract:—When the contract under which the agent is employed is contained in a duly registered instrument, the suit is governed by Art. 116 —Mati v. Amin, 1 C.L.J. 211; Easin v. Barada, 11 C.L.J. 43, 5 I.C. 186; Jogesh v. Benode, 14 C.W.N. 122, 5 I.C. 59; Harender v. Administrator-General, 12 Cal. 357; Mathura v. Cheddu, 39 All. 355. But in Hafezuddin v. Jadu Nath, 35 Cal. 298 (301) and Pran Ram v. Jagadish, 49 Cal. 250 (253), A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 355, the Calcutta High Court has expressed the view that even if the contract of agency is registered, the case will fall under Article 89 and not under Art. 116 because the former Article is more specific than the latter, and also because a suit for account cannot be looked upon as a suit for compensation for breach of contract. The same High Court has in a subsequent case held that where an agent has undertaken by a registered agreement to repay the amount found to have been misappropriated by him within a month of the ascertainment of the amount, a suit by the principal for the recovery of the misappropriated amount is governed by Article 116 and should, therefore, be instituted within six years from the date on which the amounts are payable under the agreement—Mohini v. Bikram, 44 C.W.N. 793, 72 C.L.J. 480, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 257. In fact a suit for compensation for breach of contract is a suit for recovery of a definite sum of money; but a suit for account is not a suit for a definite sum of money but is a suit for ordering the defendant to account to the plaintiff for money received by him, and the first result is that the plaintiff gets a decree for discovery. And if anything is found due to the agent himself, he likewise can get a decree for it, even through he has not claimed it in his pleadings. Such a state of things can never happen in a suit for compensation for branch of contract; consequently Art. 116 does not apply to a suit for account against an agent—Annu v. Somasundara, 54 Mad. 654, 131 I.C. 165, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 185 (188).

Where sums received by an agent outside the scope of the registered instrument are sought to be recovered, the three years' limitation will apply—Harender v. Administrator-General, 12 Cal. 357.

414. Suit against agent's representatives:—If after the termination of the agency by death of the agent, a suit is brought against the heirs of the deceased agent, it would not be governed by Art. 89 for it cannot be said to be a suit for rendition of accounts (the liability to render accounts being personal to the agent, and the representatives of the agent not being liable to render accounts), but it is a suit for money payable to the principal by the representatives of the agent out of the assets in their hands—Kumeda v. Asutosh, 17 C.W.N. 5, 16 I.C. 742; Seth Chand Mal v. Kalian Mal, 96 P.R. 1886; Rao Girraj v. Ram Raghubir, 31 All. 429; Fatima v. Intiazi, 1 P.R. 1912, 13 I.C. 930; Rameswari v. Narendra, 5 P.L.T. 355, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 259; Ashutosh v. Arun, A.I.R. 1950 Dac. 13. In the Calcutta case (17 C.W.N. 5) the suit was held to be governed by Article 115 or 120; in 96 P.R. 1886, by Article 62 or 120; in 1 P.R. 1912, by Article 120, and not by Article 62 or 89; in 31 All. 429 the suit was held to be governed by Article 120, and not by Art. 57, 62 or 89. That is, Article 120 has been held to be the most appropriate.

In the Patna case, the suit was held to be governed by Art. 62 or 115 and not by Art. 120. In the Dacca case, the suit was held to be governed by Art. 62.

In an earlier Calcutta case it was held that if an agent had never been called on to render account during his life-time and then he died and the agency thereby terminated, the principal acquired a fresh right to have an account rendered by the agent's representatives, and that right was recognised by Article 89, and limitation ran from the death of the agent (or from the date when administration was taken to the agent's estate, sec. 17). In other words, the legal representatives of the agent were held bound to render accounts, and the suit for such accounts was held to fall under Article 89—Lawless v. Calcutta Landing and Shipping Co., Ld., 7 Cal. 627 (632). In Deorao v. Laxman, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 470, 1943 N.L.J. 308, A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 227, it has been held that a suit for accounts by the principal against the legal representatives of an agent is governed by this Article.

The omission of any mention of legal representatives in the words under "Description of suit" in Art. 89 does not mean that the Article is not intended to apply to a suit against his representatives—Bikram Kishore v. Jadabchandra, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 821, 40 C.W.N. 245, 62 C.L.J. 464; Ashutosh v. Arun, A.I.R. 1950 Dac. 13.

In Harender v. Administrator-General, 12 Cal. 357, and Mathura v. Chhedu, 49 All. 355, it was held that a suit against the agent's legal representatives for recovery of the amount not accounted for by the agent would fall under Article 116, if the contract of agency had been registered. Where in a suit for recovery of certain sums from the sons of the deceased Karpardar or agent, it is found that the Karpardar was under no liability to pay over the sums directly to the principal on receipt, and that there was a running account, the arrangement being that he should keep in his hands sufficient amount out of the collections for costs of litigation on behalf of his principal, the proper Article applicable to the suit is Art. 89 or Article 120—Sadhu v. Krishnamani, 23 Pat.L.T. 457, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 181.

If the time had commenced to run during the life-time of the agent (i.e., if the agency had terminated in the agent's life-time, by dismissal from service) and then the agent died, a suit against his legal representatives would be governed by Article 89, for it is based on the same cause of action as a suit against the agent himself, and the period of limitation in respect of the suit against the representatives would run from the same date as it would have run in respect of a suit against the agent himself had he lived, viz., from the date of the termination of the agency, and not from the date of the agent's death—Arunachellan v. Raman Chetty, 16 M.L.T. 614, 27 I.C. 807; Parthasarathi Appa Rao v. Subba Rao, 50 Mad. 249, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 157, 99 I.C. 456; Parthasarathi v. Turlapati Subba Rao, 47 M.L.J. 483, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 840.

415. Demand and refusal:—There must be an express demand and refusal; it cannot be supposed that demands were going on as long as the business was in existence. In the absence of any evidence of demand and refusal, limitation runs from the termination of the agency—Nabin Chandra v. Chandra Madhab, 44 Cal. 1 (8) (P.C.) (reversing Chandra Madhab v. Nabin, 40 Cal. 108); Bhabatarini v. Sheikh Bahadur, 30 C.L.J. 90, 53 I.C. 675. But where the agency is not terminated and is still in existence the limitation will run from the time the account is demanded and refused—Brij Lal v. Chander, 1943 A.L.W. 138. If there has been a demand for accounts and the agent has not responded to the call, there is by implication a refusal within the meaning of this Article—Madhusudhan v. Rakhal, 43 Cal. 248; Pran Ram v. Jagodish, 49 Cal. 250 (254). This is the case also where the agent has submitted accounts but has failed to explain the account-papers in spite of the principal's demands to do so—Madhusudhan v. Rakhal, 43 Cal. 248, 19 C.W.N. 1070. Where the agent does not refuse to render an account but promises to submit the same on a certain future date, which however he neglects to do, it must be held that the account was refused at that date and limitation will run therefrom—Hori Narain v. Administrator, 3 C.L.R. 446. But it cannot be affirmed as a general fact that the failure of the agent to render accounts necessarily amounts to a refusal, when the agent while in service had been all along saying that he would render accounts. The failure to render accounts on demand may be due to various causes, such as illness, or delay in preparing the accounts, or sometimes procrastination. The question whether the failure to render accounts amounts to a refusal depends upon the circumstances of each case—Bhabatarini v. Sheikh Bahadur, 30 C.L.J. 90, 53 I.C. 675; Fatima v. Intiazi, 1 P.R. 1912, 13 I.C. 930. Where the defendant was asked to render accounts repeatedly, and he put it off but never refused to render accounts, held that the putting off was equivalent to postponement, and postponement was not tantamount to refusal; on the contrary, it implied an admission that an account was due and would be rendered. In such a case, limitation ran from the termination of the agency —Saiyad Hasan Imam v. Debi Prasad, 3 Pat. 546, 5 P.L.T. 303, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 664, 80 I.C. 956.

Where there is a covenant to deliver accounts year by year, the omission to render such accounts amounts to a refusal within the meaning of this Article—Easin v. Baroda, 11 C.L.J. 43, 5 I.C. 186.

Where the defandant is an agent of two joint principals, limitation for a suit for account does not run until there has been a joint demand for account by the principals. A demand for account by one only of the principals will not give a starting point of limitation. In the absence of a joint demand, limitation will run from the termination of the agency—Jagdip v. Rajo Kuer, 2 Pat. 585, 4 P.L.T. 531, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 464.

Where there was a demand and refusal during the life time of the agent, who subsequently dies, then a suit brought against his legal representatives more than three years after such demand is barred by limitation on the ground that where a cause of action accrues and limitation once commences to flow it will not cease to flow—Ashutosh v. Arun, A I.R. 1950 Dac. 13.

416. Agency:—The guardian is not an agent and the relationship between the guardian and ward is not that of a principal and agent but is in the nature of a fiduciary relationship—Mani v. Annapurna, 22 Pat. 114, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 218, 206 I.C. 126. A lunatic for whose estate the District Judge appoints a manager, cannot be said to be the principal of the manager of his estate within the meaning of this article—Musst. Piari v. Kashi, 23 Luck. 65, 1947 O.W.N. 530, A.I.R. 1949 Oudh 51. It need not necessarily be established by a written document. It may be inferred from circumstances. In order to constitute agency by implication there must have been proof of the one having acted for the other in transactions and having dealt with the estate—Ahmed v. Yehiya, A.I.R. 1950 Hyd. 52.

416A. Termination of agency:—Under sec. 201 of the Contract Act, an agency is terminated, among other ways, by the principal revoking his authority, or by the agent renouncing the business of the agency or by the business of the agency being completed, and it is from this point that time is to begin to run in a suit under this Article—Venkatachalam v. Narayan, 39 Mad. 376 (378), 28 M.L.J. 140, 26 I.C. 740; Brij Lal v. Chander, 1943 A.L.W. 138. In Babu Ram v. Ram Doyal, 12 All. 541 and Fink v. Buldeo, 26 Cal. 715, the Judges expressed an opinion that an agency terminates under this Article only when the sums received by the agent had been fully accounted for by him to the principal. But this is contrary to the terms of this Article, because the words "not accounted for" indicate that the agency may terminate before the moneys are accounted for by the agent. Therefore where the principal revoked the authority of the agent, and the latter handed over charge to his successor, the agency terminated then and there (under sec. 201 of the Contract Act) though the agent has not yet handed over to his principal the money and accounts and passed the accounts—Venkatachalam v. Narayan, 39 Mad. 376 (dissenting from 12 All. 541 and 26 Cal. 715 cited above. An agency is terminated when the agent ceases to represent the principal even though his liability in respect of acts done by him may continue. Where an agent appointed specially to carry on the principal's business at a particular place for a particular period, handed over charge to his successor appointed by the principal and left the place and appeared before the principal sometime later for getting the balance of salary due to him and for having his accounts passed, it was held that the agent had ceased to represent the principal in respect of the agency after he handed over charge to his successor and that the period of limitation under Art. 89 commenced to run from that date—Somasundaram Chetti v. Nachal Achi, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 707, 1935 M.W.N. 967, 42 L.W. 342, 158 I.C. 573. Where an agency is revoked by a letter, the agency is not terminated by the posting of the letter but by receipt of the letter revoking the agency—Ramchander v. Rure, 1939 A.L.J. 961, A.I.R. 1939 All. 738, 185 I.C. 233. The agency terminates when the business of the agency has been completed, e.g., when the agent is instructed to buy and sell goods on behalf of his principal, the business of the agency terminates on the agent's carrying out the principal's instructions. And the mere liability to render accounts is not a continuation of the relation between the agent and the principal—Gordhan Das v. Gokal, 21 S.L.R. 336, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 264 (following 39 Mad. 376, and dissenting from 12 All. 541 and 26 Cal. 715).

The question as to when an agency terminates is a question of fact and depends upon the circumstances of each case, and not a question of law—Muthiah v. Alagappa, 41 Mad. 1; Nagappa v. Chidambaram, 31 M.L.J. 687, 36 I.C. 662; Ramanathan v. Kasi, 31 M.L.J. 685, 36 I.C. 804. It terminates on the date after which there have been no dealings between the parties, even though the agent had not accounted for all monies alleged to be due to the latter—Kuppuswami v. Veerappa, 37 I.C. 875.

Where an agent acting under a general power of attorney to manage all the principal's business collects a certain amount the agency is not terminated on the date when the amount is collected. Thus, where in such circumstances a sum was collected by the agent in 1937 and a suit was brought by the principal for its recovery in 1941, the suit is not barred—Varisai v. Kadir, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 484, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 122, 1945 M.W.N. 735, 223 I.C. 531.

A legal practitioner who happens to be the agent of a party does not cease to be such agent merely because he gets a Vakalatnama from his principal and sues on the strength of it for realising the amount due to his principal—Hira Wazir v. Md. Ali, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 49, 157 I.C. 815.

In a suit for accounts by the principals against the agent, instituted on 31st May 1923, it appeared that all the transactions of purchase and sale into which the agent entered on behalf of the principals had been completed on 29th May 1920, but the parties had agreed that the accounts should be settled on the 1st June 1920. Held that the suit was not barred, because the agency did not terminate until the 1st June 1920. The 1st of June was the appointed settling day, and until that day was over it could not be said that the defendant had ceased to represent the plaintiffs as their agent and to do acts in that capacity, although the transactions of purchase and sale might have been completed on the 29th May 1920—Lakhmi Chand v. Chajju Mal, 91 I.C. 487, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 200.

In a suit for recovery of money received by the defendant as agent for the plaintiff on account of plaintiff's winnings in a lottery, the agency does not terminate when the money is received by the defendant, but continues so long as the money is held by the defendant for the plaintiff, and the right to sue arises when the money is demanded and payment is refused—Hormasji v. Ho Hmyin, 12 Bur.L.T. 9, 51 I.C. 530. The agent received a sum of money on behalf of his principal in 1902; in May 1903, disputes arose between the principal and agent in which the agent denied the principal's right to the money. But in June 1903, the agent again received another sum as agent on behalf of his principal; after that date, there was no demand or refusal or termination of agency. The principal filed a suit in 1907 to recover the money from the agent. It was held that the suit was not barred; although the agent asserted his own right in May 1903, the adverse claim was not continued, and when in June 1903 he again received the money on behalf of the plaintiff his conduct amounted to a continuation of the agency—Nathubhai v. Devidas, 12 Bom.L.R. 951, 8 I.C. 637. Where an agent threw up the agency at Rangoon and came back to Madras, the termination of the agency was the starting point of limitation. The fact that he went back to give evidence and again acted for a time until the principal sent a successor cannot prevent the running of time as regards the first agency, provided there was no acknowledgment of liability to account after such termination —Palaniappa v. Alagappa, 39 I.C. 691 (Mad.).

As agency determines on the death of a principal, therefore a suit by the representative of the late principal against the agent for an account of money received by the agent during the late principal's life-time, falls under this Article, because after the death of the principal, the position of the agent is not altered into that of a trustee—Nabin Chandra v. Chandra Madhab, 44 Cal. 1 (7) (P.C.). Where an agency is created between two persons and the principal dies but the agent continues in the service of his sons and they file a suit for accounts for period both before and after the death of their father, as the former agency terminates with the death of the father, the two periods should be separately considered and if a suit for accounts in respect of the anterior period is instituted more than three years after the date on which the agency terminated the suit for accounts must be regarded as barred—Bikramkishore v. Jadabchandra, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 817, 40 C.W.N. 245, 62 C.L.J. 464. Therefore the suit should be brought within 3 years of the death, even though the representative of the late principal should continue to employ the agent—Mohendra v. Jadu Nath, 9 C.L.J. 107, 3 I.C. 684; Sarashibala v. Chuni Lal, 26 C.W.N. 320, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 53; Girjibai v. Narayan, 26 Bom.L.R. 1165, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 148, 88 I.C. 975. For, where on the death of the principal the agent continues in the service of his heirs, the old agency terminates and a new agency independent of the original contract is created, and the suit for accounts in respect of the old agency must be brought within three years of the termination of that agency—Madhusudhan v. Rakhal, 43 Cal. 248, 19 C.W.N. 1070.

417. Account for more than three years before suit:—Although a suit must be brought within 3 years, still there is nothing in the words of this Article to show that the plaintiff is entitled to accounts for only three years antecedent to suit. Thus, in a suit brought in 1911, in which accounts were claimed from 1899, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to the accounts claimed—Suresh v. Nawab, 20 C.W.N. 356, 29 I.C. 848. See also Pran Ram v. Jagdish, 49 Cal. 250 (256), 35 C.L.J. 111, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 355, where in a suit instituted on 27th August 1918, a claim for account from 13th April 1914 was decreed; and Subramania v. Kannappa, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 38, 183 I.C. 82.

90. Other suits by principals against agents for neglect or misconduct.	Three years.	When the neglect or misconduct becomes known to the plaintiff.

418. This is a residuary Article with regard to actions between principal and agent, and should be applied only if no other Article can possibly be regarded as applicable to the facts of the particular case—Madhavan Nair v. Zamorin, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 906 (907). The expression "neglect or misconduct" must be construed technically as referring to what is termed negligence or misconduct of the agent in the conduct of the business of the agency. It does not cover everything that may in ordinary parlance be called misconduct—every failure of duty on the part of the agent, failure to render account, failure to pay over money in his hands to the principal and so on—Madhavan v. Zamorin, supra. The word "other' in this Article shows that this Article does not include suits which properly come within Article 89. A suit by the principal against an agent for the recovery of money lent by the latter to persons to whom he was not authorized to lend, is a suit for an ordinary money account under Article 89, and is not therefore governed by Art. 90—Muthiah Chetty v. Alagappa Chetty, 41 Mad. 1 (2). For a suit against an agent for misconduct, see 41 All. 635.

Plaintiff paid a certain sum to his agent (defendant) to be paid to A. Defendant not having paid the money to A, the latter brought a suit against plaintiff and obtained a decree for the money. It was held that the plaintiff's suit against defendant was governed by Art. 90; time began to run when the plaintiff came to know of defendant's misconduct and not from the date of payment by the plaintiff to A under the decree —Rangasami v. Srinivasa, 21 M L.J. 453, 9 I.C. 54.

Where during the tenure of the office of the Chairman of a Municipal Council, the manager embezzled sums of money, a suit by the Municipal Council against the Chairman for recovery of the money on the ground that the embezzlement took place through his negligence in supervision, is governed by Art. 36, and not by Art. 89 or 90, as the Chairman is not an agent of the Council although it is his duty to collect the dues and see that proper accounts are kept—Srinivasa v. Municipal Council, 22 Mad. 342. But in an Allahabad case, where during the tenure of the office of the Secretary and the Executive officer of the Municipal Board, the head accountant embezzled sums of money, it was held that the Secretary and the Executive Officer of the Municipal Board were the agents of the Board within the meaning of this Article, and that a suit against the Secretary on the ground that it was his neglect of official duties (viz., want of supervision over the cash book and over the receipt of all taxes and income of the Board) which mainly contributed to the embezzlements, fell under this Article—Mukherji v. Municipal Board of Benares, 46 All. 175, 22 A.L.J. 26, 80 I.C. 241, A.I.R. 1924 All. 467. The Lahore High Court also holds that a Chairman of the Board of Directors of the branch firm of a Bank is an agent of the Bank, and a suit by the Bank against such Chairman for making certain advances to some persons improperly, mala fide and negligently, falls under this Article—Daulat Ram v. Bharat National Bank, 5 Lah. 27, 79 I.C. 740, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 435.

A suit by a sabha against an ex-secretary claiming a sum of money on the ground that he had wrongfully retained the money of the sabha by not entering them in the accounts and had shown certain sums of money falsely as having been spent on behalf of the sabha when as a matter of fact they were not at all spent, is governed by this Article as there is allegation of misconduct—Sankaranarayana v. Bayanai, 1938 M.W.N. 1133, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 114, 180 I.C. 390.

A suit in which a client claims damages for negligence of his advocate is governed by this Article—Saw Hla 'Pru v. Halkar, 9 Rang 575, 135 I.C. 648, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 1 (2); Annamalai v. Cowasjee, 1938 Rang. L.R. 457, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 258 (F.B.).

419. Starting point of limitation:—Limitation begins to run when the agent's neglect becomes known to the principal, and not when the principal comes to know that there is sufficient ground for a good case being run against the agent—Janki Koer v. Mahabir, 25 I.C. 706 (Cal.). In other words, time runs from the date when the negligent act or omission becomes known to the plaintiff, and not from the time when he realises or concludes that the act was negligent. This Article is not happily worded, for the law knows nothing of neglect or misconduct in the abstract, and no suit can lie which is founded on negligence or misconduct as such. The word 'neglect' means some negligent act or omission, and when column 3 says that time runs when the neglect or omission becomes known to the plaintiff, it means when the negligent act or omission becomes known to the plaintiff, and not when the plaintiff realised or concluded that the act (or omission) was negligent—Saw Hla Pru v. Halkar, 9 Rang. 575, 135 I.C. 648, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 1 (2, 3). This Article does not say that time begins to run when the cause of action for neglect or misconduct became known to the plaintiff, but when the neglect or misconduct became known—Annamalai v. Cowasjee, supra. Where a principal sued his agent in regard to his misconduct in making a secret profit and concealing the same from the plaintiff, held that the crucial point was not the date on which the defendant had made the secret profit but the date on which the plaintiff knew that the defendant had made the secret profit—Kishori Lal v. Jauhari, 25 A.L.J. 448, 103 I.C. 221, A.I.R. 1927 All. 436. Knowledge of the agent's negligence includes constructive knowledge, and the plaintiff must be deemed to have got constructive notice of the defendant's negligence when it was first reported in the office of the plaintiff that some rents had become time-barred through the defendant's negligence to collect them—Anand Parshad v. Perbhu Narain, 6 I.C. 456.

91. To cancel or set aside an instrument not otherwise provided for.	Three years.	When the facts entitling the plaintiff to have the instrument cancelled or set aside become known to him.

420. Where Article does not apply:—(1) This Article will not apply when the cancellation of a document is not an essential part of the plaintiff's relief—Unni v. Kunchi, 14 Mad. 26; Shankaran v. Keshavan, 15 Mad. 6 (10); Puraken v. Parvathi, 16 Mad. 138; Radhu v. Malak, 84 P.L.R. 1915, 29 I.C. 199. Where in a suit some substantial relief (e.g., recovery of some property) is prayed for, and the cancellation of the instrument is merely incidental or auxiliary to such relief, this Article does not apply—Bachchan v. Kamta, 32 All. 392 (395), 5 I.C. 585; Sundaram v. Sithammal, 16 Mad. 311; Abdul Rahim v. Kirparam, 16 Bom. 186; Muhammad v. Mango Mal, 22 All. 90; Ikram v. Intizam, 6 All. 260 (262); Uma Shankar v. Kalka, 6 All. 75; Ramausar v. Raghubar, 5 All. 490; Hazari v. Jadaun, 5 All. 76 (per Straight J.); Bageshra v. Sheo Nath, 14 A.L.J. 464, 32 I.C. 930; Chhajumal v. Multan Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 996. Such a case arises where the instrument is null and void. Such a document need not be cancelled or set aside by a suit brought within three years under this Article, but the plaintiff can bring a suit for declaration, possession or other relief without praying for cancellation of the instrument. To such a suit Article 91 does not apply—Md. Nazir v. Zulaikha, 50 All. 510, A.I.R. 1928 All. 267; Krishnadhan v. Brojendra, 34 C.W.N. 642 (645), A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 748; Chandi Charan v. Sarat Chandra, A.I.R. 1955 Assam 231; Appanna v. Venkatapadu, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 611; Ambammal v. Muddiah, A.I.R. 1952 Mys. 65; Gouri Amma v. Parameswaran, A.I.R. 1957 T.C. 312. Thus, a deed of gift executed by a Hindu widow transferring the bulk of the property to an idol is void and not voidable; a suit to set aside the gift and for possession of the property does not fall under this Article—Chooramoni v. Baidya Nath, 32 Cal. 473. So also a suit for declaration that a mortgage deed was without consideration and null and void is not governed by this Article but by Article 120 —Aisha v. Kundan, I.L.R. 1945 All. 494, 1945 A.L.J. 196, A.I.R. 1945 All. 367. A document which was never intended by the executant to be operative and which was not properly signed by him is a nullity; it does not require to be set aside by the person entitled to the possession of the property as against the person in whose favour the document stands—Banku v. Kristo Govinda, 30 Cal. 433 (438). Thus where, to avoid a wife's claim to dower debt, a fictitious document is executed no title passes to the vendee under the sale deed and the vendor continues to be the owner of the property and hence it is not incumbent on him to have it set aside and so this Article can not be pleaded as a bar to his suit for declaration of ownership—Khaliq v. Ghulam, 1939 A.L.J. 389. If a deed of relinquishment executed by a purdanashin lady is a void document, it is not necessary to avoid it or get it cancelled; this Article has no application to a case where a suit is brought by her for possession upon declaration that an instrument under which the defendant claims is void—Ishar v. Anwar, 1939 A.L.J. 642, A.I.R. 1939 All. 348, 182 I.C. 801. But where the deed of relinquishment is not a void document it has got to be avoided within the time prescribed by this Article—Gyan v. Mt. Dukhan, 19 Pat.L.T. 362, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 69, 173 I.C. 479. An alienation of joint family property by a coparcener without the consent of the other coparceners is void; it is not necessary to have the deed of gift set aside, and Art. 91 has no application—Muktabai v. Karam, 7 A.L.J. 783, 6 I.C. 841. An alienation of the management of a temple by the trustee is void and need not be set aside; therefore a suit to recover the estate from the alienee is governed by Art. 124, and not by this Article—Narayana v. Lakshmanan, 39 Mad. 456 (458). An alienation which is null and void under sec. 3 of the Bombay Bhakdari Act (V of 1862) need not be set aside by a suit under this Article; the plaintiff can seek a declaration that the sale is void against him, and Art. 120 applies to the suit—Shankarbhai v. Bai Shiv, 54 Bom. 837, 32 Bom.L.R. 1013, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 545 (553), 127 I.C. 897. A benami conveyance which is an inoperative instrument and which was never intended to be operative need not be set aside. A suit to recover the property comprised in the conveyance is not governed by Article 91 but by Article 144—Petherpermal v. Muniandy, 35 Cal. 551 (P.C.); Sham Lal v. Amarendra, 23 Cal. 460 (469); Ma Ma v. Mg. Shet, 4 Bur. L.J. 250, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 71, 93 I.C. 197. The alienation of temple property by a trustee is null and void, and need not be set aside; consequently a suit by the succeeding trustee to recover the property is not governed by this Article—Sheo Shanker v. Ram Sewak, 24 Cal. 77. A suit to recover possession of property alienated by a Hindu widow is not governed by this Article, when the alienation is found to be sham—Manchcharam v. Panabhai, 40 Bom. 51. Where it is established that the plaintiff by defendant's misrepresentation was got to execute a deed of sale, believing the same to have been a deed of a different kind, the transaction is void and not voidable only, and Art. 91 has no application to a suit to recover the property which passed under the void sale-deed—Sanni Bibi v. Siddik Husain, 23

C.W.N. 93, 49 I.C. 76. Where an illeterate person executes a document under the impression it is a lease, though in fact it is not a lease, on the misrepresentation that it is a lease, there is no real execution. As there is no real execution, the document is wholly void and this Article has no application—Raja v. Chai, 20 Pat L.T. 957, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 201, 185 I.C. 816. Where the plaintiff brought a suit for a declaration that a deed of gift executed by her was void and inoperative, as she signed the deed believing, on account of the fraud and misrepresentations of the defendant, that it was only a power of attorney, and she also prayed for a declaration of title in the properties gifted, held that the deed of gift was void ab initio, and did not require to be set aside. Consequently, the suit was governed not by Art. 91 or 95 but by Article 120—Sarat Chandra v. Kanai Lal, 26 C.W.N. 479, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 786, 70 I.C. 525; Brindoban v. Dhuba, 49 C.L.J. 540, 121 I.C. 404, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 606. Where the claim was not to set aside the sale deed, but for a declaration that from its very inception it was a sham transaction, held that there was no necessity for the plaintiff to have the deed set aside, and therefore this Article did not apply—Jagardeo v. Phuljhari, 30 All. 375; Md. Nazir v. Zulaikha, 50 All. 510, A I.R. 1928 All. 267, 109 I.C. 54. Where the plaintiff (a person of weak mind) was got to execute a deed of sale or mortgage in favour of the defendant by fraud of the latter, and no consideration passed under the deed, held that the deed was a nullity and it is not necessary for the plaintiff to have it set aside under this Article; he can bring a suit to recover possession under Article 144—Sundaram v. Sithammal, 16 Mad. 311; Abdur Rahim, v. Kriparam, 16 Bom. 186; Boo Jinathoo v. Shah Nagar, 11 Bom. 78. Where during the minority of the plaintiff, a property belonging to him was alienated to the defendant by a person who was not his lawful guardian, and without any necessity, the deed was void, and a suit by the minor after attaining majority is governed by Art. 142, and not by Article 91 or 44—Sajjad Ali v. Zulfikar, 33 I.C. 943, 83 P.R. 1916; Anandappa v. Totoppa, 17 Bom.L.R. 1137 (Note), 33 I.C. 441; Ramausar v. Raghubar, 5 All. 490; Narsagauda v. Chawagauda, 42 Bom. 638 (F.B.); Uttam Singh v. Barkat Ali, 15 P.R. 1913, 19 I.C. 235; Sardar Shah v. Haji, 182 P L.R. 1980, 1 I.C. 545, 28 P.R. 1909; Husain v. Rajaram, 10 N.L.R. 133, 26 I.C. 813. Where a sale-deed was executed by persons purporting to be guardians, but no consideration passed under the sale-deed, and the defendant never obtained possession under it, no suit is necessary to set aside the deed; Article 144 and not 91 applies—Nawab Mir Sayad v. Yasin Khan, 17 Bom. 755 (758). Where a deed of gift is executed by a person governed by the Muhammadan law, and the possession of the property comprised in the gift has not been delivered, the gift would be void ab initio, and no question of limitation will arise as regards a suit to set aside the deed of gift. But if afterwards the defendant takes possession, the gift becomes operative by law, and limitation (Art. 91) for a suit to set aside the gift runs from the moment the defendant takes possession—Mulani v. Maula Bakhsh, 46 All. 260 (262, 264), 22 A.L.J. 149, 78 I.C. 222, A.I.R. 1924 All. 370. Where the plaintiff executed a registered sale-deed in favour of the defendant, and the defendant executed a receipt in favour of the plaintiff stating "I shall without any objection give up your land at any time you may ask me to give up" and it was proved that no consideration passed under the sale-deed, held that the sale-deed was a mere paper transaction and inoperative, and a suit to recover possession of the land was governed by Article 144 and not by Art. 91—Sangawa v. Huchangowda, 48 Bom. 166, 82 I.C. 533, 25 Bom.L.R. 1207, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 174. Where a zemindar granted a village to a person for life for his maintenance, but the grantee gave a permanent lease of the village, held that after the death of the grantee the lease became spent and void and not merely voidable, and a suit by the zemindar to recover possession from the lessee was not governed by Article 91—Beni Pershad v. Dudhnath, 27 Cal. 156 (165) (P.C.). Where a transaction containing both legal and illegal parts is embodied in either one or two instruments the whole transaction becomes void ab initio and this Article has no application—Asaram v. Ludheswar, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 1, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 335, 177 I.C. 6 (F.B.).

(2) Secondly, this Article does not apply where the transaction, though a voidable one, does not require to be set aside through the intervention of the Court. Thus, where the certificated guardian of a minor had granted a perpetual lease of the minor's property without the sanction of the Court the transaction is a voidable one, and it is not necessary for the minor (after attaining majority) to bring a suit to have the instrument of lease cancelled. He can simply repudiate the transaction and bring a suit for possession—Abdul Rahaman v. Sukhdayal, 28 All. 30. Where a guardian sells immoveable property belonging to a minor without the sanction of the District Judge, and subsequently executes a second sale with the sanction of the Judge, the latter transferee can sue for possession outright and need not expressly sue to have the first sale set aside. To such a suit, Art. 91 does not apply—Nagendra v. Mohini, 58 Cal. 128, 34 C.W.N. 948, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 131, 130 I.C. 273. So also where a widow had granted a lease for a period extending beyond her own life, a suit by the reversioner to recover possession of the property is governed by Art. 141 and not by this Article. Such an alienation is voidable at the election of the reversionary heir, who may treat it as a nullity without the intervention of the Court, and he can show his election to do so by commencing an action for recovering possession of the property; the cancellation of the lease is not a condition precedent to the right of action of the reversionary heir—Bijoy Gopal v. Krishna Mohishi, 34 Cal. 329 (P.C.) (reversing Bijoy Gopal v. Nilratan, 30 Cal. 990); Harihar v. Dasarathi, 33 Cal. 257; Rakhmabai v. Keshab, 31 Bom. 1. Similarly, where a Hindu widow in possession of her husband's estate sold the property and then adopted the plaintiff and died, a suit by the adopted son to recover possession of the estate from the purchaser was not governed by Art. 91. There is no essential difference between the position of the adopted son seeking to enforce his rights with reference to the property alienated by the widow before the adoption, and the position of a reversioner seeking to enforce his rights with regard to the property alienated by the widow before her death. The adopted son was not required to set aside the sale any more than a reversioner. The suit was governed by Article 144 and not by Article 91—Hanamgowda v. Irgowda, 48 Bom. 654, 26 Bom.L.R. 829, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 9. A suit by a landlord to avoid a transfer made by a tenant in contravention of section 43 of the C. P. Tenancy Act is not governed by this Article. The landlord is not bound to set aside the transfer and may sue for possession treating the transferee as a trespasser—Saguncband v. Chhabilram, 18 N.L.R. 11, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 60. The members of a tarwad need not sue to set aside an alination made by the karnavan, but can sue to recover possession on the strength of title, because the alienation is not binding on the tarwad. Consequently, Article 91 does not apply to a suit to recover possession of the property alienated, but Article 144 would apply—Kanna Panikkar v. Narichan, 46 M.L.J. 340, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 607, 78 I.C. 564.

(3) Thirdly, this Article does not apply where the suit was not to cancel or set aside an instrument, but only to amend it by substituting the name of the plaintiff for the name of another person mentioned in the deed. Thus, where the plaintiff asks for a declaration that the first defendant whose name appears as lessee in a certain lease-deed has no interest under the lease, and that the person really interested under the lease is the plaintiff himself for whom the first defendant acted as benamidar, held that the suit does not fall under this Article but Art. 120, as the plaintiff does not ask to annul the lease itself—Basant Lal v. Chidammi, 35 All. 149. Similarly, this Article does not apply where the plaintiff does not seek to cancel the instrument but simply asks for a declaration that his own interests are not affected by it. Thus, where a relation of the plaintiff executed in favour of the defendant a sale-deed by which he professed to transfer the whole of a joint family property, one-fourth of which belonged to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff brought a suit asking that he might be maintained in his joint possession on the property by cancellation of the deed so far as it was injurious to his rights, held that the suit was not to cancel the sale-deed, because the plaintiff cannot dispute the validity of the deed except in so far as it affects his rights. Article 120 governed the case—Din Dayal v. Har Narayan, 16 All. 73.

(4) Fourthly, this Article does not apply where the plaintiff was not a party to the instrument sought to be avoided. This Article is restricted to a suit between the parties to the instrument or their successors-in-interest. Where the instrument was not executed by the plaintiff (or his predecessor) he is not bound to set it aside and this Article does not apply—Vithu v. Devidas, 15 N.L.R. 55, 51 I.C. 943; Kunjilal v. Chandra, 17 N.L.R. 169, 64 I.C. 775; Ganapati v. Sivamalai, 36 Mad. 575. Thus, where a suit by mortgagee is in effect one for a declaration that a sale by his mortgagor to a third party is null and void, Art. 120 applies to the case and not Art. 91—Misan v. Shwe Ba, 1 Bur.L.J. 106, A.I R. 1923 Rang. 82. A land belonging to defendant No. 1 was mortgaged by him to defendant No. 5, and afterwards the plaintiff purchased it at sale in execution of a certain decree against defendant No. 1; the plaintiff thereupon brought a suit for a declaration that the mortgage was fraudulent and without consideration. Held that the suit did not fall under this Article. "No doubt a declaration that defendant No. 5 has no title to the land would be to that extent equivalent to setting aside that mortgage, but such declaration would still leave the deed to operate as between the parties thereto, and therefore would not amount to cancelling that deed. Moreover the plaintiff has no title or interest to set aside the deed as between the parties thereto"—Pachamuthu v. Chinnappan, 10 Mad. 213 (215); Unni v. Kunchi, 14 Mad. 26; Uma Shankar v. Kalka Prasad, 6 All. 75. A suit by a reversioner to obtain a declaration that a kanom executed by the widow in favour of the defendant is not binding on the estate or on the plaintiff is not governed by this Article, as the plaintiff was not party to the deed—Puraken v. Parvati, 16 Mad. 138 (following Pachamuthu v. Chinnappan, 10 Mad. 213). A suit by a person who is not a party to the deed for a declaration that the donee did not acquire any title to the property by the deed of gift executed by a pardanashin lady on the ground that it was void ab initio as the lady did not know that it purported to be a deed of gift and did not intend to execute such a deed and that she had no independent advice is not governed by this Article—Mt. Bibi Saleha v. Md. Zakariya, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 247. The mortgagor, in contravention of the terms of the mortgage, granted a perpetual lease of the mortgaged property, and the mortgagee brought a suit upon the mortgage and in execution of a decree brought the mortgaged property to sale which was purchased by the plaintiff. The plaintiff on becoming aware of the perpetual lease sued for its cancellation and for a declaration that the defendant (lessee) had no right to interfere with or obstruct the plaintiff in respect of the property in question. Held that Art. 91 did not apply but Art. 120; the prayer for the cancelment of the deed could be treated as merely incidental to the main relief (declaration) asked. "What the plaintiff wants is a declaration that the shadow cast upon his title may be dispersed. It is otherwise nothing to him whether the lease between the mortgagor and the defendant is or is not binding upon those who were parties to it"—Muhammad Baqar v. Mango Mal, 22 All. 90 (93). A suit filed by a creditor under section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act for a declaration that a transfer by way of sale by his debtor was intended to defeat or delay his creditors including the plaintiff and as such was not binding on the plaintiff and the other creditors is not governed by this Article but by Article 120—Abdulla v. Purshottam, 49 Bom.L.R. 875, A.I R. 1948 Bom. 265, (on Letters Patent appeal from 46 Bom.L.R. 613, A.I.R 1944 Bom. 267, 219 I.C. 52); Marthandu v. Channa, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 653, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 388, 1950 M.W.N. 791.

Instrument:—The instrument to be cancelled or set aside which is referred to in this Article is that instrument which the plaintiff himself has actually asked to have cancelled or set aside and not one which he ought to have set aside—Mariam v. Cassim, 1940 Rang.L.R. 35, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 278.

Will:—This Article does not apply to a suit to set aside a will—Sajid Ali v. Ibad Ali, 23 Cal. 1 (at p. 10) (P.C.); Firoz v. Sultan, 96 I.C. 835, A.I R. 1926 Lah. 635. Article 120 applies to the suit—Firoz v. Sultan, supra.

Award:—An award is an instrument within the meaning of Art. 91, and the plaintiff cannot impeach the decree incorporating the award, unless he can show that a suit to set aside the award was brought within the period prescribed by Art. 91—Nidhan Singh v. Sassoon & Co., 28 P.L.R. 106, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 172, 100 I.C. 596.

421. Where Article applies:—Article 91 applies to those cases where the prayer for cancellation of the instrument is an essential part of the relief claimed i.e., where it is necessary for the plaintiff to set aside the instrument before he can obtain the other relief claimed by him. In other words, if the instrument is binding upon the plaintiff, then even though the plaint may have been made to look like a suit for recovery of lands, the plaintiff in order to get any such relief must have the instrument cancelled or at any rate have a declaration of its invalidity as against him. And a suit for such relief is governed by this Article—Radhika Mohan v. Hari Bashi, 37 C.W.N. 1141 (1143), 146 I.C. 1010, A I.R. 1933 Cal. 812. Where the cancellation of an instrument is the substantial relief sought, and the recovery of the property is only an incidental or auxiliary relief thereto, the suit falls under this Article—Rampal v. Balbhaddur, 25 All. 1 (P.C.). Where an instrument is not void but voidable, and can be avoided at the option of the party aggrieved, he must come to Court within three years to have it set aside—Md. Nazir v. Zulaikha, 50 All. 510, A.I.R. 1928 All. 267, 109 I.C. 54. If the immoveable property cannot be recovered until a document is set aside, it is necessary to bring a suit to set it aside, and such suit will fall under this Article, even though it is framed as a suit for recovery of possession of the property—Banku Behari v. Krishto Gobindo, 30 Cal. 433 (436); Jaffar Ali v. Nasimannessa, A.I.R. 1937 Cal 500. This Article must apply to suits in which the documents sought to be set aside were intended to be operative against the plaintiff, and would remain operative or would defeat his suit to recover possession of any property, if they are not set aside—Sham Lal v. Amarendra, 23 Cal. 460 (466); Jan Mahomed v. Datu Jafar, 38 Bom. 449, 22 I.C. 195. Articles 91 and 92 are particularly concerned with instruments which if allowed to stand unchallenged once they become known, might become important evidence against the person whose rights they purported to affect—Raghubar v. Bhikya, 12 Cal. 69 (74).

Thus, a deed of relinquishment which operates to put an end to the plaintiff's right to certain property is not void ab initio but is voidable only, i.e., it is a valid document and binding on the plaintiff until it is set aside, and the plaintiff's right to recover the property will be barred, if he fails to bring a suit to set aside the deed within the time prescribed by this Article—Rameshwar v. Lachmi Prosad, 31 Cal. 111; Gyan v. Mt. Dukhan, 19 Pat.L T. 362, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 69, 173 I.C. 479. But where the deed of relinquishment is a void document, this Article has no application—Ishar v. Anwar, 1939 A.L.J. 642, A.I.R. 1939 All. 348. Where a sale becomes voidable by subsequent failure of consideration, the title nevertheless passes to the purchaser by such sale, and the vendor or other persons claiming to recover the property must get the sale avoided within the period prescribed by this Article, before they can recover possession—Govindasami v. Ramaswamy, 32 Mad. 72. When in a suit for possession of immoveable property it is necessary that a lease-deed executed by the plaintiff's predecessor must be first set aside before possession can be claimed, the suit must be governed by this Article—Raja Rajeswara v. Arunachellam, 38 Mad. 321. Where a sale-deed is executed by the plaintiff or his predecessor-in-title, and some consideration (though inadequate) passes, and the nature of the transaction shows that it is not void but voidable only, the suit is governed by Article 91, even though the plaintiff sues for possession—Janki Kunwar v. Ajit Singh, 15 Cal. 58 (P.C.). A Muhammedan executed a deed of gift of his property, under which possession was taken by the donee. The donor during his lifetime never took any steps to have the deed set aside. A suit was brought by his heir claiming a share in the donor's estate by right of inheritance and by having it declared that the deed was procured from the donor by fraud and undue inluence. It was held that the cancellation of the deed was a substantial and necessary incident of the claim, and the suit fell under this Article, notwithstanding that the plaintiff chose to call the suit one for possession—Hasan Ali v. Nazo, 11 All. 456. Where a suit is to declare that a deed of gift executed by the plaintiff is invalid and ineffectual, as it was executed without the knowledge of its real nature, it is governed by this Article—Ibrar v. Kamni, 1938 A.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1938 All. 451, 176 I.C. 874; this Article applies even when the deed of gift was executed under undue influence—Lingo v. Dattatraya, 39 Bom.L.R. 1233, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 97, 173 I.C. 817; Jivaji v. Laxman, 72 I.A. 21, I L.R. (1945) Bom. 440, I.L.R. (1944) Kar. (P.C.) 115, 1945 A.L J. 280, 49 C.W.N. 303, A I.R. 1945 P.C. 54, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 253 (P.C). Where a Hindu father executes a sale-deed under undue influence, and has not avoided it within the time fixed by this Article, his sons cannot recover the property —Narogopal v. Paragowda, 41 Bom 347, 39 I.C. 23; Rajarajeswara v. Kuppuswami, 41 M.L.J. 474, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 349, 68 I.C. 352. A suit by the reversioners to set aside an ikrarnama executed by the last male owners (and which is binding on the reversioners) is governed by Art. 91 and not by Art. 144, even though the prayer in the suit is for recovery of possession of the property comprised in the ikrarnama—Mahabir v. Harrihur, 19 Cal 629. Where a person is, prima facie, bound by a decree, he cannot, by suing ostensibly for possession, ignore the decree and evade the operation of law; and where such a decree is an impediment to the plaintiff's way in obtaining relief inconsistent with it, he must bring his suit within the period prescribed by law for setting aside a decree—Hitendra v. Rameshwar Singh, 4 Pat. 510, 6 P.L.T. 634, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 625, 88 I C. 141 (per Das J.). A suit to set aside a sale, under sec. 90 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881 (sec. 307 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925) is governed by this Article, the sale being voidable only, and not void altogether—Ma Ken v. Ma Bwin, 5 Rang. 266, 103 I C. 264, A I.R. 1927 Rang. 186.

In some cases, the broad proposition has been laid down that Art. 91 is intended to apply to suits of the kind mentioned in sec. 39 of the Specific Relief Act, and to cases where the plaintiff seeks to cancel or set aside an instrument which he has been induced by misrepresentation, concealment of facts or other means of like kind to enter into, or where the cancellation or setting aside of an instrument is the only relief prayed for—Hazari v. Jadaun, 5 All. 76; Sobha v. Sahodra, 5 All. 322; Uma Shankar v Kalka, 6 All. 75; Bakatram v. Kharsetji, 27 Bom. 560; Safdar v. Akbar, 5 I.C. 497.

422. Starting point of limitation:—The words "when the facts entitling the plaintiff to have the instrument cancelled or set aside became known to him" must be construed to mean "when, having knowledge of such facts, a cause of action has accrued to him, and he is in a position to maintain a suit." In this case the defendant had on the 1st December 1875 transferred certain property subject to attachment before judgment in a suit which both the lower Courts dismissed but which the High Court decreed in favour of the plaintiff on the 7th August 1876. The present suit for cancellation of the transfer was brought more than three years after the plaintiff knew of the transfer, but within three years from the date of the decree of the High Court. Held that the suit was within time, as the plaintiff's cause of action arose on the date of the High Court's decree—Tawangir v. Kura Mal, 3 All. 394. Where the plaintiff and his guardian were perfectly aware of the facts entitling them to set aside an award, the plaintiff must prove that he attained majority within three years before the suit. Limitation ran from the date of the award and not from the date when the Court refused to file it—Kirkwood v. Maung Sing, 5 Rang. 186 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1925 (P.C.) 216, 89 I.C. 773.

In a suit to set aside a deed executed by the plaintiff himself, on the ground of undue influence and fraud, if the facts relied upon by the plaintiff (i.e., undue influence, etc.) were known to him from the date of the instrument, the period of limitation would begin to run from that date—Janki v. Ajit Sing, 15 Cal. 58 (P.C.); Someshwar v. Tribhawan, 9 Luck, 178 (P.C.), 11 O.W.N. 784; Ram Sumran v. Sarjoo, 4 Luck. 270, 114 I.C 806, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 67 (71), 5 O.W.N. 1062. Thus where a suit is instituted to set aside a deed of gift executed under undue influence the time runs under this Article from the date of the knowledge, that is, the date of document, and not from the date of removal of undue influence—Jivaji v. Laxman, 72 I.A. 21, I L.R. (1945) Bom. 440, I.L.R. (1944) Kar. (P.C.) 115, 1945 A.L.J. 280, 49 C.W.N. 303, A.I.R. 1945 P.C. 54, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 253 (P.C.) So also, the time for setting aside a settlement deed executed under undue influence runs from the date when the facts entitling the plaintiff to have the instrument cancelled or set aside became known to the plaintiff and not from the date of the removal of the undue influence—Buchi Bai v. Nagpur University, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 433, 1946 N.L J. 406, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 377. If, however, the undue influence continues to be exercised after the execution of the instrument, limitation runs only when the influence ceases and the plaintiff may be said to have full knowledge of all the matters—Rajeswara v. Rajagopala, 1917 M.W.N. 906, 43 I.C. 164. No laches is attributable to the donor until he is sufficiently acquainted with his rights to enable him to assert them, and until he is free from the influence which invalidates the gift—Allcard v. Skinner, (1887) 36 Ch. D. 145 (163) (per Kekewich J.). The word "plaintiff" as defined in sec. 2 (8) includes any person through whom the present plaintiff derives his right to sue. Therefore, if a deed had been executed by the plaintiff's predecessor-in-title through fraud and undue influence, and that person had failed to bring a suit to set aside the deed on the ground of fraud etc., within three years from the date of execution, the right of the plaintiff would likewise be barred—Ram Sumran v. Sarjoo, supra.

Under the Mahomedan Law, a gift becomes operative only after delivery of possession; therefore the cause of action for a suit to set aside a gift arises not on the execution of the deed of gift but from the moment when by delivery of possession it becomes operative in law—Medo Bibi v. Imaman, 6 All. 207 (210); Mulani v. Maula, 46 All. 260 (263).

Where the plaintiff executed a sham sale-deed in favour of his sons, and they began to set up a title under the deed, the cause of action for a suit for its cancellation would arise not from the date of the sale-deed, but from the date the plaintiff apprehended injury to his interest, i.e., the date when the defendants began to set up a title under the deed—Singarrappa v. Talari, 28 Mad. 349. In a suit by the mortgagor against the dispossessing mortgagee for cancellation of the mortgage-deed and for possession, on the ground that the mortgage was sham, limitation runs from the date of dispossession and not from the date of the mortgage-bond—Vithal v. Hari, 25 Bom. 78. But in an Allahabad case, where the plaintiff brought a suit to set aside a sham mortgage-deed on the ground that the defendant recently threatened to bring a suit on the basis of it, though when it was executed it was never intended to be acted upon, it was held that limitation ran from the date of the execution of the mortgage-deed, and not from the date when the defendant threatened to sue upon it, in as much as the facts entitling the plaintiff to have the document set aside were known to the plaintiff from the very outset—Qasim v. Muhammad, 37 All. 640 (dissenting from 28 Mad. 349 and 25 Bom. 78 cited above). Where the plaintiff executed a registered deed of adoption in which he declared that he had adopted a certain boy and had conveyed to him a certain property, and afterwards brought a suit for a declaration that the adoption-deed was void and of no effect as against the plaintiff, held that the suit was governed by either Article 91 or 118, and that limitation ran from the date of execution of the adoption-deed, because the fact that no adoption had ever taken place was perfectly well known to the plaintiff on the very date on which he put his signature to the adoption-deed and caused it to be registered—Udit Narain v. Randhir Singh, 45 All. 169 (176), 69 I.C. 971. A suit by a reversioner to set aside an instrument executed by the last male owner must be brought within three years from the date of the death of the widow—Mahabir v. Hurrihur, 19 Cal. 629. A suit to set aside an instrument executed during the minority of the plaintiff, must be brought within three years after the minor plaintiff has attained majority—Chanvirapa v. Danava, 19 Bom. 593; Kulyan v. Bipro, 6 W.R. 321. A suit for cancellation of a document by which certain properties were dedicated for construction of a mosque by the plaintiff reserving for himself a perpetual connection with the mosque in his capacity of its president is in time when instituted within three years of the time at which he admittedly occupied the office of the president—Jamiat v. Md. Shariff, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 869, 180 I.C. 799.

Burden of proof:—In a suit under this Article, if the defendant pleads that the cause of action for the plaintiff's suit to cancel the deed arose earlier than the period alleged by the plaintiff, the burden lies on the defendant to prove that the plaintiff acquired full information of the true state of facts at a time too remote to allow him to maintain the suit—Nibaran v. Nirupama, 26 C.W.N. 517, 34 C.L.J. 563, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 131, 69 I.C. 476; Ishar v. Fatima, 1939 A.L.J. 642, A.I.R. 1939 All. 348, 182 I.C. 801; Rahima v. Mustafa, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 264 (case of undue influence by a person standing in fiduciary relation); Abdulla v. Purshottam, 49 Bom.L.R. 875 (mere hints and clues raising suspicion are not enough); where a deed is executed by a pardanashin lady, it is not enough that she had an opportunity of reading the document and that the terms were not complex or obscure. It must be shown that the terms were explained to her and she was apprised of the nature and effect of the deed—Parikh Atmaram v. Bai Hira, 75 I.A. 108, 1948 A.L.J. 241, I.L.R. (1948) Bom. 148, 52 C.W.N. 701, 50 Bom.L.R. 495, A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 111, 29 Pat.L.T. 251, 1948 M.W.N. 449 (P.C.).

423. Effect of bar of Limitation:—Where a sale is voidable for fraud and no suit is brought to set aside the sale within the period prescribed by this Article, the right to recover the property is also barred—Gobindasamy v. Ramasamy, 32 Mad. 72 (76). But though a party's remedy as plaintiff to have the instrument set aside may be barred, it is competent to him to say by way of equitable defence, if sued, that the instrument ought not to be enforced. Article 91 applies only to suits brought by a plaintiff to have instruments avoided. A defendant may, by way of equitable defence, set up the invalidity of the deed, although his right to have it avoided by a suit has become time-barred—Lakshmi v. Roop Laul, 30 Mad. 169 (178).

92. To declare the forgery of an instrument issued or registered.	Three years.	When the issue or registration becomes known to the plaintiff.

424. Application of Article:—Arts. 91 to 93 apply to suits brought expressly to cancel, set aside or declare the forgery of an instrument; but where some substantial relief (e.g., possession of property) is sought and the cancellation or declaration is subservient or merely ancillary and not necessary to the granting of such relief, these Articles do not apply—Abdul Rahim v. Kirparam, 16 Bom. 186 (189). Thus, a suit by the plaintiff for possession and to set aside on the ground of forgery a deed of sale alleged to have been executed by his father in favour of the defendant is governed by Art. 144 and not by Article 92 or 93—Trilochan v. Nobokishore, 2 C.L.R. 10. Where a will is contested not merely on the ground that it was a forged will but also on the ground of want of capacity on the part of the testator, this Article does not apply—Gnakaprakasam v. Parasakthi, 52 L.W. 440, 1940 M.W.N. 983. But if the relief asking for a declaration that the document is forged is the principal relief and any other relief is merely subsidiary to it, the suit falls under this Article—Muradan v. Raghunandan, A.I.R. 1927 All. 826 (827), 102 I.C. 287.

425. "Issued":—An anumatipatra (deed of permission to adopt) was given to a widow by her husband. She adopted a boy, and the reversionary heirs brought a suit, to set aside the adoption on the ground of forgery of the anumatipatra. Held that the words issued was intended to refer to the kinds of documents to which people commonly apply that term in business, and that an anumatipatra could not be said to be "issued" when an adoption was made under it; therefore this Article did not apply to the suit. Article 93 also did not apply because it was very difficult to say that an adoption followed by nothing more was in any sense an enforcement of power against other persons within the meaning of that Article. Art. 118 applied to the suit—Hurri Bhushan v. Upendra Lal, 24 Cal. 1 (P.C.). A suit to declare an unregistered will as forged and beyond the power of the testator to make, is governed by Art. 120. Art. 92 does not apply to the case as the will is neither 'issued' nor registered—Gauhar v. Ghulam, 1909 P.L.R. 82, 4 I.C. 923.

93. To declare the forgery of an instrument attempted to be enforced against the plaintiff.	Three years.	The date of the attempt.

426. Application of Article:—This Article applies to suits brought expressly to declare the forgery of an instrument. Where the declaration is an ancillary relief and only incidental to a substantial relief claimed, this Article will not apply—Abdul Rahim v. Kirparam, 16 Bom. 186 (189). For instance, where the suit is one for possession, and the plaintiff avers that the sale-deed relied on by the defendant is a forgery, this Article would not apply—Narayanan v. Kannammal, 28 Mad. 338 (343). Or, where the suit is for declaration of plaintiff's title to a certain property, and to set aside a will which the plaintiff alleges to be a forgery, the suit is not governed by the three years' rule under this Article—Nistarini v. Anundomoyi, 2 C.L.J. 561. See also Trilochan v. Nobokishore, 2 C.L.R. 10, cited under Art. 92.

427. Attempt to enforce:—An attempt to recover rent under a forged lease is an attempt to enforce it; but an attempt to merely have the lease recorded under the Bombay Record of Rights Act (IV of 1903) is not such an attempt because to have the lease recorded does not amount to enforcement of the lease against any person's right—Achyut v. Gopal, 40 Bom. 22 (27). Similarly an attempt to register a document is not an attempt to enforce it against any person's right—Ibid; Kama- lanadhan v. Sattiraju, 32 I.C. 99 (Mad.). An adoption by the widow by virtue of an anumatipatra (deed of authority to adopt) cannot be said to be an enforcement of the anumatipatra against the reversionary heirs—Hurri Bhushan v. Upendra, 24 Cal. 1 (P.C.) cited under Art. 92. A widow applied for a succession certificate to enable her to collect the debts due to her deceased husband, stating in her petition that her husband left no heirs nearer to herself, and she based her claim to the certificate expressly on the ground that she was her husband's widow and as such entitled to the certificate under the Hindu law. In the petition she made mention of a will and stated that under it she was the legatee of her deceased husband but nowhere did she base her right to collect the debts upon her position as legatee. In a subsequent suit by the reversioners for a declaration that the will was a forgery, it was held that the mere mention of the will in the application for succession certificate was not an attempt on the part of the widow to enforce the will against the reversioners. The suit did not fall under this Article—Kamalanadhan v. Sattiraju, supra. So also, the mention of a will in a written statement filed by the widow in a previous suit brought by the reversioners, in which the genuineness of the will was not the point at issue, and which was dismissed on other grounds, does not amount to an attempt on the part of the widow to enforce the will against the reversioners, and therefore, a subsequent suit by the latter to declare the invalidity of the will is not governed by this Article and is not barred if brought more than three years from the date of the written statement filed by the widow in the previous suit—Achamma v. Seethamma, 40 M.L.J. 348, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 545, 62 I.C. 531.

428. Limitation:—The period of limitation will be calculated from the date of the attempt, even though that attempt might not have been known to the plaintiff —Nistarini v. Anundomoyi, 2 C.L.R. 561. The period must be calculated from the first attempted enforcement of the instrument and not from the date of any subsequent attempt, though the defendant might not have sought in his first attempt to obtain the entire fruits thereof—Fakharoodden v. Pogose, 4 Cal. 209. Where a person claiming under a deed of sale wants to be made a party in a suit in order to enforce his claim, the date of the order of the Court making him a party is the "date of the attempt" within the meaning of this Article, and a suit to declare the forgery of the deed of sale must be brought within three years from that date—Fakharuddin v. Official Trustee, 8 Cal. 178 (P.C.).

94. For property which the plaintiff has conveyed while insane.	Three years.	When the plaintiff is restored to sanity, and has knowledge of the conveyance.
95. To set aside a decree obtained by fraud, or for other relief on the ground of fraud.	Three years.	When the fraud becomes known to the party wronged.

429. Scope of Article:—Article 95 applies to a suit to set aside a decree obtained by fraud or for other relief on the ground of fraud. This, it is clear, applies and must apply to a case where the plaintiff has sustained loss or damages on account of the fraud of the defendant—Kaikhusroo v. Gangadas, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 322, 38 Bom.L.R. 712, 165 I.C. 184. This Article is not intended to apply to suits for possession of immoveable property when fraud is merely a part of the machinery by which the defendant has kept the plaintiff out of possession. It applies only to cases where a party has been by means of fraud induced to enter into some transaction, execute some deed, or do some other act, and desires to be relieved from the consequences of such act—Chunder Nath v. Tirthanand, 3 Cal. 504 (507); Kaliprasanna v. Haripada, 34 C.W.N. 801 (805, 806), 129 I.C. 871, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 69. This Article is limited in its application to cases where the relief is claimed on the sole ground of fraud—Siddappa v. Vishvanathasa, 45 Bom.L.R. 825, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 419, 214 I.C. 272. It does not apply to every case in which fraud enters as an element in the conduct of the defendant. It does not apply where fraud is not the basis of the relief, but some other matter, although the defendant may have acted fraudulently—Gour Mohaun v. Dinonath, 25 Cal. 49; Jamsetji v. Hirjibhai, 37 Bom. 158. In other words, this Article does not apply where the relief claimed on the ground of fraud is merely ancillary to some main relief, as for instance where the main relief is the declaration of the plaintiff's title to the property, but there is also a prayer in the plaint for a declaration of a deed as fraudulent and void against the plaintiff—Burjorji v. Dhunbai, 16 Bom. 1 (9); Sarat v. Kanai Lal, 26 C.W.N. 479, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 786, 70 I.C. 525; nor does this Article apply where the auction purchaser brings a suit for possession of immoveable property against the mortgagee from the judgment-debtor, after avoidance of the mortgage as being fraudulent, fictitious and void as against the plaintiff. Such a suit is governed by Art. 138—Uma Shankar v. Kalka, 6 All. 75 (77). But it would be laying down too wide a proposition to say that a suit for possession is not governed by Art. 95 at all. It seems clear that when a party is prima facie bound by a fraudulent decree, he cannot by suing ostensibly simply for possession ignore that decree and thereby evade the operation of Art. 95. Where there is such a decree standing in the way of his obtaining relief which is inconsistent with that decree, he must first of all bring a suit under Art. 95 to get the decree out of the way; he cannot ignore the decree and bring a suit for possession on the basis of title. Otherwise, if that decree could be ignored altogether, there would be no purpose of Art. 95—Kaliprasanna v. Haripada, 34 C.W.N. 801 (805), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 69.

A suit to set aside a decree obtained by fraud or for relief on the ground of fraud is governed by Art. 95. In such a case the plaintiff must show that the decree was obtained by fraud. He must show that the summons was fradulently suppressed and by fraud of the plaintiff in that suit he was kept ignorant of the decree—Abbasali v. Ram Kanai, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 95.

Again, this Article does not apply unless the plaintiff was a party to the decree or to the transaction in which the fraud was committed—Saburdas v. Gopalji, 45 Bom.L.R. 526. A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 283, 211 I.C. 230; Kala Mydeen v. Narayanan, A.I.R 1954 Trav. Co. 312. Therefore, where a fraudulent decree was passed against a person in possession with a limited interest, a suit by the reversionary heir for a declaration that the decree is void is not governed by this Article but by Art. 120, in as much as he was not a party to the decree—Tallapragada v. Boorugapalli, 30 Mad. 402 (404), dissenting from Parekh v. Bai Vakhat, 11 Bom. 119. A stranger who is intended to be defrauded by the decree cannot seek to have it set aside; all that he can sue for is to have it declared that his interest cannot be affected by such a collusive decree. A suit for such declaration falls under Article 120—Saburdas v. Gapalji, supra. Where a sale was held during the lifetime of the deceased, a suit to set aside the sale brought by persons claiming as shebaits or beneficiaries under the will of the deceased does not fall under this Article. The plaintiffs were not parties to the sale-transaction nor can they be treated as representatives of the deceased—Kaliprasanna v. Haripada, supra. So also, this Article is inapplicable to a suit brought by the real owner for possession of immoveable property, and for setting aside a sale held in execution of a fraudulent decree passed against the benamidar; because that real owner not being a party to the decree in which the fraud was practised was in no way affected thereby and it is not necessary for him to have the sale set aside—Ananda Pershad v. Prosannamoyi, 34 Cal. 711 (717) (P.C.).

If fraud is not proved, the suit does not fall under this Article—Thamman Singh v Dalchand, 9 O.L.J. 171, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 113, 67 I.C. 595. A suit to set aside a decree not on the ground of fraud, but on the ground that it was passed against the plaintiff when he was a minor and that his guardian ad litem was grossly negligent in not properly defending the suit in which the decree was passed, falls under Article 110—Basavayya v. Bapanna, 58 M.L.J. 349, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 173. Where relief is sought on the ground of negligence this Article does not apply—Abbaka v. Palli, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 177, 1947 M.W.N. 457. If a decree is sought to be set aside not on the ground that it was obtained by fraud but on the ground that it is voidable (e.g., a compromise decree entered into on behalf of a minor, without the permission of the Court), the proper Article applicable to the suit is Art. 120 and not Art. 95—Phulwanti v. Janeshar, 46 All 575 (590), 22 A.L.J. 521, A.I.R. 1924 All. 625, 83 I.C. 782. The Patna High Court has held in Sheorani v. Kamakshoy, 21 Pat.L.T. 269, 189 I.C. 535 that a decree obtained against a person treating him as a minor while in reality he is a major is not a nullity but voidable and a suit to challenge the decree is governed by this Article and must be brought within three years from the date of the decree.

430. Suits under this Article:—

Suit to set aside fraudulent sale:—If a sale is sought to be set aside on the ground that the decree in execution of which the sale took place was obtained by fraud, the suit is giverned by Article 95 which is more specific, and not by Article 12—Kumar Rameshwar v. Mahabir, 5 Pat. 759, 96 I.C. 529, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 401 (403); Natha Singh v. Jodha Singh, 6 All. 406 (414); Ambikamoni v. Khettra, 30 C.W.N. 59 (62), 90 I.C. 866, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 167; Parekh v. Bai Vakhat, 11 Bom. 119; Moti Lal v. Russick, 26 Cal. 326, at p. 333 (Note). But where a suit is based on allegation of fraud regarding the confirmation of sale, this Article has no application and Article 12 applies—Gauri v. Jaishi, A.I.R 1950 H.P. 1. A suit for a declaration that a decree and a sale held in execution of the decree are fraudulent and not binding upon the plaintiff, is the same thing as a suit to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud and is governed by Art. 95, not by Art. 120—Ambikamoni v. Khettra, supra.

A suit to set aside a sale held under the Public Demands Recovery Act (Bengal) on the ground that the sale was held without giving any notice, the notice having been suppressed by the fraudulent act of the defendant, is a suit for 'relief on the ground of fraud,' and falls under the second part of this Article. As the certificate issued under the Public Demands Recovery Act operates as a decree, the suit may also be treated as a suit 'to set aside a decree on the ground of fraud' falling under the first part of this Article—Syamlal v. Nilmony, 34 Cal. 241 (247). But in a later case the same High Court has ruled that a suit to set aside a fraudulent sale held under the Public Demands Recovery Act does not fall under this Article, because no decree is passed in the proceedings under that Act and the certificate cannot be treated as a decree, and also because the plaintiff was not a party to the transaction in which the sale was held; so that neither the first part nor the second part of Art. 95 applies to the case—Kaliprasanna v. Haripada, 34 C.W.N. 801 (805, 806), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 69, 129 I.C. 871.

Where plaintiff's land was sold by the Revenue authorities for default of payment of assessment due upon it, a suit by the plaintiff to set aside the sale on the ground that the sale was brought about by the fraud practised by the inamdar, would be governed by this Article—Bajaji v. Pirchand, 13 Bom. 221.

A suit by the auction-purchaser for setting aside the execution sale and for refund of purchase-money on the ground that the property was encumbered and the existence of incumbrance was concealed from him by the decree-holder, is a suit for relief on the ground of fraud under this Article, and is not governed by Article 12—Sree Raja Datla Venkata Suryanarayana v. Galuguri Bapiraju, 34 Mad. 143 (150). It cannot be treated as a suit for recovery of purchase-money on the ground of failure of consideration under Art. 97, because, if fraud is alleged, the suit is governed by the specific Article 95 and not by Art. 97—Balasubramanya v. Maruthamalai, 16 I.C. 215 (216).

Suit to set aside partition:—A suit by a minor after attaining majority to set aside a deed of partition on the ground of fraud is governed by this Article or Art. 97, and must be brought within three years after the minor plaintiff attained majority—Chanviraja v. Donava, 19 Bom. 593. If, however, there be no allegation of fraud or mistake, but only an allotment of less than his share to the minor, a suit by the minor on attaining majority to recover his full share will not be governed by three years' rule of limitation under this Article—Lal Bahadur v. Sispai, 14 All. 498.

Suit for compensation money:—Where the compensation for acquisition of land was awarded to a wrong person, through fraud or mistake, a suit by the real owner would fall under this Article—Viraraghava v. Krishnasami, 6 Mad. 344.

Suit under Madras Revenue Recovery Act:—A suit simply to set aside a sale for arrears of revenue held under the Madras Revenue Recovery Act (II of 1864), on the ground of fraud, is governed by the six months' limitation specially provided by sec. 59 of that Act, and not by this Article—Venkata v. Chingadu, 12 Mad. 168 (F.B.); Iswara v. Karuppan, 3 M.L.J. 255. But where the suit is to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud, as well as to recover possession from the purchaser, it will be governed by this Article, because the Revenue Recovery Act applies to a suit merely for setting aside a sale, and not for any other relief claimed—Venkatapathi v. Subramania, 9 Mad. 457; Kuppusami v. Subramania, 7 M.L.J. 73.

Suit to set aside compromise decree:—A suit to set aside a compromise decree on the ground of fraud is governed by this Article—Muhammad Buksh v. Mahomed Ali, 5 All. 294; Mohendra v. Gour, 22 C.W.N. 860, 46 I.C. 867; Mahomed Jan v. Commissioner, 37 I.C. 797 (Pat.).

Suit for damages for fraud:—Such a suit falls under this Article. The words "other relief" mentioned in Art. 95 do not mean relief of the same kind as the setting aside of a decree but is comprehensive enough to include suits for compensation for damage caused to the plaintiff by defendant's fraud—Bank of Madras v. Multan Chand, 27 Mad. 343. See also Balasubramanya v. Maruthamalai, 16 I.C. 215 (216). Thus where a sale in execution of a fraudulent decree is confirmed in favour of a stranger, a suit for damages on the ground of fraud against appropriate parties is the proper relief and not an application for setting aside sale unless the applicant shows that ignorance of his right to file the application is due to fraud of the auction purchaser—Ghulam v. Negapattinam, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 432, 1950 M.W.N. 240, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 460.

Suit to set aside award:—A suit to set aside an award, when that award has been incorporated in a decree, on the ground of fraud falls under this Article—Nidhan Singh v. Sassoon & Co., 28 P.L.R. 106, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 172, 100 I.C. 596.

431. Knowledge of fraud:—So long as a person upon whom fraud has been practised remains in ignorance of it, no time will run against him; but when he has acquired knowledge of such fraud, he must, within three years from the date of obtaining such knowledge, come into Court for relief—Muhammad Baksh v. Mahomed Ali, 5 All. 294. The knowledge predicated by the terms of this Article is not mere suspicion, but such definite knowledge as enables the person defrauded to seek his remedy in Court—Natha Singh v. Jodha Singh, 6 All. 406 (415); Indra v. Rooka, 3 I.C. 316; Jago v. Narayan, I.L.R. (1947) Lah. 985, 1948 N.L.J. 65, A.I R. 1948 Nag. 150. The defendant setting up the defence of limitation must shew that the plaintiff had clear and definite knowledge of the facts which constitute the fraud at a time which is too remote to allow him to bring the suit. The mere fact that some hints and clues reached the plaintiff which if vigorously and acutely followed up might have led to a complete knowledge of the fraud, is not enough to constitute clear and definite knowledge of it—Rahimbhoy v. Turner, 17 Bom. 341 (P.C.), affirming 14 Bom. 408 The knowledge of fraud means the knowledge of circumstances on which any reasonable man concludes that a fraud has been committed. It may be that his knowledge or conclusion is further corroborated by additional circumstances known to him subsequently. He cannot however say that he had no knowledge of fraud till the last piece of evidence came to light or till the persons committing fraud admitted it—Jago v. Narayana, supra. When it is doubtful at what precise time the fraud became known to the plaintiff, the onus is on the defendant to shew that the suit is out of time—Punnayil v. Raman, 31 Mad. 230 (233). Where a suit by a person for possession of certain property on the ground that a decree obtained against him during his minority is not binding on him, based not only on allegations of gross negligence on the part of the guardian ad litem but also on the assertion that the agent of the guardian had colluded with the opposite party and had failed to produce material evidence, it prima facie falls within the purview of Art. 95 and limitation runs from the date of knowledge of the fraud—Gurbachan Singh v. Hazara Singh, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 961.

Article 36 is a residuary article. A suit for a relief on the ground of fraud is governed by Article 95 and not by Article 36. That being so, time begins to run from the date of the knowledge of fraud—Dehradun Mussoorie Electric Tramway Co., Ltd. v. Hunsraj, A.I.R. 1935 All. 995.

432. Effect of bar of limitation:—Although a person may be debarred by lapse of time from bringing a suit as plaintiff for setting aside a decree obtained by fraud still he can, as a defendant, in an action in which such decree is used as evidence against him, shew that it was obtained by fraud—Rajib Panda v. Lakhan, 27 Cal. 11 (23).

96. For relief on the ground of mistake.	Three years.	When the mistake becomes known to the plaintiff.

433. Scope:—This Article is limited in its application to cases of mistake committed in transactions arising in the course of relations which are more or less contractual in character, and the Article in any event has no application to a case where the mistake is on the part of the defendant, and not on the part of the plaintiff. Therefore, where the plaintiffs and the defendants were owners of adjoining coal-lands, and the defendants, due to a mistake regarding the boundary line between the collieries, trespassed into the plaintiff's colliery and extracted coal therefrom, whereupon plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages, held that this Article did not apply, as the suit was based on tort, and as the mistake was not on the part of the plaintiffs—Panna Lal v. Adjai Coal Co. Ld., 31 C.W.N. 82 (95), 101 I.C. 62, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 117. (This case has been reversed by the Privy Council in 57 Cal. 1341 on another ground). This Article has no application where the mistake is not of the plaintiff but of his employees to carry out the instructions of the plaintiff. Thus where due to the mistake of the employees a wrong bill for electric current was supplied to the defendant a suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the balance is not governed by this Article—Attar v. Municipal Committee, 40 P.L.R. 143, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 338, 180 I.C. 510. Mere carelessness of officers or clerks of a bank in honouring cheques drawn by the customer when presented for payment without funds to his credit will not make the monies paid under a mistake so as to attract the application of this Article—Uma Shankar v. Bank of Behar Ltd., 1941 P.W.N. 638, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 201, 197 I.C. 449.

A suit to rectify on the ground of mistake a petition for adjustment of a decree and the order passed thereon alleging that the same did not represent correctly the intention of the parties falls under Art. 96. There is no scope for the application of Art. 120 to such a suit—Abdul Sattar v. Abdul Rusan, 39 C.W.N. 966.

This Article applies only if the plaintiff wants to sue for rectification of the deed and prays only for that relief. But if other reliefs are asked for in the suit and the relief regarding rectification is only formal or incidental or not necessary for awarding the main relief prayed for, this Article has not application—Sooramma v. Venkayya, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 805, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 589, 176 I.C. 875.

This Article has no application to a case to which sec. 70 of the Contract Act applies—Jiwan v. Radha, 18 Lah. 623, 40 P.L.R. 300, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 99, 175 I.C. 588; nor does it apply to a suit to recover money paid as tax to the Municipality on the ground that it was illegally levied by the Municipality—City Municipality, Bhusawal v. Nusserwanji, 42 Bom.L.R. 491, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 252, 189 I.C. 678.

Cases:—A suit to recover money alleged to have been paid by the plaintiffs to the defendants in excess of the sum actually payable is governed by this Article rather than Article 62—Tofa Lal v. Syed Moinuddin, 4 Pat. 448, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 765 (767), 93 I.C. 129; Mathuranath v. Debendranath, 12 Cal. 533. Thus, the defendants who purchased some bales of articles from another, sold the same to the plaintiff and afterwards it was found that some of the bales did not contain the stipulated number of pieces. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendants for the price of the pieces short delivered, i.e., for refund of the excess price paid. Held that the suit fell under this Article, not under Art. 62 and limitation ran from the date of his knowledge of short delivery—Ramiah v. Sadashiv Mudaliar, 48 Mad. 925, 49 M.L.J. 228, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1255.

A suit to re-open a partition and to re-adjust the shares of the parties on the ground that certain properties wrongly allotted to the share of the plaintiff really belonged to a third party who obtained a decree for possession of those properties from the plaintiff is governed by this Article and not by Art. 127 or 144. Time runs when the plaintiff is dispossessed in pursuance of that decree—Ramakotayya v. Sundararamayya, 54 Mad. 883, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 707 (709), 135 I.C. 9. But where a separated member of a Hindu family brings a suit for his share in a part of the family property which he alleges was not included at the prior partition through the fraud of the other members this Article does not apply as this Article has no application to a suit for possession—Siddappa v. Vishvanathasa, 45 Bom.L.R. 825, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 419, 214 I.C. 272. A suit for amendment or rectification of a lease on the footing of a common mistake of the lessor and the lessee under which some land was wrongly included in the lease, is governed by this Article—Bijoy Chand Mohatab v. Secretary of State, 48 I.C. 972 (Cal.). A suit for possession of immoveable property, when relief is claimed on the ground of mistake, falls under Art. 96 and not under Art. 144, and it is immaterial whether the mistake was made by the plaintiff or by a third party—Sultan Mahomed v. Alim Khan, 1905 P.L.R. 3. Where compensation for acquisition of land was awarded by mistake to a person who was not entitled to it, a suit by the real owner to recover the money falls under this Article—Viraraghava v. Krishnasami, 6 Mad. 344. The mistake contemplated by this Article may be that of the plaintiff or of a third party through which the plaintiff's rights have been affected—Ibid (at p. 350). A suit by a creditor for setting aside a discharge made by him on the ground of mistake is governed by this Article—Madras C. S. & S. Factories v. William Show, 14 M.L.J. 443.

The plaintiff mortgaged seven out of his eight properties, but by a mistake made by the plaintiff in the bond, all the eight properties were sold under a decree on the mortgage, and purchased by the defendant. The plaintiff now brought a suit to recover from the defendant the value of the eighth property which was not the subject of the mortgage. Held that since the plaintiff was solely responsible for the mistake, he cannot treat the sale as a nullity and ignore it; it is necessary for him to get the sale set aside before he is entitled to any relief on the ground of mistake. The suit therefore falls under Article 12 and not under this Article—Nagabhatta v. Nagappa, 46 Bom. 914. A suit for refund of advance paid under a void agreement (viz., an agreement to transfer a non-transferable property) falls under this Article, and the period of three years is to be counted from the date when the agreement is discovered to be void, which in this case is the date of the agreement, because when the agreement is one forbidden by law, the plaintiff must be deemed to have been aware of the fact when he entered into it. The period of limitation may also be counted from the date when the contract was declared to be vaid in a previous suit between the parties, because it was suggested in this case that the plaintiff was unaware of the illegality of the agreement until the Court gave its decision in that suit—Auryaprabhakara v. Gummudu Sanyasi, 48 M.L.J. 598, 88 I.C. 557, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 885. But a suit for recovery of the purchase price or compensation in a case where possession of the property was delivered to the purchaser under a contract of sale which is subsequently discovered to be void is not governed by this Article even though the basis of the suit was mistake committed by the parties; the reason being that it is not the basis of the suit but the relief and cause of action on which the suit is founded that determines the article of the Limitation Act applicable to the case—Punjab Government v. Baijnath, 47 P.L.R. 122, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 164, 221 I.C. 524. A suit by the auction purchaser against the decree-holder for recovery of purchase money on the setting aside of the sale in a suit under Or. 21 r. 63 C. P. Code is governed by this Article when the fundamental basis of the claim made by the plaintiff was the existence of a mistake as to true state of affairs regarding the property and its title—Rudrayya v. Subba, 1941 M.W.N. 484, A I.R. 1941 Mad. 742; Nagayya v. Penukonda Co-op Town Bank, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 231, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 90, 230 I.C. 233. A Hindu, while next reversioner to an Oudh estate, purported to sell half the estate, declaring by the sale-deed that when he would succeed to the estate on the death of the widow he would put the vendee in proprietary possession. After the death of the widow, the purchaser sued the vendor for possession or alternatively to recover the purchase money with interest. Held that the claim for possession could not be granted as there was no effectual transfer of the estate, which was only an expectancy at the time of the sale; that the vendee was entitled only to recover the purchase money; and that the period of limitation for the claim to recover the purchase money ran from the date when the misapprehension of the vendor as to his right to sell the estate was discovered by the plaintiff, which was not earlier than the time at which his demand for possession was resisted i.e., the time when the sale was declared to be void in this suit—Harnath v. Indar Bahadur, 45 All. 179 (184) (P.C.).

The mistake may be of law or of fact. In England it has been held that the Court has power to relieve parties against mistakes of law as well as against mistakes of fact —Stone v. Godfrey, (1854) 5 D.M. & G. 76 (90). But under the Indian law, if a mistake is a pure mistake of law, and not a mistake bearing upon the private or special right of the petitioner, and if such mistake of law results in the payment by one person to another making it inequitable that the payee should retain the money, still it is no ground for relief—Appavoo v. S. I. Ry. Co., 56 M.L.J. 269, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 177 (178).

If there is mutual mistake, i.e., if both the plaintiff and the defendant are under a mistake of fact, there can be no fraud, consequently the suit falls under Art. 96 and not Art. 95—Martand v. Dhondo, 45 Bom. 582.

Suit to set aside decree:—This Article is intended to apply to those cases in which the Courts are asked to relieve parties from the consequences of mistakes committed by them in the course of contractual relations. It does not refer to a suit to set aside a decree on the ground of mistake made by the plaintiff. Such a suit is not at all maintainable——Ramzan Khan v. Yakub Khan, 11 I.C. 537 (Oudh). This Article is so general in its character that it can hardly be said that it affords any authority for holding that a suit to set aside a decree on the ground of mistake is maintainable. The mistake can be certified by proceeding under sec. 108 C.P. Code (1882) or by way of appeal or review—Chand Mean v. Asima Banu, 10 C.W.N. 1024 (1025, 1026).

While Article 95 refers to a suit for setting aside a decree on the ground of fraud, the words used in Article 96 refer to relief on the ground of mistake; it does not refer to a suit to set aside a decree on the ground of mistake; and obviously refers to a suit for relief on the ground of mistake not made in a decree—Jogeshwar v. Ganga Bishnu, 8 C.W.N. 473 (475).

434. Limitation:—Where a plaintiff is mistaken as to his rights, time will only run against him from the discovery of his mistake (and not earlier)—Brookbank v. Smith, (1836) 2 Y. & C. Ex. 58. Thus, in a suit for recovery of money paid by the plaintiff to the defendant by mistake in excess of the amount legally due, time runs not from the date of the mistaken payment but from the time when the mistake is discovered—Tofa Lal v. Syed Moinuddin, 4 Pat. 448, 93 I.C. 129, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 765 (768). And it is immaterial that the mistake remained undiscovered for three years from the date of payment—Ibid. But time runs as soon as the mistake is known to the plaintiff. Thus, on a partition of family properties between the plaintiff and the defendant, the former got certain properties including a mortgage-debt due to the family. The money due on the mortgage had been long ago paid off by the mortgagor, but both the plaintiff and the defendant were under a mutual mistake that the money was still due. The plaintiff brought a suit against the mortgagor, and it was, as a matter of course, dismissed in 1912, and the order of dismissal was confirmed by the Hight Court on appeal in July 1914. In June 1917 the plaintiff brought the present suit against the defendant to recover from him the share of the mortage-money. Held that as there was a mutual mistake, there was no fraud, that the suit fell under Article 96, and that the suit was barred under this Article, as time ran from the date of the dismissal of the previous suit against the mortgagor by the Court of first instance in 1912 that being the date when the plaintiff was aware of the mistake, and not from the date of the High Court's order in 1914—Martand v. Dhondo, 45 Bom. 582 (589), A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 184, 23 Bom.L.R. 69, 61 I.C. 34. The starting point of limitation for a suit by an auction purchaser for recovery of purchase money on the setting aside of the sale in a suit under Or. 21, r. 63, C. P. Code begins from the date of the trial Court's judgment in the suit under Or. 21, r. 63, C. P. Code and not from the appellate Court's judgment—Rudrayya v. Subba, 1941 M.W.N. 484, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 742; Nagayya v. Penukonda Co-Op. Town Bank, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 231, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 90, 230 I.C. 233.

97. For money paid upon an existing consideration which afterwards fails.	Three years.	The date of the failure.

435. Articles 62 and 97:—It seems that many of the cases governed by this Article would also fall under Article 62. But there is a distinction between the two, and it is this; where the transaction is void ab initio, there cannot be any "existing consideration which afterwards fails" within the meaning of this Article, but the consideration fails ad initio; in such a case the suit for refund of money would fall under Article 62 and not under this Article. But where the transaction is not void ab initio but voidable only, and the consideration fails by reason of some subsequent event, the suit would more properly fall under the present Article than under Article 62. This principle ought to be borne in mind in considering whether the case falls under Article 62 or 97, and this distinction has been clearly pointed out in the cases cited in Note 374 to Art. 62 under heading "Suit for refund of consideration-money." Where a contract of sale is wholly void ab initio the suit for refund of purchase money may be governed by Art. 62, but that in a case where the sale was not necessarily void, but only voidable Art. 97 would be applicable as governing a suit to recover money upon an existing consideration which had afterwards failed and that time would run when the vendee endeavoured to obtain possession of the property and being opposed found himself unable to obtain possession—Municipal Committee, Gujranwala v. Chiranjilal, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 685. This Article applies only to cases where there is some consideration at some stage which fails subsequently. But, in a void contract the consideration is unlawful from the very beginning and no question of its failing at any subsequent stage can arise—Panchoo v. Ram Sunder, I.L.R. (1943) All. 604, 1943 A.L.J. 250, A.I.R. 1943 All. 294.

The leading authority on this subject is the decision of the Privy Council in Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 Cal. 123. In this case, the manager of a joint Hindu family, governed by the Mithila law, sold a portion of the joint family property, but on objection made by the other members of the family to the transfer when the purchaser attempted to take possession, the sale was set aside. The purchaser then brought a suit for refund of the purchase-money. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee expressed the view that the suit did not fall under Article 62 but under Article 97, and observed (at p. 126): "If there never was any consideration, then the price paid by the appellant (purchaser) was money had and received to his account by Dowlat Mandur (vendor). But their Lordships are inclined to think that the sale was not necessarily void but was only voidable if objections were taken to it by the other members of the joint family. If so, the consideration did not fail at once but only from the time when the appellant endeavoured to obtain possession of the property, and being opposed, found himself unable to obtain possession. There was then, at all events, a failure of consideration and he would have had a right to sue at that time to recover back his purchase-money upon a failure of consideration, and therefore the case appears to be within the enactment of Article 97." In Raja of Venkatagiri v. Sobhanadri, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 663, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 645, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 211, 216 I.C. 120 the Madras High Court has held that this Article, which is the proper Article to apply with regard to voidable transactions is not inapplicable to cases where the contract was void ab initio. The reason given is that there are several sections of the Contract Act of which sections 24, 30 and 36 may be mentioned as examples of agreements with consideration which for one reason or another are void. If there was consideration for the original contract, then that consideration continued as long as one party was in enjoyment of the money and other of the land. It was only when the dispossession took place the consideration failed. Their Lordships further held that the decision of the Privy Council reported in 19 Cal. 123 was a case of void contract in which possession was not given. The same view has been taken in Sonaswatibai v. Madhukar, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 467, 1950 N.L.J. 145, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 229. Even though a mortgage be void, still if a mortgagee gets possession, it should be held that he has an existing consideration for his mortgage, and it would fail when the mortgagee is finally dispossessed. The suit for recovery of the money falls under this Article—Ram Harek v. Salik Ram, 89 I.C. 332, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 19.

A suit by a lessee under a registered lease who has been dispossessed from the property for return of the nazarana or premium paid by him to the lessor or any subsequent costs or damages on the ground that the lessor had no title, is governed by Article 116, even though it may apparently fall within this Article. As between the lessor and the lessee the transaction cannot be regarded as void ab initio when both parties have considered that the lessor had a good title to convey and when possession has been taken under the lease by the lessee—Debi v. Haji, 18 Pat. 654, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 81, 186 I.C. 674. Where an agreement to sell is not void ab initio, but is afterwards declared to be void by the Court which refuses specific performance, a suit for refund of the consideration is governed by Article 97 and not by Article 62—Munni v. Kunwar Kamta, 45 All. 378 (379); Maung Kyi v. Maung Kyaw, 4 Bur.L.J. 197, 93 I.C. 119, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 7.

Where the plaintiff has paid consideration and the defendant has promised to execute a lease but afterwards resiles from the promise and refuses to execute the lease, and the plaintiff files a suit for return of money, the cause of action for the suit does not arise on payment of the money. The suit is governed by Art. 97 or by Art. 115. It is either a claim for money paid upon existing consideration which afterwards failed in that the payments were made in consideration of the promise to execute the lease and the promise was afterwards repudiated or it was a claim for compensation for the breach of any contract express or implied not in writing registered and not specially provided for. The cause of action arises on breach of the promise to execute the lease—Abdul Shakur v. Rajendra, A.I.R. 1935 All. 759, 1935 A.L.J. 766. 155 I.C. 1092.

Where the plaintiff wrongly pays the defendant to redeem a mortgage, but on a third person obtaining a foreclosure decree he has to pay the money again for redeeming the mortgage, a suit for recovery of the money wrongly paid to the defendant is governed by Art. 97 and not by 116 or 120. The period of limitation runs from the date of the foreclosure decree—Shambhu Dutt v. Ram Baksh, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 378, 1935 O.W.N. 549, 155 I.C 299.

436. Suit for refund of purchase money upon failure to obtain possession or upon subsequent dispossession:—Where the sale is not void ab initio but voidable only, and the purchaser fails to obtain possession of the property purchased, or obtains possession but is subsequently dispossessed by reason of a defect of title in the vendor, a suit for refund of the purchase-money is governed by this Article and not by Article 62 as the consideration did not fail ab initio, but failed subsequently by reason of the purchaser failing to obtain possession or of his subsequent dispossession—Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 Cal. 123 (P.C.); Tulsiram v. Murlidhar, 26 Bom. 750; Narsing v. Pachu, 37 Bom. 538; Venkatanarasimhulu v. Peramma, 18 Mad. 173; Munni Babu v. Kunwar Kamta Singh, 45 All. 378 (380). See these cases fully cited in Note 374 under Article 62; Punjab Government v. Baijnath, 47 P.L.R. 122, A.I. R. 1945 Lah. 164, 221 I.C. 524. See also Mahant Mahabir v. Ram Lakhan, A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 1,

But it has been held in several cases of the Madras High Court, that after the passing of the Transfer of Property Act (1882), a covenant of title and quiet enjoyment must be implied in every contract of sale, under sec. 55 of that Act, and therefore a suit by the purchaser for refund of purchase-money on account of failure to get possession is to be deemed as a suit for "compensation for breach of contract in writing registered" (if there is a registered sale-deed) and is therefore governed by Article 116, and time runs from the date of dispossession or when the possession ought to have been delivered—Arunachala v. Ramasami, 38 Mad. 1171; Chidambaram v. Sivathasamy, 15 M.L.J. 396; Nageswara v. Sambasiva, (1911) 1 M.W.N. 361, 11 I.C. 337; Krishnan v. Kannan, 12 Mad. 8. This view is also taken by the Bombay High Court in Multan Mal v. Budhumal, 45 Bom. 955 (960), and by the Allahabad High Court in Muhammad Sidiq v. Muhammad Nuh, 52 All. 604, 124 I.C. 185, A.I.R. 1930 All. 771 (775). So also, where under a registered usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor failed to secure the mortgagee in possession whereupon the latter brought a suit for refund of the mortgage-money, it was held that the mortgagor's liability to give possession to the usufructuary mortgagee or, in default, to repay the mortgage-money was a liability imposed by section 68, Transfer of Property Act, and the suit must be regarded as one for breach of contract in writing registered, governed by Article 116 —Umichaman v. Ahmed, 21 Mad. 242. In these cases, the rulings in Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 Cal. 123 (P.C.) and Sawaba v. Abaji, 11 Bom. 475 were distinguished on the ground that the Privy Council case referred to a sale deed executed prior to the passing of the T. P. Act, and the Bombay case was decided before the T. P. Act was extended to that province). A fortiori, where a registered deed of sale contained an express covenant to the effect that in the event of a claim being advanced by a co-sharer or in the event of the purchaser losing any part of the property in any other way, he would be entitled to a refund of the consideration and to damages, and the purchaser failing to get possession of part of the property purchased sued for refund of a proportionate part of the consideration money and for damages for breach of the contract, held that the suit was governed by Article 116 and not by Article 97—Mul Kunwar v. Chaltar Singh, 30 All. 402; Ram Jaggi v. Kauleshar, 30 All. 405 (Footnote); Ratanbai v. Ghasiram, 55 Bom. 565, 134 I.C. 1157, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 36 (38). So also, in a case of lease—Zemindar of Vizianagram v. Behava Suryanarayana, 25 Mad. 587 (597).

In Ramchandar v. Tohfah Bharti, 26 All. 519, where a suit for refund of purchase-money was brought on an express covenant in the sale deed whereby the vendor agreed to recoup the purchaser in the event of disturbance of possession, the suit was held to be governed by Art. 97. In a recent Allahabad case, the Judges have decided to follow the Privy Council ruling in Hanuman v. Hanuman, (viz., that Article 97 applies) in preference to the other decisions which are in favour of the application of Art. 116—Kundan v. Bisheshar, 50 All. 95. A.I.R. 1927 All. 734, 25 A.L.J. 841, 103 I.C. 165; Thakur Hansram v. Kishorilal, A.I.R. 1937 All. 689. But the case reported in 50 All. 95 has been disapproved of in another case of the same High Court—Hanwant v. Chandi, 51 All. 651, 1929 A.L.J. 433, A.I.R. 1929 All. 293 (295). In the Punjab, however, the T. P. Act does not apply, and there is no implied covenant for title; consequently, a suit for refund of consideration on the ground of the plaintiff's failure to get possession is governed by Article 97 and not by Art. 116—Partab Singh v. Ganga Singh, 28 P.L.R. 74. Even in a case where there was an express covenant for quiet possession and enjoyment, a suit on the basis of the convenant was held to be governed by Art. 97—Gopal v. Dhanna, 9 Lah. 191, 29 P.L.R. 208, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 570 (572), 106 I.C. 804.

But Art. 116 applies when there is a breach of contract on the part of the defendant, and not where the breach is committed by the plaintiff. If a contract of lease goes off on account of the failure of the lessee (plaintiff) to perform his part of the contract, and the lessor refuses to deliver possession, a suit brought by the lessee, under sec. 65, Contract Act, for refund of the consideration paid by him, falls under Art. 97 and not under Art. 116—Anant v. Sarup, 26 A.L.J. 492, A.I.R. 1928 All. 360 (363). So also this Article governs a suit for refund of part purchase price paid on sale which afterwards goes off by reason of the failure of the buyer to complete payment—Madhavdas v. Jan Mahomed, I.L.R. (1941) Kar. 495, A.I.R. 1942 Sind 37, 199 I.C. 438.

A obtained possession of a certain revenue-paying property under an order passed in mutation proceedings, and whilst in possession collected rents from the tenants and paid the revenue due in respect of the property. But the order in favour of A was subsequently set aside, and he had to relinquish possession and refund to the tenants the rents collected. Thereupon he brought a suit to recover the revenue he had paid during the period of his possession. Held that the suit was governed by Article 61 and not by Article 97. The consideration for payment of revenue could not be the realisation of rents from the tenants; the revenue was paid because the property was liable for revenue and demand was made for it; it was payable by the person in possession whether he had collected rents or not; and the refund of rents cannot be said to be a failure of the consideration. Nor can it be said that the fact that he was in possession was a consideration for the payment of revenue—Alayar v. Bibi Kunwar, 42 All. 61 (62, 63).

A suit for return of consideration by the vendee of the mortgagee rights against his vendor on the dismissal of a suit on the mortgage which was found to be without consideration and not binding on the heirs of the executant is governed by this Article—Baljeet v. Shudarshan, 1942 A.L.W. 50.

Suit for refund of advance:—Where in a contract of sale of certain premises which were subject to waqf the condition was that the vendor should use due diligence in obtaining an order of the Court for sale and take legal advice and that on his failure to do so the vendee could recover the advance money, and it appeared that for 2 years the vendor remained quiet and then mortgaged the property to another who had it sold in satisfaction of the mortgage, held that a suit by the vendee for return of the advance-money was governed by Art. 97, and not by Art. 60 or 115, and time began to run when the contract became impossible of performance, i.e., when the property was sold away under the mortgage—Galstaun v. Sahebzadi Mamoodi, 56 Cal. 445, 33 C.W.N. 115 (116), 117 I.C. 700, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 216.

437. Other suits:—The pre-emptor obtained a decree for pre-emption allowing him to purchase the property at Rs. 1500. He paid the money to the vendor out of Court. But on appeal the amount was raised to Rs. 1900, and as the amount was not paid within the specified time, the decree for pre-emption became void. A suit brought by the pre-emptor against the vendor, for the refund of the amount of Rs. 1,500 fell under this Article or Art. 120, and not under Art. 62—Koji v. Ishar, 8 All. 273. The plaintiff sued for sale of a mortgaged property on foot of a registered mortgage. The property however, being a cultivatory holding and thus not being liable to sale, the plaintiff in his replication desired a money-decree. There was a further plea of the plaintiff that the defendant had fraudulently represented the property to be alienable property; but no fraud was found to have been proved. Held that the suit did not fall under Article 97, because there was no existing consideration whatever from the very inception of the mortgage, the property in suit being not alienable. The suit fell under Art. 116—Thamman v. Dalchand, 9 O.L.J. 171, 67 I.C. 595, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 113.

A usufructuary mortgagee assigned the mortgage to another person by an unregistered instrument, and put him in possession. Sometime after, the mortgagor sued both the assignor (mortgagee) and the assignee for redemption, and the Court passed a decree for redemption but refused to recognise the title of the assignee, the deed of assignment being unregistered. The mortgagor redeemed the property by paying the money to the mortgagee (assignor) and got back possession. The assignee who had to give up possession then brought the present suit to recover from the assignor the consideration for the assignment. Held that the suit fell under this Article, and time ran when the assignor received the mortgage-money from the mortgagor. The suit also fell under Art. 62, in as much as the assignor, by receiving the mortgage-money in fraud of the assignee, had received it for the latter's use—Sriramulu v. Chinna, 25 Mad 396. The plaintiff paid a sum of money to the defendants for the consideration of the latter relinquishing certain rights. But the deed of relinquishment was afterwards set aside at the instance of the defendant's sons. The plaintiff then brought a suit for the recovery of the money paid. It was held that the suit was governed by Art. 62 or 97—Bageshwar v. Bikramjit, 1930 A.L.J. 1112, A.I.R. 1930 All. 785.

Where the defendant borrowed money from the plaintiff on an unregistered mortgage and put him in possession, but subsequently taking advantage of the non-registration of the mortgage-deed, put him out of possession, it was held that a suit by the plaintiff for the amount due would be governed by this Article and time ran from the date of the dispossession—Gurumukh v. Chandu, 183 P.R. 1888. Where goods already paid for are afterwards found to be short delivered, a suit to recover the amount overpaid will be governed by this Article, the date of the failure of consideration being the date of delivery—Atul v. Dyon, 14 Cal. 457.

A suit for recovery of money in respect of realisation by the decree-holder of the decretal dues twice over is a suit for damages for breach of an implied contract by the decree-holder to get the payments certified and not to execute the decree and the Article applicable is Article 115 or possibly this Article—Jagat v. Parmeshwar, 28 Pat. 974, A I.R. 1951 Pat. 348.

A suit by an auction purchaser against the decree-holder under sec. 315 C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 21, r. 93 of the Code of 1908) to recover purchase-money on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold is governed by Article 62, and not by this Article. Since the judgment-debtor had no title to the property that was sold as his property, there was no consideration at all for the purchase-money that was paid and the suit fell not under Article 97 but under Art. 62—Ram Kumar v. Ram Gour, 37 Cal. 67 (70); Rustomji v. Vinayak, 35 Bom. 29 (34, 35). The Madras High Court was of opinion that a suit under sec. 315, C. P. Code by the auction purchaser for refund of purchase-money on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest, was governed by Article 120, no special period of limitation being fixed for such suit by any other Article—Nilakanta v. Imamshihib, 16 Mad. 361 (363). In a later case the Calcutta High Court has pointed out that the wording of O. 21, r. 93, C.P. Code of 1908 is different from the wording of sec. 315 of the C. P. Code of 1882, and that the remedy of an auction purchaser under O. 21, r. 93 to recover his purchase-money on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest is not by a suit, but by an application under Article 181 (where his remedy under the Code of 1882 was often by a suit or by an application)—Makar v. Sarfuddin, 50 Cal. 115 (122), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 85, 27 C.W.N. 183, 70 I.C. 606.

But where upon the sale being set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtor under sec. 311, C. P. Code (1882) a suit is brought by the auction purchaser for recovery of a sum of money not from the decree-holder but from a third person who had, after the sale and the deposit of the money in Court, attached that sum in execution of his decree against the judgment-debtor, as representing the surplus sale proceeds belonging to the original judgment-debtor after satisfaction of the decree obtained against the debtor by the decree-holder, the suit is governed by Article 120; neither Art. 62 nor Art. 97 applies to the case, because those Articles contemplate a suit between the contracting parties to the sale which afterwards proves infructuous; but in the present case, the suit by the auction purchaser against a third party cannot be regarded as a suit between the contracting parties to the sale—Amrita Lal v. Jogendra, 40 Cal. 187 (191). But see Murugappa v. Arunachala, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 449, 1949 M.W.N. 596, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 638 where it has been held that this Article applies. So also, a suit by the purchaser for refund from creditors who were paid by sale proceeds on the decree being passed in a suit by a third party declaring that the property sold was not judgment debtor's property is governed by Article 120 and not by this Article—Shamchand v. President, Anjuman Imdad Qarza, 228 I.C. 479.

A being indebted to B agreed to sell him certain property setting off the debt against the purchase-money. No money was paid, and disputes arising as to the other terms of the agreement, a litigation followed in which the agreement was held to be unenforceable. B then brought a suit against A for the debt, and A pleaded limitation. It was held that the amount claimed by B should no longer be regarded as the old debt; that the old debt had changed its character, having been the subject of an agreement by which it became the consideration for a proposed sale of land; and that the sale being declared unenforceable, the present suit must be deemed as one to recover money paid on a consideration which has failed; and that limitation ran from the date of the dismissal of the former suit (by which the contract was declared unenforceable), that being the date of the failure of consideration—Bassu Kuar v. Dhum Singh, 11 All. 47 (P.C.) overruling—Dhum Singh v. Ganga Ram, 8 All. 214. See this case cited in Note 102 under sec. 9. Where after the death of the mortgagor the mortgagee without acting in good faith obtained a sale of the mortgaged property from the guardian of the minor sons of the mortgagor reciting the amount due under the mortgage to be part of the consideration and the sale was set aside in a subsequent suit, the mortgagee cannot ask the Court to treat his mortgage alive. Since he chose at the time of the sale to abandon his mortgage security and use the money due under the mortgage in part payment of the price of the vended property, he is entitled to get a money decree for the specific sum which was set off as part of purchase money and was lost to him by the sale being set aside. Such a suit is governed by this Article and the time will begin to run from the date on which the mortgagee was deprived of his possession of the property—Dhani v. Bishun, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 245, 197 I.C. 498.

438. Partial failure of consideration:—A case of partial failure of consideration does not fall under this Article. Thus, under a compromise which was incorporated in a decree of Court, the plaintiffs were to become the owners of certain parcels of property on payment of a sum of money to the defendant; they paid this money but afterwards they were dispossessed from part of the property. The plaintiffs sued to recover the money they had paid for the property in suit alleging that the existing consideration failed within the meaning of this Article. Held that as the plaintiffs are still in possession of part of the property dealt with by the compromise they are not entitled to bring a suit for the entire consideration; the fact that they are in possession of some of the properties transferred goes to the root of their title to recover the purchase money on the ground of failure of the existing consideration. If part of a consideration is in the hands of the plaintiffs, it is not a case of failure of consideration—Karim Bux v. Abdul Wahid, 27 O.C. 348, 1 O.W.N. 416, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 377. But see the case of Venkatarama v. Venkata, 24 Mad. 27 cited under Note 440, in which the suit was based on a partial failure of consideration, and yet this Article was applied; but it appears that virtually there was a total failure of consideration in that case.

439. Fraud:—When fraud is alleged, the suit falls under Article 95. Thus, where a person owned money to another, and assigned to him a debt which he alleged to be due to him from a third party, and the assignee's suit against this last person was dismissed on the ground that no debt was due from him to the assignor, a subsequent suit by the assignee against the assignor for damages on the ground that the assignor had by deceitful misrepresentation induced the assignee to take the assignment, is governed by Article 95 and not by Art. 62 or 97—Punnayil v. Raman Nair, 31 Mad. 230 (233).

440. Starting point of limitation:—A member of a joint family governed by the Hindu law executed a sale, and the purchaser having applied for mutation of names, the Collector rejected the application in 1880, on opposition by the other members of the vendor's family. The purchaser sued for possession but that suit was dismissed on 18th December 1882, and finally by the High Court in 1884. On 4th March 1885, the purchaser brought a suit for refund of purchase money. Held that under Art. 97, the suit was barred, as the consideration failed when the purchaser endeavoured to obtain possession of the property, and being opposed by the other members of the family, found himself unable to obtain possession—Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 Cal. 123 (126) (P.C.). In other words, time ran when the purchaser was effectually resisted in taking possession (1880) and their Lordships overruled the contention that the starting point was the date of dismissal of the prior suit for possession (18th December 1882). The Privy Council ruling was followed in Tulsiram v. Murlidhar, 26 Bom. 750, where it was held that the time ran when the purchaser failed to obtain possession, and not from the date when the Court had decreed in a previous suit that the property did not pass by the sale. The same view has been taken in Begam Jan v. Malik, 195 I.C. 844. Where the vendee at first obtained possession but was subsequently evicted from the property under a decree on the ground that the vendor had no right to sell the property, held in a suit against the vendor for recovery of the purchase money, that time ran from the date of the decree in the prior suit under which the paintiff was evicted—Venkata Narasimhulu v. Peramma, 18 Mad. 173; Subbaroya v. Rajagopala, 38 Mad. 887. But see Murugappa v. Arunachala, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 449, 1949 M.W.N. 596, A I.R. 1949 Mad. 638; Punjab Government v. Baijnath, 47 P.L.R. 122, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 165. Where the purchasers, being disturbed in their possession brought a suit for refund of the consideration money, on a covenant contained in the sale-deed whereby the vendor agreed to recoup the purchasers in the event of disturbance of possession, held that the cause of action arose not on the date of the decree in the prior suit which negatived the plaintiff's title, but when the plaintiffs were actually dispossessed in execution of that decree—Ram Chandar v. Tohfah Bharti, 26 All. 519 (521). Where a purchaser under a voidable sale-deed from a qualified owner is dispossessed in execution of a decree obtained by a person entitled to avoid the sale, the period of limitation for a suit by the purchaser for the return of the price runs not from the date of the decree but from the date of actual dispossession in execution of the decree—Sankara Variar v. Ummer, 46 Mad. 40, 43 M.L.J. 721, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 46, 70 I.C. 878; see also Mahomed Ali v. Budharaju, 39 M.L.J. 449 (455), 60 I.C. 235. The defendant and his son sold a certain house to the plaintiff. But the plaintiff not having been given possession, sued for possession; it was then found that the sale did not bind the son's interest in the property, and that though the plaintiff was entitled to possession of the father's share, a division ought not to be effected, on the ground of inconvenience attending the division of the house. The plaintiff was awarded the value of the defendant's share. He now sued to recover the balance of the price paid, on the ground of failure of consideration to the extent of the son's share. Held that the failure of consideration must be taken to have occurred when it was found in the suit for possession that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the son's share—Venkatarama v. Venkatasubramanian, 24 Mad. 27 (31). The starting point of limitation for a suit to recover a specific amount due under a mortgage which was set off as a part of consideration of conveyance of the mortgaged property to the mortgagee is the date when the mortgagee was dispossessed from the property and not from the date of the decree setting aside the conveyance—Dhani v. Bishun, A I.R. 1942 Pat. 245, 197 I.C. 498. Where after the dismissal of the suit on a mortgage, the vendee of the mortgagee rights against his vendor brings a suit for return of consideration, the starting point of limitation is the date of the dismissal of the suit on the mortgage when the consideration failed—Baljeet v. Shadarshan, 1942 A.L.W. 50.

In a suit by an auction purchaser to recover purchase-money under sec. 315, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 21, r. 93, C. P. Code, 1908), on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no title to the property sold, the cause of action arises not on the date when the Court of first instance decides that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property, but on the date on which the auction purchaser is actually dispossessed in pursuance of a decision of the High Court on appeal from the decree of the first Court—Gurshidawa v. Gangawa, 22 Bom. 783 (785). But the Madras High Court is of opinion that the starting point of limitation is the date of the decree of the first Court declaring the judgment-debtor to have no saleable interest in the property, and not the date of the decree of the appellate Court confirming the first Court's decree—Nadukandee v. Kuttayil, 16 L.W. 285, A.I R. 1923 Mad. 23, 70 I.C. 45. See also, Mirza v. Ghulam, 194 I.C. 565. The Calcutta High Court holds that the time runs from the date when the sale is set aside on the ground of defect of title of the judgment-debtor and not from the date when the plaintiff actually lost possession—Bijraj v. Raja Bijoy Singh, 30 C.W.N. 79, 91 I.C. 768, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 297.

A purchaser of a patni under Reg. VIII of 1819 brought his suit for recovery of purchase money from the zeminder as the sale of the patni had been set aside on the suit of a darpatnidar. The Judicial Committee held that the period of limitation ran from the date of the decree of the Court of first instance setting aside the sale, and not from the date of the appellate decree affirming the first Court's decree, nor from the date when the purchaser lost possession—Juscurn v. Prithichand, 46 Cal. 670 (P.C.), 23 C.W.N. 721, A.I.R. 1918 P.C. 151.

Moneys were advanced on a mortgage executed on behalf of a minor, and interest paid for some time. A mortgage-decree was subsequently obtained and the property sold. Afterwards in a suit by the minor the mortgage was declared void and the sale set aside. A suit was then brought to recover the amount of the loan from the parties who acted for the minor. Held that Article 97 applied; there was no total failure of consideration ab initio, because the mortgagee had obtained interest for some time. The consideration failed on the date on which the decree was passed setting aside the mortgage and the period of limitation ran from that date—Ma Hnit v. Fatima, 5 Rang. 283 (P.C.), 31 C.W.N. 830, 101 I.C. 414, A.I.R. 1927 P.C. 99.

Where in a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell or for refund of the earnest money in the alternative, the Court finds the contract to be unenforceable, a decree would be passed for refund of the money and the consideration must be deemed to have failed from the date of the judgment pronouncing the contract to be unenforceable, and the claim for refund is not therefore barred by limitation—Anna Bibi v. Udit Narain, 31 All. 68 (P.C.), 36 I.A. 44, 1 I.C. 690, 9 C.L.J. 512, (affirming Udit Narain v. Minnatullah, 25 All. 618); Jagannadhayya v. Ramanatha, A.I.R. 1955 Orissa 11. Similarly, where a suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of a certain property is dismissed, and the plaintiff afterwards brings a suit for recovery of the earnest money he had paid in pursuance of the contract for sale, the period of limitation for this suit begins to run from the date of the judgment dismissing the plaintiff's previous suit for specific performance—Munni Babu v. Kunwar Kamta Singh, 45 All. 378 (379), 21 A.L.J. 265, 72 I.C. 86. A.I.R. 1923 All. 321; Maung Kyi v. Maung Kyaw, 4 Bur.L.J. 197, 93 I.C. 119, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 7.

A Hindu widow sold some property to S in 1888, and in 1897 the reversioners instituted a suit for declaration that the sale by the widow should not affect their reversionary rights, and this suit was eventually decreed by the Privy Council in 1909. In the meantime, S had sold the property to the plaintiffs in 1898. After the death of the widow in 1919, the reversioners brought a suit for possession of the property, which was decreed in 1921, and the plaintiffs had to give up possession. They then instituted a suit in 1921 for recovery of the purchase-money. Held that time ran when the plaintiffs were actually dispossessed in 1921 for it was then that the consideration failed, and not from the date of the Privy Council decision in 1909, for that decision had not negatived the vendees' title but only declared the alienation to be voidable after the death of the widow—Gopal Dai v. Dhanna, 9 Lah. 191, 106 I.C. 804, 29 P.L.R. 208, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 570 (572). In September 1908, defendant No. 1 contracted with the plaintiff for a price to procure from defendant No. 2 a reconveyance of certain property to the plaintiff. The property at the time was already in the plaintiff's possession. In November 1908, the defendant No. 2 conveyed his property to V, who sued to recover its possession from the plaintiff, and obtained a decree in July 1911. In January 1912 the plaintiff sued to recover the consideration money from the defendant No. 1. It was held that the suit was time-barred, the cause of action arising in November 1908, the moment there was a conveyance to V; although the plaintiff retained possession till 1911, that possession was merely on sufferance and by the grace of V—Gulab Chand v. Narayan, 41 Bom. 31, 36 I.C. 613.

A, a purchaser from a junior member of his share in joint family properties, attempted to take possession thereof, but was resisted by a prior purchaser of those properties from the manager of the family. A then instituted a suit for the recovery of the share purchased by him and the litigation was carried up to the High Court whose decision was against him. Within three years of the date of the judgment of the High Court but more than three years after the date on which he was resisted, A instituted a suit for the recovery of the sale-price and of the costs incurred in the unsuccessful litigation. Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation as the consideration for the sale failed on the date of the High Court's decision, and the cause of action for the suit arose only on that date—Sarvothama v. Chinnasami, 42 Mad. 507.

Where a lessee was evicted by a person claiming a title superior to the lessor, the cause of action for a suit by the lessee against the lessor to recover the amount of premium paid for the lease arose not from the date when the successful claimant obtained a decree against him for possession but from the date when he was actually evicted in execution of that decree—Sukmoy v. Shashi, 10 I.C. (Cal.); Debi v. Haji, 18 Pat. 654, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 81, 186 I.C. 674. In a suit for refund of money paid under a contract of lease which subsequently becomes void, time runs when the contract becomes void—Anant v. Sarup, 26 A.L.J. 492, A.I.R. 1928 All. 360 (363).

98. To make good out of the general estate of a deceased trustee the loss occasioned by a breach of trust.	Three years.	The date of the trustee's death, or, if the loss has not then resulted, the date of the loss.

441. The suit contemplated by this Article is a suit not for recovery of the trust property, but for compensation for the loss. This Article does no more than carry a deceased trustee's liability for breach on to his estate after his death. It does not contemplate any different cause of action—Sahandra v. Deo Radha, I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 94, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 30, 176 I.C. 57; Hariharabrahmam v. Janikiramaiah, A.I.R. 1955 Andhra 18.

The distinction between sec. 10 and Article 98 is that, if the loss occasioned by a breach of trust is the loss of trust-monies and such moneys may be followed in the hands of the legal representatives of the deceased trustee, sec. 10 will apply—Chintaman v. Khanderao, 52 Bom. 184, 30 Bom.L.R. 45, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 58; but if such moneys have to be recovered from the general estate of the deceased trustee, Art. 98 will apply.

In an earlier Bombay case Scott J. has remarked that the "loss" in this Article means the loss of the specific property mentioned in sec. 10. If the specific property is irrecoverable, then its value can be recovered out of the general estate of the deceased trustee within 3 years under this Article—New Fleming S. & W. Co. v. Kessowji, 9 Bom. 373 (400). But U. N. Mittra is of opinion that "this Article applies to any loss, (whether of the specific property or not) occasioned by any breach of trust, whether fraudulent or not"—U. N. Mitra's Limitation, 5th Edn., p. 1014.

A guardian of property appointed under the Guardian and Wards Act is not a person in whom the property is vested for a specific purpose. He is a trustee. Therefore, this Article applies to a suit against legal representatives of guardian of minor's property for amount taken by the guardian from minor and not repaid. Sec. 10 has no application to such a suit—Mirabai v. Kaushalyabai, I.L.R. 1948 Nag. 794, 1949 N.L.J. 154, A.I R. 1949 Nag. 235.

General estate:—The joint family property of the father and sons, which passes by survivorship to the sons on the death of the father, does not form the "general estate" of the deceased trustee (father)—Subramania v. Gopala, 33 Mad. 308.

99. For contribution by a party who has paid the whole or more than his share of the amount due under a joint decree, or by a sharer in a joint estate who has paid the whole or more than his share of the amount of revenue due from himself and his co-sharers.	Three years.	The date of the payment in excess of the plaintiff's own share.

442. The words "the whole amount" in the Act of 1877 have been changed into "the whole or more than his share of the amount" in the Act of 1908. Under the old Act, this Article did not apply to a case where not the whole, but only a part, of the money due under a joint decree was realised from the plaintiff; and therefore where a decree-holder having a joint decree against the plaintiff and the defendant brought to sale the property of the plaintiff and received out of the sale-proceeds a part of the decretal amount, this Article did not apply to a suit for contribution brought by the plaintiff against the defendant and it was doubtful whether Art. 61 or 120 applied—Pattabhiramayya v. Ramayya, 20 Mad. 23. In Ibn Hasan v. Brijbhukhan, 26 All. 407, also Stanley C. J. doubted whether this Article applied to a case where only a part of the money was realised from the plaintiff. But his doubt has been removed by the change introduced into the present Article; and a suit such as one mentioned above would now fall under it.

443. Payment whether creates a charge:—In Khub Lal v. Pudmanand, 15 Cal 542, it has been held that whether a co-sharer of a revenue-paying estate pays the whole amount of the arrears of revenue in order to save the estate from sale, he does not thereby acquire any charge upon the shares of the other co-sharers, but is only entitled to contribution; consequently his suit fails under Article 99 and not under Article 132. The same view is taken in Bhubneshwari v. Manir, 7 Pat. 613, 9 P. L. T. 573, A.I.R. 1928 Pat 641 (649), 111 I.C. 84; Upendra v. Girindra, 25 Cal. 565 (569); Kinoo Ram v. Muzaffar, 14 Cal. 809 (F.B) (overruling Enayet Hussain v. Muddunmoonee, 14 B.L.R. 155); Kristo Mohini v. Kali Prosanna, 8 Cal. 402 (419); Shivrao v. Pundlick, 26 Bom. 437 (439) (dissenting from 11 Bom. 313). This view is based on the following observations of Cotton L. J. in Falcke v. Scottish Imperial Assurance Co., (1886) 34 Ch. D. 234 (at p. 241): "A man by making a payment in respect of property belonging to another, if he does so without request, is not entitled to any lien or charge on that property for such payment." In the same case Bowen, L. J. observed: "The general principle is, beyond all question, that work and labour done or money expended by one man to preserve or benefit the property of another do not according to English law create any lien upon the property saved or benefited." In another English case also it has been held that the right to contribution is a personal right, and this remedy is a personal remedy, and there is no lien in respect of which the contribution arises—Per Fry, J. in Leslie v. French, (1883) 23 Ch. D. 552 (564).

But a contrary view has been taken in Seshagiri v. Pichu, 11 Mad. 452, Rajah of Vizianagram v. Rajah Setrucherla, 26 Mad. 686 (715) (F.B.); Alayakammal v. Subbarayya, 28 Mad. 493 (494) and Kotayya v. Kotayya, 49 M.L.J. 117, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 141 (142), 90 I.C. 551; in these cases a payment of revenue by one of the co-sharers has been held to create a charge in his favour so as to entitle him to take advantage of Art. 132. The same remark has been made (by way of obiter) in Achut v. Hari, 11 Bom. 313 (318).

"The way in which the two lines of decision may be reconciled is, that if a money decree is sought, then three years is the period of limitation, but if the overpayment is a charge on the land and it is sought to recover it out of the land, then the case falls under Article 132"—Starling 5th Edn., pp. 298-299. Where only a personal decree is sought, and the suit is not intended to enforce any charge, it would come under Art 99, or if for some reason or other this Article is not applicable, Art. 61 would apply. But it would not fall under Art. 120, which is a most general Article—Raja of Vizianagram v. Raja Setrucherla, 26 Mad. 686 (F.B.). If the payment of revenue is made by a person other than a co-sharer (e.g., by a lessee), he acquires a charge—Ram Dutt v. Horakh, 6 Cal. 549. (This ruling has been doubted in 8 Cal. 402 and dissented from in 14 Cal. 809 F.B.).

444. Voluntary and involuntary payment:—In cases in which the right to contribution exists under the law, it is immaterial whether the party seeking contribution paid the money voluntarily or involuntarily, i.e., whether he made the payment of his own will and thus averted a coercive process against his property, or whether the amount was realised by seizure and sale of his property—Raja of Vizianagram v. Raja Satrucherla, 26 Mad. 686 (693) (F.B.). In an earlier case the Calcutta High Court was of opinion that money realised by the sale of plaintiff's property was not money paid within the meaning of Arts. 61 and 99—Janki v. Domi, 18 C.W.N. 480, 20 I.C. 24. But in a later case it has adopted the more liberal view and laid down that it does not matter whether the money in respect of which the right of contribution arises was actually handed over by the party seeking contribution or was realised from him by coercive process by the creditor, as for instance, by execution of a decree. In either case the right of contribution arises from the fact that one of the co-debtors has paid in excess of his share and the joint liability of all of them has been discharged —Goti Nath v. Chandra Nath, 26 C.W.N. 340, 57 I.C. 884, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 814.

It seems that the words "or more than his share" would imply involuntary payments. A person who would voluntarily pay would pay the whole and not anything less.

445. Starting point of limitation:—The question of the date of payment under this Article is one of fact to be decided with reference to the circumstances of each case. No rigid formula can be safely laid down—Ganesh v. Bhawan, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 151, 185 I.C. 73. Where the plaintiff, a joint judgment-debtor, deposited the entire decretal amount in Court, and the Court accepted the money on behalf of the decree-holder in full satisfaction of the decree, but the decree-holder withdrew the money on a later date, held in a suit for contribution by the plaintiff, that the deposit of the decretal amount in Court was 'payment' within the meaning of the 3rd column of this Article, and time ran from the date of deposit and not from the date when the decree-holder withdrew the money from Court. The criterion in each case must be whether the deposit made by the plaintiff in excess of his share did or did not remain under his control—Gahar Ali v. Abdul, 56 Cal. 192, 32 C.W.N. 1030 (1034. 1035), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 361, 49 C.L.J. 5. See also Chinnupati v. Thotakuru, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 185; Khetro v. Sukuru, A.I.R. 1957 Orissa 224. In an earlier Calcutta case, where a joint judgment-debtor in an execution case made an application to the Court stating that a certain sum was in deposit in his account in another Court and praying that the execution Court should send for so much of the amount as would be necessary to satisfy the decree, and the money was received by the executing Court on 1st April 1873 and paid on the same day to the decree-holder, held in a suit for contribution by the joint judgment-debtor, that time ran not when the money was offered or ordered to be paid, but when it was actually paid over to the decree-holder—Radha Kristo v. Rup Chunder, 3 C.L.R. 480. In this case the money was received by the executing Court and paid over to the decree-holder on the same day, and so there is no conflict with the ruling in 32 C.W.N. 1030 above. Where the payment is involuntary (i.e., where money is realised by attachment and sale) limitation runs from the time the judgment-creditor drew the money out of Court, and not from the date when the money was realised by execution sale—Fuckorudden v. Mohima, 4 Cal. 529. Cf. Pattabhiramayya v. Ramayya, 20 Mad. 23.

Plaintiff and his three brothers formed a joint Hindu family and were indebted to a certain person, who filed a suit against the plaintiff and another brother and obtained a decree in 1913. Subsequently the family separated and later on execution was taken out against the plaintiff, and he executed a mortgage in favour of the decree-holder in 1924, in lieu of the decretal amount. The plaintiff then instituted a suit for contribution against the other members of the family in 1927. It was held that time began to run when the plaintiff executed the mortgage in 1924, for when he took upon himself the entire responsibility for the joint-debt by executing the mortgage, it was tantamount to "payment in excess of his share" within the meaning of the 3rd column of this Article—Sat Rohan v. Bharath, 1931 A.L.J. 651, 134 I.C. 452, A.I.R. 1931 All 652 (653).

446. Suits under this Article:—This Article applies to a suit for contribution in respect of a joint personal decree. It does not apply to a case where liability is not personal, but attaches to immoveable property—Babu Lal v. Bindhajachal, 22 Pat. 187, 211 I.C. 334, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 305. Where by an agreement of partnership every partner was at liberty to borrow money on his own credit and to pay the money into the firm for carrying on the business, and where a partner borrowed money on his individual credit for the benefit of the business, and after-wards the money was realised from him under a decree by the creditor, a suit by the partner for contribution against the other partners was maintainable, and would be governed by this Article—Durga Prosonna v. Raghunath, 26 Cal. 254 (257).

A mortgagee was directed to pay off a prior mortgage out of the consideration for his own mortgage. Default having been made in payment, the prior mortgagee sued both the mortgagor and the subsequent mortgagee and obtained a joint decree. The mortgagor paid off the decree and sued to recover the amount from the subsequent mortgagee. Held that the suit was governed by Article 99, and not by Article 61 or 116, and the period of limitation ran from the date when the decree was satisfied by the mortgagor—Lakhi v. Murat Tiwari, 22 A.L.J. 737, A.I.R. 1924 All. 843, 83 I.C. 875.

447. Suits not under this Article:—Where rent, not revenue, is paid by one of the co-sharers in respect of the entire holding, a suit for contribution is governed by Art. 61 (and not by this Article)—Swarnamoyi v. Hari Das, 6 C.W.N. 903 (904). But in Thanikachella v. Shudachella, 15 Mad. 258, this Article was applied to such a suit. No reason is stated and the judgment is a very short one. Probably the learned Judge over-looked the fact that the word 'revenue' and not 'rent' is used in the Article. Moreover the rent was not paid in pursuance of a decree for rent, so as to make the earlier part of this Article applicable. The judgment is, it is submitted, incorrect.

Where a person other than a co-sharer (i.e., a lessee) pays off the revenue to save his interest in the estate, a suit by him to recover the money cannot be said to be a suit for 'contribution'; he is entitled to a charge on the property and therefore Article 132 will govern his suit—Ram Dutt v. Horakh, 6 Cal. 549. Where the owner of two villages sold under a decree obtained upon a mortgage which included other villages, claims contribution proportionately against the owners of those other villages (who were not however made parties in the mortgage suit), held that Article 99 cannot apply as this is not a case where a person has paid money under a joint-decree. The plaintiff is entitled to a charge on the other properties and the suit is governed by Art. 132—Ibn Husain v. Ramdai, 12 All. 110. See also Bhagwan Das v. Karam Husain, 33 All. 708 (F.B.).

100. By a co-trustee to enforce against the estate of a deceased trustee a claim for contribution.	Three years.	When the right to contribution accrues.

448. Limitation does not run against a trustee claiming contribution against a co-trustee in respect of a liability incurred by loss occasioned to the trust-estate by the joint default of the trustee, until the claim of the cestui que trust has been established against one of them—Robinson v. Harkin, [1896] 2 Ch. 415.

101. For a seaman's wages.	Three years.	The end of the voyage during which the wages are earned.
102. For wages not otherwise expressly provided for by this Schedule.	Three years.	When the wages accrue due.

449. This Article applies only to a suit for wages as such brought by the person entitled to the wages, and not to a suit brought by a person to recover the money which he had paid to certain servants as their wages on behalf of another person. Thus, on a dispute between A and B as regards possession of a property, C was put in charge of the property as supurdar, pending the determination of their rights. After these rights were determined and C had restored possession, C was sued for their wages by two watchmen whom he had appointed to watch the standing crops. C paid up the decrees and instituted a suit against A and B for recovery of the money he had to pay to the watchmen. It was held that this suit was governed by Article 61 or 120 but not by Art. 102—Lachhmi Narain v. Putti Lal, 7 O.W.N. 760, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 420 (422), 128 I.C. 66.

The plaintiffs who were hereditary temple-servants paid in monthly wages, being suspended from their offices by the trustees, brought a suit, questioning the legality of the suspension, against the trustees, and also against the persons who discharged their duties during their suspension, for pay for the period of suspension, for the value of perquisites payable from the temple as well as from other sources during such period, and for damages for mental distress, loss of dignity etc. It was held that as regards the pay and perquisites payable by the temple, the suit was governed by Art. 102, and not by Article 4 or 7; that as regards the perquisites which were received from third persons, they were not wages and Art. 102 would not apply but Art. 36; and as regards the claim against the persons who received the plaintiff's pay and perquisites during the period of suspension, the suit might fall under Article 62—Baradwaja v. Arunachala, 41 Mad. 528 (532), 45 I.C. 414.

For the meaning of 'wages', see Notes under Article 7. The term 'wages' in this Article is not used in the restricted sense of remuneration for mechanical or manual labour, but is used in the large sense of remuneration for service of an employee—Upendra v. Bimalendu, I.L.R. (1944) 2 Cal. 283, 48 C.W.N. 317, A.I.R. 1944 Cal. 302. The word "wages" in this Article covers salary also; it is intended to cover all claims for wages, pay or salary not expressly provided for in any other article of the schedule—Province of Punjab v. Tarachand, 1947 F.L.J. 56, 49 Bom.L.R. 697, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 389 (F.C.), 52 C.W.N. (F.R.) 2, A.I.R. 1947 F.C. 23, Therefore this Article applies to a suit for remuneration for service both of a higher class and of a lower class of servant—Upendra v. Bimalendu, supra, or to a suit by a servant of the Crown to recover arrears of pay—Province of Punjab v. Tarachand, supra.

A suit by the dwaris of a temple for recovery of certain dues which they claim to be payable to them as remuneration in respect of their services in connection with the temple does not fall under this Article, because the dwaris are not paid regular recurring wages but are entitled to certain specific payments as emoluments attached to their hereditary office. The suit falls under Article 120—Sri Sri Baidyanath Jiu v. Har Datt, 5 Pat. 249, 7 P.L.T. 465, 94 I.C. 826, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 205.

Where the particular Art. 102 applies the more general Art. 131 is excluded. A suit by an archaka against the trustee for his allowance called "Tastik" (paid to the Archaka in lieu of wages for the services rendered to the temple) is governed by Art. 102, Limitation Act—Shivaram Joi Sha v. Nagappaya, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 149, 70 M.L.J. 220, 161 I.C. 475.

The Archaka is a servant of the trustee or a temple and the emoluments are his wages. And a suit by a hereditary archaka of a temple against the trustee of the temple, for recovery of emoluments due to him, consisting of rice and food offerings assessed at a money value, is governed by Art. 102 and not by Art. 36 or 120 of the Limitation Act—Vedagiri Sastriar v. Sankaracharya Swamigal, A.I.R. 1935 Mad.. 128, 68 M.L.J. 132, 41 L.W. 40, 1935 M.W.N. 120, 155 I.C. 591.

A wet-nurse is not a domestic servant under Article 7; a suit by her to recover her wages falls under Article 102—Mohan Lal v. Jumerat, 10 A.L.J. 395, 17 I.C. 658. A bisardar in Oudh is not a domestic servant, and his suit for wages falls under Article 102 and not under Article 7—Ghasi Ram v. Uma Datta, 26 O.C. 327, 10 O.L.J. 348. A suit for wages by a weighman in a shop is governed by this Article and not by Article 7—Mutsaddi v. Bhawan, 48 All. 164 (see this case cited in Note 265 under Article 7). A sahana who is merely employed to watch crops and to see that they are not taken away, cannot be described as a labourer. And consequently a sahana in suing for his wages comes under Art. 102, and not under Art. 7, and the period is three years from the time the charges accrued—Babulal v. Hukamsingh, A.I.R. 1935 All. 102, 1935 A.L.J. 78. A hotel cook's suit for arrears of salary is governed by this Article —Balanath v. Givondan, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 340. A person who is engaged to supervise a work is not a household servant, artisan or labouror. Therefore a suit by a contractor for remuneration for supervising a work falls under this Article—Anupchand v. Nimraji, I L.R. (1949) Nag. 578, 1949 N.L.J. 200, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 329.

A motor driver is an artisan. And a motor driver and especially one who is provided with board and lodging by the employer, would come within the definition of a domestic servant. A suit by a motor driver for his wages is governed by Art. 7 and not by Art. 102—Sita Ram v. Jagan Nath, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 661, 38 P.L.R. 296, 160 I.C. 1042. See, however, Maniklal v. Ramesh, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 290.

This Article has no application to a suit for recovery of agreed remuneration between the date of dismissal and the date of reinstatement—The District Board, Mainpuri v. Devendra, 1943 A.L.W. 513.

Art. 102 lays down that wages not otherwise expressly provided for in the schedule must be taken to be subject to a time which begins to run from the time when the wages accrue due. In the case of monthly wages the wages accrue and become due on the final day of the month—Gajadhar v. Dharma, A.I.R. 1935 All. 716, 1935 A.L.J. 379, 154 I.C. 713.

103.	By a Muhammadan for exigible dower (mu'ajjal).	Three years.	When the dower is demanded and refused or (where, during the continuance of the marriage no such demand has been made) when the marriage is dissolved by death or divorce.

450. A suit by the heirs of the deceased wife against the husband, for prompt as well as deferred dower, is not a suit for recovery of the goods of the deceased in the hands of the defendant, but a suit under Articles 103 and 104. It is a suit based on a contract which the heirs of the wife are entitled to enforce—Asiatulla v. Dains Mohamed, 50 Cal. 253 (255, 257), 36 C.L.J. 379, 70 I.C. 169, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 152, Mahamad Mazaharat v. Mahamad Azimuddin, 27 C.W.N. 210 (217), 37 C.L.J. 108, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 507, 73 I.C. 17. But see 33 All. 568, cited under Article 104.

Where a wife demanded only a portion of her prompt dower from her husband during his lifetime, limitation as to her claim to the remainder will count from the date of her husband's death, and not from the date of her former demand—Begoo Zaun v. Gashee Beebee, 6 W.R. Civ. Ref. 19. Prompt or exigible dower may be considered as a debt always due and demandable, and certainly payable upon demand, and therefore upon a clear and unambiguous demand and refusal a cause of action would accrue, and the Statute would begin to run. An application by a Mahomedan lady for leave to sue her husband in forma pauperis for her dower, which was rejected, was not held to constitute a demand for prompt dower sufficient to set the period of limitation running—Khajooroonissa v. Ryeesoonnissa, 24 W.R. 163 (P.C.), 2 I.A. 235, 15 B.L.R. 306. If there was no demand and refusal during the continuance of the marriage, the period of limitation would run from the dissolution of the marriage by death or divorce. If the husband deliberately and fraudulently withholds from the wife all knowledge of the divorce, in other words, if the wife does not know her right to claim dower by reason of the fraudulent conduct of her husband, time will only begin to run against the wife when she knows of the fraud—Khadim v. Burekhan, 45 P.L.R. 231, A.I.R. 1943 Lah. 215, 209 I.C. 157 (on appeal from Burekhan v. Khadim, A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 166, 198 I.C. 326).

If the deed of dower be registered(Article 116 would apply to a suit for recovery of the dower debt, because such a suit is a suit for compensation for breach of a contract in writing registered, the suit being one to enforce a simple money-claim founded on a contract entered into by the husband—Mahamad Mazaharal v. Mahamad Azimuddin, 27 C W.N. 210 (216-217); Asiatulla v. Danis, supra.

Where a Muhammadan husband executed a registered deed long after marriage, promising to pay the dowry then still due from him, on demand , and hypothecating certain immoveable properties as security for its due payment, held that the bond converted the dower-debt into a mortgage-debt, and Article 103 was inapplicable. If the suit for recovery of the dowry prays for a simple money-decree and not a decree for sale, the six years' rule of limitation under Article 116 would apply, time running from the date of execution of the deed—Kubra Begum v. Fazal Husain, A.I.R. 1927 All. 268, 99 I.C. 553.

104. By a Muhammadan for deferred dower (mu'-wajjal).	Three years.	When the marriage is dissolved by death or divorce.

451. It is a part of the Mahomedan law that so far as a wife's claim for dower is concerned, the marriage is said to be dissolved by divorce only when it comes to the notice of the wife, and there is nothing in Art. 104 against this rule. So, a suit by a Mahomedan wife for deferred dower is in time if brought within three years from the date when the talak pronounced in her absence by her husband was communicated to her, though it may be more than three years from the date of pronouncement—Kathiyumma v. Urathel, 1931 M W.N. 570, 133 I.C. 375, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 647 (649).

A suit by the heirs of the wife for deferred dower falls under this Article—Asiatulla v. Dawis Muhammad, 50 Cal. 253 (257); Mahomad Ishaq v. Akramal Haq, 12 C.W.N. 84, 6 C.L.J. 558. Where a Muhammadan widow remains in possession of her husband's property in lieu of her dower, but is afterwards dispossessed by the other heirs of her husband and then dies, and a suit is brought by one of her heirs to recover his (plaintiff's) share of the dower-debt, out of the assets in the hands of the heirs of her husband, the suit is not governed by this Article—Hamidullah v. Najjo, 33 All. 568 (570), 8 A.L.J. 578, 10 I.C. 282. But the judgment does not specify which Article applies.

105. By a mortgagor after the mortgage has been satisfied, to recover surplus collections received by the mortgagee.	Three years.	When the mortgagor re-enters on the mortgaged property.

452. Where a mortgagee takes possession of the mortgaged property as a security for his debt, he has no right to be in possession of the estate after he has paid himself what is due to him out of the property. If he holds the property subsequent to his having been paid, the mortgagor would be entitled to possession and surplus profits together with interest thereon. The limitation applicable to a suit for recovery of such profits with interest thereon is that provided by this Article—Abdul Hassan v. Jagwanta, 32 I.C. 729 (Oudh).

A usufructuary mortgage contained a stipulation that the mortgagee should deduct the interest from the collections and pay over the balance annually to the mortgagors, the property being redeemable on payment of the principal money on the expiry of seven years. After redemption of the mortgage without the intervention of the Court, a suit was brought by the mortgagor for recovery of the balance of collections which remained in the hands of the mortgagee after deducting the interest for the years during which the collections had been made. The defendant pleaded that the suit was governed by Article 109, and that the cause of action arose each year for the profits of that year, and that the suit was time-barred. Held that Art. 109 did not apply because it could not be said that the profits were wrongfully received by the defendants, when the deed expressly gave them power to realise the profits, though they were no doubt required to pay over the profits to the plaintiff. The suit fell under the purview of Article 105 and having been brought within three years from the date of restoration to possession, was within time. The use of the word 'annually' in the deed did not make the cause of action accrue year by year; the ordinary principle regulating the rights of the mortgagee is that when he is in possession of the property he must account to the mortgagor for all sums realised in excess of the amount to which he was entitled, and it is at the time of redemption that accounts are made up and settled between the parties—Bikramjit v. Raj Raghubar, 20 O.C. 25, 38 I.C. 610.

Art. 105 should not be so construed as to conflict with the provisions of sec. 43, C P. Code, 1882 (O. 2, r. 2, C. P. Code 1908) and must be deemed to refer to cases where the mortgagor has got possession of the mortgaged property otherwise than by a suit for redemption; for where a mortgagor brings a suit for redemption, he is bound to claim an account for any surplus received by the mortgagee after discharge of the mortgage-debt and if he omits to make such claim in that suit, he cannot maintain a second suit for recovery of the surplus collections, sec. 43 C. P. Code being a bar to such a suit—Ramdin v. Bhup, 30 All. 225 (228, 230). The ruling in 30 All. 225 has been followed by the Calcutta High Court in Prasanna v. Nilambar, 26 C.W.N. 123, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 189, 64 I.C. 75. The Bombay High Court likewise holds that a redemption suit has for its purpose the complete adjustment of the rights of the parties, and therefore if a mortgagee at first brings a suit for redemption but in that suit does not claim to recover the surplus profits, a subsequent suit for recovery of the surplus collections is barred by res judicata, because the claim is one which ought to have been decided in the suit for redemption—Vinayak v. Dattatraya, 26 Bom. 661 (668). See also Zakiuldin v. Chunnilal, 103 I.C. 290, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 302.

But where the mortgagor brings a suit for redemption without claiming for the surplus collections and gets a decree, he can afterwards bring a suit contemplated by this Article, by permission of the Court obtained under section 43, C. P. Code 1882 (O. II, r. 2, C. P. Code, 1908). Although, when a redemption suit is brought, the claim for surplus collections should be made along with the claim for redemption, still if permission be obtained under sec. 43, C. P. Code, to bring a subsequent suit for the recovery of the surplus collections, there is no conflict between the provisions of this Article and those of sec. 43, C. P. Code—Muhammad Fayaz v. Kallu Singh, 33 All. 244 (247), 8 I.C. 689, 7 A.L.J. 1201 (distinguishing Ramdin v. Bhup Singh, 30 All. 225). The Nagpur Court, however, is of opinion that if the Court orders the suit for surplus collections to be tried separately from the redemption suit, such order does not alter the nature of the suit for surplus profits, and the suit is governed by Art. 148 and not by Article 105—Zakiuldin v. Chunnilal, supra.

Where in a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor alleges that if accounts were taken, a large sum would be found due from the mortgagee, and the mortgagor accordingly prays that an account may be taken and a decree may be passed for the amount which may be found due to him after adjustment of accounts, held that since the claim for recovery of the surplus profits received by the mortgagee is a relief which is a part of the suit for redemption itself, Article 105 does not apply, and if the suit for redemption is brought within the period of limitation prescribed by Article 148, the claim for surplus profits is not barred—Prasanna v. Nilambar, 26 C.W.N. 123, 64 I.C. 75, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 189.

A suit by a mortgagor against a mortgagee, brought after redemption of the mortgage, for compensation for loss caused by the latter having cut down trees standing on the mortgaged property during the subsistence of his possession, is governed by this Article and not by Article 109, and the period of limitation runs from the time when the mortgagor re-enters on the property—Ram Sukh v. Indur Kunwar, 6 O.L.J. 53, 50 I.C. 152.

A subsequent suit for recovery of surplus profits is maintainable where the profits have been received by the mortgagee after the mortgagor has deposited the redemption money in Court. But such a suit is not a suit for surplus collections received by the 'mortgagee' because the collections were made by a person who had ceased to be a mortgagee—Sahari Dutta v. Sheikh Ainuddy, 14 C.W.N. 1001 (1005), 6 I.C. 336, 12 C.L.J. 620. Article 62 applies to the suit.

106. For an account and a share of the profits of a dissolved partnership.	Three years.	The date of the dissolution.

453. Application of Article:—This Article applies to suits brought after the dissolution of partnership. So long as a partnership business is subsisting, a suit for share and accounts is not maintainable, though a suit for partnership accounts only may be allowed under exceptional circumstances, where equity requires such a course—Kassa v. Gopi, 9 All. 120 (121); and to such a suit Art. 120, and not Art. 106, applies —Gokul v. Sasimukhi, 16 C.W.N. 299, 15 C.L.J. 204, 13 I.C. 23. Thus, a suit by one partner for partnership accounts (without a prayer for dissolution of partnership) based on an express agreement between the parties to render accounts and to distribute the profits annually is governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 106—Binjraj v. Kisanlal, 29 N.L.R. 34. 141 I.C. 277, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 127 (130).

This Article applies only in the case of a partnership that has already been dissolved. A suit which is in terms one for dissolution of a continuing partnership, and stated in the plaint to be so, is governed by Art. 120, and not by this Article, even though the parties treated the suit as one for accounts of a dissolved partnership —Narayanaswami v. Gangadhara, 37 M L.J. 353, 48 I.C. 89; Srinivasalu v. Ramakrishna, 1933 M.W.N. 689, 144 I.C. 573; Khorasamy v. Acha, 6 Rang. 198, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 160 (162), 110 I C. 349; Haramohan v. Sudarshan, 25 C.W.N. 847, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 538, 66 I.C. 811. A suit for a declaration that a partnership existed between certain persons, praying that if the partnership still existed it might be dissolved and that if it had been dissolved the date of the dissolution may be fixed, and that in either case a liquidator may be appointed to take an account, and, after realising assets and discharging obligation, to pay to the plaintiff his share of the balance, is a suit for dissolution of partnership governed by Art. 120, and not by this Article—Harrison v. Delhi and London Bank, 4 All. 437 (451). A suit for division of immoveable property which formed part of the partnership assets, after the dissolution of partnership, is governed by this Article—Gobardhan v. Ganeshi, 11 I.C. 288 (All.).

A suit was brought in 1900 for account and share in a property acquired by the plaintiff and the defendant as undivided brothers in a contract business carried on by them by an implied agreement of partnership till 1894, and then continued by the defendant alone till the date of suit. Held that the suit fell under this Article and being brought more than three years after the agreement came to an end in 1894, was barred—Sudarsanam v. Narasimhulu, 25 Mad. 149. Where the manager of a joint Hindu family enters into a partnership for the family benefit with a person who is a stranger to the family, the partnership is dissolved on the death of the manager, in the absence of any agreement with the surviving members of the family, and the fact that some of the goods which were purchased during the subsistence of the partnership were sold after the dissolution, with the consent of one of the surviving members of the family, is not an indication that the partnership continued. The goods had to be sold and converted into cash after the dissolution as there was no necessity of keeping them; they merely represented the assets of the partnership—Rambhau v. Prayag Das, 20 N.L R. 49, 78 I.C. 198, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 263; Sokkanadha v. Sokkanadha, 28 Mad. 344.

Where on the division of a joint Hindu family two of the members enter into a partnership and carry on business and on the death of one of them, the members of his family and those of the other partner continue the business and after some time, the members of the deceased partner's family sue the others for dissolution and rendition of accounts, it was held that a fresh partnership came into existence after the death of one of the original partners and as such the suit was not barred by this Article—Parma Nand v. Thakur Prasad, A.I.R. 1939 All. 217, 181 I.C. 695.

Where, after a partnership has been dissolved by death of one partner, the surviving partners continue to carry on the business, as if no such dissolution has taken place, the statute of limitation is no bar to the taking of accounts of the new partnership by going into the accounts of the old partnership which have been carried on into the new partnership without interruption or settlement, and consequently a suit for an account and a share of the profits (of the old as well as the new partnership) brought within three years of the dissolution of the new partnership is in time, and is not barred by this Article by reason of the lapse of more than three years from the date of dissolution of the old partnership—Maharaj Kishen v. Hargobind, 101 P.R. 1914, 27 I.C. 69; Ahinsa Bibi v. Abdul Kader, 25 Mad. 26 (31); Harchand v. Jugal Kishore, 5 Lah.L.J. 55, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 349, 68 I.C. 722; Abdul Jaffar v. Venu Gopal, 46 M.L.J. 503, 80 I.C. 378, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 708. It should be noted that the above rule will apply only if the suit is brought by a person who was a member of both the new and the old partnerships, or by a person who is a member of the new partnership only; if the suit is brought by a person who was a partner of the old partnership business only and not a member of the new partnership, and the suit is brought for the accounts of the old partnership and is instituted more than three years after the dissolution of the old partnership, though within three years from the dissolution of the new, the suit is barred—Abdul Jaffar v. Venugopal, supra. Where a partnership is dissolved on the death of a partner and it is sought to make the sons of the partner liable for debts due from him as a member of the partnership, a suit for recovery of the debts is governed by Art. 106, and must be instituted within three years of the death of the partner—Kanhayalal v. Devidayal Brijlal, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 514. See also Nagaranjan v. Hotz, A.I.R. 1954 Punj. 278.

This Article applies to a suit for an account and a share of the profits, that is, for an unascertained share of the profits of a dissolved partnership. But where after the dissolution of a partnership, accounts were taken and scrutinized between the partners, and as a result of the scrutiny the defendant admitted in writing in the plaintiff's bahi a debit balance of Rs. 4,000 due from the defendant to the plaintiff, held that a suit for the amount did not fall under Article 106 but was a suit on an account stated under Article 64—Nand Lal v. Partap, 3 Lah. 326, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 425, 69 I.C. 502. Where the partners have settled the accounts of the partnership between themselves on a dissolution, this Article has no application as there can no longer be any question of a suit for dissolution and accounts within the meaning of this Article. This Article applies only in cases where the accounts have yet to be taken—Thirumalappa v. Ramappa, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 511, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 133.

This Article contemplates suits between partners inter se, and does not apply to an action by a partner against the sub-partner. Such a suit is governed by Art. 120—Seenayya v. Ramalingayya, 57 Mad. 347, 65 M.L.J. 789, 148 I.C. 204, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 12 (13). Article 120 is also what applies to a suit filed by a sub-partner for accounts and for recovery of his share of the amount of profits ascertained to be due—Veeraraghaviah v. Seshachalam, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 76.

Presumption of dissolution:—Where it is proved that since the establishment of the business in 1868 down to 1891, annual accounts were regularly rendered between the contending parties, and that these accounts entirely ceased in 1891 in which year a final account was made out showing a complete division of the partnership shares, it was held that the presumption was in favour of dissolution in the year 1891—Joopoody v. Pulavarti, 36 Mad. 185 (P.C.), 25 M.L.J. 128, 17 C.W.N. 1006, 19 I.C. 513.

A partnership for a fixed term becomes dissolved on the expiry of that term and a suit for accounts and share of profits of the dissolved partnership filed within three years of expiry of term is within limitation—Meera v. Yegnanarayana, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 177.

454. Suit by heir of a deceased partner:—When a member of the partnership dies, there is a dissolution of the firm, and a suit by the heir of the deceased partner against the surviving partners for an account and for the share of the deceased in the partnership assets, comes under this Article—Jatti v. Banwari Lal, 4 Lah. 350 (P.C.); Mohit v. Rajnarain, 9 C.W.N. 537; Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand, 97 P.R. 1910, 8 I.C. 999 (1008); Rambhau v. Prayag Das, 20 N.L.R. 49, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 263; Sokkhandha v. Sokkhandha, 28 Mad. 344. See also Peeran v. Pedda, A.I.R. 1958 Andhra 48. Two Muhammadan brothers S and M carried on business jointly and the property A was purchased out of the money acquired in the joint business, in the name of M. S died 18 years before this suit. On the death of S, his two sons carried on various business with M and one K and the property B was purchased out of the earnings of these businesses. K died more than three years before suit. The heirs of S now brought this suit against M for their share of the properties purchased out of the earnings of the several businesses and for their share of the monies collected therein. It was held that the suit to recover the share of the property A was barred under this Article about 15 years ago, and the claim for a share in property B was also barred, being brought more than three years after the death of K. Held also that Art. 127 did not apply because in Muhammadan Law there is no such thing as joint family property. Even if Art. 123 were to apply in respect of property A, the suit is also barred—Mohideen v. Syed Meer Saheb, 38 Mad. 1099, 32 I.C. 1002. But this Article does not apply to a suit by a legal representative of a deceased partner for accounts of the partnership business which was carried on by the surviving partners after the death of the partners. The reason is that the right of the legal representative is not a right to a share of the profits of a dissolved partnership within the meaning of this Article, but is a right accruing to him by the subsequent dealing with the assets belonging to the deceased partner—Nilmadhab v. Narmada, 45 C.W.N. 1065.

455. Suit by servant partner:—A suit by a servant remunerated by a share of the profits of the business, for an account is governed by this Article, and not by Article 120—Kalidas v. Draupadi, 22 C.W.N. 104, 43 I.C. 893. The facts of this case have been fully stated in Note 215 under sec. 22.

456. Assets realised after dissolution:—It was held by the Bombay and Madras High Courts that where after the dissolution of a partnership, a partner realised some assets, a suit by the other partner (or his representative) for recovery of his share in those assets was governed by Art. 62, and was maintainable if brought within 3 years of the date of the realisation, though a suit for a general account in respect of the partnership business might be then barred under this Article—Merwanji v. Rustomji, 6 Bom. 628 (635); Sokkanadha v. Sokkanadha, 28 Mad. 344; Rivet-Carnac v. Goculdas, 20 Bom. 15. But this view has not been accepted by the Punjab Chief Court in Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand, 97 P.R. 1910, 8 I.C. 999 (1013, 1014), where it has been held that if a suit relating to the general account of a partnership business is barred by Article 106, it is equally barred in respect of the assets of the business realised after dissolution. And this view of the Punjab Chief Court has been confirmed by the Privy Council in Gopala Chetty v. Vijayaraghavachariar, 45 Mad. 378 (P.C), 43 M.L.J. 305, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 115, 74 I.C. 621 (approving 97 P.R. 1910, and disapproving the Bombay and Madras cases cited above).

457. Registered deed of partnership:—Even though the instrument of partnership is registered, a suit for accounts and profits of a partnership would be governed by this Article and not by Article 116, because the latter Article is restricted to suits for 'compensation', and a suit for taking accounts of a partnership cannot be deemed to be a suit for compensation for breach of contract—Kothandapani v.

Sreemanavedan, 57 Mad. 378, 66 M.L.J. 625, 151 I.C. 81, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 162; Viravan v. Ponnayya, 22 Mad. 14.

458. Starting point of limitation:—In a partnership agreement it was stated that the partnership was to continue up to a certain date, but prior to that date the partnership was dissolved; it was held that limitation ran from the actual date of dissolution, and not from the date mentioned in the agreement—Sooleman v. Bhagwandas, 34 Bom. 515 (516). Where a partnership business began to fail in 1906, and was closed in 1909 and the only work done subsequently consisted in realising the assets, paying debts due to creditors, and recovering rents from tenants of immoveable property belonging to the partnership, the business was held to have been dissolved in 1909, and a suit for rendition of accounts, brought in 1913 was barred—Amirchand v. Jawahir, 49 P.W.R. 1916, 32 I.C. 853. For a suit for dissolution and account of a partnership formed for running a chit fund with the partnership as stake holder time will not begin to run until all the assets of the partnership are realised and the liabilities paid, when alone the partnership business can be said to come to an end—Samuel v. Thangayya, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 490, 1941 M.W.N. 1045, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 104.

107. By the manager of a joint estate of an undivided family for contribution, in respect of a payment made by him on account of the estate.	Three years.	The date of the payment.

459. Where money is borrowed by the manager of a joint Hindu family on his personal security for purposes of necessity, his right to contribution arises from the date when he expends the money. The period of limitation in respect of his suit for contribution runs from that date and not from the date on which he repays the loan to the person from whom he had borrowed and releases his security—Aghore Nath v. Grish Chunder, 20 Cal. 18 (21). Where the manager borrowed money and applied it for the purposes of the family and subsequently borrowed money to pay off the former loan, and then paid off the second loan from his private funds, limitation ran from the date on which he expended the first loan for family purposes and not from the date on which he borrowed money for the second time to pay off the first loan—Ram Kristo v. Muddun Gopal, 12 W.R. 194. Where a manager borrowed money and spent it for family purposes and then executed a fresh bond in favour of the lender for the amount originally borrowed, the period of limitation for his suit against the other members for contribution ran from the date on which he expended the money on behalf of the family, and not from the date on which he gave the fresh bond—Sunkur v. Gourey, 5 Cal. 321.

It should be noted that in 20 Cal. 18 the money was borrowed by the manager not as manager, but on his personal security, and consequently the debt was conidered to be the personal debt of the manager, though the money was spent for family purposes. In the judgment no Article of the Limitation Act has been mentioned, but it is clear that Art. 107 was not applied, for if this Article were applied, time would have run from the date when the manager repaid the loan, for it is that date which is the "date of payment" under column 3 of this Article. The two other cases (12 W.R. 194 and 5 Cal. 321) which were followed in 20 Cal. 18 were decided under the old Limitation Acts of 1859 and 1871, which contained no provision exactly corresponding to Art. 107.

Plaintiff and his three brothers who formed a joint family were indebted to a certain person. The creditor filed a suit against the plaintiff and another brother in 1913. Subsequently the family separated and later the execution was taken by the decree-holder against the plaintiff, and the latter executed a mortgage in favour of the decree-holder on 4th June 1924 in lieu of the decretal amount. Plaintiff instituted a suit for contribution against the other members of the family on 4th June 1927. It was held that Article 107 was not applicable, because when the plaintiff executed the mortgage by taking upon himself the sole responsibility for the debt (which was tantamount to "payment on account of the estate") the family was no longer undivided and he was no longer the "manager of a joint estate" within the meaning of this Article. The appropriate Article was Art. 99, and the suit was just in time—Sat Rohan v. Bharath, 1931 A.L.J. 651, 134 I.C. 452, A.I.R. 1931 All. 652 (653). Where a manager sues for partition after his right to contribution in respect of certain moneys expended by him on account of the estate is barred by limitation under this Article he is not entitled to set off the amount in adjustment of equities between the parties—Subramanian v. Kumarappa, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 144.

108. By a lessor for the value of trees cut down by his lessee contrary to the terms of the lease.	Three years.	When the trees are cut down.

460. This Article applies only when a suit is brought by the landlord to recover the value of trees cut down by the tenants; it does not apply where the landlord claims by way of set-off that in taking accounts as between himself and the tenants the value of trees cut down should be debited against the tenants who claim credit for the value of improvements made by them—Pumpalia v. Kunhamma, 27 M.L.J. 266, 25 I.C. 794.

109. For the profits of immoveable property belonging to the plaintiff which have been wrongfully received by the defendant.	Three years.	When the profits are received.

461. "Received":—The word 'received' means 'actually received'; the liability of the defendant is for the profits which he has actually received; consequently, if he had been out of possession for any part of time during the period of his wrongful possession, no profit can be recovered from him for that time—Abbas v. Fassihuddin, 24 Cal. 413. If the defendant has not received any profits at all, the plaintiff cannot claim anything by way of mesne profits under this Article, but can claim damages for trespass and his suit will fall under Article 39—Ramasami v. *Authi Lakshmi Amma*l, 34 Mad. 502. In 24 Cal. 413 the Judge made a passing observation that the plaintiff can claim mesne profits to the extent of what the defendant might have received with ordinary diligence during the period of his possession. This observation was unnecessary for the decision of the case. But it is true in one sense, viz., that the amount of damages will be measured by the amount of profits which the defendant might with due diligence have received [See section 2 (12) of C. P. Code, 1908]. But the claim is still one for damages and not for mesne profits. See 34 Mad. 502 at p. 504.

The plaintiff is entitled to recover only the profits which have been received by the defendant during three years previous to suit. Thus, if the defendant had been in possession from 18th May 1900 to 11th September 1901, and the suit is instituted on the 6th April 1904, the plaintiff will be entitled to recover the profits received by the defendant from 6th April 1901 to 11th September 1901; the claim for profits received by the defendant from 18th May 1900 to 5th April 1901 will be barred—Peary Mohan v. Khelaram, 35 Cal. 996; Hays v. Padmanand, 32 Cal. 118; Kishnanand v. Partab, 10 Cal..785 (P.C.).

The plaintiff is entitled to recover the rents and profits actually received by the defendant during the three years before suit without reference to the time when the rents fall due. It is the actual receipt of rents, whenever they may have fallen due, which creates the liability—Abbas v. Fassihuddin, 24 Cal. 423. Thus, in a suit instituted by the plaintiff on the 1st day of 1301 B.S. he would be entitled to claim the mesne profits actually received by the defendant during the years 1298—1300 B.S. The fact that the rent for the year 1297 would fall due on the 1st day of 1298 would not entitle the plaintiff to claim it, unless it was actually received by the defendant during 1298—1300 B.S.

462. "Wrongfully":—This Article is applicable only to cases where the profits have been wrongfully received by the defendant; but so long as the defendant remains in possession by virtue of a decree of the Court, the receipt of profits during that period cannot be said to be wrongful, even though the decree is afterwards set aside; therefore a suit for profits received by the defendant during that period is governed not by this Article but by Art. 120—Holloway v. Ghuneshwar, 3 C.L.J. 182. This decision has subsequently been overruled by the Privy Council in Feroz Shah v. Akbar Khan. 43 C.W.N. 897, 41 Bom. L.R. 1071, A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 178, where it has been held that this Article applies to a suit for mesne profits, even when possession was obtained and held through a receiver appointed by a Court in execution, it having been subsequently held in a suit by the plaintiff that he was entitled to possession. (Saroj v. Premchand, 22 C.W.N. 263 approved). A suit by a mortgagor, after the mortgage has been satisfied, to recover the surplus collections realised by the mortgagee in possession, is not a suit governed by this Article, because it cannot be said that the mortgagee has wrongfully received those profits. The suit falls under Article 105 which expressly provides for such a case—Bikramjit v. Raj Raghubar, 20 O.C. 25, 38 I.C. 610; Md. Faiyaz Ali v. Kallu Singh, 33 All. 244 (248).

The receipts of rents and profits by one of several tenants-in-common on behalf of all cannot be said to be wrongful. It is one of the ordinary modes of common enjoyment of property—Yerukola v. Yerukola, 45 Mad. 648 (667) (F.B.), 42 M.L.J. 507, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 150; V. Sundararaja v. Raghava, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 654. So, this Article does not apply to an action for claim of profits of immoveable property against a person who is in possession of the property as co-heir—U. Aung v. Daw Mya, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 416, 178 I.C. 475; Daw Ein v. Daw Chan, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 365, 186 I.C. 210, 1940 Rang. L.R. 136.

This Article does not apply to a suit for recovery of profits of property entrusted to the defendant by the plaintiff for safe custody and management as the defendant was in rightful possession and received the profits rightfully but it is his retention that was wrongful—Shri Mahadeoji v. Baldeo, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 92. 1941 N.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 181.

This Article is inapplicable to a suit by a person who is ultimately found to be entitled to the estate to recover the rents and profits received by a person recognised by the collector under sec. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act as a "landlord" during the pendency of the ultimate decision by the Civil Court of a litigation respecting the estate—Suryaprakasa v. Maharaja of Pithapuram, 75 I.A. 101, I.L.R. (1949) Mad. 1, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 52, A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 175 (Suryaprakasa v. Maharaja of Pithapuram, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 562, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 472, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 487 overruled).

A suit was instituted by the owner of a patni for recovery of mesne profits against the defendant who had purchased the patni at a sale under Reg. VIII of 1819 and had been in possession under the purchase which was subsequently set aside. It was held that the defendant wrongfully received the profits which were receivable by the plaintiff but for the illegal patni sale, and that Article 109 governed the case and not Art. 120—Peary Mohan v. Kheldram, 35 Cal. 996 (998), 13 C.W.N. 15. When an execution sale is set aside even though the purchasers had entered into possession by virtue of a court sale the profits received by them would be "wrongfully received" by them within the meaning of this Article and the suit in respect of it would be governed by this Article—Ramcharan v. Bansidhar, I.L.R. (1942) All. 671, 1942 A.L.J. 411, A.I.R. 1942 All. 358, 203 I.C. 223. Crops raised by the tenant and standing on the tenure at the time of his ejectment belong to the tenant and not to the landlord; if the landlord after ejecting the tenant cuts and carries them away, his act is wrongful, and a suit by the tenant, after the decree of ejectment is reversed and he recovers possession, for the value of the crops falls under this Article —Surnomoyee v. Pattarri, 4 Cal. 625 (627, 628).

Where an alienation of immoveable property made by an insolvent is nominal and fictitious, the transferee holds the property as a constructive trustee for the insolvent. The transferee, thus being in possession of the property with the consent of the insolvent, cannot be said to have received the profits thereof wrongfully. This Article has no application to an application made by the receiver in insolvency to recover mesne profits received by the transferee—Raoji Bapuchand v. Bavachekar, 52 Bom.L.R. 606, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 399.

Where the reversioner's suit for recovery of property in the possession of a transferee of a Hindu widow was decreed in part, a subsequent suit for mesne profits against the transferee is governed by Art. 109 and not Art. 120—Bharat Singh v. Gur Prasad, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 515, 1935 O.W.N. 985, 157 I.C. 960.

After a mortgage decree has been obtained by the mortgagee, the mortgagor granted a usufructuary mortgage in favour of one A. A entered into possession of the property under it, and realised rents from certain tenants of the property. The plaintiff purchased the property at a sale in execution of the mortgage decree mentioned above, and after obtaining possession of the property through the Court from A, brought a suit against him for recovery of the rents and profits realised by him from the tenants of the property. Held that as the unfructuary mortgage in favour of A was pendente lite, it was invalid against the plaintiff, and the rents were wrongfully collected by A. The suit was therefore governed by this Article. The period of limatation would run from the date when the profits were received—Nagendra v. Sarat Kamini, 26 C.W.N. 386, 66 I.C. 873, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 235; Sarat Kamini v. Nagendra 29 C.W.N. 973, 89 I.C. 1000, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 65. In the latter case it was held that the period during which an application by the judgment debtor to set aside the execution sale was pending should not be excluded, because the plaintiff might have instituted the suit during that period, and although he could not have obtained a decree without the sale certificate, the absence of the sale-certificate would not have been a reason for dismissing his suit.

Certain mortgagees brought a suit for sale against the original mortgagor and against one S, an ostensible transferee of the property, and having obtained a decree against S, put to sale his right, title and interest and themselves purchased it, and obtained possession in 1900. Thereupon S instituted a suit in 1911 to recover possession, and in 1920 obtained a decree from the High Court for possession. In 1922 he instituted the present suit for recovery of mense profits from 1911 and, in answer to the defendant's plea of limitation, contended (1) that the period of limitation was suspended during the time when the previous litigation was pending, and (2) that a fresh cause of action arose after the passing of the High Court's decree. Held that the suit was barred, as the period of limitation ran from the date when the profits were received, and was not suspended, sec. 9 being imperative on this point; and that the decision of the High Court in the previous case did not give a fresh cause of action. The plaintiff ought to have instituted the suit for mesne profits before the time expired, and allowed it to be stayed pending the disposal of the former litigation—Ram Charan v. Gopa, 49 All. 565, 25 A.L.J. 425, 102 I.C. 96, A.I.R. 1927 All. 446; Ubaidullah v. Abdul Jalil, AI.R. 1937 All. 481.

463. Suit by usufructuary mortgagee:—Where under a mortgage the mortgagee is entitled to enter into possession of the mortgaged property and to receive the rents and profits, the appropriate suit by a mortgagee who has been wrongfully dispossessed by the mortgagor is a suit for possession and mesne profits; the suit for possession is governed by Art. 142, and for the latter remedy by this Article because the property 'belongs' to the mortgagee for the period of mortgage—Ram Sarup v. Harpal, 39 All. 200; Govindrao v. Jiwanji, 2 Bom.L.R. 201. In 39 All 200, Walsh, J. however held that the claim for mesne profits could be justified as money had and received under Article 62. But in another Allahabad case, where a usufructuary mortgagee, who never obtained possession of the mortgaged property, brought a suit for possession within six years from the date on which he ought to have obtained possession, and in that suit claimed profits for the entire period of six years, it was held that the mortgagee was entitled to the profits for six years, as the mortgagor's failure to give possession was a breach of registered contract under Art. 116 and that Article 109 did not apply—Nirbhai Sinha v. Tulsi, 31 I.C. 894 (All.). Where a mortgagor covenants to deliver possession to the mortgagee before a certain date and to pay rent at a certain rate till then and fails to do so and the mortgagee sues for possession and compensation, the suit is governed by Article 116 and not by this Article and it will be in time if brought within 6 years from the date fixed for delivering possession, when the breach occurs—Daulat v. Raghbir, 6 Luck. 203, 1940 O.W.N. 875, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 1, 190 I.C. 721.

464. Starting point of limitation:—Under Art. 109 the starting point of limitation is the date from when the profits are received—Ma Pwa Thein v. Ma Me Tha, A.I.R. 1936 Rang 80, 161 I.C. 461; Ubaidulla v. Abdul Jalil, A.I.R. 1937 All. 481; and not from the date when the cause of action to recover those profit arises—Dullababhai v. Gulabbhai, I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 107, 40 Bom.L.R. 100, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 158.

110. For arrears of rent.	Three years.	When the arrears become due.

465. Rent:—This Article applies only to a suit for rent, i.e., money payable by a tenant to a landlord under a contract (express or implied) between them. It does not apply to a suit for compensation against the defendant for use and occupation of the plaintiff's premises, where the relationship of landlord and tenant does not exist between the parties. Such a suit is governed by Article 120—Madar v. Kader Mohideen, 39 Mad. 54; Robert Watson v. Ram Chand, 23 Cal. 799. So also this Article does not apply to a suit for damages for use and occupation against a tenant continuing in possession without landlord's consent—Partap v. Ramdhan, A.I.R. 1946 All 447, 224 I.C. 201. But where a tenancy by sufferance after the termination of an agricultural lease is converted into a tenancy of holding over by receipt of rents for faslis subsequent to the termination of the lease, the possession of the person holding over is that of a tenant and this Article applies to a claim against him for the period of holding over as the claim is on the basis of rent—Viswanatham v. Balerami, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 542, 1948 M.W.N. 761, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 421. A suit by an inamdar for arrears of 'assessment' against a person who was not let into possession of the holding under any agreement of tenancy but who held lands in the village is a suit for land revenue and not a suit for arrears of 'rent', (because the relation between the plaintiff and the defendant is not that of landlord and tenant, but that of superior holder and inferior holder) and is not governed by this Article but by Art. 120—Sadashiv v. Ram Krishna, 25 Bom. 556 (558). This Article does not apply where the Government has assigned a right to receive assessment and the assignee sues for it—Kasturi v. Anantaram, 26 Mad. 730.

Where rent is assigned by the landlord to a third party, it does not lose its character as such, and a suit by the assignee to recover rent falls under this Article—Siris Chandra v. Nasim Quazi, 27 Cal. 827 (F.B.), 4 C.W.N. 357; Sheikh Munsar v. Loke Nath, 4 C.W.N. 10; Gajadhar v. Thakur Prasad, 1 P.L.J. 506, 38 I.C. 102.

A suit to recover meras or customary dues to a chatram claimed by the plaintiff not as 'rent' due to landlord but as money recoverable by custom, does not fall under this Article but under Art. 120—Venkataraghava v. District Board, 16 Mad. 305.

Royalty payable in respect of a coal mine cannot be treated on the same footing as rent, because the amount can not be possibly ascertained until the raisings of the coal have been weighed and checked, etc.—Byomkesh v. Madabhabji, 21 Pat.L.T. 442, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 609, 188 I.C. 411.

Arrears of cess are recoverable as arrears of rent (sec. 47, Bengal Cess Act, IX of 1880); and the rule of limitation of this Article applies—Bhuneshwari v. Gopal, 8 Pat. 358, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 331 (332), 118 I.C. 733. Road Cess payable to the landlord by the tenant is regarded as 'rent'—Nabin v. Bansinath, 21 Cal. 722. Where dak-cess is claimed under the contract by which rent is payable, it must be regarded as part of the rent—Watson v. Sree Kristo, 21 Cal. 132. Chaukiddry Tax is rent, when such tax is legally recoverable—Assanulla v. Tirthabasini, 22 Cal. 680.

A suit by the Zamindar to recover jodi and road-cess from the defendant who held the land on service inam under him subject to payment of jodi as well, is a suit under this Article, as jodi is favourable rent—Sambasadasiva v. Maddulappa, 74 I.C. 968, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 73, 1923 M.W.N. 524.

Fee charged by the Municipality for issuing a permission for use of Municipal land under the provisions of sec. 90, Bombay Act 18 of 1925, is not rent within the meaning of Art. 110, and a suit for recovery of such fee is not governed by Art. 110, but by Art. 120—Masand Motiram v. Shikarpur Municipality, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 184, 30 S.L.R. 146, 165 I.C. 369.

Money due on settlement by auction of date and toddy palm trees under which the settlement-holder obtains the right to collect the juice of the trees for the season, does not amount to rent, and a suit to realize such money is governed by Art. 110—Rameshwar Singh v. Mahabir Pasi, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 403, 15 Pat. 626, 17 P.L.T. 363.

Claim for damages for use and occupation from the date of revenue sale to the date of annulment of undertenure by the revenue sale purchaser under sec. 37 of Bengal Act XI of 1859 is not a claim "for arrears of rent" within the meaning of this Article—Bibhuti v. Promoda, 43 C.W.N. 469, 69 C.L.J. 220, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 468.

Where a liability arises under a statute, apart from any contract between the parties, this Article has no application. Thus the liability of a buyer for reasonable charges for care and custody of the goods arises under sec. 44, Sale of Goods Act and as such does not attract the operation of this Article—Kamruddin v Anjangaon Municipality, 1950 N.L.J. 363, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 148.

466. When the arrears become due:—When a lease provides that the rent should be paid in four instalments on four specific days in the year, the period of limitation begins to run from the date on which each instalment falls due, and not from the last day of the agricultural year—Gajadhar v. Thakur Prasad, 1 P.L.J. 506, 38 I.C. 102.

The rent becomes due not always necessarily on the close of the period in respect of which it is to be paid. It may be due on a different time according to legislation or custom or express contract or the special circumstances of the case. Thus, if before the institution of a suit for rent, it is necessary for the landlord to take proceeding under the Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865) to enforce acceptance of the pattah and to have the proper rate of rent ascertained, the period of limitation for a suit for arrears of rent runs from the date of the final decree determining the rent, and not from the close of the year for which the rent is payable, because no rent can be said to be 'due' under this Article until the rate has been finally ascertained by the decree of the Civil Court. The word "rent" means ascertained rent—Rangayya v. Bobba Sriramulu, 27 Mad. 143 (150, 151) (P.C.); Syed Ghulam v. Shunmugam, 34 Mad. 438 (441).

The condition of tendering a patta which was necessary before the institution of a suit under the Madras Rent Recovery Act, 1865, has now been dispensed with by the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908). Under this Act, the landlord is entitled to maintain a suit for rent without tendering a patta. The limitation for a suit for rent is three years from the time when it accrues due, and it accrues due when it is payable according to the contract between the parties or according to usage—Satrucherla Veerabhadra v. Ganta Kumari, 22 M.L.J. 451, 15 I.C. 393; Kanthimathi v. Muthusamia, 37 Mad. 540 (543).

In 27 Mad. 143, cited above, the Privy Council have pointed out that legislation, custom or express contract or the special circumstances of any case may make rent become due at a point of time different from the close of the period in respect of which it is to be paid, and that in India, by custom of the country, agricultural rents are often payable before the close of the fasli year. Thus, where according to custom, the melveram is due immediately after the harvest is gathered when the share of the landlord is divided from the tenants' share, that is, where the rent is ascertained and is payable on some date before the close of the fasli year, the period of limitation does not run from the close of the fasli year, but runs when the rent is ascertained as soon as the harvest is reaped. Nor does the period of limitation in such a case run from the tender of the patta, because here there is no dispute as to the amount of rent payable and consequently the tender of the patta is not necessary for the ascertainment of rent, but merely a condition precedent to the institution of the suit for arrears of rent under the Rent Recovery Act—Arunachellam v. Kadir Rowthen, 29 Mad. 556 (557), distinguishing Rangayya v. Bobba Sriramulu, 27 Mad. 143 (P.C.).

Where it is necessary that the amount of rent should be fixed by the Deputy Commissioner under sec. 65 (4) (d) of the C. P. Land Revenue Act, no arrears of rent become due until the amount has been finally determined by proper proceedings between the parties. Limitation runs from the date on which the rent is thus finally determined and not from the close of the year for which it is payable—Ragunath v. Sarva, 7 N.L.R. 169, 12 I.C. 804.

A temple was the owner of the melvaram in certain lands, and a mutt was the owner of the kudivaram therein, liable to pay the melvaram to the temple. The defendant was both the head of the mutt and the trustee of the temple, until he was removed from the trusteeship by the Court which appointed the plaintiff as the receiver. The receiver sued to recover from the defendant as the head of the mutt the arrears of melvaram due to the temple, that had accrued during the defendant's trusteeship. The defendant pleaded limitation. Held that so long as the defendant was both head of the mutt and the trustee of the temple (i.e., so long as the same person was the landlord and the tenant) there was none to sue for rent; consequently limitation did not run, and no arrears became due during that period; and the arrears became due within the meaning of this Article only when there was some one to whom they were payable, i.e., when a different person (the plaintiff) was appointed as the receiver of the temple—Annamalai v. Govinda Rao, 46 Mad. 579 (582), 44 M.L.J. 318, 72 I.C. 5, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 461.

A suit for recovery of the arrears of rent for which the patni was sold brought within three years from the date when the patni sale was set aside and the patnidar was restored to possession is within time under this Article. The reason is that the amount of rent does not accrue in such a case until the sale of the patni is set aside and until that time the statute does not run—Official Trustee v. Bijoy Chand, I.L.R. (1941) 1 Cal. 335, 45 C.W.N. 787, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 222, 199 I.C. 788.

467. Registered kabuliat:—A suit to recover arrears of rent due under a registered agreement has been held by the Calcutta, Bombay, Madras and Patna High Courts to be governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 110—Umesh v. Adarmani, 15 Cal. 221; Ambalavana v. Vaguran, 19 Mad. 52; Vythilinga v. Thetchanamurti, 3 Mad. 76; Mackenzie v. Rameshwar, 1 P.L.J. 37. 34 I.C. 754; Ramanandhan v. Achuta, 23 I.C. 753; Lalchand v. Narayan, 37 Bom. 656. The Allahabad High Court held such a suit to be governed by Art. 110—Jaggilal v. Sriram, 34 All. 464 (465), 16 I.C. 146; Ram Narain v. Kamta, 26 All. 138; but the Allahabad rulings must now be deemed to have been overruled by the Privy Council in Tricomdas v. Gopinath, 44 Cal. 759 (P.C.), 25 C.L.J. 279 which has now definitely settled the question by holding that in case of a registered lease, the limitation for a suit for rent is six years under Article 116. In this case the Judicial Committee have made this important observation that if a contract is contained in a registered instrument, Art. 116 will apply, inspite of the fact that a special provision has been made in some other Article in respect of a similar instrument not registered. The view expressed in this case was recently re-affirmed by the Judicial Committee in Ariadne v. Eftichia, (1958) 3 W.L.R. 265, a case from Tanganyika where this Act applies. A suit for recovery of arrears of rent against the assignee of a registered lease is governed by Article 116 and not by this Article. The reason is that though the assignee's liability to pay rent to the lessor arises out of the privity of estate, it is really based on the covenant to pay rent contained in the original registered lease which in law runs with the land and the suit for rent is in substance on the basis of such covenant—Dwijendra v. Promode, 54 C.W.N. 671, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 251,

A suit to recover royalty, if it is based on a registered kabuliyat, would be governed by Article 116 and not by Article 110—Tricomdas v. Gopinath Jiu, 44 Cal. 759 (P.C.); Peary Lal v. Madhoji, 17 C.L.J. 372, 19 I.C. 865.

468. Rent suit under Bengal Tenancy Act:—A rent suit brought under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) is always governed by the three years' rule of limitation according to Sch. III of that Act, whether the kabuliyat be registered or not; the Limitation Act will not apply to such a suit—Iswari v. Crowdy, 17 Cal. 469; Mackenzie v. Haji Syed, 19 Cal. 1 (F.B.); Kali Charan v. Harendra, 4 C.L.J. 553. In a suit for recovery of arrears of putni rent, the relevant provisions for determining the period of limitation are those to be found in Art. 2, Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act; the provisions of this Article do not apply—Uday Chand v. Dibakar, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 134. The decision in Official Trustee v. Bijoy Chand, I.L.R. (1941) 2 Cal. 335, 45 C.W.N. 787, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 222 was distinguished on the ground that there the question was decided whether Art. 110 or Art. 115 was applicable to a suit for arrears of rent for which the patni was sold on the sale being set aside and the patnidar being restored to possession.

A lease for building purposes and for establishing a coal depot or for establishing a godown, and not for agricultural or horticultural purposes, does not come under the Bengal Tenancy Act, and a suit for rent based upon such a lease, if registered, will be governed by Art. 116 of the Limitation Act—Raniganj Coal Association v. Jadoonath, 19 Cal. 489; Umrao v. Mahomed, 27 Cal. 205, Ahmed v. Bipin, 11 I.C. 6.

Where rent is assigned by the landlord to a third party, Art. 110 of the Limitation Act, and not Art. 2, Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, is applicable to a suit brought by the assignee for the arrears of rent—Mahendra v. Kailash, 4 C.W.N. 605; Ahmedulla v. Kaminudin, 2 I.C. 989; Gajadhar v. Thakur Pershad, 1 P.L.J. 506, 38 I.C. 102; Hayat Majid v. Hajari Lal, 63 I.C. 524 (Pat.).

111. By a vendor of immoveable property for personal payment of unpaid purchase-money.	Three years.	The time fixed for completing the sale, or (where the title is accepted after the time fixed for completion) the date of the acceptance.

469. The first column of this Article in the Act of 1877 ran thus: "By a vendor of immoveable property to enforce his lien for unpaid purchase money."

But it was held by the High Courts of Bombay, Madras and Allahabad that a suit by the vendor to enforce his lien or charge on the property for his unpaid purchase-money fell under Article 132, and not Art. 111—Virchand v. Kumaji, 18 Bom. 48; Chunilal v. Bai Jethi, 22 Bom. 846; Har Lal v. Muhamdi, 21 All. 454; Munirunnissa v. Akbar, 30 All. 172 (174); Rama Krishna v. Subramania, 29 Mad. 305 (F.B.) (overruling Natesan v. Soundararaja, 21 Mad. 141, Subramania v. Poovan, 27 Mad. 28 and Avuthala v. Dayumma, 24 Mad. 233). In the light of these decisions the Article has been changed into its present form, and it is now applicable only to suits in which the vendor claims to recover the money from the vendee personally.

If the personal remedy is barred under this Article, the vendor is still entitled to enforce his charge within 12 years under Article 132—Bashir Ahmed v. Nazir Ahmed, 43 All. 544 (545); Meghraj v. Abdullah, 12 A.L.J. 1034, 25 I. C. 208.

If the sale-deed is registered, a suit for recovery of unpaid purchase-money would fall under Article 116 by force of the Privy Council decision in Tricomdas v. Gopinath, (44 Cal. 759)—Ram Raghubir v. United Refineries Ld., 9 Rang. 56, 134 I.C. 737, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 139 (144). Hence it follows that this Article is limited to cases where the immoveable property is of value less than Rs. 100, and there is no registered deed of sale. In all cases where there has been either a claim for compensation under a contract in writing registered or a claim to enforce payment of sums of money payable under a contract in writing registered, Art. 116 has always been held to apply. But where the action is not one for compensation for the breach of contract in writing registered but one for enforcing a statutory obligation Art. 111, and not Art. 116, is applicable—Ramparikha Pandey v. Mt. Ramjhari, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 44.

Where the purchaser undertook to pay, out of the consideration-money, a debt due by the vendor to certain persons, but the purchaser not having made that payment, the vendor himself had to pay his creditors, and then he sued, to recover the money from the phrchaser, held that the suit was governed by Art. 116 (the sale-deed being registered) and not by Art. 111. Art. 116 applies to all suits for recovery of money under a registered contract, although a special provision may have been made in some other Article in respect of a contract not registered—Ram Rachhya v. Raghunath, 8 Pat. 860, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 46 (49), 122 I.C. 244 (following Tricomdas v. Gopinath, 44 Cal. 759, P.C.); Abdul Qadir v. Bilas Kaur, 14 Lah. 646, 34 P.L.R. 734, 144 I.C. 362, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 793; see also Gulzari Mal v. Maghi Mal, 14 Lah. 380, 141 I.C. 435, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 109 (111); Navamaninadar v. Vedamanicka, 56 Mad. 724, 144 I.C. 550, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 424; Makund Lal v. Bhola, 1931 A.L.J. 985, 131 I.C. 686, A.I.R. 1931 All. 419; Brahamdeo v. Jaikishun, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 452, 193 I.C. 172.

An unusual case recently cropped up before the Lahore High Court in which the applicability of this Article was in question. The plaintiff, acting as guardian of two minor girls sold a certain property, and it was stipulated that the purchase-money should remain with the vendee to be paid to the minors on their attaining majority. One of the girls, while still a minor, married, and by the customary law of the family she lost her right in the money, so that her younger sister became entitled to the whole of the purchase-money. Afterwards she died; and the plaintiff as reversioner became entitled to the whole of the purchase-money and sued to recover it from the vendee. Held that Art. 111 did not apply as the plaintiff was not the vendor of the property but had acted merely as the guardian of the minors. Having regard to the nature of the transaction and the facts of the case, the only Article that could be applied was Art. 120, and time ran from the date of death of the younger girl—Gulub v. Sarwan Jan, 15 Lah. 35, 35 P.L.R. 161, 147 I.C. 269, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 860 (861).

112. For a call by a company registered under any Statute or Act.	Three years.	When the call is payable.

470. A suit for recovery of unpaid calls, brought, not by the company, but by the official liquidator, after the winding up of the company, is not governed by this Article but by Art. 120—Parell Spinning and Weaving Company v. Maneck Haji, 10 Bom. 483; see also Karam Chand v. Jullundur Bank Ld., 29 P.L.R. 64, 9 Lah.L.J. 293, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 543, 102 I.C. 705, where such suit was held to be governed by Article 112 or 120. But a contrary view has been taken in Mohd. Akbar v. Associated Banking Corporation of India, 52 Bom.L.R. 559, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 386 where it has been held that a suit to recover call money by a company is governed by this Article and not by Art. 120 even if winding up supervenes. It has been held that the decision reported in 10 Bom. 483, supra has been held overruled by the Privy Council in Hansraj v. Dehra Dun M.E. T. Co., 35 Bom.L.R. 319, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 63. If the shares of the shareholder have been forfeited, a suit by the official liquidator, after the winding up of the company, is governed by Article 115, and time runs from the date of forfeiture of the shares—Maneklal v. Suryapur Mills Co., Ld., 52 Bom. 477, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 252 (255); Bishambar v. Agra Electric Stores Ld. 54 All. 541, 1932 A.I.J. 354, 140 I.C. 502, A.I.R. 1932 All 342 (343).

When a suit to recover the call money has become barred by time under this Article, the fact that simply because the defaulter's name is kept in the register as a share-holder and the share is forfeited only subsequently does not revive the debt, and the company cannot claim that limitation should run from the date of forfeiture —Shri Mahalakshmi Sugar Corpn. v. Jasjit Singh, 10 O.W.N. 447, 146 I.C. 825, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 285 (287); distinguishing 52 Bom. 477. A clause in the Articles of Association of a company provided: "Any member whose shares have been forfeited shall notwithstanding be liable to pay and shall forthwith pay to the company all calls owing at the time of the forfeiture. ....and the directors may enforce the payment thereof as they think fit." The defendant, a shareholder not having paid calls, his shares were forfeited, and the company filed a suit to recover the calls according to the above clause. Held that there was a special contract whereby the defendant agreed that in the event of his shares being forfeited he would be liable to pay to the company all the moneys that were due from him for calls, and the cause of action arose when the company forfeited the shares; therefore the present suit to recover what was due from the defendant on his shares was within time, if brought within three years of the date of forfeiture, that being the date on which the calls were payable within the meaning of this Article—Habib Rawji v. Aluminium & Brass Works Ld., 49 Bom. 715, 27 Bom. L.R. 574, 88 I.C. 96, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 321. Where the articles of association of a company provide that a person shall continue to be liable for the unpaid balance of share money though his share is forfeited, the result is that the share-holder on forfeiture ceases to be a member of the company, and all that is left is the new liability to pay all monies which at the date of the forfeiture were payable by him to the company in respect of his shares. Hence the starting point of limitation for a suit to recover such unpaid balance of share money is the date of forfeiture and not the date of the allotment of shares—Mudholkar v. Malak, 1940 N.L.J. 300, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 235, 190 I.C. 639.

Even though the calls have become barred by reason of the company not having sued to realise them within the period prescribed by this Article, a suit by the official liquidator for recovery of the calls is not barred, if brought within the period prescribed by Article 120—Prayan Prasad v. Gaya Bank and Trades Association, 10 Pat. 249, 12 P.L.T. 215, 130 I.C. 534, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 44 (48).

113. For specific performance of a contract.	Three years.	The date fixed for the performance, or, if no such date is fixed, when the plaintiff has notice that performance is refused.

471. Suit based on award:—An award is not a contract. No doubt an award springs out of an agreement to submit to arbitration (and there may also be an implied agreement to abide by the decision of the arbitrators) but the award itself is a decision and not a contract. Therefore a suit for possession of land based on an award of arbitrators cannot be regarded as a suit for the specific performance of a contract, and Article 113 cannot apply to such a case. The suit falls under Art. 144—Sarnavalli v. Muthayya 23 Mad. 593 (596); Sheo Narain v. Beni Madho, 23 All. 285 (287); Bhajahari v. Behary Lal, 33 Cal. 881 (883, 885). Where an award declares that A is to retain possession of certain property as security for the sum of Rs. 150 and that the other co-sharers of A are entitled to recover this property on payment of the sum of Rs. 150 to A, a possessory charge is created in favour of A by the award, and a suit to enforce the charge is governed by the 12 years' rule of limitation, and not by Article 113 as the award is not a contract—Surat Singh v. Umrao, 20 A.L.J. 611, A.I.R. 1922 All. 410, 77 I.C. 113.

As an award is not a contract, a suit for recovery of a certain sum of money based on an award which decides the plaintiff's title to the money is not a suit for specific performance of a contract under Art. 113, but is governed by Article 120—Kuldip v. Mahan Dube, 34 All. 43 (48), 8 A.L.J. 1138, 11 I.C. 705 (doubting Sukho Bibi v. Ram Sukh, 5 All. 263, and Raghubar v. Madan, 16 All. 3); Radha Kishen v. Delhi Cloth Mills, 32 P.R. 1931, 16 I.C. 804; Rajmal v. Maruti, 45 Bom. 329 (335, 336), A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 389, 59 I.C. 755; Sornavalli v. Muthayya, 23 Mad. 593; Bhajahari v. Behary, 33 Cal 881; Somasundaram v. Rangasami, 31 I.C. 816. A suit to recover damages, on the basis of the award, would not come under Article 115, nor under Article 113. The proper Article is Art. 120—Khubchand v. Jethanand, 23 S.L.R. 417, A.I.R. 1929 Sind 168 (169), 117 I.C. 153. A suit to recover money payable under an award cannot be properly called a suit for specific performance of the award (just as a suit on a bond cannot be called a suit for specific performance of the bond). Consequently Art. 113 cannot apply, but Art. 120—Somjimal v. Tolomal, 6 S.L.R. 148, 19 I.C. 376 (377); Cf. Fardunji v. Jamsetji, 28 Bom. 1.

A suit to enforce an award even though it is signed by the parties is not a suit based on a contract. The award is none the less an award and does not become a contract when signed by the parties. Consequently, Article 113 or 115 does not apply to the suit, but Art. 120—Harbhaj Mal v. Diwan Chand, 102 P.R. 1915, 32 I.C. 88 (89). But in another Punjab case it has been remarked that if the parties sign the arbitrators' award in token of their acceptance and thus merge the award into a new contract between themselves, the claim may be regarded as one for compensation for breach of contract (Article 115)—Radha Kishen v. Delhi Cloth Mills, 32 P. R. 1913. 16 I.C. 804. But this remark was merely an obiter, because the parties did not sign the award in this case.

But where the award does not merely decide the right or title of the parties, but distinctly provides for something to be done, a suit based upon the award is virtually one to enforce specific performance of the thing to be done; and Art. 113 would apply. For instance, where the award declared that in accordance with a compromise entered into between the parties they should transfer different portions of the disputed property to each other, a suit by one of the parties to recover the property agreed to be transferred to him, would be governed by Art. 113 and not by Art. 144—Talewar v. Bahori, 26 All. 497 (499); Mahbul v. Munshi, 32 P.L.R. 761, 135 I.C. 202, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 34 (35). So also in Sukho Bibi v. Ram Sukh. 5 All. 263 and Raghubar v. Madan, 16 All. 3, the award directed something to be done, and Art. 113 was applied. But all these rulings have been doubted in Kuldip v. Mahan Dube, 34 All. 43 (46-48).

472. Suits based on sale:—A suit for specific performance of a contract for the sale of immoveable property and for possession is governed by this Article and not by Art. 144, because the suit is essentially one for specific performance, and the right to possession is merely dependent on the right to specific performance —Mohiuddin v. Majlis, 6 All. 231.

Once there is an agreement to sell immoveable property, and the vendee has done his part of the contract by paying the purchase-money, the vendor is bound to do everything necessary in order to complete the title of the vendee by executing a registered deed of conveyance under sec. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act. A suit by the vendee for execution of such a conveyance is governed by this Article— Mya Bin v. Maung Kya, 33 I.C. 761 (Bur.); Maung Le Dun v. Ma Le, 9 Bur.L.T. 86, 32 I.C. 573.

After the sale of a house by the defendant's father to the plaintiff's father, the former remained in possession according to an agreement in the sale-deed (dated 1880) promising to vacate the house at the end of two years from the date of sale. But the defendant's father, and after his death, the defendant, continued to be in possession of the house, and in 1893 the plaintiff brought a suit for possession of the house. Held that the suit was essentially a suit for possession to which the 12 years' rule of limitation would apply under Art. 139 or 144, and not a suit for specific performance of a promise to vacate the house, to which Art. 113 might apply—Sivrudrappa v. Balappa, 23 Bom. 283 (286).

Under a decree against the plaintiff's father certain villages were sold in 1883 and were purchased by the first defendant as the agent of, and at the request of, the plaintiff's father. Afterwards in 1888 the defendant agreed in writing to convey those lands to the plaintiff upon payment of Rs. 99,000. The plaintiff brought a suit in 1900 for declaration of title to and possession of those villages upon payment of such sum as may be fixed by the Court. The High Court decided that the first defendant was a trustee for the plaintiff's father and the suit was one brought by a beneficial owner for possession on payment of such sums as were due, and was not barred by any rule of limitation. But it was held by the Privy Council that the agreement of 1888 was a contract for sale and the suit was one for specific performance of the contract under Article 113—Subbaraya v. Rajah of Karvetnagar, 45 Mad. 641 (P.C.), 44 M.L.J. 740, 27 C.W.N. 408, 68 I.C. 172, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 345.

473. Other suits:—Where a person who has agreed to execute a lease fails to do so, a suit by the promisee for specific performance of the agreement (i.e., demanding execution of the lease) is governed by this Article, and limitation runs from the refusal of the defendant to grant the lease—Staya Kinker v. Rajah Shiva Prosad, 4 P.L.J. 447 (452), 52 I.C. 452; Khusi v. Munshi, 42 P.L.R. 194, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 225, 189 I.C. 418. Where a contract of lease has been executed under which the lessee is entitled to be put in possession of the land leased, but he is not put in possession, and he sues for possessoin under his lease, the suit is really one for specific performance of contract. The plaintiff really asks that the contract to be put in possession of the property should be carried out. To such a suit Art. 113, and not Art. 144 is applicable—B. Suraj Patish v. Mt. Atul Bibi, A.I.R. 1935 All. 569, 1935 A.L.J. 662, 156 I.C. 894. But in Suraj v. Atul, I.L.R. (1938) All. 664, 1938 A.L.J. 561, A.I.R. 1938 All. 439 the same High Court has held that Article 144 and not this Article applies to such a suit when the lease is a registered one. The reason is that the rights acquired by the lessee are real rights which might be enforced by a suit for possession.

Where the defendant agreed to give half of the land to the plaintiff who was to help him in recovering it, and then refused to give half of the land after recovery, held that this was a suit for specific performance of a contract, and limitation ran when the defendant refused to deliver the land—Shriram v. Babaji, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 47, 71 I.C. 40.

A suit by the mortgagor against the mortgagee under a registered mortgage for the balance of the consideration payable by the latter to the former, and for damages in the shape of interest for non-payment of the amount in time, is a suit for compensation for breach of contract in writing registered and is governed by Art. 116; such a suit is not one for specific performance of a contract under Art. 113—Naubat v. Indar, 13 All. 200 (204). Where a mortgage decree for sale is assigned under a registered deed, which provides inter alia that part of the consideration money remaining unpaid should be paid by the assignee to the assignor on the assignee realising the decree, a suit by the assignor for the amount due and interest thereon is a suit for compensation for breach of a contract falling under Art. 116 and not a suit for specific performance so as to make this Article applicable—Sheonarain v. Ganga, 1939 P.W.N. 769, A I.R. 1940 Pat 155, 185 I.C. 63. A suit for recovery of land leased to the plaintiff under an arthamulgeni lease is not a suit based merely on the contract in the lease to put the plaintiff in possession, but is a suit for possession based on a completed title to possession acquired by the plaintiff by virtue of the lease, and is governed by Art. 144, not by Art. 113 or 116—Mogera v. Parameswara, 31 Mad. 51. Plaintiffs who had contributed to a common fund to be utilised for family requirements, brought a suit claiming that their shares in the said fund should be determined and paid. Held, that the claim was one which must be dealt with according to equitable principles apart from any question of partnership and account and that the suit fell under Art. 120 and not under Art. 113 or 106—Commercial Bank v. Allavoodeen, 23 Mad. 583 (592).

A Zemindar granted a lease of certain chaukidari chakran lands to the lessee. But subsequently the lands were resumed by the Government in consequence of which the lessee lost possession. Many years after, the lands were again made over to the Zemindar by the Government. The lessee thereupon brought a suit to recover possession of those lands from the Zemindar. Held that the suit was one for possession, and not one for specific performance of a contract, because there was no agreement in the lease to grant a patni of these lands to the lessee in case the lands were made over to the Zemindar after resumption—Banwari Mukunda v. Bidhu Sundar, 35 Cal. 346 (349) (dissenting from Ranjit Singh v. Radha Charan, 34 Cal. 564); Ranjit Singh Bahadur v. Maharaj Bahadur Singh, 46 Cal. 173 (181) (P.C.).

A deed of exchange contained a covenant that each party would make good any loss caused to the other in case the latter was dispossessed from the lands he got in exchange, by reason of want of title of the former. The plaintiff, in a suit to which the defendant was a party, was declared not to be entitled to a portion of the land received from the defendant in exchange. The defendant refused to give the plaintiff other land in place of the land so lost to him. Thereupon the plaintiff sued the defendant for the recovery of equivalent land. Held that the suit was one for specific performance of the agreement contained in the exchange and was governed by this Article, the cause of action accruing from the date of the defendant's refusal—Hari v. Raghunath, 11 All 27 (F B.). But where A and B exchanged lands under a registered deed which contained the following clause: "There is no dispute in respect of the said lands: if disputes should so arise the respective party should be answerable to the extent of his private property" and A, being deprived of some of the land he got by the exchange, sued B on the above covenant for the value of the lands of which he was dispossessed, held that a suit for failure to pay money according to the contract should be regarded as a suit for compensation for breach of contract and not a suit for specific performance. The suit therefore did not fall under Article 113, but under Article 83 read with Article 116—Srinivasa v. Rangasami, 31 Mad. 452 (453). Where the parties to a deed of exchange expressly covenanted that if there should arise any dispute in the matter of enjoyment of the property exchanged, each should return to the other what is taken, and then in execution of a decree obtained by a third party against the defendant, some of the lands obtained by the plaintiff were sold away, whereupon the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover possession of the lands given by him to the defendants. held that the suit was not one for specific performance of a contract under Article 113, but a suit for possession governed by Article 143—Srinivas v. Johnsa Rowther, 42 Mad. 690 (691).

A transaction whereby certain shares in a company were allotted to the defendant on the understanding that the latter was to transfer the shares to the plaintiffs on their paying him a certain sum of money, does not constitute a trust in favour of the plaintiff for any specific purpose, but an agreement which can be specially enforced; and a suit for such specific performance by compelling the registration of the share in the plaintiff's name falls under Art. 113—Ahmed v. Adjein, 2 Cal. 323.

A compromise effected in the course of a litigation between the parties is not a contract (just as an award is not a contract), and a suit for recovery of possession of land, based on such compromise is not a suit for specific performance of a contract, but a suit for possession of immoveable property, and would be governed by Art. 144, not by this Article—Betts v. Mahomed Ismail, 25 W.R. 521; Bashewar v. Depi Prasad, 20 P.R. 1913, 19 I.C. 411. But a suit for damages for breach of the terms of a compromise decree is a suit for damages for breach of contract and falls under Art. 115 —Gopal Saran v. Chhakauri Lal, 12 Pat. 792, 15 P.L.T. 197, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 7 (9), 148 I.C. 375.

473A. Registered contract:—A suit for specific performance of a registered contract does not fall under Article 116, because that Article refers to suits for compensation for breach of contracts in writing registered, and does not apply to suits for specific performance of such contracts—Srinivasa v. Rangasami, 31 Mad. 452 (453).

474. Starting point of limitation:—The words "date fixed" in the third column does not mean merely a date by calender. The words include a date which can be ascertained with reference to an event certain to happen—Muniswami v. Shamanna, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 163, 1950 M.W.N. 412, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 820. The question as to whether the first part of this Article is or is not applicable depends to the great extent on the language of the agreement—Alopi v. Court of Wards, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 23, 181 I.C. 728. Time runs from the date fixed for the performance; this date must be a date expressly fixed in the contract itself which is to be specifically enforced, and not a date which the parties may have fixed by necessary implication without stating expressly what it was. If it is not expressly stated, the date of notice of refusal of performance is the starting point of limitation, as provided in the second clause of the third column—Kashi Prasad v. Chhabi Lal, 1933 A.L.J. 300, 145 I.C. 586, A.I.R. 1933 All. 410; Khushi v. Munshi, 42 P.L.R. 194. A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 225, 189 I.C. 418; Hutchegowda v. Basaviah, A.I.R. 1954 Mys. 29. Thus where an agreement between A and B provided that B would finance a litigation of A in respect of certain property and in return should get a share of the property after the passing of the decree and that in case of an appeal to the Privy Council B's share would be increased. in a suit by B against A brought three years after the decree but within three years from the date of refusal it has been held that by the agreement no date was fixed and the date of the decree could not be time fixed within the meaning of the first part as B was entitled to get the share after the decree which meant when it became unassailable—Alopi v. Court of Wards, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 23, 181 I.C. 728. When a purchaser of a portion of a property had agreed to release it of an existing mortgage, but he fails to do so, the cause of action for a suit by the vendor on such covenant arose either on the date on which the payment was to be made or at least not later than the date when the vendor called upon the purchaser to do so—Chand Bibi v. Santosh Kumar, 60 Cal. 761, 16 I.C. 863, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 641.

In a suit for the specific performance of an agreement entered into in 1858 to grant pattah when required, it appeared that the plaintiffs applied to the defendants for a pattah in 1874, and in March 1875 the defendants finally refused to make the grant, and the plaintiffs thereupon instituted their suit for specific performance; it was held that limitation ran from the date (1875) when the plaintiffs had notice that their right was denied—New Beerbhoom Coal Co. v. Buloram, 5 Cal. 175. Where the plaintiff was entitled to get a transfer of a decree from the 1st defendant in case the 2nd defendant paid the 1st defendant a certain sum of money within six months from the date of the agreement, and the 2nd defendant so paid the money, it was held, in a suit brought by plaintiff for the specific performance of the contract to transfer, that as no specific date was fixed for performance, the 2nd clause of the third column applied, i.e., limitation ran from the date of refusal by the 1st defendant to perform the contract, and not from the date of payment by the 2nd defendant—Venkanna v. Venkata Krishnayya, 41 Mad. 18 (22), 33 M.L.J. 35, 41 I.C. 807.

Under the second clause of the third column of this Article, specific demand by the plaintiff is necessary to make the date of refusal the starting point—Virasami v. Ramasami, 3 Mad. 87. In the absence of a date fixed for performance of the contract, time does not continue to run until there has been a demand and refusal—Ma Ma Gye v Ma Nyo Po, 1 Bur.L J. 171, A.I R. 1923 Rang. 44; Mallikharjuna v. Parthasaradhi, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 742, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 584, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 218.

Although a suit for specific performance may be brought within three years from the accrual of the cause of action, still if the plaintiff is guilty of laches in bringing his suit within that time (e.g., if the suit is brought on the very last day of limitation), the Court, exercising its discretion with which it is vested under the Specific Relief Act, may think it right to dismiss the suit—Mokund Lal v. Chotay Lal, 10 Cal. 1061 (1068).

Effect of bar of limitation:—Although the provisions of this Article may prevent the defendant from suing for specific performance of a contract of sale, still he is not debarred from setting up his contract in defence to a suit for possession by the vendor—Maung Po Kywe v. Maung Po Thin, 7 Rang. 288, 119 I.C. 744, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 251 (252). The principle is that rules of limitation apply to suits but not to a claim set up by the defendant in defence. See Note 7, ante.

114. For the rescission of a contract.	Three years.	When the facts entitling the plaintiff to have the contract rescinded first become known to him.

475. This Article refers to the rescission of contracts as between promissors and promisees and not to suits by third parties to have the instrument of contract cancelled or set aside, such suits being governed by Art. 91—Bhawani v. Bisheshar, 3 All. 846. The last remark is incorrect, for Article 91 does not apply to a suit brought by a person who was not a party to the instrument sought to be cancelled. See Note 420 (4), ante. A suit for dissolution of a partnership is not a suit for rescission of a contract, and is not governed by Art. 114 but by Art. 120—Khorasany v. Acha, 6 Rang. 198, A I.R. 1928 Rang. 160 (162), 110 I.C. 349. A suit by a plaintiff, as reversioner, to recover possession of a plot of land in an occupancy tenure from the defendant who claims under a purchase from the widow, is not a suit under this Article, as the suit is not brought with the object of rescinding a contract, but falls under Art. 141—Budda v. Khan, 141 P.R. 1882. Where the claim to rescission of a contract is based on misrepresentation, time runs when the facts which would have entitled the plaintiff to bring a suit for rescission became known to him, on the analogy of an action for deceit—Molloy v. Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Co., (1906) 94 L.T. 756. This Article applies to a suit for rescission of a contract to take shares from a company on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation. If during the currency of the limitation period there is delay in filing the suit such delay so long as the company has not gone into liquidation will not prevent the proceedings succeeding unless it shows waiver or abandonment or acquiescence or occasions alteration in the position of the other party—Calcutta Celluloid Works, Ltd. v. Labanya, 47 C.W.N. 421. In England a suit for rescission of contract is not subject to any law of limitation, but must be brought as soon as the plaintiff knows all the facts, with the utmost promptitude. But in this country, the Legislature has allowed a definite period of three years; and the doctrine of laches is wholly inapplicable to such suits. And although a person may be barred by this Article from bringing a suit as plaintiff for rescission of the contract, he will not be debarred from defending a suit brought on the contract against him, on the ground of misrepresentation—Mohun Lal v. Sri Gungaji, 4 C.W.N. 369 (388).

115. For compensation for the breach of any contract, express or implied, not in writing registered and not herein specially provided for.	Three years.	When the contract is broken, or (where there are successive breaches) when the breach in respect of which the suit is instituted occurs, or (where the breach is continuing) when it ceases.

476. Scope of Article:—This is a residuary Article in respect of suits on contract, and is applicable only when no other Article is appropriate—Nand Lal v. Pratab Singh, 3 Lah. 326. See also Johury v. Thakoor Nath, 5 Cal. 830 (832). Art. 115 is a general provision applying to all actions ex contractu not specifically provided for otherwise—Md. Baksh Hafiz v. Rawalpindi Club Ld., A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 222. Where the liability does not account owing to the breach of a contract but arises on account of a statute this Article has no application. Thus a suit to recover license fee assessed by the Municipal Committee under sec. 180 Bihar Municipal Act, in respect of a platform erected by the defendant in his holding is governed by Art. 120 and not by this Article as the liability arises out of an obligation imposed by the statute—Mathura v. Special Officer, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 192, 175 I.C. 86. So also, a suit to recover terminal tax is not governed by this Article but by Art. 120—Larkana Municipality v. Kaloomal, 173 I.C. 678, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 48. So also, the liability of a buyer for reasonable charges for care and custody of the goods arises under sec. 44 of the Sale of Goods Act and this Article has no application to a suit to recover such a claim—Kamruddin v. The Municipal Committee, 1950 N.L.J. 363, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 148.

Compensation:—For the meaning of the word see Notes under section 29. The word compensation in Art. 115 as well as in Art. 116 has the same meaning as it has in sec. 73, Contract Act—Md. Baksh Hafiz v. Rawalpindi Club Ld., A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 222.

This Article is not limited to the case of damages for breach of contract, but it is also applicable to a case of liability under a simple debt due—Sreenath v. Peary Mohan, 21 C.W.N. 479, 39 I.C. 205. The words "compensation for breach of any contract" do not restrict the operation of this Article to suits for unliquidated damages for breach of contract but they also include suits for definite sums of money agreed to be paid under any contract (e.g., a suit against a del credere agent for the value of goods sold by him)—Dukur Pershad v. Foolcoomaree, 16 W.R. (P.C.) 35. In Johury v. Thakoor, 5 Cal. 830 (832), however, the word 'compensation' was interpreted in the sense of damages and not a specific sum of money payable by the defendant; and the same view is taken by the Patna High Court in Gopal Saran v. Chhakauri, 12 Pat. 792. 15 P.L.T. 197, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 7 (8).

A breach of trust is not the same thing as a breach of contract; consequently Article 115 does not apply to a suit against a company's directors for misfeasance in the nature of a breach of trust (e.g., misapplication of company's funds). The suit falls under Art. 120—Govind v. Rangnath, 54 Bom. 226, 32 Bom.L.R. 232, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 572 (584), 127 I.C. 305.

477. Suits on contracts:—Where the defendant borrowed a motor car from the plaintiff for his private use, and while it was in his use, it met with an accident which caused considerable damage to it, a suit by the plaintiff to recover the cost of repairs fell under this Article, as it was a case of contract of bailment under sec. 151 of the Contract Act—Holloway v. Holland, 10 O.W.N. 1105, 145 I.C. 1001, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 518 (519).

Where the defendant had agreed to pay a certain rate per acre for those lands of his which were watered by a canal of the plaintiff, a suit to recover the amount would not be one for rent (as the hire of water would not come within the definition of rent) but would fall under this Article—Ala v. Sodhi, 171 P.R 1883. On the marriage of his son the defendant caused a sum of money to be set apart in the books of his firm in the name of the first plaintiff, his son, for the purpose of making ornaments for the second plaintiff, his son's wife, but the money so set apart was not to be called for three years. It was held that the case was not one of trust or of deposit, but one falling under Article 115; that the contract between the parties was that the money should be paid when the plaintiff demanded it after three years, and that the period of limitation therefore ran from the date of the demand which date must be taken as the date of breach of contract—Manekji v. Nuserwanji, 20 Bom. 8 (13). The defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff certain goods belonging to another person on the implied representation that he had authority from that person to sell those goods, when in fact he had none. He failed to sell those goods to the plaintiff. A suit by the plaintiff for compensation for breach of the contract falls under this Article. It is an action connected with and arising out of contract, and not one arising in tort, and therefore Art. 36 does not apply—Vairavan v. Avicha, 38 Mad. 275 (277). A suit for money on the basis of the terms of an ekrarnama on the allegation that the defendant failed to perform the obligations imposed by the ekrarnama, is governed by this Article and not by Art. 120 or sec. 10—Tarak v. Rajani, A.I.R. 1948 Cal. 207.

After an adjustment of accounts between the landlord (plaintiff) and the tenant (defendant), the defendant was found liable for Rs. 158 on account of rent. It was arranged that sum of Rs. 136 should be left with the defendant as deposit for payment to the superior landlord on account of rent payable by the plaintiff to the latter, and that the balance was to be paid to the plaintiff. The amount of Rs. 136 not having been paid to the plaintiff's landlord, he sued the plaintiff and obtained a decree for Rs. 225 which was realised from the latter. The plaintiff then brought a suit against the defendant to recover the amount which he had to pay to his superior landlord. Held that by the arrangement between the landlord and tenant for the payment of Rs. 136 to the superior landlord, the amount ceased to be rent, and the claim for recovery of the amount which the plaintiff had to pay to the superior landlord is one for damages under this Article and not for rent under Article 110—Lachmi Missir v. Deoki Kuar, 19 C.W.N. 174, 19 I.C. 752.

When the parties had agreed on the 2nd April 1905 that a settlement of partnership accounts between them should be made upon a certain basis and the final adjustment took place on the 20th August 1906 and entries to that effect were made in the books on that date but not signed by the parties, and a suit was brought on the 6th April 1908 to recover the amount due on such adjustment, held that the suit was governed by Article 115 or 120, and as the adjustment of 20th August 1906 gave rise to a fresh cause of action from that date, the suit was not barred—Jalim Singh v Choonee Lall, 15 C.W.N. 882 (887), 11 I.C. 540. See also Mohamad Kassam v. Raghavan, A.I.R. 1954 T.C. 203. A settlement of account between partners of a dissolved partnership accompanied by a promise to pay the amount found due affords a fresh cause of action and a suit filed within three years of that cause of action is within time and is governed by this Article—Bajranglal v. Anandilal, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 101, 1944 N.L.J. 99, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 124.

Where a judgment-debtor paid a portion of the decree-amount to the decree-holder out of Court, but the latter took out execution without giving credit for it, a suit by the judgment-debtor to recover the amount paid by him out of Court and for damages is governed by Article 115—Ganpat v. Kirparam, 79 P.R. 1892; Gopala Swami v. Nammalwar, 36 M.L.J. 176, 48 I.C. 810. A suit by a broker to recover commission on certain sales is governed by this Article; it is not a suit for wages governed by Art. 102—Sushil v. Gauri, 39 All. 81 (84). But a suit by a servant of the Crown to recover arrears of pay is governed not by this Article but by Art. 102 as the word "wages" covers salary also—Province of Punjab v. Tarachand, 1947 F.L.J. 56, A.I.R. 1947 F.C. 23, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 389 F.C., 49 Bom L.R. 697. A suit by a purchasing agent for money due for the purchase of stores for Government is governed by this Article—Doya Narain v. Secretary of State, 14 Cal. 256.

Articles 115 and 116 are meant to particular and specific contracts that are broken. A suit under sec. 235 of the Indian Companies Act by an official liquidator against the auditor and the directors calling upon them to make good a large sum of money on the ground that as between themselves they have allowed the money of the Company to be mis-spent, is not governed by Article 115 or 116 but by Art. 120—In re Union Bank, 47 All. 669, 23 A.L.J. 473, A.I.R. 1925 All. 519. See also Govind v. Rangnath, 54 Bom. 226, 32 Bom.L.R. 232, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 572 (584, 585).

A suit by a share-holder to recover dividend is governed not by this Article but either by Article 116 or Article 120, as when the dividend is declared it becomes a debt and is only payable to a person whose name is registered when the dividend is declared —Sri Sri Hariseswar Idols v. Khorooriah Majojill Zemindary Syndicate Ltd., 48 C.W.N. 693.

As to suits against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery or short-delivery of goods, see Notes 309 and 312 under Articles 30 and 31.

A suit for damages for use and occupation against a tenant holding over may fall under this Article—Madar v. Kader Moideen, 39 Mad. 54 (56). In Viswanathan v. Balarami, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 542, 1948 M.W.N. 761, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 421 the Madras High Court has held that this Article is the only Article applicable to such a case.

The reason is that the basis of the action is an implied contract and not either on tort or a statutory obligation. The Allahabad High Court has however held that this Article has no application to such a suit as the liability of the tenant to put the lessor into possession of the property on the determination of the lease is a statutory liability and this Article does not provide for breach of such a liability or statutory duty—Sukhdei v. Lachmi, 1946 A.L.J. 305; Partap v. Ramdhan, A.I.R. 1946 All. 447, 224 I.C. 201.

A suit for rent based on a registered kabuliyat is governed by this Article and not either by Art. 116 or Art. 120—Madan v. Radha, 1942 A.L.W. 659.

In the case of a suit against the Government in respect of a breach of a contract which is required to comply with the formalities provided by sec. 175 (3), Government of India Act of 1935, time does not begin to run till the date the contract is signed as required by that Act, and the Article applicable to such a suit is Article 115—India Trader Corporation v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 153.

Suit based on compromise decree:—A compromise decree has got the features and characteristics both of a compromise and a decree; and the question really is whether the present suit is based on the declaration contained in the compromise decree or is a suit based on the contract as contained in the compromise. This must be decided according to the facts of each case. Where a compromise decree declares the right of a party to obtain money found due on taking accounts, a suit for the monies found due is a suit based on the decree and does not fall under Art. 115, because the suit is not on a contract between the parties. The proper Article is Art. 120—Arunachalam v. Raja Rajeswara, 22 L.W. 195, A.I R. 1925 Mad. 1260. 91 I.C. 338 (341). But where the suit is one for compensation for breach of a term of a compromise which has been embodied in a decree, it is governed by Art. 115 and not by Art. 120; and the fact that the compromise has been merged in a decree none the less makes it a contract within the meaning of Art. 115—Gopal Saran v. Chhakauri, 12 Pat. 792, 15 P.L.T. 197, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 7 (9), 148 I.C. 375. Where a dispute between the proprietor of certain land and his lessees, with regard to the mineral rights, was settled by a decree in terms of a written compromise entered into by the parties to the suit, under which the lessees were liable to pay to the proprietor a specific royalty on the amount of coal raised, held that a suit for recovery of the royalty was governed by Art. 115 as being a suit based upon the agreement of compromise. The agreement did not cease to be an agreement because it was confirmed by a decree—Smith v. Kinney, 2 Pat. 749 (752), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 231, 81 I.C. 298.

Suit for money lent payable within fixed time:—A suit to recover money lent with interest upon an agreement that the loan should be repaid within a fixed time, (e.g., within one year) is governed by this Article and not by Article 57—Rameshwar v. Ram Chand, 10 Cal. 1033; Ramasami v. Muttusami, 15 Mad. 380. See Note 355 under Article 57.

A owes money to B for which he executes a hundi in favour of B on C. C accepts the hundi and obtains a discharge subsequently by executing a document in favour of B. C sues A. The cause of action arises only when C obtains a discharge from B and not from date of acceptance of hundi by C. Art. 115 is applicable—Bodh Ram v. Devi Das, Hari Chand, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 668, 38 P.L.R. 276, 163 I.C. 928.

Suit for Malikana:—A suit for malikana, where the plaintiffs do not seek to enforce the charge upon the land, is governed by Art. 115, in as much as the claim in such a case arises out of a quasi-contract created by law—Kallar v. Ganga, 23 Cal. 998. If the suit is one to enforce the charge on the land, Art. 132 applies.

A suit for compensation for wrongfully withholding payment of malikana is governed by Art. 115; the plaintiff is entitled to damages upon each annual sum in arrear only for three years prior to suit—Mahamaya v. Ramkhelawan, 15 C.L.J. 684, 15 I.C. 911.

Suit against surety:—A borrowed a sum of money from the plaintiff on a promissory note payable on demand, and the defendant had guaranteed the repayment of the loan if A made default in payment. It was held that the suit against the surety fell under this Article, and the cause of action arose on the same date as it arose against the principal debtor, viz., the date of execution of the promissory note—Brojendra Kishore v. Hindusthan Co-operative Insurance Society, 44 Cal. 978; Sreenath Roy v. Peary Mohan, 21 C.W.N. 479, 25 C.L.J. 91, 39 I.C. 205.

Suit by official liquidator to recover unpaid calls of forfeited shares:—A suit by the official liquidator, after the winding up of a company, to recover the unpaid calls from a shareholder whose shares had been forfeited before the winding up of the company, is governed by this Article. As the shareholder ceases to be a member of the company, on forfeiture, his liability to pay future calls is gone, and all that is left is a new liability to pay the company "all moneys which at the date of forfeiture were presently payable by him to the company in respect of the shares." Such person is liable to pay the unpaid calls not as a contributory, but as a debtor to the company. This gives the company a fresh cause of action, and the period of limitation for a suit to enforce this new obligation begins to run from the time the shares are forfeited—Maneklal v. Suryapur Mills Co., Ld., 52 Bom. 477, 30 Bom.L.R. 549, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 252 (253), 110 I.C. 33; Bishambhar v. Agra Electric Stores Ld., 54 All. 541, 1932 A.L.J. 354, 140 I.C. 502, A.I.R. 1932 All. 342 (343).

Breach of implied contract:—The expression 'implied contract' is used in this Article in the sense in which it is understood in English law. The Contract Act and the Limitation Act are not statutes in pari materia, and it should not be assumed that Article 115 is confined to cases of what would be implied contracts according to the definition given in sec. 9 of the Contract Act. The result of confining it to such cases would be that where a suit is instituted against the principal and an agent together and relief is claimed against them in the alternative according as the act was authorised or not by the principal, a different period of limitation would be applicable against each of them, though the obligation arises out of the same transaction. This could not have been intended by the Legislature—Vairavan v. Avicha, 38 Mad. 275 (278).

A suit by a member against the District Council to recover travelling allowance which the latter has undertaken to pay by its resolution is governed by this Article as there is a breach of implied contract to pay—Mritunjoy v. District Council, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 392, 1946 N.L.J. 358, A.I.R. 1947 Nag. 153. Where by a resolution the Municipality gives permission to a person to collect the tolls of the market on his paying a certain amount and on the failure to pay the said amount the Municipality brings a suit to recover the said amount it was held that there was an implied contract to pay and this Article applied—Ganesh v. Jawad, 17 Pat. 277, 19 Pat.L.T. 653, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 429, 177 I.C. 272.

Where a Municipal Committee continues to hold a cattle fair on other's land from year to year, an inference can be drawn that there was an implied contract between the Committee and the land-holder that the Committee should pay the owner and the owner should allow the Committee to hold the fair. A suit therefore, for compensation not received is governed by this Article and not by Art. 39 or Art. 120—Municipal Committee v. Kanshi, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 267, 178 I.C. 49.

A suit for recovery of money in respect of realisation by the decree-holder of the decretal dues twice over is a suit for damages for breach of an implied contract by the decree-holder to get the payments certified and not to execute the decree and is governed by this Article or possibly Art. 97—Jagat v. Parmeshwar, 28 Pat. 974, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 348.

A suit for compensation for the subsidence of plaintiff's tank, caused by the removal of pillars of coal in the coal mine belonging to the defendant, falls under this Article, as it is a suit based on an implied covenant running with the land that the surface-owner had the inherent right of support from the underground mines—Jagannath v. Kali Das, 8 Pat. 776, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 245 (246, 247), 120 I.C. 626; and the period of three years ran from the time when specific injury was caused (sec. 24), viz., when the subsidence took place—Ibid.

Where a doctor is engaged to treat a patient without any arrangement being made at the time as to his fee, there is an implied contract to pay the fee, and a suit by the doctor to recover his fee is governed by this Article—Hurish v. Brojonath, 13 W R 96; Bareda Kant v. Court of Wards, 1931 A.L.J. 949, A.I.R. 1931 All. 752 (753), 133 I.C. 537; and the cause of action arose when the doctor demanded the fees and the patient promised to pay the money but did not pay; or at any rate, on the date of the last visit; if the patient died of the illness, then the period began to run from the date of such death—Baroda Kant v. Court of Wards, supra. A suit by the doctor to recover the price of medicines supplied to the patient falls under the more specific Article 52 and not under Art. 115—Baroda Kant v. Court of Wards, supra.

The Madras High Court has held in Venkatarama v. Zamindar of Sivagiri, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 173, A.I R. 1947 Mad. 457, 1947 M.W.N. 151 that this Article has no application to suit for recovery of advocate's fees but in Shri Gobind v. Milap, 43 P.L.R. 97 the Lahore High Court has taken a contrary view and has held that a suit by a legal adviser for his remuneration for services rendered on the basis of an express agreement with the client is governed by this Article and not by Article 120.

A suit by some of the proprietors of a village against the lambardar for an account of the profits of the village is governed by this Article, or Article 89, and not by Art. 120; because in so far as the proprietors permit the lambardar to collect rents and manage the village on their behalf, he is an agent and as such bound by an implied contract to render an account at the end of each agricultural year. Limitation runs from the date when the account ought to have been rendered under the implied contract—Anantram v. Ganeshram, 4 P.L.J. 304 (305), 51 I.C. 733.

The plaintiff sued the defendant who had married the plaintiff's deceased brother's widow to recover, by way of compensation, the money expended by his deceased brother's family on the marriage, founding his claim upon a custom of the Jats of Ajmere, whereby a member of that community marrying a widow is bound to recoup the expenses incurred by her deceased husband's family on his marriage. It was held that this was a suit for compensation for breach of an implied contract, and it fell under this Article—Madda v. Sheo Baksh, 3 All. 385.

Where a mortgage, which is not validly registered contains a covenant for payment of certain amount by the mortgagee to a prior mortgagee and no date is fixed for such payments, the default in payment by the mortgagee must be taken to have occurred on the very date the mortgage is executed; and the express covenant to pay is turned, after its breach, into an implied covenant to the mortgagor himself and a breach of it gives rise to a cause of action to the mortgagor at once and such a suit is governed by this Article—Gouri v. Nathu, A.I.R. 1951 All. 589.

Where in a suit for assessment of a fair and equitable rent and compensation for use and occupation the tenants are willing to pay a reasonable rent and dispute only the figure at which a reasonable rent should be fixed, it cannot be said that the tenants are guilty of breach of implied contract to pay reasonable rent and therefore this Article does not apply—Manindra v. Baramdi, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 400, 190 I.C. 631.

478. Successive breaches:—In a suit for breach of a contract to be performed at different times, the period of limitation must be calculated from each breach of contract as it arises. Where there is a contract for performing certain duties in each of several years, each breach of the contract is a complete cause of action, and damages are recoverable for each separately—Mahi Sahu v. Fordes, 6 W.R., Act X, 61; Rhotas Industries Ltd. v. Maharaja of Cossimbazar China Clay Mines, I.L.R. (1951) 1 Cal. 420.

Upon failure to pay the principal and interest upon the day appointed for such payment, a breach of the contract to pay is committed, and the fact that the money subsequently remains unpaid does not constitute successive breaches within the meaning of this Article—Mansab Ali v. Gulab Chand, 10 All. 85.

Successive breaches happen in those cases only in which there is a promise to perform periodically, such as payment of rent or of annuity; continuing breach applies only to contracts obliging one of the parties to adopt some given course of action during the continuance of the contractual relation—Raghubar v. Jaij Raj, 34 All. 429 (431); U. N. Mitra's Limitation, p. 304.

Where a decree-holder does not certify a payment made to him out of Court by the judgment-dobtor, and applies for execution without giving credit for such payment, a suit by the judgment-debtor for any damage he may have suffered by the decree-holder's neglect to certify and by the proceedings in execution, is one for breach of the implied promise to certify the payment to Court and is governed by this Article. The filing of the execution petition in itself gives a cause of action, though no money may have been realised, and successive applications will give rise to successive breaches and fresh cause of action. If money is subsequently realised that will give rise to a further breach of the covenant and a fresh cause of action—Gopalasami v. Nammalvar, 36 M.L.J. 176, 48 I C. 810.

479. Continuing breach:—Where the lessor fails to give delivery of possession of a portion of the land demised to the lessee on account of the obstruction by a person claiming under a paramount title, the breach, whether it be considered as a breach of a covenant to deliver possession or of a covenant for quiet enjoyment, occurs once for all on the date of failure to deliver possession, and is not continuing but complete and final; consequently, the period of limitation for a suit by the lessee for damages for breach of the covenant commences to run from the date of such failure and not from the close of the term of the lease—Secretary of State v. Pemmaraju, 40 Mad. 910 (919), 30 M.L.J. 575, 35 I.C. 254.

Specific injury:—See 8 Pat 776 cited under "Breach of implied contract," supra.

Part VII—Six years.

116. For compensation for the breach of a contract in writing registered.	Six years.	When the period of limitation would begin to run against a suit brought on a similar contract not registered.

479A. Scope:—The Limitation Act has drawn a broad distinction between occur in Article 115 do not find a place either in the first column of Article 116 or in unregistered and registered instruments. The words "not specially provided for" which the third column after the words "not registered" and the conclusion is that if the instrument is registered, Article 116 will apply in spite of the fact that a special provision has been made in some other Article in respect of a similar instrument not registered—Tricomdas v. Gopinath, 44 Cal. 759 (767) (P.C.); Mohamad Mazaharal v. Mahamad Azimuddin, 27 C.W.N. 210 (214, 215), 73 I.C. 17; Ram Raghubir v. United Refineries Ld., 9 Rang. 56, 134 I.C. 737, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 139 (144); on appeal, Ram Raghubir v. United Refineries, 11 Rang. 186 (P.C.), 37 C.W.N. 633, 142 I.C. 788, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 143; Munshi Alauddin v. Tomizuddin, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 587. Therefore a suit to recover royalties due under a registered lease is governed by Art. 116 and not by Article 110—Tricomdas v. Gopinath, 44 Cal. 759 (767) (P.C.), 44 I.A. 65. See also Ram Rachhya v. Raghunath, 8 Pat. 860, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 46 (49) (suit held governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 111); Lakhpat v. Durga, 8 Pat. 432, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 388 (390) (suit governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 97).

The word 'compensation' in this Article need not be restricted to a suit for unliquidated damages and can be held to include a claim for a definite sum payable under the terms of a contract—Ganappa v. Hammad, 49 Bom. 596, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 440; Tricomdas v. Gopinath, supra; Ram Raghubir v. United Refineries Ld., supra. The term 'compensation' is wider than the term 'damages'; it includes all claims whether they sound in debt or in damages. The expression 'compensation' is not ordinarily used as equivalent to damages although compensation may have to be measured by the same rule as damages. The word signifies that which is given in recompense, as equivalent rendered; it is commonly used to mean something given or obtained as an equivalent—Md. Mazaharal v. Md. Azimuddin, 27 C.W.N. 210 (216), 73 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 507.

The word 'compensation' not only applies to cases in which a specified sum of money due on a registered bond is sued for, but also applies to cases where the vendee having agreed to apply a portion of the consideration-money to the payment of a previous debt due by the vendor to a third person, fails to make that payment, in consequence of which the vendor himself has to pay his creditor and then brings a suit to recover the money from the vendee—Ram Rachha v. Raghunath, 8 Pat. 860, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 46 (50), 122 I.C. 244; See also Ishri Prasad v. Muhammad Sami, 19 A.L.J. 81, 60 I.C. 829, A.I.R. 1921 All. 133; Raghubar v. Jaij Raj. 34 All. 429.

The word 'contract' in the Article means a contract express or implied'; the words 'express or implied' used in Article 115 should be read into Article 116. It will therefore include an implied contract, e.g., a covenant of title and quiet possession which is implied in a deed of sale under sec. 55 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act. A suit by a vendee for return of purchase money owing to the defect of title of the vendor is governed by this Article—Ganappa v. Hammad, supra; Hanwant v. Chandi, 51 All. 651, 1929 A.L.J. 433, A.I.R. 1929 All. 293 (295); Shankarro v. Bhujangras, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 246. See also Note 484 post.

If the covenant is neither express nor can be implied from the terms of a sale-deed, this Article has no application. Thus, a property was sold by B to A, and it was stipulated that out of the consideration money A should discharge a mortgage decree on the property in favour of C, the amount of which was stated to be Rs. 16,000. But afterwards the decree was amended and the decretal amount was raised to Rs. 23,000, which A had to pay in order to release the property. A thereupon sued B for Rs. 7,000 (the difference between Rs. 23,000 and Rs. 16,000). It was held that in the absence of an express covenant in the sale-deed, it could not be implied that B was liable to pay any amount in excess of Rs. 16,000, and the suit could not be deemed a suit for compensation for breach of any implied contract. Article 116 therefore did not apply—Bidhu Bhusan v. Umesh, 57 Cal. 683, 51 C.L.J. 538, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 568 (572), 128 I.C. 183.

This Article applies where the breach is committed by the defendant. If the contract goes off on account of a breach committed by the plaintiff, a suit brought by him under sec. 65, Contract Act, to recover the money paid by him under the contract, is governed by Art. 97 and not by Art. 116—Anant v. Sarup, 26 A.L.J. 492, A.I.R. 1928 All. 360 (363).

480. Registered contract:—It was held in an earlier Madras case that the word 'registered' in the Article must be read as defined in the General Clauses Act, sec. 3 (45). Under that section the term 'registered' was held to include documents registered under any special law, such as the Companies Act, Copyright Act, as well as documents registered under the Registration Act. Therefore, a suit by a shareholder against a company registered under the Companies Act to recover dividends was governed by this Article as the right to the dividends arose out of the contract between the shareholders and the members of the Company which is embodied in the registered memorandum and articles of association—Ripon Press and Sugar Mills Co. Ld., v. Venkatarama, 42 Mad. 33 (34, 35), 35 M.L.J. 253, 48 I C. 903. But this decision has afterwards been overruled by the Full Bench in Rama Seshayya v. Tripurasundari Cotton Press, 49 Mad. 468, 50 M.L.J. 520, 94 I.C. 515, A.I R. 1926 Mad. 615 (Full Bench Reference on appeal from 46 M.L.J. 563, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 721), where it has been held that the relation between a shareholder and the company is not a contractual relation, and a suit by a shareholder of a limited company for recovery of arrears of dividend is a claim for a debt, and as the Limitation Act does not specially provide for such suit, Article 120 would apply. The Judge of the Full Bench further remarked that the word 'registered' in this Article should be interpreted in the ordinary sense of registration under the Registration Act, and the deposit of the Memorandum and Articles of Association with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies did not amount to registration. This Full Bench decision appears to be the correct statement of the law, and the case of 42 Mad. 33 was decided upon a misunderstanding of sec. 3 (45), General Clauses Act. The word "registered" is defined in that section as follows: "Registered" used with reference to a document shall mean "registered in British India under the law for the time being in force for the registration of documents." But the Indian Companies Act cannot be called a "law for the registration of documents"; it is the Indian Registration Act which answers to that description; moreover, the officer who is appointed under the Companies Act is a Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, and not of documents, and the Articles of Association deposited with the Registrar of Companies cannot be said to be "registered" under the law in force for the registration of documents. And so the Bombay High Court was of opinion that a suit by an official liquidator of a company against a shareholder did not fall under Art. 116—Maneklal v. Surjapur Mills Co., Ld., 52 Bom. 477, 110 I.C. 33, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 252 (256, 258). In a later case of the same High Court, however, it has been said that the word 'registered' in this Article includes Articles of Association registered under the Indian Companies Act, and is not confined to registration under the Registration Act; but it has also been observed that a suit against the directors of a company does not fall under Art. 116, as it is not strictly speaking a suit on a contract, because the whole of the contract governing the relationship of the company to its directors is not in writing registered, but part only, viz., that which is contained in the Articles of Association. Art. 120 applies to the suit—Govind v. Rangnath, 54 Bom. 226, 32 Bom.L.R. 232, A.I.R. 1930 Bom.

572 (584); 127 I.C. 305. The same High Court has subsequently held in the Full Bench case of Lalita v. Tata Iron and Steel Co., I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 165, 42 Bom. L.R. 57, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 97, that the words "writing registered" include a document registered with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies under the Indian Companies Act. A suit by a share-holder of a company for dividends payable under the Articles of Association is governed by this Article or by Article 120. The Sind Court takes the same view as the Madras Full Bench; see Karachi Bank v. Shewaram, 143 I.C. 713, A.I.R. 1933 Snd 103 (108). The Calcutta High Court has held that a suit by a share-holder to recover dividend is governed either by this Article or Art. 120—Hariseswar v. Khoraoriah Majolil Zemindary Syndicate Ltd., 48 C.W.N. 693. In England, however, the relation between a company and its shareholders is treated as a contractual relation, and the moneys (e.g.. dividends) due from a company, in pursuance of its Articles of Association, to its members to whom share-certificates have been issued under the company's seal, are treated as specially debts, since the Articles rank as a deed between the company and its members. See Lightwood, p. 196. In India also, it has been held in an Allahabad case that the relation between a company and its directors is a contractual relation constituted by the Articles of Association: see In re Union Bank, 47 All. 669, cited in Note 317 under Art. 36.

A suit instituted not by a shareholder but by a purchaser in Court auction of the shares of a company, to recover the arrears of dividends in respect of those shares, is governed by Article 120, and not by Article 116—Ramaseshayya v. Tripurasundari Cotton Press, supra.

Where a document is registered in a particular Registration Office through the perpetration of fraud on the Registration Law, it can not be treated as a registered document—Inderdeo v. Ramlal, 18 Pat. 429, 19 P.W.N. 268,, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 502.

481. Suit on registered bond:—Where the plaintiffs are given under a registered instrument a right of suit for recovery of their share of profits collected by the defendants if the plaintiff's share is not paid to them, a suit for recovery of the profits is governed by Art. 116—Kir Girwar Singh v. Ram Sarup, A.I.R. 1935 All. 945. A suit is none the less a suit for compensation for breach of contract in writing registered, within the meaning of this Article, although it has been brought for recovery of a specified sum of money on a registered bond or other contract—Gonesh v. Madhavrav, 6 Bom. 75; Ram Narain v. Ohindra, 17 C.W.N. 369, 13 I.C. 440, 15 C.L.J. 17; Girijanand v. Sailajanand, 23 Cal. 645 (663); Challaphroo v. Banga, 20 C.W.N. 408, 22 C.L.J. 311; Seshayya v. Annamma, 10 Mad. 100; Rathnasami v. Subramanya, 11 Mad. 56; Ram Baksh v. Moghar, 86 P.R. 1881; Collector of Etawah v. Beti Maharani, 14 All. 162; Nistarini v. Chandi, 12 C.L.J. 423, 8 I.C. 788; Susil v. Gouri, 39 All. 81. This Article applies to a suit to recover money on the basis of a registered simple bond wherein a day is specified on which the debtor would pay the loan and the suit, if within six years of the day on which the debtor had contracted to repay the loan, would be within time—Bhubaneshwar v. Satyadeo, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 74, 186 I.C. 850.

This Article applies to a suit against an infant on a registered bond given for necessaries, but in such a case it is requisite that the consideration for which the bond is given should be proved, and then the bond becomes a registered contract which binds the infant—Sham Charan v. Chowdhury Debya Singh, 21 Cal. 872.

482. Suit on instalment bond:—This Article is applicable to a suit on a registered instalment bond, notwithstanding the express provisions of Art. 74. The present Article is intended to apply to all contracts in writing registered, whether there is or is not an express provision in this Act for similar contracts not registered —Din Doyal v. Gopal, 18 Cal. 506; Narayana v. Gopi, 11 C.W.N. 903.

483. Suit on personal covenant in mortgage:—This Article and not Article 132, applies to a suit by a mortgagee against the mortgagor to recover money on the basis of the personal covenant in the mortgage, and time runs from the date when the money becomes due under the mortgage—Raghubar v. Lachmin, 5 All. 461 (462); Kameshar v. Raj Kumari, 20 Cal. 79 (84) (P.C.); Miller v. Ranganath, 12 Cal. 389; Rathnasami v. Subramanya, 11 Mad. 56 (59); Rahmat v. Abdul, 34 Cal. 672 (675); Ram Narayan v. Nand Kumar, 25 O.C. 164; Ram Narain v. Odindra, 17 C.W.N. 369, 13 I.C. 440; Dinkar v. Chhaganlal, 38 Bom. 177 (181); Ram Chandra v. Jairam, 22 Bom. 686 (690); Ratnasabapathi v. Daivasingamoni, 52 Mad. 105 (F.B.), 56 M.L.J. 10, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 53 (58, 59), 116 I.C. 817; Chengalamma v. Veeraraghava, 55 M.L.J. 506, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1124 (1126), 114 I.C. 340; Umapada v. Haripada, 35 C.W.N. 1030 (1031), 53 C.L.J. 520; Dharanidhar v. Indra Narayan, 36 C.W.N. 117 (118); Kishen v. Raghunath, 51 All. 473, A.I.R. 1929 All. 139 (141), 116 I.C. 488; Kaloo v. Sundarabai, 95 I.C. 707, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 449; Jai Indra v. Khairati, 4 Luck. 107, 113 I.C. 489, 5 O.W.N. 836, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 465 (468); Sheo Dass v. Kunj Behari, 5 O.W.N. 1128, 114 I.C. 813; Suraj Baksh v. Munnoo, 6 O.W.N. 974. A suit by a mortgagee against the mortgagor, on a personal covenant contained in a registered deed on mortgage, to recover the amount remaining due after the mortgaged property has been sold is governed by Art. 116—Vasanji v. Eruchshaw, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 203, 37 Bom.L.R. 170, 59 Bom. 634, 156 I.C. 286; U. Sein v. U. San, 1938 Rang.L.R. 35, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 484. In a recent Privy Council case it has been held that the suit is governed by Article 66—Ganesh Lal v. Khetramohan, 5 Pat. 585 (P.C.), 53 I.A. 134, 31 C.W.N. 25, A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 56, 95 I.C. 839. But, as pointed out by the Indian High Courts, it is not clear whether the mortgage in that case was validly and properly registered; and it was unnecessary for the Judicial Committee to decide whether the 3 years' rule (Art. 66) or six years' rule (Art. 116) applied, as in either case the suit was barred, having been brought 10 years after the due date of the mortgage. . See Ratnasabapathi v. Daivasigamoni and Chengalamma v. Veeraraghava, supra. In Lalubai v. Narain, 6 Bom. 719 (F.B.) (overruling Pestonji v. Abdul Rahiman, 5 Bom. 463) it was held that a suit for a simple money decree on a mortgage was governed by Article 132. But this Bombay Full Bench case must be deemed to have been over-ruled by the Privy Council case of Ramdin v. Kalka, 7 All. 502 in which their Lordships have laid down that Article 132 applies only to suits brought for money charged upon immoveable property for the purpose of recovering it out of the property so charged.

In this Privy Council case (7 All. 502, at p. 505) the Judicial Committee had made an inadvertent remark that a suit for recovery of money personally from the mortgagor (under a registered mortgage) must be brought within the same period of limitation as a suit on a bond for money, viz, three years. This ruling cannot be supported, and from the fact that no cases are referred to in the judgment, it would appear that none were cited in the argument, and that the Privy Council consequently were not aware of the current of decisions in India"—Starling, 5th Ed. p. 363. In the Bombay case of Dinkar v. Chhaganlal, 38 Bom. 177 (181), Shah J. observes: "With regard to the observations of Ramdin v. Kalka, I may say that having regard to the facts of that case the only point which arose for decision was whether for the purposes of personal liability the period of 12 years under Art. 132 applied to the case. There was no point in that case as to whether the period of limitation would be three years or six years. Therefore the observations in the case of Ramdin v. Kalka about the shorter period of three years being applicable were not necessary for deciding the appeal." Where, however, such a mortgage bond is executed by an agriculturist a suit so far as the claim for personal decree is concerned is not governed by this Article but by sec. 72 of the Dekhan Agriculturists Relief Act—Gurappa v. Madwalappa, 41 Bom L.R. 832, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 392.

This Article applies to a suit for enforcement of a personal covenant to pay contained in a mortgage, which is void ab initio and the suit is within time if brought within six years as prescribed in this Article—Nisar v. Mohan, 67 I.A. 431, I.L.R. (1940) Kar (P.C.) 419, 73 C.L.J. 121, 43 Bom.L.R. 465, 1941 A.L.J. 316, 1941 M.W.N. 1, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 204.

Where a mortgage-deed containing a personal covenant is registered in a particular Registration Office through the perpetration of a fraud on the Registration Law, the document can not be treated as a registered document even as regards the personal covenant for purposes of this Article—Inderdeo v. Ramlal, 18 Pat. 429, 1939 P.W.N. 268, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 502.

A claim for personal decree in a suit for sale of the mortgaged property is barred by time where the bond provides that the mortgage money shall be paid when damanded and the suit is brought more than six years from the date of the bond but within six years from the notice of demand—Venkataswami v. Ramalingam, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 758, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 233, A.I.R. Mad. 157 (F.B.)

If a sale held in execution of a mortgage-decree under O. XXXIV, r, 5, C. P. Code is insufficient to satisfy the mortgage-debt, an application for a supplementary decree under O. XXXIV, r. 6, is governed by the rule of limitation prescribed by this Article; that is, if the mortgage suit had been brought within six years from the date on which the mortgage-money became payable, the application is in time; but if the suit had been brought more than six years after the mortgage-amount became due, the application for the supplementary decree is barred—Bahadur v. Abdul, 43 C.W.N. 38, 68 C.L.J. 109, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 26. See Note 692, under Art. 181, under heading, "Application under O. 34, r. 6."

When a mortgagee is deprived of his security, under a decree of a Civil Court, he is entitled to proceed personally against the mortgagor; such a suit is governed by Article 116, and limitation runs from the date of deprivation of the security and not from the date of the mortgage—Maung Yan v. Maung Po, 3 Rang. 60, 89 I.C. 56, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 223. So also where the mortgagee is deprived of the security on account of the mortgagor's default in paying land revenue and the sale is confirmed by the Revenue member, the mortgagee is entitled to bring a suit for personal decree against the mortgagor, and such a suit is governed by this Article and is within time if brought within six years from the date of the Revenue member confirming the sale —Prabhakar v. Chandrakant, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 422, 1943 N.L.J. 159, A.I.R. 1942 Nag. 178. Where the mortgagee's remedy against the mortgagor personally is barred, it is also barred against his surety or representatives—Kaloo v. Sunderbai, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 449, 95 I.C. 707.

Where a registered instalment mortgage bond contained a covenant that in case of default in payment of an instalment the mortgagee would be entitled to take possession, and that if there be failure in delivering possession, the mortgagee would be entitled to recover the entire amount, from the person or the mortgaged property or the other property of the mortgagor, a suit to recover the mortgage-money personally from the mortgagor upon failure of the mortgagor to pay an instalment, was a suit for compensation for breach of contract under this Article and was in time if brought within 6 years from the date of the default—Collector v. Dawan, 30 All. 400 (402). An instalment mortgage bond executed in 1909 provided that the mortgage amount was to be repaid by nine annual instalments, and contained a stipulation that if there was default in the payment of any instalment, the mortgagee would be entitled to demand the full amount secured by the bond. Default was made in the very first instalment in September 1909, and the mortgagee brought the present suit on 13th January 1920 (i.e., more than 6 years after the first default) to recover the money personally from the mortgagor, Held that the suit was not barred in respect of the instalments that fell due within six years of the date of the suit, viz., the instalments from September 1914 to 1917. The fact that the suit was not brought within six years from the default did not bar the entire claim, because it was left to the option of the creditor to demand the entire amount on default of payment of an instalment, and it was not obligatory on the creditor to bring a suit for realisation of the entire amount as soon as a default was made in the payment of an instalment —Ramsekhar v. Mathura, 4 Pat. 820, 90 I.C. 249, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 557; Bahadur v. Abdul, 43 C.W.N. 38, 68 C.L.J. 109, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 26. See also the Privy Council decision of Lasa Din v. Gulab, 7 Luck. 442, cited in Note 554A under Art. 132.

Where the stipulation for payment of interest in a mortgage bond does not constitute an independent agreement and is no more than a part of the contract for payment of principal, the mortgagee cannot get a personal decree for interest in a case where his suit for enforcement of personal remedy in respect of the principal is barred. But if the convenant for payment of interest is an independant and separate agreement, the breach of such covenant will give rise to a separate cause of action independently altogether of the cause of action arising on a breach of the covenant for payment of principal. A suit instituted within six years of such breach is within time in view of the language of this Article—Kidar v. Sarajuddin, I.L.R. (1945) Lah. 355, 47 P.L.R. 358, A.I.R. 1946 Lah. 97 (F.B.).

Other suits on mortgage:—

A suit by a usufructuary mortgagee for refund of the mortgage money on account of the mortgagor's failure to put the mortgagee in possession of the property is a suit for breach of the mortgagor's liability to give possession, imposed by sec. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, and is governed by this Article—Umichaman v. Ahmed, 21 Mad. 242. Where the mortgagee under a usufructuary mortgage containing a covenant that the mortgagee would pay annually the peshkush to Government and on his default the mortgagor pays the same in order to prevent the property from being sold by the Government, a suit by the mortgagor to recover the amounts paid during six years immediately preceeding the suit is governed by this Article as he is entitled to rely on the mortgage-deed notwithstanding the passing of the final mortgage-decree— Duraiswami v. Venkata, 50 L.W. 889, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 233.

Where a mortgage-deed is executed by the father in a Mitakshara joint family, under circumstances that it is not binding on the sons, the mortgage cannot be enforced against the mortgage-security; the mortgagee would be entitled only to a money decree against the sons, and the suit falls under this Article—Surju Prasad v. Golab Chand, 27 Cal. 762 (767). But if it is executed under circumstances that the debt becomes binding on the sons, (i.e., if the debt is incurred for the purposes of the family, and not for immoral purposes) it will be enforceable against the estate, and the suit will undoubtedly fall under Article 132—Maheswar, v. Kishun Singh, 34 Cal. 184 (190). Where a mortgage is executed by the father partly for payment of antecedent debts and partly on receipt of cash payment, the mortgage will bind the minor son's interest in the property so far as the antecedent debt is concerned, but with regard to the cash advance, though the minor son will not be bound by the debt as a mortgage debt, his interest in the joint family property will be liable for debt and his interest is liable to be sold in execution of a money decree against the father. This liability can be enforced even in a suit brought against the son after the death of the father. In the case of a mortgage which is registered the period of limitation for a suit against the son for a money decree is the same as for a suit against the father, viz., six years from the date of the mortgage under this Article—Gulam Khaja v. Shivlal, 40 Bom.L.R. 381, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 295.

A suit by a mortgagor to obtain from the mortgagee the amount expressed in a registered mortgage-deed to have been advanced but which was not paid by the mortgagee, together with damages for non-payment, is governed by this Article and not Art. 113, because the withholding of payment of the mortgage-money by the mortgagee to the mortgagor would amount to a breach of contract, and the suit to recover the money is nothing other than a suit for compensation for damages caused by the breach of contract, and in the absence of any specific provision to the contrary, time will run from the date of execution of the mortgage-deed—Naubat v. Indar, 13 All. 200 (204).

If a mortgage-deed is registered by a Registering Officer within whose jurisdiction the mortgaged property is not situate, the deed will be treated as a simple registered money-bond; and a suit for money based upon the bond will fall under this Article—Joginee v. Bhoop, 29 Cal. 654 (663). A contrary view has been taken in Inderdeo v. Ramlal, 18 Pat. 429, 1939 P.W.N. 268, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 502 where it has been held that such a document will not be treated as registered document. The Allahabad High Court has taken the same view and has held that where a mortgage is not validly registered, it must be taken to be unregistered for all purposes direct and indirect, and this Article can have no application to a suit on such mortgage—Gouri v. Nathu, A.I.R. 1951 All. 589.

Where it was declared that certain property could not be sold in execution of a decree obtained by the plaintiff on foot of his mortgage-deed, and the decree thereby became infructuous, and a suit for a simple money-decree having been barred on that date, the plaintiff sued for damages for breach of covenant for indemnity contained in the mortgage-deed, it was held that the suit was governed by Article 116, and not by Article 62 or 97—Zia-uddin v. Akbar, 1932 A.L.J. 317, 136 I.C. 829, A.I.R. 1932 All. 358 (360).

Where a mortgagor covenants to deliver possession to the mortgagee before a certain date and to pay rent at a certain rate till then and fails to do so and the mortgagee sues for possession and compensation, the suit is governed by this Article and will be in time if brought within six years from the date fixed for delivering possession, when the breach occurred—Daulat v. Raghbir, 1940 O.W.N. 875, 190 I.C. 721.

483A. Interest after due date:—Where there was no stipulation in a mortgage-deed to pay interest after the day fixed for the repayment of the mortgage-money, it was held by the High Courts in India that the mortgagee could not claim interest after the time fixed for repayment of the mortgage-money, but could claim only damages in lieu of interest as long as the mortgage-money remained unpaid after the due date, that the damages were not a charge on the mortgaged property under Article 132, and that a suit for the recovery of such damages fell under Article 116 and must be brought within six years from the due date of the mortgage—Bhagwant v. Daryao, 11 All. 416 (420); Narindra v. Khadim Hossein, 17 All. 581 (587); Gudri Koer v. Bhubaneshwari, 19 Cal. 19 (25); Golam Abbas v. Mahomed Jaffer, 19 Cal. 23 (Note); Badi Bibi v. Sami Pillai, 18 Mad. 257 (262); Thayar v. Lakshmi, 18 Mad. 331 (334); Mansab Ali v. Gulab Chand, 10 All. 85. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has laid down that though a mortgage bond contains no stipulation for payment of interest after the due date, the mortgagee is entitled to interest for six years. That is, the Court awarded interest (and not merely damages) but held that the claim for interest was governed by Art. 116—Moti Singh v. Ramohari, 24 Cal. 699 (703) (F.B.).

But the question has been settled by the Privy Council in the case of Mathura Das v. Raja Narindar, 19 All. 39 (50) (P.C.), 23 I.A. 138, (on appeal from 17 All. 581) where their Lordships held that even though the mortgage-deed did not expressly stipulate for payment of interest after due date, the mortgagee was entitled to claim post-diem interest as interest (and not merely damages) and that the claim for such interest was not governed by Article 116 (but by Art. 132). In this case the mortgage was dated 17th February 1880, and the mortgage-money was payable with a certain rate of interest 'within a year.' The mortgagee sued on his mortgage in June 1890. Their Lordships held that the mortgagee should be granted the usual mortgage-decree for the principal with interest up to the date of the decree. The Calcutta High Court has also held in another case that although there is no stipulation for payment of interest after the due date of the mortgage, the Court is entitled to allow interest at a reasonable rate after the due date under the provisions of the Interest Act, until the final order for sale. And this interest is to be recovered from the property in the same way as the mortgage-money—Bikramjit v. Durga Dayal, 21 Cal. 274 (278). That is Art. 132 would apply to the claim for interest.

A mortgage-bond stipulated that interest at a certain rate should be paid annually and there were no words limiting this liability to the time fixed for the payment of the principal; it appeared from the evidence that interest had been paid for several years after the due date; it was held that the interest was a charge on the property, and that the claim for interest fell under Art. 132—Vithoba v. Vigneshwar, 22 Bom. 107 (110, 111).

484. Breach of covenant of title and quiet possession:—Where the vendor sold under a registered sale-deed a property of which he was not in possession, and even afterwards failed to secure possession to the purchaser owing to his (vendor's defect of title, or where the vendor at first got possession under the sale-deed but was subsequently dispossessed by a person claiming a better title, held that a covenant of title and quiet possession being implied in every transaction of sale, under sec. 55 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act, the failure to give possession to the purchaser must be regarded as a breach of contract in writing registered, and a suit by the purchaser for refund of his purchase-money would be governed by this Article (and not by Art. 97); time runs from date when it is found that the vendor had no title or when the purchaser is dispossessed of the property in consequence thereof (and not from the date of sale)—Krishna v. Kannan, 21 Mad. 8; Ganappa v. Hammad. 49 Bom. 596, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 440, 89 I.C. 59. See also Arunachala v. Ramasami, 38 Mad. 1171; Pirbhu v. Wazirbai, 11 N.L.R. 186, 31 I.C. 877; Chidambaram v. Sivathasamy, 15 M.L.J. 396; Ramdhan v. Purshottam, 22 N.L.R. 49, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 109; Kashi Rao v. Zabu, 28 N.L.R. 31 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 5 (7, 9); Multan Mal v. Budhumal, 45 Bom. 955 (960); Muhammad Siddiq v. Muhammad Nuh, 52 All. 604, 1930 A.L.J. 653, A.I.R. 1930 All. 771 (775), 124 I.C. 185; Sigamani v. Munibadra, 49 M.L.J. 668, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 255, 91 I.C. 514. The period of limitation in a suit for damages for the breach of covenant of quiet possession commences to run from the date of the actual dispossession and not from the time when title to the property terminates by reason of the absence of authority of the vendor either initial or supervining to transfer what he has purported to transfer—Gulabchand v. Suryajirao, 52 Bom.L.R. 614, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 401. Where a purchaser pleads two causes of action (1) breach of covenant of title, (2) breach of an express covenant of quiet enjoyment, he is pleading quite clearly that his cause of action dates from the date of dispossession—Bhagirathi v. Rambaran, 1941 N.L.J. 48, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 169. See also Note 436 under Art. 97. A suit by the vendee for refund of purchase money owing to infirmity of title of the vendor is in substance a suit based on a registered document and can be regarded as a suit for breach of a contract (e.g., implied contract under sec. 55, Transfer of Property Act); such a suit is governed by Art. 116, and if Art. 116 does apply, then it is quite immaterial to consider whether the case falls under some other Article (e.g., Art. 97)—Lakhpat v. Durga, 8 Pat. 432, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 388 (390), 177 I.C. 654 (following Tricomdas v. Gopinath Jai, 44 Cal. 759 P.C.); Chandrawatibai v. Valabdas, 25 S.L.R. 173, 133 I.C. 76, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 141 (142). A suit for compensation by a vendee who has been deprived of the property purchased by him in consequence of a defect in the title of the vendor is governed by Art. 116. The starting point of limitation is the time when the contract of which the breach is complained of was broken—Jawahar Ram v. Jhingurilal, A.I.R. 1935 All. 786, 1935 A.L.J. 929, 156 I.C. 177. This Article applies to a suit for refund of purchase money even in a case where the vendee was aware of the defect of the vendor's title and the contract was found to be void ab initio—Saraswatibai v. Madhukar, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 467, 1950 N.L.J. 145. Where a sale-deed contained an express convenant that in the event of the purchaser losing part of the property sold owing to the defect of title of the vendor or to any other cause, he would be entitled to a refund of the proportionate part of the purchase-money, a suit for such refund, upon failure to get possession of a part of the property was governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 97—Mul Kunwar v. Chattar Singh, 30 All. 402. Similarly, where a sale-deed set out that the property was unencumbered, and there was a covenant that if the purchaser was dispossessed of any part of the property, he would get a refund of a proportionate part of the purchase-money, a suit for such refund upon his being dispossessed of a part of the property by a prior incumbrancer fell under this Article and not Art. 97, and must be brought within six years from the date of dispossession—Ram Jaggi v. Kauleshar, 30 All. 405 (Note). Where a vendor does not disclose the existence of a prior mortgage, and the vendee is dispossessed by the prior mortgagee, the cause of action for a suit by the vendee for breach of covenant of title arises on the date of dispossession, and not on the date of conveyance—Alagarappa Reddiar v. Alagirisami, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 636, 68 M.L.J. 588, 1935 M.W.N. 375, 41 L.W. 728, 156 I.C. 843. Where the vendor agrees to pay off the subsisting mortgage on the property with the consideration money of the sale of the property and on his failure to discharge the debt the vendee is dispossessed of the property as a result of the suit by the mortgagee, a suit by the vendee for damages is governed by this Article as the suit is one for breach of the covenant for quiet possession and the starting point of limitation is the date of dispossession—Muthu v. Mottayan, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 617, 1942 M.W.N. 687, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 150. A registered deed of sale executed in 1905 recited: "If there is any dispute in respect of the property by relations and others, we (vendors, shall settle them at our own expense and we shall be bound to carry out this sale without obstruction." The son of one of the vendors sued to set aside the sale as regards the share of his father, and obtained a decree in 1913 for possession of that share. Thereafter a suit was brought by the vendee in 1917 for recovery of the part of the purchase-money corresponding to the share of the property lost to him. Held that the suit was one for compensation for breach of covenant of title and was governed not by Article 97 but by Article 116; the period of limitation ran from the date when the covenant was broken (the date of the decree of 1913 or the date of dispossession in pursuance of that decree) and the suit was not barred—Sistla Subbayya v. Pach Pitchamma, 43 M.L.J. 64, 68 I.C. 190, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 28. In an Allahabad case, the learned judges followed the Privy Council decision of Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 Cal. 123 (P.C.) and applied Article 97 instead of Article 116—Kundan v. Bisheshar, 50 All. 95, A.I.R. 1927 All. 734, 103

I.C. 165. But this ruling has been disapproved of in a recent case of the same High Court—Hanwant v. Chandi, 51 All. 651, 1929 A.L.J. 433, 119 I.C. 243, A.I.R. 1929 All. 293 (295). Where in such a case a registered ekrarnama is executed by the mortgagor after dispossession expressly covenanting to pay damages for the period of dispossession at the time of redemption can not be used as set off in a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage brought after six years from the date of execution of the ekrarnama. The effect of the ekrarnama is to extend the period of limitation for a further period of six years under this Article—Sheobachan v. Madho, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 73.

The defendant as the Karnavan of a tarwad executed for consideration an ekrar granting a license to the plaintiff for cutting trees in a forest belonging to the tarwad. In a subsequent suit it was decided that the ekkarar was not binding on the tarwad and the plaintiff was restrained from cutting trees. The plaintiff thereupon sued to recover the money advanced under the ekrar. Held that as the license was neither a sale nor a lease of immoverable property within the definition of those terms under the Transfer of Property Act, a covenant for title and quiet enjoyment could not be implied under sec. 55 (2) or section 108 (c) of that Act, and consequently the suit could not be treated as one for compensation for breach of a registered contract under section 116, but that the suit fell under Article 62 or 97—Mammikutti v. Puzhakkal, 29 Mad. 353 (357, 358).

Where a registered deed of sale contained a covenant that if the land actually conveyed proved to be less than the land purported to be conveyed, or if the profits of the property proved to be below a certain amount stated in the deed of sale, the seller would refund a proportionate amount of the purchase-money, a suit for such refund was held to fall under this Article and not under Art. 65—Kishen Lal v. Kinlock, 3 All. 712; Amanat v. Ajudhia, 18 All. 160.

485. Suit for unpaid consideration:—Where under a registered sale-deed, the vendee agrees to pay, out of the consideration money, a debt due by the vendor to his (vendor's) creditor, but the vendee not having made the payment, the vendor himself pays his creditor, and then brings a suit to recover the amount from the vendee, held that the suit falls under Art. 116; and time runs not from the date of the sale-deed nor from the date when the fact of non-payment comes to the knowledge of the vendor, but from the date when the vendor himself pays the money and incurs loss—Ram Rachhya v. Raghunath, 8 Pat. 860, 122 I.C. 244, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 46 (50); Abdul Qadir v. Bilas Kaur, 14 Lah. 646, 34 P.L.R. 734, 144 I.C. 362, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 793; Gulzari Mal. v. Maghi Mal, 14 Lah. 380, 141 I.C. 435, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 109 (111); Navamaninadar v. Vedamanicka, 56 Mad. 724, 144 I.C. 550, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 424; Makund Lal v. Bhola, 1931 A.L.J. 985, 131 I.C. 683, A.I.R. 1931 All. 419; Ammanibai v. Anant, 33 Bom.L.R. 136, 133 I.C. 267, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 365; Bhanji v. Govind, 29 N.L.R. 298, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 379; Brahamdeo v. Jaikishun, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 452, 193 I.C. 172; Sia Sakhi v. Ramautar, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 21; Ram Saran v. Somari, I.L.R. 34 Pat. 568, A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 277. Where in such cases on account of the deficiency of sale proceeds to satisfy the mortgage-decree, the mortgagee obtains a personal decree against the mortgagor for the deficiency and if the mortgagor, who is compelled to pay the balance to the mortgagee brings a suit against the vendee for damages for breach of contract, this Article applies and the suit if brought within 6 years of the date of payment by the mortgagor is not barred —Gouri v. Ramlal, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 11, 223 I.C. 248. Where a subsequent mortgagee having agreed with the mortgagor to apply a portion of the consideration money towards payment of a prior mortgage fails to do so, in consequence of which the prior mortgagee brings a suit for sale and the mortgagor has to pay the amount to avert the sale, held that a suit by the mortgagor to recover the amount from the subsequent mortgagee falls under this Article—Ishri Prasad v. Md. Sami, 19 A.L.J. 81, 60 I.C. 829, A.I.R. 1922 All. 133. Where the vendees covenanted with the vendors to pay a portion of the consideration money to the mortgagee of the vendors, but they did not pay in accordance with the covenant, in consequence of which the mortgagee sued the vendors upon his mortgage and obtained a decree, but the vendors however did not pay any money under the decree, and then they brought a suit against the vendees for compensation for breach of the covenant, held that the suit was maintainable and it was not necessary that the vendors should have suffered any loss (i.e., should have paid any money under the decree) before they could bring their suit; and that the suit was governed by this Article—Raghubar v. Jaij Raj, 34 All. 429 (431); Tilak Ram v. Surat, I.L.R. (1938) All. 500, 1938 A.L.J. 455, A.I.R. 1938 All. 297 (F.B.); Shanti Sarup v. Janak Singh, A.I.R. 1958 All. 170 (F.B.); Mst. Mehdatunnissa v. Mmt. Halimathunnissa 17 Pat. 751, 1939 P.W.N. 361, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 194; Gulabrao v. Shamrao, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 454, 1948 N.L.J. 463; A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 401. As to the starting point of limitation for such suits, see the cases cited in Note 490 below.

Where the vendor of immoveable properties leaves a portion of the sale consideration in the hands of the vendee to pay it to his son on attaining majority, no trust is created. The transaction is nothing more or less than a loan and a suit for recovery of the amount is governed by this Article, where the deed of sale is registered—Kesavalu v. Perumal, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 820, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 722.

But if the vendor frames his suit as one for "enforcement of his lien on the property for his unpaid purchase-money, in accordance with the provisions of sec. 55 (4) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, the suit falls under Article 132 and not under Art. 116, and time runs from the date of the sale-deed—Kallu v. Ram Das, 26 A.L.J. 53, A.I.R. 1929 All. 121 (122), 107 I.C. 679.

Where property has been sold and part of the purchase money remains unpaid, a suit would lie to recover it, even though no other special damage has been proved, because the balance is payable. This would be so, even though the vendor had left the money in the hands of the vendee for payment to a creditor of his but where the property transferred is subject to a charge, and money is left in the hands of the vendee to pay off that charge the vendee would of course be entitled to pay the amount in discharge of the encumbrance and not pay it to the mortgagor direct: (2) where there has been an undertaking to release the mortgagor from personal liability or to free his property from encumbrances and there is default made by the vendee, the vendor will be entitled to enforce the covenant and bring a suit for specific performance of the contract by the vendee; (3) where there is an express contract to pay the amount and there is an express or implied contract of indemnity, then under sec. 125, Contract Act, the promisee is entitled to recover all damages, csots, etc., which he may have been compelled to pay in respect of any matter to which the promise to indemnify applied. When the suit is brought for recovery of the amount, then the charge can be enforced for the payment of the amount due if the suit is within 12 years of the original sale deed, for the charge is a statutory charge created by the document and time would begin to run for enforcement of such a charge from the date of that document. If the suit is for specific performance of the contract, then it would be governed by Art. 113, Limitation Act, and time would begin to run from the date when there was failure to perform it. Similarly in the case of compensation for breach of contract under Art. 116, Limitation Act, time would begin to run from the time when the contract was broken or in case of successive breaches from the date when the last breach occurred or, in the case of a continuing breach, when it ceased. But where the claim is upon a contract to indemnify, then time would begin to run from the date when the plaintiff is actually damnified. It is therefore impossible to say that time would begin to run against the plaintiff even before any damage was suffered by him. Of course, if the suit is brought within three years of the date when the damage was suffered but more than 12 years after the date of the original transfer, then no charge can be enforced and only a money decree can be obtained. But if the suit is brought both within three years from the date when the damage was suffered and 12 years from the date of the sale deed, the plaintiff would be entitled both to a charge and personal decree, in case the amount is not satisfied out of the property on which the charge exists. On the other hand, if the suit is brought merely for compensation for breach of contract, then, as already remarked, time would begin to run from the date of the breach—Ram Chandra v. Ram Chandra, A.I.R. 1936 All. 870.

Where a mortgage decree for sale is assigned under a registered deed, providing interalia that part of consideration money remaining unpaid should be paid by the assignee to the assignor on the assignee realising the decree, a suit by the assignor for the amount due and interest thereon is a suit for compensation for breach of a contract falling under this Article—Sheonarain v. Ganga, 1939 P.W.N. 769, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 155, 185 I.C. 63.

486. Suit on breach of covenant in exchange-deed:—Where a registered exchange deed contains a covenant to indemnify, in case of either party being deprived of the property acquired by exchange the case is governed by Article 83 read with Article 116 and a suit brought by the plaintiff within six years from the date of his being deprived of some of the lands, is within time—Srinivasa v. Rangasami, 31 Mad. 452.

487. Suit on breach of covenant in lease:—A suit to recover damages for breach of a covenant in a lease, the terms of which are embodied in a registered pattah, is governed by this Article—Girish v. Kunjo, 35 Cal. 683 (687); Nabin Chandra v. Munshi Mandar, 6 Pat. 606, 101 I.C. 707, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 248.

A suit for damages by the lessee against the lessor for failure on the part of the latter to put the former in possession of the leased premises, the lease being registered, is governed by Art. 116—Zamindar of Vizianagram v. Behara, 25 Mad. 587 (596); Obedur Rahman v. Darbari, 7 Lah. 423, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 1, 98 I.C. 584, 27 P.L.R. 663. Where a registered lease is given at an annual rent and in consideration of certain premium, but afterwards it is found that the lessee is resisted in getting possession and it is found that the lessors have no right to make such a grant, the lease is void and the lessee is entitled to a refund of the money paid to the lessors, and such a suit is governed by Art. 116, and not by Art. 65 or 97—Rajendra Narayan v. Lalmohan Tribeni, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 462. So also a suit by a lessee under a registered lease who has been dispossessed from the property for the return of nazarana paid by him to the lessor or any consequent costs or damages on the ground that the lessor had no title, is governed by this Article and the starting point of limitation is the date of dispossession—Debi Prasad v. Haji, 18 Pat. 654, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 81. The same principle applies even where the lessee had knowledge of the defective title of the lessor and the lessee is entitled to bring a suit for refund of nazarana in terms of the covenant in the lease for refund in case of dispossession and such a suit is governed by this Article—Ahsan v. Suraj, 17 Luck 289, 1941 O.W.N. 1182, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 82.

488. Other suits:—

Suit for rent under registered kabuliat:—See Note 467 under Art. 110.

A suit by landlord under an irredeemable anubhavam tenure for arrears of rent is governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 131 and the award of arrears of rent can be limited to a period of 6 years—Chathanni v. Narayanan, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 682, 1935 M.W.N. 866, 42 L.W. 596, 158 I.C. 228.

A suit for recovery of arrears of rent due on a registered lease for collecting rent is governed by this Article and not by special law of limitation provided in the Bengal Tenancy Act or in the Bihar Tenancy Act as such a lease is not for agricultural purposes—Alauddin v. Tamizuddin, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 631, 41 C.W.N. 1001, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 587; Maheswari v. Dulhim, 23 Pat. 185, 1944 P.W.N. 6, A I.R. 1944 Pat. 87 (F.B.).

A suit for recovery of arrears of rent against the assignee of a registered lease is governed by this Article. The reason is that the assignee's liability to pay is really based on the covenant to pay rent contained in the original lease which in law runs with the land—Dwijendra v. Promode, 54 C.W.N. 673, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 251.

This article applies to a suit for recovery of rent due under a registered mukarrari patta—Jangdhari v. Badri Narain, 1939 P.W.N. 220, or under a registered patni lease unless some special or local law has laid down a different period—Humayan v. Tarini, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 83, 196 I.C. 466; or under kanom tenure—Krishnan v. Soopi, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 32, 1947 M.W.N. 97, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 274. A contrary view has been taken in Madan Lal v. Radha, 1942 A.L.W. where it has been held that a suit for rent based on a registered kabuliyat would be governed only by Art. 115 and not by this Article.

Suit for rent under registered kabuliat under Bengal Tenancy Act:—See Note 468 under Art. 110.

Suit for rent under registered kabuliyat under the Bihar Tenancy Act:—A mukarraridar under a registered kabuliyat entitling him to collect rent from the occupancy tenants of a village and to cultivate land in that village is himself a tenure holder, hence a suit for recovery of arrears of makarrari rent from him is governed by the period mentioned in Sch. III of the Bihar Tenancy Act, and not by this Article—Mt. Sofiee v. Yusuf, 26 Pat. 269, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 328.

Suit against agent under registered contract:—See Note 413 under Article 89.

Suit on registered ekrar:—A suit upon a registered ekrar executed by the priest of an idol, for recovery of arrears of maintenance is governed by this Article—Girijanund v. Sailajanund, 23 Cal. 645.

Suit based on registered award:—The word 'contract' in this Article does not include an award. Consequently a suit to recover money payable under an award does not fall under Article 116, but under Art. 120—Somjimal v. Tolomal, 6 S.L.R. 148, 19 I.C. 376 (377). See also Sukho Bibi v. Ram Sukh, 5 All. 263 and Raghubar v Madan, 16 All. 3, where the award was registered but Art. 116 was not applied.

Suit on deed of release:—A suit for recovery of certain moveable property (books) under a registered deed of release, executed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff, in which the defendant acknowledged the books to belong to the plaintiff, fell under this Article—Rama Nath v. Mohesh, 9 C.W.N. 679.

Suit on registered power of attorney:—A suit to recover money based on a registered power of attorney authorising the defendant to withdraw and receive payment on behalf of the executant of the power of attorney and pay the amount to him is governed by this Article and not by Art. 89—Bhabani v. Sarojini, I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 578, A.I.R. 1944 Cal. 106.

Suit for account against partner:—A suit for account by one partner against another after dissolution of partnership is governed by Art. 106 and not by this Article, even though the deed of partnership is registered, because a suit for account of a partnership cannot be deemed to be a suit for compensation for breach of contract—Kothandapani v. Sreemanavedan, 57 Mad. 378, 151 I.C. 81, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 162; Vairavan v. Ponnayya, 22 Mad. 14. This Article cannot be stretched to cover every case in which the plaintiff's claim may in its origin be referred to a contractual relation which is expressed in a registered agreement—Vairavan v. Ponnayya, supra.

Suit on account stated:—Where a registered partnership contract binds the parties to pay the loss according to their respective shares, a suit to recover the defendant's share of the loss, on a settlement of accounts between the plaintiff and the defendants, is not governed by Article 64 (nor by Art. 106) but by Article 116—Ranga Reddi v. Chinna Reddi, 14 Mad. 465.

Suit by surety:—Where the surety is liable under a registered contract, the limitation is six years under Article 116—Laloo Singh v. Sunderabai, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 449, 95 I.C. 707.

489. Contract signed by one party:—A contract (lease) which has been registered, is to be treated as a contract in writing registered, notwithstanding that it bears the signature of only one of the parties (viz., the tenant only). There is no statutory provision requiring the signature of both parties—Girish v. Kunja, 35 Cal. 683 (688); Ambalavana v. Vaguran, 19 Mad. 52; Kotappa v. Vallar Zamindar, 25 Mad. 50; Zamindar of Vizianagram v. Behara, 25 Mad. 587; Chellaphroo v. Banga Behari, 20 C.W.N. 408, 31 I.C. 394; Parbati v. Sarup, 50 All. 661, A.I.R. 1928 All. 313 (315), 109 I.C. 409. The Bombay High Court holds contra in Apaji v. Nilkanta, 3 Bom.L.R. 667. Under sec. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act (as amended in 1929), if a lease of immoveable property is made by a registered instrument, such instrument, or where there are more instruments than one, each such instrument must be executed by both the lessor and the lessee.

490. Limitation:—Limitation runs from the date when the contract is broken, or when there are successive breaches, from the date when the breach in respect of which the suit is instituted occurs, or when the breach is continuing from the date when it ceases—Ram Narain v. Odindra, 17 C.W.N. 369, 13 I.C. 440, 15 C.L.J. 17. Upon failure to pay the money due on a bond, there is but one breach of the contract, viz., the non-payment on the date agreed upon; and there is no question of continuing or successive breaches during the time the money remains unpaid —Bhagwant v. Daryao, 11 All. 416 (423); Mansab v. Gulab, 10 All. 85; Golam v. Mahomed, 19 Cal. 23 (Note); Gudri v. Bhubaneswari, 19 Cal. 19 (25). See also Raghubar v. Jaji Raj, 34 All. 429, cited in Note 478 under Art. 115.

Where a party has recurring or successive causes of action, whether under the terms of the contract or by operation of law, each cause of action will give a fresh start to the period of limitation (compare col. 3 of Art. 115), and the mere fact that the party has not availed himself of the earlier cause of action will not prevent him from availing himself of the subsequent one—Mukhdeo v. Harakh Narain, 12 P.L.T. 755, 134 I.C. 609, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 285.

A sale-deed was executed in favour of the plaintiffs in 1901 purporting to convey the property free from incombrances and containing a covenant that should any excess sum be charged against the purchasers, the other properties of the vendor would be liable for the same together with interest and costs. At the time of the sale there was a prior simple mortgage existing on the property, and the mortgagee brought a suit for sale in 1912 which was decreed in 1914. But before sale, the plaintiffs paid off the decrees in May 1915, and in July 1915 brought the present suit for recovery of the amount which they had paid on account of the mortgage together with interest.

It was held that the suit was not barred, as the cause of action arose on the date on which the plaintiffs suffered actual loss (May 1915) by reason of being compelled to pay off the decree on the prior mortgage—Ram Dulari v. Hardwari, 40 All. 605 (609).

A mortgage was executed in 1899 and part of the consideration money was left with the mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage, it being agreed that any interest which might accrue on this sum in future would be entirely upon his shoulders. The mortgagee neglected to pay, in consequence of which the prior mortgagee sued and brought the mortgaged property to sale in 1912; and to avert that sale the mortgagor paid off the amount, and then brought the present suit in 1916 to recover damages from the mortgagee. Held that in as much as the mortgagee had undertaken all responsibility for further interest and could therefore pay the prior mortgage at any time, the cause of action did not accrue on the date of the mortgage in 1899, but arose when the mortgagor was actually damnified in 1912—Ishri Prasad v. Muhammad Sami, 19 A.L.J. 81, 60 I.C. 829, A.I.R. 1922 All. 133. Similarly, where the purchaser agreed to pay out of the purchase-money a certain sum due to the vendor's creditor, but no time was fixed for making the payment to the creditors, and the purchaser undertook all future liability for interest, and the purchaser not having made the payment the vendor himself had to pay his creditors, and the vendor brought a suit against the purchaser for recovery of the amount, held that time ran not from the execution of the sale-deed, but from the date when the vendor paid off his creditors —Ram Rachhya v. Raghunath, 8 Pat. 860, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 46 (52), 122 I.C. 244.

In Raghubar v. Jaij Raj, 34 All. 429 (see the facts of this case stated in Note 485 ante) where the plaintiffs did not suffer any loss (i.e., did not pay any money under the mortgage-decree) and no time was fixed for payment of the mortgage-money by the vendees to the mortgagee of the vendors, it was held that limitation ran from the date of execution of the sale-deed. It was further held that the obtainment of the decree by the mortgagee against the vendors did not give them a fresh starting point for limitation. The Judge further remarked that even if the vendors had paid any money to their mortgagee under the mortgage-decree, it was doubtful whether that would have furnished a fresh cause of action to them. This decision follows the English case of Battley v. Faulkner, (1920) 3 B. & Ald. 288, 22 R.R. 390, where it is laid down that one breach of contract can only furnish one cause of action, and that any consequential damage arising from the breach gives no new cause of action. As to other cases see Note 485, Foreign judgment:—See sec. 2 (6), C.P. Code.

490A. The period of limitation for a suit to enforce an ex parte decree obtained in a Native State runs from the date of the ex parte decree, and the plaintiff is not entitled to deduct the time during which the defendants were applying before the Chief Judge of that State to set aside the ex parte decree, for even though it is an ex parte decree, it is a decree capable of being enforced. Moreover, sec. 14 does not apply to proceedings taken in foreign Courts—Hari Singh v. Muhammad Said, 8 Lah. 54, 102 I.C. 523, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 200. If in an action in a Foreign State, an appeal is preferred from the judgment of the trial Court and is dismissed, the period of limitation for a suit in India to enforce the foreign judgment begins to run not from the date of the judgment in the trial Court but from the date of judgment of the Appellate Court—Baijnath v. Vallabhdas, 56 Mad. 591, 144 I.C. 853, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 511 (reversing Baijnath v. Vallabhdas, 62 M.L.J. 566, 138 I.C. 648, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 661); Jaisukhlal v. Mahomed, I.L.R. 1939 Bom. 639, 41 Bom.L.R. 1084, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 522. The right to sue on a foreign judgment is barred after six years from the date of the judgment, and the time spent in executing the decree in the foreign country cannot be excluded—Heera Monee v. Promotho, 8 W.R. 32.

This Article deals only with the period of limitation and does not create a right to sue. In India a foreign judgment itself forms a cause of action. If a suit on a foreign judgment is filed within the time prescribed by this Article it is in time in spite of the fact that under the law of the foreign state where the decree was obtained, execution of the decree in that state is barred by time. In a suit on a foreign judgment the question whether the decree is not enforceable because it is barred by the law of limitation prevailing in the foreign state is not relevant to be considered. The law applicable to the place where the suit is brought is applicable and the law of the place where the obligation arose need not be considered—Jaisukhlal v. Mahomed, supra.

118. To obtain a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid, or never, in fact, took place.	Six years.	When the alleged adoption becomes known to the plaintiff.

490B. "Invalid":—In some earlier Punjab cases it was held that a distinction should be drawn between a case where an adoption is wholly unauthorised and is therefore an absolute nullity, incapable of creating any jural relation between the adopter and the adoptee, and a case where the act is done with authority but in an improper exercise of that authority; and it is in the latter sense that the word 'invalid' in Article 118 should be constructed. Therefore this Article is inapplicable to a case of void adoption (as for instance where the widow adopted without any authority from her husband)—Karam Dad v. Nathu, 86 P.R. 1905 (F.B.); Bhagat Ram v. Tulsi Ram, 144 P.R. 1892; Muhammad Din v. Sardar Din, 67 P.R. 1901. These rulings were doubted in a later case of the same Chief Court where it was held that Article 118 applied to every case where the validity of the adoption was the substantial question in issue, and the fact that it was alleged to be invalid or was inherently invalid made no difference in the matter—Md. Naizuddin v. Md. Umar Khan, 1 P.R. 1907. The ruling in 86 P.R. 1905 (F.B.) has also been disapproved of in Nathu v. Rahaman, 44 P.R. 1911, 11 I.C. 11.

491. Suit for possession:—

Under the Act of 1871:—Article 129 of Act IX of 1871, which corresponds to the present Article, ran thus: "Suit to.....set aside an adoption—Twelve years—The date of adoption or (at the option of the plaintiff the date of the death of the adoptive father." The question arose whether, the Article applied to a suit for possession. It was held by the Privy Council that where the plaintiff could not succeed without displacing an apparent adoption by virtue of which the opposite party was in possession, a suit by the plaintiff for possession fell under that Article. The expression 'set aside an adoption' in Article 129 applied indiscriminately to suits for possession and to suits of a declaratory nature, and it did not denote solely a suit of the latter description—Jagadamba v. Dakhina Mohan, 13 Cal. 308 (P.C.); Mohesh

v. Taruck, 20 Cal. 487 (P.C.). It should be noted in this connection that the Privy Council case of Raj Bahadoor v. Achumbit, 6 C.L.J. 12 (in which it was held that Article 129 of the Act of 1871 did not apply to a suit for possession, and which gave rise to a good deal of misconception in Indian Courts) was not a suit to set aside an adoption but was a suit brought by a reversioner for possession and for cancellation of a deed which purported to give an absolute interest to the widow, and the defendant in the suit claimed under an adoption which was one to the widow herself and not to her husband; the Privy Council held that the adoption being void, the plaintiff was entitled to claim possession, ignoring the adoption. These decisions under the old law should not be accepted as of any authority under the present Act.

Article 129 of Act IX of 1871 applied to all suits in which the plaintiff could not succeed without displacing an apparent adoption by virtue of which the defendant was in possession. That Article prescribed 12 years as the period of time within which a suit to establish or set aside an adoption might be brought and such period of twelve years began to run from the date of adoption, or (at the option of the plaintiff) from the date of the adoptive father's death. Therefore, where no suit was brought by the reversioners to set aside an adoption made by a Hindu widow, within 12 years from the date of adoption, the reversioners were not entitled to bring any further suit after the widow's death to recover the property from the defendants who were in possession by virtue of the adoption, because Act IX of 1871 did not give to a reversioner whose right to sue for possession accrued upon the death of a Hindu widow, any further time than the 12 years given by Article 129 to any plaintiff. Although under Article 141 of the Act of 1877 the reversioner might bring a suit for possession within 12 years from the death of the widow, still if the period of limitation prescribed by the Act of 1871 had already expired before the Act of 1877 came into force, it could not be revived by the latter Act—Vaithialinga v. Srirangath, 48 Mad. 883 (P.C.), 49 M.L.J. 769, 30 C.W.N. 313, 92 I.C. 85, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 249.

Under the Acts of 1877 and 1908:—It will be seen that the language of the Article under the present Act (which is the same as in the Act of 1877) is entirely different from the language of the Article in Act of 1871; the period of limitation, the date from which it runs, and the description of the nature of the suit have all been changed; and the question is whether the alteration of the language denotes a change of law; in other words, whether the present Article will apply to a suit for possession.

In a large number of cases of the several High Courts, it has been held that by departing from the language of Art. 129 of Act IX of 1871 and by using a language in Art. 118 in the Act of 1877 which can only refer to a suit for declaration it is intended that this Article should apply only to suits where such bare declarations are sought for; it does not apply to a suit for possession of property, even though it may be necessary in such a suit to decide that a given adoption is invalid—Natthu Singh v. Gulab Singh, 17 All. 167 (171); Basdeo v. Gopal, 8 All. 644 (646); Radha Dulaiya v. Rashik Lal, 45 All. 1 (4) (distinguishing Chunni Lal v. Sita Ram, 34 All. 8); Baikanta v. Kali Charan, 9 C.W.N. 222 (224); Ram Chandra v. Ranjit, 27 Cal. 242 (254); Lala Parbhu v. Mylne, 14 Cal. 401 (417); Valaga Mangamma v. Bandlamudi, 30 Mad. 308; Maharaja of Kolhapuri v. Sundaram, 48 Mad. 1; Rama Rao v. Venkola, 17 M.L.J. 282; Kalandavelu v. Arumugatha, 18 I.C. 493; Bhagabat v. Murari, 15 C.L.J. 97; Hiralal v. Bai Rewa, 21 Bom. 376; Doddawa v. Yellawa, 46 Bom. 776 (F.B.); Shah Deo Narain v. Kusum Kumari, 5 P.L.J. 164; Surjan Singh v. Kharak Singh, 96 P.R. 1908; Nathu v. Rahman, 44 P.R. 1911, 11 I.C. 11; Wazia v. Tattu, 96 P.R. 1893; Jholi v. Khazana, 8 Lah. 48. A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 654. This view of law has been approved of in Tribhuwan v. Rameswar, 28 All. 727 (P.C.) and Md. Umar v. Niazuddin, 39 Cal. 418 (P.C.), and has now been confirmed by the decision of the Judicial Committee in Kalyandappa v. Chanbasppa, 48 Bom. 411 (P.C.), 26 Bom.L.R. 509, 28 C.W.N. 666, 22 A.L.J. 508, 46 M.L.J. 598 where their Lordships have distinctly laid down (at pp. 426, 427) that the language of Article 118 of the Acts of 1877 and 1908 is different from the language of Art. 129 of the Act of 1871 that the words 'a suit to obtain a declaration' are terms of art and refer to suits under sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act for a declaratory decree that an adoption is invalid or did not take place, and that the Article applicable to a suit for possession of immoveable property on the death of a Hindu female is Article 141, even if it is necessary to decide in that suit whether an adoption is or is not valid. This view is again confirmed by the Privy Council in Padmalav v. Fakira, 12 P.L.T. 563, 35 C.W.N. 465 (467), 131 I.C. 758, A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 84. The same view has been taken in Asa Ram v. Fatima, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 135, 183 I.C. 853; Bhoga v. Surajpal, A.I.R. 1951 M.B. 40; Hariharsingh v. Deonarayan, A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 319; Vithoba v. Vithal, A.I.R. 1958 Bom. 270.

But it has been held by some cases of the Bombay and Madras High Courts and the Punjab Chief Court that the altered language has made no difference in the law of limitation; that the present Article applies to every suit for possession in which the validity of the adoption is the substantial question in dispute, whether such a question is raised by the plaintiff in the first instance, or arises in consequence of the defendant setting up his own adoption as a bar to the plaintiff's success—Srinivas v. Hanmant, 24 Bom. 260 F.B. (overruling Fannyamma v. Manjanna, 21 Bom. 159); Srinivas v. Balvant, 37 Bom. 513, 15 Bom.L.R. 533; and that this Article does apply to a suit for possession of immoveable property where it is necessary to challenge the validity of an adoption before a right to such property can be established—Barot Naran v. Barot Jessang, 25 Bom. 26; Chanbasappa v. Kaliandappa, 41 Bom. 728; Parvati v. Saminatha, 20 Mad. 40; Gujur Singh v. Puran, 71 P.R. 1901; Bhupa v. Nigahia, 68 P.R. 1903; Ganesha v. Nathu, 20 P.R. 1902; Ishar v. Partap Singh, 38 P.R. 1907; Muhammad Niazuddin v. Muhammad Umar, 1 P.R. 1907. But all these decisions are opposed to the view taken in the above Privy Council case of Kalyandappa v Chanbasappa, 48 Bom. 411, and are no longer of any authority.

Where a suit by the reversioners for recovery of possession of property had become barred in 1874 under Article 129 of the Limitation Act of 1871, and a title to such property had been acquired by the heirs of the adopted son under sec. 28 of that Act, it could not be affected by the provisions of the later Limitation Acts of 1877 or 1908—Somasundaram v. Vaithilinga, 40 Mad. 846 (847); affirmed, 48 Mad. 883 (P.C.).

This Article does not apply where the adoption is made by the widow not to her deceased husband, but to herself. Such adoption does not confer any title on the adopted son, and it is not necessary for the reversioner to sue for a declaration of the invalidity of such adoption. He can bring a suit for possession, ignoring the adoption, and such suit does not fall under this Article—Lachman v. Kanhaiya, 22 Cal. 609 (614) (P.C.).

Where the suit is expressly framed as a suit to set aside an adoption and not as a suit for possession, Article 118 applies and not Article 141 or 144—Ayyadorai v. Solai Ammal, 24 Mad. 405 (408).

Adoption challenged on the ground of forgery of anumatipatra:—See Hurri Bhushan v. Upendralal, 24 Cal. 1 (P.C.) cited under Art. 92.

Suit by natural-born son:—A suit brought by the natural-born son (who was born 2 or 3 years after the adoption) during his minority, for a declaration that the adoption made by his father is invalid, and for an injunction restraining the defendant (adopted son) from interfering with the enjoyment of the property belonging to the plaintiff, does not fall under this Article, as the injunction is the main relief sought for and the prayer for a declaration is merely auxiliary. Moreover, under Article 118, the period of limitation runs from the time when the alleged adoption becomes known to the plaintiff, but in this case the plaintiff, being a minor, could not be fixed with the knowledge of the adoption from the date of his birth. Therefore this Article cannot apply during his minority—Sidda Reddi v. Deva Jayarami, 51 M.L.J. 557, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1123, 98 I.C. 435.

492. Limitation:—The cause of action arises from the date on which the adoption becomes known to the plaintiff, and not from the date of death of the adoptive father—Ram Chandra v. Narayan, 27 Bom. 614; Shrinivas v. Balvant, 37 Bom. 513; Ganga Sahai v. Lekhraj, 9 All. 253 (269). Under this Article the starting point of limitation will be the time when the alleged adoption becomes known to the plaintiff. If a person who is setting up a case of adoption begins to proclaim the alleged adoption soon after the death of the adoptive father and if the person challenging the adoption is aware of such allegation, the period of limitation in such a case will begin to run immediately after the latter comes to know of the allegation even though the alleged adoption never has taken place—Kashi v. Radhika, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 68, 205 I.C. 133. Where the fact that a claim was made on the basis of an alleged adoption was known to the plaintiff more than six years before the suit was instituted, and he himself had attained majority nearly nine years before the suit was commenced, held that it was barred under this Article—Lala Jagmohan v. Deokinandan, 32 C.W.N. 153 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1927 P.C. 229, 29 Bom L.R. 1386, 4 O.W.N. 832, 53 M.L.J. 301, 106 I.C. 488; Manbhari v. Surti, 40 P.L.R 660, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 193, 180 I.C. 626. Limitation runs when the adoption becomes known to the plaintiff, and the defendant should prove clearly that the suit is barred by reason of the plaintiff having knowledge of the adoption more than six years before the date of institution of the suit. The fact that the adoption deed was registered does not lead to the presumption that the plaintiff must have had knowledge of the adoption from the date of registration of the adoption deed, as registration is not tantamount to notice, and the plaintiff cannot be expected to go on searching the register from time to time to see whether any registered deed affecting his rights has been executed—Gulam Muhammad v. Mirza, 5 Lah. 368, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 25, 84 I.C. 174. Registration of a deed of transfer may amount to notice for the purposes of the Transfer of Property Act (see sec. 3, Ezplanation I of that Act), but the registration of a deed of adoption is not tantamount to notice to the persons affected by the adoption for the purpose of the Limitation Act.

Where the plaintiff executed a deed of adoption in which he declared that he had adopted a certain boy, and afterwards he brought a suit for a declaration that the adoption deed was void and that the adoption had in fact never taken place, the period of limitation for the suit ran from the date of the adoption deed—Udit Narain v. Randhir, 45 All. 169 (176), 69 I.C. 971, A.I.R. 1923 All. 58.

Where the reversioners of a deceased Hindu allow a suit for a declaration of the invalidity of an adoption to become barred by time under this Article, they are not entitled to sue for a declaration that a subsequent gift to the adopted son is not binding upon them, because that gift does not give them a fresh cause of action, in that it does not involve any further denial of the rights of the reversioners than was involved in setting up the adoption in the first place—Khushal Singh v. Kanda, 5 Lah.L.J. 63, 56 I.C. 931, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 389. If the suit for a declaration that the adoption is invalid is barred by time, the plaintiff cannot elude the operation of Art. 118 by suing for a declaration that a gift made by the adoptive female in favour of the adopted son should not bind the plaintiff—Bhoop Singh v. Ramji, 31 P.L.R. 222, 121 I.C. 296, A.I R. 1930 Lah. 438 (439).

Substitute:—The contrary view taken under the peculiar circumstances of the case in Semba Parayan v. Moral, 52 M.L.J. 711, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 674, 102 I.C. 885, has been dissented from in Janikamma v. Jhattareddi, A.I.R. 1956 Andhra 141 (F.B.).

Quaere:—In case of an adoption by a widow, if the nearest reversioner dies before the expiry of the period of limitation (6 years) for a suit to set aside the adoption, and the next reversioner, who was a minor at the date of adoption, brings a suit to set aside the adoption within three years after attaining majority (sec. 8), is the suit barred by limitation? This question was referred to a Full Bench, but not decided, as the decision was unnecessary in view of the fact that the adoption was found to be valid—Annapurnamma v. Appayya, 52 Mad. 620 (F.B.), 56 M.L.J. 760, 119 I.C. 389, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 577.

493. Effect of limitation:—When an adoption is made by a Hindu widow without authority, it is the duty of the immediate reversioner to bring a suit for declaration within the period prescribed by this Article; and if the immediate reversioner fails to bring a suit within that period, the remote reversioner will also be barred—Ayyadorai v. Solai Ammal, 24 Mad. 405 (407); Chiruvolu v. Chiruvolu, 29 Mad. 390 (393, 411) (F.B.); Venkatasivayya v. Polepeddi Adenna, 44 Mad. 218, 39 M.L.J. 621, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 380, 60 I.C. 98. There is a distinction between a suit to set aside an alienation and a suit to set aside an adoption. In suits to set aside alienation by a qualified owner, the immediate reversioner cannot be held to represent the remote reversioners; but in suits to set aside an adoption, the immediate reversioner ought on principle to be held to represent the remote reversioner, so that if the immediate reversioner is barred, the remote reversioner is likewise barred. The right of each and every reversioner to set aside the adoption cannot be viewed as altogether personal to him—Chiruvolu v. Chiruvolu, 29 Mad. 390 (393, 411) (F.B.). The word 'plaintiff' in col. 3 includes a person from or through whom the plaintiff derives his right to sue; therefore, if the nearest reversioner (e.g., daughter) is barred, a remote reversioner (e.g., daughter's son) claiming through the nearest reversioner is also barred—Ayyadorai v. Solai Ammal, supra. The Privy Council has also laid down in Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal, 38 Mad. 406, 42 I.A. 125, that a suit by a presumptive reversioner for a declaration that an adoption is invalid is one brought in a representative capacity on behalf of all the reversioners. The Madras High Court has held in Krishna v. Gomathi, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 450, 1944 M.W.N. 582, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 33 that these principles can not apply where specific allegations of fraud are made by a succeeding reversioner against the previous reversioner and the adopted son. There is an inherent right of action to any person who can prove that a decree which would otherwise bind him cannot be held to bind him on the ground that it was obtained by fraud. Nothing can deprive a succeeding reversioner of his present right of action based on fraud which he asserts between the adopted son and the presumptive reversioner who brought the prior unsuccessful suit. The same view has been taken by the same High Court in a subsequent case, where it has also been held that except in case of fraud, collusion or negligence of the presumptive reversioner or where he has otherwise precluded from representing reversioner the period of limitation to such suit shall start only from the date of the knowledge of the adoption by the presumptive reversioner and the fact that the reversioner next in rank is a minor or is under a disability will not stop the period of limitation from running or give him an extended period of limitation prescribed under sec. 6 of the Limitation Act—Thiruneelakanta v. Velayudha, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 355, 1951 M.W.N. 301, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 824.

But lapse of time does not operate to give validity to an invalid adoption; and if no suit is brought by the reversionary heir within six years to obtain a declaration that the adoption is invalid, the possession by the alleged adopted son for more than 12 years during the lifetime of the widow will not be adverse to the reversioner, who therefore will not be prevented from bringing a suit for possession under Arts. 140 and 141 within twelve years from the date when the widow dies or when the estate falls into possession. The adoption by the widow does not impose upon the reversioner the necessity of filing a suit to have it declared invalid during the lifetime of the widow, under pain of losing the inheritance upon the widow's death—Hari Lal v. Bai Rewa, 21 Bom. 376 (379); Basdeo v. Gopal, 8 All. 644 (646); Natthu Singh v. Gulab, 17 All. 167 (171); Lala Parbhu v. Mylne, 14 Cal. 401 (417); Muhammad Umar v. Muhammad Niazuddin, 39 Cal. 418 (432) (P.C.); Kalyandappa v. Chanbasappa, 48 Bom. 411 (426) (P.C.); Bhagwat v. Murari, 15 C.W.N. 524, 7 I.C. 427, 15 C.L.J. 97; Bapayya v. Akamma, 36 I.C. 355 (Mad.); Bangan v. Mahbub, 55 P.R. 1897.

119. To obtain a declaration that an adoption is valid.	Six years.	When the rights of the adopted son, as such, are interfered with.

494. Suit for declaration, not for possession:—This Article, like the previous one, applies only to a suit for a bare declaration as to the validity of an adoption; it does not apply to a suit for possession, even though the plaintiff may have to establish the validity of the adoption as the basis of his claim to possession—Jagannath v. Runjit, 25 Cal. 354 (359); Chandania v. Salig Ram, 26 All. 40 (48); Lali v. Murlidhar, 24 All. 195; Padajirav v. Ramrav, 13 Bom. 160 (165); Arjan Singh v. Lachhman Singh, 81 P.R. 1914 (F.B.), 25 I.C. 429 (overruling Ram Narain v. Maharaj Narain, 3 P.R. 1904 and Bhupa v. Nigahia, 68 P.R. 1903); Ratnasami v. Akhilandammal, 26 Mad. 291 (per Bhashyam Ayyanger, J.). A suit under sec. 42, Specific Relief Act, for a declaratory decree that an adoption is valid or did take place is governed by Art. 119, but the Article applicable to a suit by an adoptee for possession of immoveable property on the death of a Hindu female who was in possession as the adoptive mother under an agreement, is Art. 141, even if it is necessary to decide in the suit whether an adoption is or is not valid—Bhagirathibai v. Appa Dada, 58 Bom. 280, 149 I.C. 674, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 110. This view is in consonance with the Privy Council decision in Kalyandappa v. Chanbasappa, 48 Bom. 411, and in Padmalav v. Fakira, 12 P.L.T. 653 (P.C.), cited ante.

But it has been held in a Madras case that where plaintiff cannot obtain a decree for possession without a decision that an adoption is valid, the suit for possession is governed by Art. 119—Ratnamasari v. Akilandammal, 26 Mad. 291 (per Moore and Benson JJ.; Bhashyam Ayyanger J. dissenting). But this decision cannot stand as good law in view of the Privy Council rulings in 48 Bom. 411, and 12 P.L.T. 563, referred to above.

A suit by an adopted son for a declaration that a decree which was passed on the basis that there was no adoption is not binding on him, is virtually a suit for a declaration that his adoption is valid, under this Article, because the plaintiff cannot get the declaration he asks for, without establishing the validity of his adoption. The suit cannot be treated as one for possession governed by the 12 years' rule—Bharma v Balaram, 43 Bom. 63 (65).

495. Factum and validity of adoption:—This Article applies to all suits, in which either the factum or the validity of the adoption is denied; and the plaintiff will have to prove the factum as well as the validity of the adoption, i.e., he must show, not only that the adoption in fact took place, but also that the adoption is valid—Laxmana v. Ramapa, 32 Bom. 7 (dissenting from Ningava v. Ramappa, 28 Bom. 94, and Shivram v. Krishnabai, 31 Bom. 80, in which it has been held that this Article is restricted to suits in which only the validity, and not the factum, of the adoption is questioned). "Unlike Article 118, Article 119 does not separately provide for a suit to obtain a declaration that an adoption in fact took place, for the simple reason that the mere factum of adoption will not entitle one to a legal character unless the adoption is also valid. A plaintiff therefore will have to sue for a declaration that his adoption is valid, whether the factum itself is denied by the defendant or the factum is admitted but the validity is challenged"—per Bhashyam Ayyanger J. in Ratnamasari v Akilandammal, 26 Mad. 291.

496. Interference:—The interference mentioned in the third column of this Article is an interference which must amount to an absolute denial of the status of adoption, and an unconditional exclusion from the enjoyment of rights in virtue of that status. This Article can have no application where the interference was of no greater effect than that of merely postponing the right of the adopted son to succeed to the property of his adoptive father—Ningava v. Ramappa, 28 Bom. 94 (101); Maung Gyi v. Maung Gaing, 1 Rang. 186, 74 I.C. 970.

The interference need not necessarily be in relation to the very property sought to be recoverd in the suit; an interference in relation to property other than that sued for would set time running—Akliandammal v. Ratnamasari, 13 M.L.J. 145.

The interference contemplated by this Article is an interference caused by the defendant in the suit, and not an interference by some third party who was in no way connected with the defendant (e.g., an interference by the adoptive father of the plaintiff)—Chandania v. Salig Ram, 26 All. 40 (49).

Alienation, by means of a gift by the adoptive mother in favour of the daughter, is an interference with the rights of the adopted son—Ponnamal v. Ratnamasari, 13 M.L.J. 144.

120.	Suit for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this Schedule.	Six years.	When the right to sue accrues.

497. This is called the 'omnibus' Article of the Limitation Act.

This Article is final and residuary, and the Court ought not to regard a case as coming under this Article unless clearly satisfied that it does not come under any of the other Articles dealing with specific cases—Lala Gobind v. Chairman, 6 C.L.J. 535; Sharoop v. Joggeshur, 26 Cal. 564 (F.B.); Mahomed Wahib v. Mahomed Ameer, 32 Cal. 527; Murlidhar v. Ram Saran, I.L.R. (1946) All. 633, 1947 A.L.J. 170, A.I.R. 1947 All. 256.

498. DECLARATORY SUITS:—

Where the plaintiffs (Digambari Jains) used to worship certain Charans (foot-prints) on a hill, and the defendants removed those Charans and replaced them by Charans of a different type obnoxious to the plaintiffs, a suit by the plaintiffs claiming relief by way of injunction and declaration is governed by Art. 120—Hukum Chand v. Maharaj Bahadur, 12 Pat. 681 (P.C.), 14 P.L.T. 556, 37 C.W.N. 1021 (1028), A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 193, 144 I.C. 346.

A suit by the purchasers of certain land who have obtained possession of the land, for a declaration of their right to have the land registered in their name in the revenue records, is governed by this Article, not by Art. 144—Bhikaji v. Pandu, 19 Bom. 43 (45). A suit for a declaration that the defendant whose name appeared as lessee in a lease-deed had no interest in the lease and that he was only a benamidar for the plaintiff, is not one to cancel or set aside the instrument of lease under Art. 91, but one to which Art. 120 applies, and the cause of action accrues when the plaintiff's position as lessee is challenged—Basant v. Chiddammi, 35 All. 149. (See this case cited under Article 91).

The plaintiff alleged that he was the proprietor of certain land which one of the defendants had wrongfully mortgaged to the others, and prayed that, the mortgage-deed being set aside, the land might be protected from illegal foreclosure by cancelment of the foreclosure proceedings which had been instituted by the mortgagee. It was held that this was not a suit strictly for cancelling or setting aside the instrument of mortgage to which Art. 91 applied, but was rather a suit for a declaratory decree and governed by this Article—Sobha v. Sahodra, 5 All. 322. So also, where the plaintiff sued for maintenance of possession in a certain joint-family property by cancelment, so far as his interest was concerned, of a certain deed of sale by which another co-partner in the same property had purported to convey the whole to a stranger, it was held that the limitation applicable to such a suit was that prescribed by this Article and not that prescribed by Art. 91—Din Dayal v. Hur Narain, 16 All. 73. A land belonging to defendant No. 1 was mortgaged by him to defendant No. 5, and afterwards the plaintiff purchased it at a sale in execution of a certain decree against defendant No. 1; the plaintiff thereupon brought a suit for a declaration that the mortgage was fraudulent and without consideration. Held that the suit fell under Article 120 and not under Article 91—Pachamuthu v. Chinnappan, 10 Mad. 213. (See these cases cited under Art. 91).

A suit for a declaration by a stranger to a decree that his interest can not be affected by the decree, which is a collusive one, is governed by this Article and not by Art. 95—Saburdas v. Gopalji, 45 Bom.L.R. 526, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 283. So also a suit for a declaration that a decree passed is null and void is governed by this article and not by Art. 91—Mt. Sadiqa v. Mir Farsand, A.I.R. 1949 Ajmer 8.

A suit for a declaration that a decree purchased in the name of the defendant who had wrongfully taken out execution of the same, had been really purchased by the plaintiff for his own benefit, and that the defendant was merely a benamdar, is not a suit for relief on the ground of fraud under Art 95 (as no question of fraud arises in the case) but is governed by this Article—Gour Mohun v. Dinonath, 25 Cal. 49 (51). A suit for a declaration that a decree passed against the plaintiff is invalid on the ground that it was passed against him when he was a minor, and that the guardian ad litem was grossly negligent in not properly defending the suit in which the decree wass passed, falls under this Article and time runs not from the date of the decree but from the time when the gross negligence of the guardian became known to the plaintiff —Basavayya v. Bapanna. 58 M.L.J. 349, A I.R. 1930 Mad. 173 (174), 120 I.C. 880. A suit by the heir of the founder of a wakf for a declaration that an alienation of the wakf properties by the mutwalli is void, brought during the lifetime of the alienor, is governed by this Article, and must be brought within six years from the date of the alienation—Muhammad Fahimul Haq v. Jagat Ballabh, 2 Pat. 391, 4 P.L.T. 675, 74 I.C. 403, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 475. A suit for a declaration that an alienation of trust property is invalid and not binding on the trust falls under this Article and not under Article 134 which applies to a suit for recovery of possession of trust properties. Time runs from the date of execution of the sale-deed and not from the time when the plaintiff comes to know of the transfer—Venkatachella v. Collector, 38 Mad. 1064 (1070). But where the suit is for possession of property alienated by the trustee this Article has no application. Such a suit is governed either by Art. 134 or by Art. 144—Ramabai v. Raghunath, 53 Bom.L.R. 883, A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 106.

A suit for a declaration that an alienation made by the karnavan of a tarwad property is not binding on the tarward, is governed by Art. 120. Time runs from the date of the alienation, and not when the plaintiff obtains knowledge of the alienation —Ottapurakal Thazhati v. Pallikal, 33 Mad. 31 (33). A suit by the plaintiffs to follow the estate of their debtor in the hands of the defendant and for a declaration that a mortgage executed by the debtor in favour of the defendant is void as against the creditors of the debtor, is governed by this Article and not by section 10—Greender v. Mackintosh, 4 Cal. 897. A suit for declaration that an alienation made by a Hindu father is not binding on the son as the same was not for legal necessity is governed by this Article—Ram Chandra v. Bhagwan, 48 Bom.L.R. 594, A.L.R. 1947 Bom. 82; Sheo Nandan v. Maida, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 447; Behari v. Dalchand, A.I.R. 1951 Punj. 341. A suit by a Mahomedan widow against the brother of her deceased husband for a declaration of her right to inherit and possess the entire estate of her husband (in accordance with a proved local custom) falls under this Article: it is not a suit for a distributive share of property within the meaning of Art. 123—Mahomed Riasat v Hasin Banu, 21 Cal. 157 (163) (P.C.).

A suit for a declaration that water collected on the land of the plaintiff belongs to him is governed by this article and is within time if filed within six years of the date of the act of the defendant, which is the subject matter of the dispute, to avoid which the declaration is asked for. More over in such a case, so long as the defendant continues to dispute there is a recurring cause of action—Amir v. Kadtu, I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 273, 1945 N.L.J. 80, A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 106.

In a suit for ejectment in a Court of Revenue against H, he pleaded that he was entitled to remain in possession under a certain zur-i-peshgi lease, the term of which had not yet expired. The Court of Revenue treated the question thus raised as falling under sec. 199 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901, and directed H to file a suit in the Civil Court within three months to vindicate his right. H instituted the suit in the Civil Court after more than three months. Held that sec. 199 was not applicable and H was not bound to file his suit in the Civil Court within three months from the date of the order of the Court of Revenue. This was a suit for a declaration, and could be brought within six years of the accrual of the cause of action—Suraj v. Hira, 37 All. 94 (96).

A suit for a declaration that a certificate issued under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act is a nullity and not binding on the plaintiff is governed by this article—Satya v. Province of Besgal, A.I.R 1950 Cal. 467.

Where the suit was in substance a suit for a declaration of the proprietary title of the plaintiff to the land claimed, as well as for correction of the settlement record, held that the plaintiff was entitled to a declaration of his proprietary right, even if his right to demand a correction of the settlement record was lost by lapse of time; held also that Art. 96 was not applicable to the suit but Art. 120—Taja v. Gulam, 35 P.R. 1880; Nathu v. Buta, 27 P.R. 1881.

A suit for declaration that the defendant has no right to use the land for a purpose like starting a sugar mill as he is entitled to use the land as a sehan darwaza and for injunction is governed by this article and not by Art. 32—Ram Narain v. Shripal, 1937 A.L.J. 1231, A.I.R. 1938 All. 20.

A suit for a declaration that a decree in previous suit related to the present suit land and that the plaintiff has acquired title to it by that decree is governed by this Article—Abhoy v. Gopinath, 76 C.L.J. 183, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 460.

499. Declaration of title and possession:—A suit for a declaration of title to, and of possession in, immoveable property of which the plaintiff is in possession, is governed by this Article and not by Article 144—Rajani v. Monaram, 23 C.W.N. 883, 53 I.C. 968; Legge v. Rambaran, 20 All. 35 (F.B.). In the Full Bench case their Lordships said (at p. 36)—"There is the widest possible difference between a suit for a declaration such as is asked for in this suit, and a suit for actual possession of immoveable property. In a suit to which Art. 144 would apply, there must be a prayer, express or implied, for the dispossession of some one from the property or from the interest in it which the suit claims. In the present suit the plaintiffs have most distinctly asserted that they are and have all along been in possession of the property. There is no one to be dispossessed from it or from any interest in it. All that they want to be removed is a cloud, which was cast upon their title." See also Mahabharat v. Abdul Hamid, 1 C.L.J. 73. A suit which is confined to a mere declaration of title and is neither in form or substance a suit for possession of immoveable property is governed by this Article and not by Art. 142 or Art. 144—Jagajit v. Partab, 1942 O.W.N. 508, 44 Bom.L.R. 868, 47 C.W.N. 38, A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 47, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 384 (P.C.),

Where the Zemindars brought a suit against the patnidars for a declaration that they were entitled to and were in possession of the underground rights in a certain mouza, and the suit was brought more than 12 years after the patnidars had worked on the minerals on a large scale held that the suit, taken as a declaratory one, was barred as more than 6 years had elapsed since the right to sue for the declaration accrued; and viewed as a possessory suit, the suit was also barred under Article 144 —Satya Niranjan v. Ram Lal, 4 Pat. 244 (P.C.), 6 P.L.T. 42, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 42, 86 I.C. 289.

An order under the Land Registration Act refusing to register the applicant's name does not amount to a dispossession of the applicant and delivery of possession to the opposite party. When therefore the applicant continues in possession, no suit for recovery of possession lies at his instance, and a suit to have his title declared is governed by Art. 120—Chowdhury Shamanund v. Rajnarain, 11 C.W.N. 186; Kali v. Bhagaban, 1 I.C. 810. Even though in the suit for declaration there be a prayer to set aside the order of the Revenue Officer, the suit will still be governed by this Article, and not by Art. 14, because such prayer is merely a surplusage, as the Civil Court has no power to set aside an order passed under the Land Registration Act—Luchmon v. Kanchun, 10 Cal. 525 (527). Where the plaintiff does not ask to set aside any act or order of an officer of Government in his official capacity but only seeks a declaration, the suit is governed by this Article and not by Art. 14—Abdul v. Secy. of State, 19 Luck. 163, 1943 O.W.N. 118, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 368. But where in a suit of declaration that the tenancy is not of the same nature as recorded by the Revenue Officer the real object is to get rid of the decision of the Revenue Court, this Article will not apply as it is not open to the Civil Courts to give directions to the Revenue Officers and to give a mere declaration as to the nature of the tenancy—Gopaldas v. Satindra, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 749.

The starting point of limitation for a suit praying for a declaration of title is the date when the plaintiff's title was disputed—Sukhdev v. Mathra, 34 P.L.R. 115, 142 I.C. 606, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 412.

The weight of authority seems to be in favour of the view that a suit for declaration of right cannot be held to be barred so long as the plaintiff has a subsisting title to the property. In such a case each invasion of right gives a fresh cause of action—Partab Bahadur Singh v. Jagatjit Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh (394), 164 I.C. 118; Midnapur Zamindary Co. v. Secy. of State, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 349, 69 C.L.J. 51, 43

C.W.N. 57, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 804; Mohamad Bibi v. Shahabuddin, I.L.R. (1940) Lah. 180, 42 P.L.R. 702, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 428; Rura v. Banta, 40 P.L.R. 600, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 227 (the distinction between a fresh invasion and a repetition of previous invasion is a distinction without a difference). Thus where a person interferes with the performance of duties of a lawful holder of Office in possession thereof, each interference gives rise to fresh cause of action—Annasami v. Adivarachari, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 275, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 990, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 81 (F.B.); Province of Orissa v. Durjodhan, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 342. The mere act of forbearance of a previous action on the part of a person in possession cannot debar him from instituting a suit later on when a fresh invasion is made against his title which gives him an independent cause of action—Bhairo v. Ambika, 17 Luck. 805, 1942 O.W.N. 225, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 374. A suit brought within six years from the last invasion of right is therefore, within time—Dasondhi v. Jan Mohammad, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 318. Thus a suit by the plaintiff in possession for declaration of occupancy right in the land is governed by this Article and any denial of his title furnishes a fresh cause of action—Intizamia Committee v. Mani Ram, 42 P.L.R. 180, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 154.

If however the plaintiff is not in possession and he brings a suit for declaration of title long after the same was disputed, his suit is barred—Mehar v. Mehar, 40 P.L.R. 940, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 671.

Attachment by Magistrate:—A suit for declaration of title to property attached by the Magistrate under section 146, Cr. P. Code falls under this Article—Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410 (415); and a fresh period of limitation under section 23 begins to run at every moment of the time during which the attachment continues—Brojendra v. Sarojini, 20 C.W.N. 481, 22 C.L.J. 283, 31 I.C. 242; Panna Lal v. Panchu, 49 Cal. 544, 26 C.W.N. 432, 65 I.C. 200; Jurawan v. Ram Sarekh, 12 Pat. 261, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 224 (233). But see Yeknath v. Bahia, 20 N.L.R. 195, A.I.R. 1925, Nag. 236, and Raja of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, supra, where it was held that the period of limitation ran from the date of attachment, and that there was no continuing wrong.

A suit to set aside an order passed under sec. 147 Cr. P. Code directing that no organised procession of certain communities should pass along certain streets until a Civil Court had declared that there was a right to do so, is governed by Art. 120. There is no continuing wrong caused by the defendants—Punnu Nadar v. Kumaru, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 967, 69 M.L.J. 739, 42 L.W. 599.

Declaration that forfeiture is illegal:—A suit for a declaration that an order of forfeiture under section 153 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879) is illegal, is governed by this Article—Samaldas v. Secretary of State, 16 Bom. 455.

Declaration of periodically recurring right:—A suit not only to establish a periodically recurring right (viz., a right to receive malikana annually pure and simple), but also to establish a right to the property itself, is governed by Article 120, not by Art. 131—Gopi Nath v. Ghugwat, 10 Cal. 697 (708). A suit by the holder of the office of mutawalli or katheeb of a mosque against the Secretary of State for India for a declaration that he was entitled to the yeomiah allowance as the lawful holder of office is a suit to establish a periodically recurring right attached to the office of mutawalli and is governed by Art 131 and not by this Article. The fact that the allowance does not vary from year to year does not make any difference as to the limitation applicable—Batcha v. Secy. of State, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 587, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 374, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 428. A suit for declaration of a right to a share in Toda Giras allowance is a suit to establish a periodically recurring right and is governed by Art. 131 and not by this article—Narendra v. Ude Singji, 49 Bom.L.R.

318, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 451. This article applies to a suit by a jagirdar for the fixed yearly payment due to him from muafidar, inferior holder—Ashan v. Durga, 1942 A.M.L.J. 40. A perpetual right to receive year after year a particular sum of money is not a periodically recurring right, the quantum of the right is defined once for all and not varying according to the circumstances each time it accrues. So a suit to recover arrears of such sum is governed by this Article—Kaliammai v. Shanmuga, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 250, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 20. Where the right to receive an annual allowance is not disputed but the amount only, a suit for recovery of the allowance is governed by this article—Bhalchandra v. Dattatraya, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 401, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 397. A suit for a declaration that the sand in the bed of a certain river was the property of the plaintiff and for compensation for removal of sand on two specified dates would be within limitation under Articles 48 and 49 if brought within three years of the wrongful taking. Even if Article 120 applies by reason of the declaration asked for by the plaintiff, the right to sue will accrue on every fresh invasion and a fresh cause of action will arise when a particular portion of sand is removed by the defendant—Jagadish v. Indian Copper Corporation, 32 Pat. 555, A.I.R. 1953 Pat. 283.

Declaration of heirship:—A suit for a declaration that the plaintiff was the daughter and heiress of the last vatandar would be governed by this Article; and the plaintiff's cause of action accrues not on the death of her predecessor but on the denial of her status by the defendant—Tukabai v. Vinayak, 15 Bom. 422.

Declaration of right to conduct festival in temple:—A suit for a declaration that the plaintiffs have the right to conduct festival in the temple and for declaration that an order passed under sec. 144, Cr. P. Code is illegal, is governed by this article—Srinivasa v. Ramanuyacharyar, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 544, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 322, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 498.

Declaration of invalidity of marriage:—A suit by a Parsi woman for a declaration of the invalidity of her marriage celebrated in her infancy is governed by this Article, and limitation runs from the date of her attaining majority—Bai Shirinbai v. Kharshedji, 22 Bom. 430. The right to sue accrues as soon as the wedding ceremony is performed, or at all events, as soon as defendant claims martial rights. The fact that the plaintiff came to know that the marriage was void only within six years before the institution of the suit, does not extend the period of limitation, when there is no suggestion that she was kept out of knowledge by any fraud on the part of the defendant. The exception in sec. 29 of the Act regarding matrimonial matters, refers only to suits under the Divorce Act—Sophy v. Shivaprasad, 49 C.W.N. 570, A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 484; I.L.R. (1946) 1 Cal. 32.

Declaration on behalf of community:—There is a difference of opinion as to whether this Article applies to a suit for a declaration for a community in a representative suit. According to the Lahore High Court it does: Thus where certain Mahomedan residents bring a suit on behalf of all the Mahomedan residents for a declaration that certain property is a graveyard, the suit is governed by this Article as the acts of the defendants amount to ouster of the plaintiffs from the use of the common land reserved for graveyard—Mohomed v. Mahomed, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 254, 178 I.C. 125. According to the Nagpur High Court it does not. The reason is that the community can not be said to have any knowledge before the institution of the suit that their title was in jeopardy, although some members thereof learnt about the assertion of the adverse title by the defendant—Abdul v. Fakir, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 518, 1946 N.L.J. 511, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 401.

500. Suit by reversioners:—A suit by the reversionary heirs of a stanom for a declaration that a kanom, executed by the person in possession of the stanom in favour of the defendant, is not binding on the plaintiffs or on the stanam, is governed by this Article, and not by Art. 91—Puraken v. Parvathi, 16 Mad. 138 (139).

Where a fraudulent decree is passed against a person in possession with a limited interest, the reversioner is not bound to sue for a declaration of the invalidity of the decree. It is open to him to wait until the succession falls in, and if anything is done thereafter constituting an actual injury to his vested right, then to pursue his remedy. Therefore, where a fraudulent and collusive decree was passed against the widow, and after the widow's death, the decree-holder sought to execute the decree by proceeding to attach the property in the hands of the reversioner (plaintiff), who thereupon sued for a declaration of the invalidity of the attachment, held that the suit was governed by Article 120, and was in time if brought within six years from the date of attachment of the property in execution of the fraudulent decree, though more than six years after the passing of the decree itself, because the injury in respect of which it was necessary for the plaintiff to obtain redress was the attachment and sot the passing of the decree—Tallapragada v. Boorugapalli, 30 Mad. 402 (404, 405), dissenting from Parekh v. Bai Vakhat, 11 Bom. 119.

A suit by the reversioner for a declaration of his title to property sold in execution of a decree against the widow, which decree was alleged to be collusive and fraudulent, is governed by this Article—Chhaganram v. Bai Motigavri, 14 Bom. 512 (514).

A suit brought by the reversioner during the life-time of the widow for a declaration that he is entitled to succeed, on the death of the widow, to property alleged to form part of her husband's estate, which property is in the possession of persons who claim it as their own adversely to the widow, is a suit governed by Article 120 and not by Art. 125, and time ran from the date when the defendants set up their own right—Ramaswami v. Thayammal, 26 Mad. 488 (490).

A suit by a reversioner for a declaration that an alienation made by a female is not binding on him is governed by this article and not by Art. 125—Kuppusami v. Thangavelu, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 214, 1946 M.W.N. 605; Aruna v. Sandhuran, 49 P.L.R. 167, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 290 (F.B.); Bishwanath v. Bachni, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 218.

A suit brought by a remote reversioner, and not by the nearest reversioner, for a declaration that an allenation made by a female is valid only during her life-time, is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art. 125—Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (F.B.); Kunwar v. Bindraban, 37 All. 195; Venkata v. Tuljaram, 1917 M.W.N. 30, 38 I.C. 270; Kalvathal v. Thirupathi, 10 M.L.J. 229; Devraj v. Shiv Ram, 70 P.R. 1914, 25 I.C. 463; Thakar v. Ganeshi, 15 P.R. 1916, 33 I.C. 161; Guntupalli v. Guntupalli, 24 M.L.J. 183, 18 I.C. 710; Suman Singh v. Uttam Chand, 1 Lah. 69, 55 I.C. 924, 91 P.L.R. 1920; Anandi v. Ram Sahai, 27 O.C. 173, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 381, 83 I.C. 1055, 1 O.W.N. 24. So also a suit by the remote reversioner for a declaration that a surrender executed by the widow in favour of her daughter's son with the consent of the daughter is governed by this article—Janaki v. Jyotish, 45 C.W.N. 141, 72 C.L.J. 208, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 41. See also Venkayamma v. Veerayya, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 280. As regards the time from which limitation runs, see Note 509A, infra, under heading "Suit by remote reversioner."

An alienation made by the transferee from a Hindu female in possession with a limited estate, or by a stranger in possession holding under her, may furnish the nearest reversioner with a cause of action for a declaratory suit equally with an alienation made by the Hindu female herself. To such a suit the limitation applicable is that prescribed by Article 120 and not that prescribed by Article 125; and the cause of action arises on the alienation made by the transferee of the female, and not on the transfer by the female herself—Balbhaddar v. Prag Dat, 41 All. 492 (502).

After the death of the widow of a Hindu testator, the reversioners may sue for construction of the testator's will and for a declaration of their reversionary rights. Such a suit may be brought, under this Article, within six years from the death of the widow when they became entitled to possession. A suit for possession would be governed by Article 141—Chukkun v. Lolit, 20 Cal. 906 (925). A suit by a reversioner to restrain waste of moveable properties by the widow and praying that the properties be handed over to a receiver appointed for the purpose of preventing further waste of the properties, and that the donees from the widow be directed to replace any part of the property that can be traced in their hands, is governed by this Article, and time runs from the date of transfer by the widow—Venkanna v. Narasimuham, 44 Mad. 984 (987).

A suit by the reversioner to recover immoveable property on the death of a Hindu female is governed by Article 141, and a like suit in respect of moveable property is governed by Art. 120—Runchordas v. Parvatibai, 23 Bom. 725 (736) (P.C.); Pramatha Nath v. Bhuban Mohan, 49 Cal. 45, 25 C.W.N. 585, 64 I.C. 980; Aurabindo v. Monorama, 55 Cal. 903, 32 C.W.N. 913 (921), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 670. The right to sue accrues on the death of the widow—Runchordas v. Parvatibai, supra. But if the moveable property never reached the hands of the widow, but was all along held adversely to her by a stranger, the right to sue accrues to the reversioner from the date of such adverse possession—Aurabindo v. Monorama, supra.

A suit which has been instituted by the plaintiff after the death of widow whose alienation is challenged in the suit is governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 125. And where the plaintiff is a minor on the date of the alienation by a widow or is born subsequently during the life of the widow he is entitled to the benefit of sec. 6, Limitation Act—Sital Raut v. Adalat Raut, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 256, 16 P.L.T. 484.

501. Suits for pre-emption:—Where the property is not capable of physical possession, and there is no registered deed of sale, a suit for pre-emption is governed by Article 120, and not by Art. 10—Ali Gauhur v. Jawahir, 30 P.R. 1892. A mortgagor selling the right of redemption to the mortgagee in possession does not sell any property which is capable of physical possession within the meaning of sec. 30 (3) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1913. Hence neither the said section nor Art. 10 of the Limitation Act applies. The only article applicable is Art. 120—Kharati v. Ram Lal, A.I.R. 1951 Punj. 45 (F.B.); Gaffar v. Sattar, 160 P.R. 1889. The Allahabad High Court has taken a contrary view in Sahadeo v. Kuber, 1950 A.L.J. 467, A.I.R. 1950 All. 632 and has held that Art. 10 of the Limitation Act applies to a suit for pre-emption on sale of equity of redemption of usufructuary mortgage. The reason given is that though there are qualifications in column 3 but there is none in column 1 of Art. 10 and it is column 1 which decides to what suits the period of limitation mentioned in column 2 applies. Where the pre-emptor is already in possession of the land, and there is no registered deed of sale, a suit for pre-emption is governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 10, and time runs not from the date of sale but when the plaintiff becomes aware of the sale and of the terms of the sale—Mammali v. Kunhipakki, 38 Mad. 67 (70), 23 M.L.J. 607. Where a mortgage by conditional sale had been duly foreclosed under Reg. XVII of 1806, a suit for pre-emption of the mortgaged property did not fall under Article 10 because the property was already in the possession of the vendee-mortgagee and there was no registered deed of sale; Article 120 applied, and the plaintiff's right of pre-emption accrued on the expiration of the year of grace and not from the date of the order of foreclosure—Attar Singh v. Ralla Ram, 103 P.R. 1901 (F.B.); Sheoji Singh v. Sheoji Singh, 129 P.R. 1906; Bahadur v. Alia, 30 P.R. 1907; Ali Abbas v. Kalka, 14 All. 405 (412) (F.B.). In cases of pre-emption on foreclosure this article is applicable—Ganesh v. Mahadeo, A.I.R. 1950 All. 647. A suit to declare a right of pre-emption against the heir of a mortgagee by conditional sale who has foreclosed under Reg. XVII of 1806 is governed by this Article, where the subject of sale does not admit of physical possession and there is no registered deed of sale. Neither Article 10 nor Art. 144 applies to the case. Limitation begins to run from the date of expiry of the year of grace, that being the date when the mortgagee's right becomes mature—Batul v. Mansur, 20 All. 315 (F.B.), affirmed by the Privy Council in 24 All. 17 (26). Where a mortgage by conditional sale of a share in an undivided zamindary village (which is not capable of physical possession), is foreclosed by proceedings taken under the Transfer of Property Act, the period of limitation for a suit for pre-emption runs under this Article from the date when the mortgagee obtains an order absolute for foreclosure and not when the mortgagee makes his application for an order absolute nor from the date fixed in the preliminary decree for payment by the mortgagor—Raham Ilahi v. Ghasita, 20 All. 375 (377, 378); Anwarul-Huq v. Jwala Prasad, 20 All. 358 (361).

A suit by one pre-emptor against another for the determination of the question as to whether the plaintiff or the defendant has the better right to pre-empt the property, is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art. 10—Durga v. Haider, 7 All. 167; Ilahi v. Md. Rab, 80 P.R. 1912, 14 I.C. 328; Ram Pershad v. Ganga, 20 P.R. 1908. A suit for pre-emption against a transferee of the vendee (the transferee being impleaded during the course of the suit against the vendee) falls under Article 120 and not under Art. 10 (which applies to a suit against the vendee himself), for the suit against the vendee's purchaser is in effect a suit for a declaration that the pre-emptor plaintiff is not affected by the second sale, and that the second purchaser shall be bound by the decree which would ultimately be passed between the original parties to the suit. Time runs from the date of the transfer made by the vendee—Karamdad v. Ali Md., 31 P.R 1931 (F.B.), 18 I.C. 70, 61 P.L.R. 1913; Fazal Husain v. Malik, 49 P.R. 1914, 252 P.L.R. 1914, 25 I.C. 443; Hari Ram v. Allah Ditta, 17 P.R. 1915, 186 P.L.R. 1915, 28 I.C. 695; Razawand v. Dukchhar, 1 O.L.J. 196, 24 I.C. 116 (117).

This article and not Article 10, applies to a suit for pre-emption under secs. 177 and 183 of the Berar Land Revenue Code—Govardhan v. Mukharam, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 465, 1949 N.L.J. 290, 4 D.L.R. (Nag.) 157. But where the transfer is a mortgage by conditional sale and a final decree is eventually passed on the basis of that transfer and the sale becomes absolute, Art. 10 applies in view of the language of sec. 174 (1), Berar Land Revenue Code—Zamu v. Ishwardas, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 745, 1951 N.L.J. 165. A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 295. But see Jorawarkhan v. Mukhram, A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 40, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 465, 1949 N.L.J. 290, where it has been held that sec. 174 (1) of Berar Land Revenue Code does not exclude the operation of this Article to cases which do not otherwise fall under Art. 10.

502. Suit on an award:—A suit by the plaintiff to recover money awarded to him against the defendant by an award is not a suit for money governed by the three years' rule, nor a suit for specific performance of a contract under Art. 113 (as an award is not a contract), but is a suit to enforce an award, governed by Article 120, as there is no other Article specially provided for the case—Rajmal v. Maruti, 45 Bom. 329 (335), 22 Bom.L.R. 1377, 59 I.C. 755; Nandalal v. Chhotalal, 49 Bom. 693, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 519; Kuldip v. Mahant, 34 All. 43; Sornavalli v. Muthayya, 23 Mad. 593; Bhajahari v. Behary, 33 Cal. 881; Radha Kishen v. Delhi Cloth Mills, 32 P.R. 1913, 16 I.C. 804. See Note 471 under Art. 113. A suit to enforce an award, whether the same is signed by the parties or not, is governed by Art. 120. It cannot be treated as a suit on a contract. The fact that the award is signed by the parties makes no difference; the award is none the less an award, and does not become a contract when signed by the parties, and Art. 113 or 115 would not apply—Harbhag Mal v. Diwanchand, 102 P.R. 1915, 32 I.C. 88 (89). But a suit for possession of immoveable property based upon an award creating an interest in such property is governed by Art. 144 and not by this article—Kurbanhussain v. Mahomedali, 49 Bom.L.R. 731, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 101. It is not a suit to enforce an award and hence this article does not apply—Kurbanhussain v. Husseinbhai, 50 Bom. L.R. 604; I.L.R. (1948) Bom. 610, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 64.

Suit on compromise decree:—A compromise has got the feature and characteristics both of a cimpromise and of a decree. It must be decided from the circumstances of each case whether the present suit is based on the declaration contained in the previous compromise decree or is a suit based on the contract contained in the compromise. If the compromise decree has declared the right of a party to obtain money found due to him on taking accounts, a suit to recover the monies so found due is a suit based on the decree and does not fall under Art. 115 or 64, but falls under Art. 120—Arunnachlam v. Raja Rajeswari, 22 L.W. 195, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1260, 91 I.C. 338 (341). On the other hand, if the suit is one for compensation for breach of the term of a compromise which has been merged in a decree, the suit falls under Art. 115, and not under Art. 120—Gopal Saran v. Chhakauri, 12 Pat. 792, 15 P. L.T. 197, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 7 (9), 148 I.C. 375.

Decree against minor through gross negligence of guardian:—Where through the gross negligence of the guardian ad litem an adverse decree is passed against a minor, a suit by the minor for a declaration that the decree is not binding on him is governed by Art. 120, and the period of limitation commences to run not from the date of the decree but from the date when the gross negligence of the minor's guardian became known to the minor—Swami Kone v. Sankaravalia, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 804.

A suit by a minor to declare that an ex parte decree passed against him is null and void on the ground that the guardian ad litem was guilty of gross negligence, is governed by Art. 120. Art. 95 which refers to a suit for setting aside a decree obtained by fraud is not applicable to such a suit. The cause of action for the suit arises only when the gross negligence which entitles the minor to have the decree set aside becomes known to him—Mathura Singh v. Ram Rudra, 14 Pat. 824, 16 P.L.T. 484.

503. Suit for injunction:—A suit for a perpetual injunction to restrain the defendant from preventing the plaintiff from entering a certain house falls under this Article; therefore, if it is found that the defendant has been in exclusive possession of the house for more than six years, the suit is barred—Konakasabai v. Muttu, 13 Mad. 445.

A suit by the lessor for an injunction to restrain the lessee from interfering with the lessor's rights under a covenant in the lease to enter upon the land demised and to cut and take away certain trees, is governed by this Article, and not by Article 113, 142 or 144, as none of those articles applies to a suit for injunction—Waziran v. Babu Lal, 26 All. 391 (393).

Where a purchaser of certain trees desires to exercise his right of ownership by cutting them and other party interferes with it, the purchaser's suit for injunction for preventing the other party from interfering with the exercise of his right is governed by this article as no other Article prescribes a period of limitation for such a suit and the cause of action arises when the right sought to be exercised is first interfered with. There is no question of possession of trees involved in the suit and hence Art. 144 can have no application—Ganga v. Nihal, A.I.R. 1952 All. 310.

A suit for an injunction directing the defendants to close some windows newly opened by them on a partition wall, falls under this Article, and must be brought within six years from the date of opening of the windows—Imambhai v. Rahim Bhai, 49 Bom. 586, 27 Bom.L.R. 503, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 373, 87 I C. 977.

An encroachment made by a joint owner by building a chabutra on land reserved for common purposes, claiming it as his own is a wrong complete at the time the construction is put and a suit for injunction is governed by this Article—Khair v. Mt. Jannet, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 359, 191 I C. 42.

A suit for injunction restraining the Government from levying penal assessment under the Madras Land Encroachment Act, 1905 is governed by this Article and not by sec. 14 of the said Act. The word "levied" in the explanation to sec. 14 means "collected" and therefore the mere sending of the notice does not attract the operation of the section—Subramania v. Province of Madras, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 223, 1942 M.W.N. 633, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 660.

This article has no application to a suit brought by the owner of the land on whose land the gallery of another person encroaches for injunction coupled with a claim for possession of land beneath the gallery to which the person making the encroachment has asserted his title—Raju v. Malak, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 580, 1939 N.L.J. 297, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 197. So also this article does not apply to a suit for injunction to restrain the person from interfering with the performance of duties of the lawful holder of an office, such as that of mantrapushpam of a temple. He has a right to bring a suit at any time when the performance of his duties is interfered—Annasami v. Adivarachari, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 275, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 990, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 81 (F.B.); Province of Orissa v. Durjodhan, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 342.

504. Suit for compensation money:—Where a land was acquired under the Land Acquisition Act, but the Collector refused to award any compensation, a suit to recover compensation would be governed by this Article and the right to sue accrued either from the date of the acquisition or the refusal by the Collector to award compensation. Art. 17 or 18 had no application to the case—Remeshwar v. Secretary of State, 34 Cal. 470; Mantharavadi v. Secretary of State, 27 Mad. 535. See notes under Arts. 17 and 18. Where it is admitted that the act was performed under the powers given by the statute and the cause of action alleged is a failure to allot the statutory compensation, this article governs the case—Amar v. Secy. of State, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 583.

505. Suit by principal against agent or his representatives:—A suit by principal against agent for account and for recovery of any money found due on taking accounts is governed by Art. 89; but so far as it seeks to obtain account papers from the agent, the suit is governed by Art. 120, the cause of action arising from the date when such papers are to be submitted according to the contract between them—Madhub v. Debendra, 1 C.L.J. 147.

A suit by the principal to recover money from the legal representatives of the agent is governed not by Article 89 but by this Article—Kumeda v. Ashutosh, 17 C.W.N. 5, 16 I.C. 742; Rao Giraj v. Raghubir, 31 All. 429; Seth Chand Mal. v. Kalian Mal. 96 P.R. 1886; Fatima v. Intiazi, 1 P.R. 1912, 13 I.C. 930. Where in a suit for recovery of certain sums from the sons of the deceased agent, it was found that the agent was under no liability to pay over the sums received by him to the principal directly on receipt, the proper article applicable is either this article or Art. 89—Sadhu v. Krishnamani, 23 Pat.L.T. 457, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 181. This Article has no application to a suit brought against the legal representative after the death of the agent when there is a demand and refusal to render account by the agent. Such a suit is governed by Art. 89—Ashutosh v. Arun, A.I.R. 1950 Dac. 13; (Bindraban v. Jamuna, 25 All. 55 and Rao Girraj v. Rani Raghuber, 31 All. 429 holding this Article will apply to such a suit dissented from).

A suit under sec. 79 of the Lunacy Act against the legal representative of the manager appointed under that Act is governed by this Article—Must. Piari v. Kashi, 1947 O.W.N. 530.

505A. Suit for accounts by agent against principal:—While there is a specific Article for a suit by a principal against his agent, there is no such Article for the converse case. But a suit for accounts not covered by any specific Article falls under Article 120, and hence a suit for accounts by an agent against his principal would be governed by this Article. When a plaintiff is claiming commission to which he would be entitled on an account being taken and not compensation in lieu of what he was entitled to under the contract, it is a suit for an account and not a suit for compensation for breach of contract So Article 115 has no application to the case—Basant Kumar v. Roshanlal, I.L.R. 1954 Nag. 435, A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 300.

506. Suit in respect of trusts:—A suit for enforcement of the plaintiff's personal right to manage the trust properties is not a suit to recover the properties for the purposes of the trust; consequently section 10 cannot apply and the suit is governed by this Article—Balwant v. Puran, 6 All. 1 (P.C.). So also a suit for declaration that certain properties are public, religious, trust properties is governed by this Article and not by sec. 10—Shamdas v. Gurmukh, I.L.R. (1945) Kar. 40, A.I.R. 1945 Sind. 57. A suit to recover property settled on invalid trust would fall under this Article and not under section 10. The period of limitation commences from the time when the property was transferred to the trustees; because, in the case of invalid trusts, a resulting trust in favour of the donor accrues immediately the subject of the trust is transferred to the trustees, and the right to sue for it arises at once. It cannot be said that the right to sue arises only when the trustees refuse to recognise the resulting trust—Cowasji v. Rustomji, 20 Bom. 511. So also where a trust fails or comes to an end, a resulting trust arises in favour of the contributors or subscribers or in case of their death, their legal representatives. A suit by a contributor to recover his share is governed by this Article and the limitation commences to run from the date when there is a failure of the purpose whereupon the resulting trust arises—Lakshmanan v. Ramaswamy, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 616, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 641.

A suit by a trustee to recover the advances made by him to meet the expenses of the trust, during his trusteeship, is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art. 132, and the period of limitation runs from the time when he ceases to be the trustee, i.e., when he is judicially declared to be no longer the trustee or when he is dispossessed of the trust estate in pursuance of the judicial declaration. Limitation cannot run until there is a successor whom the plaintiff can sue; unless he can sue his successor, there can be no right of suit and therefore limitation cannot start running—Abkan Saheb v. Saran, 38 Mad. 260 (264, 265), 28 M.L.J. 347, 28 I.C. 190. So also, a suit by a trustee against the beneficiaries to recover certain moveable property belonging to the trust for the trust is governed by this Article and not by Art. 48 or Art. 49 and the time for limitation begins to run from refusal of the beneficiaries to return the property—Jogodeb v. Sibkanto, A.I.R. 1949 Assam. 10.

A suit against the banker by a co-trustee to recover trust moneys wrongly applied by the banker in reduction of the private debts owed by the other co-trustees is governed by this article and the right to sue accrues when the trust funds are wrongly transferred or misapplied. But if the plaintiff co-trustee is kept in ignorance of a breach of trust the right to sue does not accrue until the trustee becomes aware of the fact—Nagappa v. O. Rm. Firm, I.L.R. (1939) Mad. 121, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 625, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 999, affirmed on appeal by the Privy Council in O. Rm. Firm v. Nagappa, 67 I.A. 448, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 175, 45 C.W.N. 385, 73 C.L.J. 166, 43 Bom.L.R. 440, A.I.R. 1941 P.C. 1, 1941 P.W.N. 299, (1941) 1. M.L.J. 393 (P.C)

A suit by the deceased shebait's son to recover the advances made by the deceased shebait to meet the expenses of the uebuttor estate at a time when he had been wrongfully kept out of the office by the defendant is governed by this Article. The cause of action accrued when the plaintiff's father died, and not when the advances were made—Pedry v. Narendra, 37 Cal. 229 (234) (P.C.).

Suit for improper management of trust funds:—The defendant neglected to purchase properties with the surplus income of a mosque as required by the trust deed. A suit was brought by the Advocate-General (under section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908), and it was claimed in that suit that the defendant should be charged with interest on the uninvested funds, so as to make up for the loss of rent which would have been recovered if properties had been purchased. It was held that the claim fell within this Article and was barred except as to six years prior to the filing of the suit—Advocate-General v. Moulavi Abdul Kadir, 18 Bom. 401 (424). This article is the proper article applicable to a suit filed against a trustee or ex-trustee, by a co-trustee or a succeeding trustee of a public trust to make good the loss sustained by the trust by reason of the defendant's omission to collect monies due to the trust. The starting point of limitation will depend upon the circumstances of the case. If the breach is committed by the sole trustee, the right to sue arises when a new trustee is appointed. But in case of several trustees the limitation will run immediately the loss is occasioned when some of them are not themselves liable. But the position will be the same as in the case of defaulting sole trustee when all the trustees are liable for the breach of the trust. In case of a private trust the cesti que trust will ordinarily have the right to sue from the date of the breach of the trust—Subbiah v. Samiappa, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 586, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 334, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 353 (F.B.).

507. Suit against son to recover father's debts:—A suit against the son to enforce the liability under the Mitakshara Law to pay the father's debt, on the ground of the pious obligation of the son under the Hindu law to pay the debt due by the father, is governed by this Article, whether the debt is based on a bond—Narsingh v. Lalji, 23 All. 206 (208); or on a mortgage—Brijnandan v. Bidya Prasad, 42 Cal. 1068 (1092) (F.B.); Mahdraj v. Balwant, 28 All. 508 (516); or on a surety bond—Jivram v. Kantilal, 52 Bom.L R. 104, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 247 or on a decree obtained against the father—Periasami v. Seetharama, 27 Mad. 243 (246, 254) (F.B.); Ramayya v. Venkataratnam, 17 Mad. 122 (129); Natasayyam v. Ponusami, 16 Mad. 99 (101). In the Madras Full Bench case, the Judges expressed the opinion that if the suit were brought upon the original cause of action i.e., upon the original debt due by the father, the Article of limitation applicable would have been the same as against the father, and not Article 120, but the Article applicable to a suit brought against the son on the cause of action arising from the decree against the father is Article 120—Periasami v. Seetharama, 27 Mad. 243 (246, 254).

In case of a bond executed by the father, time ran when the bond became payable—Narsingh v. Lalji, supra; in case of a mortgage executed by the father, the period ran from the due date of payment of the mortgage money or from the date of the father's death—Maharaj v. Balwant, supra; in the case of the surety bond executed by the father the cause of action against the sons for a suit in respect of the debt is the same as the cause of action which the creditor has against the father, i.e., upon the failure of the persons for whom the father executes the surety bond to pay—Jivram v. Kantilal, supra; and in case of a suit to enforce against the sons the decree-debt due by the father, time runs from the date of the father's death—Natasayyan v. Ponnusami, 16 Mad. 99 (102); but in another Madras case it has been held that time runs from the date of the original debt, and not from the date of the father's death because the creditor does not obtain a fresh right to sue the son for his father's debt on the death of the father. There are not two causes of action in such a case—Mallesam v. Jugala Panda, 23 Mad. 292 (F.B.) (dissenting from 16 Mad. 99). If the decree passed against the father had provided for payment of the money by instalments, time begins to run (in the suit against the sons) from the date on which each instalment becomes due—Ramayya v. Venkataratnam, 17 Mad. 122, (129). Where the creditor obtains a decree against the father alone on the surety bond executed by him after a partition between the family, the creditor cannot contend that he is entitled to sue for a declaration that in execution of the decree the son's interest is liable to be brought to sale although at the time when the suit for declaration is filed the creditor's claim for debt against the sons on the basis of the pious obligation is barred by time—Jivram v. Kantilal, supra.

A suit by the principal to recover money from the sons and grandsons of the agent on the ground of their pious liability is governed by this Article and the cause of action accrues on the death of the agent—Rao Girraj v. Raghubir, 31 All. 429 (438). See Note 414 under Art. 89.

508. Other suits:—Right to worship idol:—A suit for declaration of an exclusive right to worship an idol is not a suit to establish a periodically recurring right under Article 131 but is governed by this Article—Eshan Chunder v. Monmohini, 4 Cal. 683 (685).

Value of goods misappropriated:—Certain goods of the plaintiff which remained with the defendant's brother, had been appropriated by the latter to his own use. After his brother's death, the defendant sold the goods and held the proceeds as the agent of the widow of his deceased brother. Plaintiff brought the suit to recover the money from the defendant. Held that neither Article 48 nor 62 applied to this suit; the suit was one to enforce an equitable claim on the part of the plaintiff to follow the proceeds of his goods in the hands of the defendants and that Article 120 applied, there being no other Article applicable to the case—Gurudas v. Ramnarain, 10 Cal. 860 (P.C.). So also where before a decree for specific performance is passed in respect of an agreement to assign a particular decree, the defendant withdraws the money deposited in respect of the said decree and the plaintiff files a suit to recover it, it is a suit to enforce an equitable claim to follow the money withdrawn by the defendant contrary to agreement and comes under this article and not Art. 62, the starting point being the date of the conveyance of the decree—Fakir Chand v. Shamrao, 1941 N.L.J. 665. The claim against a benamdar in respect of monies received and held by him for the benefit of the real owner is an equitable one and a suit to realise the money realised is governed by this article—Debarajulu v. Jayalakshmi, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 222, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 767; Karamamurthi v. Ramanatha, I.L.R. (1946) Mad. 306, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 140,, A I.R. 1946 Mad. 248. The application to the Insolvency Court by an Official Assignee on behalf of the general body of creditors of the insolvent for recovery of property acquired by the insolvent after adjudication and entrusted to a third party is governed by this Article. The reason being that such an application is a proceeding to enforce an equitable claim and follow the property in the hands of the third party. Time begins to run from the date of knowledge of the Official Assignee as to his rights—Official Assignee v. Munuswamy, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 26. The same principle applies to a suit for realisation of the share of the sale proceeds of the property purchased by two persons in the name of one on sale of the property by the other. Such a suit is governed by this Article—Venkataseshayya v. Subramaniyam, (1950) 2 M L J. 611, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 547. A suit for recovery of share of money spent for purchase of stamp for a sale certificate issued in the names of joint purchasers is governed by this article and the cause of action arises not at the date of purchase of stamps but when they are actually utilised for the purpose, viz., the date of sale certificate—Meyappa v. Ramaswami, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 494, 1940 M.W.N. 982. Where a suit is for profits of property entrusted to the defendant for safe custody and management, this article applies and not Art. 62—Mahadeoji v. Baldeo, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 92, 1941 N.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 181.

Recovery of security deposit:—Where A made a deposit as security for the discharge of his duties as manager of an estate, which deposit was liable for all sums not accounted for by him, and a suit was, after his dismissal from appointment, brought by him for the recovery of the deposit, it was held that this Article applied to the case, and time began to run not from the date of his dismissal, but from the time when the account of charges due against the deposit was made and sent in to him—Upendra Lal v. Collector, 12 Cal. 113 (115).

Ousting a shebait:—A suit to oust a shebait or mutwalli from his office, the appointment to which is not hereditary but has been made by nomination, is one for which no period of limitation is specially provided and is therefore governed by this Article—Jagannath v. Birbhadra, 19 Cal. 776 (779); Debendra v. Sefatulla, 31 C.W.N. 184 (191), A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 130. So also, where the office of the shebait is not hereditary, a suit in which the main relief asked for is that a person is not the shebait and that the deed appointing him as such is invalid is governed by this article. Such a suit is therefore time barred if not brought within six years from the date of the deed. Art. 124 has no application to such a suit—Nirmal v. Jyoti, 42 C.W.N. 1138, 68 C.L.J. 230, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 709.

Enforcing charge against moveable property pledged:—In a suit on a pledge of certain moveable property given by the defendant as security for a loan of money, the plaintiff prayed for a decree for the money against the defendant personally, and also prayed that the charge might be enforced against the property pledged. It was held that the prayer for a personal decree was governed by Art. 57, but so far as the plaintiff sought to enforce his charge against the property pledged, the suit fell under Article 120—Nimchand v. Jagabundhu, 22 Cal. 21 (24); Madan v. Kanhai, 17 All 284; Mahalinga v. Ganapathi, 27 Mad. 528 (530) (F.B.). Thus, where a plaintiff who had lent money on the security of eight black buffaloes, sought by his suit to enforce payment of the money charged upon the buffaloes and did not seek to get a personal decree against the debtor, the suit fell under this Article—Deokinandan v. Popua, 16 A.L.J. 449, 40 All. 142.

A decree is a moveable property; and a hypothecation of a decree is therefore a hypothecation of moveable property, governed by Art. 120. But where the decree is converted into immoveable property, that is, where the mortgagor decree-holder purchases certain immoveable property of his judgment-debtor in satisfaction of the decree, the mortgagee becomes entitled to the substituted security and also the larger period of limitation provided by Art. 132—Jamna Dei v. Lala Ram, 39 All. 74 (78).

Suit by alienee from co-parcener:—The only right which the purchaser from a member of a Hindu joint family acquires is the right to sue for partition. To a suit for partition by him this article applies and not Art. 142 or Art. 144—Shevantbai v. Janardan, 41 Bom.L.R. 631, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 322. But where in execution of a decree obtained by a creditor against the manager of a Hindu family, the property is sold and described with boundaries in the sale certificate, the auction purchaser has the right to bring a suit for possession and such a suit is governed by Art. 144 and not this article—Vishnu v. Vishvanath, I.L.R. (1946) Bom. 106, 47 Bom.L.R. 1102, A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 192. The view expressed in Shevantbai v. Janardan, supra, was dissented from in Thani Chettiar v. Dakshinamurthy, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 288, and it has been held in the latter case that a suit by an alienee of an undivided share from a coparcener of a Hindu joint family will fall under Article 144 so long as the property concerned is immovable property. The suit is a suit for possession of immovable property or an interest therein.

Apportionment of rent:—A suit by a tenant against his landlord for apportionment of the rent payable to such landlord for the portion of land obtained by the landlord on partition with his co-sharers, is not a suit for abatement of rent, but for apportionment of rent and for a declaration that after the partition the share of the rent which the plaintiff is liable to pay to the defendant is as it is stated in the plaint; there being no special provisions for a suit of this description, it is governed by this Article —Durga v. Ghosita, 11 Cal. 284 (286). But a suit by the holder of one share against the holders of other shares in an inam land included in a single patta and assessed in an entire sum, for apportionment of the assessment, cannot be barred by this Article or by any other Article of the Limitation Act. So long as the joint liability lasts, each is entitled to claim an apportionment, and such claim can no more be time-barred than a claim for rent so long as the title to the land is not extinct. The suit is not therefore barred even if it is brought more than six years after the date of an order of a revenue officer making a previous apportionment of the assessment, as such order cannot be treated as conclusive—Anand v. Viyyanna, 15 Mad. 492 (493, 494).

Suit under Or. 21, r. 63 by unsuccessful claimant before judgment:—This article applies to a suit brought by an unsuccessful claimant whose claim to property attached before judgment had been preferred and rejected before the decree has been passed—Dhan Bibi v. Mrinalini, 49 C.W.N. 111, 79 C.L.J. 181, A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 449, I.L.R. (1945) 1 Cal. 547. See, however, Durga Dei v. Sadananda, A I.R. 1952 Orissa 182.

Suit under O. 21, r. 93 for recovery of purchase-money—No special period of limitation was fixed for suits brought under sec. 315, C.P.C., 1882 (O. XXI, r. 93, C. P. Code, 1908), for recovery of the purchase money paid by the plaintiff, on the ground that the judgment-debtor possessed no saleable interest in the property in question; and therefore this Article applied to those suits—Nilkanta v. Imamsahib, 16 Mad. 361. But according to the Calcutta High Court, the suit was held to be governed by Article 62—Ram Kumar v. Ram Gour, 37 Cal. 67 (70). Under the Code of 1908, the law has been materially altered, and the remedy of the auction-purchaser who seeks to recover purchase money under O. 21, r. 93, on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property, is not by a suit, but by an application, and such application is governed by Article 181—Makar Ali v. Sarfuddin, 27 C.W.N. 183, 50 Cal. 115 (122). But where the execution sale took place and was confirmed before the new C. P. Code of 1908 came into operation, and the auction purchaser brought a suit, after the passing of the C. P. Code of 1908, to recover the purchase money, held that the right of the purchaser to maintain the present suit must be determined with reference to the Code of 1882 when the sale took place and confirmed, and that right was not extinguished by the promulgation of the Code of 1908. The suit was therefore governed by Article 120 of the Limitation Act of 1877 —Ibid.

Where upon a sale being set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtor under sec. 311, C. P. Code (1882), a suit is brought under sec. 315, C. P. Code, by the auction purchaser for recovery of a sum of money from the person who had, after the sale and the deposit of the money in Court, attached that sum in execution of his decree against the judgment-debtor, as representing the surplus sale proceeds belonging to the original judgment-debtor after satisfaction of the decree obtained against the debtor by the decree-holder, the suit is governed by this Article—Amrita Lal v. Jogendra, 40 Cal. 187 (191). So also where the sale is set aside at the instance of a third party, a suit for recovery of purchase money deposited in Court by the auction purchaser from persons who were rateably paid is governed by this Article and not by Art. 62 or Art. 97—Sharmchand v. Anjuman Imdad, 228 I.C. 479.

Suit for profits of share of intestate's property:—A suit by an heir of an intestate to recover the share of profits accruing after the death of the intestate, from another heir who was in possession of the property, falls under this Article, and not under Article 109, because the occupation of a co-heir cannot be said to be 'wrongful'; Art 123 cannot apply, as the claim is not as regards the corpus of the estate—Maung Po v. Maung Shwe, 1 Rang 405, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 155, 76 I.C. 855; U. Aung v. Daw Mya, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 416; Daw Ein v. Daw Chan, 1940 Rang.L.R. 136, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 365.

Customary dues:—A suit to recover merais or customary dues payable by the defendants for the benefit of a chattram on account of lands held by them is governed by this Article and not by Art. 110, because the dues are not rent claimed by the plaintiff as landlord but as due to the chattram by custom—Venkatagava v. District Board, 16 Mad. 305 (307).

A suit by a landlord to recover from his tenant haq-i-chharum (i.e., one-fourth of the purchase-money due to the proprietor of a mohalla on the sale of a house situated in it) on the ground of local custom, is governed by this Article—Kiratha v Ganesh, 2 All. 358; Sham v. Bahadur, 18 All. 430. Article 62 does not apply; moreover, it is not a suit to enforce any charge on the property; therefore Art. 132 does not apply—Ibid.

A suit to recover a sum of money on account of marriage dues, due to the plaintiff by custom as an emolument of a hereditary office held by him in a temple, is not one for the possession of an interest in immoveable property. Consequently, Article 144 cannot apply; the suit is governed by this Article—Rathna v. Tiruvenkata, 22 Mad. 351 (353).

Suit for recovery of provident fund:—A suit by a servant of the Calcutta Corporation for the recovery of provident fund amount standing to his credit is governed by this article—Jatindra v. Corporation of Calcutta, I.L.R. (1944) 1 Cal. 463, A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 144.

Right to establish a market:—A suit against a Municipal Committee for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to establish a market on their own land and for a perpetual injunction restraining the Collector as the President of the Municipal Committee from interfering with their so doing, falls under this Article, and must be brought within 6 years from the date on which the Municipality refused permission—Biraj Mohun v. Collector, 4 All. 102 (106), affirmed on appeal, 4 All. 339 (F.B.).

Suit for share of profits in a ferry:—A suit by some of the co-sharers of a ferry against the other co-sharers for recovery of their share of the profits of the ferry is governed by this Article and not by Art. 36 or 115. Article 36 cannot apply because it is not the plaintiff's case that the defendant dispossessed them or committed any tort; Article 115 cannot apply because there is no proof of any express or implied contract on the part of the defendants to pay to the plaintiffs their share—Kishun Dayal v. Kishen Deo, 1 P.L.J. 69 (70), 35 I.C. 430.

Damages for use and occupation:—Some of the joint tenants of certain lands took the use and occupation of part of the joint lands, to the exclusion of the other joint tenants, who afterwards brought a suit for compensation for such use and occupation. It was held that the period of limitation for such a suit was governed by this Article (and not by Article 110, because the suit was not one for rent); and that, therefore, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover compensation for six years—Watson v. Ramchand, 23 Cal. 799; Madar v. Kader Moideen, 39 Mad. 54 (56). So also, a suit against a co-sharer landlord under sec. 22 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act for a fair and equitable sum for the use and occupation of land held by him to the exclusion of the other co-sharers, is governed by this Article—Suresh v. Kumud, 41 C.W.N. 1090, 67 C.L.J. 74. A suit for damages for use and occupation of a shop after notice to quit is governed by this article—Sukhdei v. Lachmi, 1946 A.L.J. 305. This article applies to a suit by a purchaser at a revenue sale against the under tenure-holder for use and occupation from the date of sale upto the date of annulment of the under tenure —Bibhuti v. Promoda, 43 C.W.N. 469, 69 C.L J. 220, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 468.

Suit for possession by non-occupancy raiyat:—If a non-occupancy raiyat has been dispossessed from his holding (either by the landlord or by a trespasser) otherwise than by execution of a decree, then if his tenancy has not yet been determined, he has a title to the land, viz., the title of a tenant, and his suit to recover possession of the holding on the basis of title is not a suit under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and is not therefore governed by Article 3, but falls under this Article or Art. 142—Tamizuddin v. Ashrub, 31 Cal. 647 (651) (F.B.).

Suit for arrears of assessment:—A suit by an inamdar for arrears of assessment against a person who was not let into possession by the plaintiff under any agreement but who held the lands in the village, is not a suit for rent under Article 110 (because there is no relationship of landlord and tenant) but is governed by Art. 120—Sadasiv v. Ramkrishna, 25 Bom. 556; see also Kasturi v. Anantaram, 26 Mad. 730. So also a suit for assessment of fair and equitable rent and compensation for use and occupation is governed by this article when the only dispute is the amount payable and not the liability to pay—Manindra v. Baramdi, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 400.

Suit for mutation of name in share register:—This Article applies to a suit for declaration of title in respect of shares purchased in execution sale after execution of share transfer deed by the Court in terms of Or. 21, r. 80, C. P. Code, for mutation of name in share register, for recovery of dividends and for perpetual injunction—Mahadeo v. New Darjeeling Union Tea Co., 55 C.W.N. 408, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 58.

Suit by share-holder for dividends:—A suit by shareholders of a limited company for arrears of dividends is governed by Article 120 (and not by Art. 116)—Rama Seshayya v. Tripurasundari Cotton Press, 49 Mad. 468 (F B.). The Calcutta High Court has held that such a suit is governed either by this Article or by Art. 116—Hariseswar v. Khorooriah Majojil Zemindary Syndicate, 48 C.W.N. 693. The Bombay High Court has held that such a suit is governed by Art. 116 and not by this Article—Lalita v. Tata Iron and Steel Co., Ltd., I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 165, 42 Bom.L.R. 57, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 97 (F.B.). The reason given is that the words "writing registered" in Art. 116 includes a document registered with the Registrar of joint stock companies under the Indian Companies Act. See Note 480 under Article 116. The company does not, by the mere declaration of a dividend, become a trustee of the dividend for the share-holder; on the other hand, upon the declaration of the dividend by a company, the dividend becomes at once a debt. Banning, p. 35. In a suit by a share-holder for dividend, time runs from the declaration of the dividend—In re Severn Ry. Co., [1896] 1 Ch. 559; Re Artisans' Land Corporation, [1904] 1 Ch. 796. The starting point is the breach of contract which gives the right to sue—Lalita v. Tata Iron and Steel Co., Ltd., supra.

Suit by official liquidator for calls:—A suit by the liquidator of a company, after winding up, against a shareholder for the amount of calls on the shares taken by him, is governed by Art. 120; if the suit was brought by the company itself, Art. 112 would have applied—Parell S. & W. Co. v. Manekji, 10 Bom. 483. The same High Court has taken a contrary view in Md. Akbar v. Associated Banking Corp. Ltd., 52 Bom.L.R. 559, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 386 and has held that such a suit is governed by Art. 112 and not by this article. Their Lordships have held that the case reported in 10 Bom. 483 must be held to have been overruled or at least erroneous in view of the observation of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Hansraj v. Dehra Dun M. E. T. Co., 35 Bom.L.R. 319, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 63. But the view expressed in Md. Akbar v. Associated Banking Corp. Ltd., supra, was dissented from recently by the Nagpur High Court in—L. Gupta v. Sarvate, A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 204, where it was held that a suit by the liquidator of a company for the recovery of calls is governed by Article 120. An order made by a liquidation Court is not a decree though it is enforceable in the same manner as if it were a decree. A suit on a call order passed by a liquidation Court in Baroda being not a suit on a foreign judgment is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art 117—Modern Chemical Works Ld. v. Manmohan Nath Dar, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 975.

Suit against directors of a company:—A suit by the official liquidator under sec. 235 of the Indian Companies Act (1913) calling upon the directors and the auditor to make good a large sum of money of the company which they have allowed to be mis-spent, is governed by this Article, and not by Article 36, 115 or 116—In re Union Bank, 47 All. 669, 23 A.L.J. 473, A.I.R. 1925 All. 519. A suit against the directors for misapplication of the company's funds in ultra vires transactions falls under this Article, and time runs from the date on which the balance-sheet showing the losses ascertained was laid before the company at its general meeting—Govind v. Rangnath, 54 Bom. 226, 32 Bom.L.R. 232, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 572 (584). See also Narasimha v. Official Assignee, 54 Mad. 153, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 58, 128 I.C. 477.

This article has no application to a suit for compensation for loss suffered as a result of misleading prospectus against the directors of the company—Dwarkadoss v. Manavedan, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 325, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 286, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 5; Rajah of Nilambar v. Amirchand, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 431, 57 L.W. 312. Such a suit is governed by Article 36—Ibid.

Suit for rectification of register of company:—An action under sec. 38 of the Companies Act for rectification of the register is governed by this article and not by Article 48 or 49 as such an action is not for detunue or trover—Jawahar Mills Ltd. v. Official Receiver, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 88, 1949 M.W.N. 424.

Suit by company:—A suit by a company for the recovery of money due to it, but which had been realised by a decree-holder against the company during the pendency of an application for winding up of the company is governed by this article and not by Art. 62. As the company could not have claimed refund of the amount realised by the decree-holder before the order for winding up the cause of action arises only on that date and not the date of payment to the decree-holder—Gorakpur Electric Supply Co. Ltd., v. Nariman & Co., I.L.R. (1947) All. 203, 1947 A.L.J. 319.

Suit for mesne profits:—A suit for recovery of the profits of immoveable property received by the defendant during the period he was in possession of the property by virtue of a decree of Court (which was afterwards set aside) is governed by this Article and not by Art. 109, because the receipt of profits during that period under a decree which was valid at the time cannot be said to be 'wrongful' within the meaning of Art. 109. The cause of action arises when the decree by virtue of which the defendant obtained possession is set aside—Holloway v. Ghaneshwar, 3 C.L.J. 182 The right to sue for the profits of the entire period between the date of the sale and the date of its confirmation accrues only on the date of confirmation and Art. 120 and not Art. 109 applies. So also a suit for recovery of rents and profits received by the defendant during the period he was in possession as land-holder recognised by the Collector under the Madras Estates Land Act (which was subsequently cancelled in view of Order in Council in a Civil suit) is governed by this article and not by Art. 109 and the right to sue accrues each time the defendant realised rents and profits and claim for profits received more than six years before the suit fails—Krishnayya v. Maharaja of Pithapuram, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 562, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 472, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 487. A suit by a revenue sale purchaser for mesne profits after the date of annulment of the under tenure is governed by this article—Bibhuti v. Promoda, 43 C.W.N. 469, 69 C.L.J. 220, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 468.

Suit on a pro-note:—A suit on a pro-note payable at any time within six years on demand from the date of its execution was held to be governed by this Article, as it is a special form of note not contemplated by Art. 73, and time ran from the date of the note—Sanjivi v. Errappa, 6 Mad. 290. Mr. Rustomji has rightly criticised this ruling on the ground that Article 80 which is the residuary Article in respect of pro-note ought to have been applied, and not the most residuary Article 120; and that the cause of action arose on the expiry of six years from the date of execution of the pro-note. the pro-note being taken as one payable after six years from its date. See Rustomji, 3rd Edn., p. 353.

Suit to recover money drawn out of Court by defendant:—Where the defendant under colour of a decree, since reversed, has intercepted the money which the plaintiff has realised by summary process under sec. 583, C. P. C., and the latter sues to recover by way of restitution the money so intercepted, his suit is governed by this Article—Narayana v. Narayana, 13 Mad. 437 (442). A suit for the recovery of money wrongfully withdrawn by the defendant from Court by setting up an adverse title to the claim of the plaintiff is governed by this article—Kanji v. Kalidas, 69 C.L.J. 108, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 413.

Suit for possession of office:—A suit for possession of the office of Dharmakarta of a temple based on a right by prescription and not on a hereditary right to it, and for possession of the property attached to it, is governed by this Article and not by Art. 124; Art. 144 also does not apply as the right to the land was only secondary and dependent upon the right to the office—Kidambi Raghavacharlu v. Tiru Malai. 26 Mad. 113 (115); Gajanan v. Ram Rao, I.L.R. 1954 Nag. 302, A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 212. So also a suit filed under sec. 36, proviso (3) of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act for a declaration that the plaintiff is the nearest heir of the last holder of a watan is governed by this article—Basangowda v. Fakirgowda, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 123, 40 Bom.L.R. 1288, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 56.

Suit for removal of defacto mutwalli:—This article applies to a suit to remove an unauthorised mutwalli. If no suit is brought within six years, the defacto mutwalli acquires an indefeasible title—Mst. Kamon v. Allah Bakhsh, 41 P.L.R. 166.

Suit by contributors to a common fund for distribution:—Plaintiffs, who had contributed to a common fund to be utilised for family requirements, brought a suit in which they claimed that their shares in the said fund should be determined and paid. Held that the suit was neither a partnership suit under Article 106 nor a suit based on contract under Article 113 or 115, that the claim was one which must be dealt with on equitable principles apart from any question of partnership or of contract, and that Article 120 applied and the cause of action accrued from the date on which the defendants refused to recognise the rights of the plaintiffs—Commercial Bank v. Allavoodeen, 23 Mad. 583 (592).

Suit for reimbursement against minor:—A suit by a person who has supplied a minor with necessaries such as maintainance and litigation expenses to reimburse himself from the minor's property is governed by this article—Rajarathna v. Shaiek Mahboob, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 27, 1939 M.W.N. 798, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 106.

Suit for recoupment of loss against receiver:—A suit against a receiver appointed under Or. 40, r. 1, C. P. Code for recoupment of the loss alleged to have been caused by his negligent management with leave of the Court appointing the receiver at the time of dealing with objections to the receiver's accounts is governed by this Article —Ram Chandra v. Baidyanath, 46 C.W.N. 294, I.L.R. (1942) 1 Cal. 577, 75 C.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 483.

Suit for accounts:—Under the previous Act, following the English law, a suit for accounts against a trustee was governed by six years' rule under Article 120. See Saroda Pershad v. Brojo Nauth, 5 Cal. 910; Advocate-General v. Bai Punjabai, 18 Bom. 551 (566, 567). But after the words "or for an account of such property or proceeds" have been added to section 10 in the Act of 1908 such a suit falls under section 10, and is never barred. See Note 117A under sec. 10. But a suit for accounts against a person who is not a trustee is governed by Article 120. Thus, the karta of a family cannot be said to be a person in whom the property of the family is 'vested' for a specific purpose; he is not therefore a trustee; a suit against him for accounts is not governed by sec. 10 but by this Article—Biswambhar v. Giribala, 25 C.W.N. 356, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 571, 58 I.C. 877; Benoy v. Amarendra, 44 C.W.N. 93, I.L.R. (1940) 1 Cal. 183, 70 C.L.J. 572, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 51. A suit by a minor on attaining majority for accounts against his guardian is governed by this article and not by Art. 89—Mani v. Anpurna, 22 Pat. 114, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 218; Ahmed v. Yehiya, A.I.R. 1950 Hyder. 52. Where the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant is one of a fiduciary nature involving liability to account more akin to that of a trustee and not that of a principal and agent, a suit for accounts is governed by this article and not by Art. 89—Palaniaipa v. Ramanatha, 1939 M.W.N. 360, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 671. See also, Peria v. Varalakshmi, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 274, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 386; Raoji v. Bavachekar, 52 Bom.L.R. 606, A.I.R. 1950 Bom 399 (transferee from insolvent). This article applies to a suit for accounts by a co-tenant against another co-tenant—Vidya v. Shahdev, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 139, 182 I.C. 426. A suit for accounts brought by a legatee against the executors of a will falls under this Article; even if the plaintiff claims to recover a legacy and also claims an account of the property, the claim to legacy will be governed by the 12 years' rule of Article 123, but the claim for account will not be extended to 12 years but will be limited to only six years before suit—Gajanan v. Waman, 12 Bom.L.R. 881, 8 I.C. 189 (190).

This article does not apply to a suit for accounts and share of profits of dissolved partnership. Such a suit is governed by Art. 106—Meera v. Yegnanerayane, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 177.

But though the plaintiff, in any suit for accounts, is not entitled to claim accounts for any period earlier than six years from the date of institution of the suit, this does not mean that the earlier accounts cannot be required for any purpose whatever. When a person is liable to make good moneys which have come into hands,, the action is maintainable in respect of the balance in his hands six years ago, and the moneys received since, and what that balance was is a question with regard to which the earlier accounts are material. In other words, accounts previous to the six years are only material as evidence of what the defendant actually had in hand at the date from which the account now to be taken is to run. Lightwood, pp. 284-285.

Suit by creditor to set aside alienation by debtor:—A suit under sec. 53, Transfer of Property Act, to set aside an alienation made by a debtor, is governed by Article 120, Limitation Act—Narasimham v. Narayana, 22 L.W. 592, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 66, 92 I.C. 405; Venkateswara v. Somasundaram, 7 L.W. 280, 44 I.C. 551. And time begins to run from the date on which the circumstances entitling the creditor to have the transfer avoided first become known to him, and not from the date of alienation—per Philips, J. in Venkateswara v. Somasundaram supra; Narasimha v. Narayana, supra (per Madhavan Nair, J.). In the latter case, Venkatasubba Rao. J. is however, of opinion that since the alienation is 'voidable at the option of the creditor' (sec. 53, T. P. Act), the creditor may avoid it at any time at his pleasure, and the period of limitation runs from the date on which the plaintiff decides to exercise his option of avoiding the transfer. Madhavan Nair, J. disapproves of this view on the ground that the result of holding that the starting point for limitation is the exercise of option by the creditor would be that the creditor will be entitled to wait any number of years he pleases before bringing the suit, which would mean in effect that there would be no period of limitation at all for the suit. So also a suit by a creditor under sec. 53, Transfer of Property Act for a declaration that a transfer by a debtor is intended to defeat or delay him and other creditors and is therefore, not binding on them is governed by this Article and not by Art. 91 and for such a suit limitation starts against the plaintiff when he is fixed with the knowledge about the fraudulent character of the transaction which he seeks to impeach in his suit. The burden of proof is on the defendant to show that the plaintiff had clear and definite knowledge of the fraud for more than the period of limitation and the fact that the plaintiff knew some facts such as would raise a bare suspicion is not enough evidence to discharge this onus—Abdallakhan v. Purshottam, 49 Bom.L.R. 875, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 265 (on appeal from Abdalla Khan v. Purshottam, 46 Bom.L.R. 613, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 267); Marthandu v. Chenna, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 653,, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 388; Official Receiver v. Alagappa, I.L.R. (1946) Mad. 777, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 113, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 236; Chinnaturai v. Official Receiver, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 125, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 252.

Suit by Official Receiver to set aside alienation by insolvent:—A suit filed by the Official Receiver for a declaration that the mortgage executed by the insolvent was sham and nominal is governed by this Article—Official Receiver v. Alagappa, supra; Chinnaturai v. Official Receiver, supra.

Suit for recovery of money under sec. 68, Transfer of Property Act:—In a suit for recovery of money, under sec. 68, Transfer of Property Act, limitation is governed by Art. 116 or Art. 120, Limitation Act. Art. 62 has no application—Ma Pwa Thein v. Ma Me Tha, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 80, 161 I.C. 461. The Calcutta High Court has held that such a suit is governed by this Article and the starting point of limitation is the date when the mortgagee is deprived of his security—Rai Mohan Commilla Union Bank, I.L.R. (1945) 2 Cal. 473, A.I.R. 1949 Cal. 530.

Suit for recovery of charges under sec. 44, Sale of Goods Act:—The liability of a buyer for reasonable charges for care and custody of the goods arises under sec. 44, Sale of Goods Act. As the liability arises under the statute, apart from any contract between the parties, this article is applicable to a suit for realisation of the same and not Art. 110 or Art. 115—Kamruddin v. The Municipal Committee, 1950 N.L.J. 363, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 148.

Suit for recovery of purchase money:—This article applies to a suit for recovery of purchase money under the statutory provisions of sec. 93, Punjab Land Revenue Act—Punjab Govt. v. Baij Nath, 47 P.L.R. 122, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 164.

Suit for recovery of cess.—A suit for recovery of cess from intermediate land-holder under sec. 88, Madras Local Boards Act, is not one for rent nor is it based on any contract express or implied. It is a suit to enforce a liability created by statute. Such a suit is governed by Art. 120, Limitation Act—Rajah of Vizianagram v. Dindi China Thammanna, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 217 (F.B.); Mahomed Jiffri v. Ayidross, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 50, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 579, A I.R. 1939 Mad. 877.

Suit for recovery of license fee and tax:—A suit to recover license fee assessed under sec. 180, Bihar Municipal Act, in respect of a platform erected, is governed by this Article and not by Art. 115 as the liability is a statutory liability—Mathura v. Gaya Municipality, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 192. So also this article applies to suits by the District Board to realise tax on circumstances and property—District Board v. Babu Ram, I.L.R. (1941) All. 276, 1941 A.L.J. 28, A.I R. 1941 All. 152; or for recovery of terminal tax—Larkana Municipality v. Kaloomal, A.I.R. 1938 Sind. 48. But a suit to recover license fee and profession tax alleged to have been wrongly levied by the Municipality is not governed by this article but by Art. 62—India Sugars and Refineries Ltd. v. Municipal Council, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 521, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 663, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 191.

Suit for declaration of invalidity of sale:—Where property is sold in execution on the basis of a mortgage, even though a suit for declaration that the mortgage is barred by limitation, the sale held under the mortgage gives a fresh right to sue against the purchaser of the property in the execution sale. The right to sue accrues on the date of purchase—Kanhayalal v. Mt. Hira Bibi, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 332, 15 Pat. 151, 17 P.L.J. 131, 163 I.C. 940 (Bolo v. Koklam, 11 Lah. 657 (P.C.) folld.).

Suit for cancellation of deed:—A suit by the executant of a deed of gift for cancellation of the same and for declaration that the interest of the executant is not affected by the said deed of gift is governed by this article and not by Art. 91—Mt. Sewti v. Rattan, A.I.R. 1951 Him. Pra. 54.

Suit by beneficiary against trustee:—A suit by a beneficiary against the trustee calling upon the latter to convey the property to the plaintiff is governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 144—Chhatra Kumari v. Mohan Bikram, 10 Pat. 851 (P.C.). 35 C.W.N. 953, A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 196, 133 I.C. 705.

Suits under secs. 104H, 111A, 111B of Bengal Tenancy Act:—Suits which fall within the scope of sec. 104H of the Bengal Tenancy Act are governed by the special rule of limitation provided in that section; but suits which fall outside the scope of sec. 104H, the right to maintain which under certain conditions is expressly given by the proviso to sec. 111A, are governed by Art. 120. Thus, in a proceeding under Chapter X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the plaintiffs claimed that they were occupancy raiyats in respect of the lands described in schedule cha of the plaint, but the Revenue Officer held that the plaintiffs were tenure holders and only in respect of schedule ga land, and settled the lands deducting 30 per cent. for their allowance as such and recorded their sub-tenants as occupancy raiyats, and wrongly excluded gha and una schedules altogether from their lands. Thereupon the plaintiffs instituted the present suit. Held that so far as the plaintiffs are aggrieved by the rent settled as payable by them as tenure-holders in respect of land of schedule ga and desire to have the entry corrected, the suit falls within the scope of sec. 104H of the Bengal Tenancy Act and is governed by the special period of limitation prescribed therein; but in respect of the other relief, the suit falls within the scope of sec. 111A, and is one under sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, to which the limitation applicable is that provided by Article 120, Limitation Act—Rajani v. Secretary of State, 45 Cal. 645 (652). A suit for a declaration that the entry in the Record-of-Rights that a person is a tenureholder is erroneous and that he should be declared a raiyat, is within the proviso to sec. 111A, Bengal Tenancy Act, and the period of limitation is that provided by Art. 120, and not by sec. 104H, B. T. Act—Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Secy. of State, 34 C.W.N. 1 (P.C.), 51 C.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 286, 120 I.C. 56. A suit under sec. 111B, Bengal Tenancy Act falls under Art. 120, and the right to sue accrues from the date of final publication of the Record-of-Rights, but the plaintiff is entitled to an extended period of limitation by three (now four) months because sub-sec. (4) of that section provides that limitation is suspended for that period from the date of the certificate—Asutosh v. Radhika, 56 Cal. 407, 119 I.C. 121, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 481; Bhabadas v. Karpur, 42 C.W.N. 96.

Suit by Muhammadan heir to recover moveable property:—A suit by the heir of a deceased Muhammadan to recover moveable property left by the deceased is governed by Art. 120; but if the property be immoveable, the suit will fall under Art. 144—Mariam Beeviammal v. Kadir Meera Saheb, 29 I.C. 275; Khadersa v. Ayissa, 34 Mad. 511 (513); Joti Pershad v. Sant Lal, 34 P.R. 1914, 21 I.C. 919, 13 P.L.R. 1914.

A suit by one of several Muhammadan heirs for a share of the intestate's moveable property in the possession of another heir is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art. 49—Bashirunnissa v. Abdur Rahim, 44 All. 244 (246), 20 A.L.J. 71, 64 I.C. 974.

A suit to establish a right to inherit the property even though moveable of a deceased person is governed by this Article—Sharifa v. Court of Wards, I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 843, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 475.

Suit for administration by Mahomedan heir:—To a suit for administration against certain Mahomedan co-heirs by person entitled to a part of this interest of an heir, this article applies so far as moveables are concerned and Art. 144 applies so far as immoveable property is concerned. The heirs of a Mahomedan succeed to his estate in specific shares as tenants in common—Mahomedally v. Safiabai, 67 I.A. 406, L.L.R. (1941) Bom. 8, 45 C.W.N. 226, 43 P.L.R. 63, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 694, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 215, 1941 P.W.N. 316 (P.C.).

Suit against Muhammadan widow by other heirs:—Where the mortgage-debt due to a deceased Muhammadan had been realised by his widow, and the other heirs of the deceased sued to recover the money from her, held that this Article applied; Art. 123 did not apply, because the widow was not an executor or administrator representing the estate of the deceased person. Article 62 might also apply to the suit—Umardaraj v. Wilayat, 19 All. 169 (172, 174).

Suit by adopted son to recover moveable property:—A suit by the adopted son to recover immovable property alienated by the widow before the adoption, is governed by Art. 144; if this property is moveable, Art. 120 applies, and limitation runs from the date of adoption—Venkataratnam v. Venkataramiah, 27 M.L.J. 569, 25 I.C. 692.

Suit for settlement of rent:—Where the Revenue Officer directed that the lands in question be recorded as liable to payment of rent, and it was then too late for the proprietor to apply under sec. 105, Bengal Tenancy Act for settlement of rent, a suit instituted in the Civil Court by the proprietor to have fair rent settled in respect of the lands is governed by this Article, and time begins to run from the date of the order of the Revenue Officer—Berhamdat v. Krishna, 18 C.W.N. 466, 20 I.C. 910.

Suit to set aside municipal election:—A suit by a defeated candidate to set aside the election of members of a Municipal Board is a suit of a civil nature and maintainable in a Civil Court; and Art. 120 governs the suit—Raghunandan v. Sheo Prashad, 35 All. 308.

Suit by one co-owner against another for recovery of income:—A suit by one co-owner of a jaghir to recover his share of the net income from another co-owner who was appointed by the Government as the manager of the jaghir, is really a suit for accounts governed by Art. 120, and not one under Art. 62 because the suit is not for a definite sum of money received by the defendant for the plaintiff—Subba Row v. Rama Row, 40 Mad. 291 (293). See this case cited in Note 370 under Article 62. A suit between two co-sharers for a share of profits realized by the co-sharer in possession is not governed by Art. 89 but by Art. 120—Charan Singh v. Diwan Singh, A.I.R. 1936 All. 706, 1936 A.L.J. 984, 165 I.C. 266. See also Sankara v. Ramachandra, A.I.R. 1954 T.C. 302, where reference is made to Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Naresh Narayan, reported in A.I.R. 1924 P.C. 144 and A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 93. The same principle applies to such a suit by one co-heir against another and the proper article applicable is this article—U. Aung v. Daw Mya, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 416; Daw Ein v. Daw Chan, 1940 Rang.L.R. 136, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 365; Visalakshi v. Madhava, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 408, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 514; Pazhukkath v. Veluthan, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 224, A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 108, 1955 M.W.N. 497. The appropriate remedy in such a case is an action for an account and either Art. 89 or this article applies. That depends upon the facts of each case. Where the suit is not for accounts of agency, Art. 89 will not not apply and this Article is the proper article to apply—Sitaram v. Narayan, 45 Bom.L.R. 424, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 216. A suit by some of the members of a joint Hindu family against a purchaser in execution of a mortgage decree against another member for their share of the profits during the period they were kept out of possession by him is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art. 109. The first column of Art. 109 speaks of property belonging to the plaintiffs and also of the profits thereof having been "wrongfully" received by the defendant. Neither of the conditions assumed here can properly apply as between co-owners—Siddalingana Gowd v. Bhimana Goud, A.I.R. 1935 Mad.. 731, 68 M.L.J. 487, 1935 M.W.N. 107, 41 L.W. 138, 156 I.C. 640.

Money due to tenants-in-common which has been received by one or more tenants in exclusion of the rest is not money had and received within the meaning of Art. 62. Moreover, as the liability in such case is neither ex contractu nor ex delicto, Arts. 115 and 36 have no application. Again, Art. 109 cannot be applied as the profits were not wrongfully received by the parties being co-sharers. Hence a suit by co-sharer for accounts against other co-sharers must fall within the residuary Art. 120—Ayub Khan v. Akram and others, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 28; Abu Sahid v. Abdul, I.L.R. (1940) 1 Cal. 110, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 363. A suit for accounts by the widow of a deceased co-parcener against one of the surviving co-parceners is governed by this article and not by Arts. 48, 49 and 62—Vidya v. Sahadev, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 139, 182 I.C. 426. The right to use accrues only where there is a demand for accounts and a refusal to render them. Where there has been no demand for accounts or a refusal to render them the plaintiff would be entitled to an account for the entire period of the defendant's management when he was in sole possession and in sole receipts of rents and profits—Khem Chand v. Dayaram, I.L.R. (1940) Kar. 534, A.I.R. 1941 Sind. 50.

A person who is excluded from the enjoyment of his rights as a coparcener by the other members of the family is entitled to a declaration of his rights and a decree for joint possession. Such a suit is not one to enforce a right to share in the joint family property, and is governed by Art. 120, and not Art. 127—Moti Ram v. Devi Das, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 95, 157 I.C. 345.

A suit for account and recovery of share of profits derived from property accreted to the joint family property and recovered after partition is governed by this Article and not by Art. 62 and and time begins to run from the date of denial of claim to account—Naganna v. Venkatarayulu, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 459, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 234.

Suit to set aside order of Government:—In 1903 the Government officials marked off the lands in suit and issued to the plaintiff a rough patta showing the lands to which Government admitted his right to obtain a grant subject to the usual conditions. The plaintiff preferred objection to the exclusion from the rough patta of the lands in suit. His objections were rejected in 1905. In 1913, the plaintiffs brought a suit to set aside the order of dismissal of objection and for a declaration of his right. Held that Article 120 governed the suit, which was therefore barred—Ambu Nair v. Secretary of State, 47 Mad. 572 (P.C.), 80 I.C. 835, A.I.R. 1924 P.C. 150, 29 C.W.N. 365.

Suit on administration bond:—A suit against an administrator on an administration surety bond has been held to be governed by this Article, and the cause of action arises on failure by the administrator to comply with any of the conditions of the bond or on the administrator putting it out of his power to comply with them. The fact that no action is taken on the breach of one or more of the various conditions of the bond would not bar a suit on a subsequent breach—Kopu v. Ma Thein, 12 Bur.L.T. 225, 56 I.C. 968. But in Ramanathan v. Rangammal, 17 M.L.T. 61 27 I.C. 849; Ahmed v. Fatima, 8 Bur.L.T. 59, 26 I.C. 505, and Maung San v. Maung Kyaw, 1 Rang. 463, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 68 ,76 I.C. 802, the suit was held to be governed by Art. 68.

A suit for declaration that the plaintiffs are the under-proprietors and not qabzadars of the lands in suit brought within six years of the order of the Revenue Court made in the proceedings for enhancement of rent is not barred—Ram Khelwan v. Raja Rampal, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 47; Chhabraj v. Ram Deo, 18 Luck. 38, 1942 O.W.N. 217. A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 346.

One E. Martin died intestate leaving some next-of-kin. Letters of administration were obtained to her estate by her daughter. That daughter died, and her son, the defendant, obtained probate of her will. His mother had put aside a sum of money as the share of one of the brothers of E. Martin, one T. Jones, whose whereabouts were not known. The defendant deposited this money in a bank on interest. The plaintiff obtained letters of administration de bonis non to the estate of E. Martin. The defendant paid over to her the sum which was put aside as share of T. Jones. The plaintiff applied on an originating summons in which she sought to make the defendant account for all interest obtained or which might be deemed to have been earned by the amount and for inquiry as to what moneys came into his hands. Held, the claim was governed by Art. 130, Limitation Act. Clearly, the defendant was not holding under an express trust, but the claim against him is an equitable claim, and by taking charge of a fund as executor to his mother, in respect of which the mother was clearly a trustee, although not holding on an express trust, the defendant although he is not a derivative executor rendered himself liable in equity to account for the fund, and therefore this claim is within Art. 120; and as there has been no denial or infringement of the right claimed, the claim is not barred by limitation—In re Mrs. E. Martin, A.I R. 1935 Cal. 511.

Suit under section 36, Bengal Moneylenders Act:—To such a suit Article 120 applies, and if it is brought more than six years after 1.9.40, the suit will be barred—Indu Bhushan v. Sudhakar, A.I.R 1957 Cal. 106.

509. "When the right to sue accrues"—There can be no right to sue until there is an accrual of the right asserted in the suit and its infringement or at least clear and unequivocal threat to infringe that right by the defendant against whom the suit is instituted—Bolo v. Koklan, 11 Lah. 657 (P.C.), 34 C.W.N. 1169 (1175); Annamalai v. Muthukaruppa, 8 Rang. 645 (P.C.), 35 C W.N. 145, 130 I.C. 609, A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 9; Radha Madhab v. Rajendra, 12 Pat. 727, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 250. 14 P.L.T. 258. The right to sue accrues only when a cause of action arises. And for a cause of action to arise it must be clear that the averments in a plaint if held correct should lead to a successful issue—Harindar v. Anant, 41 P.L.R. 321, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 6. The passing of the resolution by the company allowing mutation of the name of a third person cannot be said to constitute a clear and unequivocal threat to the plaintiff's right in the absence of anything to show that the plaintiff was aware of the resolution. But if the resolution is communicated, the period of limitation begins to run from the date of communication—Mahadeo v. New Darjeeling Union Tea Co., 55 C.W.N. 408, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 58. So also where the cause of action alleged in the plaint is nothing more than an assertion that the defendant was intending to transfer the property of which the plaintiff was in possession and that the defendant had declined to admit plaintiff's title, it cannot be said that this was an invasion of plaintiff's right or even that it amounts to a clear threat to invade that right. There is no cause of action giving rise to a right to sue—Nanak v. Faquira, 1940 A.L.J. 459, A.I.R. 1940 All. 424. Thus, a Hindu died leaving a will by which he directed that his property would go to his widow K and minor son T jointly and that in case the son died before his mother K, then the latter should be the owner of the property. The son T died during the lifetime of his mother K leaving a widow B, and a minor son M; B brought a suit against K claiming half the property on behalf of M, but this suit was withdrawn. Then K brought the present suit for a declaration of her right to the whole property under the will. Held that the suit was governed by this Article (or by Art. 123 or 127), and that although K's right arose on T's death, still the period of limitation for this suit ran not from the date of T's death, but from the date of the suit brought by B, when the right of K was actually infringed or threatened to be infringed—Balo v. Koklan, 11 Lah. 657 (P.C.), 34 C.W.N. 1169 (1175), A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 270. The interpretation to be put upon the expression "when the right to sue accrues" to a large extent depends upon the particular facts of the case and to the relief sought. Where a mortgage had been effected with regard to a property and a suit had been brought on its basis which resulted in a decree, whereupon the plaintiff sued for a declaration that the property was wakf property and that the decree was null and void and could not be enforced against the property, it was held that the starting point of limitation was the date when the plaintiff came to know of the mortgage, i.e., the date on which the mortgage was sought to be enforced, and not the date when the mortgage had been effected—Mohammad Umar v. Mohammad Ibrahim, 34 P.L.R. 598, 143 I.C. 725.

A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 270 (271); Kandasami v. Sunisami, 35 L.W. 350, 137 I.C. 707, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 589 (591). The plaintiff cannot be debarred of his remedy unless with knowledge of his rights, he has been guilty of delay. Therefore when an action is brought on the ground of fraud, misconduct or mistake on the part of the defendant, the right to sue is deemed to accrue at the time when the plaintiff comes to know of the fraud, misconduct or mistake in question and time will begin to run against him only from the date of knowledge—O. R. M. v. Nagappa, 67 I.A. 448, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 175, 45 C.W.N. 385, 73 C.L.J. 166, 43 Bom.L.R. 440, 1941 P.W.N. 299, A.I.R. 1941 P.C. 1, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 393 (P.C.); Mt. Sadiqa v. Mir Frazand, A.I.R. 1949 Ajmer, 8. It is not obligatory on a man to bring a perfectly vain litigation with the natural result that it would be met either by a perfect defence or that the suit would be held in suspense and await the decision of the appeal in another suit. Hence the right to sue accrues only on the decision of the appeal in another suit—Harindar v. Anant, 41 P.L.R. 321, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 6.

In a suit to have an order of withdrawal of a suit vacated and to prosecute the suit further, the plaintiff's cause of action arises as from the date of the withdrawal of the suit from which date he will get six years under this article—Banwari v. Ajit, 67 C.L.J. 320, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 874.

Trespass:—In a suit for declaration that the defendants are not entitled to open a door in their wall and to commit trespass upon the platform of the plaintiff's well, it was held that each act of trespass continued a fresh cause of action, and the suit brought more than nine years after the defendants opened the door, was not barred —Sheo Prasad v. Mangar, 12 A.L.J. 1150, 25 I.C. 185.

Entry in Revenue Records:—The plaintiffs brought a suit for a declaration that an entry in the record of rights to the effect that the defendants have permanent occupancy rights in the suit lands is not correct. Held that the period of limitation ran from the date of the publication of the entry in the record of rights, and not from any previous date when the defendants had set up rights of permanent occupancy in a written statement filed by them in a previous suit. The entry in the record of rights afforded a fresh cause of action to the plaintiffs—Suryanarayana v. Bullayya, 52 M.L.J. 323, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 568, 101 I.C. 85. But the mere entry of the defendant's name as owner of a property in the revenue papers does not give rise to a cause of action for the plaintiff in respect of a declaration of his title to the property, and time does not begin to run against the plaintiff until an actual claim is made by the defendant on the strength of the entry in the papers—Dina v. Rama, 23 C.L.J. 561, 34 I.C. 702; Sukhdasi v. Fateh Bahadur, 10 O.W.N. 366, 144 I.C. 316, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 283; or until the defendant attempts to dispossess the plaintiff—Suraj Kumar v. Umed Ali, 25 C.W.N. 1022, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 251, 63 I.C. 954. The principle is, that if the owner is in possession of the property, it is not obligatory on him to file a suit for a declaration of his title because of an adverse entry in the Khewat, unless and until his title to the property is denied by the defendant and the denial has the effect of disturbing his possession or doing him some other injury that is not capable of being remedied otherwise than by a suit for declaration. A cause of action for such a suit accrues when his right is substantially denied on the basis of that incorrect entry, and not when he has merely the knowledge of the adverse entry—Faujdar v. Baldeo, A.I.R. 1927 All. 597, 102 I.C. 172. Thus, where the defendant's name was entered in the Revenue papers in 1899, in respect of the plaintiff's property, and then the defendant instituted a suit in 1903 for profits of the share of that property, held that the plaintiff's cause of action accrued on the latter date—Skinner v. Shankar, 31 All. 10 (Note). Plaintiffs having purchased certain lands in 1867 brought a suit in 1890 to obtain a declaration of their right to have the lands registered in their name in the Revenue records. It was held that the right to be placed on the register is a right which does not give rise to a cause of action until it is asserted or denied, and a suit for a declaratory decree in respect of it must be brought within six years from the time when the right was disputed. In the present case the right had not been asserted or denied until the present suit was filed, and the defendant denied the right in his written statement; the suit was therefore not barred—Bhikaji v. Pandu, 19 Bom. 43 (45). In 1888, the plaintiffs were wrongly recorded as ex-proprietary tenants of certain lands of which they were proprietors, and the defendants were recorded as proprietors. In 1903, the plaintiffs applied to have record corrected, but their application was refused in 1903 and they were told to go to the Civil Court. In 1910 the defendants applied to have the rent assessed on the lands and obtained an order in their favour. The plaintiffs thereupon brought the present suit in 1912 for a declaration that they were the proprietors. Held that the cause of action arose in 1910 and not in 1904, because notwithstanding the order of 1904, the plaintiffs had remained in possession of the land without liability to pay rent therefor and it was not until rent was assessed in the proceedings of 1910 that they became liable to pay rent. The order of 1910 gave the plaintiff an entirely fresh cause of action—Allah Jilai v. Umrao, 36 All. 492 (495). An adverse entry in the record of rights even if allowed to remain unchallenged does not necessarily extinguish the rights of the party against whom such entry has been made, and a fortiori, an order to alter the entry to the prejudice of the party without the actual alteration of the entry cannot by itself entinguish the right unless the other party can prove adverse possession for the statutory period or some similar reason in support of his plea of such extinction —Fateh Ali v. Muhammad Baksh, 9 Lah. 428, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 516 (522)

The defendant who was shown in the revenue records as a takarraridar entitled to one-third share of the produce, issued a notice of ejectment in 1912 to the plaintiff who was shown in the revenue records to be the owner of the lands in suit. The plaintiff brought a suit in the Revenue Court to contest the notice but was defeated. Thereupon proceedings in execution of the notice took place; but the proceedings were purely formal, and in fact the plaintiff retained physical possession of the land in suit. In other words, so far as the plaintiff was concerned, the ejectment proceedings of 1912 in no way affected his possession. A further notice of ejectment was then issued against him. Held that the fresh notice constituted a fresh invasion of his title and that therefore limitation for his suit for declaration of title began to run from the date of the fresh notice—Bela Singh v. Lakshmi Das, 6 Lah. 132, 26 P.L.R. 326, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 391, 89 I.C. 299. The Revenue authorities had entered the names of the defendants as owners, and the names of the plaintiffs as in possession. Subsequently the defendants applied for partition, which was allowed by the Revenue authorities, whereupon the plaintiffs sued for a declaration of their title. Held that it was not obligatory on the plaintiffs to bring a suit after the first revenue proceedings in as much as they were not disturbed in their possession, and that the plaintiffs had a fresh cause of action from the date of the order of the Revenue Officer in the partition proceedings—Hakim Singh v. Waryaman, 140 P.R. 1907; Jahana v. Wali, 98 P.R. 1919, 53 I.C. 595; Smail v. Bahab, 8 Lah. 22, 100 I.C. 732, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 119. The principle deducible from these and the following cases is that if a plaintiff is in possession or enjoyment of the property in suit, he is not obliged to sue for a declaration of title on the first or each succeeding denial of his title by the defendant. He may look upon such denial with complacency or at his option may institute a suit to falsify the assertions of the other side. But when he finds that his rights are being actually jeopardised by the actions or assertions of the defendant, then he must take proceedings within six years from the date of such actions or assertions—Fateh Ali v. Md. Bakhsh, supra. It is always open to a person in respect of whom a wrong entry in the revenue papers is made or upon whose title some cloud is cast to ignore that entry or that cloud if he does not consider it worth while to get the entry corrected or to remove the cloud. If, however he bases his cause of action upon that wrong entry or upon the casting of that cloud then he must bring the suit within six years of his knowledge of the wrong entry or of the cloud that has been cast upon his title—Ram Samujh v. Kirpa, A.I.R. 1951 All. 408; S Piara v. Kallu, 1942 O.W.N. 744, 205 I.C. 520; Rattam v. Darshan, A.I.R. 1950 Him. Pra. 15. But where the plaintiff is not in possession and he brings a suit for a declaration that the mutation order is erroneous and for possession, which is the main relief, the suit will fail if not brought within six years of the order—Kishen Lal v. Mohan, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer. 1.

A certain plot of land was recorded as the separate property of the defendants in the settlement records of 1887. In 1914 the defendants made an application for partition, claiming the plot as their separate property. In a suit brought by the plaintiffs in 1915 for a declaration that they were joint owners of the land with the defendants, it was held that although a cause of action might have arisen by reason of the settlement entry in 1887, still a fresh cause of action arose in 1914 when the plaintiffs found themselves in danger of being actually deprived of their joint ownership. The suit was therefore not barred—Kali Prasad v. Harbans, 14 All. 509 (512), 17 A.L.J. 588, 50 I.C. 767. Where there is a definite challenge to the plaintiff's rights, by an entry made in the Record of Rights, and where the fact is patent that the plaintiff must have been aware of that challenge to his rights, the suit if brought upon that challenge must be brought in accordance with the six years' rule of limitation; but if the plaintiff continues possession in spite of the entry, he is not required to institute any suit for declaration upon that challenge but may institute a suit at any time within six years of any new challenge which has the effect of prejudicing his rights—Ramji v. Lala Sadhusaram, 2 P.L.J. 493 (495), 41 I.C. 11; Sheopher v. Deonarain, 10 A.L.J. 413, 17 I.C. 675; Alauddin v. Bibi Saibunnissa, 2 P.L.J. 557, 41 I.C. 199. There must be some attempt by the defendant to oust the plaintiff in order that the plaintiff should get a fresh start by preparation of each jamabondi. The cause of action accrues when for the first time the entry is made in the jamabondi—Mahomed v. Mir. Zuman, A.I.R. 1943 Pesh. 83, 210 I.C. 385.

In the following cases it has been held that time runs from the date of entry in the revenue record: Thus, where the settlement officer had expunged the name of the plaintiff from the Revenue papers and had wrongfully caused the name of the defendant to be entered, but the plaintiffs had all along remained in possession, notwithstanding the settlement record, and then sued for a declaratory decree, held that the period of limitation ran from the date of the entry in the revenue papers; it was further held that the wrong entry in the village papers was a wrong committed once for all and not a continuing wrong within the meaning of sec. 23—Legg v. Ram Baran, 20 All. 35 (37) (F.B.). (It should be noted that in this case there was no fresh invasion of the plaintiff's rights by the defendant, and consequently time ran from the date of entry in the records, and there was no fresh cause of action). The plaintiff's father had applied in 1903 for entry of his name in the Revenue-register as the jenmi of certain land, but the Revenue authorities refused to do so. In 1917, the plaintiff again applied to have the land registered in his name, but on the objection of the defendants the Revenue authorities refused to change the registry. He then brought a suit for a declaration that he was the jenmi of the land. Held that the suit was barred, as the cause of action arose in 1903 and the plaintiff did not acquire a fresh cause of action in 1917. If the defendants had attempted to disturb the plaintiff's possession or claim any right to the property in derogation of the plaintiff's right, such an act would have given a fresh cause of action—Perambath Chathu v. Neela Kandhan, 42 M.L.J. 457, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 194. Where the defendant's name was entered in the Revenue papers in 1895, and the plaintiff in 1903 applied for correction of those papers, when the defendant again asserted his title, and the Revenue Court refused to make the correction, whereupon the plaintiff instituted a suit for declaration of title in 1904, it was held that the plaintiff's cause of action arose in 1895, and no fresh cause of action accrued in 1903; the refusal to correct the entry in 1903 was merely a continuation of the original cause of action—Akbar v. Turoban, 31 All. 9. Where the defendant (landlord) in 1905 caused the name of the plaintiff to be entered in the Record of Rights as a tenant liable to pay rent, and on the strength of that entry he obtained a rent decree against the plaintiff in 1912, and then the plaintiff brought a suit in 1912 for a declaration that he was a lakheraj tenant and not liable to pay rent, it was held that the suit was substantially a suit under sec. 111A of the Bengal Tenancy Act for getting a declaratory relief in respect of Record of Rights, although the plaint made no mention of the Record of Rights, and therefore the cause of action for the plaintiff's suit accrued on the date of the publication of the Record-of-Rights in 1905 and not from the date of the rent decree of 1912—Sheikh Amiruddin v. Sheikh Saidur, 1 P.L.J. 73 (76); 35 I.C. 433.

But the mere entry of the defendant's name in the village papers would not of itself give the plaintiff a cause of action if such entry was made without his knowledge. His right to sue would accrue when he became for the first time aware of the fact that the name of the defendant was entered in the revenue papers—Gopal Das v. Shri Thakur Ganga, 20 A.L.J. 231, A.I.R. 1922 All. 115, 66 I.C. 148. That is, time would run from the date of publication of the record of rights—Abdul Fajur v. Abdul Jabbar, 97 I.C. 635, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 60. Where a wrong entry has been made in the revenue registers at the plaintiff's own instance, but the plaintiff has been in possession and he seeks by a declaratory suit for the removal of the cloud which has been thus thrown upon his title, limitation runs from the date of the entry—Mahabir v. Jageshar, 3 O.W.N. 896, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 21.

Where a person continues in possession of proprietary rights in spite of an adverse entry appearing in the revenue papers no question of limitation arises—Ghulam Md. v. Samundar, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 37, (54 I.C. 317 foll.).

A suit for declaration that the settlement record is erroneous and fraudulent,—without there being any prayer for consequential relief at all, is barred by the six years rule of limitation, commencing from the final publication of the record—Sudhakar v. Nilkantha, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 131, 161 I.C. 465. In this case the plaintiff alleged that he was in possession. So also where the purchaser of the landlord's interest at a sale in execution brings a suit for declaration that the entry in the record of rights regarding the rent payable by the tenant is incorrect time begins to run from the date of the final publication of the record of rights. The fact that the plaintiff is not the original landlord but a purchaser of the landlord's interest at a sale in execution does not give him any new cause of action from the date of execution sale—Gadadhar v. Bholanath, 20 Pat.L.T. 303, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 548.

Declaratory suit:—The Calcutta High Court has said that except in the cases specifically provided for in the Limitation Act (Arts. 118, 124) a suit for a declaration of right cannot be held to be barred as long as the right to the property in respect of which the declaration is sought for is a continuing and subsisting right; and the period of limitation will be counted from the time when the plaintiff becomes entitled to the consequential relief (possession)—Chukkan Lal v. Lalit Mohan, 20 Cal. 906

(925). In this case, their Lordships applied the principle of sec. 23. But the Madras, Bombay and Patna High Courts have dissented from this ruling and observed that the plaintiff's cause of action for a declaratory suit arises as soon as his title is denied, and that there is no recurring cause of action—Maulvi Md. Fahimul v. Jagat Ballabh, 2 Pat. 391 (403), A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 475, 74 I.C. 403; Krishnaji v. Annaji, 52 Bom. 4, 31 Bom.L.R. 1240, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 61 (63); Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410 (416). The same view has been taken in Abid v. Secy. of State, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 633, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 327; Central India Spinning Co. v. Provincial Government, I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 300, 1945 N.L.J. 183, A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 129. In a subsequent case the Madras High Court has held that there is nothing in law which says that the moment a person's right is denied he is bound at his peril to bring a suit for declaration It would be most unreasonable to hold that a bare repudiation of a person's title without even an overt act, would make it incumbent on him to bring a declaratory suit. A party surely has a right to elect as to when he may bring a suit for vindicating his right, when there are successive or several denials—Appa v. Secy. of State, (1938) 2 M L.J. 434, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 193. The same view has been taken in Malku v. Abdur, 230 I.C. 451, A.I.R. 1947 Pesh. 15. The Lahore High Court has held that a suit for declaration does not lie for setting aside a mere assertion. So a mere assertion by a trustee that he is the full owner does not amount to an overt act which would start limitation running against the beneficiaries—Afzal v. Din Mahomed, I.L.R. (1946) Lah. 309, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 117.

A mortgaged a property to B. C brought a suit for possession of the property and obtained a decree. B then brought a suit on the mortgage, obtained a decree and applied for sale of the property. C claimed the property and brought his suit for a declaration that the property was not liable to sale in execution of B's decree. It was held that the fact of the mortgage did not affect the plaintiff's right so long as no effort was made to sell the property in enforcement of the mortgage, and that the cause of action arose when the defendant attempted to sell the property—Imambandi v. Puran, 17 A.L.J. 973, 52 I.C. 646.

It is open to a Hindu son to sue for a declaration that a mrotgage executed by his father is bad as not being for legal necessity, as soon as the mortgage is executed; but he is not bound to do so, when the mortgagee does not go into possession of the property but merely gets a document of mortgage. When the mortgagee after obtaining a decree on his mortgage, starts execution proceedings, a cause of action accrues to the son; a suit filed within six years of the starting of execution proceedings will be in time, though beyond six years of the date of alienation—Ram Chandra v. Bhagwan, 48 Bom.L.R. 594, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 82. The Patna High Court has left the question whether cause of action arises from the date of alienation or from date of knowledge of alienation open in Sheonandan v. Maida, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 447.

In a suit by a Zamindar for a declaration that the mineral rights in certain lands are reserved to himself and have not been granted to the tenant (defendant), a fresh cause of action arises whenever any particular portion of minerals is removed by the defendant—Kumar Pramath Nath v. A. J. Meik, 5 P.L.J. 273 (285), 1 P.L.T. 360, 56 I.C. 184. Although the attachment of the person's land as if it belonged to another gives the owner a cause of action for bringing a suit to set aside the attachment, yet he is not bound to do so, and he can, after the execution sale, bring a suit for a declaration of the invalidity of the sale; because the execution sale affects the title of the owner to the property in a different and greater degree than that in which an attachment affects him, and the sale gives him a fresh cause of action—Anantharaju v. Narayanaraju, 36 Mad. 383 (384, 385). In a suit for a declaration that the Zemindar was not entitled to recover more than a stated sum from the plaintiff for quit rent, the plaintiff's right to sue accrued on each occasion when the Zemindar collected the excess amount of rent, as each illegal exaction is a separate injury giving rise to a fresh cause of action—Sriman Madhabushi v. Gopisetti Narayanasawmy, 33 Mad. 171 (172). So also the collection by a Zamindar of rent from an inamdar (entitled to enjoy the land free from rent) however long continued will be wrongful and every time the Zamindar demanded rent which was not legally payable by the inamdar, the demand gave rise to a fresh cause of action to the inamdar—Maharajah of Pittapuram v. Venkataraju, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 631, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 542.

Where a suit for declaration is barred, other reliefs claimed in the suit cannot have longer period of limitation than a suit for declaration of plaintiff's title. Thus where a suit is brought against Government for declaration of plaintiff's right to collect taxes in respect of plaint properties as also for recovery of taxes already collected and the suit for the main relief of declaration fails as time-barred the other reliefs also become time-barred as the relief for recovery of taxes already collected is ancillary to or consequential upon the relief of declaration—State v. Ganapathi, A.I.R 1951 Tra-Co. 232 (F.B.). But where the suit is not a purely declaratory suit but is one in which it is necessary for the Court to come to a finding as to title as a preliminary to a decree for consequential relief and the claim for consequential relief is not barred, the claim for determination of title is also not barred—Radha Gobinda v. Nilkantha, 30 Pat. 406, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 556 (a case of declaration of title and recovery of rent).

Certain lands belonging to a talukdar were for a long time shown in the village accounts as rent-free lands. In 1872, on a reference about them by the Revenue Authorities, the Government held that these lands were improperly shown as not liable to assessment. But no correction was in fact made in the village accounts until about 1918, when a revision survey was introduced. In a suit by the talukdar in 1920 for a declaration that the lands were rent-free, held that time ran from 1918, and not from 1872, because the proceedings of 1872 could not, in the absence of proof that notice was given to the talukdar to the effect that the lands were liable to assessment, be treated as giving rise to any cause of action to the plaintiff—Sursingji v. Secretary of State, 28 Bom.L.R. 1213, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 590, 99 I.C. 293. In a suit for declaration that the property in suit was joint property and the mutation entry in favour of the widow of deceased brother was made for her consolation, the right to sue accrued not from the mutation entry but from the date of the institution of the suit by the widow for profits of the propery as she asserted a title to the property by filing the suit—Piara v. Kallu, 1942 O.W N. 744, 205 I.C. 520. Where in such a case a decree is passed in the suit for profits the period of limitation starts from the date of the decree—Kamta v. Chhatarpal, 15 Luck. 487, 1940 O.W.N. 327, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 283. Similarly in such a suit the mere entry in the mutation paper does not create any cause of action unless possession is taken by the person in whose favour the entry is made—Rattam v. Darshan, A.I.R 1950 Him. Pra 15. Where during a partition proceeding in 1895 the defendant denied the plaintiff's title, but both the plaintiff and the defendant remained in joint possession, and the plaintiff's enjoyment was not interfered with, but during fresh partition proceedings in 1914 the defendant again denied the plaintiff's title to a share, held that the fresh invasion of the plaintiff's title gave him a fresh cause of action, and his suit for a declaration of title brought in 1918 was not barred—Muhammad Hanif v. Ratan Chand, 3 Lah. 43 (46), A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 94, 97 P.L.R. 1922, 67 I.C. 990.

509A. Limitation for suit by remote reversioner:—It has been already stated in Note 500 above that a suit by a remote reversioner for a declaration that the alienation made by the widow is not binding on the estate, falls under this Article and not under Article 125. The period of limitation for such a suit is to be counted from the time when "the right to sue accrues" under this Article. The right of suit of the remote reversioner accrues when the nearest reversioner precludes himself or herself from maintaining a declaratory action by omitting to sue within the statutory period (Art. 125), and thus practically concurs in the improper alienation, i.e., it accrues after the lapse of 12 years from the date of alienation—Abinash v. Harinath, 32 Cal. 62 (70); Soman v. Uttam, 1 Lah. 69 (72), 91 P.L.R. 1920, 55 I.C. 924. In a Bombay case, a Hindu died leaving his widow and daughter. The widow made an alienation in 1869, but the daughter (who was then the immediate reversioner) did not impeach the alienation, and after the death of the daughter in 1879, the plaintiffs, who are her sons, brought a declaratory suit in 1883. It was held that the suit was barred, as the cause of action arose when the property was sold in 1869, during the lifetime of the plaintiff's mother who was then the nearest presumptive reversioner, and no fresh cause of action accrued to the plaintiffs on their mother's death; it could not have been intention of the Legislature, in giving a right to sue for a declaration within six years from the accrual of the right, to give successive rights to a series of successive reversioners to harass the alienees of an estate with repeated suits in respect of the same alienation—Chhaganram v. Bai Motigavri, 14 Bom. 512 (515). But this ruling was given under the Act of 1859 and should not be taken as good law now, because substantial changes have been made in the Acts of 1871, 1877 and 1908. Under Article 120 of the present Limitation Act, the question is not when the cause of action arises, but when the plaintiff's right to sue accrues.

The Allahabad High Court is of opinion (virtually dissenting from the above Calcutta ruling in 32 Cal. 62) that the failure on the part of the nearest reversioners to bring a suit for a declaration under Art. 125 within 12 years of the date of alienation does not create any new cause of action for the next reversioner to bring a suit within a further period of six years under Article 120. A remote reversioner is not entitled to sit still and wait for limitation to run out against every reversioner nearer in degree than himself. An improper alienation by a Hindu widow is a wrong to the entire body of reversioners, and it affords an immediate cause of action to all of them. In other words, the starting point of limitation for a declaratory suit by a remote reversioner is the date of alienation and the suit is governed by Article 120—Kunwar v. Bindraban, 37 All. 195 (202); Anandi v. Ram Sahai, 27 O.C. 173, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 381. The same view has also been expressed in Chiruvolu v. Chiruvolu, 29 Mad. 390 (411), and Narayana v. Rama, 38 Mad. 396 (401); Janaki v. Jyotish, 45 C.W.N. 141, 72 C.L.J. 208, A.I.R. 1941 Cal 41. See also Venkayamma v. Veerayya, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 280.

If the nearest reversioner is found to have colluded with the widow in the matter of alienation, the remote reversioner is entitled to bring a suit for declaration, and the cause of action arises as soon as the fact of collusion becomes known to him—Kunwar v Bindraban, 37 All. 195 (200).

Suit by reversioner born after alienation:—An entirely different case arises when the suit is brought by a remote reversioner who was born after the date of alienation. It is a well known principle of law that one reversioner does not derive his title through another, (even though that other happens to be his father), but all of them claim from the last full owner; consequently the right of a remote reversioner to sue is not derived from the right of the nearer one. If therefore the right of the nearest reversioner for the time being to contest an alienation by the widow is allowed to become barred by limitation as against him, this will not bar the similar rights of the subsequent reversioner who was born after the date of the alienation. The subsequent reversioner's right to sue accrues only on his birth, and if he brings the suit while he is still a minor, or within three years after attaining majority, it is not barred, although more than twelve years have elapsed after the date of alienation—Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (47), (F.B.); Abinash v. Harinath, 32 Cal. 62 (72); Janaki v. Jyotish, 45 C.W.N. 141, 72 C.L.J. 208, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 41. This was also the view of the Madras High Court in Govinda v. Thayammal, 28 Mad. 57 (60) and Narayana Aiyar v. Rama Aiyar, 38 Mad. 396 (400, 405). But these cases have been overruled by the Full Bench case of Varamma v. Gopala Dasaya, 41 Mad. 659 (F.B.). In this case it has been laid down that the cause of action for a suit for a declaration that an alienation by a widow is not binding on the estate, arises on the date of alienation jointly and simultaneously for the entire body of reversioners. If, therefore, the alienation is not impeached by a declaratory suit within 12 years under Article 125 by the nearest reversioner, a remote reversioner born after the lapse of 12 years from the date of the alienation will be debarred from bringing a suit for declaration. The correctness of this ruling has been doubted in Das Ram v. Tirthanath, 51 Cal. 101 (at p. 108); but it has been followed by the Lahore High Court in Chiragh Din v. Abdulla, 6 Lah. 405, 90 I.C. 1022, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 654. This subject has been fully discussed at pp. 84-85, ante.

The property of a Hindu female who was the daughter of the last male holder, and who was entitled to a limited estate, was during her minority sold by her guardian in 1891. The plaintiff (the last male holder's daughter's son) who is her reversioner, and who was not born at the date of the alienation, brought a suit in 1916 for a declaration that the sale was ineffective as against him. Held that the suit was governed by this Article and not by Article 125, as the alienation was not made by the female herself but by her guardian, and that the right of action accrued to the plaintiff when he was born (in 1896), and the suit was in time as it was brought within three years of his attaining majority (secs. 6, 8)—Das Ram, v. Tirthanath, 51 Cal. 101 (108), 81 I.C. 522, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 481.

PART VIII—Twelve years.

121.	To avoid incumbrances or under-tenures in an entire estate sold for arrears of Government revenue, or in a patni taluk or other saleable tenure sold for arrears of rent.	Twelve years.	When the sale becomes final and conclusive.

510. Scope:—This Article applies not only to a suit brought by the auction-purchaser at a revenue sale, but also to a suit brought by a transferee from such auction-purchaser who is entitled to the same rights as his assignor—Koylash v. Jubur Ali, 22 W.R. 29; Wahid Ali v. Rahat Ali, 12 C.W.N. 1029; see also Shosi Bhushan v Kramtulla, 10 C.W.N. 148; Narayan v. Kasiswar, 1 C.L.J. 579.

511. Incumbrance:—It has been held in a large number of cases that adverse possession is an incumbrance within the meaning of this Article or within the meaning of the Patni Taluq Regulation (VIII of 1819) or of Bengal Revenue Sale Act (XI of 1859)—Nuffar Chandra v. Rajendra, 25 Cal. 167 (171); Karmi Khan v. Brojo Nath, 22 Cal. 244 (251); or under the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation—Prasanna v. Jnanendra, 43 Cal. 779 (782). But it should be noted that whether the estate is sold subject to incumbrances, the adverse possession of the defendant for the statutory period before the date of sale is not an incumbrance and a suit to recover possession is not a suit to avoid an incumbrance within the meaning of this Article, and is barred even though brought within 12 years from the date of sale. This view is deducible from Kumar Kalanand v. Syed Sarafat, 12 C.W.N. 528, and Raimuddi v. Nalini Kanta, 13 C.W.N. 407, 1 I.C. 81.

Thus, where the estate is sold (for arrears of revenue) subject to incumbrances and it appears that the adverse possession of the defendant had commenced before the estate was sold for arrears of revenue, (i.e., if the defendant had been holding adversely to the old proprietor) and the adverse possession was sufficiently long, i.e., for more than twelve years before the institution of the suit to avoid the incumbrance, the suit would be barred by limitation even though brought within 12 years from the date of the revenue sale. Such a suit is not governed by Article 121 but by Article 144—Karmi Khan v. Brojonath, 22 Cal. 244 (251).

Where the plaintiff purchased the estate with right to avoid incumbrances, but it was found that the adverse possession of the defendants and their predecessors commenced even before the creation of the patni, such adverse possession was not an incumbrance which the plaintiff was entitled to avoid within the meaning of this Article, and therefore this Article did not apply to a suit to recover possession from the defendants. (The suit fell under Article 144 and was consequently barred)—Kalikanand v. Biprodas, 19 C.W.N. 18, 26 I.C. 436. The reason is, that an incumbrance, in order to be so, must be one which accrued upon the tenure by the act or inaction of the defaulting patnidar himself; and therefore an adverse possession, in order to be an incumbrance, must be a possession which has commenced after the creation of the patni tenure—Ibid. Therefore, where the defendants had been holding adversely for a period greatly exceeding 12 years, and the evidence did not establish whether the defendants had commenced so to hold after the creation of the patni, the plaintiff's suit would fail, because in order to bring the case under this Article the onus would be upon the plaintiff to show that the adverse possession of the defendants commenced after the patni was created—Biprodas v. Kamini Kumar, 48 I.A. 499, 49 Cal. 27 (34) (P.C.), 26 C.W.N. 465, 41 M.L.J. 638.

If the land is sold with power to avoid incumbrances, then a suit to recover possession of the land from the adverse possessor is a suit to avoid incumbrances within the meaning of this Article, and the period of limitation runs from the date when the sale becomes final, and not from the time when the adverse possession commenced. Even if it is regarded as a suit under Article 144, still the period of limitation would run when the sale becomes final, the possession of the defendant being regarded as becoming adverse to the plaintiff only from the date of the auction-purchase—Nuffur Chandra v. Rajendra, 25 Cal. 167 (171); Prosanna v. Jnanendra, 43 Cal. 779 (782).

The period of limitation runs when the sale becomes final and not from the date when possession was formally given to the purchaser at the sale—Prosanna v. Jnanendra, 43 Cal. 779 (782), 31 I.C. 801.

A person who had been in possession of a portion of a revenue paying estate adversely to the owner for more than 12 years before the estate was sold for arrears of revenue under the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, would be considered as a joint proprietor liable to pay the revenue under sec. 63 of that Regulation, and therefore a 'defaulter' within the meaning of sec. 67; he held no 'incumbrance' which the auction-purchaser was called upon to annul by a suit within the period prescribed by this Article. Being a defaulter, his interest was sold away by the revenue sale, and the suit brought by the purchaser to recover possession of his share would be a suit for possession under Art. 142—Mahim Chandra v. Piyari, 44 Cal. 412 (423, 424), 21 C.W.N. 537, 39 I.C. 213.

If the patni came to an end, not by reason of sale for arrears of rent, but by voluntary relinquishment by the patnidar in favour of the Zamindar, a suit by the latter to recover possession of the land from the persons who had taken possession of it adversely to the patnidar was governed by Art. 144 and not by this Article, and time ran from the date when the defendants took possession and not from the date of relinquishment—Gobinda v. Suraj Kanta, 26 Cal. 460 (463).

512. Under-tenure:—This Article refers to under-tenures which are not avoided per se by the sale but which are voidable at the option of the purchaser, such as a durpatni tenure which is voidable on the sale of a patni tenure. On a sale of a tenure for arrears of rent under Act. VIII of 1869 or Reg. VIII of 1819 the under-tenures are not avoided ipso facto, but are voidable at the option of the purchaser; consequently this Article applies to a suit brought by the purchaser for that purpose—Titu v. Mohesh Chandra, 9 Cal. 683 (687) (F.B.) (overruling Unnoda v. Mothooranath, 4 Cal. 860).

122. Upon a judgment obtained in India or a recognisance.	Twelve years.	The date of the judgment or recognisance.

The word India was substituted for the words "the States" by Act 3 of 1951.

513. This Article does not enable suits to be brought upon all judgments obtained in India, but only provides a period of limitation for suits upon such judgments as can be sued upon—Jivi v. Ramji, 3 Bom. 207 (209). Thus, no suit can be brought upon a decree, the execution of which is barred by limitation—Fakirapa v. Pandurangapa, 6 Bom. 7 (9); Dhanraj v. Lakhrani, 38 All. 509 (516). An action is allowed to be maintained on a judgment only where the judgment cannot be enforced in any other way—Kalicharan v. Sukhoda, 20 C.W.N. 58, 30 I.C. 824.

An order of the High Court in its insolvency jurisdiction is a judgment of the High Court, and a suit based upon such order is maintainable. Such a suit is governed by this Article—Annoda v. Nobo, 33 Cal. 560 (564).

Where the plaintiffs obtained a decree against the defendants' father and after his death the execution of that decree was refused as against the family property in the possession of the defendants, and thereupon the plaintiffs brought the present suit against the defendants to enforce the decree-debt, it was held that the suit was not governed by Article 122, because the sons not being parties to the judgment obtained against their father, it was not binding upon them and they could not therefore be sued upon a judgment obtained against the father. It is a suit brought to enforce against the sons their pious obligation to discharge their father's debt, and falls under the residuary Article 120—Periasami v. Seetharama, 27 Mad. 243 (249) (F.B.). In another Madras case, under similar facts, it was held that the suit against the son was not a suit upon a judgment, because under the Civil Procedure Code no second suit would lie upon a previous judgment, the remedy provided being its execution in the manner provided in the Code—Ramayya v. Venkataratnam, 17 Mad. 122 (129).

The Calcutta High Court holds that a suit may be instituted in the High Court on a decree of the High Court itself—Attarmoney v. Hurry Doss, 7 Cal. 74 (75). But the Bombay High Court dissents from this view in Merwanji v. Ashabai, 8 Bom. 1 (13).

According to the Calcutta High Court, an action does not lie in that Court upon a judgment of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes—Moonshi Golam v. Curreem Bux, 5 Cal. 294. But the Bombay High Court holds that such suit is maintainable, if there is not sufficient moveable property of the defendant within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court, and there is sufficient immoveable property within the jurisdiction of the High Court—Fakirappa v. Pandurangapa, 6 Bom. 7 (10).

Where a suit on a judgment is barred, that judgment cannot be made the basis of a suit for the administration of the estate of the judgment-debtor. Thus, an application was made to the High Court for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property in execution of a mortgage-decree transferred to it for execution by a mofussil Court, but the application was refused on the ground that the mortgaged properties were outside the jurisdiction of the High Court; a suit was then brought by the decree-holder for the administration of the estate of the mortgagor (who had died already) and for sale of the mortgaged properties, more than twelve years after either the date of the original debt or the date of the mortgage-decree. Held that the suit was barred by limitation—Jogemaya v. Thackomoni, 24 Cal 473 (488).

123. For a legacy or for a share of a residue bequeathed by a testator, or for a distributive	Twelve years.	When the legacy or share becomes payable or deliverable.

share of the property of an intestate.

514. Application of Article:—It has been authoritatively laid down by the Privy Council that this Article applies only where the suit is brought against an executor or administrator or some person legally charged with the duty of distributing the estate—Ghulam Mohammad v. Ghulam Husain, 54 All. 93 (P.C.), 59 I.A. 74, 1932 A.L.J. 245, 36 C.W.N. 310 (322), 136 I.C. 454, A.I.R. 1932 P.C, 81; Issur Chunder v. Juggul Chunder, 9 Cal. 79; Azizul Huq v. Maryam, 17 O.C. 157, 24 I.C. 45; Khadirsha v. Ayissa, 34 Mad. 511 (512); Hemangini v. Anil, 17 Pat. 350, 19 Pat.L.T. 202, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 600; Meenakshi v. Subramania, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 369. Therefore, where a Mahomedan dies intestate, the estate vests in the heirs and no one is bound by law to distribute the property; a suit by one of the heirs against the others to recover possession of his share is governed by Art. 144; Article 123 does not apply to the case—Ghulam Mohammad v. Ghulam Hussain, supra; Khadirsha v. Ayissa, 34 Mad. 511 (513); Marian Beeviammal v. Kadir Meera Sahib, 29 I.C. 275 (278); Zainab v. Ghulam Rasul, 4 Lah. 402 (404), A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 519, 73 I.C. 425; Azizul v. Maryam (supra). A suit by the heirs of the deceased owner for recovery of possession of the property from the defendants who are in possession of the property without any colour of title and not claiming under the original owner is not governed by this Article—Mahomed Chotoo v. Abdul Hamid Khan, 10 Rang. 82, 137 I.C. 200, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 55. Similarly, a suit by the plaintiff to recover possession of certain G. P. Notes in accordance with the terms of a will, against the defendant alleged to have the Notes in his custody contrary to the terms of the will does not fall under this Article, as the defendant is not charged with the duty of distributing the estate of the testator—Swarnamoyee v. Probodh, 36 C.W.N. 758, 55 C.L.J. 420, 143 I.C. 402, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 253. So also, where the amount of a mortgage-debt due to a deceased Mahomedan was realised by the widow, and the other heirs brought a suit to recover the money from her, held that the suit fell under Article 120 and not under this Article, because the widow was not an executor or administrator representing the estate of the deceased and was not bound to distribute the shares of the plaintiffs—Umardaraz v. Wilayat, 19 All. 169 (172). An executor de son tort, though he can be treated as incurring the liability of an executor for certain purposes, yet cannot be taken to represent the estate of the deceased. A suit to recover certain moveable properties of the deceased from such person does not fall under this Article but under Article 120—Sithamma v. Narayana, 12 Mad. 487 (488). This case, though overruled by the Full Bench in 46 Mad. 190 (cited below will now stand as good law, in view of the Privy Council decision in 54 All. 93 cited above. A person who obtains a succession certificate is not a person who either as executor or administrator represents the estate of the deceased, and he is not under any obligation to distribute the share in the property of the deceased among those entitled to them. Article 123 does not apply to a suit brought against him by the other heirs of the deceased for the recovery of money collected by him—Ahidannessa v. Isuf Ali Khan, 50 Cal. 610 (614), A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 142, 27 C.W.N. 941. So also, where on the death of a Mahomedan, a portion of his estate was sold with the consent of the majority of his heirs and the sale proceeds were handed over to a person to distribute the shares amongst the heirs, a suit to recover his share of money by one of the heirs is not governed by this Article as the suit is not against a person legally charged with the duty of distributing any portion of the estate—Hussain v. Baquir, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 422, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 116, 1945 M.W.N. 671.

A contrary view was taken in some other cases. Thus, in a Madras case, it was held that this Article applied to a suit against a person who was rightly or wrongly in possession of the estate under such circumstances that he was bound to deal with it as the estate of the deceased, and that this Article was not confined to a suit against the executors or administrators only. "The wording of Article 123 is general; it refers to a suit for a legacy or for a share of a residue bequeathed by a testator, and if the legatee has a cause of action against the person in possession of the assets of the testator, I do not see why there should be a further qualification that the person in possession of the assets should be an executor or administrator. I think it will be reading into the Article words which are not there, namely that the suit should be for a legacy or a share of a residue against an executor or administrator." And so, a suit to recover a legacy against an executor de son tort was held to fall under this Article—Rajah Parthasarathy v. Rajah Venkatadri, 46 Mad. 190 (206, 246, 247) (F.B.), 43 M.L.J. 486, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 457. A suit for accounts by an heir of an intestate person against an executor de son tort was held to be governed by Art. 123, and he was liable to account for mesne profits for a period of 12 years before suit—Robson v. Administrator-General, 30 P.L.R. 503, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 753 (758); Gopala Chetty v. Narayana Swami, 23 L.W. 528, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 681, 95 I.C. 33. The Bombay High Court also held that this Article applied to every suit where the plaintiff sought to recover a distributive share of the property of an intestate, irrespective of whether the defendant was under a legal obligation to distribute it or not—Shirinbai v. Ratanbai, 43 Bom. 845 (860). The Calcutta High Court also applied this Article to a case in which the suit was brought not against the executor but against the legal representative of an executor who was in possession of the assets—Khetramoni v. Dhirendra, 41 Cal. 271 (274). The Calcutta High Court has further held that it is not necessary that the persons liable to pay must be executors or administrators. They must be persons in possession of the estate and legally bound to pay the legacy or hand over the distributive shares. Hence, where a testator has in his will directed that the person in possession of his estate would pay maintenance allowance to certain lady, a suit to recover that allowance is governed by this Article—Bhola Nath v. Sarbamangala, 44 C.W.N. 221, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 93. All these cases must now be deemed as overruled by the Privy Council, in view of the recent decision in Ghulam Mohammad v. Ghulam Husain, 54 All. 93 (supra). In one case, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council applied this Article to a suit brought by a co-sharer of an estate to recover his share from the other co-heirs in possession of the estate, in case of intestacy—Maung Tun v. Ma Thit, 44 Cal. 379 (P.C.), 21 C.W.N. 527, 10 Bur.L.T. 138, 38 I.C. 809, A.I.R. 1916 P.C. 145. But this view must be treated merely as an obiter, because in the trial Court no issue was raised as to limitation, and the main question for decision was not one of limitation. This case has been distinguished in 54 All. 93 (P.C.).

A certificate of administration granted under Reg. VIII of 1827 only indicates the person who for the time being is in the legal management of the property, but does not constitute the holder of the certificate a representative of the estate for the purpose of distributing it among his co-sharers. Therefore, a suit by certain co-sharers of a deshpande vatan to recover their allowance from a person who manages the estate under a certificate of administration does not fall under this Article but under Article 131—Keshav v. Narayana, 14 Bom. 236 (241).

This Article does not apply to the claims of profits in the estate of a deceased in respect of moveable property—Aung Myint v. Daw Mya, 178 I.C. 475, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 416.

Where the right to receive an annuity under a will is repudiated, this Article does not apply but Article 131 applies—Ramranbijoy v. M. P. L. Singh, 25 Pat. 311, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 47, 229 I.C. 348.

515. Suit for legacy:—This Article applies where the substantial claim is to recover a legacy, even though the legacy be not assented to by the executor, and whether or not the suit involves the administration of the whole estate—Salebhai v. Bai Safiabu, 36 Bom. 111 (113).

A suit for arrears of maintenance brought on the allegation that under the terms of the will of the plaintiff's father, the plaintiff is entitled to get a certain sum annually from the defendants who are the executors of the will and are in possession of the testator's property, i a suit for legacy, and governed by this Article and not Art. 62—Hari Charan v. Kamal Kumari, 35 C.W.N. 307 (308), 132 I.C. 684, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 670. Where the legacy is an annual allowance, and the plaintiff is receiving that allowance annually, a suit not to recover the legacy but to have it defined what the amount of the legacy is, does not fall under this Article—Hemangini v. Nobin Chand, 8 Cal. 788 (802).

The mere fact that in a suit for legacy there is a prayer for administration of the estate, as ancillary to the claim for legacy, will not take the case out of this Article and bring it under Art. 129– Rajamannar v. Venkatakrishnaya, 25 Mad. 361 (364).

Where a person has received a large portion of the legacy but he is not satisfied that he has received the whole of it, and brings a suit for account against the executors, the suit falls under Article 120 and the plaintiff is entitled to accounts for six years before the date of suit. The fact that the principal object of the suit is to be put in possession of the legacy does not bring the claim for accounts under Article 123 so as to extend the taking of accounts for a period of 12 years—Gajanan v. Waman, 12 Bom.L.R. 881, 8 I.C. 189 (190). But if the suit is in effect a suit for a legacy, a mere prayer for accounts will not oust the operation of Art. 123. And if a suit is brought by a person who is entitled under a will to a legacy and to a share of the residuary estate, but he does not ask for payment of the legacy nor for the ascertainment of the share of the residue but sets forth certain alleged acts of misconduct on the part of the defendants (who are administrators) with respect to their dealings with the property, and asks for an account and for damages, held that the suit must be treated as a suit for recovery of legacy under this Article (and the plaint should be amended accordingly), and not as a suit for accounts—Cursetjee v. Dadabhai, 19 Mad. 425 (432).

Limitation:—A legacy is payable one year after the testator's death. Consequently, a suit for legacy is in time if brought within thirteen years after the testator's death—Cursetji v. Dadabhai, 19 Mad. 425 (432); Rajah Parthasarathy v. Rajah Venkatadri, 46 Mad. 190 (F.B.), 43 M.L.J. 486. A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 457 (476).

Moreover, the legacies, are not payable until there are available assets to pay them, and therefore time under the statute does not begin to run until the executor or other person liable to pay it has in his hands money with which it could be paid—Rajah Parthasarathy v. Rajah Venkatadri Appa Rao (supra); affirmed on appeal, Rajah Venkatadri v. Parthasarathy, 48 Mad. 312 (P.C.), 48 M.L.J. 627, 29 C.W.N. 989, 87 I.C. 324, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 105. Thus, a Hindu widow claimed certain property as the heir of her deceased son. She bequeathed by will the income of the property before her death. Her title was disputed by another lady who claimed to be the adoptive mother of the deceased son. The validity of the adoption was challenged by the natural mother (testatrix) and litigation followed. After her death, suits were filed by the beneficiaries under the will for the payment of the legacies. Held that the legacies did not become payable until the executor or other person liable to pay them had assets in their hands out of which to pay them, and no one could have had in his possession any fund representing the income of the estate until it had been finally decided by the Court that the adoption was invalid. And the suits to obtain the legacies, instituted within 12 years from the final decision of the Court declaring the adoption to be invalid were not barred by limitation—Rajah Venkatadri v. Parthasarathy (supra). So also, where by a will a bequest of land subject to mortgage is made with a direction to the executor to discharge the mortgage and to convey the bequest, it becomes payable after the discharge of the mortgage and not before that—Mangamma v. Chettiar Firm, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 477, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 36, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 276.

516. Suit for share of residue:—This Article applies to a suit by a residuary legatee to recover his legacy or a share of residue under a will and for an account for the purpose of ascertaining what that share is—Khetramani v. Dhirendra, 41 Cal. 271 (274, 275), 25 I.C. 370.

Where a will makes certain illegal dispositions of property, a suit by the heir of the testator for setting aside the will and for recovery of the property so disposed as undisposed of residue, falls under this Article, and must be brought within twelve years from the date of the testator's death, that being the date on which the residue becomes payable—Hemangini v. Nobin, 8 Cal. 788 (805).

This Article also applies where the claim is for the whole of the residue—Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 2 C.L.R. 118; on appeal, 4 Cal. 455. See also Bolo v. Koklan, 11 Lah. 657 (P.C.), 34 C.W.N. 1169 (1175), A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 270.

517. Suit for distributive share:—A suit by a Mahomedan (Mapilla) widow for her share in her husband's property is one for a distributive share of the property of an intestate, and is governed by this Article—Kasmi v. Ayishamma, 15 Mad. 60 (61).

A suit not to recover a distributive share in the corpus of the estate but to recover the share of the profits which accrued after the death of the intestate falls under Article 120, and not under Article 123—Maung Po v. Maung Shwe, 1 Rang. 405, A I.R. 1924 Rang. 155, 76 I.C. 855.

A suit by a Mahomedan widow to recover possession of the entire estate of her deceased husband, on the ground that according to custom and entries made in the wazib-ul-arz she was entitled to succession and to inherit the entire property left by her husband, is not a suit for a distributive share of psoperty; consequently Article 123 cannot apply. Article 120 governs the suit as it is not provided for elsewhere—Mahomed Riasat v. Hasin Banu, 21 Cal. 157 (163) (P.C.), 20 I.A. 155.

Where, after the death of her mother, a Muhammadan woman and the defendants have enjoyed the property in common and she is afterwards excluded by the defendants, a suit by her to recover possession is not a suit for distributive share under this Article because the cause of action is not based on the fact of inheritance from the original owner but on the fact of dispossession, and the suit is a suit for possession under Art 144—Abdul Kader v. Aishamma, 16 Mad. 61 (63) (F.B.). This Article does not apply to the case of Mahomedans who succeeded to the property of a deceased relative and by agreement amongst themselves continue to own as tenants-in-common instead of dividing it. To such a case the ordinary law (Art. 144) applies and time begins to run against one tenant-in-common when the other tenant-in-common does some act the effect of which is either to exclude his co-tenant from the joint-property or deny his rights to share—Kallangowda v. Bibishaya, 44 Bom. 943, 22 Bom.L.R. 936; Nurdin v. Bu Umrao, 45 Bom. 519 (521) A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 56. The word "distributive share" has a peculiar meaning of distribution of an estate which has vested in an executor or administrator; Article 123 therefore cannot apply to a suit to recover a share by a Mahomedan co-heir from another co-heir in management of the property—Nurdin v. Bu Umrao, supra; Bai Jibi v. Bai Bibamboo, 31 Bom.L.R. 199, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 141 (142), 118 I.C. 785. It is well known that in the case of an estate of a Hindu, Buddhist or Mahomedan, the heirs of a deceased person very often leave the estate undivided and either enjoy the profits jointly, living in commensality, or divide the profits among themselves. In such cases Article 123 is inapplicable, for the reason that the heirs have taken their shares but instead of dividing the property and enjoying their shares separately, they have agreed to enjoy the whole property jointly. There is, therefore, no property of the intestate left to distribute and Article 123 cannot apply. When under such circumstances one of the heirs is excluded from joint enjoyment, he sues to recover not a share in the estate of the deceased, but his share in joint property. The suit is one for partition and Article 142 or 144 will apply—Ma Nan v. Ma Shwe, 4 Bur.L.J. 76, A.I.R. 1925 Rang, 233, 88 I.C. 609; Maung Po v. Maung Shwe, 1 Rang. 405, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 155, 76 I.C. 855; Ma San v. Mg. Maung, 5 Bur.L.J. 4, 95 I.C. 514, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 95; Moung Shwe An v. Maung Tok Pyn, 5 Rang. 582, A.I.R. 128 Rang. 6, 106 I.C. 828; Bholanath v. Sarbamangala, 44 C.W.N. 221, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 93. If a Mahomedan co-owner is in exclusive possession of the entire property, his possession is on behalf of all the other co-owners. If the co-owner in possession dispossesses any one of the other co-owners, the suit that is brought for recovery of possession is not a suit for a distributive share, but is a suit to recover possession of his defined, though undivided, share of the property. Such a suit is not covered by Art. 123 at all, but must fall under the general Article 144—Rustam Khan v. Janki, 51 All. 101 (F.B.), 26 A.L.J. 1041, A.I.R. 1928 All. 467 (469), 111 I.C. 809 (reversing Janki v. Rustam, A.I.R. 1926 All. 748, 97 I.C. 139); Ma Bi v. Ma Khatoon, 7 Rang. 744, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 72 (73), 121 I.C. 785.

Commencement of period of limitation:—The plaintiff sued the defendant for her distributive share of the property of her intestate husband. The defendant applied for letters of administration and obtained the order in 1902. The suit was brought within six years from that date. It was held that the suit was within time; that until the right to obtain letters of administration was determined, the person entitled to represent the estate was unknown, and time began to run from the date of the judgment directing the issue of the letters of administration of the defendant—Sayed Fayez v. Sitara, 15 C.W.N. 107, 13 C.L.J. 239, 7. I.C. 704.

A similar interpretation must be given to the words 'payable' and 'deliverable', as used in this Article; a share in the property of an estate would not be deliverable until the administrator to whom letters of administration had been granted had in his hands the share to be delivered, and similarly a legacy or a share in a legacy also does not become payable until the executor or other person liable to pay it has in his hands money with which it could be paid—Rajah Venkatadri v. Parathasarathy, 48 Mad. 312 (P.C.), 29 C.W.N. 989, 87 I.C. 324, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 105; Mangamma v. Chettiar Firm, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 477, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 36, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 276.

518. Effect of bar of limitation:—The widow of a Parsi, who died in 1837 leaving two sons surviving him, took out letters of administration to the estate in 1838, and then solely possessed and enjoyed the property till her death in 1897, although she was entitled by law to a widow's share therein, and the sons were entitled to the remainder. A suit was instituted by the sons in 1897 to recover their share of the property. Held that their claim had become barred by this Article, and their right to such shares had been extinguished under section 28—Navroji v. Perozebai, 23 Bom. 80.

124. For possession of an hereditary office.	Twelve years.	When the defendant takes possession of the office adversely to the plaintiff. Explanation.—An hereditary office is possessed when the profits thereof are usually received, or (if there are no profits) when the duties thereof are usualy performed.

519. Hereditary office:—This Article applies only where the appointment to the office is by succession through inheritance. If the office is not hereditary, and the appointment is maqe by nomination, this Article would not apply—Jagannath v. Birbhadra, 19 Cal. 776 (779). Where succession is by nomination, by the holder in office, of his successor, it is not a case of hereditary succession. Hereditary succession is succession by the heir to the deceased under the law; the office must be transmitted to the successor according to some definite rules of descent which by their own force designate the person to succeed. There need be no blood-relationship between the deceased and his successor, but the right of the latter should not depend upon the choice of any individual. If the rule were that the senior chela of the Guru should succeed to his office on his death, that might be a case of hereditary succession, even if the Guru nominated him as his successor, when no rights flowed from such nomination. But where the right to succession is based solely on nomination, the succession cannot be treated as hereditary—Mahant Paramananda Das v. Radhakrishna, 51 M.L.J. 258, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1012, 97 I.C. 437. Election stands on the same footing as nomination—Ibid. A suit to recover possession of the office of Dharmakarta of a temple, based on a right by prescription and not on a hereditary right to the office, is governed by Article 120 and not by this Article—Kidambi Ragavachariar v. Tirumalai, 26 Mad. 113 (115).

Where a shebait does not appoint his or her successor as provided in the will of the founder and where there is no other provision for the appointment of a shebait, the management of the endowment must revert to the heirs of the founder, and the office of shebait henceforth must be hereditary in the founder's family; a suit for possession of such an office falls under this Article—Jagannath v. Runjit, 25 Cal. 354 (364); Dharam v. Suraj, 1940 A.L.J. 705, I.L.R. (1940) All. 815, A.I.R. 1941 All. 1, 193 I.C. 693. Where the testator appointed his wife as trustee and the plaintiff as joint trustee, and directed that the succession thereafter should be hereditary, held that the office was hereditary. A hereditary office subject to a temporary incumbency by a person not in the direct line of succession is still an hereditary office—Narayana v. Nagappa, 22 L.W. 870. A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 245, 93 I.C. 923.

The plaintiffs sued for a declaration that they were hereditary Khadims of a certain Mahomedan darga and as such entitled to perform the duties attached to the office for 21 days in each month, and during that period to receive the offerings made by the worshippers at the darga; it was held that the suit fell under this Article —Sarkum Abu Torab v. Rahaman Buksh, 24 Cal. 83 (90).

520. Suit for possession of property:—A suit to recover the hereditary managership of a temple and for possession of the properties of the temple is governed by this Article. There is no distinction as regards limitation between a claim to an office and a claim to the property of an endowment—Gnanasambanda v. Velu Pandaram, 23 Mad. 271 (279) (P.C.); Ram Piari v. Nand Lal, 39 All. 636 (640); Dharam v. Suraj, supra; see Kalipada v. Palani, 1953 S.C.R. 503, (1953) S.C.J. 208, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 125. A suit to recover possession of a choultry building belonging to a charity by one alleging himself to be its hereditary trustee is governed by this Article—Singaravelu v. Chokkalinga, 46 Mad. 525 (527), 43 M.L.J. 737, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 88, 70 I.C. 994.

Therefore where the suit to recover the office of the trustee of a temple is barred, a suit to recover possession of the property of the endowment is also barred. At the same time the right to the property is also extinguished (sec. 28)—Gobindasami v. Dakshinamurthi, 35 Mad. 92 (94); Gnanasambanda v. Velu Pandaram, 23 Mad. 271 (279) (P.C.); Ramanathan v. Murugappa, 27 Mad. 192 (196); Ram Piari v. Nand Lal, 39 All. 636 (640); Alagirswami v. Sundareswar, 21 Mad. 278 (287).

Where a person is in possession of the office of the shebait which was held by another for more than 12 years before the institution of the suit, and adversely to such person, Art. 124 applies, and the plaintiff's claim to the office of the shebait is barred by limitation. The right to the pala is attached to the office of the shebait, and as the right to the office was extinguished by adverse possession of the defendant the right to claim the pala must share the same fate—Haripada Roy v. Gopinath Roy, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 291.

521. Other suits:—A suit to assert the plaintiff's personal right to manage or control the management of the fund of a temple, by right of inheritance may fall under this Article—Balwant v. Puran Mal, 6 All. 1 (10) (P.C.). A suit for emoluments and honours of the office of Adhyapaka is governed by this Article—Raghunathachariar v. Tiruvengada, 8 I.C. 883.

An alienation of the management of a temple by the hereditary trustee is void and does not require to be set aside. Article 91, therefore, does not apply to a suit brought by the succeeding trustee to recover the estate from the alienee. This Article will govern the suit—Narayanan v. Lakshman, 39 Mad. 456 (459). A suit by existing karnams for a declaration that the appointment of another person as karnam jointly with them is void, is not a suit for possession of the office of karnam (since the plaintiffs are already in possession) and this Article does not apply—Lakshminarayanappa v. Venkataratnan, 17 Mad. 395 (396). A suit by a shebait to have the conduct of the worship of a thakur and the custody of his image placed in proper hands would fall under this Article or Article 144—Gossami Sri Gridhariji v. Romanlalji, 17 Cal. 3 (22) (P.C.). The nature of the suit intended to be covered by this Article must be a suit filed by a plaintiff who claims the office from a person who at that time holds the office himself. Where the plaintiff has not alleged that the office is now held adversely to him by any other person, and the suit is only against the trustees of the Devasthanam for the recovery of the emoluments, and incidentally it is a suit for a declaration of his right to the office, Article 124 does not apply, and no other Article applies—Chinnaswami v. S. Singaracharlar, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 377 (378), 109 I.C. 771.

Where several co-trustees or co-managers of a public religious office hold it in rotation, the possession by one trustee is neither exclusive nor adverse to the other trustees. But where there are two distinct branches of trustees, and one of the branches as a whole body holds and possesses the office and the properties of the institution to the exclusion of the other branch, such possession is adverse to the latter —Mitra, Vol. 2, Ed. 6; Art. 124 relied on in Motiram Danaji v. Shenu, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 84. A co-shebaiti claim in respect of a family idol will be barred by 12 years' adverse possession under this Article or Art. 144 respectively whether the claim is regarded as one to a share in the office or as one to a share in the endowed property—Lachhmi v. Ram Rup, 48 C.W.N. 304, I.L.R. (1944) Kar. (P.C.) 170, 1944 A.L.J. 143, A.I.R. 1944 P.C. 24, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 844 (P.C.).

522. Limitation:—Limitation runs when the defendant takes possession of the office adversely to the person entitled to it, and not when the plaintiff becomes entitled to the office. Thus, where a stanom-holder purported to transfer absolutely his right of management of the devaswom properties, and his successor in the stanom brought a suit for recovery of the properties within 12 years of his succession to the office but more than 12 years after the date of the transfer by the preceding stanom-holder, held that the suit was barred by this Article. The possession which had become adverse to the previous stanom-holder became adverse to the present stanom-holder also, as he derived his right to sue from the previous holder, within the meaning of the word 'plaintiff' as defined in sec. 2—Raja of Palghat v. Raman Unni, 41 Mad. 4 (10), 33 M.L.J. 26, 42 I.C. 22. The word 'plaintiff' in the third column includes a person from or through whom the plaintiff derives his right to sue. Therefore where the defendant had held possession of the hereditary office adversely to the plaintiff's predecessor more than 12 years, the plaintiff's title to the office was extinguished by sec. 28—Gnanasambandha v. Velu Pandaram, 23 Mad. 271 (279) (P.C.); Ram Piari v. Nand Lal, 39 All. 636 (640); Jagannadha v. Rama Dass, 28 Mad. 197 (201); Kumaraswami v. Subbaraya, 1931 M.W.N. 8, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 505, 133 I.C. 193. See Kalipada v. Palani, 1953 S.C.R. 503, (1953) S.C.J. 208, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 125.

If the plaintiff is barred by lapse of time from claiming the office of Mahanta, his right to recover the immoveable properties of the Muth is also barred, as those properties go with the Mahantship—Mahant Paramananda v. Radhakrishna, 51 M.L.J. 258, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1012, 97 I.C. 437; Givindasami v. Dakshinamurthi, 35 Mad. 92; Ram Piari v. Nand Lal, 39 All. 636; Kassim Hassan v. Hazra Begum, 32 C.L.J. 151, 60 I.C. 165. See also Lakshmana v. Emakalaperumal, A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 399, (1956) 2 M.L.J. 109.

523. Adverse possession:—There can be no adverse possession so long as there is no lawful trustee who could claim to recover the office from the person who claims to hold it adversely—Palaniyandi v. Vadamalai, 18 I.C. 373; on appeal 2 L.W. 723, 28 I.C. 956; Umayurubhugam v. Vaithinathasami, 9 M.L.T. 485, 10 I.C. 95. Where the office of trustee was vacant for 24 years from 1883 to 1907, and the plaintiff was appointed trustee in 1907, and the defendant had been in possession of the office before 1907, it was held that the defendant's adverse possession commenced only from 1907, when the plaintiff was appointed—Palaniyandi v. Vadamalai, supra.

There can be no adverse possession as between co-owners. Thus, where the right to a religious office devolved on three sons, but the office was held by one of them and his heirs, the possession of the office by these persons cannot be adverse to the other members of the family (the other two sons and their descendants)—Panchanan v. Surendra, 50 C.L.J. 382, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 180. Where the shebaiti of a family idol descends by inheritance like secular property, the possession of a co-sharer shebait must be considered to be the possession of all, until something is done which amounts to an ouster. The fact that the elder brother who managed the property saw to the debsheba, collected the income and defrayed the expenses is very far from being cogent proof of ouster—Lachhmi v. Ram Rup, 48 C.W.N. 304, I.L.R. (1944) Kar. (P.C.) 170, 1944 A.L.J. 143, A.I.R. 1944 P.C. 24, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 844 (P.C.).

There can be no adverse possession of an office where the person holding it adversely was utterly incompetent to hold the office. Thus, the office of the shebait of a temple must be held by a Brahmin; if a non-Brahmin takes possession of the office, such possession cannot be adverse to the claimant, for a non-Brahmin is not competent to hold the office of shebait or to perform the duties of that office. Possession by him for any length of time will not constitute adverse possession. A suit against him will not be barred, because every act of appropriation of the income of the temple property will constitute a fresh actionable wrong—Jalandhar v. Jharula, 42 Cal. 244 (252) (P.C.) (reversing Jharula v. Jalandhar, 39 Cal. 887).

Where the right of trusteeship together with the temple and its endowments was alienated by a Hindu widow (who was the trustee) in favour of the defendant, a suit by the reversioners for a declaration of the invalidity of the alienation made by the widow and for possession of the temple properties, brought more than twelve years after the alienation but within twelve years after the widow's death is barred, in as much as it is one for recovery of an hereditary office and governed by Art. 124, not by Art. 141. There is no distinction between an alienation made by a female trustee and that made by a male trustee; the plaintiffs derived their title through the widow, and the possession of the defendant against her became adverse to the plaintiffs also —Jagannadha v. Rama Dass, 28 Mad. 197 (200, 201). But it has been recently held by the Supreme Court that limitation runs only from the date of the widow's death and not from the date of alienation—Kalipada v. Palani, 1953 S.C.R. 503, (1953) S.C.J. 208, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 125.

Where after the death of the last trustee of a public religious institution, the office devolved by inheritance on his male descendants by his two wives, and the management was for a time conducted by the two branches respectively in rotation, but afterwards the members of the junior branch had discontinued possession of the immoveable properties belonging to the trust, as also the performance of the duties appertaining to the office, and the members of the senior branch had been in turns successively in possession of the properties and had performed the duties to the exclusion of and adversely to the members of the junior branch for more than 12 years, held that the right of the members of the junior branch as a body had been extinguished, and not the right of this or that individual member only, and the members of the senior branch as a body had acquired the sole management of the trust—Ramanathan v. Murugappa, 27 Mad. 192 (196, 197).

Adverse possession by the defendant may be tacked on to the previous adverse possession of his predecessors-in-office. Therefore, where in a suit under this Article it was found that the defendant was in adverse possession of the office of archaka for three years, but his predecessors were successively in adverse possession for over sixty years, the suit was held to be barred—Krishnaswami v. Veeraswami, 36 M.L.J. 93, 49 I.C. 393.

For other notes on the subject, see Notes 618, 619 under Article 144.

125. Suit during the life of a Hindu or Muham-	Twelve years.	The date of the alienation.

madan female by a Hindu or Muhammadan who, if the female died at the date of instituting the suit, would be entitled to the possession of land, to have an alienation of such land made by the female declared to be void except for her life or until her remarriage.

524. Scope of Article:—The right to sue under this Article belongs only to the nearest reversioner, even though such reversioner be a female entitled only to a woman's estate in the property—Bhagwant v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (41) (F.B.); Soman Singh v. Uttam Chand, 1 Lah. 69 (70), 91 P.L.R. 1920, 55 I.C. 924.

A suit by the remote reversioner is governed by Art. 120, not by Art. 125—Anandi v. Ram Sahai, 27 O.C. 173, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 381, 83 I.C. 1055; Devraj v. Shivram, 70 P.R. 1914, 25 I.C. 463; Thakur v. Ganeshi, 15 P.R. 1916, 33 I.C. 161; Soman Singh v Uttam Chand, 1 Lah. 69 (70); Abisash v. Harinath, 32 Cal. 62 (71); Kunwar v. Bindraban, 37 All. 195 (202); Bhagwant v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (F.B.).

The Madras High Court holds in two Full Bench cases that the first column of Article 125 may be so construed as to comprehend a remote reversioner allowed by law to sue in place of the nearest reversioner, and that a suit by a nearest reversioner contemplated by Article 125 is a representative suit brought on behalf of all the reversioners, immediate or remote; in other words, a suit by a remote reversioner is also governed by this Article—Chiruvolu v. Chiruvolu, 29 Mad. 390 (409, 411) (F.B.); Varamma v. Gopaladasayya, 41 Mad. 659 (F.B.). The Patna High Court has held that only a presumptive reversioner has a right to bring a suit for declaration during the lifetime of a limited owner, who is in possession of the properties by inheritance, challenging an alienation made by her. That suit by a reversioner has to be brought in a representative capacity for the benefit of the actual reversioner when the reversion opens—Sheonandan v. Mt. Maida, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 447.

The Lahore High Court has held that the word "reversioner" should not be imported into this Article. This Article is not restricted to suit by reversioners. A suit by certain members of the proprietory body of the village to declare that an alienation by a widow shall not affect their reversionary rights is governed by this Article—Nagina v. Bishni, 40 P.L.R. 786, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 457, 178 I.C. 270.

This Article would apply where the suit is brought by a person who was a remote reversioner at the time of the alienation, but who is the immediate reversioner at the time of institution of the suit; cf. the words of the Article: "who if the female died at the date of instituting the suit, would be entitled to possession." Thus, where the alienation was made by a female (the daughter of the plaintiff's uncle) in 1896, when the plaintiff's father was the immediate reversioner, and then his father died without questioning the alienation, and thereupon the plaintiff instituted the suit in 1909, held that the suit fell under Article 125, because the plaintiff was a person who would be entitled to the possession of the land if the female died at the date of institution of the suit—Veerayya v. Gangamma, 36 Mad. 570 (572).

This Article applies only to a suit by a reversioner for a declaration that an alienation made by the widow is not binding on the reversioner; but a suit by a reversioner for a declaration that an adverse possession set up by the defendants (who were originally tenants) in respect of certain properties is not binding on the reversioner, and that he is entitled to succeed to the properties on the death of the widow, is not a suit under Art. 125 but is governed by Art. 120—Ramaswami v. Thayyammal, 26 Mad. 488 (490).

Article 125 provides for the case of a reversioner who seeks to challenge the alienation made by a Hindu female or other limited owner; it does not apply where the alienation was made by a transferee from a Hindu female limited owner or by a stranger holding under her—Balbhaddar v. Prag Dat, 41 All. 492 (502).

Moreover, this Article applies to a suit brought during the life time of the female who made the alienation. If the alienation was made by the plaintiffs' maternal grandmother, and the plaintiffs bring the suit after the death of the maternal grandmother, and during the lifetime of their mother, the suit does not fall under this Article, but under Article 120—Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (41) (F.B.); Narayana v Rama, 38 Mad. 396 (399).

This Article does not apply where the alienation was not made by the female herself, but was made during her minority by her guardian. A declaratory suit in respect of such alienation falls under Article 120—Dam Ram v. Tirtha Nath, 51 Cal. 101 (108), 81 I.C. 522, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 481. But where a mortgage was made by the guardian of the female during her minority, and the female after attaining majority executed a mortgage in renewal of the previous mortgage, and the reversioner brought a suit for a declaration that this mortgage would not be binding on him after her death, this Article was held to apply—Adeyya v. Govindu, 58 M.L.J. 417, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 274 (275), 131 I.C. 609. See this case cited in Note 525A below.

Article 125 applies to every case where the female making the alienation is a Hindu or a Mahomedan, and the immediate reversioners, who bring the suit, also belong to the same faith. But it is not necessary that the female making the alienation should be actually governed by the Hindu or Mahomedan Law. If it were so, the Article would be rendered superfluous in so far as it refers to Mahomedans, because under the Mahomedan law, a female never succeeds to a life-estate—Nandan v. Wazira, 8 Lah. 215, 100 I.C. 84, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 198, 28 P.L.R. 341. In this case, this Article has been applied to Jats.

Article 125 applies when the possession is that of a Hindu or Mahomedan female as such, that is to say, by virtue of her being a Hindu or Mahomedan, and does not apply if her possession is by virtue of a grant or transfer made inter vivos or by virtue of a bequest, or, in other words, when her possession is irrespective of her being a Hindu or Mahomedan female. It is inconceivable that the legislature would have provided periods of limitation depending solely upon the sex of the parties or upon the religious persuasions irrespective of the nature of the property involved in the suit or of the nature of the possession—Kanhayalal v. Mt. Hira Bibi, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 331, 15 Pat. 151, 17 P.L.T. 131, 163 I.C. 940 (23 Cal. 645 followed; 8 Lah. 215 dissented from); Sheonanda v. Mt. Maida, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 447. If however by the transfer inter vivos or by virtue of a bequest the female heirs do not get a higher status than the women's limited estate in the property, to which they are entitled even under the Hindu Law, a suit by the reversioners for declaration that the alienations made by these female heirs are not binding on them, is governed by this Article—Bishwanath v. Bachni, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 218.

This Article contemplates a case where an alienation has to be declared void except for the lifetime of the widow. It must be presumed, therefore, that the applicability of this Article is limited to cases where an alienation is good so long as that alienor is alive or so long she does not remarry, a fortiori, this Article cannot apply to cases where the alienation is ab initio void, i.e., is bad from its very inception, or in other words, a nullity—Arura v. Sandhuram, 49 P.L.R. 167, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 290 (F.B.); Bishwanath v. Bachni, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 218.

Where the female heirs after inheriting the property, make some sort of division between them and one of them alienates her share, a suit by the son of the other heir as reversioner for a declaration that the alienation is not binding on him is not governed by this Article but by Art. 120—Kuppuswami v. Thangavelu, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 214, 1946 M.W.N. 605, 59 L.W. 504.

525. Alienation:—Where a creditor of the deceased male holder brought a suit against the widow for recovery of the debt, and in execution of the decree in that suit brought certain properties to sale, held that this did not amount to an alienation by the widow—Chhaganram v. Bai Motigavri, 14 Bom. 512 (515).

But it is not necessary that the 'alienation' should be made by a written document. It is sufficient if the act of the female necessarily resulted in the transfer of the estate to the transferee. Therefore, the action of a Hindu widow, in causing a collusive suit to be brought against her and confessing judgment therein, whereby the plaintiff in that suit got a decree for possession of a property of which the widow was in possession holding a Hindu widow's estate, amounted to an "alienation" of such property—Sheo Singh v. Jeoni,, 19 All. 524 (526). Similarly, the widow's act of allowing a decree to be passed on a fictious award by which the whole property of her husband was divided among certain female members of the family who thereby took absolute estate in the shares allotted to them, amounted to an "alienation" of the property—Ram Sarup v. Ram Dei, 29 All. 239 (242, 243). The creation of occupancy rights by a widow is an alienation, and is invalid as against the right of the reversioner, and the cause of action accrues when the occupancy rights are created—Hira v. Chathu, 1915 P.L.R. 115, 29 I.C. 789. The word 'alienation' in this Article has not been used in the restricted sense of a transfer by means of a registered instrument. The article applies to all cases in which the widow has directly or indirectly parted with her proprietary right in the estate and passed the same to some third person. Thus the entry of the names of her illegitimate sons in the revenue papers followed by their possession of the property is enough to constitute an alienation of the estate by the widow—Anant v. Tirathraj, A.I R. 1939 All. 526, 184 I.C. 169. See also Inderdeo Rai v. Deokaran Rai, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 292.

A compromise made by a Hindu widow in respect of her deceased husband's estate by which certain moveable and immoveable properties of her husband are partitioned amounts to an alienation, and is not binding on the reversioner even though it has been followed by a decree of the Court—Sohan Bibi v. Hiran Bibi, 1 I.C. 180 (All.). To see whether a compromise amounts to an alienation, the test is to find out whether the property is claimed by the opposite party by a title before the compromise, or whether he has first derived his title thereto by virtue of and under the compromise—Gadiraja v. Venkiah, 26 M.L.T. 180, 52 I.C. 271. Thus, a widow alienated the property, and after her death the daughter sued to set aside the alienation but subsequently compromised the suit by an agreement by which she acknowledged the validity of the widow's alienation and relinquished her claim. In a declaratory suit brought by the daughter's sons, it was held that the compromise by the daughter did not amount to a fresh alienation—Ibid.

Where a suit on a mortgage having been brought against a widow, she at first contested the suit, but later on abandoned her defence, whereupon a decree was obtained in that suit, and the mortgaged property was sold in execution of that decree, held that the widow's act of withdrawing the defence could not be said to amount to an alienation. To constitute alienation, it must be clearly proved that the widow had done an act which necessarily result in the transfer of the property. Moreover, the Court sale could not be treated as a private sale, unless it was the result of some collusive arrangement—Ranga Row v. Ranganayaki, 35 M.L.J. 364, 47 I.C. 578. But the widow's act in allowing the mortgaged property to be redeemed by a person who is not a reversioner, amounts to an alienation—Kanshi Ram v. Chet Kuar, 10 Lah. 237, 29 P.L.R. 584, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 932, 111 I.C. 203.

525A. Starting point of limitation:—The period of limitation runs from the date of the alienation—Birendranath v. Shibaram, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 473. If the reversioner was a minor at the date of the alienation, then, by the application of secs. 6 and 8, he is entitled to institute the suit within three years after he attains majority, even though more than 12 years after the date of the alienation—Veerayya v. Gangamma, 36 Mad. 570 (572).

Where a mortgage was executed by the widow's de facto guardian during her minority, and the widow after attaining majority executed a mortgage of the same property in renewal of the previous mortgage, the period of limitation for a declaratory suit by the reversioners ran from the date of the original mortgage executed by the widow's guardian, as though it had been executed by the widow herself. No fresh cause of action was given by the mortgage executed by the widow herself—Adeyya v. Govindu, 58 M L.J. 417, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 274 (275). But where a Hindu widow executes a mortgage and subsequently sells the property mortgaged to pay off the mortgage debt, the limitation under this Article in a suit by a reversioner for a declaration that the sale is not binding on him after the widow's lifetime runs from the date of the sale and not from the date of mortgage—Baljit v. Chand Kiran, A.I.R. 1950 All 7. In this case the decision reported in A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 274 was distinguished on the ground that there was only one alienation viz., mortgage, the execution sale was not an alienation. Therefore there was no fresh alienation. But in the present case there were two alienations, viz., mortgage and sale. So the starting point will be from the second alienation viz., the sale. A Hindu widow alienated her husband's properties in 1874; her daughters sued in 1892 to set aside the alienation but withdrew the suit on the ground that the alienation was valid. The daughter's son sued in 1895 for a declaration that neither the alienation nor the withdrawal of the suit affected their rights. Held that the withdrawal of the suit was a confirmation of the alienation of 1874 and gave the plaintiffs a fresh cause of action, so that the present suit was not barred—Mullapudi Ratnam v. Mullapudi Ramayya, 25 Mad. 731. But in 35 M.L.J. 364 cited in Note 525 above, the withdrawal of a suit was held not to amount to an alienation or to give a fresh cause of action. Similarly, in Gadiraja v. Venkiah, 26 M.L.T. 180, 52 I.C. 171, (Note 525 above) a compromise of a suit did not give a fresh starting point for limitation.

526. Effect of bar of limitation:—Although the nearest reversioner may be debarred by lapse of time from bringing a suit under this Article, the remote reversioner will not necessarily be barred likewise. The principle is that one reversioner does not derive his title through another, but all of them claim from the last full owner; therefore limitation against a nearer reversioner does not operate as a bar against a remote reversioner. Therefore a remote reversioner who was a minor at the date of alienation or who was born after the date of the alienation can bring a suit within three years after attaining majority—Abinash v. Harinath, 32 Cal. 62 (71); Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (F.B.). The Madras High Court however holds that a suit by a reversioner to set aside an alienation by a Hindu widow is a representative suit on behalf of all the reversioners, then existing or thereafter to be born, and all of them have but one cause of action, which arises on the date of the alienation. Hence, if by failing to sue within 12 years allowed by Article 125, the existing reversioners became barred by limitation, the reversioners who were born after the date of alienation or who were minors at the date of alienation are equally barred—Baramma v. Gopaladasayya, 41 Mad. 659 (F.B.); Neela Kantamier v. Chinnu Ammal. 52 M.L.J. 13, 99 I.C. 668, A.I R. 1927 Mad. 216. A similar view has been expressed in Chiruvolu v. Chiruvolu, 29 Mad. 390 (F.B.). The Judicial Committee also have expressed the view that the reversioner's suit in such cases is a representative suit in which he represents not only himself but the whole body of possible reversioners—Venkatanarayana v. Subbammal, 38 Mad. 634 (P.C.).

Further, it should be noted that this Article applies only to suits filed during the lifetime of a female for obtaining a declaratory decree. If, however, no suit is filed during her lifetime by the presumptive heir, a separate right, viz., the right to immediate possession, arises on the death of a female (Art. 141)—Prosanna v. Afzoolonnessa, 4 Cal. 523 (525). In other words, where a reversioner neglects to sue for a declaration that an alienation made by the widow is invalid and not binding on him, within the time allowed by this Article, he does not thereby lose his right to question the alienation on the death of the widow by instituting a suit for possession under Art. 141—Bapayya v. Akamma, 36 I.C. 255 (Mad.); Chiruvolu v. Chiruvolu, 29 Mad. 390, 408 (F.B.); Mesraw v. Girijanundan, 12 C.W.N. 857 (859).

126. By a Hindu governed by the law of the Mitakshara to set aside his father's alienation of ancestral property.	Twelve years.	When the alienee takes possession of the property.

The doctrine of right by birth in the son is wholly antiquated and inconvenient for modern times. The Privy Council (in 34 All. 296) have taken advantage of the texts relating to the father's power of alienation for antecedent debts, to mitigate the inconvenience of that doctrine, and the legislature has provided by a special Article 126 for the perfection of the title of an alienee from the father when a Hindu son who wants to take advantage of the antiquated Mitakshara law seeks to set aside such an alienation—Munia Goundan v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 650 (656).

527. Scope of Article:—The word "alienation" in this Article includes a mortgage as well as a sale—Chokhey Singh v. Hardeo, 24 O.C. 330, A.I.R. 1921 Oudh 196 (198), 64 I.C. 757. It includes a gift as well; this Article does not say that the alienation should be for consideration—Munia Goundan v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 650 (652).

This Article applies to suits to 'set aside' a father's alienation, i.e., to cases where immediate relief is sought; it does not apply to a suit for a mere declaration that an alienation made by the plaintiff's father and the widow of his father's divided brother would not affect his reversionary rights—Dev Raj v. Shivram, 70 P.R. 1914, 25 I.C. 463. Such a suit falls under Article 120.

A suit not for a declaration of the invalidity of the alienation but for annulment of the sale, is governed by this Article and not by Article 120; and it is not necessary for a suit under this Article that the plaintiff should pray for possession of the property, along with the prayer for annulment—Gokha Ram v. Sham Lal, 3 Lah. 426 (430), 77 I.C. 174, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 268. Even if the plaintiff claims possession, the suit falls under this Article; the words "to set aside a father's alienation" include also a suit in which possession is claimed—Munia v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 650 (655). The Privy Council have applied this Article to a case in which the plaintiff sought to recover possession from the alienee—Ranodip v. Parmeshwar, 47 All. 165 (P.C.), 52 I.A. 69, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 33, 29 C.W.N. 666 (669), 86 I.C. 249. See also Chokhey Singh v. Hardeo, supra. A suit to set aside the alienation as well as to recover possession falls under this Article—Chintaman v. Bhagvan, 30 Bom.L.R. 1095, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 383, 113 I.C. 378.

A suit for redemption of a mortgage executed by the father is not a suit to set aside an alienation, because its object is to obtain relief under the alienation and not inspite of it. The allegation that any term embodied in the deed of mortgage was ultra vires of the father as the manager of the family does not change the character of the suit—Suraj Bakhsh v. Kedar Nath, 7 Luck. 505, 8 O.W.N. 1090, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 66 (68), 135 I.C. 379.

Article 126 is based upon the principle that a son's knowledge of the alienation by his father ordinarily arises when he sees the alienee in possession. In cases where the alienee never gets possession no limitation can arise under Art. 126. In such cases the right of the son would be merely to obtain a declaration that the deed is invalid. The limitation prescribed for such a suit is six years under Article 120—Bindeshri v. Sital, 50 All. 163, 25 A.L.J. 734, 106 I.C. 377, A.I.R. 1927 All. 702; Angad v. Bahadur, 1929 A.L.J. 1131, A.I.R. 1929 All. 750 (751), 119 I.C. 90; Chitaman v. Bhagwan, supra; Behari v. Dal Chand, A.I.R. 1951 Punjab 341.

This Article which provides for a suit by a Hindu to set aside his father's alienation of ancestral property, applies also to a suit where the alienation was made by the father in conjunction with an uncle—Deonandan v. Musafir, A.I.R. 1927 All. 54, 97 I.C. 591. But if the alienation is made by the grand-father, a suit by the grandson to set aside the alienation is not governed by this Article as this Article applies only to cases of alienation by a father—Jiwaji v. Venkateshkrishna, I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 109, 42 Bom.L.R. 208. A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 136, 187 I.C. 663.

A suit by an adopted son (governed by Mitakshara) to set aside an alienation made by his adoptive father falls under this Article—Milap v. Mohni, 5 O.W.N. 515, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 348 (351), 110 I.C. 180. This Article would apply even though the father alienated the ancestral property as the manager and guardian of his minor sons. Art. 44 would not apply to such a case as there can be no guardian of coparcenary property—Ganesh v. Amrithsami, 1918 M.W.N. 892, 44 I.C. 605; Basave v. Basave, A.I.R. 1952 Mysore 1. But where a father alienated the property of his son which the son acquired from his mother and which was the son's exclusive and separate property, this Article cannot apply, because the property was not ancestral property—Arumugam v. Pandiyam, 40 M.L.J. 475, 13 L W. 416, 62 I.C. 630, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 425. This Article only applies where the property dealt with by the father is the joint ancestral property of himself and his son. And so, where the grandfather devised property to his son and minor grandson not jointly but exclusively to each separately, the property thus acquired by the father and son was not ancestral property, and an alienation by the father of the son's property would not be governed by Art. 126. As the alienation was made by the father during his son's minority, Art. 44 applied—Ramaswami v. Govindammal, 56 M.L.J. 332, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 313 (316), 118 I.C. 481.

A suit by a son to obtain a share by partition of joint family property under the Mithila Law, the father's share having been sold in execution of a decree, is not a suit to set aside an alienation (for execution sale is not alienation), but one to which Art. 127 would apply—Issuridutt v. Ibrahim, 8 Cal. 653 (655).

This Article does not apply to a Jaina governed by a tribal custom—Milap Chand v Mohni, 5 O.W.N. 515, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 348 (351), 110 I.C. 180.

528. Moveable property:—A suit to set aside a sale of brit jajmani bahis purchased with ancestral funds, would be governed by Art. 126. This Article refers to both moveable and immoveable property belonging to a joint family—Kishen v. Shib, 6 A.L.J. 614, 3 I.C. 505.

529. When time runs:—The Legislature has clearly fixed an overt and patent fact, namely the taking of possession of the property by the alienee as the event from which the period has to be calculated, so as to avoid as far as possible the difficult question as to notice—Munia Goundan v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 650 (656). The cause of action accrues when the alienee takes possession, and no new cause of action arises on the death of the plaintiff's father—Ramasami v. Vanamamalai, 26 I.C. 873. If the father at first executes a mortgage of the property in 1905, without possession, and afterwards he sells the property to the mortgagee in 1918 and gives possession, and then the son brings a suit in 1924 to set aside the alienation, the suit is not barred, as time runs only when the alienee takes possession in 1918, and not from 1905. Before 1918, the plaintiff had merely a right to sue for a declaration under Article 120 that the mortgage was not binding upon him. That suit was no doubt barred in 1924 (as more than six years had elapsed since 1905), but the fact that such a suit for declaration brought in 1924 in respect of the previous transaction (mortgage) might have been too late, does not suffice to make the present suit time-barred—Chintaman v. Bhagvan, 30 Bom.L.R. 1095, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 383 (384), 113 I.C. 378.

A family property owned by a father and his undivided son A was mortgaged with possession by them both to B in 1892. In 1897, the equity of redemption in the entire property was sold to C by the father as though it were his self-acquired property. In April 1898, C paid up the mortgage amount and obtained possession of the property from the mortgagee. On his father's death, A sold his half share to D, who then brought a suit in August 1912 against A, B and C for possession of A's half-share on payment of half the mortgage-debt. Held that the suit was governed by this Article, being in effect a suit by the son's transferee against the father's transferee to set aside the transfer by the father, and was barred, having been brought more than 12 years after C took possession (April 1898). Even if Article 126 did not apply, Article 144 did, and the suit was equally barred because when C took possession in 1898, he took possession as the sole owner of the equity of redemption of the entire property and not of the half share of the father only; consequently his possession became adverse from that date—Munia Goundan v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 650 (652, 658).

If the plaintiff was a minor when his father alienated the property, the provisions of secs. 6 and 8 will apply. If the plaintiff fails to bring the suit within 3 years of his attaining majority (sec. 8), it will be barred, and his right to the property will be extinguished—Lachmi Narain v. Kishan Kishore, 38 All. 126 (130).

If the son fails to bring a suit to set aside his father's alienation within the period prescribed by this Article, his right becomes extinct, and the property becomes the property of the purchaser and ceases to be joint family property. Consequently, any other son or grandson of the alienor, born after the expiry of the period of limitation can no longer question the alienation, because the property having passed absolutely to the purchaser, these sons or grandsons do not acquire any interest in the property and consequently no suit by them is maintainable—Lachmi Narain v. Kishan Kishore (supra).

530. Suit by son born after date of sale:—Where a coparcenary property was alienated by all the adult male members living at the time, and their sons, who were born after the date of alienation, brought a suit to challenge the sale more than 12 years after the date of alienation, though within three years after attaining majority, it was held that the suit was barred. Section 6 could be pleaded by persons who were minors at the date of alienation but not by persons who were not in existence at that date but were born afterwards—Dhanraj v. Ram Naresh, 79 I.C. 1019, A.I.R. 1924 All. 912 (914); Sankat Narayan v. Ram Bharos, 79 I.C. 1010, A.I.R. 1924 All. 677 (678); Chokhey Singh v. Hardeo, 24 O.C. 330, A.I.R. 1921 Oudh 196 (199), 64 I.C. 757; Ram Kishen v. Baldeo, 86 I.C. 704, A.I.R. 1925 All. 247. This view is supported by the Privy Council in their decision in Ranodip v. Parmeshwar, 47 All. 165 (P.C.).

If there are two plaintiffs, one of whom (1st plaintiff) had been in existence at the date of the alienation and the other was born after that date, and the suit is brought more than 3 years (sec. 8) after the 1st plaintiff attains majority, the suit is barred in respect of both the plaintiffs, inspite of the fact that 3 years have not elapsed from the attainment of majority by the 2nd plaintiff. There is but one cause of action in favour of both. Successive causes of action cannot arise as new members are born year after year—Sita Ram v. Cheddi, 46 All. 882 (883), 22 A.L.J. 809, A.I.R. 1924 All. 798. See Note 78 under sec. 6.

Plaintiff's father sold away all the family properties in 1885; the alienees eventually obtained possession in 1899. The plaintiff, who has born in 1901, brought a suit in 1910 to recover his share in the property. It was held that as the entire family property was sold away in 1885, there was no joint family property in which the plaintiff had an interest by birth, and therefore he could not question the sale—Soundarajan v. Saravana, 30 M.L.J. 592, 34 I.C. 794 (796).

127. By a person excluded from joint family property to enforce a right to share therein.	Twelve years.	When the exclusion becomes known to the plaintiff.

530A. Scope:—A suit to enforce a right to a share means a suit to obtain actual possession of a share. Where the suit is for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to a share at some future date in the property the suit does not fall under this Article but under Art. 120. A suit to enforce a right is something different from a suit to establish a right—Krishnajee v. Annajee, 54 Bom. 4, 31 Bom.L.R. 1240, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 61 (63), 124 I.C. 773.

A suit to obtain a share by partition of a joint family property is a suit to enforce a right to a share in the property, and falls under this Article—Issuridutt v. Ibrahim, 8 Cal. 653 (655).

If the property is joint family property, the suit for possession of a share in such property falls under this Article, and not under the general Article 142—Umesh Chandra v Jagadish, 1 C.W.N. 543 (544).

Where one of the daughters who take as joint tenants excludes the other from the possession and enjoyment of the property, and then alienates some of the properties, and afterwards dies, a suit by the surviving sister against her deceased sister's son and the alienees to recover possession of the property by right of survivorship is not governed by this Article, but by Art. 144. Article 127 cannot apply, as the suit cannot be said to be one to enforce a right to share in the property, because the plaintiff is not suing to recover a share but to recover the whole property by right of survivorship—Atchamma v. Papiah, 44 Mad. 131 (138).

531. Joint family property:—In order to bring a suit within this Article it will have to be shown that there had been a joint-family property, and that the plaintiff had been excluded from the enjoyment of such property and therefore desires to enforce his right to share therein. The word "excluded" in this Article implies previous inclusion, and a suit contemplated by this Article cannot be maintained by a person who had never before had any portion of the joint property—Saroda Soondury v. Doyamoyee, 5 Cal. 938 (940). Consequently, this Article only applies to persons who are members of a joint family and claim a right to share in joint-family property, upon the ground that they are members of the family to which the property belongs —Kartik v. Saroda, 18 Cal. 642 (645). Therefore, the provisions of this Article do not apply to a suit by a person who claims to inherit property as a daughter's son (who is not a member of the joint-family)—Mothura v. Borkant, 11 C.L.R. 312; or to a suit by a daughter who after her father's death left her father's family and had lived in her husband's house and never in her paternal residence with the members of the joint family; to such a suit Article 142 or 144 would apply—Kartik v. Saroda (supra). So also, Art. 127 does not apply where the plaintiff is a stranger who had purchased a share in the joint-family property from one of the members thereof who has been excluded from possession—Harendra v. Anuoardi, 14 Cal. 544 (545); Rom Lakhi v. Durga Charan, 11 Cal. 680 (682); Bhavrao v. Rakhmin, 23 Bom. 137 (140) (F.B.); Muttusami v. Ramakrishna, 12 Mad. 292. To such a case, the rule of limitation in Art. 136 or 144 applies—Ram Lakhi v. Durga Charan (supra); Bhavrao v. Rakhmin, supra. So also, this article does not apply to a suit by a co-parcener against a stranger who has purchased the share of another co-parcener; because the stranger is not to be deemed a person who has "excluded his co-parceners from the joint family property"; the stranger does not step into the shoes of the co-parcener from whom he has purchased. Art. 144 applies to the case, and time begins to run from the date of his purchase and entry into possession, because at that date his possession becomes adverse to the other members of the family—Fakirappa v. Rudrappa, 34 Bom.L.R. 354, 137 I.C. 367, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 255 (256), following Bhavrao v. Rakhmin, 23 Bom. 137 (141, 142) (F.B.).

A suit brought by the plaintiffs for a declaration that they and the defendants are the members of an undivided Aliyasantana family, and that the plaintiff No. 1 as the senior member of the family is entitled to have the lands registered in his name, falls under this Article. The words 'to enforce a right to share therein' show that under this Article it is not necessary that the plaintiff should be able to claim a definite share and enforce partition; all that is necessary is that he should claim to be entitled to a share to the joint property, although that may be, as under the Aliyasantana law, indivisible—Muttakki v. Thimmappa, 15 Mad. 186 (191). A Buddhist father, on his remarriage, made over the land in suit to his four children by his first wife, by a registered deed, towards their mother's share of the inheritance in full satisfaction. He continued to be in possession but managed the land for the joint benefit of the children. One of the daughters died and her husband sued for her share and mesne profits, more than 12 years after the execution of the deed. Held that this Article did not apply, as it is doubtful whether the property in suit can be called a joint family property, and there was no evidence that the plaintiff was excluded from the property. Article 144 governed the suit, and it was not barred, as the possession of the father was not adverse to his children—Maung Aung v. Maung San, 5 Rang. 576, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 13, 105 I.C. 598.

In order to bring a case under this Article, the plaintiff must prove that at the time he was excluded from the property in dispute it was the joint-property of an existing joint family. It is not enough that the property in dispute had been a joint family property at some previous period—Gajraj v. Sadho, 15 O.C. 397. 16 I.C. 882 (883).

The expression "joint family property" must be read as property appertaining to a joint family. This Article does not apply to a suit for possession of immoveable property by one member of a family against another who is separate from him. Such a suit is governed by Art. 144. Even property which has continued undivided after a division between brothers is not joint family property—Govindrao v. Rajabai, 27 N.L.R. 131 (P.C.), 58 I.A. 106, 35 C.W.N. 438, A.I.R. 1931 P.C 48, 130 I.C. 673. Where at the date of the suit the family has been divided in status, and the property has ceased to be joint family property and is held by the sharers as tenants-in-common, Art. 127 is inapplicable—Yerukola v. *Yeruk*ola, 45 Mad. 648 (F.B.), 42 M.L.J. 507, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 150; Krishnajee v. Annajee, 54 Bom. 4, 31 Bom.L.R. 1240, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 61 (62), 124 I.C. 773. Where a member of a Hindu family is divided in status from others, and is in enjoyment of some portion of the family properties, while others enjoy other portions, he is not in law excluded or ousted from those other portions. In such a case, Article 127 cannot apply because the plaintiff is not a person excluded from joint family property, but only a tenant-in-common excluded from the common property—Kumarappa v. Saminatha, 42 Mad. 431 (439). Thus where a member of joint family treats the property in his possession, which is a share of the entire property, as his separate property and the other member has acquiesced throughout in such treatment, there is a severance of status between the two members and this Article does not apply as there is no existence of joint family—Ratneshwari v. Bhagwati, 1949 F.C.R. 715, A.I.R. 1950 F.C. 142. Where a joint-family property is actually divided, and one of the co-sharers subsequently deposits money which he has received for his share with another co-sharer, that money is no longer joint-family property, and a suit to recover it does not fall under this Article—Ahmed Ali v. Hussain Ali, 10 All. 109 (114). Where the greater portion of the properties has been divided and the parties live separately, (i.e., where the family has been divided in status), and then a member recovers a debt due to the family (which was left undivided at the time of partition), the debt so recovered is not the property of a joint family and a suit to recover a share therein is not governed by this Article—Vaidyanatha v. Aiyasamy, 32 Mad. 191 (194); Thakur v. Partab, 6 All. 442; Banoo v. Doona, 24 Cal. 309 (312); Yerukola v. Yerukola, 45 Mad. 648; Gajraj v. Sadho, 15 O.C. 397, 16 I.C. 882 (883). Where, however, at the time of partition, one of the members is a minor and continues undivided from and under the guardianship of another, who afterwards collects certain debts due to the family, it will not be open to the guardian to say that he did not realise the minor's share of the debt on his behalf, as it was his duty to protect the minor's interests and he would have been guilty of dereliction of duty if he had omitted to do so. Where, therefore, he collects any such debts, he will be considered to have recovered the minor's share on behalf of such minor, and the minor can recover his share within the period provided by Art. 127—Vaidyanatha v. Aiyasamy, 32 Mad. 191 (199).

Where money belonging to the joint family was realised by one member of the family, to the exclusion of the other members, while the family was joint, and then a partition was effected by the members, a suit for recovery of the money, brought after partition is not governed by Article 127 because it is no longer joint family property. The suit ought to be instituted within three years from the date of separation or partition—Jagat Singh v. Achhaibar, 26 O.C. 191, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 15 (following Gajraj v. Sadhu, 15 O.C. 397, 16 I.C. 882). The members of a joint-family made a partition of family property, reserving certain land and the capital and assets of their family businesses, which remained under the control and in the possession of one of the members for future partition. The plaintiff who was a member of the family demanded his share in the undivided property but the person in possession refused to give effect to his claim. He thereupon sued for his share. Held that the property in question was undivided coparcenary property notwithstanding the partition, and the suit fell under this Article and time ran from the date of refusal and not from the date of the previous partition—Muthusami v. Nallakulantha, 18 Mad. 418 (419). See also Ramachandar v. Narayana, 11 Bom. 216 (219). But a suit by a divided coparcener to recover his share in property left undivided at a prior partition through fraud is not governed by this Article as such property, after severance of status, cannot be styled "joint family property." The same principle applies where property is left undivided at a prior partition through inadvertence, ignorance or mistake—Siddappa v. Vishvanathsa, 45 Bom.L.R. 825, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 419, 214 I.C. 273.

532. Muhammadan family property:—The words "joint family property" in this Article means the property of a joint-family and not property which, although it may not have been divided, yet belong to a family which is not joint, and hence this Article does not apply to the undivided property of a family governed by the Mahomedan law, because each member thereof holds his share in severalty—Amme Raham v. Zia Ahmed, 13 All. 282 (F.B.). So also, in Mohideen v. Syed Meer Saheb, 38 Mad. 1099, Patcha v. Mohidin, 15 Mad. 57, Commercial Bank v. Allavoodeen, 23 Mad. 583 (589) and Imbichi v. Syed Ali, 1912 M.W.N. 45, 13 I.C. 791, it has been held that this Article refers to "joint-family property" in the Hindu sense of the term and is inapplicable to Mahomedans. If the members of a Muhammadan family succeed to the property on the death of a relation, each of them takes a share of each item of the property, and Art. 127 would not apply to a suit for possession of shares in such property—Mahomed Akram v. Anarbi, 22 Cal. 594; Poyram Bibi v. Lakhu Khan, 7 C.W.N. 155.

The Bombay High Court in an earlier case (Bavasha v. Masumsha, 14 Bom. 70) held that this Article applied to a suit by a Mahomedan for partition of joint-family property; but now it adopts the view that this Article does not apply to the property of a Muhammadan, or any other person not being a Hindu, and not having been proved to have adopted as a custom the Hindu law of joint family—Ishop Ahmed v. Abhramji, 41 Bom. 588 (F.B.) (Shah, J. dissenting); Jan Mahomed v. Dutta Jaffer, 38 Bom. 449, 22 I.C. 195.

533. "Excluded":—The word 'excluded' has not been defined in this Act, and the question whether a person has been excluded from the joint family must depend upon the facts of the particular case. An intention to exclude is an essential element, and it is necessary for the Court to be satisfied that there was an intention on the part of those in control and possession of the joint family property to exclude the person, and the exclusion was to his knowledge—Parbhu v. Jitendra, 22 Luck. 522, 1947

O.W.N. 421, A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 307. Thus, one N, a member of a joint Hindu family, after the death of his father and mother, at the age of 12 went to live with his maternal uncle voluntarily. He was not turned out, but went away to avoid his hostile step-mother, and with the consent of the eldest male member of the joint family. He was helped by his maternal uncle but was not educated in the same way as the other members of the joint family. Held that the mere fact that the other members of the joint family did not subscribe towards his education and marriage expenses and allowed him to be poorly maintained by his maternal uncle did not prove that N was excluded from his share of the joint family property, when there was nothing to indicate to N or to anyone else that they intended to exclude him from his share—Radhoba v. Aburao, 53 Bom. 699 (P.C.), 31 Bom.L.R. 1030, 33 C.W.N 1006 (1013, 1014), A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 231, 118 I.C. 1.

The sole occupation of the joint property by some of the members will not amount to ouster of the rest of the members or adverse possession against them, until there has been a disclaimer of the plaintiff's title by the assertion of a hostile title, and notice thereof to the plaintiff, either direct or to be inferred from notorious acts and circumstances—Ittapan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (166); Ujalbi v. Umakanta, 31 Cal. 970 (973); Barada Sundari v. Annada Sundari, 3 C.W.N. 774; Hari v. Maruti, 6 Bom. 741. In order to constitute exclusion, there must be something to indicate that the plaintiff abandoned his claims to enjoy the family property or that the defendants to his knodledge excluded him from enjoyment. Oral renunciation by the plaintiff of his share is not valid enough to operate as exclusion against him—Dhoorjeti v. Dhoorjeti, 30 Mad. 201 (202).

Mere exclusion from commensality is not sufficient—Jeolal v. Loke Narayan, 16 C. W.N. 466 (P.C.), 15 I.C. 184. As between brothers in a joint family, where no partition is proved, the mere fact that one of the brothers went to live in a neighbouring village would not make the possession of the other brothers, who continued to live in the family house, necessarily adverse to him—Jagjivanandas v. Bai Amba, 25 Bom. 362 (365). Mere non-participation in the profits by one and exclusive occupation by another would not constitute the exclusion of the former by the latter—Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (159). Where one of the two brothers forming a joint-family is in possession of the property, though the other never actually joined in cultivation with his brother he must be held to have been in possession through his brother and there is no exclusion from the property—Aparna v. Chandra Shekhar, 18 Luck 439, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 177, 206 I.C. 94. The plaintiff was in Government service and was obliged to leave his native village entrusting the entire family property to the management of his undivided brother, the defendant. Later on, the defendant wrote to the plaintiff, requesting him to take up the management of his share, but the plaintiff refused to do so. It was held under the circumstances that the possession by the defendant had not been as his own to the exclusion of the plaintiff, and the mere fact that the plaintiff who lived apart from the village and did not participate in the profits of the property, did not justify the inference of an exclusion from the property—Dinkar v. Bhikaji, 11 Bom. 365 (368). In the case of a Hindu widow, the mere fact that she did not participate in the profits of her husband's family property for more than twelve years, or that she refused to live with her co-widows (defendants) did not amount to ouster or exclusion by the defendants—Shellam v. Chinnammal, 24 Mad. 441 (443).

A person who on his application for mutation of names is put upon the registry as sole occupier, cannot be deemed to hold the land as sole proprietor to the exclusion of the claims of the other members of the family as co-owners or of the claims for maintenance; because proceedings for the mutation of names are not judicial proceedings in which the title to and the proprietary rights in immoveable property are determined, as revenue authorities have no jurisdiction to pronounce upon such right of title. A fortiori, where a co-sharer in possession of the property makes gifts of lands to other co-sharers, in the shape of maintenance, it is a strong evidence that those co-sharers are not excluded from the estate—Nirman Singh v. Rudra Partab, 48 All. 529 (P.C.), 29 O.C. 316, 1 Luck. 389, A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 100, overruling Rudra Partab v. Nirman Singh, 9 O.L.J. 552, 74 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 61. But repeated unsuccessful attempts to get one's name entered as against joint family property during settlement proceedings amount to exclusion from joint family property within his knowledge—Kishenlal v. Satya Prakash, A.I.R. 1952 All. 105. Where a co-parcener is not in possession of any joint property, and does not receive any of the proceeds of the property, he may be said to be excluded from joint property; but if he is living on the property with the other joint owners and is supported in the family by the proceeds of the family property, that is sufficient to negative his exclusion and save limitation—Jagannatha v. Ramabhadra, 11 Mad. 380 (affirmed by the Privy Council in Jagannatha v. Ramabhadra, 14 Mad. 237).

When one of two co-mortgagors redeems the entire property and retains possession of it, that in itself is not sufficient to constitute adverse possession against the other co-mortgagor—Moidin v. Oothumanganni, 11 Mad. 416 (417); Ram Chandra v. Sada-Shiv, 11 Bom. 422 (424); Chandbhai v. Hasanbhai, 46 Bom. 213 (215); Wazihuddin v. Ahmad, 2 Luck. 618. The possession by a Mahomedan co-sharer of property which he has redeemed from the mortgagee does not become adverse to the other co-sharers until some exclusive title adversely to their proprietary rights is set up—Faki Abas v. Faki Nurudin, 16 Bom. 191 (196).

The fact that the plaintiffs were not excluded from their share in one part of the joint property does not prevent this Article from operating in respect of another part from which they had been excluded to their knowledge—Vishnu v. Gonesh, 21 Bom. 325 (328). But this case has been dissented from in Kumarappa v. Saminatha, 42 Mad. 431 (439), in which it has been held that in order to constitute an exclusion under this Article there must be exclusion from the whole of the joint family property; mere exclusion from specific items of the joint property will not suffice.

When a member of the joint Hindu family becomes a convert to Islam, his very conversion is a proof of his exclusion from the membership—Ganga v. Begum, 57 P.R. 1916, 4 P.L.R. 1917, 35 I.C. 549.

Where the Court of Wards took possession of an estate in 1898 purporting to act solely on behalf of the defendant and treating him as the sole heir thereto, and since 1898 it refused distinctly and repeatedly to recognise the plaintiffs' mother as the lawfully wedded wife of the late proprietor and the plaintiffs as his legitimate children, it was held that the possession by the Court of Wards was one on behalf of the defendant alone and it excluded the plaintiffs from any share or possession of the estate since 1898. A suit brought in 1916 is therefore barred—Narasimha v. Krishnachandra, 37 M.L.J. 256, 52 I.C. 725.

Where a portion of a property was left undivided at a general partition and one of the co-sharers remained in sole possession of it for 35 years, that is a cogent evidence from which exclusion of the other co-sharers may be inferred—Ram Chunder v. Narayana, 11 Bom. 216; Vithoba v. Narayan, 11 Bom. 221 (Note). Two co-sharers executed a deed of partition, in the absence of a third co-sharer (plaintiff's father), but the deed contained a clause to the effect that the plaintiff's father being absent from the village the other co-sharers (defendants) would manage his share during his absence, and on his return hand over the share to him. Held that although the plaintiff's father and the plaintiff had been admittedly out of possession for more than 12 years, still as the possession of the share in question by the defendants had not been a possession of it as their own property to the exclusion of the plaintiff or his father, no question of limitation arises—Nilo v. Govind, 10 Bom. 24 (27).

To entitle a person or a branch of an Aliyasantana family to participate in the property of the family, the connection with the family must be kept up either by exercise of the right to share in the joint family property by joining in the sacra, by intermarriage or otherwise. But when they have kept themselves completely separate from the family more than 12 years, that will amount to evidence that they were excluded from the joint family and consequently their right to share therein is barred —Muttakke v. Thimmappa, 15 Mad. 186 (192).

534. When time runs:—Time would not run against the plaintiff until his exclusion from the property had become known to him, i.e., until there has been a disclaimer of the plaintiff's title by the open assertion of a hostile title by the defendant with notice to the plaintiff—Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153; Ujalbi v. Umakanta, 31 Cal. 970; Barada Sundari v. Sarada Sundari, 3 C.W.N. 774; Hari v. Maruti, 6 Bom. 741; i.e., unless the plaintiff had intimation that the defendant intended to exclude him—Malkappa v. Madkappa, 37 Bom. 84; Umrao v. Lachmi, 1917 P.L.R. 25, 39 I.C. 762. Thus, the mere fact that the defendant had been in possession of the property in dispute for more than fifteen years, without any claim having been made by the plaintiff would not make the defendant's possession adverse, and time would not run against the plaintiff until he demanded a share of the property and was refused—Hari v. Maruti, 6 Bom. 741 (742). Where there is no allegation by the defendant that the plaintiff ever claimed and was refused his share in the family property, a suit by the plaintiff to establish his right to a share in the joint family property cannot be barred by any lapse of time—Hansji v. Balabh, 7 Bom. 297 (299).

In case of a minor, time would run from the date of his attaining majority, because at the most it can be held that he became aware of his exclusion when he became a major—Niranjan v. Behari, 1929 A.L.J. 324, A.I.R. 1929 All. 302 (305), 116 I.C. 849. See also Kishenlal v. Satya, A.I.R. 1952 All. 105. In Janardan v. Nilkantha, A.I.R. 1952 Orissa 31 it has been held that knowledge of a guardian can be imputed to the minor as well and time runs from the date of the knowledge of the guardian.

535. Burden of proof:—In a suit under this Article, it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove title, i.e., to prove that the property is joint and that he has a share in it—Jibanbhai v. Anibhai, 22 Bom. 259 (260). The burden lies on the plaintiff to prove that the property in which he seeks to recover a share is a joint family property. It is not enough for him merely to call it joint family property and to show that 30, 50 or 100 years ago his ancestors and the defendant's ancestors were joint, leaving the Court to presume that any property of which the defendant may be possessed at the time of suit is joint family property—Obhoy v. Gobin, 9 Cal. 237 (241); Gajraj v. Sadho, 15 O.C. 397, 16 I.C. 882 (883).

The point of time at which the status of the joint family broke and the members became separated is very material, and the onus lies on the plaintiff to show that the partition at which the shares of the members of the family were determined and in consequence of which the plaintiff became entitled to possession of his share, took place within 12 years preceding the institution of the suit—Sarjoo Prasad v. Deodat, 4 O.W.N. 958, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 499, 105 I.C. 410.

As regards exclusion, the burden lies on the defendant to show that partition was demanded by the plaintiff and refused by the defendant more than twelve years before suit, or that the plaintiff was to his knowledge excluded from all participation in the family property more than twelve years before suit—Krishnabai v. Khangowda, 18 Bom. 197 (202); Hansji v. Valabh, 7 Bom. 297; Sellam v. Chinnammal, 24 Mad. 441 (443). It would not be sufficient to prove merely that the plaintiff was excluded; it must also be proved that the exclusion was known to the plaintiff more than twelve years before suit—Jibanbhat v. Anibhat, 22 Bom. 259 (261); Umesh v. Jagadis, 1 C.W.N. 543 (544).

536. Effect of fraud:—Where a Court finds that a partition effected between the co-parceners of a joint family was unfair and inequitable, or one of the co-parcerners had been deceived, the case is reduced to one of fraudulent partition, and the cause of action for a suit for partition is then in substance to set aside that partition on ground of fraud and to treat the family as joint and to seek for a fresh partition of the family estate. For the purpose of limitation such a case is taken out of this Article—Vithapa v. Basagowda, 14 Bom.L.R. 771, 17 I.C. 10.

128. By a Hindu for arrears of maintenance.	Twelve years.	When the arrears are payable.

537. This Article and the next apply only to cases in which the right of maintenance is based upon the Hindu Law, and not to cases in which the right is based entirely upon a contract, though the persons claiming under the contract are Hindus; and the application of these two Articles depends not upon the nationality of the plaintiff but upon the nature of his right, and the words "by a Hindu" used in the Article must be taken to mean "by a person claiming under the Hindu Law"—Girijanund v. Sailajanand, 23 Cal. 645. Therefore where the plaintiff's claim to maintenance was based upon a contract evidenced by a compromise decree, her case was not governed by Article 120 but by Art. 115—Narendra v. Nalini, 26 I.C. 939 (Cal.).

The word "Hindu" in Arts. 128 and 129 does not refer to the religious persuasions of the plaintiff. Those two articles apply where the maintenance is claimed not on the basis of contract, but on the basis of status of the plaintiff under the Hindu law—Babu Ramji Das v. Rai Mahamayaprasad Singh Bahadur, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 158. A suit for maintenance even by a Hindu under contract is governed by Art. 115 (ibid, 23 Cal. 645 followed).

Where maintenance was charged upon immoveable property, a suit to recover the arrears of maintenance would be governed by Article 132—Ahmed Hossain v. Nihaluddin, 9 Cal. 945 (951) (P.C.).

The right to maintenance is one accruing from time to time according to the wants and exigencies of the person claiming it—Narayanarao v. Ramabai, 3 Bom. 415 (P.C.). It is a constantly recurring right and therefore arrears can be claimed for 12 years before suit although arrears for previous years may be barred—Jivi v. Ramji, 3 Bom. 207.

129. By a Hindu for a declaration of his right to maintenance.	Twelve years.	When the right is denied.

538. A suit for maintenance by a junior member of an Aliyasantana family is one that falls under Article 127, because it is a suit to enforce a right to share in joint family property (the right of maintenance being the mode in which the right of ownership is enforced); it does not fall under Article 129 because this Article applies to suits which are strictly for a right of maintenance in property belonging to another—Maradevi v. Pammakka, 36 Mad. 203 (206); Achutan v. Kunjunni, 13 M.L.J. 499.

So long as there is no denial of the right, limitation does not run in respect of a suit to establish the right, although there may have been no payment or claim made —Ramanamma v. Sambayya, 12 Mad. 347.

Reading Articles 128 and 129 together, it is obvious that though the right to maintenance may have been denied long before twelve years of the date of suit (Art. 129), a suit for recovery of arrears of maintenance for 12 years preceding the suit can be maintained (Art. 128)—Ratnamacari v. Akilandammal, 26 Mad. 291 (313).

In a suit under this Article, the onus of proving the denial of the plaintiff's right to maintenance more than twelve years prior to suit lies on the defendant—Rangappa v. Kulandai, 26 M.L.J. 205, 23 I.C. 831.

130. For the resumption or assessment of rent-free land.	Twelve years.	When the right to resume or assess the land first accrues.

539. A suit for assessment of rent-free land is governed by Article 130; but a suit to establish a right to assessment of rent is governed by Article 131—Devendra v. Jhumur, 43 C.L.J. 387, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 883, 95 I.C. 622. The period of limitation for a suit for resumption of a jaghir granted for life commences from the death of the grantee—Mahadev v. Jagatraj, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 298, 71 I.C. 929.

The period of limitation for a suit for assessment of rent runs from the time when a complete hostile right to hold the land rent-free has been claimed by the defendant to the knowledge of the plaintiff—Birendra v. Roshan, 39 Cal. 453; Devendra v. Jhumur, supra. Thus, where in a suit to recover khas possession or in the alternative for assessment of rent it appeared that the defendant had, in a settlement proceeding, more than 12 years before the suit, set up a claim to hold the land rent-free in virtue of his ancestral title, held that this was a clear claim of nishkar title unqualified by any reference to a document; a complete hostile right had been claimed to the knowledge of the plaintiff, and the present suit was therefore barred—Birendra Kishore v. Roshan Ali, 39 Cal. 453 (456).

As between the raiyats of an estate and the landlords of an estate, when a raiyat holds land of an estate without payment of rent, limitation against the landlord will only arise 12 years after the landlord has come to know that the defendant possesses the land without payment of rent—Chandra Kumar v. K. C. Mukherjee, Official Receiver, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 289.

If the right to resume or assess the land first accrued to the plaintiff, who had purchased the estate at a revenue-sale, on the date of the revenue sale, a suit by the plaintiff to resume the land from the lakhirajdar or for asseshment of the land falls under Art. 130, and must be brought within twelve years of the revenue sale, that being the date on which the right to resume or assess the land accrues. But if the defendant had been claiming to hold the land as lakhiraj adversely against the old proprietors, for more than twelve years before the institution of the plaintiff's suit, the plaintiff would be barred by limitation—Karmi v. Brojo, 22 Cal. 244 (251). In a suit to assess rent on a land granted rent rent-free to the tenants for excavating a tank therein, time begins to run when the right to assess the rent accrues, i.e., when there is a clear and unequivocal assertion of adverse possession by the tenant, or when the tank becomes silted up and is no longer used for the purpose for which the land was granted—Birendra v. Akram, 39 Cal. 439 (445). Moreover, as the obligation to pay rent is a recurring obligation, the landlord cannot be barred by Article 130—Ibid (at p. 446). If the right to assess the land is created by a decree declaring the land to be liable to assessment, a suit to recover assessment of the land must be brought within 12 years of the date of the decree; otherwise it will be barred—Bir Chunder v. Raj Mohun, 16 Cal. 449 (456); Nil Komal v. Bir Chunder, 16 Cal. 450 (Note).

Article 130 can have no application unless and until the land is found to be rent-free; the mere non-payment of rent for a period does not bar the landlord's right to have the rent assessed and to recover rent from his tenant. Where the suit is not for resumption or assessment of rent-free land, but for assessment of mal land presumably liable to be assessed, the circumstance that rent has not in fact been paid for more than 12 years before suit is not a sufficient ground for dismissal of the suit, because the right to have the rent assessed continues as long as the relationship of landlord and tenant continues in respect of the land liable to be assessed—Akbar v. Ramesh Chandra, 38 C.L.J. 207, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 392, 72 I.C. 329; Kamini Sundari v. Abdul Halim, 28 C.L.J. 254, 47 I.C. 420; Dhananjoy v. Upendra, 22 C.W.N. 685, 46 I.C. 428.

There is a difference between a case where the tenant asserts that the land encroached upon is a part of an admitted tenancy, and a case where the tenant sets up a rent-free title to the encroached land. The difference is that in one case the assertion means that rent is being already paid for and so more rent is not payable, and in the other that no rent is payable because the landlord is not entitled to realise any rent from the land. In the former case, the plaintiff, notwithstanding the defendant's assertion to hold the land encroached upon as part of the admitted tenancy, may still have a right to have fair rent assessed for the land. But in the latter case, that is, if the land is found as not included in the admitted tenancy, it must be a case of an encroachment or trespass by the tenant. In such a case, if the tenant is in adverse possession of the absolute interest for over twelve years, then the landlord's right should be held to be completely extinguished. If the tenant is in adverse possession for such a period in respect of only a limited interest as tenant, then whatever may be the effect of it on the question of the landlord's right to khas possession, a claim for assessment of rent will not be barred—Debendra v. Jhumur, 43 C.L.J. 387, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 883 (885, 886), 95 I.C. 622.

Where a tenant has for over twelve years asserted to the knowledge of the landlord that he is under no obligation to pay rent, the claim to assessment of rent is barred—Birendra Kishore v. Lakshmi, 22 C.L.J. 129, 30 I.C. 896; Kali Mohan v. Birendra Kishore, 22 C.L.J. 309, 31 I.C. 391.

A suit to levy assessment on rent-free lands being virtually a suit for possession of those lands, if a suit for assessment of the lands is barred by Art. 130, the right to receive rent in respect of the lands is extinguished by operation of sec. 28, and the tenant's title to hold the lands rent-free is complete—Sakharam v. Trimbakrao, 45 Bom. 694 (708); Abhoy Churn v. Kally Pershad, 5 Cal. 949 (952); Madhav Rao v. Anusuyabai, 40 Bom. 606 (613); Birendra v. Dilwar, 13 I.C. 517 (Cal.); Keval Kuver v. Taluqdari Settlement Officer, 1 Bom. 586 (590).

Twelve years' adverse possession against one holder of saranjam would operate to bar a claim on the part of a successor—Madhavrao v. Anusuyabai, 40 Bom. 606.

131. To establish a periodically recurring right.	Twelve years.	When the plaintiff is first refused the enjoyment of the right.

540. Scope of Article:—This Article contemplates a case where the plaintiff's right to property has not already been extinguished by adverse possession of the defendants—Jogesh v. Chandi, 75 C.L.J. 400.

According to the Madras High Court, a suit to recover money due by reason of a periodically recurring right falls under this Article, as there is no other Article specifically providing for such a suit. The use of the word 'establish' and the fact that there is only one Article in the case of a suit with reference to a periodically recurring right, and not two, as in the case of suits based on rights to maintenance (see Arts 128 and 129) indicate that the Legislature intended that this Article would govern suits to obtain an adjudication as to the existence of a periodically recurring right as well as suits to recover money due under that right. If the Legislature had intended to confine the Article to the former kinds of suits only, it would have used the words "for a declaration of" (cf. Article 129) and not the word 'establish' —Zamorin of Calicut v. Achutha, 38 Mad. 916 (921) (F.B.). See also Thangaraja v. Veeraraghava, A.I.R. 1958 Mad. 319. In another Madras case, Ratnamasari v. Akilandammal, 26 Mad. 291 (313, 314) although the scope of Article 131 was not in issue, still Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., in the course of his judgment remarked that Article 131 was not confined to a declaratory suit but would also include a suit for arrears due in respect of a periodically recurring right. In this case also it was pointed out that the expression used in this Article was not "for a declaration" but "to establish" which term would include a suit for a declaration as well as a suit to recover arrears of amount due. So also, in another case, where the suit was not for a declaration of a recurring right but for recovery of the actual amount payable thereunder, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover twelve years' arrears up to the date of suit, under Article 131—Alubi v. Kunhi Bi, 10 Mad. 115 (117). The above Full Bench decision overrules the case of Balkrishna v. Secretary of State, 16 Mad. 294 (295), in which it was laid down that this Article applied only to cases in which a decree for some consequential relief was sought for by virtue of the periodically recurring right, and that if only a declaration of the right was prayed for, the suit fell not under this Article but under Art. 120. In Ramnad Zamindar v. Dorasami, 7 Mad. 341 (343), where the suit was only for a declaratory decree, and not for any consequential relief, it was held that Article 131 applied.

,But it has been held by the Allahabad High Court and the Punjab Chief Court that the words "to establish" do not extend and cannot be extended to cases in which the plaintiff seeks to recover specific sums of money due to him in respect of a periodically recurring right—Luchmi v. Tarabulnissa, 34 All. 246 (248); Dost Muhammad v. Sohan, 83 P.R. 1906. The Patna High Court also agrees with the view of the Allahabad High Court, viz., that 'to establish' means 'to obtain a declaration of' and lay down that there is a vast distinction between a suit brought to establish a periodically recurring right and a suit brought to enforce payments due as remuneration for the performance of services arising out of that right. From a perusal of Articles 128 and 129, one of which applies to a suit for arrears of maintenance and the other by a Hindu for a declaration of his right to maintenance, it is clear that the framers of this Act had in their minds the distinction between a suit for a declaration of a right and a suit claiming arrears of remuneration arising out of that right, and had it been the intention to include both classes of suits under Article 131, the legislature would have used words appropriate to that effect. Article 131 has been intentionally drafted so as to include merely a suit to establish (i.e., to obtain a declaration of) a right—Sri Sri Baidyanath Jiu v. Har Datt, 5 Pat. 249, 7 P.L.T. 465, 94 I.C. 826, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 205. There is a distinction between a suit to establish a periodically recurring right and a suit for realisation of sums of money due on the basis of that right, and the latter claim is not governed by Art. 131—Babu Rabji Das v. Rai Mahamaya Prasad Singh Bahadur, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 158; (Baidyanath v. Hardutt, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. followed). See also Manmohan v. Bahauddin, A.I.R. 1957 All. 575.

This Article does not refer to a periodically recurring liability, but is concerned with a periodically recurring right only—Khanderao v. Ravji, 1 Bom.L.R. 373.

Where the essence of the claim in a suit is the establishment of the title of the plaintiff, as against a rival claimant, to the office to which a remuneration periodically payable by Government is attached, and not the establishment of the liability of the Government to make recurring payment in question, this Article does not apply even though the Government is a party to the suit—Hussain v. Secy. of State, (1939) 1 M L.J. 476, 1939 M.W.N. 298, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 570.

Where a right to receive an annuity under a will is repudiated, this Article will apply to recover such annuity, even if the annuity is in the nature of a legacy—Ramranbijoy v. M. Singh, 25 Pat. 311.

Where the suit is purely for recovery of arrears of rent, Art. 110 would be applicable and a claim for more than three years would be barred by time. On the other hand, if the suit is brought merely for a declaration that the plaintiff possesses a periodically recurring right to get rent from the defendant, then the suit would certainly be governed by Art. 131 and would be barred by time if there had been a refusal of the enjoyment of the right more than 12 years before the suit. In the latter case the plaintiff cannot be allowed to evade the provisions of Art. 131 by merely not asking for an express relief for a declaration of right. A plaintiff is not entitled to recover arrears of rent without in the first place establishing his right to recover it, if such right is denied. Therefore, where such a right is denied, a claim for recovery of rent necessarily involves as a condition precedent the establishment of the plaintiff's right to recover rent, irrespective of the question whether an express relief for such a declaration is asked for or not. If a suit brought for the establishment of the plaintiff's right would be barred by time, then by merely not asking for such a relief the plaintiff cannot evade the law of limitation and recover the amount due. If in one and the same suit both the reliefs for the establishment of a periodically recurring right as well as for the recovery of the arrears as a consequence of such a right is claimed then Art. 131 would apply to the first relief and the appropriate Article like 100 or 62 or failing any such Article, Art. 120 may apply to the second relief—Hakim Hedayat Ullah and others v. B. Gokul Chand, A.I.R. 1937 All. 57, 1936 A.L.J. 1384—per Sulaiman, C.J. This Article only applies when the suit is to enforce a right to receive an annual allowance. Where the right is not denied, and what is disputed is only the amount payable under the right, this Article does not apply. In such a suit either Art. 62 or Art. 120 applies—Bhalchandra v. Dattatraya, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 401, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 297, 1948 N.L.J. 551.

It has been held by the Federal Court in Province of Punjab v. Tara Chand, 1947 F.L.J. 56, 49 Bom.L.R. 697, A.I.R. 1947 F.C. 23, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 389 (F.C.) that claim to recover arrears of pay by a Government servant is not one to establish a periodically recurring right and this Article does not apply to such a suit.

541. Periodically recurring right—Instances:—

(1) A right to receive burial fees whenever a corpse is brought to the burial ground for burial—Bahar v. Pero, 24 W.R. 385;

(2) a right to palla or turn of worship of an idol for a certain period during the year—Gopeekishen v. Thacoordas, 8 Cal. 807; Eshan v. Monmohini, 4 Cal. 683;

(3) a right to receive a monthly allowance from a Zemindary—Ramnad Zemindar v. Doraisami, 7 Mad. 341;

(4) a right to a share in an annual allowance from the Government—Raoji v. Bala, 15 Bom. 135.

(5) a right to receive a yearly payment out of the income of certain immoveable property, which right has been settled by arbitration in the course of a suit—Gajpat v Chiman, 16 All. 189 (190) following Chagan Lal v. Bapubhai, 5 Bom. 68;

(6) a right to recover rent—Mohammad Husaini v. Mohammad Bibi, 13 A.L.J. 333; Jagannatha v. Muthia, 14 M.L.J. 477; Alubi v. Kunhi, 10 Mad. 115;

(7) a right to recover additional rent for increased area—Jatindra v. Chandra, 6 C.W.N. 360;

(8) a right to a share in a pension—Sahibunnissa v. Hafiza, 9 All. 213;

(9) a right to a tasdik allowance due to the plaintiff's temple from the defendants' temple from year to year—Sakharam v. Laxmipriya, 34 Bom. 349;

(10) a right to a share in an allowance attached to a deshpande vatan—Keshab v. Narayan, 14 Bom. 236;

(11) a right to receive certain sums in perpetuity as dasturat—Hem Chandra v. Atul Chandra, 19 C.W.N. 386, 21 I.C. 179; 19 C.L.J. 118;

(12) a right to payment of dhara or assessment of customary rent—Ganesh v. Sitabai, 41 Bom. 159;

(13) a right to certain shares in the offerings of a temple—Jagdeo v. Mathura Prasad, 22 O.C. 346;

(14) a right to enhanced rent—Briji Behari v. Sheo Shankar, 2 P.L.J. 124, 39 I.C. 85;

(17) a right to receive Yeomiah allowance as holder of the office of mutawalli or Katheeb of a mosque—Batcha v. Secy. of State, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 587, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 374, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 428. Contra Gulam Ghouse v. Janni, 39 M.L.J. 492, 58 I.C. 788.

A right to receive malikana annually is a periodically recurring right, and a suit to establish the periodically recurring right, pure and simple, falls under this Article; if it is treated as a suit for possession of an interest in immoveable property, the proper Article applicable would be Article 144. But where in the suit to establish a right to receive malikana annually, there is involved a further claim, because that right carries with it a right to the property itself, it cannot be said that it is purely a suit to establish a periodically recurring right. It may fall under Article 120—Gopi Nath v. Bhugwat, 10 Cal. 697 (708). The claim to get an annual allowance from and out of the revenue collections is a periodically recurring right, and a suit to recover such an allowance is governed by Art. 131—Senthattikalai v. Rama Iyer, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 704.

A perpetual right is not the same thing as a periodically recurring right, the reason being that the quantum of right is defined once for all and does not vary according to circumstances each time it accrues. Thus where the right is to recover a fixed sum which is not dependent upon the income of the property and the payment of which is an obligation cast upon the person, who is the holder of the property for the time being to pay that particular sum every year, it cannot be said to be a periodically recurring right—Kaliammal v. Shanmmga, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 250, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 20. A claim that the plaintiff is the mutwali of a mosque and as such is entitled to all yeomiah allowances received by a rival claimant, amounts to a perpetual right to receive the allowances, and the fact that the sums of money are paid periodically does not make the right a periodically recurring right. Where the right is always vested in some persons to receive periodically payments, and being vested in one person at one time passes away at another time to some body else, such a right is a periodically recurring right in the true sense of the term—Gulam Ghouse v. Janni, 39 M.L.J. 492, 58 I.C. 788. A suit by the holder of the office of mutwalli or katheeb of a mosque against the Secretary of State for India for a declaration that he was entitled to the yeomiah allowance as the lawful holder of the office is a suit to establish a periodically recurring right attached to the office of mutwalli. The fact that the allowance does not vary from year to year but is fixed does not make any difference as to the limitation applicable—Batcha v. Secy of State, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 587, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 374, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 428. A right to worship an idol for a sixth part of every year is a periodically recurring right governed by this Article but an exclusive right to worship an idol is not a periodically recurring right but falls under Article 120—Eshan v. Monmohini, 4 Cal. 683 (685).

A suit for a declaration that the Zemindar is not entitled to recover from the tenant (plaintiff) any amount in excess of a stated sum by way of quit rent, is not a suit to establish a periodically recurring right—Sriman Madhabusi v. Gopisetti, 33 Mad. 171 (172).

The right of a mortgagor in the case of a usufructuary mortgage to get back possession under sec. 26G (8), Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, is not one which comes within the words "periodically recurring right" in this Article. There is nothing periodic about it, nor is it of that kind of recurring right as in the case of nuisance etc.—Abinash v. Gour, 55 C.W.N. 489, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 76.

542. Arts. 62 and 131:—In a suit to recover the arrears, the important question is—who is the person sued? There is a distinction between the person originally liable to pay and a co-sharer of the plaintiff who has actually received payment from that person. If the defendant is the person originally liable to pay, Article 131 applies; if, however, the money is sought to be recovered from a co-sharer who has received the payment, then it is a suit for money received by the defendant for the plaintiff's use, and Art. 62 applies—Sakharam v. Laxmipriya, 34 Bom. 349, 5 I.C. 869, 12 Bom.L.R. 157; Janardan v. Dinkar, 55 Bom. 193, 131 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 189 (191); Harmukhgauri v. Harisukhprasad, 7 Bom. 191 (193); Desai Maneklal v Shivlal, 8 Bom. 426 (432); Dulabh v. Bansidhar, 9 Bom. 111; Raoji v. Bala, 15 Bom. 135; Chamanlal v. Bapubhai, 22 Bom. 669. This principle was overlooked in Chaganlal v Bapubhai 5 Bom. 68.

If the suit claims both reliefs, the claim for establishment of the periodically recurring right is governed by Article 131, and the claim for arrears due falls under Art. 62—Janardan v. Dinkar, 55 Bom. 1930, 131 I.C. 465, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 189 (190).

543. Demand and refusal:—There must be definite demand and refusal. When there is no evidence of demand of rent from the tenant or refusal by latter, plaintiff's suit for rent is not barred under this Article—Manohar v. Charu, 54 C.W.N. 706, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 385. See, however, Haripada v. Ramkrishna, 60 C.W.N. 257.

The mere omission on the part of the person having the right to exercise it will not start a period of adverse possession under this Article—Ganesh v. Sitabhai, 41 Bom. 159 (162), 38 I.C. 54, 18 Bom.L.R. 950. The mere fact of the plaintiff's exclusion from enjoyment of his right for 12 years before suit would not bar his claim, unless it were shown that such exclusion was the result of refusal made upon a demand—Raoji v. Bala, 15 Bom. 135; Devendra v. Jhumur, 43 C.L.J. 387, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 883 (885), 95 I.C. 622; Hem Chandra v. Atul, 19 C.W.N. 386, 21 I.C. 179, 19 C.L.J. 118. A mere refraining of the plaintiffs from demanding the right does not give a start to the period of limitation; it will run from the time when they were first refused the enjoyment of the right—Kamman v. Budh Singh, 146 P.R. 1882; Zinat v. Martana Khan, 108 P.R. 1901. Mere non-collection of the Kattubadi for a period of 12 years does not amount to a denial of the landlord's right to collect the same—Jalasutram v. Bommadevara, 29 Mad. 42 (43). Where the right to the revenue of a certain land had been granted to the trustees of a temple, the fact that no revenue was thereafter paid to the trustees by the owners of the land would not bar the suit of the trustees to recover arrears of revenue, when it was found that the owners of the land did not deny that they were liable to payment of revenue to the persons entitled to claim it. The trustees could recover 12 years' arrears under the Article—Alubi v. Kunhi, 10 Mad. 115 (117). Mere nonpayment of rent or assessment does not amount to a denial of the landlord's right to recover assessment. There must be some overt act, such as refusal to pay the rent or assessment, before time begins to run—Bhimabai v. Swami Rao, 45 Bom. 638 (646); Akbar v. Ramesh Chandra, 38 C.L.J. 207, 72 I.C. 329, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 392. The entry in the record of rights that the tenant has acquired the rent free title by adverse possession for more than twenty years means there was demand and refusal more than twenty years before the record of rights—Monmotha v. Sreedhar, 54 C.W.N. 973, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 330. The open assertion by the tenant to hold the land rent free in the presence of the landlord in a rent suit amounts to a refusal to the plaintiff of the enjoyment of the right—Jagannath v. Bipan, 21 Pat.L.T. 838, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 116, 190 I.C. 840. So also where during the revisional survey operations the defendant denied the plaintiff's right to recover rent for the land and the settlement officer passed the order upholding the defendant's objection, the plaintiff was "first refused the enjoyment of the right" to realise rent—Abdul v. Harikrishun, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 201, 191 I.C. 878.

The refusal must be distinct and made against the plaintiff himself. Where in answer to a demand made by a member of the class to which the plaintiff belonged, a member of the class to which the defendant belonged made a general denial of the right of the plaintiff's class, such denial did not amount to a refusal of the right of the plaintiff—Ramnad Zemindar v. Dorasami, 7 Mad. 341 (343).

A mere omission, on the part of a person having a right to assess the land, to exercise that right, will not start a period of adverse possession. So that, if an inamdar continues to receive per annum certain fixed rent from his tenants for 60 years, and has made no demand for the actual assessment in excess of the amount which the tenants had all along paid, that fact would not debar him from claiming assessment if he chose to do so; but once he claims assessment and the right to claim assessment is denied by the tenant, limitation begins to run against the inambar—Shri Bala v. Sakharam, 28 Bom. L.R. 633, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 345, 95 I.C. 851.

A person who has taken no action for more than 12 years since the denial or repudiation of the right to receive annuity under a will can not claim to enforce his right after the lapse of the period mentioned under this Article—Ramranbijay v. M. Singh, 25 Pat. 311.

Where the plaintiff asserts that there has been no demand and refusal within 12 years before suit, the onus is on the defendant to prove that the plantiff has made a demand and that the defendant has refused—Hemchandra v. Atul, 19 C.W.N. 386, 21 I.C. 179, 19 C.L.J. 118. Where the plaintiff is one of a family upon the members of which in turn devolves the performance of the duties of an office, it must be shown that the plaintiff's turn to perform the duties and receive the emoluments of the office occurred with 12 years before the suit was brought, and that he was then refused the enjoyment of his right—Sinde v. Sinde, 4 B.H.C.R., A.C. 51.

The above rule, viz., that the period of limitation would run only where there has been a definite demand and refusal, should be limited to cases where the circumstances are such that the mere non-compliance with the right does not amount to a refusal. Thus, in 1874, the defendant purchased at a Court sale the title and interest of the then inamdar, and since then had been in possession of the property; and no attempt was made by the inamdar or his successors to levy assessment or to recover possession until 1916, when the plaintiff as inamdar sued to recover assessment from the defendant. Held that the suit was barred. In such a case it was not necessary that there should be a definite demand before the period of limitation would begin to run, because the circumstances were such that the non-payment of any rent or assessment by the defendant to the plaintiff necessarily constituted a refusal within the meaning of the Article. If the relationship of landlord and tenant had ever existed between the parties, a demand would have been necessary before the period of limitation could run. But no such relationship ever existed in this case. Therefore, the plaintiff was first refused the enjoyment of his right in 1874, and the suit was barred. It should be noted that under the 3rd column, limitation runs from the time when the enjoyment of the right is first 'refused,' and not when the enjoyment of the right is first 'demanded and refused,' as in Articles 88, 89 and 103. The word 'demanded' has been deliberately omitted, so that where the defendant's act of non-payment of assessment amounts to a refusal irrespective of demand, limitation runs from the non-payment—Bhimabai v. Swamirao, 45 Bom. 638 (647, 648), 23 Bom.L.R. 100, A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 175, 60 I.C. 892. It is not necessary under this Article that there should be a demand and refusal before limitation begins to run—Jagannath v. Bipan, 21 Pat. L.T.838, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 116, 190 I.C. 840.

The right to levy assessment as a recurring right would accrue when there has been a demand and a refusal, only in those cases where the relationship of landlord and tenant or landlord and occupant had ever existed. Once that right is established, then the non-payment of rent or assessment would not be sufficient to enable the tenant to begin to set up a title by adverse possession. There must be some overt act, such as refusal to pay the rent or assessment, before time begins to run—Akbar v. Ramesh Chandra, 38 C.L.J. 207, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 392, 72 I.C. 329.

544. Effect of bar of limitation:—A suit to establish a periodically recurring right must be brought within 12 years from the time when the plaintiff is first refused the enjoyment of right; and if it is not brought within that time, not only is the right itself barred, but any cause of action, the plaintiff may have, to recover arrears which rests on such right is also barred. If a plaintiff recovers in a suit arrears of periodical payments but apparently without a declaration that he has a right to such payments for the future, and then makes no claim for more than 12 years, any subsequent suit for the arrears of such periodical payments would be barred—Shivram v. Secretary of State, 11 Bom. 222 (233).

132. To enforce payment of money charged upon immoveable property.	Twelve years.	When the money sued for becomes due.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this Article—

(a) the allowance and fees respectively called malikana and haqqs, and

(b) the value of any agricultural or other produce the right to receive which is secured by a charge upon immoveable property, and

(c) advances secured by mortgage by deposit of title-deeds shall be deemed to be money charged upon immoveable property.

Change:—Clause (b) of the Explanation was substituted by sec. 4 of the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act 1927 (Act I of 1927). The effect of this amendment has been noticed in Note 545 below.

Clause (c) has been added by sec. 9 of the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929). See Note 558 below.

545. Money—agricultural produce:—Where loan was taken of paddy and promised to be returned in money (as the price of paddy) and the mortgage-bond provided that on the expiry of the period mentioned in the bond the creditor would be entitled to recover the price of paddy with interest by sale of a property given as security for the repayment of the loan, held that money was charged upon immoveable property, in as much as the mortgagee was entitled to recover money and not specific paddy; and to such a case Art. 132 applies—Indra Narain v. Dwijabar, 47 Cal. 125, 23 C.W.N. 949; Jogendra v. Mohan Lal, 23 C.W.N. 951; Mohesh v. Umesh, 51 I.C. 241 (Cal.); Sridhar v. Ram Gobinda, 29 C.L.J. 368; Dinabandhu v. Bishnu, 32 C.L.J. 221; Sripati v. Sarat, 22 C.W.N. 790; Ramchand v. Iswarchandra, 48 Cal. 625, 632 (F.B.), 25 C.W.N. 57, 32 C.L.J. 278. In Joy Narain v. Mangobinda, 64 I.C. 210 (Cal.) and Shamlal v. Dhanwa, 18 N.L.R. 111, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 23, it has been held that even where loan is taken of paddy and promised to be returned in paddy (with an additional quantity of paddy as interest), the suit to enforce the security falls under this Article, because the mortgagee is entitled to claim the value of the grain in case of its non-payment, and the mortgagor is entitled to pay the value of the grain, instead of the grain itself; the mortgagee is not entitled to claim, nor is the mortgagor bound to deliver, grain; consequently it is the money value of the grain debt that is really charged upon immoveable property.

But in another case, where loan was taken of paddy and was promised to be returned with interest in paddy, a suit to realise the value of the paddy due by sale of the immoveable properties given as security for the repayment of the loan, was held not to be governed by Art. 132 (but by either Art. 116 or Art. 120) as the suit could not be treated as a suit to enforce payment of money charged upon immoveable property—Rashbehari v. Kunjabehari, 24 C.L.J. 348. The case is no longer good law; vide clause (b) of Explanation.

This clause has been added on the recommendation of the Civil Justice Committee: "Article 132 has not been applied by some Judges to cases in which not money specifically, but something which can be valued in money, such as grain, is charged on the immoveable property. Not infrequently in Hindu families, maintenance is allotted to female members in the shape of grain from a particular parcel of land, and the maintenance is charged on that land. Money-lending cases are not uncommon in which money is repayable in grain and the obligation is charged upon property described in the instrument. There has been difference of opinion whether Article 132 applies to these cases, and after some conflict of opinion it has now been held in Calcutta, that a suit to recover the value of paddy charged upon immoveable property comes within Article 132 (see 25 C.W.N. 57, F.B.). The matter is one which should be made clear by the amendment of the statute itself"—Civil Justice Committee Report, p. 495.

A case for the recovery by the plaintiff of a legacy from persons who are in possession of the estate and who are legally bound to pay the same is governed by Art. 132—Sri Nathji v. Mt. Panna Kunwar, A.I.R. 1935 All. 239.

546. Immoveable property:—A tree, for the purpose of limitation, comes within the meaning of immoveable property as used in Art. 132, though for the purpose of registration it does not—Kangal v. Naoli, 9 I.C. 478; Ram Gulam v. Monohar Das, 1887 A.W.N. 59.

A decree is moveable property, and a suit to enforce the hypothecation of a decree is governed by Art. 120. But where the decree is converted into immoveable property, that is, where the mortgage-decree-holder purchases certain immoveable property of his judgment-debtor in satisfaction of the decree, the mortgagee is entitled to the substituted security and also to the larger period of limitation provided by this Article—Jamna Dei v. Lala Ram, 39 All. 74 (78).

Money charged upon rents and profits of an estate is money charged upon 'immoveable property'; the rents and profits, which in English law are classed as incorporeal hereditaments, are by the law in India included in immoveable property—Muhammad Zaki v. Chatku, 7 All. 120.

A nankur allowance payable out of the profits of a particular village is treated as money charged upon the village, and is therefore money charged upon immoveable property within the meaning of this Article—Ram Jiwan v. Jadu Nath, 18 O.C. 380, 33 I.C. 555; Deputy Commissioner v. Jagjiwan, 19 O.C. 49, 33 I.C. 461.

A hypothecation of jaghir income is a charge upon immoveable property, because the jaghir income is a benefit to arise out of land within the terms of the definition of immoveable property as given in the General Clauses Act—Ram Pershad v. Kishen, 4 P.R. 1894.

A pala or turn of worship is moveable and not immoveable property; consequently a suit to enforce a mortgage of a pala is not governed by this Article but by Article 120—Narasingha v. Prolhadman, 46 Cal. 455 (457).

547. To enforce a charge:—This Article applies to suits to recover money charged on immoveable property, by sale of that property; it is inapplicable to a suit to recover money personally from the defendant, even though the money be charged on the property—Ram Din v. Kalka, 7 All. 502, 506 (P.C.); Miller v. Runga Nath, 12 Cal. 389; Chunilal v. Bai Jethi, 22 Bom. 846; Lachmi Narain v. Turabunnissa, 34 All. 246 (248); Rathnasami v. Subramania, 11 Mad. 56; Khub Lal v. Pudmanund, 15 Cal. 542; Sitab Chand v. Hyder, 24 Cal. 281 (282); Seshayya v. Amanna, 10 Mad. 100; Maharaja of Vzianagram v. Sitaram, 19 Mad. 101 (103); Devi Das v. Ishar Das, 55 P.R. 1884; Chattar Mal v. Thakuri, 20 All. 512 (516)). [In view of the Privy Council decision in 7 All. 502, the ruling in Lallubhai v. Naran, 6 Bom. 719 (F.B.) is no longer good law. In this Bombay case it was held that a suit by the mortgagee to recover, by a personal decree against the mortgagor, the money secured by the mortgage, was a suit to enforce payment of money charged upon immoveable property, and the period of limitation was 12 years.] Art. 132 applies to a case where the plaintiff seeks to enforce payment of money by enforcing his charge upon an immoveable property. The Article has no application to a case where the plaintiff asks for a money decree only—Sri Nathji v. Mt. Panna, A.I.R. 1935 All. 239.

In this respect the law in India differs from the English law; for according to the law in England (under sec. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act) the limitation of 12 years applies equally to actions for the recovery of money charged on the land by a personal remedy against the mortgagor, as well as to suits to recover the money by the remedy against the land—Sutton v. Sutton, (1882) 22 Ch. D. 511.

548. Simple mortgage:—A suit on a simple mortgage-bond to enforce payment of the money due on the bond by sale of the mortgaged property is governed by this Article and not by Article 147—Vasudev v. Srinivasa, 30 Mad. 426 (P.C.); Girwar Singh v. Thakur Narain, 14 Cal. 730 (F.B.); Nilcomal v. Kamani, 20 Cal. 269; Sitab Chand v. Hyder, 24 Cal 281; Balaram v. Mangta, 34 Cal. 941 (945); Ramchandra v. Madhupadhi, 21 Mad. 326 (F.B.); Rangaswami v. Muthukumarappa, 10 Mad. 509 (F.B.); Ramsaran v. Mehtab, 112 P.R. 1890 (F.B.). [The following decisions have been overruled by the Privy Council case;—Shiblal v. Ganga Prosad, 6 All. 551; Motiram v. Vithal, 13 Bom. 90; Onkar Ramshet v. Govardhan, 14 Bom. 557; Venkatesh v. Narayana, 15 Bom. 183; Datto Dudheswar v. Vithu, 20 Bom. 408; Khurshed Ali v. Ram Dayal, 3 O.C. 156; Ghasiram v. Dunichand, 2 C.P.L.R. 57.] It is well established by authorities that suits brought by simple mortgagees against mortgagors or persons claiming under mortgagors, to enforce the mortgage by sale are suits governed by Art. 132—Sambasiva Ayyar v. Subramania Oillai, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 70, 59 Mad. 312.

English mortgage:—An English mortgage was held to be governed by Art. 147; that Article applied to that one class of mortgage in which a suit could be, and always was, brought for foreclosure or sale; and an English mortgage was the only class of mortgage in which such suit could be brought—Vasudeva v. Srinivasa, 30 Mad. 426 (P.C.). The fact that under a mortgage which fulfils all the requirements of an English mortgage under sec. 58 of the Transfer of Property Act, in a certain event the date of payment is changed and the mortgagor has agreed to pay the cost of insurance and other charges would not detract from the absolute transfer to the mortgagee, and would not make it the less an English mortgage falling within the definition in sec. 58 T. P. Act Art. 147 and not this Article governs a suit on such a mortgage—Rajagopala v. Ramachandra, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 851, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 406, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 628. But under clause (a) of sec. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act, as recently amended in 1929, the remedy of foreclosure has been taken away from an English mortgage. Consequently a suit for sale only is now allowed under an English mortgage, and such suit falls under Art. 132. The above decision of the Privy Council is no longer good law. But English mortgages executed prior to 1st April, 1930 are outside the scope of amendment made by substitution of new clause (a) of sec. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act—Saradindu v. Jaharlal, I.L.R. (1942) 1 Cal. 326, 74 C.L.J. 61, 46 C.W.N. 33, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 153.

Anamalous Mortgage:—Where a usufructuary mortgage contains also a covenant by the mortgagor to repay the mortgage money or the balance remaining due at a certain date, and also contains an agreement, express or implied, that in default the mortgagee will be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale, it is open to the mortgagee to select his remedy. A covenant by the mortgagor to repay the mortgage-money, in a deed of mortgage otherwise usufructuary, gives the mortgagee the right to sue for sale of the mortgaged property on failure of the mortgagor to make payment on the agreed date. The cause of action for a suit for sale arises on the date fixed for payment and not on the date of dispossession of the mortgagee, when such dispossession is before the date fixed for payment—Hundaldas v. Balukhan, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 452, A.I.R. 1943 Sind 59, 204 I.C. 574.

549. Mortgage by conditional sale:—A suit to recover money due under a mortgage by conditional sale or for foreclosure is governed by Article 132 and not by Article 147—Sheoram Singh v. Babu Singh, 48 All. 302, 24 A.L.J. 295, A.I.R. 1926 All. 493; Balaram v. Mangta, 34 Cal. 941 (945) (S.B.); Rupomal v. Mt. Janat, I.L.R. (1941) Kar. 124, A.I.R. 1941 Sind 158, 196 I.C. 565.

550. Charge:—The word "charge" is used in a very general sense in Article 132. The mere fact that a charge does not come within the meaning of sec. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act, does not necessarily imply that it is not a charge under Art. 132—Kotayya v. Kotappa, 49 M.L.J. 117, 90 I.C. 551, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 341.

The debt must be effectively charged on the immoveable property, i.e., the charge must be one that is binding upon it. If the mortgage is not bindng on the property, the period of six years (Art. 116) and not that of 12 years, would apply - Kameshwar v. Raj Kumari, 20 Cal. 79 (84) (P.C.).

A will devising immoveable properties and directing the devisee to pay a certain debt of the testator from these properties creates a charge upon the properties in respect of the debt, and a suit brought by the auction purchaser of the creditor's claim to recover the abovementioned debt falls within Article 132, and is not a suit for money lent under Article 57—Girish Chunder v. Annundamoyi, 15 Cal. 66 (69) (P.C.). Where a testator charged all his real estate with payment of his debts, a claim against the testator's estate on a simple contract debt would be governed by the 12 years' rule—Warburton v. Stephens, (1889) 43 Ch. D. 39.

Where by a bond the debtor hypothecated all his properties ("my wealth and property") without specification, held that the bond created a charge upon the immoveable property of the debtor although no particular property was specified in the bond, and a suit to enforce payment of the amount due out of an immoveable property belonging to the debtor was governed by this Article—Ramsidh v. Balgobind, 9 All. 158 (164). But in another Allahabad case, where the debtor stipulated that if the principal and interest were not paid up at the stipulated period, the creditor would be at liberty to recover the money, by institution of a suit, from "my moveable and immoveable properties, my own milk" it was held that the language of the bond was too vague to warrant the inference that the bond contemplated the creation of a mortgage of a definite estate, and that a suit upon the bond was governed by Art. 66, or 116, and not by this Article—Collector of Etawah v. Beti Maharani, 14 All. 162 (164). A mortgage of "the entire mukarrari rent of Rs. 100 per year payable..... under a Kabuliyat of June 1913 in respect of 11.34 acres of lakhiraj jagir, naqdi kasht land and manhunda rice" is a mortgage of the landlord's right together with the landlord's charge, and therefore a mortgage of interest in immoveable property and a suit to enforce such a mortgage falls within this Article—Ramzan v. Lal Singh, 18 Pat.L.T. 801. 1937 P.W.N. 826, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 16.

Ordinarily, a Hindu widow's maintenance is not a charge upon immoveable property, and a suit to recover arrears of maintenance is not governed by this Article—Baruhi Saraswati v. Bahuria Sheoratan, 12 Pat. 869. But where maintenance is expressly charged upon immoveable property, a suit to recover arrears of maintenance is governed by Art. 132—Ahmed Hossein v. Nihaluddin, 9 Cal. 945 (951) (P.C.).

Where immoveable properties were hypothecated to the principal by the agent as security for the proper discharge of his duty, a suit for accounts by the principal would be governed by Art. 132 in as much as it is by implication a suit to enforce a charge—Madhusudhan v. Rakhal, 43 Cal. 248 (following Hafezuddin v. Jadu, 35 Cal. 298, and dissenting from Jogesh v. Benode, 14 C.W.N. 122); Troilokhya v. Abinash, 21 C.L.J. 459, 24 I.C. 18. So also a suit by a principal to enforce a charge on immoveable property created by an agent to secure monies which might be found to have been defalcated by him, is governed by this Article—Mohini v. Bir Bikram, 44 C.W.N. 793, 72 C.L.J. 480, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 257. See Note 411 under Art. 89.

Where a guardian gave certain immoveable property as security for the due fulfilment of his duties to his ward, a suit by the latter to recover monies which might be found due on account being taken from the guardian, out of the property charged, falls under this Article—Fazul Nishan v. Muhammadji, 33 P.R. 1897.

Where a mortgage document expressly made the mortgaged properties liable not only for repayment of principal, but also for interest, the interest was held to be charged upon the property—Vasudevan v. Konurupettamanna, 2 L.W. 853, 30 I.C. 818; Davani v. Ratna, 6 Mad. 417. As for interest after due date of mortgage, see Note 483 under Art. 116.

Where several properties are liable for the payment of an annuity, which has been discharged by the owner of one of such properties, a suit for contribution by such owner against the owners of the other properties is a suit to enforce a charge on the properties and is governed by this Article and not by Art. 99—Yakub v. Kishen, 28 All. 743 (746).

A mortgage bond executed by the father in a Mitakshara family for the benefit or necessity of the family, and not being shown to have been effected for any immoral purpose, is valid and binding on the sons, and a suit to enforce that mortgage against the sons is governed by this Article—Prankrishna v. Jadu, 2 C.W.N. 603; Maheshwar v. Kisen, 34 Cal. 184 (190); Sheo Narain v. Mokshoda, 17 C.W.N. 1022, 19 I.C. 878; Ram Singh v. Sobha, 29 All. 544 (551); Jaleswar v. Anrut, 35 All. 302; Aribudra v. Dorasami, 11 Mad. 413 (415). But where the mortgage is executed by the father to discharge a debt which is neither antecedent nor one for family purposes, the mortgage is not binding on the sons and does not create a charge upon the entire family property but upon his individual share only; and a suit brought after the death of the father, so far as it claims to affect the shares of the sons, is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art. 132 as there is no charge on immoveable property enforceable against the sons—Brijnandan v. Bidya Prosad, 42 Cal. 1068 (1092) (F.B.), 19 C.W.N. 849.

A claim for the balance of money due to a builder who undertook the erection of a building on the express stipulation that he would have a lien on the building for all sums due to him until paid, is a claim for money charged upon immoveable property under this Article—Daulat Ram v. Woollen Mills, 95 P.R. 1908, 165 P.W.R. 1908.

If a pro-note is first passed for a certain debt, and subsequently immoveable property is hypothecated for the same debt, a suit to recover the loan due under the pro-note by enforcing the charge created by the hypothecation bond is governed by Article 132, and may be brought within 12 years from the date when the money became due, although the creditor's remedy for enforcing the personal obligation (under the pro-note) in respect of the loan may be barred—Behari Lal v. Beni Madho, 27 O.C. 268, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 92, 79 I.C. 942.

L purchased an oil-well subject to a mortgage in favour of B and to a right of pre-emption in favour of N. He made payments to the mortgagee B in part satisfaction of the mortgage-decree on the oil-well, such payments being necessary to save the oil-well. Held that L had a charge on the oil-well for the amount paid as against N who exercised his right of pre-emption, as well as against persons claiming through

N, and a suit to recover the amounts by enforcing the charge fell under Article 132—Ma Lon v. Ma Nya, 1 Rang. 714, 79 I.C. 766, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 204.

A trustee of a mosque making advances out of his own pocket to meet the expenses of the mosque no doubt acquires a charge upon the trust property, but this charge is not like an ordinary charge which entitles a man to bring the charged property unconditionally to sale. It is a charge which enables him to take the amount out of the rents and profits of the trust property or through raising monies by the creation of a similar charge. Article 132 was not intended to recover such a qualified charge, and the suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the money is governed by Art. 120—Abkan Saheb v. Soran, 38 Mad. 260 (267, 269), following Peary v. Narendra, 37 Cal. 229 (P.C.).

Where a portion of the mortgaged property is acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and the mortgagor withdraws the compensation money, a suit filed by the mortgagee to enforce his security and claiming a simple money-decree in respect of the compensation money withdrawn is a suit to enforce payment of money charged upon immoveable property within the meaning of this Article. The cause of action is not the withdrawal of the compensation money, but the non-payment of mortgage money—Girdharlal v. Aley Hasan, I.L.R. (1938) All. 513, 1938 A.L.J. 313, A.I.R. 1938 All. 221 (F.B.).

An application under sec. 44 of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (2 of 1927) to enforce charge created in favour of a temple by a deed is governed by this Article—Sankaralingam v. Thenpalaniyandavar Temple, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 258, 1947 M.W.N. 519, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 199.

Charge on moveable property:—A suit to enforce a charge on moveable property is governed by Art. 120—Nim Chand v. Jagabandhu, 22 Cal. 21. See Note 508 under Article 120.

Contribution whether a charge:—Some cases have laid down that where Government revenue is paid by one of the co-sharers of the estate to save the entire estate from sale, such payment does not create a charge in his favour upon the estate; and a suit to recover such amount is merely a suit for contribution governed by Art. 99, and not a suit to enforce a charge within the meaning of this Article—Kinu Ram v. Muzaffar, 14 Cal. 809 (F.B.); Khub Lal v. Pudmamund, 15 Cal. 542; Shivrao v. Pundlick, 26 Bom. 437. But in several other cases it has been held that such payment creates a charge—Raja of Vizianagram v. Raja Setrucherla, 26 Mad. 686 (F.B.); Alayakammal v. Subbaraya, 28 Mad. 493 (494); Kotayya v. Kotappa, 49 M.L.J. 117, 90 I.C. 551, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 151; Achut v. Hari, 11 Bom. 313; Venkata v. Mulibai, A.I.R. 1955 Andhra 274. See Note 443 under Article 99. Where, however, a person not in possession of property, but believing that the title to the property rests in him pays the Government revenue, he cannot, on discovering that the title rests in another person, claim a charge on it for the payment so made—Saraswathi v. Rama, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 419, 1949 M.W.N. 577, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 39.

But if the revenue is paid not by a co-sharer but by the lessee in order to protect his interest in the estate, who thereafter brings a suit for the recovery of the amount, the suit does not fall under Article 99, which applies only to a co-sharer, but is governed by this Article—Ram Dutt v. Horakh, 6 Cal. 549.

When a person makes a payment on account of a decree for rent of a tenure or holding, under sec. 170 (3), Bengal Tenancy Act, he is, under sec. 171 (1) (c) entitled as a mortgagee to the possession of the tenure or holding in respect of which the payment has been made and to retain possession of the same until the debt due to him has been discharged, and has a right under sec. 171 (2) to sue for the enforcement of such charge. Such a suit is governed by Article 132 and not by Art. 61, 99 or 120—Rajeswar v. Rajani, 35 C.W.N. 678 (681), 134 I.C. 75, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 493.

Discharge of decree:—If one of several joint judgment-debtors pays off the decretal amount, a suit by him for contribution falls under Art. 99. If, however, the decretal amount is paid by a person other than a judgment-debtor, the proper Article applicable to a suit for recovery of the amount so paid is Article 61. But Article 132 cannot apply, as such payment does not create any charge on the property of the judgment-debtor; the fact that the decree might have been realised in execution by the sale of the immoveable properties of the judgment-debtor does not give the person making the payment a charge—Muthuswami v. Ponnayya, 51 Mad. 815, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 820 (822), 110 I.C. 613, 55 M.L.J. 436.

Suit against a surety:—A suit against a surety on a simple money-bond for the payment of a mortgage-debt by the mortgagor, is not a suit to enforce payment of money charged on immoveable property, and Article 132 cannot apply. The period of limitation is six years from the expiry of the mortgage period—Muthu Chettiar v. Rangappa, 53 M.L.J. 453, 105 I.C. 168, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 945.

Suit for recovery of property-tax:—A suit by a municipality for recovery of property-tax made a first charge on the property under sec. 85 of the Madras District Municipalities Act, 1920, must, under sec. 345 of the same Act, be brought within three years from the date of the cause of action. Art. 132 of the Limitation Act has no application—Municipal Council of Trichinopoly v. Ratnam Pillai, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 378, 1935 M.W.N. 379, 41 L.W. 457.

House tax:—A claim to house tax is a rate on lands or buildings or on both, and, therefore, under sec. 87 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, the sums due on account of the house tax is a first charge upon the building or land in respect of which it is leviable. So also the general sanitary tax, when it is made a tax imposed in the form of a rate on lands or buildings or both is a first charge on the lands or buildings. Hence a suit to recover arrears of house tax and sanitary cess which is made a rate on land or buildings, is governed by this Article—Shidrao v. Municipality of Athria, 44 Bom.L.R. 849, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 21, 204 I.C. 352. Though the Municipality is in the position of a first mortgagee, a sale in pursuance of the charge has not the effect of annulling prior encumbrances. So a mortgagee purchaser in execution of the decree on the earlier mortgage, not impleaded in the suit by the Municipality is not debarred from proceeding with a suit to enforce the right of redemption against the purchaser of the property in execution of the charge decree. Such a suit will be governed by Art. 148. This Article has no application to such a suit as it is not for payment of money—A. M. A. Firm v. Marudachalam, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 284, 1948 M.W.N. 238, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 412.

551. Vendor's lien:—Unpaid purchase money creates a charge in favour of the vendor on the property in the hands of the vendee, by virtue of the provision of sec. 55 (4) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, and a suit by the vendor to recover it by enforcement of such lien or charge falls under Art. 132; but where a personal remedy against the vendee is sought, Art. 111 applies—Virchand v. Kumaji, 18 Bom. 48; Chunilal v. Bai Jethi, 22 Bom. 846; Har Lal v. Muhamdi, 21 All. 454; Munirunnissa v. Akbar, 30 All. 172 (174); Rama Krishna v. Subramania, 29 Mad. 305 (F.B.); Rukan Din v. Hasan Din, 72 I.C. 897, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 23. See Notes under Art. 111. Time runs from the date of the sale-deed or within a very short but reasonable period therefrom—Kallu v. Ramdas, 26 A.L.J. 53, A.I.R. 1929 All. 121 (123), 107 I.C. 679. The statutory period of 12 years fixed by this Article for enforcement of the charge can be extended by the agreement of the parties such as payments towards the debt and a suit can be brought within 12 years of the last payment made and is not barred on the ground that more than 12 years have elapsed from the date of the sale—Syed Abdul v. Raj Muhammad, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 405, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 482, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 28.

551A. Co-vendee's charge:—Where a payment has been made by one of the several vendees of a mortgaged property to save the property from sale under the mortgage which affects the rights of all the vendees, an equitable charge would certainly arise against the whole property on behalf of which payment is made. The right to enforce the charge as against the co-vendees accrues on the date of payment—Brij Bhukan v. Bhagwan, 1938 O.W.N. 290 (approved in Full Bench case—Brij Bhukan v. Bhagwan, 19 Luck. 70, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 449, 1942 O.W.N. 672).

552. Co-mortgagor's charge:—See secs. 82, 92 and 95 of the Transfer of Property Act (as amended in 1929).

Where several properties belonging to several owners are mortgaged to secure the same debt, the owner of the property that has been made liable for more than its rateable proportion of the debt can claim contribution proportionately against the owners of other properties, and has a charge on the other properties under sec. 82 of the Transfer of Property Act; and a suit to enforce the charge falls under this Article and not under Article 99—Bhagwan v. Karam Husain, 33 All. 708 (716) (F.B.); Ibn Husain v. Ramdai, 12 All. 110 (114).

Where a mortgagor redeems the mortgaged property, he acquires a charge, under sec. 95 (now 92) of the Transfer of Property Act, on the share of each of the other co-mortgagors, for his proportion of the mortgage-money; and a suit to enforce the share is governed by this Article—Bhagwan Das v. Hardei, 26 All. 227; Kotayya v. Kotappa, 49 M.L.J. 117, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 141; Rajkumari v. Mukunda, 25 C.W.N. 283, 57 I.C. 868. Where there had been several payments in part satisfaction of a mortgage, the payment of the balance due is as much a redemption as the payment of the whole sum due in the case in which there has been no previous part payment. A co-mortgagor who pays the balance of the mortgage-money and redeems the mortgage acquires a charge on the property under sec. 95 (92) of the Transfer of Property Act, and his suit to enforce the charge falls under this Article—Hira Kuer v. Palku, 3 P.L.J. 490 (491), 46 I.C. 479.

It was held in a Calcutta case that the co-mortgagor could get a charge under section 95, T. P. Act only when he redeemed, and there could be redemption only so long as the mortgage subsisted. Where a decree on the mortgage was obtained by the mortgagee, and an order absolute for sale was passed under sec. 89 (old) of the T. P. Act, the security as well as the mortgagor's right to redeem were both extinguished, and any payment made thereafter by a co-mortgagor could not be taken as payment by way of redemption'; consequently no charge was created in favour of the person who made such payment. His suit to recover the money was governed by Article 61 or 99 and not by Article 132—Nawab Jahanara v. Mirza Shujauddin, 9 C.W.N. 865 (867). But the Bombay High Court holds that a charge is created in such a case—Danappa v. Yamnappa, 26 Bom. 379, and this is also view of the Allahabad High Court—Ibn Hussain v. Ramdai, 12 All. 110, where the mortgage was satisfied by a co-owner of the property after decree. It should be noted that the words "and thereby the defendant's right to redeem and the security shall both be extinguished" which occurred at the end of sec. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act have been omitted, after that section has been transferred to O. 34, r. 5 of the C. P. Code. Consequently the mortgagor (and therefore any co-mortgagor) can redeem the mortgage even after a final decree for sale has been passed; and recently, by the further amendment of

O. 34, r. 5 by the T. P. Amendment Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929, the mortgagor has been given power to redeem "at any time before the confirmation of sale." The ruling in 9 C.W.N. 865 is no longer good law.

The right of subrogation under sec. 92 as well as rights accruing to a co-mortgagor under sec. 95 of the Transfer of Property Act arise only on redemption of the mortgage and not on payment of a portion of the mortgage money to the mortgagee. And the cause of action in favour of the redeeming co-mortgagor arises only when the mortgage debt is completely liquidated and a suit instituted within 12 years from that date is within time. Such a suit is not governed by Art. 61 or Art. 83 of the Act—Nisar Ahmad v. Manzur Ahmad, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 245, 1935 O.W.N. 278, 154 I.C. 267. The period of limitation is 12 years from the date of payment and not from the date when the original mortgage money becomes payable—Rameswar v. Ramnath, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 174 dissenting from Sadhuprasad v. Hari Krishna, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 94, 115 I.C. 552. The same principle applies even if the suit is brought by one of several heirs of the mortgagor or by one of the several subsequent transferees against the other heirs of the mortgagor or transferees of the mortgaged property—Brij Bhukan v. Bhagwan, 19 Luck. 70, 1942 O.W.N. 672, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 449 (F.B.).

Where a person who has taken a subsequent mortgage satisfies the decree on the basis of a prior mortgage, a claim by such mortgagee to be subrogated to the position of the mortgagee under the first mortgage as against the intermediate mortgagee will not be barred by reason of the suit on the basis of the prior mortgage having become time barred—Ram Dhan v. Mt. Chunni Kunwari, A.I.R. 1936 All. 578 (F.B.).

553. Mortgagee's charge:—Surplus sale-proceeds:—Where a mortgaged property is sold for arrears of revenue, free from all incumbrances, the mortgage is invalid as against the purchaser; but the mortgagee is entitled to a charge on the surplus sale-proceeds (sec. 73, Transfer of Property Act), and a suit to enforce such charge is governed by this Article and not by Article 120—Upendra v. Mohiri Lal, 31 Cal. 745 (751); Kamala Kanta v. Abdul Barkat, 27 Cal. 180 (184); Umatara v. Umacharan, 3 C.L.J. 52; Jogeshwar v. Ghanashyam, 5 C.W.N. 356 (359). But quære, is it still a 'charge' after the amendment of sec. 73, T. P. Act?

When a property is sold under a decree obtained by a first mortgagee in a suit in which the puisne incumbrancers were parties, it passes into the hands of the purchaser discharged from all incumbrances. But the rights of the puisne incumbrancers are not extinguished or discharged by the sale, but transferred thereby to the surplus sale-proceeds. A suit brought by a second mortgagee to enforce his lien on those sale-proceeds in the hands of a third mortgagee who has notice of the second mortgage, and who has taken away the sale proceeds in execution of a decree obtained upon his mortgage, is governed by this Article and not by Article 120—Berhamdeo v. Tara Chand, 33 Cal. 92 (111, 112), affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council in 41 Cal. 654 (661) (P.C.). Similarly, a suit by a prior mortgagee, for payment of his mortgage-money out of the sale-proceeds remaining in the hands of a subsequent mortgagee who has foreclosed the mortgage and sold the property to a third person, is governed by this Article—Viswanath v. Shankerlal, 12 N.L.R. 90, 34 I.C. 704.

Suit by a puisne mortgagee.—If a first mortgagee brings a suit on his mortgage without impleading the puisne mortgagee, and in execution of his decree purchases the mortgaged property, and then the puisne mortgagee also brings a suit on his mortgage, without impeading the prior mortgagee, and similarly purchases the property in execution of his decree, and afterwards the puisne mortgagee brings a suit for redemption of the prior mortgage, held that the right of the puisne mortgagee to redeem the prior mortgage is only ancillary to his right to work out his remedy against the mortgaged estate (Fisher, p. 741). He is only permitted to redeem for the purpose of working out his own security—Ramsbotham v. Wallis, (1836) 5 L.J.N.S. Ch. 92. The right of a puisne mortgagee to redeem the prior mortgage in a case where he has not been joined in a suit on the first mortgage is a right to redeem the first mortgage with the view of enforcing his own mortgage; it is only a means of securing the object of enforcing his own mortgage by sale. The proper Article applicable to the case is Article 132 and not 148. Time runs from the due date of his mortgage, and no fresh period runs from the date of his purchase—Lakshmanan v. Sella Muthu, 47 M.L.J. 602, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 76 (77), 84 I.C. 301; Nilmadhab v. Joygopal, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 560, 91 I.C. 719; Nidhiram v. Sarbessur, 14 C.W.N. 439 (442, 443), 5 I.C. 877; Appaya v. Venkatramayya, 20 L.W. 620, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 150 (151), 82 I.C. 864 (following 14 C.W.N. 439).

But the Patna High Court dissents from this view and holds that the second mortgagee's right of redemption cannot be considered as a right to enforce payment of money charged upon immoveable property, because the second mortgagee in a suit for redemption does not seek to recover the money due to him upon his second mortgage. Consequently, Article 132 cannot apply to his suit, but Art. 148—Ramjhari v. Kashinath, 5 Pat. 513, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 337 (339), 94 I.C. 284. The same view has been expressed by the Lahore High Court—Sundar Das v. Beli Ram, 14 Lah. 596, 142 I.C. 805, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 503.

But if the contrary happened, i.e., where the puisne mortgagee at first sued on his mortgage without impleading the prior mortgagee, obtained a decree for sale and purchased the property in execution of his decree, and then the prior mortgagee similarly brought a suit on his mortgage without impleading the puisne mortgagee and purchased the property in execution of his decree, and afterwards the puisne mortgagee sued the prior mortgagee to redeem the prior mortgage, held that the puisne mortgagee not having been impleaded in the prior mortgagee's suit, the decree in that suit was not binding on the puisne mortgagee, that the right to redeem the prior mortgage had not ceased to exist and the relationship of a puisne mortgagee and prior mortgagee still subsisted between the parties, and as such the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the prior mortgage and thus to remove the defect in his title to the property. The suit was governed by Art. 148 and not by Art. 132—Priya Lal v. Bohra Champa Ram, 45 All. 268 (270), A.I.R. 1923 All. 271, 79 I.C. 498. The distinction between the two sets of cases has been thus explained: where it was that the puisne mortgagee first sued on his mortgage and in execution of his decree was put in possession of the property, he subsequently brings a suit merely for redemption, being in possession of the property, the suit falls under Art. 148; but where the prior mortgagee had first sued on his mortgage, and obtained possession in excution of his mortgage decree, the puisne mortgagee's suit for redemption is not merely a suit for redemption but also for recovery of possession; and in suing for recovery of possession, he is not seeking to recover possession as against the mortgagee, since the defendent to this suit is in possession of the property not by virtue of his mortgage but by virtue of his purchase of the property at the sale in execution of his decree. The suit is really to enforce the puisne mortgagee's mortgage against the defendant (prior mortgagee)—Nilmadhab v. Joy Gopal, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 560, 91 I.C. 719.

But where the prior mortgagee brings a suit on his mortgage without impleading the puisne mortgagee and obtains a decree for sale, but before he executes the decree, the puisne mortgagee brings a suit on his mortgage impleading the prior mortgagee but obtains a decree for sale against the mortgagor only (the prior mortgagee being dismissed from the suit on his setting up a prior title), and then the prior mortgagee purchases the property in execution of his decree, and thereafter the puisne mortgagee similarly purchases it in execution of his decree, and then brings a suit to redeem the prior mortgage, held that the Article applicable to the puisne mortgagee's suit for redemption in such circumstances is Art. 148, and not Art. 132. Whenever a suit for redemption is brought by a person entitled to redeem against a mortgagee, Art. 148 and no other Article applies to it; and by no straining of language can a suit for redemption fall under Article 132, as it is not a suit to enforce payment of money —Sayamali v. Anisuddin, 57 Cal. 704 (F.B.), 33 C.W.N. 1067 (1074, 1075), 50 C.L.J. 152, 119 I.C. 135, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 609 (F.B.) (distinguishing Nidhiram v. Surbessur, 14 C.W.N. 439; Nagu Tukaram v. Gopal Ganesh, 55 Bom. L.R. 458, A.I.R. 1953 Bom. 405; Kuran Chandra v. Mohan Lal, 57 C.W.N. 947. A suit by the representatives of a puisne mortgagee to redeem the property from the representatives of a prior mortgagee falls within Art. 132—Ram Adhar v. Shankar Baksh, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 139, 1935 O.W.N. 40, 153 I.C. 808. The period of limitation under Art. 132 for a suit against the second mortgagee by the purchaser of the equity of redemption in a suit by the first mortgagee, who did not know of the existence of the second mortgage and therefore could not implead him in his suit, for enforcing his rights, is to be calculated from the date of the purchase by him, and a suit within 12 years from the date of the sale certificate is not barred by limitation—Gopalan Nair v. Moideen Madar, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 680, 157 I.C. 1050.

554. When money becomes due:—The period of limitation for a suit under Art. 132 begins to run "when the money becomes due", and the money does not become due until both the mortgagor's right to redeem and the mortgagee's right to enforce his security have accrued—Lasa Din v. Gulab Kunwar, 7 Luck. 442 (P.C.), 9 O.W.N. 638, 36 C.W.N. 1017 (1023), 138 I.C. 779, A.I.R. 1932 P.C. 207; Abdul Rahman v. Seo Dayal, 56 All. 496, 1934 A.L.J. 371, 151 I.C. 900, A.I.R. 1934 All. 152.

The expression "due date" in this Article can only mean the date fixed in the mortgage bond as the date by which the mortgage amount should be repaid, irrespective of the fact that the mortgagor has transferred his interest to another. The due date is not extended merely because of the transfer by the mortgagor to another of his interest in the property—Pushkar v. Suraj, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 420.

The starting point of limitation under this Article for a suit for contribution by a co-mortgagor is the date on which he pays off the mortgage-debt and not the date on which the debt fell due—Kenchappa v. Nagappa, A.I.R. 1957 Mysore 1 (F.B.), I.L.R. (1956) Mys. 129.

Where a mortgage deed fixes no time for payment, time runs from the date of the bond; if there have been any previous payments of money to the mortgagee, time runs from the date of the last payment (section 20)—Nilcomal v. Kamini Kumar, 20 Cal. 269 (272). In case of a mortgage bond executed to secure a loan payable on demand, the words "on demand" should be construed as merely technical words meaning "forthwith" or "immediately"; no actual demand is necessary in order to establish a starting point for limitation under Article 132, and time runs from the date of the bond—Perianna v. Muthuvira, 21 Mad. 139 (149); Barkatunnissa v. Madhub Ali, 42 All. 70 (73); Perumal v. Alagiraswami, 20 Mad. 245 (248); T. C. Bose v. Obedur, 6 Rang. 297, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 189 (191), 111 I.C. 132. But if the bond provided that upon default of payment of interest annually, the principal would become due with interest at an enhanced rate from the date of the bond, whenever the creditor would make the demand, it was held that the cause of action did not arise upon the first default in the payment of interest, but the liability of the defendant was made dependent on a preceding demand actually made by the plaintiff; till such demand was made, the defendant could not have considered the action as accruing against him; in such a case, the words "on demand" imported a condition, and were not merely technical words—Nettakaruppa v. Kumarasami, 22 Mad. 20 (22).

Where, under the terms of a mortgage bond, the mortgagee is to take possession of the mortgaged property and to restore possession to the mortgagor when the latter repays the money within five years, but the mortgagor fails to deliver up possession to the mortgagee, the mortgage debt becomes payable forthwith. The fact that the mortgage money is to be paid within 5 years when the mortgagee is to restore possession to the mortgagor does not postpone the accrual of the cause of action—Dnynoba v. Dattoba, 48 Bom.L.R. 629, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 152. But this view was expressly overruled by the same High Court in Sidramaya v. Danava, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 407.

In the case of a mortgage falling under Bombay Regulation V of 1827, in which there was no specific time fixed for payment, the Judicial Committee observed that the money did not become due and the cause of action did not arise until demand for the payment of the mortgage-debt was made by the mortgagee and was refused by the mortgagor—Nil Kanth v. Vidya Narasing Bharathi, 54 Bom. 495 (P.C.), 32 Bom.L.R. 1527, 126 I.C. 417, A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 188 (192), reversing Nil Kanth v. Vidyashankar, 26 Bom L.R. 455, 80 I.C. 393, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 387.

If a mortgage bond is payable within a certain period, e.g., in one year, time runs from the expiry of the period (one year). A mortgage bond stipulated that the money was to be repaid in one year, that the interest, was to be paid every six months, and that on default at the end of six months interest would be added to the principal. There was a default in payment of interest at the end of the first six months. It was held that the stipulation as regards default in payment of interest did not cut down the stipulated period of one year to six months; and hence the period of limitation ran at the expiry of one year after the date of the mortgage—Ram Dayal v. Aminuddin, 1931 A.L.J. 29, 133 I.C. 311, A.I.R. 1931 All. 203 (204). Where it is clear from the document that there was no intention that the mortgagee should be given the right to recover the entire amount of the mortgage debt simply on the occurence of a default of payment of the annual interest, the right to sue for the entire amount cannot arise till the expiry of the term fixed—Sarju v. Badri, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 515, 1939 N.L.J. 333, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 242. Where a mortgage bond executed in May 1909 was payable in three years, but it was provided that if the mortgagor transferred the mortgaged property, the creditors should, before the expiry of the term, be at liberty to sue for the recovery of the mortgage-money, and in March 1911 the mortgagor hypothecated a portion of the mortgaged property to another by a registered bond, but the mortgagee had no notice of his hypothecation, held that a suit instituted on the mortgage in March 1924 was not barred, as time ran from May 1912 and not from March 1911—Ashiq Husain v. Chaturbhuj, 50 All. 328, A.I.R. 1928 All 159 (161), 108 I.C. 152, 26 A.L.J. 4. Although under sec. 3, Transfer of Property Act (as amended in 1929), registration itself amounts to notice, still that provision cannot apply to the present case, because registration would not amount to notice for the purposes of limitation.

Where a person pays off two previous mortgages and a subsequent mortgagee brings a suit for foreclosure impleading that person as a defendant and a preliminary decree for foreclosure is passed subject to a charge in favour of the person who has paid off the previous mortgages, a suit by the charge holder within 12 years of the foreclosure decree is within time though after 12 years from date of payment or due dates of mortgages paid off as the foreclosure decree not merely declared but created the charge——Batey Krishna v. Pursotam, 71 I.A. 149, 48 C.W.N. 830, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 330, 1944 A.L.J. 463, A.I.R. 1944 P.C. 85; Ramasubha v. Arunachalam, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 379, 1946 M.W.N. 366, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 423.

An assignee from the mortgagee (whether by private sale or by execution sale) is in the same position as the mortgagee himself, and he must sue within the same period as is allowed to the mortgagee; he cannot claim a greater right than the mortgagee himself had in the matter, and the mere fact that a particular right has changed hands by assignment does not operate to cause a fresh period of limitation to run from the date of assignment—T. C. Bose v. Obedur Rahman, 6 Rang. 297, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 189 (190), 111 I.C. 132.

Where a second mortgagee discharges a decree obtained by the first mortgagee, he does not become an assignee of the decree and is not entitled to execute the decree; but he acquires a charge on the mortgaged property; and in a suit by him to enforce the charge, time runs from the date on which he made the payment in satisfaction of the decree, and not from the date when the cause of action accrued to the prior mortgagee. The puisne mortgagee is not an assignee of the prior mortgagee; and the right of the puisne mortgagee cannot accrue before he made any payment at all—Shib Lal v. Munni Lal, 44 All. 67 (69, 70), A.I.R. 1922 All. 153, 63 I.C. 604. Where a property was sold in execution of a mortgage decree, but before confirmation of the sale, it was hypothecated to another person who paid up the decretal amount and released the property, he was subrogated to the decree-charge held by the prior mortgagee, and could bring a suit to enforce that charge as if he had obtained a mortgage on the date of his payment, and would not be bound to enforce his right within the period of limitation of the original mortgage—Parvati Ammal v. Venkkatarama, 47 M.L.J. 316 (319, 320). 81 I.C. 771. A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 80 (82). But the Patna High Court, and in a subsequent case, the Madras High Court also, dissent from this view and are of opinion that a puisne mortgagee paying off the decree obtained by the prior mortgagee becomes entitled only to the security held by the prior mortgagee; and the period of limitation for his suit to enforce the prior mortgage is to be counted from the due date of that mortgage That is, he is bound to enforce his right within the period of limitation allowed to the first mortgagee. He does not acquire any fresh charge on the property from the date of his payment; consequently time does not run from the date on which he paid off the decree on the prior mortgage—Sibanand v. Jagmoham, 1 Pat. 780 (785, 786), 3 P.L.T. 533, 68 I.C. 707, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 499; Kotappa v. Raghavayaya, 50 Mad. 626, 102 I.C. 316, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 631 (635) (distinguishing, but virtually dissenting from Parvati Ammal v. Venkatarama, 47 M.L.J. 316, cited above); Palaniswami v. Ramasami, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 829, 1949 M.W.N. 792, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 802. But in a subsequent case the Patna High Court has held that limitation for such a suit runs not from the date when the cause of action on the original mortgage arose because the cause of action is extinct but from the date when the money was payable under the decree—Babu Lal v. Bindhachal, 22 Pat. 187, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 305. In this case their Lordships have drawn a distinction between a case where the prior mortgage in respect of which subrogation is claimed has not been sued upon and the case where the mortgage has been sued upon and subrogation is claimed by paying off the mortgage-decree. In the first case limitation will run from the date when the cause of action of the original mortgage arose. The same High Court, however, in a recent case. Mt. Parwati v. Manna Lal, A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 414 (F.B.) has held that the puisne mortgagee who pays off a prior mortgage decree is not subrogated to the position of a decree-holder and the puisne mortgagee does not get a fresh starting point of limitation for enforcing his charge from the date of payment fixed in the mortgage decree and that the period of limitation would begin from the date of payment of the original mortgage bond under Article 132. The Nagpur J. C. Court takes the same view as the Allahabad High Court, viz., that the period of limitation runs from the date when the puisne mortgagee made the payment and became entitled (under sec. 74, now 92 of the Transfer of Property Act) to the right created by the decree on the prior mortgage—Suryabhan v. Renuka, 8 N.L.J. 232 (F.B.), 92 I.C. 118, A.I.R. 1926 Nog. 84, overruling Nathuram v. Sheolal, 13 N.L.R. 217, 42 I.C. 796, (where it was held that the period of limitation ran from the due date of the prior mortgage). The Calcutta High Court has held that the starting point of limitation in such suits is not the date of payment of the decretal dues by the puisne mortgagee but the date of payment specified in the preliminary decree—Shamsuddin v. Asadulla, 49 C.W.N. 104, A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 194.

A mortgage bond dated 1911 after providing for half yearly payment of interest, provided that the mortgagor could redeem the property only in 1920, and not before, that the mortgagee was not to bring the property to sale on account of default until 1920, that the mortgagee might at his wish recover, either by mutual consent or by suit, the mortgage-money with interest even before 1920 but that the mortagee was not entitled to sell up the property till 1920. Held on a construction of the terms of the deed, that a suit to enforce the mortgage by sale of the property could not be brought before 1920, and that the suit filed in 1926 was not barred—Ram Koer v. Patraj Koer, 3 Luck. 439 (F.B.), 5 O.W.N. 385, 112 I.C. 130, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 289 (290).

Where the surety of a mortgagor pays up the mortgage-money he cannot be in a better position than the original mortgagee. And so in a suit brought by the surety to recover the money from the mortgagor, time runs from the same date as it would have run had he been the original mortgagee, i.e., from the date of the mortgage bond, and not from the date when the surety paid off the mortgage—Barkatunnissa v. Mohbub Ali, 42 All. 70 (74).

Before sec. 95 of the Transfer of Property Act was amended by the T. P. Amendment Act, XX of 1929, the law was that if a co-mortgagor redeemed the mortgage, his position was the same as if a new mortgage was created in his favour, and the period of limitation for his suit to enforce his charge against the other co-mortgagors ran from the date of his payment, and was not the same within which the original mortgagee could have brought his suit on his mortgage—Umar Ali v. Asmat Ali, 58 Cal. 1167 (F.B), 35 C.W.N. 409, 130 I.C. 889, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 251 (overruling Rajkumari v. Mukunda, 25 C.W.N. 283, 57 I.C. 868); Qamar Jahan v. Munney Mirza, 12 O.L.J. 313, 2 O.W.N. 413, 92 I.C. 559, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 613; Rameshwar v. Sheorani, 2 Luck. 686, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 552, 4 O.W.N. 783, 105 I.C. 302; Aziz Ahmad v. Chhote Lal, 50 All. 569, A.I.R. 1928 All 241 (245), 109 I.C. 38. But after the amendment of sec. 95, Transfer of Property Act, and in view of the amended sec. 92 also, the right of a redeeming co-mortgagor is the same right as that of the mortgagee whom he redeems (as he is subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee, under sec. 92); the amendment provides for the redeeming co-mortgagor the same security as a proper conveyance would have provided; and the period of limitation in respect of his suit against the other co-mortgagors is the same within which the original mortgagee could have brought his suit on the mortgage. As a result of this amendment, the decision in Rajkumari v. Mukunda, 25 C.W N. 283 will now stand as good law.

554A. Instalment mortgage bond:—Three important features are found almost invariably in instalment mortgage-bonds : (1) a time is generally fixed by which the entire principal money and interest due thereon are to be paid up; this time is either expressly stated or can be inferred from such terms as "the mortgage-money is to be paid off in four annual instalments, or eight six-monthly instalments" (which mean that the money is to be paid off in 4 years); (2) a stipulation is made for payment of interest, quarterly, six-monthly or annually; and (3) a clause is inserted for the benefit of the mortgagee that if any of the instalments (principal or interest) is not paid in time, the mortgagee would be at liberty to call in the entire money.

There was a divergence of opinion among the High Courts as to whether time ran from the date of the first default, or from the expiry of the due date of the bond.

It has now been authoritatively held by the Privy Council that in such a case, the penal clause being inserted into the bond exclusively for the benefit of the mortgagee, it gives him an option either to enforce his security at once as soon as any default is made, or to wait till the expiry of the full term. Therefore, where such a default has occurred, a suit brought within 12 years from the expiry of the full term is within time if the mortgagee has chosen not to exercise his option to enforce his security on the default occurring. The mortgage-money does not become due until both the mortgagor's right to redeem and the mortgagee's right to enforce his security have accrued. Applying this principle to the case of an instalment mortgage-bond, it is clear that the mortgagor cannot redeem upon a default being made, because he cannot take advantage of his own default; consequently he cannot contend that the mortgagee must bring his suit within 12 years from the date of the first default. It is left to the mortgagee to exercise the option reserved to him, and his suit is not barred if he exercises his option by bringing a suit within 12 years from the expiry of the full term of the bond and the mortgagee's right to enforce his security have accrued—Lasa Din v. Gulab Kunwar, 7 Luck. 442 (P.C.), 9 O.W.N. 638, 36 C.W.N. 1017 (1023), 138 I.C. 779, A.I.R. 1932 P.C. 207. See also Pancham v. Anwar Hussain, 48 All. 457 (P.C.), 24 A.L.J. 736, 31 C.W.N. 324, A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 85, 99 I.C. 650; Mukhdeo v. Harokh Narain, 11 Pat. 112, 12 P.L.T. 755, 134 I.C. 609, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 285 (290, 291); Parvati v. Mohammad Abrahim, 8 Luck. 240 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 66 (67), 9 O.W.N. 1202; Gokhul v. Sheo Prasad, 18 Pat. 459, 20 Pat.L.T. 443, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 433 (F.B.). When in the event of the happening of a certain contingency option is given to the mortgagee to enforce his security at once without waiting for the full term of the mortgage, the option is exclusively for the benefit of the mortgagee, and if the mortgagee does not avail himself of the option the mortgage money does not become due till after the expiry of the full term of the mortgage—Bohra Hotilal v. Mithullal, A.I.R. 1935 All. 421, 1935 A.L.J. 515, 157 I.C. 675, 7 Luck. 442 (P.C.) Foll; Thirthagiri Udayan v. Venkatarama Chetty, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 884, 1933 M.W.N. 995, 159 I.C. 172; Bahadur Singh v. Abdul, 43 C.W.N. 38, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 26, 181 I.C. 141; Meghnath v. Collector, Cawnpur, 1946 A.L.J. 315, A.I.R. 1947 All. 7. Where, however the mortgagee decides to exercise his option to exercise the exigibility clause and definitely treats the cause of action as arising on an earlier date in the plaint, he must abide by it and will not be allowed to amend the palint so as to show the cause of action arising on the later date—Bhabutmal v. Syed Abdul, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 370, 1948 N.L.J. 546, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 103.

The following cases are overruled in view of the above Privy Council decision—Sitab Chand v. Hyder, 24 Cal. 281; Gaya Din v. Jumman, 37 All. 400 (F.B.); Shib Dayal v. Meherban, 45 All. 27 (F.B.); Ganpati v. Bhiku, 32 Bom. L.R. 683, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 297, 125 I.C. 701; Shrinives v. Chanbasapagowda, 25 Bom.L.R. 203, 72 I.C. 290, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 201; Pancham v. Anwar Hussain, 43 All. 596; Sheoram v. Babu, 48 All. 302, 94 I.C. 849, A.I.R. 1926 All. 493; Nathi v. Tursi, 43 All. 671; Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamna Prasad, 44 All. 360.

A mortgage provided that interest was to be paid every six months and that any interest remaining unpaid would at the close of the year be treated as principal and would thereafter carry interest at the bond rate. It further provided that in the event of non-payment of interest for two consecutive half-years, the mortgagee would have the power to benefit himself by charging the compound interest aforesaid, or to realise at once the whole of the principal and interest due. It was held that the mortgagee was given three options, and if he did not choose to exercise his option of suing for the whole amount due on the occurrence of a default but chose instead the option of letting the interest go at compound rate, it could not be said that time began to run against him from the date of the default—Girdhari v. Gobind Ram, 19 A.L.J. 456, 63 I.C. 25. A mortgage contained the stipulation that the mortgagee would be entitled to realise interest every year and in case of three years' default, the entire amount would become due. No interest was paid and after a few years the payment of interest was made by execution of a bond for interest due. The mortgagee instituted a suit, after 12 years from the date of the execution of the bond, it was held that the suit was barred as the subsequent payment of interest merely gave the mortgagee a fresh start but the terminus a quo could not be altered from what it was provided in sec. 20 of the Limitation Act as a fresh period of limitation was to be computed from the time when the payment was made by execution of the bond—Bhagat Ram v. Ralla Ram, 40 P.L.R. 571, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 570, 178 I.C. 597.

The principle of waiver indicated in Article 75 may be applied in determining the time when the money sued for becomes due within the meaning of Article 132. Thus, a mortgage bond provided for payment of the debt in 12 instalments, the first falling due in Pous 1308 B.S., and others in the month of Pous of each of the next 11 years ending with 1319. It was further provided that upon default in the payment of any one instalment the creditor would be entitled to recover the entire amount due, without waiting for the future instalments falling due. The plaintiff alleged that the first instalment was duly paid, and the instalments for 1309 to 1311 were paid and accepted although the payments were made out of time, and the suit was brought in 1326 B.S., for the subsequent instalments. Held that the suit was not barred, because the payment and acceptance of the overdue instalments constituted a waiver applying the principle of Article 75, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the subsequent instalments. The penalty having been waived, the parties were remitted to the same position as they would have been if no default had occurred—Surendra Nath v. Rishee Case Law, 27 C.W.N. 893, 79 I.C. 291, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 139.

But the Madras High Court is of opinion that in an instalment mortgage bond the cause of action accrues on the expiry of the period fixed in the mortgage bond for the repayment of the principal, and not when the first default is made, that Article 132 should be construed in its plain and natural sense, and the words of Article 75 should not be imported into Article 132 for the purpose of determining the starting point of limitation, and that the mortgagee is not bound to take advantage of the default clause but is at liberty to ignore it as it merely gives him an option to recover the whole amount upon default—Narna v. Ammani, 39 Mad. 981 (986); Muthiah Chettiar v. Venkatasubbarayulu, 49 Mad. 403, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 160, 49 M.L.J. 394, 90 I.C. 1033. This view has also been taken by the Patna High Court in Ramsekhar v. Mathura, 4 Pat. 820, 90 I.C. 249, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 557 (following 39 Mad. 981). See this case cited in Note 483 under Article 116. But in subsequent cases the same High Court has held that if the mortgagee accepts payment of overdue instalments which are tendered to him he must be taken to have waived his right of enforcing the default clause in the bond and limitation does not arise—Ahammu v. Kunnu, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 251, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 836, 180 I.C. 570; Marutheppa v. Soosai, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 49, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 172, 220 I.C. 208.

Where in pursuance of a default and option clause in a simple mortgage, the mortgagee sues for and obtains possession and on the mortgagor applying under the Encumbered Estates Act, makes an application for the inclusion of his claim for interest for the period of his non-possession it is not barred because under the document the mortgagor intended to give the mortgagee an option as regards the time for suing for interest and as such it could be sued for along with the claim for principal—Hardas v. Vidya, 1944 O.W.N. 509, A.I.R. 1945 Oudh 70.

555. Suit against person holding adversely to the mortgagor:—A suit for sale upon a mortgage brought against the mortgagor and a person claiming a right adversely to the mortgagor by twelve years' possession (the adverse possession commencing after the mortgage) is governed by this Article. Such a suit is not a suit for possession under Article 144, because the plaintiff cannot bring a suit for possession without bringing a suit under Art. 132. The suit is in time, if brought within 12 years from the date when the money becomes due. The period of limitation did not run from the time when possession was taken by the adverse possessor, because the adverse possession of the third party obtained after the mortgage does not affect the mortgagee's right—Rajnath v. Narain, 36 All. 567 (571) (F.B.), distinguishing Karan Singh v. Bakar Ali, 5 All. 1 (P.C.).

556. Malikana:—Malikana is an annual recurring charge on immoveable property and must be sued for within 12 years from the time when the money sued for falls due—Hurmuzi v. Hirdaynarain, 5 Cal. 921; Jagannath v. Kharachi, 10 C.W.N. 151. A suit for an allowance for the maintenance of the younger member of a family, charged upon the inheritance to which the eldest male member alone succeeds, is within this Article—Ahmed Hossein v. Nihaluddin, 9 Cal. 945.

In order to bring the suit within this Article, the plaintiff coming into Court to claim a malikana allowance must claim it as a charge upon the immoveable property concerned—Nathu v. Ghansham, 41 All. 259; and if he claims it as a charge upon the property, the suit is governed by this Article, notwithstanding that the Court refuses to pass a decree against the property—Shaida v. Phullo, 35 All. 185. If, however, the plaintiffs do not seek to enforce it as a charge on the land for which it is payable, the suit is governed by Art. 115, in as much as in such a case the claim must be regarded as one arising out of a quasi-contract created by law—Kallar v. Gunga, 33 Cal. 998.

A suit for declaration of a right to receive malikana annually is a suit to establish a periodically recurring right and falls under Article 131 (Gopinath v. Bhugwari Pershad, 10 Cal. 967); but a suit to recover malikana, coupled with a claim for declaration of the plaintiff's right to receive malikana, falls under Article 132, because the declaration is merely auxiliary to the claim to recover malikana; and hence although the claim for declaration may be barred, the right to recover malikana itself is not necessarily barred —Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Muktakeshi, 6 Pat. 51, 96 I.C. 188, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 340.

The word 'malikana' in this Article is not restricted to malikana as contemplated in the Bengal Regulation—Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Muktakeshi, supra. But it cannot be applied to the under-proprietary rent payable by an under-proprietor in Oudh to his superior proprietor, for what he is liable to pay is 'rent' under the Oudh Rent Act—Brahmadin v. Sangam, 14 Luck. 467, 1938 O.W.N. 1368, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 57.

557. Huqq:—This Article applies to suits which are brought by a hakdar against the person originally liable for payment of the hak, and not to suits by one sharer in a vatan against another sharer or alleged sharer who has improperly received the plaintiff's share of the hak; such a suit falls under Art. 62—Harmukhgauri v. Harisukh, 7 Bom. 191 (193).

A right to receive a nankar allowance out of the profits of a particular village is a kind of huqq—Deputy Commissioner v. Jagjivan, 19 O.C. 49, 33 I.C. 461.

558. Clause (c)—Equitable mortgage:—Clause (c) of the Explanation has been added by sec. 9 of the Transfer of Property Amendment Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929). The reasons for inserting this clause have been thus stated:—

"There is much conflict of decisions regarding the period of limitation which governs a suit to recover the money due on a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds. Some Courts have held that it is 60 years, while others hold that it is 12 years. We think that this conflict should now be set at rest; and as the preponderance of opinion is in favour of providing a 12 years' rule in such cases, we propose to bring these mortgages under Article 132 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908"—Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, 1929, Part V, p. 126).

The Calcutta High Court has held that according to the practice of that High Court the appropriate remedy in case of an equitable mortgage is a decree for sale and not for foreclosure (and consequently Art. 132 applies and not Art. 147)—Srinath v. Gadadhar, 24 Cal. 348 (350). If no date is fixed then the money becomes due on the date of the mortgage and limitation under Article 132 would run from the said date—Durga Prosad v. Mario Galstaun, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 194. But according to the Bombay High Court, a mortgagee by deposit of title-deed had a right to sue for foreclosure or sale, and his suit, fell under Art. 147—Manekji v. Rustomji, 14 Bom. 269 (272, 273). This is no longer good law. Compare also sec. 96, Transfer of Property Act (as amended in 1929), under which an equitable mortgage stands on the same footing as a simple mortgage.

The result of the new clause (c) of this Article would be that in Bombay a large number of mortgage suits for which the period of limitation had hitherto been believed to be 60 years under Art. 147 would be found to be barred by limitation. In order to provide for those cases as well as for the continuance of pending suits, the Legislature has enacted a new section—sec. 15 (2) of the Transfer of Property Amendment Supplementary Act (XXI of 1929) which runs as follows:—

> 15. (2) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 9 of this Act in the Presidency of Bombay and such other territories as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, specify in this behalf, a suit by a mortgagee for foreclosure or sale on a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds may be instituted within two years from the date of the commencement of this Act, or within sixty years from the date when the money secured by the mortgage became due whichever period expires first; and no such suit instituted within the said period of sixty years and pending at the date of the commencement of this Act, either in a Court of first instance or of appeal, shall be dismissed on the ground that the twelve years' rule of limitation is applicable.
> [N.B.—"Two years"=1st April 1932.]

The Legislature would have done better by inserting this saving provision into the Limitation Act itself, instead of placing it at the end of the T. P. Amendment Supplementary Act.

133. (Omitted by Sec. 3 of Act I of 1929.)

This Article has been omitted from this place but re-enacted as Art. 48A. See Notes thereunder.

134. To recover possession of immoveable property conveyed or bequeathed in trust or mortgaged	Twelve years.	When the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff.

and afterwards transferred by the trustee or mortgagee for a valuable consideration.

Change:—The words in the third column have been substituted for the words "the date of the transfer" by sec. 3 of the Indian Limitation Amendment Act, I of 1929. For reason of the change, see Note 566 below.

559. Object of this article:—The underlying idea of this Article is that creator of the trust or the original mortgagor put the trustee or mortgagee in a position to deal with the property wrongly as well as rightly and that after a limited time neither the cestui qui trust nor the mortgagor shall be permitted to question those dealings. The creator of a trust or the mortgagor should therefore be careful to whom he entrusts or mortgages his property. The utility of such an Article lies in this that it relieves the Court of the necessity of deciding disputed questions of fact relating to transactions long past, and prevents the hard swearing and chicane to which such disputes are apt to give rise. With every year that passes the chance that the Courts may be led into a wrong conclusion on a question of fact increases—Narain Das v. Haji Abdur Rahim, 47 Cal. 866 (881). The object of this Article is to cut down the period available to the mortgagor under Article 148, and to compel him to watch the conduct of the mortgagee and to intervene on a transfer—Narayanaswamy v. Periasamy, 44 Mad. 951, 68 I.C. 734. In order to attract the operation of this Article the defendant has got affirmatively to prove that the mortgagee or his successor-in-interest has transferred a larger interest than justified by the mortgage. If there is no such proof, the shorter period under this Article is not available to the defendant in a suit for possession after redemption—Nani Bai v. Gita Bai, A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 706. The onus of proving facts which would attract the provision of this Article in preference to Art. 148 or even possibly Art. 144 would lie heavily on the person who wishes to claim the benefit of an abridged period of limitation under this Article —Krishnaswami v. Sabdrathnam, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 101, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 394.

Article 134 and sec. 10:—In so far as this Article refers to trustees, it must be read along with section 10 which also relates to trustees and permits a cestui que trust to follow trust property in the hands of trustees or their assignees (excepting assignees for valuable consideration). This exception has obvious reference to the same class of considerations as are given effect to in Article 134 in respect of suits for possession—Ram Chandra v. Sheikh Mohidin, 23 Bom. 614 (618). With regard to trustees, the operation of this Article is controlled by sec. 10—Abhiram v. Shyam Chand, 36 Cal. 1003 (1004) (P.C.). That is, this Article would not apply if the transfer by the trustee was not for valuable consideration. On the other hand, section 10 does not apply where the transfer by the trustee is for valuable consideration; to such a case Article 134 applies—Ramacharya v. Srinivasacharya, 20 Bom.L.R. 441, 46 I.C. 19.

Suit against whom to be brought:—The suits contemplated by this Article are suits against the transferee or his representatives—Seeti Kutti v. Kunhi Pathumma, 40 Mad. 1040 (1061) (F.B.). A suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage from the mortgagee is not a suit governed by this Article but by Article 148. It cannot have been the intention of the Legislature that the mortgagee should be able to shorten the period of limitation by the mere process of making a transfer of his rights in favour of some third person. Article 134 can be applicable only when the suit is being brought against the transferee of the mortgagee—Chetty Firm v. Md. Kasim, 3 Rang. 367,

A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 377. Moreover, this Article does not apply to suits against persons who are not transferees from the mortgagee, but are transferees from persons other than the mortgagees or their heirs, e.g., to a suit against a person who is a transferee from a sub-mortgagee—Manawar v. Jagmillan, 99 I.C. 280, A.I.R. 1927 All. 177.

560. Conveyed or bequeathed in trust:—A property conveyed to a mohunt for the benefit of the mutt is a property 'conveyed in trust' within the meaning of this Article—Deivasikamani v. Valliammai, 37 M.L.J. 231, 52 I.C. 914. If a property is a valid debuttor absolutely dedicated to one or more Thakurs, it falls within the description of property 'conveyed or bequeathed in trust' and the shebait is a trustee within the meaning of Art. 134—Ramkanai v. Sri Sri Hari Narayan, 2 C.L.J. 546.

But in the Privy Council case—Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami, 44 Mad. 831 (843) (P.C.), 26 C.W.N. 537, 65 I.C. 161, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 123, the Judicial Committee laid down that the mere fact that a property was gifted to idols and images consecreted in temples, or to religious institutions, was not a ground for holding that the property was 'conveyed in trust,' that the shebait or the mohant of the idol or religious institution, to which the property was dedicated, held the property only as a custodian or manager; the property could not be said to be vested in him, or 'conveyed in trust' to him; similarly, under the Mahomedan law, the moment a wakf was created, the property vested in God Almighty; the Mutwali or Sajjadanashin was merely a manager. Neither the shebait nor the mutwalli was a trustee, and if the property of the endowment was transferred by the mohunt or mutwalli, a suit to recover the property from the transferee was governed by the general Article 144.

Vidya Varuthi's case was followed in Abdur Rahim v. Narayan Das, 50 Cal. 329 (336) (P.C.), 28 C.W.N. 121, 71 I.C. 646, A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 44, Diwan Singh v. Shamdas, 65 I.C. 722, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 271, Rama Reddi v. Ranga Dasan, 49 Mad. 543, 96 I.C. 371, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 796, Ranga v. Latchuma, 48 M.L.J. 114; Mahant Ramrup v. Lalchand, 1 Pat. 475 (478), and several other cases. In the earlier Privy Council case of Ram Parkash v. Anand Das, 43 Cal. 707 (P.C.) at p. 732, the Judicial Committee had remarked that a mohant was not only a religious preceptor but a 'trustee' in respect of the muth.

The case of Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami, as well as the cases which followed it, have lost their authority in view of the second para. of sec. 10, recently added by the Indian Limitation Amendment (Act I of 1929). See Notes at pp. 102, 103, ante, under heading "Religious Endowment." And as special provisions have been made in Articles 134A, 134B, 134C and 48B in respect of property comprised in a religious or charitable endowment, it is no longer necessary to decide whether such a property falls within the description of property "conveyed or bequeathed in trust," within the meaning of Art. 134, and the question of applicability of the ruling of Vidya Varuthi's case to Art. 134 becomes unnecessary. Article 134 is now restricted to trust property other than property of a religious or charitable endowment, i.e., to secular trusts only.

561. Transferred:—In Art. 134 of the old Act, there were the words "purchased from" instead of "transferred by"; and so the Article applied only to sales by trustees and not to a mortgage or lease executed by a trustee; see Abhiram Goswami v. Shyama Charan, 36 Cal. 1003 (1015) (P.C.); Iswar Shyam Chand v. Ram Kanai, 38 Cal. 526 (P.C.); Narsya v. Venkataramana, 23 M.L.J. 260, 16 I.C. 53; Bashashar v. Natha Singh, 30 P.R. 1908, 102 P.L.R. 1908 (F.B.). Still, in many cases the Article was extended to transfers by way of mortgage or permanent lease. See Maluji v. Fakirchand, 22 Bom. 225; Nilmoney v. Jagabandhu, 23 Cal. 536 (544), Yesu v Balkrishna. 15 Bom. 583; Behari v. Muhammad 20 All 482 (P.B.) Hussaini v.

Hussain, 29 All. 471 (478); Ramkanai v. Sri Sri Hari Narayan, 2 C.L.J. 546; Narayan v. Sri Ramachandra, 27 Bom. 373 (377); Monavikraman v. Ammu, 24 Mad. 471 (F.B.).

But now the Legislature have used the word 'transfer' in order to make this Article applicable to all transfers for valuable consideration—sale, mortgage and lease. See Narain Das v. Haji Abdur Hakim, 47 Cal. 866 (880); Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami, 44 Mad. 831 (845) (P.C.); Bagas Umarji v. Nathabhai, 36 Bom. 146 (150), 12 I.C. 737; Chetty Firm v. Md. Kasim, 3 Rang. 367, A I.R. 1925 Rang. 377.

Transfer with possession:—The suits referred to in this Article being suits for possession, the transfer contemplated by this Article is a transfer with possession or followed by possession as a necessary incident or ingredient of it. This Article does not apply to a transfer from the trustee or mortgagee unless the transferee had possession under the transfer—Husaini v. Husain, 29 All. 471 (480); Naunihal v. Skinner, 47 All. 803, A.I.R. 1925 All. 707, 92 I.C. 63; Narain Das v. Haji Abdur Rahim, 47 Cal. 866 (880); Dattagiri v. Dattatraya, 27 Bom. 363 (369); Ramchandra v. Sheikh Mohideen, 23 Bom. 614; Sagun v. Kaji, 27 Bom. 500; Chetty Firm v. Md. Kasim, 3 Rang. 367; Seeli Kuti v. Kunhi Pathumma, 40 Mad. 1040 (1054) (F.B.); Ram Piari v. Budh Sen, 43 All. 164 (167), 18 A.L.J. 995; Achche Mirza v. Ahmed Shah, 1 Luck. 529, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 594, 97 I.C. 922. Under this Article the transfer by the mortgagee must be a transfer with possession to the transferee, at least a transfer which would entitle the transferee to get possession from his vendors—Kalidas v. Sushila, 52 C.W.N. 443, A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 461. So when at the time of transfer the property is in the possession of a receiver appointed in another proceeding, this Article does not apply—Krishnaswami v. Sabaratnam, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 101, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 394. It should be noted that under the English law (3 & 4 Vict., C. 27, sec. 25, which correspoponds to Article 134) possession by the purchaser for valuable consideration, for the statutory period, of the property conveyed in breach of trust is necessary to validate the transfer against the cestui que trust; see Lewin on Trusts, 5th Edn., p. 633.

This Article applies even though possession is taken by the transferee at some time after the date of the transfer, and is not restricted to cases where the possession is taken at the date of the transfer—Seeti Kutti v. Kunhi Pathumma, 40 Mad. 1040 (1051, 1054, 1060) (F.B.); see also Narain Das v. Haji Abdur Rahim, 47 Cal. 866. The Rangoon High Court holds that this Article cannot apply where possession was not given at the time of the transfer but passed subsequently to the transfer—Chetty Firm v. Md. Kasim, 3 Rang. 367, A.I R. 1925 Rang. 377, 90 I.C. 1011.

Since the transfer contemplated by this Article is a transfer with possession, it presupposes that the transferor-mortgagee must have been in possession of the mortgaged property at the time he made the transfer. But the possession which the transferor had at the time of the transfer need not necessarily have been acquired under the mortgage originally made in his favour. Even if the mortgage was a simple mortgage and if the mortgagee subsequently got possession of the mortgaged property otherwise, as for example by a purchase in execution of a simple money decree obtained by another creditor, the Article would still apply if it be established that at the time the transfer was made the mortgagee was in possession, no matter under what title—Naunihal v. Skinner, 47 All. 803, 23 A.L.J. 691, A.I.R. 1925 All. 707 (per Lindsay J.). But Kanhaiya Lal J. is of opinion that the transferor-mortgagee must have obtained possession (from the mortgagor) under the mortgage, and that if the mortgagee acquired possession in some other capacity, the transfer of possession would be deemed to have been made in that capacity in which it was acquired, and such acquisition could not be attributed to the mortgage, where the mortgage itself was a simple mortgage or a mortgage not entitling the mortgagee to possession by virtue of its incidents or terms.

But this opinion is no longer correct in view of 51 All. 367 (P.C.), cited in Note 562 below.

Execution sale:—Execution sale is not a 'transfer'; therefore this Article does not apply to a suit against a person who purchased the property at a sale in execution of a decree against the trustee or mortgagee—Paras Ram v Lalman, 7 I.C. 570 (All.); Charu Chandra v. Nahush Chandra, 50 Cal. 49 (63), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 1, 36 C.L.J. 35; Kalidas v. Kanhaya, 11 Cal. 121 (P.C.); Chintamoni v. Sarup Se, 15 Cal. 703 (706) (so assumed); Subbaya Pandaram v. Mahammad Mustapha, 32 M.L.J. 85, 40 I.C. 50; Kannuswami v. Muthusami, 5 L.W. 250, 38 I.C. 194, 1917 M.W.N. 5; Ram Piary v. Budh Sen, 43 All. 164 (168); Pandu v. Vithu, 19 Bom. 140 (144); Sobhag Chand v. Bhaichand, 6 Bom. 193 (206); Mahomed Mohsin v. Mahomed Abid, 22 O.C. 72, 52 I.C. 159; Bhagwan Sahai v. Bhagwan Din, 9 All. 97; Mohomed Moosa v. Kazi Fatahulla, 19 S.L.R. 268, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 167, 79 I.C. 466. This Article can only apply to a case of transfer, that is to say, a case where title is conveyed by act of parties and not by reason of execution of a decree of Court—Kalidas v. Sushila, 52 C.W.N. 443, A.I.R. 1947 Cal 461. Where in execution of a money decree, the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, in which his real interest is that of a mortgagee, is attached and sold, the auction-purchaser cannot be regarded as a purchaser within the meaning of this Article, even though the property was sold as the property of the judgment-debtor without any limitation of his interest therein—Ahmed Kuti v. Raman, 25 Mad. 99 (F.B.) (overruling Muthu v. Kambalinga, 12 Mad. 316, at p. 318, where this Article was held to apply equally to an auction sale as well as to a private sale).

In the recent Privy Council case of Subbaiya Pandaram v. Muhammad Mustapha, 46 Mad. 751 (757), the Judicial Committee were of opinion that Article 134 might apply to a case where the defendant was an auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree against the trustee, as "there is little difference in principle between a transfer under an adverse execution, and a sale by the trustee himself." But their Lordships also observed that Art. 144 was more appropriate.

562. "Mortgagee":—A mortgagee is none the less a mortgagee even though he purchases the equity of redemption of the mortgagor at a sale held in execution of a money decree against the latter, and enters into possession as an absolute owner. It is immaterial that the mortgagee should have thought that he was an absolute owner if in fact he was a mortgagee; and it is also immaterial whether he got possession before, under or after the mortgage—Skinner v. Naunihal, 51 All. 367 (P.C.), 33 C.W.N. 761 (768), 1929 A.L.J. 566, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 158, 117 I.C. 22. This Article must be strictly construed and can be made to apply only to cases in which there has been a transfer by a person, who is actually the 'mortgagee' of the property in suit; and it is incumbent on the transferee to show that the person who sold the property to him was the mortgagee of the property. A person who purchases a property in execution of a mortgage decree does not become the 'mortgagee' of the property. Further, in order to make this Article applicable, there must be a subsisting mortgage at the date of the transfer—Chhoti Begam v. Ram Prasad, 20 O.C. 164, 39 I.C. 582 (584). Therefore, where a prior mortgagee by conditional sale, after having foreclosed his mortgage, transferred the right, title and interest thus acquired to a third person, it was held that the transfer was made not by a 'mortgagee' but by a person who had foreclosed the mortgage and had thus become the owner of the property; and therefore this Article could not apply—Munna Lal v. Munun Lal, 36 All. 327 (328).

The purchaser of the mortgagee's interest at an auction-sale is a mortgagee for the purposes of this Article—Kannusami v. Muthusami, 5 L.W. 250, 1917 M.W.N. 5, 38 I.C. 194; Ghasi Ram v. Krishna, 13 A.L.J. 877, 30 I.C. 564.

The term "mortgagee" used in this Article is not confined to the original mortgagee and it includes the heirs of the mortgagee. It also includes a transferee of the mortgagee rights as well, and, the term includes the persons covered by the same term in Article 148—Ram Charan v. Bhagwan Dei, A.I.R. 1955 All. 339.

A co-mortgagor who redeemed the entire mortgaged property was treated as a mere charge-holder under sec. 95 of the Transfer of Property Act before it was amended in 1929, and not as a 'mortgagee'; consequently a transfer by such person did not fall under this Article—Jai Kishan v. Budhanand, 38 All. 138 (145)). But this ruling will no longer hold good, because under secs. 92 and 95 of the Transfer of Property Act as amended in 1929, the redeeming co-mortgagor has got all the rights of a mortgagee.

563. Nature of the interest tansferred:—The question to be determined under this Article is as to what the transferee intended to purchase and what the transferor intended to transfer. The real test would be, did the transferee ask for and obtain an absolute right in the property and believe himself that he was having an absolute interest in it—Muthaya v. Kanthappa, 34 M.L.J. 431, 45 I.C. 975. The question whether the transferee from a mortgagee took an absolute interest or only a mortgage-interest is a question of intention—Ibid; Lakshmana v. Sankara Pandiam, 51 M.L.J. 451, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 311, 93 I.C. 276. For the purpose of finding out what was the intention of the parties extraneous evidence including the knowledge of the parties can be taken into consideration—Suleman v. Pida Husain, A.I.R. 1945 Oudh 258, 1945 O.W.N. 182.

In order to make this Article applicable, the transferee should take a transfer of an absolute and not of a restricted title. If the transferee does not profess or intend to take the transfer of an absolute interest or anything more than the qualified interest which he transferor is competent to alienate, there is no occasion for this Article to apply—Ramkanai v. Sri Sri Hari Narain, 2 C.L.J. 546. This Article is intended to protect a transferee who had reasonable grounds for believing that his transferor had the power to convey and did convey an absolute interest. This Article applies where the transferee is a person who takes the transfer under the representation made to him and in the belief that it is an absolute title which he is taking—Husaini v. Husain, 29 All. 471; Ram Piari v. Budhu Sen, 43 All. 164 (167); Taluqdari Settlement Officer v. Akuji Abhram, 46 Bom. 993, 24 Bom.L.R. 762, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 350, 68 I.C. 487; Manavikraman v. Ammu, 24 Mad. 471 (F.B.); Muthu v. Kambalinga, 12 Mad. 316 (318); Keshav v. Gafurkhan, 46 Bom. 903 (906); Pandu v. Vithu, 19 Bom. 140 (144); Radhanath v. Gisborne, 14 M.I.A. 1; Mahabir v. Sheoraj, 9 O.C. 373; Dalal v. Gur Prasad, 12 O.C. 84, 2 I.C. 250; Bhagwan v. Bhagwan, 9 All. 97 (102); Azim v. Mahmud, 124 P.R. 1883. The transfers contemplated by this Article are transfers for value in excess of the limited powers of the trustee or the mortgagee—Narain Das v. Haji Abdur Rahim, 47 Cal. 866 (880). The transfer of a mortgaged property contemplated by this Article is something other than an express transfer of the original mortgage; it is transfer by the mortgagee purporting to transfer a larger interest than that given by the mortgage, or at any rate an interest unencumbered by a mortgage —Skinner v. Naunihal, 51 All. 367 (P.C.), 56 I.A. 192, 27 A.L.J. 566, 33 C.W.N. 761 (767), 117 I.C. 22, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 158; Balabhau v. Rangulal, I.L.R. (1955) Nag. 100, A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 145 (F.B.); Karuppanan v. Daivasigamania, I.L.R. (1954) Mad. 650, (1954) 2 M.L.J. 12; A.I.R. (1954) Mad. 650; Mahadeva v. Rudran, A.I.R. 1954 Trav. Co. 317. Thus, where the defendant's vendor purported to transfer the full ownership when in point of law he had only a mortgagee-right to transfer, the case is governed by Article 134—Rego v. Abbu Beari, 21 Mad. 151; Mirza War Ali Beg v. Danish Ali, 2 O.L.J. 483, 32 I.C. 314. Thus where a usufructuary mortgagee transfers his property alleging himself to be the owner of the property and not merely a mortgagee thereof and the transfer comes to the knowledge of the mortgagor, he is bound to sue within the period mentioned in this Article from the date of knowledge—Narain v. Ram Lalla, A.I.R. 1951 All. 433. But a contrary view has been taken by the Calcutta High Court in Kalidas v. Sushila, 52 C.W.N. 443, A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 461 where it has been held that a simple mortgage executed by a usufructuary mortgagee on the assertion that he is the full owner of the property does not come within this Article.

A purchaser for valuable consideration from a mortgagee by conditional sale, who sold the property as though he were the ostensible owner of it, comes under this Article—Vishnu v. Balaji, 12 Bom. 352 (358). So also, where the trustee of a muth property granted a permanent lease of the property, which he was not competent to do, held that the lessor intended to grant, and the lessee intended to acquire, an interest greater than the transferor was competent to alienate, and all the requirements of Article 134 (now Art. 134A) were complied with—Baluswami v. Venkataswamy, 40 Mad. 745 (751). This Article protects a person who happening to purchase from a mortgagee had reasonable grounds for believing and did believe that his vendor had the power to convey and was conveying to him an absolute interest and not merely the interest of a mortgagee—Bhagwan Sahai v. Bhagwan Din, 9 All. 97. A mortgagee who took a mortgage from a person who was merely a mortgagee of the lands but who mortgaged them as if he were the complete owner, is entitled to the benefit of this Article—Manavikraman v. Ammu, 24 Mad. 471 (483) (F.B.); Husaini v. Husain, 29 All. 471 (479); Bagas Umarji v. Nathabhai, 36 Bom. 146.

So also, where the purchaser at the time of the purchase believes that his transferor is an absolute owner of the property transferred, but finds later on that his transferor was only a mortgagee and not the owner of the property, he is none the less a transferee of an absolute interest, and is entitled to the benefit of this Article—Keshav Raghunath v. Gafurkhan, 46 Bom. 903 (907), 24 Bom. L.R. 319, 67 I.C. 308, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 234. A person who has purchased a right which he honestly believed to be a full properietary right, and which was so described in the sale-deed, can claim the benefit of Art. 134, even though by the exercise of due deligence he might have discovered that his transferor was only a mortgagee, mere constructive notice without actual knowledge not being sufficient to deprive the purchaser of the benefit of this Article—Bijai Partab v. Raghurai, 25 O.C. 115, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 7, 67 I.C. 572.

But this Article does not apply where the mortgagee transfers his interest as such i.e., where the defendants (transferees) claim a transfer of the mortgagee's interest and not of the entire property in the land—Savalaram v. Genu, 18 Bom. 387; Charu Chandra v. Nahush Chandra, 50 Cal. 49 (62), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 1, 36 C.L.J. 36; Mirza Yar Ali Beg. v. Danish Ali, supra; Sri Ram v. Najibullah, 29 O.C. 353 (F.B.), 3 O.W.N. 674, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 547, 97 I.C. 874. Thus, where the mortgagee transfers his mortgagee-rights as such, the transferee stands in no better position than the transferor; consequently, the mortgagor has sixty years under Art. 148 within which to bring a suit for redemption against the person who purchases only the mortgagee-rights from the mortgagee—Drigpal v. Kallu, 37 All. 660 (661); Muthu v. Kambalinga, 12 Mad. 316 (318); Bhagwan Sahai v. Bagwan Din, 9 All. 97 (102); Azim v. Mahamud, 124 P.R. 1883; Ram Pjari v. Budh Sen, 43 All. 164 (167); Vishwanath v. Tukaram, 27 Bom.L.R. 661, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 417, 89 I.C. 189; Tairamiya v. Shibelisaheb, 44 Bom. 614 (618); Gomti Mistra v. Deota Din, 26 O.C. 197, 77 I.C. 737, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 44; Ma Myat Gyi v. Ma Ma Nyam, 2 Rang. 561 (566). Where both the transferor and the transferee knew that the transferor was unable to confer a higher right than that of a sub-mortgagee on the transferee, and neither the transferor nor the tran-feree honestly believed that the full ownership was being passed, the mere insertion of some words in the document which might be construed as if they were the words of a person possessing such right as would enable him to pass a title of full owner to his transferee, while the consideration was the consideration of a mortgage and not of sale, did not confer full ownership on the transferee. Under these circumstances, it cannot be maintained that there was an animus to pass anything more than an assignment of the mortgagee-rights which were vested in the transferor—Lakshamana v. Sankarapandiam, 51 M.L.J. 451, 93 I.C. 276, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 311.

In order to get the benefit of this Article, the onus lies on the transferee to shew that he is transferee of an absolute title and not merely of the mortgagee's rights in the property—Vythilingam v. Kuthisavattah, 29 Mad. 501; Veerabadra v. Veerappa, 15 I C. 609 (610). If on the other hand, the title adduced by the vendor and the deed of transfer to the purchaser are consistent with an intention to transfer an absolute interest, the burden will lie upon the plaintiff to show that the circumstances of the transfer negative such an intention—Muthaya v. Kanthappa, 34 M.L.J. 431, 45 I.C. 975; Suleman v. Pida Husain, A.I.R. 1945 Oudh 258, 1945 O.W.N. 182. Where the question whether the mortgagee was transferring a mortgagee-interest or an absolute interest finds no answer from the wording of the deed itself, it would be a natural presumption that what he transferreed was the right which he possessed, namely the mortgagee's right—Puttu Lal v. Ram Chandra, 103 I.C. 255, A.I.R. 1927 All. 689.

564. Transfer for valuable consideration:—The expression 'transferred for a valuable consideration in this Article is in contra-distinction to a mere volunteer —Ramkanai v. Sri Sri Hari Narayan, 2 C.L.J. 546; Baikunthanath v. Ahmedulla, 58 Cal. 234, 34 C.W.N. 961 (963); Maluji v. Fakirchand, 22 Bom. 225 (228). If the transferee is not a transferee for valuable consideration, a suit against him is not barred by any length of time by virtue of sec. 10—Chettikulam v. Siranga, 26 M.L.J. 537, 24 I.C. 369. Thus, Article 134 does not apply to a case of gift—Sri Ram v. Matwala, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 219, 71 I.C. 577.

A valuable consideration in the sense of the law may consist either in some right, interest, profit or benefit accruing to the one party or some forbearance, detriment, loss of responsibility given, suffered or undertaken by the other—Currie v. Misa, (1875) L.R. 10 Exch. 153 (162).

A grant of a permanent lease is a transfer for a valuable consideration, the annual rent being the consideration—Rameshwar v. Sri Sri Jiu Thakur, 43 Cal. 34 (43); Baluswamy v. Venkataswamy, 40 Mad. 745 (749); Zafar Ali v. Kishen Chand, 51 I.C. 795, 99 P.R. 1919; Ram Kanai v. Sri Sri Hari Narain, 2 C.L.J. 546; Rama Reddi v. Ranga Dasan, 49 Mad. 543, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 796, 96 I.C. 371. But the Privy Council have laid down that a permanent lease of a trust property is not a transfer for valuable consideration—Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami, 44 Mad. 831 (854) (P.C.), followed in Lakshminarayana v. Rajamma, 21 L.W. 256, 95 I.C. 1002, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 796. A gift of a portion of the temple property to the defendants in consideration of their performing some recurrent religious services at the temple, is a transfer for a valuable consideration within the meaning of this Article—Ramacharya v. Shrinivasachurya, 20 Bom.L.R. 441, 46 I.C. 19 (20).

Good faith—Notice:—In order to make this Article applicable, it is not necessary that the purchaser should show that he purchased bona fide, in the sense of being without notice of the restricted nature of the transferor's title. This Article applies even though the alienee for value from a trustee or mortgagee takes the property with full knowledge that the alienor is acting in excess of his power—Fazal Din v. Mohomed Hafiz, 32 P.L.R. 17, 130 I.C. 780, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 129; Panu v. Vithu, 19 Bom. 140

(144); Yesu Ramji v. Balkrishna, 15 Bom. 583 (585); Hargian v. Baldeo, 127 P.R. 1908 (F.B.); Venku v. Ramachandrayya, 49 Mad. 29, 49 M.L.J. 634, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 81, 92 I.C. 342; Kannuswami v. Muthuswami, 5 L.W. 250, 1917 M.W.N. 5, 38 I.C. 194; Raghunandan v. Mahadeo, 9 O.W.N. 835, 140 I.C. 182, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 38. If he is a purchaser for value, and takes a transfer of an absolute interest, that is sufficient to bring the case under this Article. The fact that he knew that his vendor was selling more than he was competent to transfer does not take the case out of this Article. The material point is not what the transferee knows but what he takes. Knowledge of the limited nature of the transferor's title will not disentitle the transferee from taking advantage of this Article though it may be an important piece of evidence in determining what interest the transferee took—Baluswami v. Venkataswami, 40 Mad. 745 (750); Muthaya v. Kanthappa, 34 M.L.J. 431, 45 I.C. 975. Where a deed of transfer was a sale-deed and what was bargained by the transferee was also an absolute sale, and the consideration that was paid by him was full price for sale, Article 134 would apply, even though he knew that his transferor had only a mortgagee-interest —Venku v. Ramachandrayya, supra. The fact that the transferee had notice that her vendor was selling to her a debuttor property (now falling under Art. 134A), would not preclude her from being regarded as a purchaser for valuable consideration— Shama Charan v. Abhiram Goswami, 33 Cal. 511. This Article refers to purchasers from a trustee for valuable consideration and is not restricted to purchaser in good faith. When the Limitation Act of 1871 was replaced by the Act of 1877, the Legislature omitted the words "in good faith" and the conclusion is irresistible that this alteration was made designedly with a view to protect a purchaser for valuable consideration whether such purchaser had or had not notice of the trust or mortgage at the time of transfer—Ramkanai v. Sri Sri Hari Narain, 2 C.L.J. 546 (552), 38 Cal. 526 (531); Baikunthanath v. Ahmedulla, 58 Cal 234, 34 C.W.N. 961 (964), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 113; Subbaya v. Mahammad Mustapha, 32 M.L.J. 85, 40 I.C. 50; Keshav v. Gafurkhan, 46 Bom. 903 (907), 67 I.C. 308; Venku v. Ramachandrayya, 49 Mad. 29, 49 M.L.J. 634, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 81; Narain Das v. Haji Abdur Rahim, 47 Cal. 866 (878), 24 C.W.N. 690; Dal Singh v. Gur Prasad, 12 O.C. 84, 2 I.C. 250; Sri Ram v. Najibullah, 3 O.W.N. 674 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 547, 29 O.C. 353, 1 Luck. 423; Mt. Chunai v. Ram Prasad, A.I.R. 1951 All. 167 (F.B.) Khedi v. Murad 200 I.C. 732, A.I.R. 1942 Pesh. 39. The mortgagee may be dishonest; the purchaser may not make any enquiry as to his vendor's title; the mortgagor may be ignorant of the sale of his property by the mortgagee; but these facts no longer affect the rights of the purchaser who has given valuable consideration. Article 134 of the Limitation Act of 1871 required good faith on his part. That condition was however removed by the Act of 1877 and is not reimposed by the Act of 1908—Keshav Raghunath v. Gafurkhan, 46 Bom. 903 (908), 67 I.C. 308, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 234; Baiva Khan v. Bhiki, 9 Bom. 475; Balabhau v. Rangulal, I.L.R. (1955) Nag. 100, A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 145 (F.B.). In this respect a transfer by a trustee stands on the same footing as a transfer by the mortgagee—Baikuntha v. Ahmedulla, supra.

But the Allahabad High Court dissents from this view and holds that the omission of the words "in good faith" makes no difference in the law from what it stood under the Act of 1871; that the omission of those words from the Act of 1877 and 1908 is merely due to the fact that the words were considered not altogether appropriate and that their retention would throw the onus on the transferee of proving that he had no knowledge of his vendor's title which would be in many cases a hardship upon him after the lapse of many years; and that a suit against a transferee who purchases with knowledge that his vendor's title is merely that of mortgagee does not fall under this Article—Drigpal v. Kalu, 37 All. 660 (661, 662); Bhagwan Sahai v. Bhagwan Din, 9 All. 97 (104): Abdulla v. Shamsul, 18 A.L.J. 969, 58 I.C.

833 (835); Ghasi Ram v. Kishna, 13 A.L.J. 877, 30 I.C. 564 (565). These decisions have been overruled by the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in Mt. Chunai v. Ram Prasad, A I.R. 1951 All. 167 (F.B.). This Full Bench decision has been followed in Manmohan Dass v. Shaikh Bahab Uddin, A.I.R. 1957 All. 740. The Bombay High Court has recently held that Article 134 does not apply to a suit by a mortgagor to recover possession from his mortgagee's transferee who had even constructive notice of the mortgage—Viswanath v. Tukaram, 27 Bom.L.R. 661, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 417, 89 I C. 189 (distinguishing Keshav v. Gafurkhan, 46 Bom. 903 on the ground that in that case the purchaser from the mortgage became aware of the real title of the mortgagee several months after his purchase, and not at the time of his purchase). The Lahore High Court is now of opinion that Art. 134 applies only to bona fide purchasers, and that in case of other purchasers Article 148 applies—Zaman Ali v. Rura, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 676, 96 I.C. 886; on appeal Mehnga v. Zaman Ali, 32 P L.R. 359, 132 I.C. 184, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 464; Wazir Chand v. Nathu Ram, A.I R. 1924 Lah. 468, 6 Lah.L.J. 151, 80 I.C. 321; Sri Ram v. Matwala, 71 I.C. 577, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 219. A purchaser from a mortgagee by conditional sale who does not enquire as to whether the mortgagee had acquired full proprietary right by proceeding under Reg. XVII of 1806 is not a bona fide purchaser—Zaman Ali v. Rura, supra. The Sind Court takes the same view in Suleman v. Essoo, 91 I.C. 87, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 145.

The Oudh Court has laid down (following the Calcutta High Court ruling of 47 Cal. 866) that under the present Article the transferee without notice and the transferee with notice are on the same footing—Sri Ram v. Najibullah, 3 O.W.N. 674 (F.B.), 97 I.C. 874, 1 Luck. 423, 29 O.C. 353, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 547. This case overrules Bijai Partab v. Rughuraj, 25 O.C. 115, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 7, 67 I C. 572, Mahbub Ali v. Md. Husain, 23 O.C. 125, and Comti Misra v. Deota Din, 26 O.C. 197, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 44, 77 I.C. 737.

In those States to which the Indian Trusts Act applies, a transfer by a trustee does not stand on the same footing as a transfer by a mortgagee, on the question of good faith and notice. If the transferee has acquired the property from a trustee in good faith and for valuable consideration, without having a notice of the trust, he acquires an immediate title to the property under sec. 64 of the Indian Trusts Act, but if he has not acted in good faith but has paid valuable consideration, he acquires a good title after the lapse of the period of 12 years necessary for extinguishing the right of the beneficiary to follow the trust property in his hands—Gomti Misra v. Deota Din, 26 O.C. 197, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 44, 77 I.C. 737.

564A. Plaintiff:—Under sec. 2 (8) of the Act, "Plaintiff" includes any person from or through whom the plaintiff derives his right to sue. Thus, where a trustee executes a lease of the trust property in derogation of the trust and subsequently appoints his successor and the successor files a suit to set aside the lease the word "plaintiff" in the third column of this Article includes the appointer under a deed of trust, and as he was the lessor he must be deemed to have had knowledge of the transfer contemporaneously with the execution of the deed. So a suit by him or his successor to set aside the lease after 12 years from its execution is barred under this Article—Sri Kissen v. Tarachand, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 228, 190 I.C. 405.

565. Suits under this Article:—As a result of the insertion of Arts. 134A and 134B, the scope of the present Article has been much restricted, and it applies only to mortgaged property, and to trust property of a secular character. A suit by the succeeding manager of endowment property to set aside a transfer made by the preceding manager and to recover the trust property is no longer governed by this Article or Art. 144, but falls under Art. 134B.

A suit for joint possession of trust property brought by a trustee against a co-trustee and an alienee of the trust property from the latter is governed by this Article or Art. 144—Shadi v. Abdur Rahman, 1 Lah. 66 (68), 51 I.C. 755.

A suit for redemption of a mortgage with possession, brought against a transferee who has purchased from the mortgagee for value and in belief that it is not a mortgage but an absolute title, is essentially a suit to recover possession within the meaning of this Article, although it is framed as a suit for redemption—Lakhmi Das v. Badla, 102 I.C. 135, A.I.R. 1927 All. 807; Balabhan v. Rangulal, I.L.R. (1955) Nag. 100, A I.R. 1955 Nag. 145 (F.B.).

A Hindu reversioner instituted a suit in 1914 to recover possession of certain lands which had been usufructuarily mortgaged by the last male owner in 1866, and had been sold for consideration by the mortgagee in 1900 after the death of the last male owner and during the lifetime of his daughter who had inherited the estate and died in 1906. Held that suit was governed by Article 134 and not 141, and was barred. Article 141 did hot apply as the mortgage had been created not by the female owner (daughter) herself but by the last male owner—Sesha Naidu v. Periasami, 44 Mad. 951 (958), 41 M.L.J. 163, 68 I C. 734. But where a mortgage was executed by a person who had only a life-interest in the property, and the mortgagee sold the property as absolute owner, and then after the death of the life-interest holder, the remainderman brought a suit for redemption and possession, held that the suit did not fall under Art. 134, as the original mortgagee was a mortgagee of a limited title only. Had the mortgagor an absolute title at the time when the mortgagee purported to convey the property as absolute owner, the case would have been brought within Art. 134. The suit fell under Art. 148—Skinner v. Naunihal, 51 All. 367 (P.C.), 33 C.W.N. 761 (768), A I.R. 1929 P.C. 158, 117 I.C. 22 (reversing Naunihal v. Skinner, 47 All. 803).

This Article applies to a suit against the transferee of the mortgagee. If the mortgaged property is sold by the mortgagee but is repurchased by him from the person to whom he had sold it, the mortgagor can redeem the property from him within the period prescribed by Article 148; Article 134 cannot apply, because he is not a transferee of the mortgagee but is the mortgagee himself; nor can he be treated as an innocent transferee without notice—Kalu Devba v. Rupchand, 44 Bom. 848 (851), 22 Bom.L R. 932, 58 I.C. 39.

566. Starting point of limitation:—Where the transferee took possession not at the date of transfer, but at some subsequent time, the Calcutta High Court held that limitation ran from the date of transfer and not from the time when the transferee took possession of the property—Narain Das v. Haji Abdur Rahim, 47 Cal. 866 (882). But according to the Madras High Court, time ran not from the date of transfer but from the date when the transferee subsequently took possession under the transfer—Seeti Kutti v. Kunhi Pathumma, 40 Mad. 1040 (1054) (F.B.). See Note 561, under sub-heading Transfer with possession.

Neither of these views will now prevail in view of the amendment of the third column, under which the date when the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff is now fixed as the starting point of limitation. The reason of the amendment is thus stated:—"We consider on the whole that the date when the plaintiff obtains knowledge of the transfer he seeks to attack is the most suitable date from which limitation should run. If limitation runs from the date of the transfer itself, it is a simple matter for a dishonest trustee and a colluding transferee to conceal the fact of the transfer until the period of limitation has expired. The position is not much improved if the period is made to run from the delivery of possession, for even the fact of possession of the nature to give rise to a cause of action can also be concealed, for instance, land may be given out originally on lease from year to year in the ordinary course of management, and then collusively sold, without any one interested knowing that the vendee's possession is other than that of a lessee from year to year. We therefore recommend that the period should run from the date when the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff"—Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, 1927, Part V, p. 258).

As the period begins to run when the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff, the initial ouns of proving that the suit is within time is on the plaintiff. If neither in the plaint nor at any subsequent stage of the case the plaintiff has ever fixed any date at which he alleges that he came to know of the transfer of the mortgaged property to the defendant, the suit must fail—Raghunandan v. Mahadev, 9 O.W.N. 835, 146 I.C. 182, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 38. The onus initially lies on the plaintiff to prove as to when he came to know of the transfer—Kisadi v. Marad, 200 I.C. 732, A I.R. 1942 Pesh. 39.

Where certain properties were dedicated for religious purpose and on the death of the settlor simple mortgage was executed in respect of those properties by this son, and in 1924 the properties were conveyed to the mortgagee in execution of the mortgage decree, in a suit to recover possession in 1934 it was held that this Article as amended will apply and the starting point will be date of knowledge of transfer and not the date of transfer—Gokuldoss v. Lakshminarasinhalu, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 409, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 920.

567. Effect of bar of limitation:—If a mortgagee in possession claiming to be absolutely entitled to the property mortgages it with possession to the defendant, and the original mortgagor does not bring a suit under this Article to recover possession of the property from the defendant within 12 years, the defendant will acquire the full interest of a mortgagee, and the original mortgagor will not be entitled to redeem the property from the original mortgagee without redeeming the defendant—Bagas Umarji v. Nathabai, 36 Bom. 146, 12 I.C. 737; Taluqdari Settlement Officer v. Akuji, 24 Bom.L.R. 762, A.I R. 1922 Bom. 350. In such a case, Art. 134 coupled with section 28 having given a particular legal validity to the subsequent mortgage (i.e., the mortgage by the mortgagee), the original mortgagor would be barred by Art. 134 from redeeming the property from the original mortgagee alone by disregarding the subsequent mortgage. The subsequent mortgagee has a right to hold it until the debt is paid—Maluji v. Fakirchand, 22 Bom. 225 (229).

When a mortgagee sells the mortgaged property ostensibly as owner and for valuable consideration, and no suit is brought under this Article by the mortgagor, within 12 years, the right of the purchaser becomes unassailable—Keshav v. Gafurkhan, 46 Bom. 903 (908); Krishnaji v. Sadanand, 26 Bom.L.R. 341, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 417, 80 I.C. 763.

134A. To set aside a transfer of immoveable property comprised in a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment, made by a manager thereof for a valuable consideration.	Twelve years.	When the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff.

567A. Articles 134A to 134C:—The question of the applicability of these articles does not arise in a case where at the date of the institution of the suit the amending Act by which Arts. 134A to 134C were inserted in the Limitation Act had not come into force—Dwarkadas v. Rikhi Ram, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 784, 165 I.C. 48.

Suits by persons interested in endowment:—This Article has been added by sec. 3 of the Indian Limitation Amendment Act I of 1929. "It provides for suit by persons interested in the endowment (who would be called beneficiaries if the endowment was a trust) to set aside alienations of the endowment property made by the manager. (Such suits are generally brought under sec. 92, C. P. Code, 1908). In these cases the plaintiff is not entitled to possession, and cannot therefore claim to recover the property but he may sue to have the transfer set aside and for any consequential relief which may be adapted to the circumstances of the case. In the class of cases we propose a new Article 48B for moveable property, and Art. 134A for immoveable property"—Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, 1927, Part V, p. 258).

The word "plaintiff" in the third column of this Article must, in the case of a representative suit brought on behalf of the general body of worshippers or beneficiaries or persons interested in an institution, be understood to refer only to the plaintiff or plaintiffs en nomine on record, and cannot be taken to mean every individual member of the community or body of persons who are represented by the plaintiff or plaintiffs on record—Veerabhodraswami v. Maya, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 920, 1939 M.W.N. 1137, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 81.

Where a wakif has declared that he has entered upon possession as mutwalli, his position becomes that of a trustee and this Article becomes applicable—Mohammod Afzal v. Din Mohammad, I.L.R. (1946) Lah. 300, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 117.

Defence:—In Thakarji v. Khushi Ram, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 752, 178 I.C. 806, it has been held that though a suit by a Hindu idol for injunction alleging transfer to defendant by previous mohunt is governed by this Article as the claim really was for setting aside the transfer, but if the transferee brings a suit for possession against the idol, no period of limitation will run against the idol in his defence.

Prior to the insertion of this Article, it was held that a suit brought under sec. 92, C. P. Code by the disciples of a mutt as persons representing the beneficiaries of the mutt or as persons interested in the mutt for the cancellation of an improper alienation made by the mohunt of the mutt property, and for its restoration to the mutt, was governed by Article 134 or 144—Chidambaranatha v. Nallasiva, 41 Mad. 124 (129), 33 M.L.J. 357, 42 I.C. 366; Periyanan v. Govinda, 62 M.L.J. 496, 137 I.C. 487, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 328 (333). Similarly a suit brought under sec. 92, C. P. Code, for the dismisal of a mohunt and for recovery of the property of the idol from the hands of a third party to whom the same had been improperly alienated, with a prayer that the property should be delivered to the possession and custody of the person who would be appointed mohunt, was held to be governed by Article 134—Sajedur Raja v. Gour Mohun, 24 Cal. 418 (429). These cases would now fall under the present Article.

Object:—The object of this Article is to give additional protection to the beneficiaries of an endowment in cases where the successors of the alienating manager may fail through neglect or collusion to bring a suit to impeach the alienation (under Art. 134B). If, however, the successors of the alienating manager have allowed the suit under Art. 134B to become barred, a suit brought under Art. 134A by the beneficiaries to set aside the alienation would be infructuous, by the operatin of sec. 28. (Read the Minute of Dissent in Gazette of India, 1928, Part V, pp. 89-90).

Starting point:—In order to bring a case within the mischief of this Article, it is not enough that any one of the family of the plaintiff must have known of the alienation. What the Article contemplates is the actual knowledge of the person himself who goes to court as plaintiff—Jagannath v. Bhagaban, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 255. As limitation begins to run from the time when the transfer becomes known to the plaintiff the initial onus of proving that his suit is within time is on the plaintiff. If neither in the plaint nor at any subsequent stage of the case the plaintiff has ever fixed any date on which he alleges that he came to know of the transfer to the defendant, the suit must fail on the account—Thakarji v. Khushi Ram, supra.

567B. Applicability:—This Article has been inserted by sec. 3 of the Indian Limitation Amendment Act (I of 1929). It contemplates a suit by the present manager of an endowment property (immoveable) attacking an alienation made by a predecessor. If the property is moveable, Art. 134C applies.

The suit contemplated by this Article was formerly held to be governed by Article 134—Dattagiri v. Dattatraya, 27 Bom. 363 (369); Sagun Balkrishna v. Kaji Hushen, 27 Bom. 500 (513); Nilmoney v. Jagabandhu, 23 Cal. 536 (544); Behari v. Muhammad, 20 All. 482 (F.B.); Narayan v. Sri Ram Chandra, 27 Bom. 373 (377); Manmatha v. Annada, 27 C.L.J. 201, 44 I.C. 567; Narain Das v. Haji Abdur Rahim, 47 Cal. 866; Iswar Sham Chand v. Ram Kanai, 38 Cal. 526 (P.C.). But the Privy Council held that Art. 144, and not 134, applied—Ram Charan v. Naurangilal, 12 Pat. 251 (P.C.), 37 C.W.N. 541 (543), A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 75, 142 I.C. 214. This authoritative decision would govern the suits already instituted before the Amendment of 1929.

567C. Amending Act I of 1929,—if retrospective in operation:—The Indian Limitation Act was amended by Act I of 1929 by inserting a new paragraph in sec. 10 of the Act, and four new Articles in Schedule I to the Act, viz., 48B, 134A, 134B and 134C. The Act came into force on 1st January, 1929.

Sir D. F. Mulla, in his Hindu Law, says that the Amending Act I of 1929 can apply only to transfers made on or after 1st January, 1929 (Art. 426). It is submitted, with respect, that the law of limitation applicable to a suit or proceeding is the law in force at the date of the institution of the suit or proceeding unless there is distinct provision to the contrary—Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 35 All. 227, 11 A.L.J. 389, 40 I.A. 74, 19 I.C. 291. Arts. 134A and 134B speak of 'transfer.' There is no qualifying word in either of these Articles to suggest that this transfer must be after Act I of 1929 came into force. It follows, therefore, that the Amending Act applies not only to transfers made after 1st January, 1929, but to transfers made before that date, where the suit has been instituted after 1st January, 1929—Abdul Qadir Shah v. Sirajuddin, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 9, 169 I.C. 732, 39 P.L.R. 222; Sri Raghunath Jieu v. Ganga Gobinda, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 305, 41 C.W.N. 693. But the Amending Act I does not apply to actions pending at the time of the amendment—Alla Rakhi v. Md. Abdur Rahim, 56 All. 111, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 77, 61 I.A. 50, 147 I.C. 887; Dwarkadas v. Rikhi Ram, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 784, 165 I.C. 43.

It seems also that where the application of the Amending Act has the effect of confiscating any vested right of the plaintiff the Amending Act should not be construed as being applicable to such a case. See Gopeshwar v. Jiban Chandra, 41 Cal. 1125 (S.B.); Sri Ragnunath Jieu v. Ganga Gobinda, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 305; Manijhoori Bibi v. Akel Mahumed, 17 C.W.N. 889.

567D. Transfers by the manager of Religious or Charitable endowment:—According to the well settled law of India (apart from the question of necessity) a mahant or the head of a mutt (or the manager or dharmakarta of a temple, or the sebait of a family idol) is incompetent to create any interest in respect of the muth (or debutter) property to endure beyond his life. In other words, 'a mahant has power (apart from any question of necessity) to create an interest in property appertaining the muth which will continue during his own life, or to put it perhaps more accurately, which will continue during his tenure of office of mahant of the muth with the result that adverse possession of the particular property will only commence when the mahant who had disposed of it ceases to be mahant by death or otherwise'. Whether the disposition by the mahant purports to be a grant of a permanent lease, or it purports to be an absolute grant of the property the position is the same. In each case the transfer is a voidable transaction, and the operation of the purported grant is effective and endures only for the period during which the mahant had power to create an interest in the property of the muth. Thus, 'whatever the intended duration of the attempted grant may be, it is good, but good only for the limited period indicated.' And in either case a suit to recover possession of the debottur property is governed by Art. 144 of the Limitation Act, and such a suit must be brought within 12 years from the date when the alienor ceases to be the mahant by death or otherwise (e.g., resignation or removal)—Mahomed v. Ganapati, 13 Mad. 277; Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami, 44 Mad. 831, 48 I.A. 302, 26 C.W.N. 537; Subbaiya v. Mustapha, 50 I.A. 295, A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 175, 28 C.W.N. 493; Ramcharan v. Naurangi Lal, 12 Pat. 251, 60 I.A. 124, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 75, 37 C.W.N. 541, 142 I.C. 214; Mahedeo Prasad v. Karia Bharati, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 44, 62 I.A. 47, 57 All. 159, 153 I.C. 1100, 39 C.W.N. 433, 61 C.L.J. 122, 68 M.L.J. 499, 37 Bom.L.R. 333; Ponnambala v. Periyanan Chetty, 59 Mad. 809, 63 I.A. 261, A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 183, 162 I.C. 465, 40 C.W.N. 901.

N.B.—The principles of Vidya Varuthi's case have been applied to Mahomedan Religious endowment in several cases, e.g., Alla Rakhi v. Shah Mohammad, 56 All. 111, 61 I.A. 50, 147 I.C. 887, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 77; Hamidmiya v. Nagindas, 57 Bom. 709, 35 Bom.L.R. 252, 148 I.C. 385.

The fact that while selling wakf property the manager described it as his private property, would not take the case out of the purview of this Article. The relevant words are "transfer by a previous manager" and to hold that if the manager while making the transfer denies that the priperty is wakf the article cannot apply, would be to read in the Article words like "manager as such" which do not exist there—Ramlal v. Khushi, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 233; See also Lakshminarayana v. Kashuri, I.L.R. (1947) Mad. 253, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 123, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 3. The Calcutta High Court has held that if the manager alienates the particular items of endowed property as his own, the alienation is void ab initio and in such a case the possession of the transferee becomes unlawful from the beginning—Hemanta Kumari v. Iswar Sridhar Jew, 50 C.W.N. 629. See also Iswar Kalimata v. Bijni Raj Court of Wards Estate, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 387.

(1) Sale:—Thus when the transfer challenged is an out and out grant of the property (e.g., a sale) the period of limitation for a suit to recover the property is 12 years under Art. 144, Limitation Act. And the starting point of limitation is the date when the mahant ceases to be mahant by death or otherwise—Ramcharan Das v. Naurangilal, 12 Pat. 251, 60 I.A. 124, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 75, 142 I.C. 214, 37 C.W.N. 541; Mahadeo Prasad v. Kania Bharati, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 44, 57 All. 159, 62 I.A. 47, 39 C.W.N. 433. Such a suit is now governed by Art. 134A or 134B. But the Amending Act I of 1929 has not effected in this respect any change in principle. A suit by the present manager of an endowment property (immoveable) to recover possession of the property comprised in the endowment (attacking the transfer made by a previous manager) must now also be brought under Art. 134B within 12 years from the death, resignation, or removal of the transferor; otherwise such a suit will be barred—Partap v. Iswar Gopal Jew. 48 C.W.N. 172, A.I.R. 1944 Cal. 211.

(2) Assignment of muth and its properties:—But when the assignment or disposition is not merely of an item of the property as in (1), but is of the muth as well as its properties, the assignment or disposition is void, and will pass no title, with the result that the possession of the assignee is perforce adverse from the moment of the attempted assignment, and the cause of action for the suit arises on the date of the transaction. The suit for recovery of possession must be brought under Art. 144, Limitation Act, within 12 years of the date of assignment. In other words, time runs, not from the date of death, or resignation, or removal of the transferor, but from the date of the alienation—Damodar Das v. Lakhan Das, 37 I.A. 147, 14 C.W.N. 889, 37 Cal. 885; Ramcharan Das v. Naurangilal, 12 Pat. 251, 60 I.A. 124, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 75, 142 I.C. 214, 37 C.W.N. 541; Mahadeo Prasad v. Karia Bharthi, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 44, 57 All. 159, 62 I.A. 47, 39 C.W.N. 433; Ponnambala v. Periyanan Chetti, 59 Mad. 809, 63 I.A. 261, A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 183, 162 I.C. 465, 40 C.W.N. 901. So also where properties are made inalienable and impartible by Government Rules and the property is alienated by the holder thereof, the alienation is void ab initio and the cause of action arises from the date of the alienation—Naransinghji v. Madhao, 44 Bom.L.R. 146, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 138, 200 I.C. 889. This is so also in the case of alienation of property charged with service in a temple—Adinarayan v. Sirangachariar, 1940 M.W.N. 404, 51 L.W. 666.

The distinction between cases contemplated by (1) and those falling under (2) lies in this that in the latter the transaction in question being void, the possession is adverse ab initio, whereas in the former case, it being a voidable one, adverse possession begins only from the time when the alienor ceases to be the manager of the institution by death or otherwise. And although in either case the period of limitation for bringing a suit for recovery of possession is 12 years, the starting point of limitation is not the same in both the cases. In (2) limitation runs from the date of the transaction, whereas in (1) it runs from the death, resignation or removal of the transferor—Hemanta Kumari v. Iswar Sridhar Jew, 50 C.W.N. 629 where it has been held that an alienation is void when the manager acts in negation of the trust. See also Lakshmana Pillai v. Emakalaperumal Nadar, A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 399, (1956) 2 M.L.J. 109.

The Amending Act has not effected any change in this respect. And such a suit is still governed by Art. 144, Limitation Act.

(3) Execution sale:—So also, when the disposition is a sale under an execution decree against the person who was the trustee of the charity, the purchaser's possession is adverse from the date of the sale. And under Art, 144, Limitation Act, a suit for recovery of possession brought more than 12 years from the date of the sale is barred by limitation—Subbayya Pandaram v. Md. Mustapha, 46 Mad. 751, 50 I.A. 295, 74 I.C. 492. The Amending Act has not effected any change, and even now such a suit is governed by Art. 144, Limitation Act—Ronald Duncan v. Iswar Radha Damodar Jieu, 62 C.L.J. 10, 166 I.C. 859. This case has been dissented from in Hemanta Kumari v. Iswar Sridhar Jew, 50 C.W.N. 629. In a recent case their Lordships of the Judicial Committee have held that to apply the provisions of this Article to execution sales involves a reading of the article which would construe the words "transferred by a previous manager for a valuable consideration" as covering an execution sale under Court process, and the word "transferor" as extending to the judgment-debtor whose land is sold. But such a construction cannot be adopted—Sudarsan v. Ram Kripal, 54 C.W.N. 213, 63 M.L.W. 110, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 44. See also Lakshminarayana v. Kasthuri, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 123, 59 M.L.W. 448, 1946 M.W.N. 529, I.L.R. (1947) Mad. 253, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 3.

(4) Permanent lease:—Apart from question of necessity, when a mohant creates a permanent lease it can under the law endure only for his life-time. The tenancy thus created ends with his life (assuming that the mohant continues during his life to hold that office). Under Art. 144, Limitation Act, within 12 years from the date when the mahant transferring the property ceases to be the mahant by death or otherwise, the succeeding mahant may bring a suit to recover possession of the property. But he is not bound to do so. He may permit the lessee to continue in possession and receive rent from him. What inference should be drawn from this would depend on the facts and circumstances of a particular case. If the proper inference be that the succeeding head of the institution knowing of the infirmity of the lease, accepted rent as payable in respect of a new tenancy which it was in his power to create for the period of his own managership or to create for a shorter period and to continue from time to time, then the possession of the lessee would not be adverse until the death, resignation, or removal of the succeeding head of the institution, and the starting point of limitation of his successor again would be the date of death or resignation or removal of his predecessor—Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami Aiyar, 44 Mad. 831, 48 I.A. 302, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 123, 65 I.C. 161, 26 C.W.N. 537; Ponnambala v. Periyanan Chetti, 59 Mad. 809, 63 I.A. 261, A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 183, 162 I.C. 465, 40 C.W.N. 901. But if the proper inference be that the succeeding head of the institution accepted the rent as payable in respect of a permanent right which it was no longer in the power of his institution to repudiate, the possession under the lease is adverse and after 12 years of such possession it would be no longer open to the manager to eject the lessee (or the sub-lessee under the lessee)—Ponnambala v. Periyanan Chetti, 59 Mad. 809, 63 I.A. 261, A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 183, 162 I.C. 465.

Under Art. 134B, Limitation Act, such a suit for recovery of possession by the present manager must be brought within 12 years from the death, resignation, or removal of the transferor—Sri Raghunath Jieu v. Ganga Gibinda, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 305, 41 C.W.N. 693...

(5) Mortgage:—In Bashashar v. Natha Singh, 1908 P.R. 30 (F.B.), 102 P.L.R. 1908, a case of a mortgage by a preceding mahant,—it was held that the time ran from the date of the plaintiff's appointment as successor to the office of the mahant.

Under Art. 134B, Limitation Act, in all cases of transfer, whether by way of sale, mortgage or permanent lease, the starting point of limitation is the death, resignation or removal of the transferring manager—Bachint Singh v. Ganpat, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 660; even though there is an interval of time between the death, resignation or removal of the previous manager and the election or appointment of the subsequent manager—

Venkateswara v. Venkatesa, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 599, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 644, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 449 (F.B.).

Article 134B has application only to voidable transfers. Transfers which are void all together, where the possession is adverse from the moment of attempted transfer, are governed by Art. 144, Limitation Act. Art. 134B has obviously no application to a case where the transfer in question is valid and binding against the endowment.

567E. Sections 28 and 134B—Extinguishment of right after lapse of statutory period:—When the right of the manager of a Hindu or Muhammadan religious or charitable endowment to recover possession of the endowed property against a transferee of such property by the previous manager of the endowment is barred under Art. 134B, the right of the plaintiff to the property, where the transfer is of full ownership, is extinguished by operation of sec. 28, Limitation Act. When the transfer is by way of mortgage or permanent lease, it becomes binding on the endowment after the lapse of the statutory period—Sri Raghunath Jiew v. Ganga Gobinda, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 305, 41 C.W.N. 693.

567F. Starting point of limitation—'Death, resignation,' etc.:—Under the present Article, time runs neither from the date of transfer nor from the date of plaintiff's succession to office, but from the death, resignation or removal of the transferor, in all cases of transfer, whether by way of sale, mortgage or permanent lease. If the period of limitation is made to start from the date of plaintiff's succession to the office of manager, it is open to the criticism that "as this Article gives each successive manager a right to sue, it really imposes no definite period of limitation, but will lay the successors of a transferee for value open to the risk of a suit perhaps after several generations, after all chances of obtaining evidence have disappeared. We admit the cogency of the criticism, and we propose to put a definite limit of time upon the bringing of suits by managers to set aside transfers made by their predecessors. We propose to take as the starting point the death, resignation or removal of the transferring manager"—Second Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, 1928, Part V, p 87).

In the Privy Council case of Lal Chand v. Ramrup, 5 Pat. 312, 30 C.W.N. 721 (727), 7 P.L.T. 163, 93 I.C. 280, A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 9 (reversing Mohant Ramrup v. Lal Chand, 1 Pat. 475), the Judicial Committee had laid down that time ran from the date of the alienor's death. The same view was taken in a Bombay case—Narayan v. Sri Ramchandra, 27 Bom. 373 (378). These rulings will now stand as good.

It is not the cessation of trusteeship generally that matters for purposes of the application of this Article; it must be cessation by means of the three events referred to in the third column of the article. Where a prior trustee wrongfully alienates all the trust properties, he does not cease to be a trustee. So the period of limitation will start only from the date of the order of appointment of new trustees and formal removal of the prior trustee—Sanyasamma v. Vireswasami,, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 391, 1951 M.W.N. 724, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 171.

Where a mahant is removed from his office by a decree of a Court, the date of removal is the date of the decree and the pendency of an appeal against the decree does not interrupt time running. So a suit filed twelve years after the date of the decree is barred under this Article—Ramsaroop v. Ramrachhya, 24 Pat. 208, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 326, 226 I.C. 60.

'Transfer':—The word "transfer" in Art. 134B is wide enough to include a lease—Sri Raghunath Jiew v. Ganga Gobind, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 305.

134C. By the manager of a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment to recover possession of moveable property comprised in the endowment which has been sold by a previous manager for a valuable consideration.	Twelve years.	The death, resignation or removal of the seller.

This Article has been added by sec. 3 of the Indian Limitation Amendment Act (I of 1929). It comprises suits of the same description as contemplated by Art. 134B, but applies to moveable property, while the preceding Article applies to immoveable property.

135. Suit instituted in a Court not established by Royal Charter by a mortgagee for possession of immoveable property mortgaged.	Twelve years.	When the mortgagor's right to possession determines.

568. Scope:—This Article is not confined to suits against the mortgagor himself, but applies to a suit against a stranger as well. Article 146 which provides for suits for possession by mortgagees in High Courts contains the words "from the mortgagor" but these words are omitted from Article 135. Consequently Article 135 applies to a suit against a person other than the mortgagor—Vyapuri v. Sanamma, 39 Mad. 811 (829). Thus, in Shurnomoyee v. Srinath, 12 Cal. 614 (620), and Srinath v. Khetter, 16 Cal. 693 (P.C.), this Article was applied to a suit against the purchaser from the mortgagor. This Article applies not only where the suit is filed against the mortgagor, but also against a person deriving title from the mortgagor under a prior mortgage—Gokul Prasad v. Sukrul 11 O.L.J. 269, 81 I.C. 241 A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 374. The Punjab Chief Court is of opinion that this Article applies only to a suit brought by a mortgagee against the mortgagor or a person deriving title from the mortgagor. It has no application to a suit for possession by mortgagee against a stranger; to such a suit Art. 142 would apply—Channan v. Mela Ram, 117 P.R. 1919, 50 I.C. 762.

569. Cases:—This Article cannot apply when the mortgagee had got possession after the mortgagor's right to possession determined. Therefore where the mortgagee obtained possession under an usufructuary mortgage, but subsequently lost possession, a suit by the mortgagee to recover possession of the mortgaged property from the mortgagor was not governed by Article 135. In such a case, Article 142 or 144 would apply—Anjuman v. Hisamal, 9 N.L.R. 179, 22 I.C. 65. A mortgagee by conditional sale, who was put into possession but was subsequently wrongfully dispossessed of the mortgaged property, can maintain a suit for possession of the same (Art. 142) though his claim to foreclosure may be barred—Aman v. Azgar, 27 Cal. 185 (187). A suit by a mortgagee for possession of land mortgaged to him by a registered deed which provided that the mortgagee was to hold possession of and cultivate the land, paying the Government revenue, and which also contained a recital that possession had in fact been given though it was never in fact given, was governed by Article 135 and not by Article 113, because it was not a suit to compel the owner of the land to convey a right of possession, as that had already been done, but to obtain possession of the land the right to which had previously been conveyed by the registered deed—Ram Chand v. Gyan Chand, 134 P.R. 1883. A deed of mortgage contained a stipulation that the whole of the mortgage money should be repaid on a certain date, and in default the mortgagee should get possession. Upon default being made, the mortgagee filed a suit for possession. Held that the suit was not one for specific performance, but was governed by Art. 135—Kanhaya Lal v. Mohru, 96 P.R. 1890. Where a mortgage deed contains no provision for possession being taken by the mortgagee, and foreclosure-proceedings taken by the latter under Reg. XVII of 1806 are found to be invalid, the mortgagee does not become entitled to possession and cannot sue for possession; consequently this Article cannot apply—Nilcomol v. Kamini, 20 Cal. 269 (272). Where the mortgaged property is sold in execution of a money decree against the mortgagor without impleading the mortgagee as party either in suit or in execution on account of ignorance of mortgage and subsequently the mortgagee brings a suit on mortgage for sale without impleading the purchaser under money decree sale and in execution of the mortgage decree purchases the property, a suit by him for possession of the property is not governed by this Article but by Art. 144—Jasraj v. Sugrabai, I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 315, A.I.R. 1943 Sind. 242.

570. Starting point of limitation:—Where the mortgagor mortgaged the property with possession but remained in possession inspite of the mortgage, his right to possession determined on the very date of the mortgage, and the mortgagee was at once entitled to possession; the mortgagee must sue for possession under this Article within 12 years from that date; and the fact that the possession of the mortgaged property was taken in the meantime by a prior mortgagee did not stop limitation from running (sec. 9) or entitle the plaintiff to deduct the period during which the prior mortgagee was in possession—Hukum Chand v. Shahab Din, 4 Lah. 90, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 40, 71 I.C. 495.

Under this Article, time begins to run from the day when the mortgagor's right to possession determines, and this clearly means 'when his right to possession, according to the terms of the mortgage deed, determines'. The cause of action in a suit contemplated by this Article is the failure of the mortgagee to get possession when he was first entitled to get possession—Anjuman v. Hisamal, 9 N.L.R. 179, 22 I.C. 65. If the mortgage deed provides that on default in payment of the mortgage-money within the date fixed in the deed, the mortgagee would be entitled to possession, the period of limitation for a suit by the mortgagee for possession runs from the date of default, because the mortgagor's right to possession ceases from that date—Kanhaya v. Mohru, 96 P.R. 1890; Modun Mohan v. Ashad Ally, 10 Cal. 68 (72); Shurnomoyee v. Srinath, 12 Cal. 614 (620). Where a mortgage-deed contained a stipulation that the mortgagor should pay to the mortgagee a certain amount every harvest, and that if any default in the annual payment of interest should occur, the mortgagee would be at liberty either to recover interest independently or to add it to the principal and obtain possession of the land, and it was found that no interest was ever paid, the starting point of limitation was the date of the first default, that being the date when the mortgagor's right to possession determined, and the mere fact that the mortgagee might but did not apply for a personal remedy against the mortgagor was not an impediment either to the starting point or to the running of time—Atra Ram v. Shadi Khan, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 327, 121 I.C. 190.

Where under the terms of a mortgage deed the mortgage money was made payable by certain stated instalments, and it was stipulated that on the mortgagor's failure to pay six such instalments the mortgagee was to be placed in possession of the properties, held that limitation for the mortgagee's suit for possession ran from the date of the mortgagor's failure to pay six instalments—Bishan Lal v. Khushali, 91 P.R. 1908, 4 I.C. 921. Where, however, in such a case, defaults in payment of interest are followed by execution of sarkhats and payment of interest is made by such execution, the starting point of limitation begins from the date of the execution of sarkhats as the right to sue on default is discharged by acceptance of such sarkhats. It is immaterial whether the payment is made in cash or by execution of sarkhats—Sri Newas v. Balashwar, A.I.R. 1950 All. 526 (dissenting from Bishanlal v. Kaushali, 4 I.C. 921, 91 P.R. 1908); Abdullah v. Ishaq Mohammad, 41 P.L.R. 529, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 212. A mortgage deed contained a forfeiture clause whereby the mortgagee might obtain possession of the land in default of payment of the first or subsequent instalments of interest. It was held that the mortgagee had a right to obtain possession as soon as the first default occurred. The fact that any subsequent default also might give him a right of possession was not sufficient to prevent time from running against him—Jaimal v. Ram Rattan, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 993 (994).

Before the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, a mortgagee by conditional sale was entitled to possession after the year of grace, where the proceedings were taken under Reg. XVII of 1806. If the mortgagee brought the suit for possession after twelve years from the expiry of the period of grace, it was held to be barred—Srinath v. Khetter, 16 Cal. 693 (700) (P.C.); Modun Mohun v. Ashad Ally, 10 Cal. 68 (72). Where a mortgage by conditional sale expressly provided that if default should be made in the payment of the mortgage money within the stipulated period, the mortgagee should be entitled to possession without any foreclosure proceedings, and the mortgagor having failed to pay within the date fixed in the mortgage deed, the mortgagee took foreclosure proceedings more than 12 years after the date of default, and then after the expiry of the year of grace he brought a suit for possession, held that the suit was barred because the period of limitation ran not from the expiry of the period of grace, but from the date of default in payment of the mortgage money, that being the date when the mortgagee was entitled to possession under the express stipulation in the mortgage deed—Denonath v. Nursingh Pershad, 22 W.R. 90, 14 B.L.R. 87; Nand Lal v. Goojar, 94 P.R. 1912, 15 I.C. 275; Moman v. Ishri Pershad, 35 P.R. 1899. It should be observed that in these cases the mortgagee took foreclosure proceedings after the period of 12 years had run out (under Article 135) from the date of default and hence the foreclosure proceedings did not give the mortgagee a fresh cause of action. But where the mortgage deed provided that on default of payment of mortgage money within the time fixed, the mortgagee would be entitled to possession, but the mortgagee instead of suing for possession upon default took foreclosure proceedings within 12 years from the date of default, and then after the expiration of the year of grace he brought a suit for possession, held that as the mortgagee completed the foreclosure proceedings before the period of limitation for the suit under Article 135 had run out, he acquired a title as absolute owner, and he had, after the expiry of the period of grace, a fresh period of 12 years within which to bring a suit for possession, and this suit was governed by Article 144 (and not Article 135) because he was suing not as mortgagee but as absolute owner—Ghinaram v. Ram Monarath, 7 C.L.R. 580; Ratan Das v. Guran, 79 P.R. 1918, 45 I.C. 563; Burmamoyee v. Dinobundhoo, 6 Cal. 564; Tekchand v. Sahel Singh, 65 P.R. 1906; Bhandari v. Jusodhan, 90 P.R. 1895 (F.B.). A suit by a mortgagee without possession for possession of the mortgaged property on the basis of ownership is well within time if lodged within 12 years of foreclosure proceedings under Bengal Regulation VII of 1806—Ashan v. Allaudian, 40 P.L.R. 798,

A mortgagee in possession can take out out foreclosure proceedings at any time during the subsistence of his mortgage, provided it permits of foreclosure; consequently, where a usufructuary mortgage is executed in 1881, and the mortgagee has remained in possession ever since the execution of the deed, and then he issues the foreclosure notice in April 1899 under Reg. XVII of 1806 and institutes a suit in 1902 for a declaration that owing to the mortgage being foreclosed he is entitled to hold the land as absolute owner, the suit is not barred (although brought more than 12 years after the date fixed for redemption). Article 135 does not apply, because the suit is not one for possession but one for declaration—Nagar v. Saudagar, 57 P.R. 1908. A mortgage by conditional sale was made in 1866 for a period of six years, and provided that if after six years anything remained due to the mortgagees, they might forthwith enter into possession and realise the principal and interest. There was a provision amongst others that the property would not be transferred by the mortgagor so long as any principal or interest remained due, and that if it was transferred, the mortgagees without waiting for the expiry of the six years might bring a suit for recovery of the principal and interest and might also get possession "by completion of the sale." Nothing was paid by the mortgagor and in 1867 part of the mortgaged property was transferred. Proceedings under section 8 of Reg. XVII of 1806 were not taken by the mortgagees. In 1910, the representatives of the mortgagees instituted a suit for foreclosure. It was held that the cause of action accrued in 1867, and the suit was barred —Bonsgopal v. Sheo Ram, 38 All. 97 (102), 32 I.C. 95. Where the land usufructuarily mortgaged is situated on the bank of a river and is liable to submersion but was out of water at the date of the mortgage, a suit by the mortgagee for possession of the mortgaged property must be brought within 12 years from the date of the mortgage; and the fact that the land became submerged would not stop the period of limitation and revive it when the land afterwards emerged out of water—Barket v. Relu Mal, 26 P.L.R. 729, 92 I.C. 178, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 627.

In case of a usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagor's right to possession determines on the date of the mortgage. If at the time the mortgagor makes the usufructuary mortgage, the property is in the hands of a prior mortgagee, still Article 135 applies to a suit for possession by the usufructuary mortgagee, and time runs from the date of his mortgage. Under Art. 135, it is immaterial whether the possession of the property is held at the time of the usufructuary mortgage by the mortgagor or by a prior mortgagee. As between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, the mortgagor's right to possession ceases when he makes the usufructuary mortgage—Husaini v. Ram Charan, 18 O.C. 280, 32 I.C. 341. But the Punjab Chief Court dissents from this ruling and holds that if a property which is already in the possession of a prior mortgagee is again mortgaged with possession, a suit by the subsequent mortgagee for possession is not maintainable until the prior mortgage is redeemed. Art. 135 distinctly contemplates that the possession is with the mortgagor; limitation under Article 135 for a suit by the puisne mortgagee does not begin to run until the redemption of the first mortgage, and he is entitled to bring his suit for possession within 12 years from the date of redemption—Budha v. Mul Raj, 8 P.W.R. 1919, 48 I.C. 916, dissenting from 18 O.C. 280.

136. By a purchaser at a private sale for possession of immoveable property sold when the	Twelve years.	When the vendor is first entitled to possession.

vendor was out of possession at the date of the sale.

572. Scope:—Article 136 applies to suits brought by purchasers against third persons in possession of the land—Lakshman v. Bishansingh, 15 Bom. 261 (264); Gajadhar v. Ram Lakshan, 5 I.C. 273 (All.).

Where a vendor was at the time of sale out of possession, and subsequently recovered possession, a suit by the vendee to recover possession from the vendor would be governed by Art. 144, and not by this Article, and time runs from the date of the vendor's recovery of possession and not from the date when the vendor was originally dispossessed—Ram Prasad v. Lakhi Narain, 12 Cal. 197 (199); Syed Nyamtula v. Nana, 13 Bom. 424 (428). In Sheo Prosad v. Udai, 2 All. 718, it was held that either Article 136 or Article 144 might apply.

This Article applies when the vendor is out of possession at the date of sale; if the vendor is in possession at the date of sale, such possession is adverse to the purchaser; and a suit by the latter to recover possession is governed by Art. 144 and must be brought within 12 years from the date of sale—Syed Nyamtula v. Nana, 13 Bom. 424 (428).

This Article cannot apply where the vendor is not entitled to possession, i.e. where the vendor's right to possession has become time-barred. Thus, where an order under sec. 335 C.P. Code 1882 has been passed against the vendor, and he has not sued for possession of the property within the period of one year prescribed by Article 11A, and then he sells the property to the plaintiff, a suit by the plaintiff to recover the property does not fall under Article 136. This Article applies to cases in which a time has arrived when the plaintiff can assert that his vendor has become entitled to possession, and that assertion it is impossible for the plaintiff to make as long as an order under sec. 335 C.P. Code is in operation declaring that the vendor is not entitled to possession. In such a case, the plaintiff cannot evade the obstacle of Article 11A by having recourse to Article 136, as if that obstacle did not exist—Mahadev v. Babi, 26 Bom. 730 (735).

573. Vendor:—The expression 'vendor' means a vendor other than the auction-purchaser mentioned in Art. 138. In other words, this Article does not apply to a suit brought by a purchaser from an auction-purchaser who was out of possession at the date of sale, the property being in the possession in the judgment-debtor. To such a suit Article 138 would apply, because the word 'auction-purchaser' in that Article includes a purchaser from an auction-purchaser—Sati Prasad v. Jogesh, 31 Cal. 681 F.B. (over-ruling Mohima v. Nabin, 23 Cal. 49).

Where there have been transfers by successive vendors, who have all been out of possession, this Article may well be construed so as to include in the term 'vendor' the first of the series of vendors who was entitled to sue for possession—Abbas v. Masabdi, 24 I.C. 216 (Cal.).

Out of possession:—The expression 'out of possession' implies that some person is in possession adversely to the vendor—some person holding in a character incompatible with the idea that the ownership remained vested in the vendor—Chintamoni v. Hriday, 29 C.L.J. 241, 51 I.C. 123; Ganpat v. Ganpat, 2 N.L.R. 32; and the word 'possession' contemplates not only actual possession but also includes such possession as a member of a joint family is presumed to have in the family property until excluded therefrom—Venkayya v. Rama Krishnamma, (1911) 2 M.W.N. 175, 9 M.L.J.

397, 9 I.C. 495. Therefore, where the vendor sold to the plaintiff a share in a tank which she held jointly with other co-sharers, the mere fact that on some occasions the co-sharers caught fish in the tank and appropriated the same entirely for themselves does not prove that the vendor was out of possession. It is incumbent on the co-sharers to establish that they had set up a hostile title and excluded her from possession—Chintamoni v. Hriday, supra. If a property belonging to two tenants-in-common is in the possession of one of them, it does not follow that he is holding adversely to the other tenant-in-common, and that the latter is 'out of possession.' There must be evidence of ouster, that is to say evidence of denial by the tenant in possession of the right of the other tenant to a share in the profits of the property. It does not follow therefore that as soon as a receipt of all the profits by one tenant-in-common commences, the time is running adversely against the other tenant. It is only after continuous enjoyment by one tenant-in-common that a presumption may arise that he has denied the right of the other tenant-in-common to enjoy together with him the property —Shivalingappa v. Satyava, 23 Bom.L.R. 967, 64 I.C. 552, A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 77.

574. Starting point of limitation:—A suit by a reversioner for possession after the death of a Hindu widow falls under Article 141; but a suit by an assignee from the reversioner, who was out of possession at the date of the sale, falls under this Article and not under Art. 141, and must be brought within twelve years from the date of the death of the widow, that being the date when the reversioner was first entitled to possession (under the provision of Article 136)—Godadhar v. Harekrishna, 8 C.W.N. 535 (538). In Ashutosh v. Narendra A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 506, it has been held that a suit by the purchaser from a Hindu entitled to possession is governed by this Article, under which the starting point of limitation is the date "when the vendor is first entitled to possession." But by reason of the combined effect of this Article and Art. 141 he would be precisely in the same position as his vendor and time will begin to run against him from the date of the death of the female.

When a decree is passed declaring a person's right to the property, he is said to be entitled to possession on the date of the decree, and the period of limitation runs from that date—Sheo Prosad v. Udai Singh, 2 All 718.

In a suit by the purchaser of a share in joint family property, of which the vendor was not in possession, the onus lies on the purchaser to shew that his vendor's exclusion from possession was within twelve years before the institution of the suit—Ram Lakhi v. Durga, 11 Cal. 680 (683).

The words in the 3rd column ("when the vendor is first entitled to possession") relate to the beginning of the dispossession referred to in the first column, and the meaning of this Article is that if, supposing no sale had taken place, the vendor's title would have been alive at the time the vendee's suit is brought such suit is not barred; but if on the other hand the vendor had been out of possession for more than 12 years at the date of the vendee's suit, such a suit would be too late; consequently, in the case of a suit contemplated by this Article, when the purchaser succeeds in showing that the exclusion of the vendor from possession took place within 12 years of the institution of his suit, he succeeds in showing that his suit is within time. Thus, if a person (vendor) succeeds to property on his father's death, remains in possession thereof for 20 years, is then ousted by a trespasser, and 2 years after this, sells his rights, it cannot be contended in a suit brought by the vendee against the trespasser that in as much as the plaintiff's vendor was first entitled to possession on his father's death 22 years before, the suit is out of time. The period of limitation ran from the time when the dispossession began, i.e., two years before, when the vendor was first entitled to recover possession from the trespasser—Pratap Chand v. Sayida, 23 All. 445 (455).

Onus of Proof:—It has been held in two cases that where the vendor was out of possession at the date of sale, and the vendee brings a suit for possession against the person in possession, it lies upon the plaintiff to show that his vendor was in possession at some period within 12 years prior to the date of the sale—Deba v. Rohtagi, 28 All. 479 (480); Kashinath v. Sridhar, 16 Bom. 343 (346). (In these cases, Article 142 was applied, and it is not clear from the judgments why Article 136 was not applied). Mr. Rustomji (3rd Edn., p. 534) comments on these cases as follows: "These decisions are not intelligible and it is submitted that the plaintiff ought to go further and show that his vendor was in possession within 12 years of the suit, and not merely that he was in possession within 12 years of the sale. In other words, as was observed in 23 All. 442, the plaintiff-vendee must show that supposing no sale had taken place, the vendor's title would have been alive when the vendee's suit is brought."

575. Suits under this Article:—A suit by a purchaser of the equity of redemption, for possession of the immoveable property, is governed by this Article, and the period begins to run from the date of redemption by the vendor-mortgagor, that being the date on which vendor became entitled to possession—Badri Mal v. Gopal, 130 P.R. 1906.

A suit by a purchaser from a member of a joint Hindu family who is alleged to have been out of possession at the date of sale, falls under Art. 136 and not under Art. 127 —Venkayya v. Ramkrishnamma,, 9 M.L.T. 397, 9 I.C. 495; Ram Lakhi v. Durga Charan, 11 Cal. 680 (682).

A decree directed that A should obtain possession of a house from B, if he paid B a certain sum. B was not paid according to the decree, and A sold such interest as he had in the house to C. C then sued B for recovery of possession of the house on payment of the said sum. Held that the suit fell under this Article and not under Article 144. Further, the decree did not create any mortgage or charge and Article 148 did not apply—Raghunath v. Katki, 32 I.C. 353, 2 O.L.J. 500.

137. Like suit by a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, when the judgment-debtor was out of possession at the date of the sale.	Twelve years.	When the judgment-debtor is first entitled to possession.

576. Scope:—Art. 137 applies to suits brought by auction purchasers against third persons (i.e., persons other than the vendor or judgment-debtor) in possession of the land, in whose favour limitation runs against the purchaser in the same way as it would against the owner with whose right the purchaser is clothed; it does not apply to a suit against the judgment-debtor himself or his representatives—Lakshman v. Bisan Singh, 15 Bom. 261 (264)); Gajadhar v. Ram Lakhan, 5 I.C. 273; Ram Lakhan v. Gajadhar, 33 All. 224 (227), 7 A.L.J. 1184. If however the third person in possession of the land is a person who has no shadow of a title but is a mere trespasser or a stranger in the eye of the law, the suit brought against him by the auction-purchaser falls under Article 144 and not under Article 137, and the period of limitation runs from the time when the person had taken possession of the land—Lakshman v. Bisansing, 15 Bom. 261 (264); Lakshman v. Moru, 16 Bom. 722 (728).

If the judgment-debtor was out of possession at the date of sale, but subsequently recovered possession from the trespasser, a suit by the auction-purchaser against the judgment-debtor for possession is governed by Art. 144 and is not barred if brought within twelve years from the date of such recovery of possession by the judgment-debtor, though more than 12 years after the judgment-debtor had been dispossessed—Ram Lakhan v. Gajadhar, 33 All. 224 (228); Gajadhar v. Ram Lakhan, 5 I.C. 273.

Article 137 does not apply to a suit for possession by a purchaser at a sale held in execution of a mortgage decree. "Under Article 137, the sale contemplated must be taken to be the sale of the interest possessed by the judgment-debtor referred to in that Article. Does the purchaser at a sale held in execution of a mortgage decree obtain merely the interest of the judgment-debtor? The answer is obviously 'no' The interest which the purchaser acquires is certainly more than merely the interest of the judgment-debtor. We would therefore hold that Article 137 does not apply to purchases held in execution of mortagge-decrees"—Sundaram v Thiyagaraja, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 160, 50 M.L.J. 183; Aditya v. Dhirendra, 53 C.W.N. 899, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 92, A.I.R. 1958 Kar. 22 (F.B.).

The expression "out of possession" in Col. 1 of this Article implies that some person is in possession adversely to the judgment debtor, some person holding in a character incompatible with the idea that the ownership remains vested in the judgment debtor—Ningappa v. Danappa, 48 Bom.L.R. 800, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 206. Thus this Article does not apply to the case of a person who steps into the shoes of a co-owner whose co-mortgagors have redeemed his share of the property from a mortgagee. The co-mortgagors on redeeming the property and obtaining possession do not thereby hold it adversely to the non-redeeming purchaser—Ma E Khin v. Mahomed Ali, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 65, 176 I C. 923.

577. Cases:—A sale-deed was executed on the 25th of September 1867 by A in favour of B, but B never entered into possession. On the 14th November 1874, the land was sold in execution of a decree against B. The auction-purchaser brought a suit on the 26th September 1879 for recovery of the land against the original vendor (A). It was held that the suit was barred by limitation under Art. 137, as more than 12 years had elapsed from the time when B became entitled to possession (25th Sept. 1867)—Anand Coomari v. Ali Jamin, 11 Cal. 229 (231).

Where at a partition between the members of a joint Hindu family consisting of father and three sons, the land in dispute was allotted to the father and mother for their life and after their death the land was to be divided among the sons equally, the sons got a vested interest and not a contingent interest in the land. So, if a son mortgaged his interest in that land during the life-time of the parents, the right of the auction-purchaser at a sale held under the mortgage decree to sue for possession accrued under this Article on the date of death of the parents, that being the date on which the son was entitled to possession—Raghunath v. Madhav, 25 Bom.L R. 456, A I.R. 1923 Bom. 415, 76 I.C. 217.

Three undivided brothers (B, R and A) mortgaged their joint property in 1870. In 1875 B's share was sold in execution of a decree against him and was purchased by the plaintiff. In 1877 B and his two brothers sold their property to defendants who at once paid off the mortgage and took possession. In 1890, the plaintiff sued for possession of B's share; it was held that the suit was barred by this Article, because B became entitled to possession of his share in 1877 when the mortgage was paid off by the defendants, and their possession had been since then adverse to the plaintiff—Ganesh v. Ramchandra, 20 Bom. 557 (561).

Where A has obtained a decree against B, and at a sale in execution of that decree has purchased the property himself but has obtained symbolical possession, and then C obtains a decree against A and purchases the property at the sale held in execution of his decree, a suit brought by C to recover the property falls under this Article, because his judgment-debtor (A) who has obtained only symbolical possession is said to be 'out of possession' within the meaning of this Article, the actual possession being with B; and the period of limitation runs when A is entitled to possession,' i.e., when A has obtained symbolical possession—Ram Sumnun v. Genda Lal, 22 C.L.J. 574, 29 I.C. 841 (842). Possession referred to in this Article is actual possession and not constructive or symbolical possession—Venkataswami v. Nawaneetha, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 207, 1943 M.W.N. 147, A I.R. 1943 Mad. 413.

138.	Like suit by a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, when the judgment-debtor was in possession at the date of the sale.	Twelve years.	The date when the sale becomes absolute.

Change:—The words "the date of the sale" in the Act of 1877 have been changed into "the date when the sale becomes absolute."

578. Scope:—If the judgment-debtor is in possession of the property, the purchaser at Court-sale may either make an application under O. 21, rr. 95, 96 for delivery of possession, or he may at his option bring a regular suit for possession. The two remedies are concurrent—Kishori v. Chunder, 14 Cal. 644; Tincourie v. Kishan, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 369. Such a suit falls under this Article, whereas the application is governed by Art. 180. Moreover, the fact that an application has been made and is rejected as being time-barred or on any other ground is no bar to a regular suit for possession under this Article—Sheo Narain v. Nur Muhammad, 29 All. 463; Secru v. Bhagoban, 9 Cal. 602. If, however the judgment debtor was not in possession at the date of sale, this Article does not apply—Pulin v. Bama Charan, 67 C.L.J. 294, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 790, 180 I.C. 215.

This Article only applies to suits in which the auction-purchaser is the plaintiff, and the judgment-debtor or some one claiming through him is the defendant. It does not apply to a suit brought by one auction-purchaser against another auction-purchaser of the same property—Bhagwant v. Bholi, 35 All. 432, 18 I.C. 465 (reversing Bholi v. Bhagwant, 10 A.L.J. 13, 15 I.C. 10). To such a suit Art. 144 applies—Ram Prasad v. Bakshi Bindeshwari, 11 Pat. 165, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 145 (146).

As to whether this Article applies to a decree-holder-purchaser, see Note 581 below.

This Article applies to suits brought against a judgment-debtor or against any person claiming through him and remaining in possession after purchase made by the auction-purchaser. It does not apply where the defendant bases his claim on title and possession as a trespasser, relying upon possession adverse to the judgment-debtor. Article 142 or 144 applies to such a case—Bhikhad Bhunjan v. Upendra, 4 P.L.J. 463 (471); Janoki Nath v. Baikuntha, 27 C.W.N. 259, 36 C.L.J. 140, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 176, 70 I.C. 602. Similarly this Article does not apply where the defendant is a co-tenant of the judgment-debtor, because such co-tenant does not claim through the judgment-debtor—Biswanath v. Rabija, 56 Cal. 616, 33 C.W.N. 46 (47), 117 I.C. 593, A I.R. 1929 Cal. 250.

This Article applies not merely to a suit brought by the auction-purchaser, but also to a suit brought by a person claiming through such auction-purchaser, e.g., a purchaser from the auction-purchaser—Sati Prasad v. Jogesh, 31 Cal. 681 (684) (F.B.) (overruling Mohima v. Nobin, 23 Cal. 49); Arumuga v. Chockalingam, 15 Mad. 331; Pullayya v. Ramayya, 18 Mad. 144; Govind v. Gangaji, 23 Bom. 246; Boologam v. Jagannath, I.L.R. (1955) Mad. 981, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 202.

'In possession':—A property while under attachment in 1891 was usufructuarily mortgaged to the defendant for a period of 5 years. The property was sold in July 1891, and purchased by the plaintiff, who brought a suit in 1918 for redemption. Held that the suit was one for possession and not for redemption. The mortgage being void under sec. 64, C. P. Code, the plaintiff purchased the property free from the mortgage and not subject to the mortgage; i.e., he purchased the property itself and not merely the equity of redemption. Art. 148 therefore did not apply. The suit was really one under Article 138, because the mortgage being void, the judgment debtor must be deemed to have been in possession at the date of the sale, and the plaintiff ought to have brought this suit within 12 years from the date of confirmation of the sale. Even if for argument's sake, the judgment-debtor is deemed to have been out of possession at the date of the sale, and Article 137 is applied, the suit is barred, because it should have been brought within 12 years from 1896, i.e., the expiry of the term of the mortgage, when the judgment-debtor was entitled to possession—Srinivasa v. Vellayan, 51 M.L.J. 143, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 966, 97 I.C. 718.

579. Limitation:—Under the Act of 1877, the period of limitation ran from the "date of sale" which meant the date of actual sale, and not the date of its confirmation—Kishori v. Chunder Nath, 14 Cal. 644; Venkatalingam v. Veerasami, 17 Mad. 89, Govinda v. Gangaji, 23 Bom. 246; Ahamed Kutti v. Rahman, 25 Mad. 99. These cases are no longer good law as under the present Act time runs from the date of confirmation of the sale. Under this Article, limitation for adverse possession against auction purchaser runs from the date of confirmation of sale by court and if no suit is instituted within 12 years of that date his title is extinguished by reason of sec. 28 of the Act—Gobardhan v. Sukhamoy, 83 C.L.J. 373, I.L.R. (1949) 1 Cal. 378, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 481.

If the sale took place while the Act of 1877 was in force, but the suit for possession was instituted after the Act of 1908 came into operation, the suit would be governed by the new Act, and time would run from the date of confirmation of the sale and not from the date when the sale actually took place—Bisessar v. Imamuddi, 29 I.C. 833 (Cal.).

If the defendant is a person claiming through the judgment-debtor, he can tack the period of his own possession to the period during which the judgment-debtor had been in possession after the execution sale; and if the whole period exceeds 12 years, the plaintiff's suit will be barred—Namdev v. Rama Chandra, 18 Bom. 37 (40).

580. Effect of symbolical possession:—This Article refers to cases where no possession either actual or symbolical, has been obtained through the Court. In fact, it refers to cases where the auction-purchaser, instead of having recourse to the summary method provided by O. 21, rr. 95 and 96 of obtaining possession through Court, chooses to bring a regular suit for possession. If, however, the auction-purchaser obtains symbolical possession, but is disturbed by the judgment-debtor or his representatives, a subsequent suit for possession does not fall under Art. 138, but is governed by Art. 144, because such a suit is not a suit by him as auction-purchaser but an ordinary suit for possession by an owner on title—Balgobind v. Lila Kuer, 24 Pat.

717; Bireswar v. Sadhiram, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 50; Lakshmi v. Narayana, A.I.R. 1952 Tra.-Co. 86. And as regards the time from which the period of limitation is to run in such suits, it has been held that symbolical possession given by the Court to an auction-purchaser is equivalent to actual possession as against the judgment-debtor, and gives to the purchaser a new starting point of limitation—Jagabandhu v. Ram Chunder, 5 Cal. 584 (588) (F.B.); Hari Mohan v. Baburali, 24 Cal. 715; Radha Krishna v. Ram Bahadur, 16 A.L.J. 33, 22 C.W.N. 330 (P.C.); Janoki Nath v. Baikuntha, 27 C.W.N. 259, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 176, 36 C.L.J. 140; Mangli Prasad v. Debi Din, 19 All. 499 (501); Rajendra v. Bhagawan, 39 All. 460 (462); Narain v. Lalta, 21 All. 269 (271); Ambika Charan v. Madhub, 4 Cal. 870 (876); Joggobundhu v. Purnanand, 16 Cal. 630. Hence, if after the date on which symbolical possession was given to the auction-purchaser, the judgment-debtor continued in possession, his possession became that of a trespasser from that date and gave the execution-purchaser a fresh cause of action, a suit which was governed by Art. 144 and the period should be reckoned from the date of delivery of the symbolical possession. This subject has been fully discussed in Note 621B under Article 144.

581. Section 47, C. P. Code:—If the decree-holder is himself the auction-purchaser of the property in execution of his decree, the question arises whether his claim for possession of the property purchased must be determined by the Court in the execution department under the provisions of sec. 47 C. P. Code, or whether a separate suit is maintainable. It has been held by the Patna High Court that the question relating to the delivery of possession does not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree and does not come under sec. 47 of the C. P. Code; and hence the proper proceeding relating to the delivery of possession is not by way of an application under O. 21 r 95, for which the period of limitation is prescribed by Article 180, but by way of a regular suit, which is governed by Article 138—Shidhar v. Jageshwar, 4 P.L.J. 716 (730, 733), 47 I.C. 844. In other words, this Article applies to a decree-holder purchaser in the same way as it applies to a third party purchaser —Tribeni v. Ram Asray, 10 Pat. 670 (F.B.), 12 P.L.T. 423, 133 I.C. 337, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 241. See also Ram Prasad v. Bakshi Bindeshwari Prasad, 11 Pat. 165, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 145 (146), 13 P.L.T. 121. The same view is taken by the Bombay High Court—Hargovind v. Budar, 48 Bom. 550 (556, 558) (F.B.), 83 I.C. 932, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 429 (overruling Sadashiv v. Narayan, 35 Bom. 452). The Allahabad High Court holds that the decree-holder purchaser may proceed either by an application or by a suit—Bhagwati v. Banwari, 31 All. 82 (F.B.). See also Sheo Narain v. Nur Muhammad, 29 All. 463, where the decree-holder was himself the purchaser and was allowed to bring a suit for possession after the application was barred. The Punjab Chief Court also followed the view of the Allahabad Full Bench, viz., that the remedy by application is concurrent with the remedy by suit—Chotta Ram v. Karman, 8 P.R. 1918, 44 I.C. 169. In Ram Singh v. Abdulla, I.L.R. (1945) Lah. 252, 46 P.L.R. 357, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 402 (F.B.) it has been held that this Article is not limited to stranger auction-purchaser.

But the Madras and Calcutta High Courts are of opinion that proceedings for delivery of possession to the auction-purchaser are proceedings in execution of the decree and fall within the scope of sec. 47 C. P. Code, and that a decree-holder who becomes the auction-purchaser cannot file a separate suit as contemplated by Article 138 but must proceed in execution in accordance with sec. 47; that Article 138 cannot override the provisins of sec. 47, C. P. Code—Kailash v. Gopal, 30 C.W.N. 649 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 798, 95 I.C. 494; Kattayat v. Raman, 26 Mad. 740; Sandhu Taraganar v. Hussain, 28 Mad. 87; Kannam v. Avvulla Haji, 50 Mad. 403, 99 I.C. 677, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 288; Madhusudan v. Gobinda, 27 Cal. 34; Ramnarain v. Bandi, 31 Cal. 737.

"It will not be doing any violence to the language of the article if the word 'purchaser' is limited to a stranger, i.e., to a person who is not party to the decree and who is not a decree-holder"—Per Saad-uddin, A.C.J., in Hukum Chund v. Mir Hassan, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 85.

139. By a landlord to recover possession from a tenant.	Twelve years.	When the tenancy is determined.

582. Scope:—This Article applies where the suit is brought for possession, and where the tenancy has been determined. Where the plaintiff brought a suit not for possession by ejectment of the tenants, but for a declaration that the village in suit did not constitute the permanent thika right of the defendants as erroneously entered in the record of rights, and that it was in the possession of the defendants in temporary thika to be resumed year after year and after service of due notice, held that Article 139 did not apply, because it was not a suit for possession and also because the tenancy had not determined but was still continuing—Tekait Harnarayan v. Darshan Deo, 3 Pat. 403 (407), 6 P.L.T. 315, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 560, 83 I.C. 741.

This Article applies where there was a relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties. But it cannot apply where the defendants were not and never had been the tenants of the plaintiff, and had never paid rent—Gopika Raman v. Atal Singh, 56 Cal. 1003 (P.C.), 33 C.W.N. 463 (464), 114 I.C. 561, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 99.

A person coming into possession under a lease which is invalid or void is not a tenant but a trespasser, and a suit to eject him is governed by Art. 144, and not by this Article—Seshamma v. Chickaya, 25 Mad. 507 (511, 512).

This Article which provides for a suit by a landlord to recover possession from a tenant, and gives 12 years from the determination of the tenancy, refers to suits in respect of tenancies in which the leases have expired, and so have terminated, or in respect of tenancies at will terminable by due notice. It does not refer to a suit by which the plaintiff seeks to recover from the holder of a title permanent in its tenure, as for instance, where the defendants are in possession of the property by virtue of a permanent character not determinable by notice from the plaintiff—Madho Kooery v. Tekait Ram Chunder, 9 Cal. 411 (417). A suit to recover possession from the defendants who claim to hold as permanent mokuraridars is governed by Article 144, and not by Article 139—Ram Rachhya v. Kamakhya Narain, 4 Pat. 139, 6 P.L.T. 12, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 216, 84 I.C. 586.

A suit to recover possession from the representatives of the original tenant after the determination of the tenancy (no fresh tenancy having been created between the landlord and the original tenant's representatives, either expressly or by assent of the landlord after the termination of the tenancy) is governed by this Article and not by Article 144, and is barred if brought more than 12 years after the tenancy expired —Sudalaimutha v. Suppani, 48 M.L.J. 185, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 446, 86 I.C. 938; Subbraveti Ramiah v. Gundula Ramannah, 33 Mad. 260 (261), dissenting from Vadapalli v. Dronamraju, 31 Mad. 163; Jumma v. Madhusoodan, 1941 A.L.J. 327, A.I.R. 1941 All. 306, 195 I.C. 515.

A suit by a landlord to recover possession from a tenant is governed by Art. 139. Article 139 is the specific Article for a suit between landlords and tenants and must be applied to all suits of that nature. Article 144 has no application to such a suit—Lakhamgowda v. Jambhu, A.I.R 1935 Bom. 382, 37 Bom.L.R. 593, 159 I.C. 378. So also a suit based upon title by a landlord against his ex-tenant for recovery of possession is governed by this Article and not by Art. 144—Sidram v. Mallaya, 51 Bom.L.R. 34, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 137 (F.B.).

583. Determination of tenancy:—(As to when a tenancy determines see sec. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act). When the tenant holds the land for a fixed period under a lease, the tenancy determines at the expiration of that period. If, after the expiration of that period, the tenant holds over, without the assent of the landlord, or without payment of rent or without any fresh agreement of tenancy being entered into, such holding over (which in English law is called 'tenancy by sufferance') will not amount to a fresh tenancy. The period of limitation for a suit to recover possession from the tenant will run from the expiry of the period of the lease—Kamtheppa v Seshappa, 22 Bom. 893 (897); Chandra v. Daji Bhau, 24 Bom. 504 (508); Hari Gir v. Kumar Kamakhya Narain, 3 Pat. 534 (540), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 572, 78 I.C. 511 (dissenting from Krishnaji v. Anthaji, 18 Bom. 256); Pusa Mal v. Makdum, 31 All. 514 (518); Ittapan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (163); Vadapalli v. Dronamraju, 31 Mad. 163 (167), (dissenting from Admulam v. Pir Ravutham, 8 Mad. 424); Seshamma v. Chickaya, 25 Mad. 507 (511); Khunni v. Madan Mohan, 31 All. 318 (321); Madan Mohan v. Rameshwar, 7 C.L.J. 615; Umar Baksha v. Baldeo Singh, 97 P.R. 1915, 32 I.C. 35; Debi Prasad v. Gujar, 20 A.L.J. 696, A.I.R. 1922 All. 423, 68 I.C. 750; Bisheshwar v. Kundan, 44 All. 583 (585), A.I.R. 1922 All. 318, 75 I.C. 454; Banwari v. Hussani, 42 P.L.R. 535, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 410; Sitharamiah v. Ramaswami, 46 L.W. 848, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 73, 176 I.C. 84. Where a demise or agreement specifies the term or event upon which the tenancy is to end, on the expiry of that term or upon the happening of that event the tenancy is determined ipso facto—Right v. Dary, 1 T.R. 162; Messenger v. Armstrong, 1 T.R. 54; Cabb v. Stokes, 8 East 358 (361); Wilson v. Abbott, 9 B. & C. 88; Doe v. Inglis, 3 Taunt 54; Doe v. Seyer, 3 Camp. 8; Shivrudrappa v. Balappa, 23 Bom. 283 (286). If the tenants continue in possession thereafter for a period of more than 12 years, without any sort of agreement with the landlord, the landlord's right to recover the land will be barred by Art. 139 of the Limitation Act, the possession of the tenant having become adverse on the expiration of the tenancy—Purshottom v. Vishnu, 29 Bom.L.R. 1332, 105 I.C. 839, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 650. Where, however, the landlord does some act (e.g., takes rent) to indicate his assent to the continuance of the tenancy, that act will convert the tenancy by sufferance into a tenancy at will from year to year or month by month (sec. 116, Transfer of Property Act), and the period of limitation for a suit for recovery of possession from the tenant at will must run from the termination of such tenancy (and not from the termination of the original tenancy)—Ramachandra v. Bhikambar, 37 Cal. 674 (679); Kuhnni v. Madan Mohan, 31 All. 318 (321); Tekait Harnarayan v. Darshan Deo, 3 Pat. 403 (410), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 560; Kantheppa v. Sheshappa, 22 Bom. 893 (898); Ram Lochan v. Kamakhya, 4 P.L.T. 123, 71 I.C. 580, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 201.

A tenancy for a definite term does not determine by reason of the tenant's disavowal of the landlord's title, but it determines only when the landlord does some act (e.g., serves a notice to quit) by which he indicates his option of terminating the lease by reason of such disavowal—Shrinivas v. Muthusami, 24 Mad. 246 (251). And unless the landlord elects to do so, the tenancy remains unaffected, in spite of the tenant's denial of the landlord's right—Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (160, 163). But in case of a tenant-at-will the denial of the landlord's title is an evidence of the cessation of the tenancy—Ibid (at p. 164).

A person who lawfully came into possession of land as tenant from year to year or for a term of years cannot, by setting up during the continuance of such relation a y title adverse to that of the landlord, acquire by the operation of the law of limitation a title as owner or any other title inconsistent with that under which he was let into possession. In other words, so long as the tenancy continues, time does not run against the landlord in lessee's favour. The landlord's title can be extinguished only at the expiration of the period prescribed by Article 139, and under this Article the period will commence to run only when the tenancy is determined. If after the determination of the tenancy, the tenant remains in possession as trespasser, for the statutory period, he will by prescription acquire a right as owner or such limited estate as he might prescribe for—Seshamma v. Chickaya, 25 Mad. 507 (511). In Banwari v. Hussaini, 41 P.L.R. 457, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 455 that if the landlord does not bring a suit within 12 years of the expiry of lease, his claim for possession is barred under this Article and his right to the property is extinguished under sec. 28 of the Act although the tenant has not denied the landlord's title. Thus, where the defendants had, after the expiration of a lease, held over as yearly tenants, and then after the determination of that tenancy, continued to hold possession, claiming that they were permanent tenants, for more than 12 years, held that the defendants had acquired by prescription a right to hold possession as permanent tenants—Parameshwaram v. Krishnan, 26 Mad. 535 (537). Where after the expiry of the period fixed in a lease the tenant continues in possession as tenant on same terms expressed in the lease, he cannot claim to be in adverse possession, and there is no period of time from which it can be said that the statute ran so as to debar the lessor from their remedy for the recovery of the property—Chandrika Prasad v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co., A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 59, 39 C.W.N. 552, 68 M.L.J. 552, 1935 M.W.N. 434, 41 L.W. 617, 37 Bom.L.R. 390, 37 P.L.R. 331; 1935 O.W.N. 379; 61 C.L.J. 147.

A person holding a land for his life cannot, by merely giving a notice that he claims to be holding on a perpetual or hereditary tenure, make his possession adverse so as to bar a suit for possession on the expiration of the life-tenancy—Beni Pershad v. Dudh Nath, 27 Cal. 156 (166) (P.C.).

If a person is let into possession as tenant by the mortgagee in possession, his tenancy continues only during the subsistence of the mortgage and determines when the mortgagor redeems the property from the mortgagee; therefore the mortgagor's right to recover possession from him accrues when he redeems the mortgage, or at any rate when the term of the notice given by the mortgagor to the tenant after redemption has expired—Seshamma v. Chickaya, 25 Mad. 507 (512).

By the customary law of Malabar, a tenant under a kanom or kuikanom lease is entitled not to be ejected until the expiration of 12 years. But where no time is fixed for the duration of the lease (i.e., where the lease is for an indefinite period) it does not under the customary law determine on the expiration of 12 years from its date; consequently, in such a case, a suit for possession brought 14 years after the expiration of 12 years from the date of the lease is not barred—Kelappan v. Madhavi, 25 Mad. 452 (453). Under sec. 5 (2) of Malabar Compensation for Tenants Improvements Act a tenant continuing in possession after determination of tenancy holds possession during such continuance as a tenant subject to the terms of the lease. So a suit in ejectment twelve years after the determination of tenancy is not barred under this Article—Govindan v. D'Silva, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 313, 1938 M.W.N. 241, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 581.

A lease for life expires on the death of the lessee: and therefore a suit for possession against the heirs of the original lessee is barred under this Article if brought more than 12 years after the death of the lessee, in the absence of a fresh tenancy being created between the parties—Kamakhya Narain v. Bechu Singh, 6 P.L.T. 361, 88 I.C. 483, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 499 (500); Jumma v. Madhusoodan, 1941 A.L.J. 327, A.I.R. 1941 All. 306, 195 I.C. 515. An istimrari mokarari grant conveys only a life-interest to the grantee, and not a transferable or heritable interest; such interest comes to an end on the death of the grantee, and if the assignees of the grantee continue in possession thereafter, claiming as permanent mokararidars and are willing to pay rent as such demanding receipts in their own names, but the landlord refuses to grant such receipts and is willing to grant receipts to them as marfatdars, and consequently no rent is paid, held that there is no relationship of landlord and tenant between the proprietor and the asignees of the grantee, and a suit for possession brought more than 12 years after the death of the grantee for life is barred—Kumar Kamakhya Narain v. Ram Raksha, 7 Pat. 649 (P.C.), 9 P.L.T. 501, 32 C.W.N. 897 (902), A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 146, 109 I.C. 663.

Mere non-payment of rent for 12 years before the institution of the landlord's suit for possession, does not amount to termination of the tenancy—Prem Sukh v. Bhupia, 2 All. 517 (F.B.); Tota v. Sakotia, 18 P.R. 1888.

A disobedience by the tenant known to the landlord and accompanied by payment of rent to a third party does not, at any date as long as the term of his tenancy lasts, make the tenant's possession adverse; though in the case of a tenancy-at-will such conduct might afford evidence of the determination of the tenancy—Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (160); Doe d Graves v. Wells, 10 A. & E. 427 (434).

Plea of tenancy and limitation in the alternative:—In a suit for possession of land brought against a tenant who is really a trespasser, the defendant, merely by alleging tenancy in his written statement, does not preclude himself from setting up the defence of the law of limitation—Dino Monee v. Durga Pershad, 21 W.R. 70 (74) (F.B.). When a suit is brought to recover possession, the defendant may plead that he is plaintiff's tenant, and at the same time may rely on the statute of limitation. If he fails to establish the former plea, it is still open to him to rely on the second plea and in that event the suit will be treated not as a suit by a landlord against a tenant but as one to eject a trespasser (Art. 144) who has set up a pretened tenancy—Maidin Saiba v. Nagappa, 7 Bom. 96 (99); Keamuddi v. Haro Mohan, 7 C.W.N. 294.

Adverse possession by tenant:—See Note 613 under Art. 144.

584. Burden of proof:—It is not sufficient for the plaintiff merely to allege that the defendant is his tenant. The burden lies on the plaintiff to prove that the defendant is his tenant. If the plaintiff fails to prove the tenancy, the suit falls under Article 142, and the plaintiff must prove that he had been in possession within 12 years before the suit. And if the plaintiff fails to prove this, his suit is barred—Haji Khan v. Baldeo Das, 24 All. 90 (93).

Where there is proof of the relation of landlord and tenant, it lies upon the defendant tenant to shew that the tenancy was determined more than twelve years before suit—Tiruchurna v. Sanguvien, 3 Mad. 118; Attar Singh v. Ram Ditta, 110 P.R. 1881; Adimulam v. Pir Ravutham, 8 Mad. 424. If the defendant tenant admits that the plaintiff's ownership continued up to a certain period, he must shew under Article 139 when the tenancy terminated, or he must shew under Article 144 when his adverse possession commenced, before he can set up adverse possession—Tulsibai v. Ranchhod, 26 Bom. 442 (444).

Once the relation of landlord and tenant is established, the cessation of the tenancy must be established by the tenant by means of affirmative proof over and above the mere non-payment of rent—Prem Sukh v. Bhupia, 2 All. 517 (F.B.).

140. By a remainderman, a reversioner (other than	Twelve years.	When his estate falls into possession.

a landlord) or a devisee, for possession of immoveable property.

585. Suit by reversioner, etc.:—This Article, as well as Article 141, applies only when the plaintiff claims to succeed to the last holder of the estate, and cannot apply where he relies solely on his possessory title—Harihar Prosad v. Kesho Prosad, 5 P.L.T. Supp. 1, A.I.R. 1925 Pat, 68 (93), 93 I.C. 454.

Where a grant of immoveable property is made to a person for life, the period of limitation for a suit by the grantor to recover possession of the property, the grantee being dead, will be twelve years from the death of the grantee—Kuttyassan v. Mayan, 14 Mad. 495 (498).

This Article applies to a suit by a reversioner other than a landlord. Article 139 deals expressly with the case of a landlord suing as such; Article 140 deals with the case of a reversioner other than a landlord as such suing his tenant. Thus, a suit by a landlord to recover possession from persons who have dispossessed the tenants falls under this Article—Krishna Gobind v. Hari Churn, 9 Cal 367 (370). See also Ram Chandra v. Bhikhambar, 37 Cal. 674.

The words 'remainderman,' 'reversioner' and 'devisee' are used in this Article as technical terms of English law. Hence according to that interpretation the word 'reversioner' in this Article does not include a reversioner who succeeds on the death of a Hindu widow—Bala v. Jati, 155 P.R. 1883; Roda v Harnam, 18 P.R. 1895 (F.B.); Moro v. Balaji, 19 Bom. 809 (814); Maharaja Kesho Prasad v. Madho Prasad, 3 Pat. 880 (897), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 721, 83 I.C. 812. A remainderman claiming only an equity of redemption (the property having been mortgaged by the life-interest-holder) comes within the meaning of a 'remainderman' under this Article—Skinner v. Naunihal, 51 All. 367 (P.C.), 33 C.W.N. 761 (768), 1929 A.L.J. 566, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 158, 117 I.C. 22.

The plaintiffs brought a suit, as devisees under a will, to obtain possession of certain immoveable property; they asked also that an adoption and all other conditions of title relied on by the defendant might be set aside and their right to the proporty declared. Held that the suit fell under Article 140 and not under Article 118—Fannymma v. Manjaya, 21 Bom. 159. Taking Article 118 with Articles 140 and 141, it appears that when a person claiming to be the next reversionary heir and being aware of an adoption having taken place seeks to obtain a bare declaratory relief in the life time of the widow who adopted the boy to her deceased husband, he is bound to bring his suit within six years from the time of his knowledge (Art. 118), but that will not prevent the reversioner from suing to obtain possession of the estate when it falls into possession (Art. 140) or when the widow dies (Art. 141), if the suit is commenced within 12 years from that time—Lala Prabhu v. Mylne, 14 Cal. 401 (417). In this case the word 'reversioner' in Art. 140 has been wrongly interpreted.

This Article does not apply unless the plaintiff is out of possession. Thus, a property was bequeathed to three persons in common, but after the testator's death only two remained in possession of the property, and the other devisee lived in a separate house of his own and the evidence of his participation in the property of the two houses was very slight. Held, that although the third devisee did not participate in the property, still the entry of the other two must be held as entry on behalf of all (as they were joint tenants), unless there was clear evidence to hold adversely. Consequently, the third devisee was in possession through the other devisees, and his suit for possession does not fall under this Article, nor is it barred under any other Article —Audipurianam v. Appusundram, 5 M.L.T. 103, 2 I.C. 311.

A Hindu testator (who was the Maharaja of a Raj estate) died in 1894 leaving a will appointing his widow as executrix, and giving her a life-estate in the properties and the remainder to any son that might be adopted by the widow. The widow died in 1907, and an adoption made by her was declared to be invalid. The plaintiff (a successor to the Maharaja) brought a suit for recovery of possession of those properties. Held that Article 140 did not apply, as he was neither a remainderman, reversioner nor a devisee. A reversion arises where the grantor grants a particular estate to a person and does not dispose of the remainder. That which is not disposed of remains in the grantor and is called a reversion; it is the interest in land undisposed of which reverts to the grantor after the exhaustion of the particular estate. But here the complete estate was devised by the testator (the life-estate to the Maharani, and the remainder to the son to be adopted); hence the plaintiff was not a reversioner. Nor was he a remainderman, for the remainder was devised to the son to be adopted by the widow. Nor was the plaintiff a devisee—Maharaja Kesho Prosad v. Madho Prasad, 3 Pat. 880 (897), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 721, 5 P.L.T. 513, 83 I.C. 812.

It has now been settled by authorities (see Note 589 under Article 141, post) that 12 years' adverse possession against a life-tenant does not bar the right of the reversioners, whose right accrues only when the estate falls into possession. But where possession had begun to be adverse before the life-tenant entered into possession, Article 140 will not apply, and the continuous running of time will not be prevented by the interposition of the life-tenant. The adverse possession would be not only prejudicial to the life-tenant but also to the remainderman or reversioner. Thus, where after the death of the testator but before the administration has been completed, a stranger enters into possession of the property, the beneficiary (who in this case is a life-tenant, the widow of the testator) will be barred if the executor fails to sue within the period prescribed by law, for the estate is still the estate of the testator and not the estate of the beneficiary (life-tenant) and consequently a title that may be acquired by a stranger by lapse of time will be a title acquired against the testator and not against the life-tenant. Both Arts. 140 and 141 presuppose on estate in a life-tenant or in a Hindu or Muhammadan female; but where in respect of any particular property the title of the testator is itself extinguished under sec. 28 by reason of the executor failing to sue within the period prescribed by law, that particular property will not descend to the life-tenant or to the Hindu or Muhammadan female and consequently the case will not attract the operation of Article 140 or 141—Maharaja Kesho Prasad v. Madho Prasad (Dumraon case), 3 Pat. 880 (906), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 721, 5 P.L.T. 513, 83 I.C. 812.

It is well settled that if a life-tenant be dispossessed the reversioner or remainderman is in time if he institutes the suit for possession of immoveable property within 12 years of the death of the life-tenant, and if successive life estates had been created the remainderman or the reversioner will be in time if he institutes the suit for possession within 12 years of the death of the last life-tenant.

Adverse possession against a life-tenant will not be adverse possession against the reversioner of the remainderman.

It is also well settled that if the cause of action arose during the life time of the last full owner, the subsequent interposition of a life estate or a widow's estate would not bring into operation either Art. 140 or Art. 141, Limitation Act, on the principle formulated in sec. 9 of the said Act. Art. 142, Limitation Act would apply, time running from the date of the dispossession—Hemendranath v. Jnanendra Prasanna, A.I.R.

1935 Cal. 702, 40 C.W.N. 115, 62 C.L.J. 49. (Runchordas v. Parbatibhai, 23 Bom. 725 (P.C.), Jaggo Bai v. Utsavlal, 51 All. 439, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 166, Sesha Naidu v. Peria Sami, 44 Mad. 951, Skinner v. Naunilal, 51 All. 367, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 158 folld.).

586. Suit by adopted son:—The childless widow of a Hindu, being in possession of his property as his heir, sold it to the defendant in 1868. Afterwards in 1888 she adopted a son who in 1890 brought the present suit to recover the alienated property. It was held that the suit did not fall under this Article, because the adopted son as such suing for present possession of his father's estate was not a remainderman, reversioner or devisee within the meaning of this Article. The suit fell under Article 144—Moro v. Balaji, 19 Bom. 809 (819); Sreeramulu v. Krishtamma, 26 Mad. 143 (147); Sita Ram v. Rajaram, 48 I.C. 230 (Nag.).

587. When the estate falls into possession:—The property left by a will falls into possession under the Hindu Law, immediately upon the death of the testator; and therefore a suit claiming title to shares in immoveable property under a will is barred, unless brought within 12 years from the date of the testator's death under this Article—Mylapore Iyasawmy v. Yeokay, 14 Cal. 801 (808) (P.C.). The mere fact that there is a provision in the will to the effect that the property devised should be in the possession of a manager until the devisee should attain the age of 30 years, will not prevent the estate from falling into possession immediately on the date of the testator's death—Krishna v. Panchuram, 17 Cal. 272 (276).

Since the cause of action accrues to a remainderman or reversioner only when the estate falls into possession, an adverse possession for any length of time against a tenant for life is ineffectual against the remainderman or reversioner whose right to possession only accrues on the death of the tenant for life—Naunihal v. Skinner, 47 All. 803, A.I.R. 1925 All. 707, 92 I.C. 63; Skinner v. Naunihal, 51 All. 367 (P.C.), 33 C.W.N. 761 (768), 1929 A L.J. 566, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 158, 117 I.C. 22. Cf. the cases cited in Note 589 under Article 141.

If the plaintiff succeeds in making out a prima facie case under this Article the burden is on the defendant to show that the dispossession took place at a time when the property was in possession of the last male holder—Hemendra v. Manmotha, 43 C.W.N. 772.

141. Like suit by a Hindu or Muhammadan entitled to the possession of immoveable property on the death of a Hindu or Muhammadan female.	Twelve years.	When the female dies.

History of the Article:—In order to arrive at a correct notion of the scope of this Article, it is useful to refer to the history of the enactment of this Article. Under sec. 1, clause 12 of the Limitation Act XIV of 1859, the period of limitation applicable to suits for the recovery of immoveable property or any interest in immoveable property to which no other provision of the Act applied was 12 years from the time the cause of action arose. This clause had been interpreted by the Courts in a sense which bore hardly upon the rights of the reversionary heir under the Hindu law, for it had been held that adverse possession against a Hindu widow entitled to her deceased husband's estate was adverse possession also against the male heir who would be entitled to the property after her death. (See Note 589 below). The consequence was that a reversonary heir who had no right to possessiin during the widow's life time might lose his property to a person who had asserted adverse possession against the widow for a period of 12 years. Then came Act IX of 1871, in which Article 142 provided as follows: "Like suit by a Hindu entitled to the possession of immoveable property on the death of a Hindu widow—Twelve years—When the widow dies." Thus, special provision was made for the reversionary heir under the Hindu Law, who was given 12 years from the death of the widow to bring his suit. The effect of this was that time counting for adverse possession could not begin to run against the reversioner until he became entitled to enter into possession (See Note 589 below). But it came to be recognised that the rule laid down in the Act of 1871 was imperfect, inasmuch as it referred only to the reversionary heir succeeding upon the death of a Hindu widow, whereas other Hindu females, e.g., daughter, mother, also had only a limited estate in the property inherited from males So, in the later Act, XV of 1877, the scope of this Article was enlarged, so as to give the same period to Hindus and Muhammadans entitled to the possession of immoveable property on the death of a Hindu or Muhammadan female. The extension of the rule of Muhammadans was probably intended to meet certain cases in which by custom or for some other reason persons who had been Hindu and had become Muhammadans were still bound by their old personal law inspite of their change of religion. The same rule has been preserved in Article 141 of the present Limitation Act of 1908—Ghisa v. Gajraj, 18 O.C. 289, 35 I.C. 371 (375).

588. Scope of Article:—The expression "like suit" means not only a "suit for the possession of immoveable property" but it is to be read with Article 140 so as to mean a "suit for the possession of immoveable property by a remainderman or reversioner who is a Hindu or Muhammadan entitled to the possession on the death of a Hindu or Mahommedan female"; that is, a suit by those heirs of the original propositus who claim on the death of a female entitled only to a limited estate and who are constantly styled reversionary heirs and not unfrequently remainderman. This Article applies to those cases where there is an estate of the nature of a fee-simple or some analogous estate, out of which there has been carved by operation of law or otherwise an estate to be held by a female for her life, and a remainderman or reversioner is entitled to the remainder or reversion on the death of that female. Starling pp. 388, 389.

This Article does not apply to a suit by an heir-at-law of a female (as in the case of a son succeeding to the absolute estate of his mother) for possession of immoveable property in that character; it only applies to a suit by a person who before the death of a female occupied the position of a remainderman or reversioner or a devisee and on the death of the female sues on the basis of such title as remainderman, reversioner or devisee—Hashmat Begum v. Mazhar Hussain, 10 All. 343 (346). This Article must be read with Art. 140, and refers to suits brought by persons claiming under an independent title on the death of a Hindu or Mahommadan female; it does not apply to the case of a person suing on the very same cause of action which accrued to a Hindu female, and who acquires his right to sue as her heir—Azam Bhuyan v. Faizuddin, 12 Cal. 594 (596); Malkarjan v. Amrita, 42 Bom. 714 (717); Ghisa v. Gajraj, 18 O.C. 289, 33 I.C. 371. The estate of the Hindu or Muhammadan female referred to in this Article must be a limited estate, and not an absolute one, and the person bringing the suit must claim as the heir of the last male owner on the determination of the limited estate, and not as heir of the female. Art. 141 does not apply where the female had been in possession of an absolute estate—Zarifunissa v. Shafiquzzaman, 26 O.C. 133, A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 185, 75 I.C. 626; Bisheshar v. Rameshar, 21 O.C. 1, 4 O.L.J. 948, 44 I.C.

368; Ghisa v. Gajraj, 18 O.C. 289, 33 I.C. 371. This Article intends to provide a rule of limitation applicable to suits for the recovery of estates which were once estates in expectancy and which have become vested in the heir of the last male owner on the determination of the limited estate held by a Hindu or Muhammadan female—Ghisa v. Gajraj, supra. Art. 141 is merely an extension of Art. 140 with special reference to persons succeeding to an estate as reversioners upon the cessation of the peculiar estate of a Hindu widow—Jayawant v. Ram Chandra, 40 Bom. 239 (245), 33 I.C. 484, 18 Bom.L.R. 14. In an Allahabad case it was held that a suit to set aside an alienation of the plaintiff's property made during his minority by his mother as guardian, brought after the mother's death, was governed by Article 141—Bachchan v Kamta, 32 All. 392 (396). This view, it is submitted, is not correct, becuse the plaintiff was not a reversionary heir after the mother's death but had been the owner of the property during the life-time of his mother. He could not be said to be a person entitled to the possession of the property ,'on the death of the female."

Article 141 applies only to those cases in which the person who brings the suit is claiming under an independent title in the same way as remainderman and reversioners claim in suits under Article 140; but Article 141 should not be so interpreted that the estate of the Hindu or Muhammadan female referred to in this Article must be an estate created in the same way as the particular estate upon which the estate in remainder or reversion contemplated by Article 140 leans, that is to say, by grant or devise, or that it must be an estate characterised by the same incidents which attach to such a particular estate. The analogy connoted by the expression 'like suit' cannot be pushed to this extreme—Ghisa v. Gajraz, supra.

This Article applies only when the female on whose death the plaintiff is entitled to possession had been out of possession; if the female had been in possesion of the property till her death, this Article would not apply—Gobinda v. Upendra, 47 Cal. 274 (277), 23 C.W.N. 977, 56 I.C. 141. This Article applies only to suits by reversioners in respect of property of which they are out of possession and which was in the possession of the defendants at the date of the death of the female even though they are trespassers—Sankey v. Jhingan, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 166. It does not apply to cases in which there was nobody in possession at the date of death of the female. Thus, where on the death of the female in 1902, no one had been in possession, and in 1914 the defendants for the first time during the settlement proceedings got their names entered as owners of those lands, and a suit was brought by the reversioners in 1924, it was held that Art. 144 and not Art. 141 applied to the case, that the plaintiffs must be deemed to have been in constructive possession till 1914, when the defendants claimed the lands, and time ran from that date—Mahendra v. Tarak, 36 C.W.N. 326 (328), 138 I.C. 349, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 504. Article 141 should be construed so as to cover those cases in which the cause of action arises on the death of the female, and the only obstacle to the reversioner seeking possession is either an act of the female or her inaction, resulting in either case in the loss of possession (during the life-time of the female) and the need of a suit by the reversioner after her death—Sesha Naidu v. Periasami, 44 Mad. 951 (957). The Allahabad High Court applied this Article to a case in which the widow was in possession till her death and then the property was taken possession of by the defendant—Gajadhar v. Parvati, 33 All. 312. In this case, one A died leaving two widows B and C as heirs; then B died and the surviving widow C was in sole possession of the property. After the death of C the property was taken possession of by a person who had no right to it, and that person occupied the estate for more than 12 years. Afterwards a reversioner of A sued to recover possession. It was held that the suit was barred under this Article, for time ran from the date of the death of C.

Article 141 is restricted to suits by plaintiff whose title and right as the heir of the last full owner to sue for possession accrues upon the death of a female holding a women's qualified estate. To claim the benefit of this Article, the plaintiff must prove, first, that there was a qualified estate in the Hindu female, and secondly, that he was entitled to possession after the death of the female as the heir of the last male holder; and further it must be shown that having regard to the existing law the plaintiff was entitled to the possession of the properties in dispute at the date of the suit—Maharaja Kesho Prasad v. Madho Prasad, 3 Pat. 880 (898), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 821, 5 P.L.T. 513. All that the plaintiffs need prove to bring the case within this Article is that they are Hindus or Mahomedans entitled to the estate on the termination of a limited interest of a Hindu or Mahomedan female. Once that is established they have made a prima facie case that this Article applies and to take the case out of this Article the defendants must show that the time had began to run as against the full owner and that it was actually running when the limited interest came into effect —Ashutosh v. Narendra, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 506; Hemendra v. Manmotha, 43 C.W.N. 772; Hemendra v. Jnanendra, 63 Cal. 155, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 702.

This Article applies even though the reversioner comes in after successive female heirs, as for instance, where he comes after the widow and the mother of the last male holder, and the mother had been dispossessed—Kokilmoney v. Manick, 11 Cal. 791; Bankay v. Raghunath, 51 All. 188 (F.B.); or where he comes after the widow and daughter, and an alienation was made by the widow—Sham Lal v. Amarendra, 23 Cal. 460 (470); Hanuman v. Bhagauti, 19 All. 357. Where the mother and the widow both held the property of the last male holder with rights of survivorship, a suit by the reversioner impeaching the alienation made by the survivor of the two, brought after the death of the survivor, is governed by this Article—Chandi Singh v. Gur Prasad, 7 O.W.N. 711, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 339 (348), 126 I.C. 657. See also Govind v. Joshi, I.L.R. 1952 Bom. 621, 54 Bom. L.R. 263, A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 395.

This Article applies only where the reversioner is entitled to the possession of the property immediately on the female's death. Therefore where the property was in the possession of an usufructuary mortgagee from the widow at the time of her death, and then the defendant, a trespasser, obtained it on redemption, and the reversioner brought a suit for possession, within 12 years of the date of redemption though more than twelve years after the date of death of the widow, held that the suit fell under Article 144 and was not barred. Article 141 did not apply as the reversioner was not entitled to possession immediately on the widow's death, but was entitled only after the satisfaction of the mortgage—Ganga v. Kanhaiya Lal, 11 A.L.J. 179, 18 I.C. 811 (813).

Article 141 is not to be applied indiscriminately to all suits by reversioners; if the suit falls under some other Article, Article 141 cannot apply merely because it is brought by a reversioner. This Article does not cover cases where the cause of action involving loss of possession includes, e.g., a transaction by the last male owner such as a mortgage (Art. 148), a mortgage by him and transfer by the mortgagee (Art. 134), a purchase in Court auction (Art. 138), a lease (Art. 139) or a carving by him of life-estates with a remainder or a reversion following it (Art. 140), or any transaction involving the possibility of forfeiture (Art. 143) or loss of possession by him (Art. 142). In these cases, the specific Article (mentioned within brackets) applies. Thus, where a Hindu reversioner instituted a suit to recover possession of certain lands which had been usufructuarily mortgaged by the last male owner in 1866 and had been sold for consideration by the mortgagee in 1900 after the death of the last male owner and during the life-time of his daughter who had inherited his estate and died in 1906, held that the suit fell under Article 134 and not Article 141, and was barred by limitation—Sesha Naidu v. Periasami, 44 Mad. 951 (957, 958).

This Article applies only to immoveable property, and not to moveables—Vundravandas v. Cursondas 21 Bom. 646 (667).

A suit to recover malikana is not a suit for possession, and it is doubtful whether malikana is immoveable property. The proper Article applicable to the suit is Art. 120—Jaggo v. Utsava, 51 All. 439 (P.C.), 1929 A.L.J. 716, 33 C.W.N. 809 (820), A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 166, 177 I.C. 498.

Hindu:—The word 'Hindu' in this Article means not only a person who is ethnologically a Hindu but also a person who has the legal status of a Hindu and is governed in the matter of inheritance by the Hindu Law—Chattar Singh v. Roshan Singh, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 159, 1946 N.L.J. 690, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 277.

589. Adverse possession against widow, whether bars reversioners:—Before the Act of 1871, adverse possession against the widow not only barred the widow, but the reversioners also, because the Act of 1859 provided a period of twelve years from the 'accrual of cause of action,' and the reversioner's cause of action accrued from the same date as the widow's cause of action, viz., from the date of adverse possession—Nobin Chunder v. Issur Chunder, 9 W.R. 505 (F.B.); Amrita v. Rajani Kant, 15 B.L.R. 10, 23 W.R. 214 (P.C.); Babu v. Bhikaji, 14 Bom. 317; Drobomoyee v. Davis, 14 Cal. 323 (344); Sambasiva v. Ragava, 13 Mad. 512 (515).

But the old law has undergone a change after the passing of the Act of 1871. The Acts of 1871, 1877 and 1908 have specially provided a separate cause of action for the reversioner, which accrues when the female dies and the estate falls into possession; the reversioner may therefore sue, within twelve years from the death of the female, to recover possession of immovable property, where there has been decree against the Hindu widow or other act in the law in the widow's lifetime depriving the reversionary heir of the right to possession of the property after the widow's death; and the reversioner's right to recover possession is not affected by the fact that the widow had been out of possession for more than twelve years—Jaggo Bai v. Utsava, 51 All. 439 (P.C.), 1929 A.L.J. 716, 33 C.W.N. 809 (821), A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 166, 177 I.C. 498; Runchordas v. Parvatibai, 23 Bom. 725 (736) (P.C.); Srinath v. Prosonno, 9 Cal. 934 (937) (F.B.); Kokilmoney v. Manick, 11 Cal. 791 (795); Abinash v. Narhari, 57 Cal. 289; Abhoy Charan v. Attarmoney, 13 C.W.N. 931 (935); Sham Lal v. Amarendra, 23 Cal. 460; Bankay v. Raghunath, 26 A.L.J. 1049, A.I.R. 1928 All. 561, 112 I.C. 801; Ram Kali v. Kedar, 14 All. 156 (F.B.); Amrit v. Bindesri, 23 All. 448; Jhamman v. Tiloki, 25 All 435 (439); Vundravandas v. Cursondas, 21 Bom. 646 (652, 670); Moro v. Balaji, 19 Bom. 809 (816); Mukta v. Dava, 18 Bom. 216 (220); Subbi v. Ramkrishnabhatta, 42 Bom. 69 (77); Atchamma v. Papiah, 44 Mad. 131 (135); Baz Khan v. Sultan Malik, 43 P.R. 1901; Rulia v. Rulia, 41 P.R. 1903; Ganga v. Kanhaiya, 41 All. 154; Venkataramayya v. Venkatalakashmamma, 20 Mad. 493; Pannalal v. Sumranlal, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 624, 1939 N.L.J. 391, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 260; Kalipada v. Palani Bala, 1953 S.C.R. 503, 1953 S.C.J. 208, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 125. The law allows the reversioner 12 years from the death of the widow, within which to bring his suit for possession, and it is not in the power either of the widow or of any person claiming through or against her to abbreviate that period or to substitute another period or starting point of time—Cursondas v. Vundravandas, 14 Bom. 482.

If, however the right of the female heir had been barred by twelve years' adverse possession before the Act of 1871 came into force, a reversioner suing after the Act of 1871 would also be barred, because a cause of action already barred under the Act of 1859 could not be revived by later Acts—Braja Lal v. Jiban Krishna, 26 Cal. 285 (296); Mohima v. Gouri, 2 C.W.N. 162 (164); Drobomoyee v. Davis, 14 Cal. 323 (345); Sham Lal v. Amarendra, 23 Cal. 460 (471).

The question whether adverse possession against the widow for the statutory period bars the reversioners also, was unfortunately raised before the Privy Council in Vaithialinga v. Srirangath, 48 Mad. 883, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 249, 30 C.W.N. 313, 92 I.C. 85, 49 M.L.J. 796, although it was not necessary for the decision of the suit (which was a case of adverse decree against widow), and their Lordships after reviewing the Privy Council decisions on the subject expressed the opinion that the anverse possession against the widow barred the reversioners also, and that the Board had invariably applied the rule of the Sivaganga Case (see Note 590 below) where that rule was applicable. This pronouncement was made by way of obiter, but it has been followed by the Calcutta High Court (Single Bench) in Aurobindo v. Monorama, 55 Cal. 903, 32 C.W.N. 913 (919), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 670. In this case it has been remarked (also by way of obiter) that there is no difference in principle between an adverse decree against a female and an adverse possession against a female, and since it is settled law that an adverse decree against a female binds the reversioners, an adverse possession against the female likewise bars the reversioners. It should be noted that this observation was also unnecessary for the decision of this case, because it was a declaratory suit in respect of moveable property, to which Article 120 applied. In a later case the Division Bench of the same High Court has observed that Vaithialinga's case (48 Mad. 883 P.C.) should be applied only where the adverse possession is the result of a decree, which is binding on the reversioner, and in such a case the reversioner is also barred; but that ruling should not be applied to a case of simple adverse possession which is not the result of any decree. "A case is an authority for what it actually decides and not for what would logically follow from such decision. Vaithialinga's case does not lend support to the proposition that adverse possession which barred the widow will also bar the reversionary heir under the present Limitation Act"—Abinash v. Narhari, 57 Cal. 289, 50 C.L.J. 260, 123 I.C. 444, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 165 (168).

It has been held in some cases that where property, the estate in which has descended to a female heir, never reaches her hands but is held adversely to her by a stranger, the cause of action for a suit for the recovery of the property accrues at the commencement of the adverse possession by the stranger, and a suit to enforce that cause of action will be barred both against the female heir and against the reversioner after the expiration of the statutory period of limitation counting from the commencement of adverse possession, the stranger having after the expiration of that period acquired an absolute indefeasible title to the property. Article 141 does not apply to the case—Hanuman v. Bhagauti, 19 All 357 (371); Gya Pershad v. Heet Narain, 9 Cal. 83 (95); Aurobindo v. Monorama, 55 Cal. 903, 32 C.W.N. 913; Ghandharap v. Lachman, 10 All. 485 (488); Tika Ram v. Shama Charan, 20 All. 42 (46). But in another Allahabad case, where a separated Hindu died in 1862 leaving a widow and daughter but no son, and the estate descended to the widow but possession never reached her as a nephew of her husband (who had then no title to the property) took possession of the property immediately on the death of the last male holder, and retained possession for more than 12 years, and then after the death of the widow in 1887, the daughter (reversioner) sued for possession, it was held by a Full Bench that Article 141 applied, that the suit was not barred as the plaintiff had 12 years from the death of the widow in 1887 within which to sue, and that the adverse possession of the nephew had not become adverse to the daughter—Ram Kali v. Kedar Nath, 14 All. 156 (F.B.). This Full Bench decision was disapproved of in Hanuman v. Bhagauti, 19 All. 357 (373) and Tika Ram v. Shama Charan, 20 All. 42 (46), but has been followed in Amrit v. Bindesri, 23 All. 448 (453) and Jhamman v. Tilaki, 25 All. 435 (439), and in the Full Bench case of Bankey v. Raghunandan, 51 All. 188 (F.B.), 26 A.L.J. 1049, A.I.R. 1928 All. 561 (567), 112 I.C. 801. The Privy Council case of Runchordas v. Parvatibai, 23 Bom. 725 (P.C.) (on appeal from 21 Bom. 646) also lends support to the Alahabad

Full Bench rulings. In this case, a Hindu died in 1869 leaving two widows the survivor of whom died in 1888. He had made a will by which he left certain specific property to his widows for their lives, and bequeathed the residue of his property to trustees upon certain trusts. On his death his widows took possession of the property specially bequeathed to them, and the trustees took the residue and applied it in the manner directed in the will. On the death of the survivor of the widows, the plaintiff, a nephew of the testator, sued to have the trusts of the residue declared void, and in effect for possession of the entire property of the testator. The Privy Council held that the trusts were void, and that the plaintiff's suit fell under Article 141 and was not barred. In this case it is quite clear that in respect of the residuary estate, the trusts being void, the widows were entitled to it, but they never obtained possession of that estate, and the trustees had remained in possession of it for more than 12 years adversely to the widows. But still that possession did not become adverse to the reversioner (plaintiff).

On the other hand the ruling in Hanuman v. Bhagauti, 19 All. 357 seems to find some support from the Privy Council decision of Luchhan Kunwar v. Manorath, 22 Cal. 445 (P.C.). The facts of this case are that on the death of one P, his widow L was entitled to succeed to the property, but she never obtained possession as the estate was taken possession of by P's mother J immediately upon P's death. J held possession absolutely for nearly 25 years up to her death. After J's death, L together with other persons who claimed as reversionary heirs of P instituted a suit for possession of the property. It was held that the adverse possession of J and of her transferees (she having made a gift of the property to the defendants) for more than 12 years extinguished the rights of L and the other plaintiffs (reversioners of P).

But when possession had begun to be adverse against the last male owner before the female came in, it would not cease to be so by reason of subsequent interposition of a female heir. Thus, a Hindu widow alienated some property, and afterwards adopted a son, who died some years after attaining majority, without setting aside the alienation leaving a widow who succeeded him and who also died subsequently; a suit brought by the reversioners of the adopted son, for possession of the alienated property, within twelve years after the death of the adopted son's widow, was, held to be barred, because the alienee had acquired a prescriptive title by adverse possession as against the adopted son, and Art. 141 did not apply to this suit—Amrita v. Jatindra, 32 Cal. 165 (168). Article 141 applies where the last full owner was in possession at the time of his death. If he himself was dispossessed, time would begin to run against him and the operation of the law of limitation will not be arrested by the fact that on his death he was succeeded by a female heir, e.g., widow, daughter, or mother—Mohendra v. Shamsunnessa, 21 C.L J. 157 (164), 27 I.C. 954, 19 C.W.N. 1280; Pandurang v. Basappa, 77 I.C. 479. A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 364; Ramayya v. Kotamma, 45 Mad. 370 (373), A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 59, 67 I.C. 246; Sreepati v. Sarbeshwar, 34 C.W.N. 409, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 474 (476). See also Maharaja Kesho Prasad v. Madho Prasad, 3 Pat. 880, cited in Note 585 under Article 140.

590. Decree against female—Effect on reversioners:—An adverse decree against the widow stands on a different footing from an adverse possession against the widow. An adverse possession for more than 12 years against the widow does not bar the reversioner's rights, but if a decree founded upon the law of limitation (i.e., founded upon adverse possession) is obtained against the widow in her life-time, the reversionary heir is barred, and he does not get the benefit of Art. 141—Jaggo v. Utsava, 51 All. 439 (P.C.), 56 I.C. 267, 33 C.W.N. 809 (821), 1929 A.L.J. 716, A.I.R, 1929 P.C. 166, 117 I.C. 498. An adverse decree in a suit brought by a Hindu widow for possession of a property as heir to her husband, if it had become final in her life-time, would bind those claiming the property in succession to her, and unless it could be shown that there had not been a fair trial of the right in that suit, or in other words, unless that decree could have been successfully impeached on some special ground, it would have been an effectual bar to any new suit by any person claiming in succession to the widow—Katama Nachier v. Raja of Sivaganga, 9 M.I.A. 539 (604), 2 W.R. P.C. 31. A decree passed adversely to the female heir in respect of a transaction in which she represents the estate binds the reversioners—Jugal Kishore v. Jitendra, 10 Cal. 985 (P.C.); Harinath v. Mothur Mohun, 21 Cal. 8 (P.C.), 20 I.C. 183; Vaithialinga v. Srirangath, 48 Mad. 883 (P.C.), 52 I.A. 322, 30 C.W.N. 313, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 249. Thus, where a suit by a female heir to recover possession from a trespasser had been dismissed on the ground that it was barred by the defendant's adverse possession after the death of the female, Article 141 did not apply, and would not give the reversioner 12 years' time to sue after the female's death, because the plaintiff being bound by the decree against the female, he was not 'entitled to possession of any property' within the meaning of this Article—Harinath v. Mothur Mohun, 21 Cal. 8 (18) (P.C.). following the Sivaganga Case, 9 M.I.A. 539 (603). If a Hindu dies leaving a widow and a daughter, and an alienation being made by the widow, the daughter brings a suit to set aside the alienation which is dismissed, the adverse decree would, in the absence of fraud or collusion, be binding on the reversioner coming after the daughter's death—Hanuman v. Bhagauti, 19 All. 357 (374).

But where a gift was made by the widow, and she brought a suit to set aside that gift on the ground that the conditions on which the gift had been made were not fulfilled by the donees, and that suit was dismissed, the decree in that suit was not binding on the reversioners, who could bring a suit to recover possession within 12 years after the widow's death, under Article 141. The widow in the enjoyment of a life-estate can never fully represent the estate within the meaning of the dicta in the Sivaganga case in any litigation arising out of acts of her own, and the litigation by the widow in the enjoyment of a life-estate cannot represent the estate fully so as to give rise to a bar of res judicata against reversioners, if such litigation was qualified and personal to the widow or had arisen out of acts of her own affecting the estate during her own life-estate therein—Subbi v. Ramakrishnabhatta, 42 Bom. 69 (77, 79).

590A. Surrender by widow:—The basis of the doctrine of surrender is the effacement of the widow's interest, and the result of surrender is that the next heir of the husband steps into the widow's place. Therefore, where a widow surrendered her estate in favour of the daughter, the result was an acceleration of the daughter's estate, and on the daughter's death the succession opened to her father's male reversioners. A suit brought by the reversioner after 12 years of the daughter's death was barred under this Article, though it was within 12 years from the widow's death—Sitanna v. Viranna, 57 Mad. 749 (P.C.), 67 M.L.J. 20, 38 C.W.N. 697, 148 I.C. 828, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 105 (108). But where the widow surrenders the estate to the next reversioner after her title is extinguished by reason of 12 years adverse possession, the surrenderee cannot be allowed to sue for possession and displace the title acquired by the law of limitation until after the death of the widow—Thripurasundara v. Kotayya, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 39, 1951 M.W.N. 146, 64 M.L.W. 648, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 753. See also Raghuraj v. Babu, A.I.R. 1952 All. 875.

591. Suits under this Article:—A suit by a reversioner to recover possession of property improperly alienated by a Hindu widow is governed by this Article. The suit is not barred if brought within 12 years from the death of the female, although the alienee might have been in possession for more than 12 years. The law in this respect is the same under the Acts of 1859, 1871, 1877 and 1908. See Sambasiva v.

Ragava, 13 Mad. 512 (515); Mukta v. Dada, 18 Bom. 216; Hanuman v. Bhagauti. 19 All. 357; Sham Lal v. Amarendra, 23 Cal. 460; Roy Radha v. Nauratan, 6 C.L.J. 490; Chiragha v. Mahtaba, 79 P.R. 1898; Khair Khan v. Ghulam Ghous, 32 P.R. 1911, 10 I.C. 387; Khiala Ram v. Gulab, 33 P.R. 1911 (F.B.), 11 I.C. 392. It does not fall under Art. 91, because the cancellation of the instrument of alienation is not a condition precedent to the right of action of the reversionary heir—Bijoy Gopal v. Krishna Mohishi, 34 Cal 329 (P.C.) (reversing Bijoy Gopal v. Nilratan, 30 Cal. 990); Harihar v. Dasarathi, 33 Cal. 257; Rakhmabai v. Keshab, 31 Bom. 1. It is not necessary, in a reversioner's suit for recovery of possession of the property alienated by a widow, that the transfer should be set aside before any decree for possession is made. All that is nevessary is that the reversioner should file a suit for possession within 12 years from the death of the widow and a decree passed in such a suit must be on the basis that the transferee's possession was unlawful since the death of the widow—Mummareddi v. Durairaja, 1951 S.C.R. 655, A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 109.

A suit by a reversioner for possession of property after the death of a female is governed by this Article and not by Art. 118, even though the suit involves the question of the validity of an adoption made by the female. The other Article applies only to suits in which a bare declaration is sought for and does not apply to a suit for possession —Kalyandappa v. Chanbasappa, 48 Bom. 411 (P.C.); Padmalav v. Fakira, 12 P.L.T. 563 (P.C.), 35 C.W.N. 465 (467); and the fact that a person has not sued for a declaration under Art. 118 should not be a bar to a suit for possession of property under this Article—Basdeo v. Gopal, 8 All. 644 (646); Natku v. Gulab, 17 All. 167 (171); Hari Lal v. Bai Rewa, 21 Bom. 367 (379); Baikanta v. Kali, 9 C.W.N. 222 (224); Md. Umar v. Md. Niazuddin, 39 Cal. 418 (432) (P.C.); Lala Parbhu v. Mylne, 14 Cal. 401 (417); Valaga v. Bandlamudi, 30 Mad. 308 (310); Ram Rao v. Venkoba, 17 M.L.J. 282; Bhagabat v. Murari, 15 C.W.N. 524, 7 I.C. 427 (433). See Note 493 under Article 118.

Article 3, Sch. III, Bengal Tenancy Act does not in any way control the provisions of Art. 141, Limitation Act; and therefore where a Hindu widow who is in possession of her husband's estate which comprised a holding is dispossessed therefrom by the landlord, that dispossession cannot avail as against the reversioner; so that the reversioner is not required to sue within 2 years from the date of dispossession, under Art. 3, Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, but is entitled to sue for possession within 12 years from the death of the widow—Muni Lal v. Nath Sahay, 9 Pat. 634, 11 P.L.T. 714, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 573 (575), 128 I.C. 131.

A suit for declaration and possession of a share in the partnership assets consisting of immoveable property, when the plaintiff becomes entitled thereto on the death of a Hindu female owner is governed by this Article which is more appropriate to the suit than Art. 120—Basanti Bibi v. Babu Lal, 1930 A.L.J. 1517, 124 I.C. 19, A.I.R. 1931 All. 225.

A suit by a Hindu daughter for possession of her share in her father's estate on the death of her mother or stepmother falls under this Article, and time runs from the date of the mother or stepmother's death—Tulsa v. Bhagwat, 11 A.L.J. 333, 20 I.C. 179; Ram Singh v. Bhani, 38 All. 117 (121). This shows that the plaintiff in a suit under this Article need not be a male entitled to a full estate.

Where a Muhammadan widow, who had been in possession of her husband's property in lieu of unsatisfied dower sold away the property, a suit brought after the widow's death by the heirs of the husband for possession of the property is governed by this Article, and limitation runs from the date of the widow's death and not from the date of the transfer—Sheikh Abdur Rahman v. Sheikh Wali Mahommad, 2 Pat. 75 (80), A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 72, 68 I.C. 601, 4 P.L.T. 267.

592. Suits not under this Article:—A suit by the adopted son to recover property alienated by his adoptive mother before adoption is governed by Art. 144, and not by this Article, because he was not a person entitled to property 'on the death of a female' but entitled to the property immediately from the date of his adoption—Moro v. Balaji, 19 Bom. 809 (814).

Where succession vests jointly in two female heirs (e.g., two daughters), who make no partition of the property, a suit by one on the death of the other to recover possession of the property cannot be said to be a suit under this Article, because the plaintiff does not succeed to the deceased's interest by inheritance as reversionary heir, but acquires the interest by survivorship. This Article contemplates inheritance, not survivorship—Sachindra v. Rajani, 18 C.W.N. 904 (906), 27 I.C. 250.

This Article does not apply where the plaintiff is not the nearest reversioner entitled to succeed to the property on the death of a female, but is a reversioner next in succession to the nearest reversioner. Thus, the last male owner died leaving a widow, and the widow improperly alienated a portion of the land, but the nearest reversioner did not bring a suit to challenge the alienation after the widow's death and then died; a suit was then brought by the reversioner, next in succession to the deceased reversioner, for possession of the land alienated. Held that the suit did not fall under this Article but under Article 144—Sundar v. Salig Ram, 26 P.R. 1911, 9 I.C. 300 (302, 303).

This Article does not apply where the cause of action accrued not on the death of the female but at some antecedent period. Thus, a property of a minor was alienated by his mother acting as guardian, in 1873. The minor died without attaining majority in 1880 and was succeeded by his mother. After the mother's death which took place in 1921, the reversionary heirs instituted a suit in 1922 to set aside the sale. It was held that this Article did not apply as the period of limitation was not to be reckoned from the death of the female, but the cause of action arose during the lifetime of the minor. Article 44 applied and the period would have run from the time of the minor's attaining majority; but as he died a minor, clause (3) of section 6 came into play, and the period of limitation was three years after the minor's death. The suit was therefore barred—Ramaliah v. Brahmiah, 59 M.L.J. 196, 127 I.C. 801, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 821 (824).

593. Starting point of limitation:—The cause of action for a suit by the reversioners for possession of lands left by the last male owner and alienated by his widow accrues on the death of the widow, and not on the date of the alienation—Chiragha v. Mahtaba, 79 P.R. 1898; Pursut Koer v. Palut Roy, 8 Cal. 442 (445). See also 2 Pat. 75 in Note 591, supra. A Hindu female succeeding a reversioner to another Hindu female owner comes under Art. 141, Limitation Act, and under this Article the period of limitation which runs against such reversioner is from the death of the last female owner—Smt. Sarju Bai v. Chairman, Municipal Board, Jhansi, A.I.R. 1937 All. 168; Bankey Lal v. Raghunoth, A.I.R. 1928 All. 561.

The cause of action for the reversioner arises when the female dies. Where there are two widows of the last male holder and one of them dies, the estate passes to the surviving widow, and no cause of action accrues to the reversioners until the death of the surviving widow (even though the alienation was made by the other widow)—Muthiyala v. Baradagunta, 43 Mad. 855, 39 M.L.J. 567, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 246, 60 I.C. 135; Ram Dei v. Abu Jafar, 27 All. 494 (498); Mukhta v. Dada, 18 Bom. 216 (220); Cursondas v. Vundravandas, 14 Bom. 482.

Similarly, where there are several daughters inheriting the father's estate, on the death of one of them, the survivors get the whole estate and no cause of action will accrue to the reversioners until all the daughters are dead.

If the reversioner comes in after successive female heirs (e.g., after the widow and daughter, or after the widow and mother) his suit is in time if brought within 12 years of the date of the death of the last female holder, even though the alienation was made by the previous female holder. See Kokilmoney v. Manick, 11 Cal. 79; Sham Lal v. Amarendra, 23 Cal. 460; Sambasiva v. Ragava, 13 Mad. 512 (515); Hanuman v. Bhagauti, 19 All. 357. Under this Article, a suit may be brought within 12 years of the date of the death of the last female entitled to succession—Pursut Koer v. Palut Roy, 8 Cal. 442 (445).

If the reversioner does not bring any suit and then dies, and his representative brings a suit after the expiry of 12 years from the death of the female, the suit is barred; and the plaintiff cannot claim any extension on the ground of his minority, because when time has once begun to run against the reversioner, it cannot be stopped by the minority of the plaintiff (sec. 9)—Rup Kishore v. Patrani, 50 All. 152, 107 I.C. 45, A.I.R. 1927 All. 818 (820). A widow alienated her husband's property in 1894 and in that year a suit was brought by the plaintiff's father to set aside the alienation but it was dismissed on the ground that he was not the nearest presumptive reversioner, but one B. After the widow's death in 1879, B brought a suit in 1909 to recover possession of the property, but the suit was dismissed in 1916 on the ground that he was not a reversioner at all as his alleged adoption was invalid. The plaintiff then filed a suit in 1919 for possession of the property as reversioner. Held that the suit having been filed more than 12 years after the widow's death was barred under this Article; and the plaintiff had got no fresh cause of action in 1916 when it was found that B was not a reversioner at all. Once limitation had begun to run, it could not be suspended. It cannot be said that the plaintiff could not bring a suit until the judgment of 1916 was delivered—Ranga Natha v. Ram Pandither, 44 M.L.J. 87, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 108, 70 I.C. 446.

Where a Hindu widow remarried in 1899 and transferred her first husband's property in 1913, and a suit was brought in 1913 by the reversioners of her first husband to recover the property, held that the suit might fall under Article 143 as her remarriage entitled forefeiture of her first husband's estate; but the suit might also fall under Article 141; if Article 141 applied, the cause of action for the plaintiff accrued not on the date of alienation, but on the remarriage in 1899, as the widow incurred civil death, so far as her first husband was concerned, by her remarriage, and her subsequent possession was that of another person in the eye of law. The suit was therefore barred—Nathu v. Nai Babu, 11 N.L.R. 86, 29 I.C. 612 (613).

If an alienation was made by the widow of the last male holder in 1857 and the plaintiff (who is the daughter's son of the last male holder) succeeded to the property in 1890, after the death of the last surviving daughter of the last male holder, the suit is governed by the Act of 1877, and not by the Act of 1859, because the starting point of limitation is the death of the female (1890) which took place while the Act of 1877 was in force, and not the date of alienation (1857). See Hanuman v. Bhagauti, 19 All. 357 (365); Sambasiva v. Raghava, 13 Mad. 512.

Effect of bar of limitation:—If the nearest reversioner entitled to sue under this Article does not bring a suit within 12 years of the death of the female, for possession of the property alienated by the female, and then dies, the reversioner next in succession to the deceased reversioner is not thereby barred, but is entitled to bring a suit within 12 years from the death of the deceased reversioner. The possession of the defendant which was adverse to the deceased reversioner does not become adverse to the present reversioner until he succeeds to the property—Sundar v. Salig Ram, 26 P.R. 1911 (F.B.), 9 I.C. 300; Malkarjun v. Amrita, 42 Bom. 714 (718).

If there are two reversioners, and a suit is brought by one reversioner within 12 years of the death of the female, to recover possession of his share by partition, and the other reversioner is made a defendant in that suit, and the latter in his written statement claims possession of his share, such a claim would not be barred by limitation by reason of the fact that his written statement has been filed after the lapse of 12 years from the death of the female. Although it is true that a separate suit filed by the defendant at the time he filed his written statement would have been barred by limitation, and his right would have been extinguished by operation of sec. 28, still it does not follow that his right would be extinguished if he were a party to a suit instituted by another within the prescribed period in which his right to the property could be effectually determined—Rayegavda v. Ramlingapa, 53 Bom. 472, 31 Bom.L.R. 647, 119 I.C. 656, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 345 (347), following Narsingh v. Vaman, 34 Bom. 91 (99).

Where the nearest reversioner does not take any steps to take possession or assume control of property on death of widow and one of his sons, who was in possession prior to the widow's death, continues in possession, a suit by the other sons of the nearest reversioner for partition filed more than 12 years after the death of the widow is barred by this Article and their title is extinguished under sec. 28 of the Act—Alagiri v. Muthuswami, 50 L.W. 571, 1939 M.W.N. 1225, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 102.

594. Presumption of death of female:—The plaintiff sued in 1911 as a reversioner to recover possession of property alienated by a Hindu widow, who had disappeared in 1865 and was not heard of since 1870. The lower Courts held that under sec. 108 of the Evidence Act it would be presumed that the widow died at the time of the suit and that therefore the suit was within time. But the High Court held it lay on the plaintiff to prove affirmatively that he had brought his suit within 12 years from the actual death of the widow and that no presumption would be drawn according to the terms of sec. 108, Evidence Act—Jayawant v. Ram Chandra, 40 Bom. 239 (247), 33 I.C. 484. There is no warrant for the contention that the death of the female referred to under this Article includes death by influx of time, though it may include civil death—Lalit v. Lachmi, 1946 O.W.N. 195, A.I.R. 1946 Oudh, 213, 224 I.C. 537. When the question is not merely of death but of death at a particular time, there is no presumption as to the time, but the party concerned to make out the death on a specified date must prove it by evidence—Parsoo v. Munnalal, 13 N.L.R. 16, 37 I.C. 21. See also Venkata Ramakrishna v. Sriramulu, 46 M.L.J. 541 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1924 P.C. 136, 26 Bom.L.R. 563, where the entry in a puruhit's book as to the date of death of the widow was held to be unreliable.

But where it is known that a widow died in May 1902 but the exact date of the month is unknown, and the plaintiff brought his suit on the 5th May 1914, held that the defendants were bound to prove that she died before the 5th of May 1902—Tani v. Rikhi Ram, 1 Lah. 554 (557), 56 I.C. 742.

142. For possession of immoveable property when the plaintiff, while in possession of the pro-	Twelve years.	The date of the dispossession or discontinuance.

perty, has been dispossessed or has discontinued the possession.

594A. Application of Article:—The general rule of limitation in suits for recovery of property in cases where the plaintiff while in possession has been dispossessed or has discontinued possession, is twelve years, and if the defendants rely upon a shorter period of limitation under any special law, the burden lies upon them to establish the circumstances requisite to make the shorter term applicable. Thus, where the tenants who have been dispossessed by their landlord bring a suit to recover the land within 12 years from the date of dispossession, but the defendant (landlord) contends that the land being an occupancy holding, the special period of two years limitation prescribed by Art. 3, Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act applies, held that it lies upon the defendant to establish the occupancy character of the holding so as to bring the suit within the scope of the special rule of limitation—Tara Nath v. Iswar Chandra, 16 C.W.N. 398 (402), 14 C.L.J. 598, 11 I.C. 164.

A suit for declaration of title and confirmation of possession, in the alternative, for recovery of possession, comes under this Article—Chandiprasad v. Awadh, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 143.

For a distinction between cases in which Art. 142 or Art. 144 applies, see Note 610 under Art. 144. There it is pointed out that if the plaintiff brings a suit on the allegation that he was in possession and was subsequently dispossessed within 12 years prior to suit, the case is governed by Art. 142; but if the plaintiff had never been in possession, so that his claim based on title and not on possession the Article applicable to his suit is Art. 144, and not Art. 142. See also Bindhyachal v. Ram Gharib, 1934 A.L.J. 973 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1934 All. 993 (997-999).

It is not the form of allegations of the plaintiff which will determine the nature of the suit, but it is the substance and actual facts found by the Courts which will go to decide whether the suit is one which comes within the purview of either Art. 142 or Art. 144—Bodri v. Narain, 27 Pat.L.T. 217, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 185.

595. "While in possession":—When a plaintiff's title is once established, his possession, however obtained (i.e., whether it is taken forcibly or not) would be possession within the meaning of this Article—Protab Chandra v. Durga Charan, 9 C.W.N. 1061 (1064). Thus, where the rightful owner of lands was dispossessed but succeeded in ousting the trespasser without recourse to law and continued in possession, such possession would be the possession of the owner within the meaning of the Article; and if the rightful owner is again afterwards dispossessed under a decree obtained by the trespasser under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, the period of limitation for a suit by the rightful owner to recover possession would run from the date of the dispossession under the decree, and not from the date of the original dispossession. The interval between the time when the owner ousted the defendant and the time when the defendant recovered possession of the land under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act should enure to the benefit of the owner and not of the trespasser —Jonab v. Surya Kanta, 33 Cal. 821 (825); Protab Chandra v. Durga Charan, 9 C.W.N. 1061 (1064); Mumtazuddin v. Batkatulla, 2 C.L.J. 1; Waziruddin v. Deoki, 6 C.L.J. 472. The fact that the trespasser from whom the rightful owner wrested possession had succeeded in a suit under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act does not make any difference in the position of the real owner obtaining forcible possession—Narasayya v. Subbayya, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 122, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 266, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 728.

In other words, if there is a re-entry by the true owner, such re-entry puts an end to the previous adverse possession of the trespasser. The mere fact of physical possession held by the true owner within the statutory period is not sufficient for purposes of this Article if it is traceable not to an animus on his part to exercise it in assertion of his own right but to the sufference of the person in wrongful possession—Ramachandra v. Ammiraju, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 551, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 356.

Possession is either actual or constructive. Where one co-sharer holds the share of another co-sharer who being absent had simply ceased to hold actual possession, the holder's possession implies constructive possession by the real proprietor. While either kind of possesion exists in the proprietor, time does not begin to run against him—Shahzada Suraya v. Azim, 29 P.R. 1910, 5 I.C. 888. As to the effect of symbolical possession, see Note 621B under Art. 144.

596. Dispossession:—Dispossession, referred to in this article is a forcible dispossession or ouster—Arab v. Panjal, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 111, A.I.R. 1938 Sind. 198. It involves some element of force or fraud—Rangulal v. Makhan, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 183. Dispossession implies the coming in of a person and driving out of another person from possession—Rains v. Buxton, (1880) 14 Ch. 537 (539); Brojendra v. Sarojini, 20 C.W.N. 481, 22 C.L.J. 283, 31 I.C. 242; Panchoo v. Janeswar, 32 C.L.J. 9, 58 I.C. 844; Charu Chandra v. Nahush Chandra, 50 Cal. 49 (63), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 1, 74 I.C. 630; Maherban v. Yusuf, 1938 N.L.J. 418, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 7, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 655; Gangoobai v. Soni, 1942 N.L.J. 199; Basantilal v. Ramcharan, I.L.R. (1956) M.B. 296, A.I.R. 1956 M.B. 166. Dispossession signifies expulsion, an adverse act which has the effect of putting out. It pre-supposes physical contact, a collusion, either with another person or with his physical acts. The physical presence on the property of the person affected is not necessary but the adverse act of the other party must have the quality of destruction. Acts of possession of the former must be effaced by the latter—Abdul v. Habibulla, 69 C.L.J. 28, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 354. Dispossession implies ouster, and the essence of ouster is that the person ousting is in actual occupation of the land. The mere finding that the plaintiffs are not in possession of the disputed land does not decide the question whether there was dispossession. The statute applies not to want of actual possession by the plaintiff but to cases where he has been out of, and another is in, possession of the lands for prescribed time—Smith v. Lloyd, 23 L.J. Exch. 194; Sheikh Bahadur Ali v. Secretary of State, 2 P.L.T. 133, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 277, 61 I.C. 78. Where the plaintiff is merely resisted by the defendants in his attempt to possess separately his share in the property, but the defendants do not drive out the plaintiff from his possession, there is no dispossession—Gaya Prasad v. Bakya Mani, 56 Cal. 914, 33 C.W.N. 277 (278), 119 I.C. 289, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 297.

Mere acts of user which do not interfere and are consistent with the owner's title are not sufficient to constitute dispossession of the owner—Rangulal v. Makhan, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 183. A mere repudiation of the plaintiff's title behind his back is not enough to dispossess him unless it is followed by some overt act. Ibid. In case of leased land mere receipt of rent by a stranger claiming adversely to the real owner is not by itself sufficient to constitute dispossession. The rent must also be received adversely—Radha Govinda v. Nilkantha, 30 Pat. 406, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 556.

A mere denial of the title of the plaintiff on the part of a defendant who is a co-sharer of the plaintiff, and whose possession may be regarded as plaintiff's possession, will not amount to plaintiff's dispossession, and his remedy will be by a suit for a declaration of title; but if the defendant subsequently transfers possession to a party whose possession cannot be any longer treated in law as the possession of the plaintiff, the latter will have to consider himself as dispossessed, and will have to bring his suit within 12 years of the transfer (or rather within 12 years of the date when the transfer is brought to the notice of the plaintiff)—Bindhyachal v. Ram Gharib, 1934 A.L.J. 973 (F.B.), 152 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1934 All. 993 (1002).

In a case where one party complains of encroachment upon common land by the other party who pleads that he has been on the land for over the statutory period, the real question is whether the wrong amounts to a complete ouster of the plaintiff by the defendant that is, to his dispossession—Kuseshwar v. Uma, 22 Pat.L.T. 1001, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 188.

Where the defendant company had been systematically carrying on colliery work in a village belonging to the plaintiffs, and had sunk pits in different points and made bores in likely places, anywhere in the village they chose, openly and without challenge, it was held that the plaintiffs had been dispossessed not only of the surface of the village but of the whole mineral field. Although in the case of mines there is no presumption of law that possession of a part of a seam infers possession of the whole seam, still as in this case the village had been treated as a single unit of property and the defendant company's operations were consistent only with the assertion of a right to the minerals under the whole village, their title to the whole field had been established. In these circumstances, the fact that the company may not have worked any one pit for 12 years was immaterial, if for 12 years they have been continuously carrying on operation in various parts of the field—Nageshwar v. Bengal Coal Co., 10 Pat. 407 (P.C.), 12 P.L.T. 251, 35 C.W.N. 265 (269, 270), A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 18. Onkarmal v. Bireswar, 61 C.W.N. 970.

If a trespasser (defendant) admits that a portion of the land belongs to the plaintiff, but declines to vacate the land inspite of demands, there is open dispossession, and the plaintiff must bring his suit within 12 years of the dispossession. The mere fact that the trespasser admits that the plaintiff has a share in the land, makes no difference and does not give the plaintiff further time under sec. 19, as the dispossession is not any the less adverse because the trespasser admits that it is adverse—Nutbihari v. Bishweshwari, 60 Cal. 404, 144 I.C. 177, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 414 (415).

If a proprietor who has been collecting rent from tenants is prevented from doing so because a rival proprietor has successfully invoked the aid of a Court of Justice, the injured proprietor is 'dispossessed' from his property just as he had been driven out by physical force—Asiatulla v. Sadatulla, 26 I.C. 368; Lala Sahu v. Ghunaria, 2 I.C. 381.

Dispossession under a decree of the Court obtained under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act is dispossession within the meaning of this Article; limitation runs against the true owner from the date of such dispossession—Protab Chandra v. Durga Charan, 9 C.W.N. 1061; Mamtazuddin v. Barkatulla, 2 C.L.J. 1; Jonab v. Suraj Kanta, 33 Cal. 821.

Where upon the occasion of a regular settlement the plaintiffs who were the proprietors of a land on which the rent-free tenure had been resumed some years before, declined to engage for the payment of the land revenue, in consequence of which the Government made the engagement with the defendants, who were put in possession of the land, it was held that there was dispossession of the plaintiffs or discontinuance of possession by them within the meaning of this Article, and that time began to run from the date of the defendants being put into possession—Muhammad Amanulla v. Badan Singh, 17 Cal. 137 (142, 143) (P.C.), 16 I.A. 148, 23 P.R. 1890.

597. Encroachment by tenant:—Where a tenant takes possession of lands the landlord is dispossessed in a limited sense; in other words, he is deprived of actual or khas possession of the land, but not of proprietary possession or possession by receipts of rent; in such a case Art. 142 would apply, and the landlord, if he wishes to eject the tenant, must bring his suit within 12 years of the dispossession. If he does not do so, his title to recover actual possession would be barred, but his right to proprietary possession, i.e. right to receive fair rent, would not be lost, because the possession of the tenant, so far as the latter right is concerned, has never been adverse —Ishan v. Ramranjan, 2 C.L.J. 125. If the tenant encroaches upon the lands of his landlord, and claims that these lands are within his tenure, and thus holds possession of those lands for more than 12 years, the landlord's suit for ejectment is barred under Article 142, and the tenant by virtue of the statute of limitation acquires a right which entitles him to claim to hold the lands as a tenant of his landlord and to resist the landlord's claim for khas possession. But the landlord's proprietary right is not lost, because what has been asserted by the tenant is not that he has acquired by adverse possession an absolute interest, but only a tenancy right in the property—Gopal Krishna v. Lakhiram, 16 C.W.N. 634 (636), 14 I.C. 212; Raktoo v. Sudharam, 8 C.L.J. 557; Baldeb v. Jogi, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 109. If, however, the tenant intends the encroachment for his own exclusive benefit, and sets up a title adverse to the entire interest of the landlord, the latter must bring a suit to eject the tenant as a trespasser; if he fails to do so, his right to the proprietary possession as well as to the actual possession would both be barred—Ishan v. Ramranjan, 2 C.L J. 125; Raktoo v. Sudharam, 8 C.L.J. 557.

The nature and effect of the possession must depend upon the nature and extent of the rights asserted by the overt conduct or express declaration of the tenant. Consequently, there can be no acquisition of an absolute title, where it is found that the tenant has asserted nothing but a limited interest. Adverse possession of a limited interest, though a good plea to a suit for ejectment, is good only to the extent of that interest and not of the entire interest—Ishan v. Ramranjan, 2 C.L.J. 125; Muthurakkoo v. Orr, 35 Mad 618 (621). See Note 621A under Art. 144.

An encroachment made by a tenant on the property of his landlord should not be presumed to have been made absolutely for his own benefit and as against the landlord, but should be deemed to be added to the tenure and to form part thereof—Esubai v. Damodar, 16 Bom. 552 (558). The true presumption as to encroachments made by a tenant on the adjoining lands of his landlord is that the lands so encroached upon are added to the tenure and form part thereof for the benefit of the tenant so long as the original holding continues, and afterwards for the benefit of his landlord, unless it clearly appears by some act done at the time that the tenant made the encroachments for his own benefit—per Markby, J. in Gooroo Das v. Ishwar Chandra, 22 W.R. 246; Muthurakkoo v. Orr, 35 Mad. 618 (622). But this view has been dissented from in later cases of the Calcutta High Court. Thus, in Nuddyar Chand v. Meajan, 10 Cal. 820 (822), Garth, C.J. observes: "it would seem strange, if as a matter of law, a tenant was allowed without his landlord's permission, to appropriate any land which adjoins his own tenure, and then when his landlord complained of the trespass and required him to give the land up, he were allowed to take advantage of his own wrong, and insist upon retaining possession of it until the expiration of his tenure." In Prolhad Teor v. Kedar Nath, 25 Cal. 302, it has been held that if a tenant encroaches upon the adjoining lands of his landlord, the landlord may if he chooses treat him as a tenant in respect of the land encroached upon, but the tenant has no right to compel the landlord against his will to accept him as a tenant in respect of that land. In another case Mookerjee, J. observes: "An encroachment made by a tenant upon the adjoining waste land of his landlord, is prima facie made by him in his character as a tenant; but it is open to the landlord to repudiate the relation, to treat him as a trespasser and to evict him as such; on the other hand, it is open to the tenant to indicate at the time he encroaches that he intends to hold the encroached lands for his own exclusive benefit, and not to hold them as he held the land to which they are adjacent; in this event the landlord, though willing to treat him as a tenant, may be driven, by an assertion of a hostile title, to a suit to eject him as a trespasser—Ishan v. Ram Ranjan, 2 C.L.J. 125.

The Calcutta High Court has adopted the view that the tenant's possession of the encroached lands can only commence to be adverse when a title adverse to the landlord is asserted or when the landlord becomes aware of the encroachment; in other words, the tenant is bound to prove that he set up a right of tenancy to the encroached lands to the knowledge of his landlord—Ishan v. Ramranjan, 2 C.L.J. 125; Wali Ahmed v. Tota Mea, 31 Cal. 397 (403); Krishna Govinda v. Banku Behari, 13 C.W.N. 698, 4 I.C. 526. See also Subodh Gopal Bose v. Burmah Shell etc., Ltd., A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 67. But the Madras High Court holds that this rule is stated in too broad terms, that the ordinary rule of law is that possession held by a person in his own right is adverse to the true owner, whether the owner is aware of such possession being taken or not, and that a tenant is not bound to prove that his encroachment was known to the landlord—Muthurakko v. Orr, 35 Mad. 618 (622). At any rate, where the tenants were cultivating the encroached lands for a considerable length of time (e.g., 30 years), the landlord's knowledge of the encroachment will be presumed—Ibid.

598. Discontinuance of possession:—Discontinuance, being interpreted ejusdem generis with possession, means something of the nature of an abandonment—Arab v. Panjal, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 111, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 198. Discontinuance refers to a case where the person in possession goes out and is succeeded in possession by another—Brojendra v Sarojini, 20 C.W.N. 481, 31 I.C. 242, 22 C.L.J. 283; Sheikh Sohnur v. Huttman, 1 C.W.N. 277; Charu Chandra v Nahush Chandra, 50 Cal. 49 (63), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 1, 74 I.C. 630; Hashim Ali v. Iffat, 46 C.W.N. 561, 74 C.L.J. 261, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 180; Gangoobai v. Soni, 1942 N.L.J. 99; Maluk v. Anwar, A.I.R. 1950 Pesh. 31. The word "discontinuance" implies a voluntary act, an abandonment of possession followed by the actual possession of another. An intention to abandon is necessary and it must be either proved or admitted and can not be assumed—Maherban v. Yusuf, 1938 N.L J. 418, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 7, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 655. The word "discontinued" connotes three elements, two physical and one mental. There must be (1) actual withdrawal, (2) with an intention to abandon and (3) that another should step in, begin to occupy after the withdrawal—Abdul v. Habibulla, 69 C.L.J. 28, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 354. "The difference between dispossession and discontinuance of possession may be expressed in this way—the one is where a person comes in and drives out the others from possession; the other case is where the person in possession goes out and is followed into possession by other persons"—per Fry, J., in Rains v. Buxton, (1880) 14 Ch. D. 537 (539). "The word 'discontinuance' means an abandonment of possession followed by the actual possession of another person. This I think must be its meaning, for if no one succeeds to the possession vacated or abandoned, there could be no one in whose favour or for whose protection the statute would operate. To constitute discontinuance, there must both be dereliction by the person who has the right, and actual possession, whether adverse or not, to be protected. Actual possession is the object of the statute, and to apply its provisions to any other case would be to violate its plain meaning and policy"—per Blackburne, J. in McDonell v. McKinty, (1847) 10 Ir. L.R. 514. 'Discontinuance' means that a person in possession goes out and is followed into possession by another person, because unless he is so followed, he will in law be deemed to continue in possession and therefore there will be no discontinuance of possession—Azid v. Maqbul, I.L.R. (1939) All. 454, 1939 A.L.J. 94,

A.I.R. 1939 All. 257. There must be an adverse possessor in order to bring the statute into operation. It does not run unless there is a person in whose favour it can run. There must be both absence of possession by the person who has the right and actual possession by another to be protected, to bring the case within the statute—Smith v. Lloyd, (1854) 23 L.J. Ex. 194: 9 Exch. Rep. 562. The principle is, that the owner must be considered in point of law as always in possession so long as there is no intrusion. The starting point for the limitation under Article 142 is the date of possession or discontinuance, and not the date when the owner ceases to occupy the land—Madan Mohan v. Braj Behari, 5 P.L.J. 593 (594), A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 36, 1 P.L T. 505, 57 I.C. 717. Therefore, where it is found that the land in dispute is the property of the plaintiff, that though the plaintiff under a mistake laid down certain boundary pillars leaving the land in dispute outside the boundary pillars, no one entered into possession of the land so left out, until within 12 years before the date of the institution of the present suit, held that, having regard to the nature of the land (which was jungle land) the possession should be held to have continued with the plaintiff until he was actually dispossessed, and that there was no discontinuance of the plaintiff's possession on the date of his laying down the boundary pillars, within the meaning of this Article—Sheikh Sohnur v. Huttman, 1 C.W.N. 277 (279).

In the absence of a motive for abandonment and of the evidence of intention to abandon, a suit by the plaintiff for possession is not barred by Article 142—Shahabal v. Ganesh, 53 P.R. 1907. Making over possession under an invalid lease to a tenant does not amount to discontinuance—Maharaj v. Budhu, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 46. There can be no discontinuance within the meaning of this Article merely because of absence of physical possession—Rangulal v. Makhan, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 183. Thus, mere non-residence in a house owing to its being in a state of repair does not constitute discontinuance of possession of the house, in the absence of an intention on the owner's part to give up possession—Krishnammal v. Pichannavayyan, 7 M.L.J. 186. The fact that the land is merely allowed to lie waste while the owner is in distant place does not constitute discontinuance of possession—Muhammad Yar v. Ghulam, 49 P.R. 1884; Ramzen v. Basharat, 105 P.R. 1901; Narain v. Bilta, 204 P.L.R. 1914, 25 I.C. 82. Merely remaining quiescent at the assertion of title without knowledge does not amount to discontinuance—Rangulal v. Makhan, supra. But long absence and inaction may be evidence of abandonment—Shahzada Suraya v. Azim, 61 P.L.R. 1910, 5 I.C. 888, 29 P.R. 1910; Nihal Singh v. Dula Singh, 38 P.R. 1885.

There can be no discontinuance of possession by reason of the mere submergence of the land—Rampati v. Ramani, 31 C.W.N. 772 (P.C.), 126 I.C. 81, A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 198 (200).

The mere failure to cultivate uncultivable land does not constitute abandonment —Shahabal v. Ganesh, 53 P.R. 1907. The principle is that there can be no discontinuance by absence of use and enjoyment, where the land is not capable of use and enjoyment—Leigh v. Jack, (1879) L.R. 5 Ex. D. 264 (274).

The mere fact that a mine has not been worked by the owner does not amount to discontinuance of possession—Bengal Coal Co., Ltd., v. Monoranjan, 22 C.W.N. 441, 41 I.C. 297.

A person by merely living outside the village cannot be said to have abandoned the site in the village in which he once had his residential house which has fallen down and has not been re-built for many years. Possession in case of such vacant site is presumed to go with title, and its mere use by a neighbour for the purpose of tethering his cattle thereon cannot be regarded as adverse possession—Lachman Das v. Narsingh Das, 101 P.L.R. 1916, 36 I.C. 207.

This Article does not apply where the discontinuance is by agreement of the parties; thus, where the agreement is that the plaintiff should resume possession of the mortgaged land from the mortgagee upon repayment of the loan, it cannot be said that the possession has been discontinued by the plaintiff—Maung Sin v. Maung So, 8 Rang. 556, 129 I.C. 511, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 40; Municipal Corporation v. Province of Sind, A.I.R. 1947 Sind 69, 230 I.C. 311 (resumption by Government).

This Article does not apply where there is a change of character of possession as that does not amount to discontinuance of possession. Thus where a wakif continues to be in possession as a mutwalli after the execution of the wakfnama, there is only a change in the character of possession and not discontinuance of possession as there is no abandonment of possession—Hashim Ali v. Iffat, 46 C.W.N. 561, 74 C.L.J. 261, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 180.

The owner of a property who had accorded permissive occupation of the same to a person on the ground of charity or relationship cannot be said to have discontinued possession of the property, within the meaning of this Article, because under such circumstances the possession of the occupier is the possession of the owner—Gobind Lall v. Debendranath, 6 Cal. 311 (315); where therefore the owner seeks to recover the premises so occupied, the suit does not fall under this Article but under Article 144, and limitation runs from the time when the occupation of the tenant became adverse to the owner—Gobind Lall v. Debendranath, 6 Cal. 311, 314 (reversing on appeal Gobind v. Debendranath, 5 Cal. 679); Arab v. Panjal, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 111, A.I.R. 1938 Sindh 198; Maluk v. Anwar, A.I.R. 1950 Peshwar 31. A contrary view has been taken in Gangoobai v. Soni, 1942 N.L.J. 99, where it has been held that where in a suit for possession the plaintiff alleges a licence for a term under which the defendant got into possession there is only a discontinuance of possession and this Article and not Art. 144 applies. Where the plaintiff's husband conveyed to her a house in 1898 in satisfaction of her dower, but continued to reside in the house as before till his death in 1911, whereupon the defendant (the son of the plaintiff's husband by another wife) took forcible possession of the house, and then the plaintiff sued to recover posssession, held that, having regard to the relationship, the possession of the plaintiff's husband from 1898 to 1911 was only permissive occupation and did not amount to dispossession or discontinuance of possession of the plaintiff, and that consequently the plaintiff must be deemed to have held possession up to 1911—Ibrahim v. Isa Rasul, 41 Bom. 5 (12). In such cases the possession of the husband will be treated as possession of an agent or manager or relation and a mere secret change of intention or an act such as a mortgage deed executed without the knowledge of the wife will not prevail against the wife—Bhagabai v. Ghanshamdas, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 824, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 328.

Where on default of payment of Government revenue by a co-sharer, possession of his share was made over to another by Government on a farming lease, which expired in 1871, but on the expiry of the lease, the lessee still retained possession for over twelve years, and the original owner or his representative made no claim during the period, held that there was a discontinuance of possession by the original owner from 1871 within the meaning of this Article—Madho v. Surjan, 28 All. 281 (283).

599. Attachment by Magistrate:—An attachment by the Magistrate under sec. 146, Criminal Procedure Code, does not amount to dispossession of the true owner from the property attached, nor does it amount to a discontinuance of possession by the owner. Although the actual or physical possession is with the Magistrate, it is merely a custody or detention on behalf of the true owner pending the decision of the Court of competent jurisdiction. The legal possession will, during the attachment, be with the true owner. Consequently, a suit for declaration of title to the property attached is not a suit for possession under Article 142 or 144 but falls under Article 120—Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410 (413, 415), (dissenting from Goswami v. Sri Girdharji, 20 All. 120); Panna Lal v. Panchu, 49 Cal. 544, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 419, 26 C.W.N. 432, 65 I.C. 200; Brojendra v. Sarojini, 20 C.W.N. 481, 31 I.C. 242, 22 C.L.J. 283. If the true owner was in fact in possession when the attachment was effected, his possession in the eye of the law is not interrupted. If, on the other hand, the wrongdoer was in possession at the time when the attachment took place, the effect of the attachment is to interrupt his possession, and from the moment of attachment the possession of the rightful owner revives in the eye of the law—Sarat Chandra v. Bibhabati, 34 C.L.J. 302, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 584, 66 I.C. 433.

But if after attachment, the Magistrate puts the defendant in possession of the property, then of course there is actual dispossession of the plaintiff, and a suit by the plaintiff against the defendant would be governed by this Article—Nisarali v. Adebuddi, 16 C.W.N. 1073, 16 I.C. 620.

But in the case of an attachment under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, the possession of the Magistrate during attachment should enure for the benefit of the party who may be declared by the Magstrate under sec. 145 (4) to be the person in possession at the date of the proceedings; such person may not be the same who may be declared by the Civil Court to be the true owner of the property in dispute. The attachment under sec. 145 is different from an attachment under sec. 146, Cr. P. Code—Abinash Chandra v. Tarini, 30 C.W.N. 541, 95 I.C. 117, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 782.

When property, which is in dispute between two parties, is attached and taken possession of by the Collector for the protection of the Government revenue, it is his duty, after crediting the Government revenue and paying the collection expenses, to pay over the surplus of the rents collected to the real owner. And so long as the Collector retains possession, his possession must be held to be on behalf of, and not adverse to, the real owner. Nor does the Collector's possession become one on behalf of the defendant, simply because he afterwards delivers possession to the defendant in consequence of a decree—Karan Singh v. Bakar Ali Khan, 5 All. 1 (6) (P.C.).

Possession of Receiver:—The possession of a Receiver appointed by the Civil Court stands on the same footing as the possession of a Magistrate during an attachment under sec. 146 Cr. P. Code. When disputes arise between claimants as to possession of immoveable property, and the property is placed in the hands of a Receiver by the Court pending the determination of the question of title, the Court, takes possession through its Receiver on behalf of the party who may ultimately establish his title, and from the moment the title is established, possession must be deemed to have been the possession of the lawful owner whose title has been established. While the Court (through its Receiver) holds possession for the benefit of the rightful owner, the previous possession on the part of the wrongdoer cannot, by any legal fiction, be deemed to continue so as to be available towards the ultimate acquisition of title against the true owner. The possession of the Receiver or the attachment by the Magistrate does not amount to dispossesson of the owner or to discontinuance of his possession—Bisheshwar v. Chandreshwar, 7 Pat. 319, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 260 (262, 263), 108 I.C. 89, following Sarat Chandra v. Bibhabati, 34 C.L.J. 302, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 684, 66 I.C. 433.

A Receiver is an Officer of Court and is not a particular agent of any party to the suit. To treat such Receiver as plaintiff's agent for the purpose of initiating adverse possession by the plaintiff would be to impute wrongdoing to the Court and its officers—Reddy v. Reddy, A. I. R. 1957 S.C. 314.

600. Burden of proof—possession, title:—In a case falling under this Article, the plaintiff must at the outset show that he had been in possession within twelve years before suit, and cannot rest merely on a proof of title; while in cases falling under Art. 144, the plaintiff may rest content with proof of title only, and the burden lies on the defendants to show that they have had a possession inconsistent with the title of the plaintiff more than twelve years before suit—Faki v. Babaji, 14 Bom. 458 (461); Ibrahim v. Isa Rasul, 41 Bom. 5 (11); Moro Desai v. Rama Chandra, 6 Bom. 508; Monomohan v. Mothura Mohan, 7 Cal. 255; Udit Narain v. Golab Chandra, 27 Cal. 221 (P.C.); Mohima Chunder v. Mohesh Chunder, 16 Cal. 473 (P.C.); Gapaul v. Nilmoney, 10 Cal. 374; Kashinath v. Shridhar, 16 Bom. 343; Kuppuswami v. Chockalinga, 49 M.L.J. 788, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 181, 91 I.C. 454; Innasimuthu v. Upakarath, 23 Mad. 10 (P.C.); Ramayya v. Kotamma, 45 Mad. 370 (374); Jafar Ali v. Mashuq, 14 All. 193; Haji Khan v. Baldeo, 24 All. 90 (93); Komil Prasad v. Bharat, 23 A.L.J. 874; Mirza Shamsher v. Kunjbehari, 12 C.W.N. 273; Asghar Reza v. Mehdi, 20 Cal. 560 (P.C.); Mahomed Ali v. Khaja Abdul, 9 Cal. 744, 750 (F.B.); Rani Hemanta Kumari v. Jagadindra, 10 C.W.N. 630 (P.C.); Midnapore Zamindari Co. v. Panday, 2 P.L.J. 506, 41 I.C. 114; Dharani Kanta v. Gabar Ali, 17 C.W.N. 389 (P.C.), 18 I.C. 17; Rakhal Chandra v. Durgadas, 26 C.W.N. 724, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 557; Mazhar Hussain v. Behari, 28 All. 760; Maung Sin v. Maung Po , 8 Rang. 556, 129 I.C. 511, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 40; Muthia Chetty v. Seena, 56 I.C. 951, 12 Bur.L.T. 234; Inder Lal v. Ram Surat, 5 P.L.J. 724 (728); Shiva Prasad v. Hira Singh, 6 P.L.J. 478 (491, 525) (F.B.); Nausha v. Umrao, A.I.R. 1951 All 626; Siri Ram v. Bishan, A.I.R. 1952 Pepsu 46; Ramjatan v. Tapaser, A.I R. 1956 Pat. 533. The essential difference between Art. 142 and Art. 144 is that when a plaintiff is suing for possession on the basis of dispossession (Art. 142) the burden lies on him to show that the date of his dispossession or discontinuance of possession which gave him the cause of action for the suit was within 12 years of the suit; while if the suit is not for possession based on the ground of dispossession, but is a suit for possession of immoveable property falling under Art. 144, then on proof of title the plaintiff is entitled to succeed: his suit cannot be dismissed until the defendant further establishes his adverse possession for more than 12 years—Bindhyachal v. Ram Gharib, 1934 A.L.J. 973 (F.B), 152 I C. 1, A.I.R. 1934 All. 993 (997). In such a case the burden is on the defendant to prove adverse possession—Mehtab v. Dayal, 41 P.L.R. 715, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 172. There is nothing in Art. 142 which would confine its application to suits based on possessory title only and would make it inapplicable where the suit is based on proprietory title or the plaintiff's title is established— Devram v. Asharam, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 793, A.I.R. 1940 Sind. 49; the Article applies to all cases of alleged or proved dispossession whether the plaintiff's suit is based on his proprietory or possessory title—Jai Mongal v. Bindeshuri, 15 Luck. 157, 1939 O.W.N. 1005, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh. 134. In cases in which the plaintiff sues for possession of immoveable property both on the ground of title and on the ground of his possession having been disturbed by the defendant, if he proves his title, the burden of establishing title by adverse possession lies upon the defendant, and if the defendant succeeds in proving that fact, the suit must fail; otherwise the plaintiff is entitled to a decree. To this extent, Art. 144 will apply to the suit. But it may be that the plaintiff, though not able to substantiate his title, is in a position to prove his possession and dispossession by the defendant within 12 years. If that be the case, Art. 142 applies, and the burden will be on the plaintiff. In short, suits for possession based both on plaintiff's title and possessory title invite the application of Arts. 142 and 144 according to the varying circumstances of each case—Mahomed Mahmud v. Mahomed Afaq, 11 O.W.N. 104, 147 I.C. 805, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 21 (24); Arab v. Panjal, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 111, A.I.R. 1938 Sind. 198. Where there is no evidence, or no evidence of any value, on behalf of the plaintiff as to his possession at any time during 12 years before suit, the plaintiff's case will fail; and in such a case, it is immaterial that the defendant's evidence is weak or that he offers no evidence —Shiva Prasad v. Hira Singh, 6 P.L.J. 478 (525) (F.B.), A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 237, 62 I.C. 1.

But the plaintiff need not prove actual user; for in fact possession is not necessarily the same thing as actual user; and if the land is of such a nature as to render it unfit for actual enjoyment in the usual modes (as for instance where the land was a narrow slip of unenclosed land adjoining a public lane and unsuitable for agriculture) it may be presumed that the possession of the plaintiff continued until the contrary is proved—Inder Lal v. Ram Surat, 5 P.L.J. 724, 58 I.C. 773. It is not the law that if a land is left vacant and no other person is in possession, the plaintiff must fail unless he shows actual possession, that is, by positive acts, user and enjoyment within 12 years of suit—Aziz v. Maqbul, I.L.R. (1939) All. 454, 1939 A.L.J. 94, A.I.R. 1939 All. 257. The nature of the possession to be looked for, and the evidence of its continuance, must depend upon the character and condition of the land in dispute. If the land is either permanently or temporarily incapable of actual enjoyment in any of the customary modes (residence or receipt of rent), as in the case of land covered with sand by inundation or jungle land, it would be unreasonable to look for the same evidence of possession as in the case of a house or cultivated field. All that can be required is that the plaintiff should show such acts of ownership as are natural under the existing condition of the land, and in such case, when he has done this, his possession is presumed to continue as long as the state of the land remains unchanged, unless he is shown to have been dispossessed—Mahomed Ali v. Khaja Abdul Gunny, 9 Cal. 744 (751) (F.B.) Thakur Singh v. Bhogeraj, 27 Cal. 25 (28, 29); Rakhal Chandra v. Durgadas, 26 C.W.N. 724, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 557, 67 I.C. 673; Gopal Chandra v. Monmohini, 31 C.W.N. 806, 105 I.C. 369, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 118; Ala Baksh v. Bir Bikram Kishore, 33 C.W.N. 1161 (1162).

In case of waste land, tank land or jungle land, situate within the zemindary of the plaintiff, prima facie evidence of his possession within 12 years anterior to the date of the suit must be given, but in determining this question, evidence of physical acts of enjoyment and user indicating possession is not necessary—Sheo Narain v. Badal, 8 O.C. 177. In a suit relating to waste lands falling under this Article, it must be determined whether having regard to the evidence as to the nature of the lands and possession, the plaintiff has been able to establish actual or constructive possession within the statutory period—Aptabur v. Tara, 70 C.L.J. 534, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 185. Where the subject matter of dispute is a bamboo clump not capable of possession every day or even at a particular season, the plaintiff need not prove physical acts of possession—Badri v. Raghunandan, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 408. It is also not necessary to prove acts of enjoyment over the whole land. Thus, where the plaintiff obtains a lease of low-lying land and cultivates the major portion of the same, it is not necessary for him in a suit against the landlord in whose possession the remaining land is recorded in the record of rights as waste land to prove specific acts of possession over every square yard of his holding, and cultivation of bulk of the demised area will be treated as enjoyment of possession of the whole—Chandra v. Butu, 17 Pat. 210, 1938 P.W.N. 194, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 222. The ordinary principle that the plaintiff must prove possession within 12 years cannot apply where the land is uncultivable, or where the plaintiff has no right to take possession because of the currency of a lease of a thicadar. In such a case, the plaintiff cannot be deemed to be out of possession if he is receiving rent from the thicadar for the entire mouza. It is for the defendant to establish an adverse possession (Art. 144) for the statutory period—Bankey Bihari v. Gudo Choudhury, 11 P.L.T. 447, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 476 (478).

So also, it is sufficient if the plaintiff can prove that he was in constructive possession of the property within twelve years before suit, by virtue of his title thereto. If it is proved that he had title to the land, it is not necessary for him to exercise overt acts of ownership—Barjor Singh v. Sidh Nath, 1 Luck. 441, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 141, 98 I.C. 704.

Proof of symbolical possession would be sufficient in a case where such possession amounts to actual possession in the eye of law. Thus, in the case of a bare site, symbolical possession obtained by the plaintiff is equivalent to actual possession. Therefore, where the plaintiff purchased a land, which was a bare site, in a Court sale in July 1902, and obtained symbolical possession through Court in October 1904, and he alleges that he was ousted therefrom in 1914 and he brought the present suit for possession in March 1916, it was held that the symbolical possession was equivalent to actual possession of the plaintiff, and the defendant could defeat his claim only by showing an adverse possession for more than twelve years—Kaman v. Umra, 76 P.R. 1918, 47 I.C. 441. If the allegation of dispossession is not proved, the period of limitation will run from the date when the plaintiff was given symbolical possession by the Court—Munsuf v. Abdul, 48 C.W.N. 187; Jowbala v. Jiwan, A.I.R. 1950 Pepsu. 22. See also Note 621B under Art. 144.

In a case falling under Art. 142, the defendant will not have to prove that his possession was adverse; the word 'adverse' does not occur in Article 142; the question under this Article is whether the plaintiff while in possession has been dispossessed or has discontinued the possession more than 12 years before suit—Mahammad Amanulla v. Badan, 17 Cal. 137 (143) (P.C.); Gurshai v. Chedi, 27 O.C. 130, 79 I.C. 964, 1 O.W.N. 38. The Article makes no reference to the defendant or his possession—Naru v. Krishna, 40 Bom.L.R. 166, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 210. No question of adverse possession arises for determination in a suit under Art. 142. It is not for the defendant to raise and prove adverse possession in order to show that the suit is time-barred. The plaintiff has to prove possession and dispossession within a period of 12 years prior to suit—Sita Ram v. Ram Sunder, 50 All. 813, A.I.R. 1928 All. 412 (413), 26 A.L.J. 573; Nara v. Krishna, 40 Bom.L.R. 166, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 210; Devram v. Asharam, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 793, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 49; Batuk v. Rudra, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 206. Thus where the plaintiff's case is that he was in possession till a particular date when he was dispossessed by the defendant the onus is on the plaintiff to show that he was in possession within 12 years of the suit and is not on the defendant to show that the plaintiff lost his title by adverse possession on the part of the defendant—Ramendra v. Barada, 66 C.L.J. 359, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 206. So also, the onus is on the purchaser of a tenure in a certificate sale suing for khas possession on the definite allegation of possession and dispossession to prove that he and his predecessors were in khas possession within 12 years prior to the institution of the suit and it is not necessary for the defendants to prove tenancy right alleged by them under the predecessor in interest of the plaintiff by adverse possession for 12 years—Jinatullah v. Tamizuddin, 70 C.L.J. 539, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 194.

The plaintiff cannot, merely by proving possession at any period prior to 12 years before suit, shift the onus to the defendant—Mahomed Ali v. Khaja Abdul, 9 Cal. 744 (750) (F.B.) (dissenting from Kally Churn v. Secretary of State, 6 Cal. 725); Maharaja Koowar Singh v. Nund Lal, 8 M.I.A. 199 (220); Suresh Chandra v. Shiti Kantha, 51 Cal. 669, 28 C.W.N. 637, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 855; Premeswar v. Madhav, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 55. Even the fact that the defendant admits that the land in dispute once belonged to the plaintiff at some time or other (not necessarily within 12 years prior to suit) does not shift the onus to the defendant of proving adverse possession—Mazhar Husain v. Behari Singh, 28 All. 760 (762). Where in a suit for possession, all that is proved is that the plaintiff was at one time the owner, but that for the last 15 or 20 years the defendants have been in possession, and the plaintiff claims that they obtained possession from him, the suit falls under Article 142, and if the plaintiff fails to prove the permissive nature of the defendants' occupation, the burden would lie on the plaintiff to show that he had been in possession within 12 years before suit. If he had proved the permissive occupation of the defendants, then the burden would have been shifted to the defendants of proving that they had acquired title by 12 years' adverse possession—Maung Gyi v. Maung On, 7 Rang. 85, 117 I.C. 591, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 153 (154, 155); Premeswar v. Madhav, supra. In a suit for possession alleging licence for a term under which the defendant got into possession the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that the defendant's permissive possession began within 12 years prior to the suit—Gangoobai v. Soni, 1942 N.L.J. 99.

In order to be successful in a suit for possession and ejectment of the defendant, it is necessary firstly for the plaintiffs to prove their title to the suit property and secondly, to show that they have been in possession of that property within 12 years before date of suit—Mangla v. Lokha, 1941 A.M.L.J. 48. Thus where in a suit for possession the plaintiff alleges that the defendants and their predecessors-in-interest had been his tenants and that recently, that is, within 12 years before suit, the defendants had denied the contract of tenancy but also pleaded title in themselves by adverse possession and the plaintiff fails to prove the contract of tenancy or that he was in possession within 12 years of the suit, the suit fails even though the original title was with the plaintiff—Ramcharan v. Mangia, 1943 A.L.W. 328. In actions in ejectment, the plaintiffs have to prove their subsisting title, that is, possession within 12 years before they can succeed—Bibkuty v. Girish, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 191; Gopalan v. Sanku, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 32. Where in a suit for ejectment, the record of rights raises a presumption in the plaintiff's favour, the onus is shifted to the defendant to establish affirmatively that the plaintiff has been out of possession for more than 12 years—Sheikh Barkat v. Basant, 21 C.W.N. 175, 39 I.C. 356. The actual presumption of correctness which the Record of Rights carries is merely that the plaintiff was in possession at the time the record was made. The general rule of evidence in favour of presuming the continuity of things shown to exist at a prior date cannot be availed of in suit for ejectment—Ghoghar v. Jagarnath, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 475.

Is a suit falling under Article 142, the plaintiff has to prove possession and dispossession within 12 years. If he proves his possession 10 years ago, and that he is not in possession at the time of suit and that the defendant is, then it follows that the defendant has dispossessed him at some time known or unknown within 10 years. The suit is therefore not barred. It is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the actual date of dispossession—Dain v. Khanu, 8 Lah. 655, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 98, 29 P.L.R. 77; Devram v. Asharam, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 793, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 49. If the plaintiff can prove that he was in possession within 12 years before suit, the burden lies on the defendants of proving a present title to the land in themselves, before they can succeed —Sudama v. Kesho, 102 P.R. 1879. When the plaintiff has proved that the ousting which has interfered with his possession and resulted in his dispossession has taken place within 12 years of the institution of the suit, it then lies upon the defendant to establish that he had exercised such exclusive possession as amounted to an ouster of the plaintiff from a date more than 12 years prior to the institution of the suit—Ram Sewak v. Ram Sahai, 1942 O.W.N. 281, 1942 A.L.W. 225.

In a suit for possession of certain land as having accreted to plaintiff's village by alluvion, it lies on the plaintiff to prove both title and possession within 12 years. If the plaintiff's title is proved, he may succeed either by proving that the land in suit had accreted by alluvion within the limitation period, or the plaintiff may prove that although the land had accreted more than 12 years before suit, it had remained within the limitation period water or jungle land, in respect of which the presumption would arise that possession followed title—Habibulla v. Lalta Prasad, 34 All. 612 (614).

Where a vendee of immoveable property sues for possession, his vendor not having been in possession at the time of sale, it lies upon the plaintiff to show that his vendor was in possession at some period within twelve years prior to the date of the sale—Deba v. Rohtagi, 28 All. 479 (480); Kashinath v. Shridhar, 16 Bom. 343 (346). But see these cases commented on in Note 574 under Article 136.

A purchaser at a Court auction sale held in execution of a mortgage decree for possession of the property in the occupation of another alleged to be in possession with permission of the mortgagor must show that he is in possession within 12 years prior to the suit as the onus is on him to prove that. Mere proof of title is not enough to shift the burden on the defendant—Official Receiver v. Govindaraju, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 953, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 190, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 798 (F.B.); St. Anthony's Church v. Krishnaveni, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 542. It is incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove that he has exercised acts of ownership by being in possession within 12 years of suit—Chenchreyama v. Ademma, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 428, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 673. A declaratory decree pure and simple or even a decree for possession not effectively executed cannot satisfy the requirements of proof of possession under this Article. Ibid. See also, Kishen v. Mohan, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 1.

The quantum of evidence of possession which it will be necessary for the plaintiff to adduce will depend on the circumstances of each case. In some instances, very slight evidence may be sufficient to shift the burden of proof on the defendant. Thus, in dealing with the question of possession as between brothers and sisters in native families, regard must be had to the conditions of life under which such families live and to the fact that in such families the management of the property of the family is, by reason of the seclusion of the female members, ordinarily left in the hands of the male members. In the case of such families, slight evidence of enjoyment of income arising from the property is sufficient prima facie proof of possession—Inayet Husen v. Ali Husen, 20 All. 182 (185); Puttathayamma v. Rathnarajiah, I.L.R. (1955) Mys. 227, A.I.R. 1955 Mys. 33.

Where in a suit for possession, plaintiff pleads possession and dispossession, the suit is governed by Art. 142. Dispossession may be either actual in the sense of an existing actual possession being forcibly terminated by actual dispossession or it may be a legal constructive possession being terminated by a legal dispossession—Beharilal v. Narain Das, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 475, 16 Lah. 442, 37 P.L.R. 743, 157 I.C. 686 (F.B.). A suit for possession, the claim being based on dispossession, is governed by Art. 142, and the burden is on the plaintiff to establish his possession within limitation—Ram Shankar v. Sheo Dutt, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 88, 1935 O.W.N. 8, 153 I.C. 371; Mantajuddin v. Alam, 73 C.L.J. 47; Gauri v. Jadunath, 18 Luck. 624, 1942 O.W.N. 753; Rosmat v. Bigaru, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 57; Guru Charan v. Mafijuddin, 65 C.L.J. 603. A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 150; Haider v. Subhan, A.I.R. 1940 All. 428; Nagina v. Municipal Committee, 42 P.L.R. 531; Naru v. Krishna, 40 Bom.L.R. 166, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 210; Ram v. Hari, 52 Bom.L.R. 358, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 346. Thus where the plaintiff states that he was in possession of the share in dispute and lost it when his father's name was struck off the mutation register, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove possession within 12 years of suit—Jwala v. Lakshmi, 1941 O.W.N. 615, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 415. So also, where in a suit for possession, the plaintiff alleges dispossession of his predecessor-in-interest by the defendant, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove his possession within 12 years from the date of the alleged dispossession—Fanindra v. Satya, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 632.

In cases where this Article applies, the burden of proving dispossession or discontinuance of possession can be discharged either by the facts admitted in the plaint of pleadings, or if not admitted there, then by the facts actually found—Meherban v. Yusuf, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 655, 1938 N.L.J. 418, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 7. A plaintiff cannot, by cleverly drafting the plaint, evade the burden of proof which this Article casts upon a person who is suing for possession on the ground of dispossession—Sangam v. Ganga, I.L.R. (1946) All. 178, A.I.R. 1946 All. 389. Where the plaintiff bases his suit on the ground of dispossession on a certain date but fails to prove dispossession on the date alleged, the requirements of law will be satisfied if it is found that the plaintiff was in possession till some time within 12 years of the suit. It would be more a question of rule of pleadings and fairness of the trial rather than a question of law to determine whether the plaintiff should be permitted to take a stand on an alternative provided by law but not pleaded by him—Harnandan v. Ramanandi, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 391.

Where there is a clear assertion of title and there is nowhere any assertion of possession by the plaintiffs or of their dispossession by the defendants, Art. 142 cannot be applied—Mulla Ahmad v. Fazal Ahmad, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 133, 158 I.C. 968.

601. Presumption:—The law presumes in favour of continuity of possession —Nathoo Lal v. Durga Prasad, 1954 S.C.J. 557, A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 355. See also Manohar v. Charu, 1955 S.C.J. 114, A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 228. An owner of property starts with the presumption in his favour that he is in possession of his property. But where the plaintiff admits that he has been dispossessed by the defendant, or at any rate it is found in the case that he has been dispossessed, and is not in possession when he brings the suit, then he cannot start with the presumption in his favour that possession of the property was with him. He would have no right of action unless he claims within the period of limitation. He has to bring his suit within 12 years from the date on which he was dispossessed. The burden of showing that this date was within 12 years before suit is on the plaintiff, and he cannot claim to have discharged this burden without any proof and evidence, merely on the ground of any presumption arising from the fact of his ownership—Bindhyachal v. Ram Gharib, 1934 A.L.J. 973 (F.B.), 152 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1934 All. 993 (997). In a case falling under Article 142, the plaintiff will have to prove not so much that he had a title to the land, as that he was in possession within 12 years before the suit. "Where in an ejectment suit the plaintiff alleged dispossession by defendant eleven years before suit, the onus of proving plaintiff's possession prior to his dispossession lies upon him (plaintiff), and in this question of evidence, the initial fact of the plaintiff's title comes to his aid with greater or less force according to the circumstances established in evidences"—Rani Hemanta Kumari v. Jagadindra, 10 C.W.N. 630 (P.C.), 8 Bom.L.R. 400, 16 M.L.J. 272, 3 A.L.J. 363. It is not sufficient to enable the plaintiff to succeed in the suit merely to prove that at some date antecedent to a period of 12 years prior to the institution of the suit he had acquired some paper title to the land; he must also prove that he was in possession within 12 years prior to the suit. This possession will be presumed from title under certain circumstances. Thus, where the evidence of possession on behalf of the plaintiff and on behalf of the defendant as to the former's possession within 12 years before suit, is strong and evenly balanced, the presumption that possession goes with title will prevail—Raja Shiva v. Hira Singh, 6 P.L.T. 478 (525) (F.B.), 62 I.C. 1; Runjeet Ram v. Gobindhan, 20 W.R. 25 (P.C.); Fakir v. Munshi Ramcharan, 35 I.C. 554, 1 P.L.J. 146 (148); Dhurm Singh v. Hur Persad, 12 Cal. 38 (40); Nawab Bahadur v. Gopi Nath, 13 C.L.J. 625, 6 I.C. 392 (397); Thakur Singh v. Bhogeraj, 27 Cal. 25 (27); Kasturi v. Rajkumar, 8 C.W.N. 876. The law presumes that possession follows title and does not favour forcible entry into possession by trespassers—Tukaram v. Tukaram, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 37, 97 I.C. 1006. But if it is found that the evidence produced by both the plaintiff and the defendant as to possession is unworthy of credit, the plaintiff's suit must fail, in as much as the presumption which arises upon proof of title cannot be called in aid to give weight to evidence unworthy of credit any more than if no evidence at all had been given—Raja Shiva Prasad v. Hira Singh, 6 P.L.J. 478 (491) (F.B.), 62 I.C. 1, (overruling Bhikhad Bhunjan v. Upendra Nath, 4 P.L.T. 463); Fakira v. Munshi Ramcharan, 1 P.L.J. 146 (148), 35 I.C. 554; Thakur Singh v. Bhogeraj, 27 Cal. 25 (27); Lala Singh v. Latif Hossen, 21 C.L.J. 480, 28 I.C. 477; Kasturi Singh v. Rajkumar, 8 C.W.N. 876. In Sheokali v. Jaleba, 1947 A.L.J. 302, A.I.R. 1948 All. 56, it has been held that in the absence of any definite evidence of possession of either party it must be presumed that possession follows title. The presumption arises when there is absence of evidence of effective possession or conflicting evidence as to possession before the date of possession. The same view has been taken in Ayissa v. Kunhaikalanthan, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 194, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 420. Where the evidence adduced by both parties although unsatisfactory, is not altogether valueless, the Cour tis entitled to take into consideration the presumption arising from title—Reuf v. Bodhi, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 484. The right principles of law were applied in Reuf v. Bodhi, supra—Jaldhari v. Rajendra, A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 386. If the plaintiff's title is established to a land which emerged in 1905 after diluvion, and it is found that he was not dispossessed before 1908, he must be deemed to have been in possession from 1905 up to 1908 and thereafter till he was actually dispossessed, and a suit brought in 1917 was not barred—Satish Chandra v. Birendra, 33 C.W.N. 1016 (1023) (P.C.), 56 I.A. 305, A.I.R. 1929 P.C, 225, 118 I.C. 259. A property cannot remain without an owner and without being in possession of somebody. But if no one is in actual possession it must be deemed to be in the constructive possession of its owner, and it is in such a case that the legal presumption, that possession follows title, applies—Aziz v. Maqbul, I.L.R. (1939) All. 454, 1939 A.L.J. 94, A.I.R. 1939 All. 257.

Where the land is of such a character (e.g., vacant site, waste or jungle land or land under water) that proof of any act of possession in the usual modes is substantially impracticable, it will be presumed that possession follows title and plaintiff may therefore give proof of title only; and the onus will be shifted upon the defendant to prove that he acquired the ownership by adverse possession—Raja Shiva Prasad v. Hira Singh, 6 P.L.J. 478 (525) (F.B.), 62 I.C. 1; Rakhal Chandra v. Durgadas, 26 C.W.N. 724, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 557; Srinivasachariar v. Raghava, 46 M.L.J. 560, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 676, 79 I.C. 1011; Ramanathan v. Lakshmanan, 54 Mad. 622, 61 M.L.J. 224, 133 I.C. 9, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 644; Mahommad Saheb v. Tilokchand, 46 Bom. 920 (924), A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 243, 66 I.C. 764, 24 Bom.L.R. 373; Midnapore Zamindary Co. v. Panday, 2 P.L.J. 506 (509), 41 I.C. 114; Mahomed Ali v. Khaja Abdul Gunny, 9 Cal. 744 (751) (F.B.); Ganapati v. Raghunath, 33 Bom. 712 (717); Habibulla v. Lalta Parsad, 34 All. 612 (614); Sadik Husain v. Etizad, 13 O.L.J. 798, 101 I.C. 714, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 209; Badri v. Raghunandan, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 408; Janaki v. Chacki, A.I.R. 1951 Tra.-Co. 246. In such a case the defendant cannot succeed on account of want of proof of possession on the part of the plaintiff, unless the defendant can displace the presumption of possession following title, by proof of effective acts of possession by himself—Ramanathan v. Lakshmanan, supra. If the property in dispute has, up to a short time before suit, remained waste and unoccupied, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove acts of possession within 12 years of suit; he has only to prove prima facie title not extinguished by limitation; and the possession will be presumed to follow title. The onus will be shifted on to the defendant to prove when his possession became adverse—Ramzam Ali v. Basarat Ali, 105 P.R. 1901; Muhammad Yar v. Ghulam, 49 P.R. 1884; Narain Devi v. Bilta, 204 P.L.R. 1914, 25 I.C. 82. Where the plaintiff purchased a shop and two open sites adjacent to it, and sued to recover possession of the open sites alleging that he had been unlawfully dispossessed by the defendants, and the plaintiff's title to the open sites was proved, held that in view of the position of the open sites with reference to the shop (of which the plaintiff was in possession) the presumption was that possession of the open sites followed title, even though the evidence of possession in regard to the open sites was equally unworthy of credit on both sides—Mahammad Sahab v. Tilokchand, 46 Bom. 920 (925), 24 Bom.L.R. 373, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 243, 66 I.C. 764. So also, where a strip of land in question is a piece of waste land lying on the boundary of one's property, possession of such land must be presumed to be with the person who proves title to the property—Manzur v. Pateshwari, 1938 O.W.N. 744, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 214.

Where property in dispute consists of lands actually cultivated or of house capable of actual occupation and the plaintiff sues for possession of such property on the allegation that he was dispossessed by the defendant, Art. 142 is undoubtedly applicable and the plaintiff must show his dispossession occurred within twelve years before the institution of the suit. In such a case it may be necessary for him to adduce evidence showing when his own possession ceased and that of defendant or of any other trespasser began. But where the property is of such a nature that it is not capable of actual physical occupation or possession or where the property, though capable of physical possession, is in the occupation of one through whom the plaintiff can be in constructive possession, different considerations obviously apply. A man may be in possession of his property without actually occupying it. In considering therefore, the question whether the plaintiff was dispossessed within 12 years or whether his possession discontinued within 12 years the nature of the property and the position of those actually occupying it, if it is capable of physical occupation, must be taken into consideration. It has been held in Janaki v. Chacki, A.I.R. 1951 Tra.-Co. 246 that the maxim "possession follows title" may be applied also in the case of property which admits of actual exclusive possession where it is proved that the person having the title was once in actual possession; the application of the principle is based on the presumption of continuance of that possession.

Even where the property is capable of actual possession, and one co-sharer alone is in actual occupation of it, the other co-sharers must be considered to be in constructive possession unless the co-sharer in actual possession ousts his co-sharers in denial of their rights—Baboo Singh v. Ram Manohar, A.I.R. 1935 All. 774, 1935 A.L.J. 828, 155 I.C. 824; Masumali v. Custodian, E. P. Rajkot, A.I.R. 1951 Sau. 73; Thoppi v. Para Ram, A.I.R. 1951 J. & K. 27. But where the plaintiff, a co-sharer comes to the Court on the definite allegation of possession and dispossession from the separate portion, the presumption of contructive possession does not arise and the plaintiff will have to prove actual dispossession even though the partition pleaded by the defendant is not proved—Karim v. Shadhi, I.L.R. (1938) Lah. 558, 40 P.L.R. 997, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 241; Sher v. Bhuman, 42 P.L.R. 497.

Where land is unenclosed, acts of ownership in one part may be persumed to be of ownership over the whole, unless there are circumstances rebutting that presumption, It is not necessary that a person should use any definite portion or an unenclosed land in assertion of his ownership—Vithaldas v. Secretary of State, 26 Bom. 410 (417). So also, in the case of low lying land cultivation of major portion will be treated as enjoyment of possession of the whole. It is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove specific acts of possession of every square yard of the land—Chandra v. Butu, 17 Pat. 210, 1938 P.W.N. 194, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 222.

Where the land in dispute is uninhabited or uncultivated, and no acts of ownership or possession by any person have been exercised over it, it is often necessary for the purpose of deciding the question of limitation to rely upon slight evidence of possession and sometimes possession of the adjoining land, coupled with evidence of title, such as grants or leases; and the Courts are justified in presuming under such circumstances that the party who has the title has also the possession—Mohima Chunder v. Hurro Lal, 3 Cal. 768 (769, 770).

In respect of jungle or hilly land, possession must be presumed to be with the person having title. This presumption however, would cease to be operative after the land is cleared of jungle and brought under cultivation—Mirza Shamsher v. Munshi Kunj Behari, 12 C.W.N. 273.

But though in a suit for possession of a waste land, the presumption is that possession follows title, and the plaintiff can give evidence of title only, yet where the plaintiff comes into Court, alleging that he was in effective possession of the waste land until one year prior to suit, and the Court finds against the allegation of effective possession, and dismisses the suit, the plaintiff cannot afterwards fall back upon any presumption of possession following title; because the special case originally set up by him is inconsistent with any such presumption—Sevugan v. Kannappa, 60 M.L.J. 430, 130 I.C. 845, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 282.

601A. Diluviated lands:—Where lands are by natural causes placed wholly out of the reach of their owner, as in the case of diluvion by a river, if the plaintiff (who is the true owner) shows his possessios down to the time of the diluvion, his possession is presumed to continue as long as the lands continue to be submerged—Mazhar v. Bihari, 28 All. 760 (762); Mahomed Ali v. Khaja Abdul Gunny, 9 Cal. 714 (751) (F.B.); Gunga v. Ashutosh, 23 Cal. 863 (866); Kally Charan v. Secretary of State, 6 Cal. 725; Mono Mohan v. Mothura Mohan, 7 Cal. 225; Basanta Kumar v. Secretary of State, 44 Cal. 858 (P.C.). Mere sub-mergence of the land would not put an end to the possession of the owner—Rampati v. Ramani, 34 C.W.N. 772 (773) (P.C.). Therefore, in a suit for possession of alluvial lands which were diluviated more than 12 years before suit and were taken possession of by the defendant after reformation, if the plaintiff can prove possession till diluviation, the burden of proving reformation more than 12 years before suit and adverse possession during that period is shifted to the defendant—Mono Mohan v. Mothura Mohan, 7 Cal. 225; Radha Gobinda v. Inglis, 7 C.L.R. 364 (P.C.); Ganga Kumar v. Ashutosh, 23 Cal. 863 (866). If the reformation had taken place more than 12 years before suit, the plaintiffs are required to prove that they were in possession within 12 years of the date of the suit—Birendra v. Satis Chandra, 44 C.L.J. 121, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1166, 97 I.C. 1003. Where the plaintiff sues to recover possession of lands as reformation in situ alleging that he has been dispossessed from them, the burden lies on him to prove that he was in possession within 12 years of the suit. He can discharge this burden by proving that he was in constructive possession within that period. He would be in constructive possession, if he was the rightful owner and would be in time if he could prove either that the lands had appeared above water within 12 years of the suit; or if they had appeared earlier that they had become first fit for user within that period. The fact that he had no physical possession at the time of the last submergence is not material for the purpose of enabling him to call to his aid the principle of constructive possession, provided that his title had not been extinguished by adverse possession before the last submergence—Gadadhar v. Sarat, 44 C.W.N. 935, 72 C.L.J. 320, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193.

Where the plaintiff had an undoubted title to a certain land, but the defendant had no such title and could prove adverse possession for only 10 years before suit, the land being under water during the first two years of the 12 years immediately preceding the suit, and no act of possession being proved by either party during the two years of the submersion of the land, held that there would be a presumption that possession followed title and that plaintiff's possession continued over the two years in question, i.e., the possession continued to a time within 12 years prior to the suit, which was therefore, not barred—Rajkumar v. Govind, 19 Cal. 660 (674) (P.C.). If the plaintiff proves that after the land became submerged he exercised acts of ownership as by letting out the jalkar or right of fishing to tenants, held that this was a very strong evidence that the land covered by water over which the right of fishing was enjoyed belonged to the plaintiff. Evidence of the ownership and enjoyment of the jalkar, in a small piece of water as in this case (and not in a case of a jalkar in a deep and navigable river) is evidence of title to the land covered by the water. In this case the plaintiff has proved his ownership by letting out the jalkar to tenants, and this was prima facie evidence of possession also—Mohini Mohan v. Krishna Kishore, 9 Cal. 802 (804, 807). If it was proved that the plaintiff exercised acts of ownership over the land when covered by water, and that when the land become dry it remained waste and did not become fit for cultivation until within six or seven years before suit, held that the Court might and ought to presume that the plaintiff's possession continued after the land became dry, until the contrary was shown—Mohini Mohan v. Krishno Kishore, 9 Cal. 802 (807). So, the rightful owner is presumed to be in possession till a char becomes fit for enjoyment and the mere fact that he does not take possession as soon as it becomes fit and another person occupies it and begins to till does not show that the rightful owner is dispossessed. The denfendant has got to prove adverse possession for 12 years or over before suit—Abdul v. Habibulla, 69 C.L.J. 28, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 354. Where a suit is brought by the owner for recovery of possession of lands diluviated and reformed in situ, more than 12 years after the alleged reformation, it lies on the plaintiff to show that his possession continued after reformation to a period within 12 years before the institution of the suit. If he has not admittedly had any actual possession since the lands became submerged, the plaintiff, in order to prove possession may rely on the presumption that possession of the lawful owner continues as long as the land is incapable of actual possession; but if he relies upon this presumption, he must prove that the land was incapable of actual possession within 12 years before suit—Suresh Chandra v. Shiti Kanta, 51 Cal. 669, 28 C.W.N. 637, 78 I.C. 679, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 855.

If a trespasser takes possession of the land, and before he has acquired a title under the statute the land becomes submerged under water, the trespasser's possession does not continue during the period the land is under water. The dispossession by vis major (viz., by flood) has the same effect as voluntary abandonment, so that the trespasser will be deemed to have abandoned possession, and the rightful owner, on the abandonment, is in the same position in all respects as he was before the intrusion took place. The true owner's possession remains and continues during the period of submergence and thereafter, and time runs against him only when another person on the reappearance and reformation of the land takes actual possession —Secretary of State v. Krishnamoni, 29 Cal. 518 (535) (P.C.), (overruling the opinion of Garth C. J. on this point in Kally Charan v. Secretary of State, 6 Cal. 725); Basanta Kumar v. Secretary of State, 44 Cal. 858 (872) (P.C.); Meherban v. Yusuf, 1938 N.L.J. 418, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 655, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 7; Gadadhar v. Sarat, 44 C.W.N. 935, 72 C.L.J. 320, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 193. This is in accordance with the rule laid down by Lord Macnaghten in Agency Co. v. Short, (1888) L.R. 13 A.C. 793: "If a person enters upon the land of another and holds possession for a time, and then without having acquired a title under the statute, abandons possession, the rightful owner, on the abandonment, is in the same position in all respects as he was before the intrusion took place." As regards the legal effect of the flooding and submergence, it was held by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 29 Cal. 518 that it would be contrary to principle and authority to imply the constructive possession of the trespasser whilst the lands were submerged so as to enable the wrongdoer to obtain a title by adverse possession. The same principle was again enunciated in 44 I.A. 104. Their Lordships observed. "It seems to follow that there can be no continuance of adverse possession, when the land is not capable of use and enjoyment, so long as such adverse possession must rest on de facto use and occupation. No rational distinction can be drawn between that case (referring to 29 I.A. 104) and the present one, where the reflooding was seasonal and occurred for several months in each year"—Pratab Bahadur v. Jagatjit Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 398.

Therefore, where a land belonging to the plaintiff became submerged under water again and again, and was held by the defendant during the periods of its reappearance, held that during the time the land was under water, it must be deemed to have been in the possession of the plaintiff (the rightful owner). During the months the land was not under water, the defendant was actually in occupation of it, but as soon as it was again submerged, the plaintiff's possession was revived. Consequently there was every year a break in the continuity of the defendant's possession, which enured for the benefit of the plaintiff, and which prevented the defendant acquiring title by adverse possession—Ram Nain v. Deoki Misir, 20 A.L.J. 756, A.I.R. 1923 All. 75, 69 I.C. 912.

602. Commencement of limitation:—In cases under this Article the period of 12 years runs from the date of dispossession or discontinuance of possession whereas in cases under Art. 144, it runs from the date when the possession of the defendant becomes adverse to the plaintiff—Gauri v. Jodu, 18 Luck. 624, 1942 O.W.N. 753.

In case of dispossession, limitation runs from the date of dispossession; if the plaintiff subsequently obtains possession under a decree obtained in the first Court and is again dispossessed by the decree being reversed on appeal, he does not get a fresh starting point from the date of dispossession upon reversal of the decree; the original dispossession in this case is the starting point of limitation—Narayanan v. Kannamma, 28 Mad. 338 (342). But in some Calcutta cases it has been held that if the rightful owner is dispossessed but succeeds in ousting the trespasser without recourse to law and continues in possession, and is subsequently dispossessed under a decree obtained by the latter under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, the period of limitation for a suit by the rightful owner to recover possession will run from the date of dispossession under the decree and not from the date of the original dispossession—Protap Chandra v. Durga Charan, 9 C.W.N. 1061; Mamtazuddin v. Barkatulla, 2 C.L.J. 1; Waziruddin v. Deoki, 6 C.L.J. 472; Jonab Ali v. Surya Kanta, 33 Cal. 821. Similarly, the plaintiff was ousted from his lands by the defendants in 1905, and brought a suit under sec. 9 of the Specific Relief Act which was decreed in 1906, and in execution of that decree the plaintiff got possession in 1907. The defendants then applied for review of the judgment in the Specific Relief Act case and ultimately the plaintiff's suit was dismissed in 1908 After this date the defendants again took possession of the lands by dispossessing the plaintiff, and the present suit was instituted in 1919 for recovery of the lands. Held that time ran not from the date of the plaintiff's original dispossession in 1905, but from the date of his subsequent dispossession in 1908. There can be no constructive possession of a wrong-doer during the time that he is actually not in possession, and the possession of the true owner, no matter how that possession is obtained, must be considered as rightful possession in law, and the period during which the true owner is in possession will enure to his benefit and not to that of his trespasser. Consequently, where the plaintiff being the rightful owner is kept out of possession for less than 12 years, and then succeeds in regaining possession (no matter whether in execution of a decree in a possessory suit or in any other way), and then after a time is again dispossessed (no matter whether on reversal of the decree or in any other way) and thereafter institutes a suit for recovery of possession, he can base his suit treating the subsequent dispossession as his cause of action under this Article; the period will not run from the date of the earlier dispossession—Girish Chandra v. Baikuntha, 81 I.C. 279, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 270. Where there is an auction sale of an undivided share, in a suit by the co-owners, who are not judgment debtors, against the auction purchaser for possession, time will start to run only from the date when possession was delivered to the auction purchaser and not from the date of sale—Krishna v. Baijnath, 1943 A.L.W. 93. The starting point of limitation in a suit for ejectment on title of a person in possession of land claimed by him, having been alloted to him on partition and alleging the defendant to be a co-sharer of the joint land when undivided, it having been decided in a previous suit between the parties that the defendant was not the tenant of the plaintiff at any time, is not the date of the earlier suit but when the defendant denied the title of the plaintiff—Pardip v. Ramsundar, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 510, 4 D.L.R. (Pat.) 154.

603. Extinguishment of title:—When the plaintiff sues for possession and alleges dispossession, but fails to shew that he has brought his suit within 12 years of such possession, there is an extinguishment of his title under section 28. Consequently, no declaration of title in his favour can be made—Bishumbhar v. Nadiar Chand, 18 C.L.J. 601, 22 I.C. 64 (65). In view of this Article read with sec. 28, the plaintiff can have no right of suit after the expiry of 12 years from the date of dispossession as his right is extinguished under sec. 28—Kuseshwar v. Uma, 22 Pat.L.T. 1001, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 188. Thus where a decree-holder purchasing the share of the judgment debtor's property in execution fails and neglects to obtain actual possession of it within 12 years, he not only loses his remedy, but his right is also extinguished —Ganga v. Ansari, 1947 A.L.J. 202, A.I.R. 1947 All. 296. The possession necessary to found a title by adverse possession under sec. 28 is not different in character from the possession required to prevent limitation from running under this Article or Art. 144—Hafiz v. Swarup, 52 C.W.N. 382, 50 Bom.L.R 632, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 70, A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 76, 1948 A.L.J. 221, 29 Pat.L.T. 23 (P.C.).

604. Tacking of adverse possession:—Both under Articles 142 and 144 the defendant may tack the period of his adverse possession to the period of such possession held by a previous adverse possessor (provided the periods are continuous) —Bibhuti v. Girish, A I.R. 1950 Pat. 191. Under Article 144, the succeeding adverse possessor must be one who claims through the preceding possessor, and must not be an independent trespasser (see Note 622 under Article 144, under heading "Tacking of adverse possession"); but there is a difference of opinion among the High Courts (as well as among the commentators) as to whether the same condition is required under the present Article. The view of the Madras High Court is, that under Article 142, adverse possession for over 12 years by several persons in possession, even though they do not claim from one another, bars the true owner—Ramayya v. Kotamma, 45 Mad 370 (375), 42 M.L.J. 319, 67 I.C. 246, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 59; Chenchuramma v. Ademma, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 428, A I.R. 1949 Mad. 673. The same view has been taken in Ahmad v. Hata, I.L.R. (1939) Lah. 399, 41 P.L.R. 538, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 217. This view finds its support from the following observations of Kay L. J. in Wills v. Earl Howe, [1893] 2 Ch. 545: "It was suggested by the Counsel in reply that..... if a series of occupiers not claiming under one another kept out the real owner for 100 years, time would only run against him from the moment when the last of such occupiers entered into possession. I am of opinion that this is not the law. A continuous adverse possession for the statutory period, though by a succession of persons not claiming under one another does in my opinion, bar the true owner." The same opinion has been expressed by Dart in his Vendors and Purchasers (7th Edn.) Vol. I, page 474: "In order that the title of the true owner may be barred by the adverse possession of a trespasser, or a series of trespassers, the possession by them must be continuous and so long as it is continuous, it is immaterial whether they claim through one another or independently." A similar view has been taken in the English case of Doe v. Barnard, (1849) 13 Q.B. 945, 18 L.J.Q.B. 306. In this case the owner of a house was dispossessed and the dispossessor remained in possession till his death, for less than 12 years; thereupon his widow who had been living with him in the same house took possession and remained in possession for less than 12 years, but the aggregate period of possession of the husband and the widow was more than 12 years. It was held that the true owner was barred by the successive possession of the husband and widow for more than 12 years, although the widow did not claim from or through her husband as heiress or legatee or otherwise. So also, U. N. Mitra in his Law of Limitation, 5th Edn, p. 1160 observes: "The question of limitation under Article 142 does not depend on continuous possession for 12 years by the defendant, but on the fact that more than 12 years have elapsed since the plaintiff was dispossessed or discontinued the possession. The last of several successive but independent trespassers may, therefore, defeat the plaintiff's suit, although he himself has been in possession for only a few days before the suit." This view of Mr. Mitra is based on the decision of Wilis v. Earl Howe (cited supra). On the other hand, Mr. Rustomji is of opinion that no distinction should be made between Article 142 and 144 and that the same rule is applicable to both articles. "Even under Article 142 possession of independent (though successive) trespassers cannot be tacked, in as much as immediately upon the cessation of possession by one trespasser, the rightful owner is (in point of law) restored to possession, and the entry of another trespasser is tantamount in law of a fresh disposition of the owner, and the latter has accordingly 12 years under Article 142 reckoned from such constructive fresh dispossession"—Rustomji's Limitation, 3rd Edn., p. 646; and the learned author has supported his statement by the decision in Solling v. Broughton, [1893] A.C. 556. Mr. Starling is also of the same opinion, because he observes that "the case of Willis v. Howe is based upon the construction of the English Limitation Act (3 & 4 Wm. IV, C. 27), and it is not quite clear whether the Legislature in India intended to reproduce in Articles 142 and 144 the law existing in England. The only question for the Courts in India to consider is whether one trespasser dispossessing another can be said to derive his right to sue or the liability to be sued from that trespasser (according to the definition of plaintiff and defendant)"—Starling, 5th Edn., p. 410. The Calcutta High Court is also of opinion that even under Article 142, one trespasser cannot add to his own possession the previous independent possession of another trespasser. When the possession passes from the first to the second trespasser there is a constructive restoration, even if a momentary restoration, of the true owner's title to possession—Janoki Nath v. Baikuntha Nath, 36 C.L.J. 140, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 176. The same view has been taken by the Rangoon High Court in Ma Mi v. Hadji Mahomed, 1 Rang. 176, 75 I.C. 31, A I.R. 1923 Rang. 261.

If the period of possession by successive trespassers is not continuous, the running of time in favour of the trespassers is stopped, as soon as there is an interval. As Dart observes: "If a period of time should elapse, however short, after the abandonment of one trespasser who has not been in possession for the full period, and before the entry of another, the title of the true owner is as from the time of such abandonment, restored to him without any entry or act done on his part, for the statute does not apply to a case of want of actual possession by the true owner, but only to cases where the owner is out of possession and another is in possession for the prescribed time"—Vendors and Purchasers, p. 474. See also the observation of Lord Macnaghten in Agency Co. v. Short, cited in Note 601A, ante.

605. Suits under this Article:—Where a non-occupancy raiyat has been dispossessed of his holding either by a trespasser or by the landlord otherwise than in execution of a decree, then if his tenancy has not yet been determined, he has a title in him viz., the title of a tenant, and a suit by the raiyat to recover possession by establishment of his title is not a suit under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act; consequently Article 3 cannot apply but either Article 120 or 142—Tamizuddin v. Ashrub Ali, 31 Cal. 647 (651) F.B. (overruling Bhagabati v. Luton Mandal, 7 C.W.N. 218). A suit by a minor on attaining majority to set aside a mortgage by conditional sale made by a de facto guardian, and for possession, is governed by this Article, and not by Art. 91, because the setting aside of the deed of conditional sale is subservient to the claim for possession, and the suit must be treated as one for recovery of immoveable property—Ramawsar v. Raghubar, 5 All. 490 (491); Palaniappa v. Nallappa, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 265, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 817. So also a suit by a ward on attaining majority, for possession of property transferred by his guardian, a pardanashin lady, under a transfer void ab initio, is governed by this Article—Hirdey v. Babu, 1940 O.W.N. 1318, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 172. A suit to recover property by setting aside a void deed of transfer, which does not require to be set aside or cancelled, is governed by this Article, and not by Art. 91—Banku Behari v. Kristo Gobindo, 30 Cal. 433 (438). A contrary view has been taken in Lok Nath v. Rohlu Ram, A.I.R. 1951 J. & K. 25 where it is held that such a suit is governed by Art. 44 and not by this Article.

This Article is not confined to suits by plaintiffs who claim the property wholly, but is applicable to a suit brought by a plaintiff who is a co-sharer or co-owner with the defendant—Bindhyachal v. Ram Gharib, 1934 A.L.J. 973 (F.B.), 152 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1934 All. 993 (999). Where a plaintiff, who was a co-sharer with some of the defendants who transferred a part of the property to third parties, admits in the plaint that he was dispossessed by the transferees sometime prior to the institution of the suit, this Article applies and not Art. 144—Bindhyachal v. Ram Gharib, supra. So also, where there is an auction sale of an undivided share, a suit by the other co-sharers against the auction purchaser for possession is governed by this Article, whether the suit is based on title or on possessory title—Krishna v. Baijnath, 1943 A.L.W. 93. This Article applies to a suit for ejectment on title, of a person in possession of land claimed by the plaintiff as his, having been allotted to him on partition and alleging the defendant to be a co-sharer of the joint land when undivided—Pardip v. Ramsundar, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 510, 4 D.L.R. (Pat.) 154.

A suit by a tenant, a widow for recovery of possession of land against her relation, who, while managing the land on her behalf, got the land mutated in his name fraudulently and then repudiated her title, is governed by this Article—Krishna v. Bhuban, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 71.

A suit by the landlord against the purchaser of a permanent tenure from a tenant, who has forfeited his tenancy by breach of a covenant in the lease whereby the landlord was entitled to re-enter in case the lessee transferred his interest by sale, gift or otherwise is governed by this Article and not by Art. 1 Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, because the tenancy being forfeited, the purchaser in this case cannot be called a 'tenant' under sec. 155 of that Act but is merely a trespasser—Dwarika v. Mathura, 21 C.W.N. 117, 34 I.C. 833 (837). Where a Municipality pulled down a structure erected by the plaintiff on his own ground, which the Municipality claimed as part of the public road, a suit by the plaintiff to recover possession of the ground is governed by this Article and not by Article 39 (which refers only to suits for damages for trespass, and not to suits to recover possession from a trespasser) and must be brought within 12 years from the time the structure was pulled down—Jaharmal v. Municipality of Ahmednagar, 6 Bom. 580 (582). Where the plaintiffs bring a suit to eject the defendants from a house on the ground that the latter have been holding the house as the tenants of the plaintiffs, and have denied the title of the plaintiffs as landlords, and it is found that the defendants are not the tenants of the plaintiffs, held that the suit falls under Art. 142 and not under Art. 144—Gur Sahai v. Chheddi, 27 O.C. 130, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 42, 1 O.W.N. 38, 89 I.C. 964; Sangam v. Ganga, I.L.R. (1946) All. 178, A.I.R. 1946 All. 389; even if the property belongs to a wakf—Alam v. Karupannaswami, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 113, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 415. A suit to eject an usufructuary mortgagee and for possession by the landlord is governed either by this Article or under Art. 144 as such a mortgagee is a trespasser in relation to the land even though an usufructuary mortgage is a 'transfer' within the meaning of sec. 203 (3), C. P. Land Revenue Act—Kuwarji v. Bhurelal, 1939 N.L.J. 136, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 163. A suit by a purchaser of immoveable property, alleging that the defendant has dispossessed the plaintiff's vendor, is governed by this Article—Kuppuswami v. Chockalinga, 49 M.L.J. 788, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 191, 91 I.C. 454; Deba v. Rohtagi, 28 All. 479; Kashinath v. Sridhar, 16 Bom. 343. But Art. 136 might have been applied. A purchaser at a Court auction sale held in execution of a mortgage decree is not outside the scope of this Article—Official Receiver v. Govindaraju, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 953, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 190, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 798 (F.B.). So also, a suit against the auction purchaser at a sale held in pursuance of mortgage decree for sale in a suit upon a simple mortgage, wherein the plaintiff in whom the equity of redemption entirely vested was not a party, is governed by this Article—Batuk v. Rudra, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 206.

This Article applies to a suit by heirs of a Mahomedan widow against a trespasser for possession of property held by the widow in lieu of her dower as such right is heritable. The heirs are not bound to sue under sec. 9, Specific Relief Act—Abdul v. Mushtaq, I.L.R. (1944) All. 68, 1943 A.L.J. 590, A.I.R. 1943 All. 36.

This Article has no application to a case where the plaintiff has been excluded from a joint-family property. Art. 127 which is more specific, applies to the case—Umesh v. Jagadis, 1 C.W.N. 543 (544).

This Article does not apply where the suit is for possession based on title. See Note 610 under Art. 144.

This Article has no application to a suit by a mere licensee who does not assert any claim to any interest in immoveable property—Arun v. Sudhir, 75 C.L.J. 236, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 143.

143. Like suit, when the plaintiff has become entitled by reason of any forfeiture or breach of condition.	Twelve years.	When the forfeiture is incurred or the condition is broken.

606. Scope:—Art. 143 is in general terms. By its terms it applies to all suits for possession, when the plaintiff becomes entitled to possession by reason of any forfeiture or breach of condition. The Article is not confined to suits between landlord and tenant based on forfeiture—Jadunath v. Kashiswar, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 779. This Article applies where the landlord is entitled, according to the terms of the tenancy, to take khas possession as soon as a breach of condition occurs: that is, where it is expressly stipulated in the contract of tenancy that if the tenant breaks any condition of the tenancy, the landlord will be entitled to eject him. In other words, this Article applies only where the suit for possession is based on a breach of contract. If however there is no express stipulation in the contract of tenancy for ejectment and khas possession in case any breach of condition occurs, a suit by the landlord for ejectment of the tenant for breach of a condition is a suit based on tort and not on breach of contract and this Article cannot apply, because it cannot be said that the landlord has become "entitled to possession by reason of a breach of condition" within the meaning of this Article. In fact, in such a case the landlord will not be primarily entitled to eject the tenant; his primary relief will be an injunction calling upon the tenant to make good the breach of condition and to pay damages to the landlord; and the landlord can pray by way of secondary relief only that if the tenant fails to comply with the injunction, the Court may award khas possession to him. See Sharoop v. Joggeswar, 26 Cal. 564 (at p. 568) where the law is, however, very briefly stated. Thus, where the landlord is entitled to possession, not on breach of condition of the tenancy, but upon noncompliance by the defendant with the order of the Court as to filling up a tank and making compensation, the suit is framed in tort, and not on breach of any contract; and Art. 32, and not 143, applies—Sharoop v. Joggeswar, supra.

A suit for possession on the ground of forfeiture does not fall under this Article where the relationship of landlord and tenant does not exist and has never existed between the parties—Abinash v. Narhari, 57 Cal. 289, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 165 (167); Bhairab v. Kadam, infra. Thus, in 1894 the plaintiff sued the defendant for arrears of rent; the defendant denied the relationship of landlord and tenant, and the suit was eventually dismissed in 1895 on the ground that the relationship had not been established. A suit for recovery of possession was then brought after 12 years. Held that Article 143 did not apply because the relationship of landlord and tenant did not exist between the plaintiff and the defendant, that Article 144 applied, and as the defendant had been in possession for more than 12 years before suit, and as the circumstances of his possession made it manifest that it was adverse, the suit was barred—Bhairab Chandra v. Kadam Bewa, 18 C.L.J. 553, 22 I.C. 28 (30).

This Article is not limited to suits brought against the persons who themselves incurred the forfeiture or committed a breach of the condition against alienation, but it also applies to suits against the persons who are in possession by reason of the alienation which has entailed the forfeiture. The general scheme of Arts. 140-144 does not place any limitation as to parties, and these Articles apply to suits against any body who may be in possession of the property—Ayyaswami v. Manavikrama, 58 M.L.J. 89, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 430 (432), 124 I.C. 273. Thus, this Article has been applied to a suit to recover possession (by reason of forfeiture) from the alienees of the property —Zamorin v. Samu Nair, 38 M.L.J. 275, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 290, 55 I.C. 380. So also, this Article was applied to a suit brought by a lessor to recover possession, in which the transferees from the lessee were made parties—Motilal v. Chandra, 24 C.W.N. 1064, 60 I.C. 312.

607. Forfeiture:—A permanent tenant forfeits his rights and his possession becomes adverse from the date he denies his landlord's title (e.g., by making an alienation, and denying the landlord's title as owner in the deed of alienation); and consequently a suit for possession brought by the landlord 12 years after the date of denial (viz., the date of the alienation) is barred by this Article—Locha Ram v. Jhindwadda, 76 P.L.R. 1917, 36 I.C. 565 (567). But it is open to the landlord to condone the first forfeiture and afterwards to bring a suit within 12 years from the time when another separate and distinct act occasioning forfeiture has occurred—Locha Ram v. Jhindwadda, 141 P.L.R. 1916, 35 I.C. 235. In case of successive forfeitures, the fact that the landlord did not exercise his right of enforcing one forfeiture does not bar him from enforcing a subsequent forfeiture or raise any estoppel against him—Zamorin of Calicut v. Samu Nair, 38 M.L.J. 275,, 55 I.C. 380 (392). But in 4 All. 493 (cited in Note 608 below) time was held to run from the first breach of condition and not from a subsequent breach.

Certain lands in Malabar were demised on anubhavam tenure, and some of them were alienated by the tenant. More than 12 years after the alienation the landlord sued to eject the tenant on the ground that the defendant had alienated his right over the property contrary to the terms of his holding and had thereby forfeited the tenancy. Held that assuming that the rights under the demise were forfeited by the alienation, the suit was barred under this Article—Madavan v. Athi Nangiyar, 15 Mad. 123 (124). A Hindu widow entered into a solenamah with her deceased husband's cousin, which provided that she would remain in possession for life of a share of the family property, that she would have no power to alienate, and that after her death her share was to belong to the cousin. The widow sold this share, and a suit was brought by the cousin's heirs to recover the property more than 12 years after the sale, but less than 12 years after the widow's death. It was held that the terms of the solenamah prohibited only an alienation in perpetuity, i.e., such an alienation by the widow as would prevent the cousin's succeeding after her death; but here the alienation was made only for the widow's lifetime and was perfectly good for her lifetime, and as there was nothing in the words used in the solenamah attaching forfeiture to the alienation. Article 143 did not apply (but Art. 141) and the suit was not barred—Bibi Sahodra v. Rai Jang, 8 Cal. 224 (229) (P.C.). Where a wajib-ul-arz provided that if a resident left the village to settle elsewhere he would not be entitled to cultivation and possession, and a hereditary occupancy tenant went away from the village and settled in another place leaving his fields in charge of another person, held that the abandonment by the tenant of his residence in the village and his settling elsewhere involved a forfeiture of the tenure, and a suit by the proprietors of the village to resume possession of the land of the tenant must be brought within 12 years from the time when the forfeiture was incurred—Dhian Singh v. Mehan Sing, 180 P.R. 1883.

The starting point of limitation is the forfeiture itself, and not when the lessor comes to know of the forfeiture. There is nothing in this Article about the knowledge of the lessor. Ignorance would not prevent time running against him—Ayyaswami v. Manavikrama, 58 M.L.J. 89, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 430 (433), 124 I.C. 273; Zamorin of Calicut v. Samu Nair, 38 M.L.J. 275, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 290, 55 I.C. 380 (385); Locha Ram v. Jhindwadda, 76 P.L.R. 1917, 36 I.C. 565 (567). But in cases governed by the Transfer of Property Act, the lessor is not entitled to possession by reason of any forfeiture, unless he has given notice in writing to the lessee showing his intention to determine the lease; see sec. 111 (g), T. P. Act. Consequently, time does not run until the lessor has given such notice.

608. Breach of condition:—A lease provided that the lessee was to enjoy the land from generation to generation for purpose of residence without any power of alienation, and that in the event of such alienation the lessor would be entitled to khas possession. The lessee sold the land and the lessor sued to recover possession. Held that this Article applied, and time ran from the date of alienation and not from the date when the lessee surrendered possession to the transferee—Motilal v. Chandra Kumar, 24 C.W.N. 1064, 60 I.C. 312 (314).

Where it was stipulated in a lease that the tenant should clear a defined area in a certain time, on failure of which he would be liable to ejectment, the cause of action for a suit for ejectment accrued when the defendant did not clear the area by the time stipulated—Tumeezooddeen v. Meer Surwar, 7 W.R. 209. Where a lease granted for the reclamation of certain jungle lands provided that the lessee should hold the lands rent-free for six years, and that in the 7th year he should cause the lands to be measured and settlement of rent made with respect to the reclaimed lands, and that on failure to do so the lessor would be entitled to possession, a suit by the lessor to eject the lessee on breach of the above conditions was governed by this Article, and not by Art. 139—Goohi Sheikh v. Mathewson, 11 C.W.N. 661 (662). Although a suit by the landlord to recover possession from a tenant on the ground of breach of condition may be barred, still if the tenant does not in the written statement deny his tenancy under the plaintiff, and does not deny his liability to pay rent to the plaintiff, the landlord's suit to recover rent from the tenant is not barred—Goohi v. Mathewson, 11 C.W.N. 661 (663).

This Article has no application to a suit for recovery of possession of trust property from the defendant on the ground that he has committed a breach of trust by misappropriating the income of the property. A breach of trust is not a "breach of condition" within the meaning of this Article. The suit falls under sec. 10, and is not barred by any rule of limitation—Sathappayyar v. Periasami, 14 Mad. 1 (8).

If there are successive breaches, time runs from the date of the first breach. Unlike Art. 115, this Article does not provide for fresh causes of action by reason of successive breaches of condition. Thus, the purchasers of certain land agreed to pay the vendors certain fees annually in respect of such land, and further agreed that in default of payment the vendors should be entitled to the proprietary possession of certain quantity of such land. The purchasers never paid the fees, and more than 12 years after the first default, the vendors sued them for possession of the land they were entitled to. It was held that the suit was governed by this Article, and as more than 12 years had expired from the first breach of such agreement, it was barred by limitation —Bhojraj v. Gulshan, 4 All. 493 (496). Where a mortgagee is entitled to get the possession of land on the first instalment of the mortgage money not being paid, a suit for possession of the land upon such non-payment falls under this Article and time runs from the date when that instalment ought to have been paid—Nathu v. Krishna, 1876 P.J. 4.

Where the parties to a deed of exchange expressly covenanted that in the event of any dispute arising in the matter of enjoyment of the property exchanged, each should return to the other what is taken, and the plaintiff was dispossessed of the lands given by the defendants, a suit based on the convenant is governed by this Article and not by Art. 113—Srinivasa v. Johnsa Rowther, 42 Mad. 690 (691).

A exchanged certain properties with B and obtained certain lands from B in exchange, and then C (a third party claiming a paramount title) brought a suit against A to recover the lands obtained by A in exchange from B, and got a decree. A then brought a suit against B to recover the lands got by B from A. Held that the suit was governed by this Article, as the deprivation of the property constituted a breach of the statutory condition under sec. 119 of the Transfer of Property Act, and time ran from the date of the final appellate decree in the suit brought by C against A—Rajagopalam v. Somasundara, 30 Mad. 316 (318, 319).

144. For possession of immoveable property or any interest therein not hereby otherwise specially provided for.	Twelve years.	When the possession of the defendant becomes adverse to the plaintiff.

609. Scope:—This is a residuary Article relating to suits for possession and is to be applied only when there is no other Article in the Schedule specially providing for the case; and if a suit be otherwise specially provided for, the defendant's plea of adverse possession, for whatsoever length of time, is perfectly immaterial for the purpose of limitation—Seshamma v. Chickaya, 25 Mad. 507 (510); Mahammad Amanulla v. Baddan Singh, 17 Cal. 137 (143) (P.C.); Kannusami v. Muthusami, 5 L.W. 250; Sesha Naidu v. Periaswami, 44 Mad. 951; Pokhpal v. Bishan Singh, 20 All. 155 (177); Bindhyachal v. Ram Gharib, 57 All. 278; Shankarsa v. Punamchand, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 130; Devram v. Asharam, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 793, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 49; Naru v. Krishna, 40 Bom.L.R. 166, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 210; Narayan v. Gurunathgonda, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 173, 40 Bom.L.R. 1134, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 1; Sidram v. Mallaya, 51 Bom L.R. 34, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 137 (F.B.); Venkateswara v. Venkatesa, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 599, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 644, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 449 (F.B.). This Article does not apply to suits or proceedings under Local or Special Acts prescribing period of limitation for such suits or proceedings. Thus it does not apply to proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act—Nimar v. Rang Nath, 1938 R.D. 602; or under the U.P. Tenancy Act—Tilakdhari v. Dhondha, A.I.R. 1950 All. 439; or under the Bengal Tenancy Act—Gagan v. Goljan, A.I.R. 1950 Dac. 1 following Mohim v. Kanai, 33 C.W.N. 1085, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 311.

This Article refers to suits "for possession" of immoveable property; that is, it applies to cases where the plaintiff is out of possession and seeks to recover possession and the defence is one of adverse possession—Narayan v. Gurunathgouda, supra. But where the plaintiff is already in possession and asks for a declaration of his right to possession, the suit does not fall under this Article but under Article 120—Legge v. Rambaran, 20 All. 35 (F.B.); Rajani v. Monaram, 53 I.C. 968, 23 C.W.N. 883. Similarly, Art. 144 does not apply where the suit is not to obtain actual possession but is for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to possession at some future date. The proper Article is Art. 120—Krishnajee v. Annajee, 54 Bom. 4, 31 Bom.L.R. 1240, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 61 (63), 124 I.C. 773. A suit for injunction for preventing the defendant from interfering with the exercise of right of ownership by cutting the trees purchased falls under Art. 120. This article has no application as no question of possession of trees is involved in the suit—Ganga v. Nihal, A.I.R. 1952 All. 310. The question whether this Article or Art. 120 applies to a suit between co-owners or co-tenants inter se, where the title of one is denied by the other depends according as the relief claimed is one for possession or injunction—Sewa v. Raghunandan, 42 P L.R. 276, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 315. It is not the form of relief claimed which determines the real character of the suit for the purposes of ascertaining under which article the suit falls. The plaint as a whole is to be examined to see whether it is a declaration properly so called or whether it is an unnecessary claim and a mere surplusage and the suit is really a suit for possession—Bhoga v. Surajpal, A.I.R. 1951 M B. 40.

610. Art. 142 and Art. 144:—Articles 142 and 144 are both rules of limitation, the only difference being that in the case of Art. 142, the onus lies on the plaintiff to prove his possession within 12 years, while in the case of Art. 144 it is for the defendant to prove when his possession became adverse—Ramlal v. Lodha, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 201.

Article 142 is restricted to suits which are in terms and substance based on plaintiff's prior possession which has been lost by dispossession or discontinuance. If there is no allegation of original possession in the plaintiff lost by dispossession or discontinuance of possession, Article 142 cannot apply but the suit falls under Article 144 —Vasudeo v. Eknath, 35 Bom. 79 (90); Fakir v. Babaji, 14 Bom. 458 (461); Ram Lakhan v. Gajadhar, 33 All. 224 (228); Bibi Sahodra v. Rai Jang Bahadur, 8 Cal, 224 (229) (P.C.); Subappa v. Venkappa, 39 Bom. 335, 28 I.C. 24; Govinda v. Md. Esoof Sahib, 21 L.W. 398, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 834, 87 I.C. 386; Kunhi Moidin v. Pakkar, 38 M L.T. 137, A.I R. 1927 Mad. 1094, 99 I.C. 971; Suraj Bali v. Mahadeo, 7 Luck. 250, 137 I.C. 678, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 46; Zahida Begum v. Mumtaz, 8 O.W.N. 1364; Sitaram v. Rajaram, 48 I.C. 230 (Nag.); Singuji v. Gambhirji, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 370, 87 I.C. 1023; Gauri v. Jadu, 18 Luck. 624, 1942 O.W.N. 753. Article 142 is restricted to cases in which the relief for possession sought by the plaintiff is based on what may be styled as possessory title, and the burden of proving the fact that the plaintiff was in possession and was dispossessed within 12 years before suit lies on the plaintiff; and on proving these the plaintiff is entitled to a decree unless the defendant establishes that he is the true owner of the property. But the Article applicable to a suit in which the plaintiff sues for possession of property on the basis of his title is Art. 144, and if in such a suit the plaintiff proves his title, he is entitled to a decree, unless the defendant succeeds in establishing his adverse possession for a period of more than 12 years—Kanhaiya v. Girwar, 51 All. 1042, 1929 A.L.J. 1106, 119 I.C. 6, A.I R. 1929 All. 753; Kallan v. Mohammed Nabi, 54 All. 209, 1933 A L.J. 105, 143 I.C. 497, A.I.R. 1933 All. 775; Bindhyachal v. Ram Gharib, 1934 A L.J. 973 (F.B.), 152 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1934 All. 993 (997); Zahida Begum v. Mumtaz Ali, 8 O.W.N. 921, 134 I.C. 599, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 382; Suraj Bali v. Mahadeo, supra; Naru v. Krishna, 40 Bom.L.R. 116, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 210. A suit for possession under Art. 142 or 144 assumes that the defendant is in possession and that the plaintiff seeks to eject him. In such a suit there must be a prayer, express or implied, for dispossession of some one from the property or from the interest in it which the suit claims—State v. Ganapathi, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 232 (F.B.). The distinction is between suits for possession where the cause of action is dispossession and a suit for possession where the cause of action is not dispossession—Devram v. Asharam, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 793, A.I.R. 1940 Sind. 49. The question as to whether the Article applicable to a particular case is Art. 142 or Art. 144 has to be decided by reference to the pleadings—Mahomed Mahmud v. Mahomed Afaq, 11 O.W.N. 104, 147 I.C. 805, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 21 (23).

Where the plaintiff does not plead dispossession, and it is not found that he was actually dispossessed on a certain date, the suit falls under Article 144, and not under Article 142—Ali Hammad v. Ghurpattar, 47 All. 389, A.I.R. 1925 All. 454, 85 I.C. 578; Ram Surat v. Badri, 50 All. 89, A.I.R. 1927 All. 799 (800), 102 I.C. 814; Mahomed Mahmud v. Mahomed Ifaq, supra. Article 142 applies to a case where the plaintiff while possession has been dispossessed or has discontinued possession. Where the plaintiff had never been in possession, but the original owner was admittedly in possession up to the time of his death, and the plaintiffs derived their title from the will of the original owner and sought o recover possession on the strength of the will, Article 142 could not apply, but Article 144—Charu Chandra v. Nahush Chandra, 50 Cal. 49 (64), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 1. Article 142 applies to a suit for recovery of possession after dispossession, and not Art. 144. Where the plaintiffs alleged that the suit lands formed part for their patni taluq, and that they were in possession of them up to some time when the lands diluviated, and when they reappeared and the plaintiffs went to exercise acts of possession over them they found the defendant in possession, held that the suit was for recovery of possession after dispossession, and that the proper Article applicable was Art. 142 and not 144—Birendra Nath v. Satish Chandra, 44 C.L.J. 121, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1166, 97 I.C. 1003.

Article 144 is wider in scope than Art. 142; the latter refers to suit for immoveable property; the former includes in addition interest in immoveable property—Lokenath v. Jahania Bibi, 14 C.L.J. 572, 12 I.C. 305 (307).

In a case falling under Article 142, adverse possession is not required to be proved in order to maintain a defence; but in a case under Art. 144, the defendant must show that his possession was adverse—Md. Amanulla v. Badan Singh, 17 Cal. 137 (143) (P.C.); Deram v. Asharam, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 793, A.I.R. 1940 Snd 49. What the plaintiff has to prove under Art. 142 is that he was in possession within 12 years before suit; but under Art. 144, the onus is on the defendant to prove that his possession has become adverse more than 12 years before the suit—Ram Surat v. Badri, 50 All. 89, A.I.R. 1927 All. 799 (800), 102 I.C. 814. There is a fundamental difference between the two positions, (1) that the plaintiff had not been in possession of the property for over 12 years, that is to say, he was dispossessed more than 12 years prior to the suit, and (2) that the defendant had been in adverse possession of the property for over twelve years. This is so, although in either case the plea in effect is that the suit is time-barred. It involves essentially a question of the burden of proof. In the one case, the burden would be on the plaintiff to prove his former possession and subsequent dispossession within 12 years of the suit, and in the other it would be on the defendant to prove his continued adverse possession for over 12 years—Nausha v. Umrao, A.I.R. 1950 All. 626.

But there may be cases in which the plaintiff sues for possession of immoveable property both on the ground of title and on the ground of his possession having been disturbed by the defendant. In such cases, if he proves his title, the burden of establishing title by adverse possession lies upon the defendant, and if the defendant succeeds in proving that fact the suit must fail; otherwise the plaintiff is entitled to a decree. To this extent, Art. 144 will apply to such a suit. But it may be that the plaintiff, though not able to substantiate his title is in a position to prove his possession and dispossession by the defendant within 12 years. If that be the case, Art. 142 will apply and the burden will be on the plaintiff—Mahomud Mahmud v. Mahomed Afaq, 11 O.W.N. 104, 147 I.C. 805, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 21 (24).

611. Immoveable Property:—The words "immoveable property" have to be interpreted in accordance with the definition of these words as given in the General Clauses Act and not according to the special definition given of these words in the Transfer of Property Act or in the Registration Act. So the words "immoveable property" includes trees attached to land, whether sold for conversion into timber or for the purposes of being enjoyed as fruit trees—Ganga v. Nihal, A.I.R. 1952 All. 310.

611A. Interest in immoveable property:—The following are interests in immoveable property:—

(1) An equity of redemption in a mortgaged property—Casborne v. Scarfe, 1 Atk. 603; Parashram v. Govind, 21 Bom. 226; Kanti Ram v. Katubuddin, 22 Cal. 33; Umesh v. Zahur, 18 Cal. 164.

(2) A toda giras hak, i.e., a right to receive an annual payment from a village—Futtehsangji v. Desai, 22 W.R. 178 (P.C.).

(3) An annuity granted by a Hindu sovereign to a Hindu temple—Collector v. Kriskmanath, 5 Bom. 322.

(4) A right to officiate as priest at funeral ceremonies to Hindus—Raghoo v. Kassy, 10 Cal. 73.

(5) A right to take fruits of one's own trees—Bapu v. Dhondi, 16 Bom. 353.

(6) The right to an office in a temple and endowments attached thereto—Alagirisami v. Sundareswara, 21 Mad. 278 (287).

(7) A right to possession and management of a saranjam—Narayan v. Vasudeo, 15 Bom. 247.

(8) A Hindu widow's life-interest in the income of her husband's immoveable property—Nathu v. Dhunbaiji, 23 Bom. 1.

(9) A right to colllect dues from a fair on a piece of land—Sikandar v. Bahadur, 27 All. 462.

(10) A right to collect lac from trees—Parmanandy v. Birkhu, 5 N.L.R. 21, 1 I.C. 903; Ramlal v. Lodha, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 201.

(11) An exclusive right (i.e., excluding the owner) to catch fish in the tank of another is an interest in immoveable property and can be acquired by 12 years' enjoyment; but a right to catch fish not excluding the rightful owner, is not an interest in immoveable property but a profit a prendre and therefore an easement and can be acquired by 20 years' user—Hill & Co. v. Sheoraj, 1 Pat. 674, 67 I.C. 954; Luckimoni v. Koruna, 3 C.L.R. 509; Baker Hosein v. Ranjit Koer, 2 P.L.J. 289, 39 I.C. 777; Lokenath v. Jahania Bibi, 12 I.C. 305, 14 C.L.J. 572; Sitaram v. Petia, 14 N.L.R. 25, 42 I.C. 392; Parbutty v. Madho, 3 Cal. 276; Narayan v. Laxmibai, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 382, I.L.R. (1951) Nag. 199, 1951 N.L.J. 338. An exclusive right of fishing means that no other person has a co-extensive right with the claimant of the right. The mere fact that some other person has a right to a particular class of fish in the fishery or that another person is entitled to fish at a certain time of the year does not destroy the right of exclusive fishing in any manner—Braja v. Moni, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 247.

(12) The right to parjot, charai and charsai dues—Sheoraj v. Debi Baksh, 21 O.C. 119, 46 I.C. 439.

(13) The mortgage of the "superstructure of a house exclusive of the land beneath" creates an interest in immoveable property, as the apparent intention is to mortgage the house and not merely the materials—Narayan v. Ramaswamy, 8 M.H.C.R. 100.

The following are not interests in immoveable property:—

(1) A right to be placed on the register of revenue records—Bhikaji v. Pandu, 19 Bom. 43.

(2) An agreement to grant a lease does not create an interest in immoveable property, nor is a suit upon the agreement a suit for the recovery of an interest in immoveable property—Lalta Ram v. Chaubain, 22 W.R. 287.

(3) A claim to revenue from the holder of a land is not a claim to recover possession of an interest in immoveable property—Alubi v. Kunhi, 10 Mad. 115.

(4) A right to take water from the well of another is not an interest in immoveable property and cannot be lost by 12 years' adverse possession—Ananta v. Ganu, 45 Bom. 80, A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 417.

(5) A right to worship an idol—Eshan v. Monmohini, 4 Cal. 683 (685).

(6) A suit to recover a certain sum of money due as an emolument of an hereditary office attached to a temple is not a suit to recover an interest in immoveable property—Rathna Mudaliar v. Tiruvenkata, 22 Mad. 351 (352).

(7) A license to dig and search for coal—Kamakshya v. Karanpura Development Co., A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 134.

612. Adverse possession:—The classical definition of adverse possession is to be found in the following oft-quoted words of Markby J.: "By adverse possession I understand to be meant possession by a person holding the land on his own behalf, [or on behalf] of some person other than the true owner, the true owner having a right to immediate possession. If by this adverse possession the statute is set running, and it continues to run for twelve years, then the title of the true owner is extinguished, and the person in possession becomes the owner"—Bejoy Chandra v. Kally Prosanno, 4 Cal. 327 (329). [It should be noticed that there is a misprint in the report of the judgment at p. 329, the words "or on behalf" being omitted. See this passage correctly cited in 30 All. 119, at p. 122]. In order to constitute adverse possession, there must be actual possession of a person claiming as of right by himself or by persons deriving title from him—Secretary of State v. Krishnamoni, 29 Cal. 518 (535) (P.C.). In order to constitute adverse possession, the possession must be adequate in continuity, in publicity and in extent of area to show that it was adverse to the real owner. It must be actual, exclusive and uninterrupted. The kind of possession must no doubt depend largely upon the character of the land but no presumption of possession can be made in favour of a trespasser. His possession must be confined to the land actually occupied by him. Though as a general rule possession of part is in law possession of the whole if the whole is otherwise vacant, but constructive possession of this kind can only be presumed when there is a claim based upon title. It follows from the above that in the case of Parti land the establishment of adverse possession regarding one portion of the plot cannot lead to any presumption in respect of the other portion —Partab Bahadur Singh v. Jagatjit Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 396. There must be proof of the defendant being in possession. Where the mortgagee was in actual possession of certain property under a usufructuary mortgage, and certain persons merely got their names recorded in the Revenue papers in place of the name of the mortgagor, it was held that such persons could not acquire possession adverse of the right to redeem because they were not in actual possession of the property—Kunwar Sen v. Darbari, 38 All. 411 (414, 415). Entries in the record of rights of the defendant's name are not sufficient. The defendant must prove overt acts of adverse possession besides the entries—Nur Muhammad v. Qaim, 29 P.L.R. 381, 110 I.C. 857, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 306. Evidence of possession on paper (leases and documents of various kinds) is not sufficient—Radhamoni v. Collector, 27 Cal. 943, (949) (P.C.). A trespasser does not necessarily intend to prescribe for a hostile title simply by remaining in occupation. His attitude may be a purely negative and passive one—Raghunathaswami v. Donna, 1942 N.L.J. 431.

To prove title to the land by adverse possession, it is not sufficient to show that some acts of possession have been done. The possession required must be adequate in continuity, in publicity and in extent to show that it is adverse to the owner—Radhamoni v. Collector, 27 Cal. 943 (950) (P.C.); Allah Rakhi v. Shah Mahomed, 56 All. 111 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 77; Jogendra v. Baldeo, 35 Cal. 961 (971); Jagjiwandas v. Bai Amba, 25 Bom. 362 (366); Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 Cal. 397 (405); Kuthali v. Kunharankutty, 44 Mad. 883 (890) (P.C.); Vithaldas v. Secretary of State, 26 Bom. 410 (416); Prem v. Tej, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 252; Kalyani v. Borrea Coal Co., 49 C.W.N. 810, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 123; Palania v. Amjath, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 15, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 321, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 622 (F.B.); Kameswara Rao v. Somanna, A.I.R. 1955 Andhra 212. In other words, the possession must be actual, visible, exclusive, hostile and continued during the time necessary to create a bar under the statute of limitation—Jogendra v. Baladeo, supra; Nawab Bahadur v. Gopinath, 13 C.L.J. 625, 6 I.C. 392 (396); Barjor Singh v. Sidh Nath, 29 O.C. 395, 1 Luck. 441, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 141, 98 I.C. 904; Pratab v. Bhaba, A.I.R. 1952 Assam. 34. The possession, in order that it may bar the recovery, must be continuous and uninterrupted as well as open, notorious, actual, exclusive and adverse—Armstrong v. Monili, (1871) 14 Wallace 145; Doswell v. Dela Lanza, (1857) 20 Howard 32. The possession required must be ne vic ne clam ne precario. But it is not necessary in order to establish adverse possession, that the proof of acts of possession should cover every moment of the requisite period—Secretary of State v. Debendra Lal, 61 Cal. 262 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 285, 147 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 23; Dipnarain v. Pundeo, 25 Pat. 412,

A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 99. To establish adverse possession over a coal mining area it may not be necessary to carry on mining operation continuously for a period of 12 years, but continuous possession of the mining area and the mine will be a necessary ingredient to establish such adverse possession—Kashi Bai v. Sudha Rani, A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 434. An entry upon the land of the plaintiff, in order to be an assertion of hostile title, must be an entry as an owner. Entry on the land by persons who were raiyats and who never claimed as owners, is not adverse possession—Gaya Prasad v. Bakya Mani, 56 Cal. 914, 33 C.W.N. 277 (279), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 297, 119 I.C. 289. In order to constitute adverse possession, it must be a complete possession exclusive of the possession of any other person—per Cairns L. C. in Lows. v. Telford, (1876) 1 A.C. 415 (423). Therefore, evidence of partial possession on the part of the plaintiff is sufficient to displace the adverse possession set up by the defendant—Vithaldas v. Secretary of State, 26 Bom. 410 (416). "To constitute dispossession, there must in every case be positive acts which can be referred only to the intention of obtaining exclusive control"—Pollock on possession, p. 85. Therefore, promiscuous acts done at different times by an undefined and fluctuating body of persons from the village and the neighbouring villages cannot be said to be acts done with the intention of obtaining exclusive control over the lands, and do not amount to adverse possession—Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 Cal. 397 (405); Lutchmeeput v. Sadaulla, 9 Cal. 698. Plaintiffs obtained leave to plant trees on land belonging to Government; and the only right they were entitled to was to get the fallen dry wood from the trees. Certain transfers of the village took place, and on two occasions, the defendant who purchased the village got the proceeds of the sale of such wood. The plaintiffs on both occasions asserted their claim to the wood but were unsuccessful. They then instituted a suit for a declaration of their right to get the dry wood. The defendant pleaded adverse possession. It was held that the right being one which was only occasional, that is, which could only be exercised at uncertain occasions when the wood might fall or be cut down from the trees, and not being uninterrupted or continuing every year or at stated times, and there being disputes between the parties as to the right on two previous occasions, it could not be said that the defendant had acquired a title by adverse possession—Debi Prasad v. Badri Prasad, 40 All. 461 (469). No title by adverse possession can be presumed from a few acts of trespass committed only occasionally—Kedarnath v. Amrit, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 568, 88 I.C. 676. Casual and spasmodic acts of digging or boring holes on different spots within the coal area cannot be said to be such possession as to attract the rule of adverse possession—Kamakshya v. Karanpura Development Co., A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 134. In order that possession of mineral rights be adequate in publicity the defendant must prove that there was that to be seen on the surface which the plaintiff or his predecessor being reasonably vigilant ought to have seen and so seeing would have been put on their guard although they did not have any title to the surface—Kalyani v. Borrea Coal Co., 49 C.W.N. 810, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 123.

It is sufficient to constitute adverse possession that the person claiming to be the real owner should have stood by, while others continued to possess, not by any derivative title but in practical contravention of his alleged rights. The law does not require that the claimant to ownership must in such circumstances have protested against the violation of his rights and that the possession went on despite such protest—Aruna Chellam v. Venkatachalapathi, 43 Mad. 253 (269) (P.C.).

To constitute adverse possession, it is sufficient if there is an intention to hold thing as owner, and if some overt act is done upon the thing in execution of that intention; it is not necessary that it should be enjoyed in any particular manner—Sibasubramanya v. Secretary of State, 9 Mad. 285 (303). Thus where the owner of a serai adjoining a mosque remains in possession and uses it as exclusively his own by raising the height of the pushta, by constructing therein a drain for discharge of water of the roofs of the sarai and by opening niches for his enjoyment, the possession is adverse—Laxmi v. Shafi, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 141. Moreover, it is not necessary that some acts should always be done upon the spot in dispute itself, but it is enough if some overt acts of ownership were done in relation to that spot, as for instance, enclosing it—Clark v. Elphinstone, L.R. 6 App. Cas. 164.

Acts indicative of adverse possession must vary according to the nature of the property over which possession is exercised—Secretary of State v. Debendra Lal, 61 Cal. 262 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 285. The possession must be the kind of possession of which the particular subject is susceptible—Narain v. Balabh, A.I.R. 1950 H.P. 6. Thus, in case of bil or waste lands, the cutting of grass and the grazing of cattle are the ordinary acts by which possession is asserted—Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 Cal. 397 (405). In case of forest lands the act of cutting wood, gathering forest produce and pasturing cattle, if such acts are accompanied with an assertion of the ownership of the soil, would be evidence of adverse possession—Sivasubramanya v. Secretary of State, 9 Mad. 285 (304). In case of a tank, the mere appropriation of the fish may not necessarily constitute adverse possession; but acts of an obviously proprietary character such as sub-letting, mortgaging, or re-excavation of the tank or the expenditure of large sums in clearing silt out of it, or the construction of masonry sluices in it, will constitute adverse possession—Bijoy Chand Mahatab v. Iswar Chandra, 21 C.W.N. 199, 35 I.C. 60 (63); Venkatarama v. Secretary of State, 33 Mad. 362, 20 M L.J. 74. The mere fact that a number of fishermen from time to time have been exercising the right of fishing with the leave and licence of some of the owners is not sufficient for the acquisition of the right by adverse possession—Braja v. Moni, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 247.

If a bit of land which is of no use to the owner is used by a neighbouring landholder for various temporary purposes, e.g., by building a privy, a hut or a shed for cows, goats, etc., but all these structures are of a flimsy and temporary character, held that user of this sort is insufficient to give a title to the land by adverse possession. User of this sort is common in this country and excites no particular attention. It is not intended to denote nor understood as denoting a claim to the ownership of the land. So also, the acts of throwing rubbish on the land of another, or tethering cattle on a vacant site, and placing pieces of furniture, scaffolding, building materials, etc., on another's land are done in almost every part of this country, without any claim to ownership being thereby intended—Framji v. Goculdas, 16 Bom. 338 (341, 342); Rulia v. Nur Md., 27 P.L.R. 561, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 615, 97 I.C. 705; Lajpat v. Sohna, 30 P.L.R. 296, 115 I.C. 71, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 432; Naidar v. Shib Ram, 27 P.L.R. 762, 98 I.C. 880, 8 L.L.J. 535. But if the construction is not of a flimsy character or of a character indicative of an intention on the part of the person constructing the same to use it temporarily and not permanently, possession of the same for more than 12 years constitutes adverse possession—Ahmad v. Dharma School, 1947 A.L.J. 108, A.I.R. 1947 All. 409. So also, the mere erection of a few thatched structures or the planting of a few trees on the waste land of another—Bechu v. Lachmi, 8 I.C. 708 (709) (Oudh); or the use of a small piece of plaintiff's vacant land by the defendant for the purposes of a backyard (specially when the parties are brothers)—Chokkalinga v. Muthusami, 21 Mad. 53 (55); or the use of the plaintiff's abandoned waste land by the neighbours and the persons employed in the neighbouring mills as a convenient place for answering the calls of nature, does not constitute adverse user; indeed these acts are not acts of possession at all—Jogendra v. Baldeo, 35 Cal. 961 (971). In case of waste land, jungle land or tank land the defendant does not necessarily dispossess the owner by planting trees or by cultivation, as he does not by walking over or otherwise trespassing on it—Sheo Narain v. Badal, 8 O.C. 177; Abdul Rahim v. Wazir Ali, 7 O.W.N. 509, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 304, or by tethering of cattle or storing of logs—Asa Ram v. Ramchandra, I.L.R. (1939) All. 217, 1938 A.L.J. 1227, A.I.R. 1939 All. 161. The mere fact that the defendants had been in possession of the suit land in the sense that they had been enjoying it because it lay in front of their houses, would not be sufficient to make their enjoyment adverse as owners—Hulas v. Barkatunnissa, 1 Luck. 469, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 393, 3 O.W.N. 475, 94 I.C. 1034. Where though foundations are laid, but the land is kept unenclosed, it does not amount to an unequivocal assertion of an intention to appropriate the land—Asa Ram v. Ramchandra, I.L.R. (1939) All. 217, 1938 A.L.J. 1227, A.I.R. 1939 All. 161. So also, the enjoyment of a kalam peramboke, for the purpose of using it as a threshing floor, or for storing manure and green leaves, for stocking hay-stacks after the harvest, for drying paddy before they are taken to the granary, for allowing buffaloes and other cattle to stray and remain there before they are taken for grazing, was held to be an enjoyment of too fugitive and patently permissive kind to amount to adverse possession. There is probably no village in India in which unoccupied village land is not used for the above purposes. Such user does not harm any one and is not objected to by any one—Dindigul Taluk Board v. Venkatarama, 46 Mad. 866, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 197, 75 I.C. 38.

Possession of a portion of the land only cannot be held to constitute constructive possession of the whole, so as to enable the possessor to obtain thereby a title to the whole by limitation—Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 Cal. 397 (405); Nawab Bahadur v. Gopinath, 13 C.L.J. 625, 6 I.C. 392 (397); Mohini Mohan v. Promada Nath, 24 Cal. 256; Mangal Singh v. Ali Sher, 120 I.C. 792, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 303. The doctrine that possession of part is in law possession of the whole does not hold good in the case of a trespasser, if the whole is otherwise vacant. Possession by a trespasser is confined to the land actually occupied by him—Sadik Husain v. Etizad, 13 O.L.J. 798, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 209, 101 I.C. 714; Maheshwar v. Partap Bahadur, 12 O.C. 58, 2 I.C. 63; Kalyani v. Borrea Coal Co., 49 C.W.N. 810, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 123. The doctrine of constructive possession cannot be applied in favour of a wrong-doer, whose possession must be confined to actual possession; that is to say, if he relies on adverse possession, he can succeed only as regards the portion of the land in suit of which he proves actual possession for the statutory period—Nawab Bahadur v. Gopinath, 13 C.L.J. 625, 6 I.C. 392 (397); Ananda Hari v. Secretary of State, 3 C.L.J. 316; Jogendra v. Baldeo, 35 Cal. 961; Mirza Shamsher v. Munshi Kunj Behari, 12 C.W.N. 273. In the case of mines there is no presumption in law that possession of a part of a seam infers possession of the whole seam much less of all the seams in the mineral field in which part of a seam has been worked. Possession is a question of fact and the extent of possession is an inference of fact—Kalyani v. Borrea Coal Co., supra. The same principle applies where the possession is under an invalid lease or defective grant—Hari v. Abdul, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 160; Sailajananda v. Lakhichand, 30 P.L.T. 388, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 502. It is impossible to obtain by prescription anything more than what is claimed. If a man asserts that he is the owner of an undivided half share in property and holds possession of it for 12 years, he becomes owner of that half share only, not of the whole property—Chunnu v. Subheti, 22 N.L.R. 181, 98 I.C. 540, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 67. But in many cases acts done upon parts of a tract of land may be evidence of the possession of the whole; as for instance, if a large field is surrounded by hedges, acts done in one part of it would be evidence of the possession of the whole—Clarke v. Elphinstone, L.R. 6 App. Cas. 164. It has recently been found in Onkarmal Agarwalla v. Bireswar, 61 C.W.N. 970 that the doctrine of 'fantum prescriptum quantum possessum' (the title acquired by adverse possession is limited to the area actually possessed) is confined to a mere trespasser who claims title only by possession without any claim or colour of title, whereas the possessory title of a person claiming under a deed which is not sufficient in law to confer that title, extends to the whole area as described in the deed, provided however that the claimant "exercised such dominion over the property as to justify the inference that he was in possession of the whole." When a tract of land with a defined boundary has been throughout claimed by owner, and acts of ownership have been done upon various portions of it, such acts of enjoyment may be accepted as evidence of the possession of the whole—Sibasubramanya v. Secretary of State, 9 Mad. 285 (305). Where there are circumstances to link together various portions of ground, the possession of a part amounts constructively to adverse possession of the whole—Suresh Chandra v. Shiti Kanta, 51 Cal. 669 (679), 28 C.W.N. 637, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 855, 78 I.C. 679. There is no reason for holding that a trespasser who takes exclusive possession of the whole land without the consent of the owner cannot acquire a right to the whole of the land, simply because he claims a title to less than the whole—Nutbihari v. Bishweswari, 60 Cal. 404, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 414 (415), 144 I.C. 177. Where the trespasser treats the property as forming one unit with the property in his actual possession with the knowledge of the owner, an inference of adverse possession of the whole is raised—Sailajananda v. Lakhichand, supra.

Where lands are held as remuneration for services, the mere non-performance of the services is not sufficient to make the holding adverse to the landlord, just as non-payment of rent by a tenant to his landlord does not constitute his possession adverse to the landlord. To make the holding adverse, there must be, over and above the omission to render service an active assertion of an adverse right on the part of the defendant by a refusal to perform the service or a claim to hold the land free of such service—Komargowda v. Bhimaji, 23 Bom. 602 (606, 607).

, So long as a person is in permissive occupation of land, his possession does not become adverse; it commences to be adverse at the end of the period during which he is permitted to occupy the land—Shivrudrappa v. Balappa, 23 Bom. 283 (286); see also Gobinda Lal v. Debendra Nath, 6 Cal. 311 (314); Ahmad Sharif v. Umrao, 3 O.W.N. 460, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 353, 94 I.C. 779; Tulsiram v. Pande, I L.R. 1955 Nag. 842, A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 11. Permissive occupation or occupation held under a license cannot be said to be adverse. Where two companies owned two adjoining pieces of land and employed a common agent, who with the best of motives permitted the defendant company to build upon the land belonging to the plaintiff company, held that the defendant company were mere licensees, or their occupation was at the most permissive (viz., by the common agent), and that they could not put forward a plea of adverse possession—Gujerat Ginning Co. v. Motilal Spinning Co., 53 Bom. 792, 123 I.C. 481, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 84 (86). If the defendants were licensees, the institution of a suit against them for recovery of possess on would result in termination of the licence under which they may have held the land in question—Raghupati Ray v. Debu Karmakar, 60 C.W.N. 385, A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 79. Permissive possession is not adverse till adverse possession is asserted—Sheodhari v. Suraj Prasad, A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 758. Where the plaintiff's husband conveyed to her two houses in satisfaction of her dower, and continued to reside in one of the two houses as before, such residence must be treated as permissive on behalf of the plaintiff, and was not adverse to her right over the property—Ibrahim v. Isa Rasul, 41 Bom. 5 (12). Where possession of a portion of the land is shown to be permissive and not adverse, Courts may presume that the possession of the rest of the properties was also permissive, in the absence of evidence to the contrary—Ram Abhilak v. Chaturasi, 13 O.L.J. 839, 101 I.C. 730, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh. 582.

A person who holds possession on behalf of another does not by a mere denial of that other's title make his possession adverse so as to give himself the benefit of the statute of limitation. Thus, a wife who holds possession on her husband's behalf, during his absence, cannot acquire a title by adverse possession against her husband, however long her husband may be absent—Bijoy Chandra v. Kally Prosanna, 4 Cal. 327 (329). A licensee (whose possession is only permissive) cannot claim title only from possession, however long, unless it is proved that his possession was adverse to that of the licensor to his knowledge and with his acquiescence—Kodoth Ambu Nayar v. Secretary of State, 47 Mad. 572 (582) (P.C.), 80 I.C. 835, A.I.R. 1924 P.C. 150; Dewood Khan v. Banubi, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 862, 1950 N.L.J. 163, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 127. The possession of a licensee is not adverse generally. But where the licensee assumes or arrogates to himself the right of transferring the subject of the licence, which in fact he cannot transfer, this involves an assertion of an absolute title and consequently a denial of the actual owner. In such a case the possession of the transferee must be unlawful from the date of its inception—Nausha v. Umrao, A.I.R. 1951 All. 626. A compromise decree wherein the title of the plaintiff is admitted and the character of permissive possession is accepted, terminates the adverseness of possession and the continuance of possession thereafter is permissive—Alli v. Krishna, A.I.R. 1950 Orissa 250.

Possession does not become adverse when the intention to hold adversely is wanting. Although the defendant's possession might have been wrongful, still if the plaintiff honestly though wrongly believed that the defendant (who was a Hindu female) was entitled to possession for life and the defendant herself shared that belief and so remained in possession, such possession was not adverse to the plaintiff, but merely permissive, as the intention to hold adversely in order to obtain an absolute estate was wanting—Pirsab v. Gurappa, 38 Bom. 227 (238), 24 I.C. 716.

Another important principle to be borne in mind is that the possession of the defendant does not become adverse to the plaintiff, until the plaintiff is entitled to immediate possession. As observed by Mr. Justice Markby: "By adverse possession I understand to be meant possession by a person holding the land on his own behalf, or on behalf of some person other than the true owner, the true owner having a right to immediate possession"—Bejoy Chunder v. Kally Prosanno, 4 Cal. 327 (329). This well-known rule is conveyed in the maxim "contra non valentem agere non currit prescriptio," i.e., prescription does not run against a man during the time when he is not entitled to immediate possession—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (51); Malkarjun v. Amrita, 42 Bom. 714 (718), 47 I.C. 153; Chinto v. Janki, 18 Bom. 51 (57). The person against whom adverse possession is exercised, must be a person who is entitled to demand possession at the moment adverse possession begins—Aditya v. Dhirendra, 53 C.W.N. 899, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 92.

The possession of the defendant does not become adverse to the plaintiff where there was no notice or knowledge, or circumstance that could have given notice or knowledge, to the plaintiff that the defendant's possession was in displacement of his right. Until the plaintiff had reason to know that his rights were invaded, there could be no necessity for him to take action. Knowledge on the part of the person whose rights are invaded is an essential element of adverse possession—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (69). Thus where a widow of a deceased Mahomedan does not bring to the notice of the other heirs that she is claiming the esate, of which she is in possession, adversely to them, no question of adverse possession can arise, especially when the lady has a claim for dower debt owing from the deceased husband—Yusuf v. Gafoor, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 123, 30 Pat. 351. Possession of which the plaintiff was not aware until a recent date, is not adverse possession—Gaya Prasad v. Bakya Mani, 56 Cal. 914, 33 C.W.N. 277 (279). But actual knowledge is not necessary. Knowledge may be presumed from an open and notorious act of taking possession—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43

(52). Possession to be adverse must be adequate in continuity, in publicity and in extent. But adverse possession need not be shown to have been brought to the knowledge of the owner. It is sufficient that the possession be overt and without any attempt at concealment, so that the person against whom time is running, ought, if he exercises due vigilence, to be aware of what is happening. Where the assertion of right is secret and not open, the possession cannot be held to be adverse—Upendranath v. Jiterdranath, 62 Cal. 921; Secy. of State v. Debendra Lal, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 23; Maharaja Sirish Nandy v. Baijnath Jugal-kishore, 62 I.A. 40, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 36; Haria v. Bhindru, A.I.R. 1950 H.P. 8; Bhola Nath v. Shyam Sundra, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 235; Dipnarain v. Pundeo, 25 Pat. 512, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 99. U. N.Mitra's Limitation, p. 135; Angell on Limitation p. 292.

Possession, in order to be adverse, must have been used openly without any effort made or step taken to effect concealment—Rains v. Buxton, (1880) 14 Ch. D. 533 (540). The possession taken must not be clandestine. The possession, in order to ripen into a prescriptive title must be juridical and have none of the vitia possessions as clam vi aut precario. And if in its inception it is vitiated by its clandestine, violent or permissive character, it must lose that character and become open, peaceable and as of right before it can cause time to run.—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (53).

Possession is never considered adverse if its commencement can be referred to a lawful title—Doe v. Brightwen, (1809) 10 East 583; Thomas v. Thomas, (1856) 2 K. & J. 79; Bhairabendra v. Rajendra, 50 Cal. 487 (489), A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 45, 74 I.C. 193; Rangulal v. Makhan, I.L.R. (1949) 1 Cut. 804, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 183; Kesavan v. Mayankutty, A.I.R. 1958 Ker. 58. The possession of a manager of a family or guardian does not become adverse until he has distinctly repudiated the management or guardianship—Nabab Mir Sayad v. Yasin Khan, 17 Bom. 755 (758). One who holds possession on behalf of another cannot, by a mere denial of that other's title make his possession adverse so as to give himself the benefit of the statute of limitation—Bejoy Chandra v. Kally Prosanna, 4 Cal. 327 (329). There must be some adverse act, so that if the possession has commenced and continued in accordance with any contract, express or implied, between the parties in and out of possession, to which the possession may be referred as legal and proper, it cannot be presumed adverse—Dandoba v. Krishna, 7 Bom. 34 (39). That is to say, if there be no adverse act, nothing overt and no unmistakable ouster, or taking of possession, and all that is done is referrable to or consistent with and susceptible of explanation by, some title which does not impugn but recognise the right of the person seeking to recover possession, there can be no possession adverse to that person without notice or intimation to him of some kind, that an adverse claim has been set up in opposition to his right theretofore recognised—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (53); Ittappan v. Manavikraman, 21 Mad. 153 (159). In order to prove adverse possession, it is necessary to show that the person claiming adverse possession had an animus to possess a thing in his own right against the right of the rightful owner. In case of persons standing in fiduciary relationship with the owner such animus will not be readily presumed and so long as he does not divest himself of that character, his possession will be attributed to the consent, express or implied, of the rightful owner—Sajjad v. Shahid, A.I.R. 1950 All 316. The payment of house tax is not such an unequivocal act as would constitute an assertion of hostile intention so as to amount to adverse possession in law—Rangulal v. Makhun, I.L.R. (1949) 1 Cut. 804, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 183; Kaluluddin v. The State of Hyderabad, A.I.R. 1951 Hyderabad 137. A person who is once in possession in a fiduciary character does not cease to hold in that character merely because it becomes uncertain who is the actual person to whom he has to account—Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 437.

Where a decree has been made declaring a right to and directing partition, but no proceedings have been taken in execution of the decree, and the parties have remained in status quo without any partition having been made, neither party can claim against the other to have been in adverse possession of any portion of the property—Nasratullah v. Mujibullah, 13 All. 309 (315).

It is always assumed that the person in possession is in rightful possession and so his possession is always referred to a lawful title whenever that is possible. But this principle does not apply to the possession of a trespasser—Raghunathaswani v. Donna, 1942 N.L.J. 413. Where the circumstances under which possession was assumed are known, the general principle that a Court will always attribute possession to a lawful title where that is possible cannot be relied on—Munnalal v. Kashibai, 73 I.A. 223, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 917, 1946 A.L.J. 427, 51 C.W.N. 175, 1947 N.L.J. 106, A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 15, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 453 (P.C.); I.L.R. (1947) Kar. (P.C.) 78.

Adverse possession and easement distinguished:—If a person stands in such relation to a particular thing that he has in fact dominion over it, and if he and those under whom he claims have in fact exercised this dominion from time immemorial or for the period fixed by the law of prescription, he becomes the legal owner of the thing; but in order that the possession may generate ownership, it is necessary that the possessor should hold the thing exclusively, and for himself as owner, In other words, to constitute adverse possession two things are necessary, viz., the physical fact of exclusive possession, and the intention to hold for himself as owner. If, on the other hand, a particular act is done upon a thing with the belief that another is its owner and not with the intention to hold as owner, and if the particular act has been done continuously for 20 years as fixed by the law of prescription, the person doing the act acquires a legal right to do that act, though the thing upon which it is done is in other respects under another's dominion. In principle, the act done is one of ownership or evidence of easement according as the person doing it asserts general ownership or a particular right to another's property, and in the first case the act of enjoyment is designated possession and in the latter case quasi-possession. This is the distinction in principle between acts of ownership and acts which are done in the exercise of easements—Sivasubramanya v. Secretary of State, 9 Mad. 285 (302, 303).

613. Adverse possession by tenant against landlord:—There can be no adverse possession by the tenant during the term of his lease. A person who lawfully came into possession of the land as tenant from year to year for a term of years, cannot, by setting up during the continuance of such relation any title adverse to that of the landlard, acquire by operation of the law of limitation any title as owner or any other title inconsistent with that under which he was let into possession. But the tenant can, after the determination of the tenancy, set up and acquire by prescription against the landlord, a right as owner or such limited estate as he might prescribe for—Seshamma v. Chickaya, 25 Mad. 507 (511). When certain persons come into possession as tenants they cannot acquire proprietory title by adverse possession unless adverse possession had been asserted by them to the knowledge of the landlord—Municipal Board v. Mansa, A.I.R. 1951 All. 634. A person coming into possession under a lease which is invalid or void as against the person seeking to eject him is really a trespasser, and as such, after the expiration of the period prescribed by Article 144 acquires by prescription the limited right under the lease, whether it be a lease for a term of years or a lease in perpetuity—Seshamma v. Chickaya, 25 Mad. 507 (511, 512); Budesab v. Hammanta, 21 Bom. 509; Thakore Fatesinghji v. Bamanji, 27 Bom. 515 (537). The Patna High Court has held that where the lease relied on by the defendant is prohibited by the statute, it is not open to the court to hold that the defendant has acquired right of tenancy by prescription—Sahabu v. Hari, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 43. The same High Court has held in a subsequent case that a person coming in possession under an invalid lease is a trespasser from the beginning and possession is adverse to the landlord so far as his right to khas possession is concerned. If the landlord accepts rent from him, his possession may not be adverse so far as the landlord's right to receive rent is concerned—Maharaj v. Budhu, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 46.

"A tenant's possession, unlike that of a stranger, is in its inception in subserviency to and consistent with the landlord's title, and as during the existence of the tenancy the tenant is bound to protect the interest of the landlord, the landlord has a right to act upon the supposition that his interest has not been betrayed and that no change in the character of the possession has taken place, unless and until it is brought home to him that the contrary is the case. Therefore, though the law does not absolutely disable a tenant from disclaiming his landlord's title and claiming to hold in his own right, yet if he does so, the statute does not begin to operate unless the possession, before consistent with the title of the real owner, becomes tortious and wrongful by the disloyal acts of the tenant, which must be open, continued and notorius so as to preclude all doubts as to the character of the holding or the want of knowledge on the part of the owner. See Zeller v. Eckhart, 4 How. (U.S.) 289 at p. 296, cited in Angell on Limitation, 6th Edn., p. 458. It should be added, however, that if the disavowal of the landlord's title and the assertion of the claim to hold on the tenant's own account take place during the currency of a definite term then the tenant's possession does not necessarily become adverse immediately. For in such a case the term would become forfeited only if the landlord does some act showing his intention, on the ground of the denial of his title, to determine the tenancy. In the absence of such act, the term subsists, and the possession is, in law possession under the lease. But the moment the term comes to its natural termination by effluxion of time, the disloyal tenant's possession becomes adverse"—per Subramania Aiyer, J. in Ittappan v. Manavikraman, 21 Mad. 153 (163). So also where the tenant remains in possession on account of non-execution of a conditional decree passed in a previous suit for ejectment, the possession becomes adverse from the date of the decree—Kripa v. Zahur, 13 Lah. 311, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 46; Kishen v. Mohan, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 1. Where the term of a lease is continuing, mere non-payment of rent without anything more would not amount to adverse possession. But where a lease is for a fixed period, and there is no proof that a fresh tenancy was constituted at the end of the period, then the lease may be taken to have determined on that date, and the possession of the tenant thenceforward becomes wrongful—Shravan v. Fattu, 28 Bom.L.R. 1357, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 613, 98 I.C. 911. See Note 583 under Article 139. But where under the Tenancy Act (Punjab) the tenant has the right to continue in possession until his landlord serves him with notice of ejectment, the tenancy is not determined by lapse of time, and the holding over after the expiry of the lease does not amount to adverse possession—Sohawa v. Kesar Singh, 13 Lah. 432, 140 I.C. 474, 33 P.L.R. 771.

The possession of a tenant for life cannot become adverse within the meaning of the Limitation Act by a mere notice from him that he was holding on a perpetual or hereditary tenure—Beni Pershad v. Dudh Nath, 27 Cal. 156 (P.C.). A tenant for life cannot prescribe against his landlord during his life-time; consequently, a transferee from a tenant for life cannot prescribe against his landlord during the life-time of such tenant—Chota Nagpur Banking Association v. Kamakhya, 7 Pat. 341, 109 I.C. 306, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 431 (434).

Where the parties are landlord and tenant, the acts, which are relied on as evidence of adverse possession must be such that they were inconsistent with the purpose to which the landlord intended to devote the land. There must be an assertion of hostile title as against the landlord and claim of title on his own account and after such assertion to the knowledge of the landlord remaining in possession for the statutory period of twelve years or more—Badri v. Narain, 27 Pat.L.T. 217, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 185. The acts of the tenant must be such that they amount to an assertion of possession adverse to the landlord, and not acts which were presumably done with his permission or consent. Thus, in the case of bil or waste lands, the cutting of grass and grazing of cattle would be ordinary acts by which possession would be asserted; but if these acts are being done by tenants on the waste lands of their landlord, they cannot be held to amount to adverse possession because these acts are such as would ordinarily be done on the waste lands of the landlord without any objection being raised and are in fact acts presumably done with his permission—Wali Ahmed v. Tota Meah, 31 Cal. 397 (405). The principle is, that acts of user committed upon land which are not inconsistent with the owner's enjoyment of the soil for the purpose for which the owner intends to use it, do not amount to adverse possession—Leigh v. Jack, (1879) L.R. 5 Ex. D. 264 (273). Where a tenant plants a grove on his holding and the landlord does not challenge his action in converting the holding into a groveland for a large number of years, a presumption may be raised that the same has been done with the consent of the landlord—Lunkush v. Rajendra, A.I.R. 1950 All. 528.

Persons who claim to be tenants of service watan lands cannot acquire any title to a permanent tenancy in the lands by setting up 12 years' adverse possession as against the watandars from whom they held the lands—Madhavrao v. Raghunath, 47 Bom. 798 (809) (P.C.), 25 Bom.L.R. 1005, 74 I.C. 362, A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 205.

Mere non-payment of rent by a tenant does not establish adverse possession on the part of the tenant. While there subsists any contract, express or implied, between the parties in and out of possession, to which possession may be referred as legal and proper, it cannot be pronounced adverse. As the possession may be referred to the contract of tenancy under which the tenant entered, mere length of enjoyment without payment of rent does not under ordinary circumstances affect the relation of the parties—Dadoba v. Krishna, 7 Bom. 34 (39), following Doe Dem Colelough v. Hulse, 3 B. & Cr. 757; Tatia v. Sadashib, 7 Bom. 40 (42); Gangabai v. Kalapa, 9 Bom. 419 (421); Jugdeo v. Baldeo, 2 Pat. 38 (52) (P.C.), A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 272, 3 P.L.T. 605, 27 C.W.N. 925, 71 I.C. 984; Paresh Narain v. Kassi Chunder, 4 Cal. 661 (663); Prasanna v. Srikantha, 40 Cal. 173 (180); Rungo Lal v. Abdul Guffoor, 4 Cal. 314 (318); Prem Sukh v. Bhupia, 2 All. 517; Madan Mohan v. Rameshwar Malia, 7 C.L.J. 615; Tiru Churna v. Sanguvien, 3 Mad. 118. But each case must be decided on its own particular features. Where rent was never paid at all for nearly 30 years and no serious attempt was ever made to recover rent, and over and above this there is the denial on oath by the defendant that he ever intended to pay rent or regarded himself as lessee, the defendant's possession must be treated as adverse—Umar Baksh v. Baldeo Singh, 97 P.R. 1915, 32 I.C. 35. Possession under a claim of right adverse against the landlord coupled with non-payment of rent for over 40 years of possession is adverse possession—Munnalal v. Kashibai, 73 I.A. 223, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 917, 1946 A.L.J. 472, 51 C.W.N. 175, 1947 N.L.J. 106, A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 15, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 453 (P.C.), I.L.R. (1947) Kar. (P.C.) 78.

If a tenant (other than a tenant for a fixed term) instead of paying rent to the landord pays it to a third party who claims against the landlord, the possession of the third party will be adverse to the landlord, provided he has knowledge of the facts—Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (164); Gossain Mahendra v. Rajani Kant, 1 C.W.N. 246 (247); Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (57). See also Note 621A under heading "Adverse possession of limited interest," infra.

Adverse possession by third party against landlord:—"The possession of a trespasser does not become adverse to the lessor, until the latter acquires a right to the khas possession of the demised premises. To hold that 12 years' possession by a trespasser of the whole or part of the demised premises would bar the right of the lessor, although the lessee does not renounce his character as such and the lease is still subsisting, is to violate the maxim that 'prescription does not run against a person who is unable to act.' The general principle of the law is to bar a person who has a right to enter if he does not exercise that right in a certain time, not to bar those who cannot exercise that right"—U. N. Mitra's Law of Limitation, 3rd Edn., p. 145. Therefore possession taken by a trespasser during the currency of an ijara lease does not become adverse to the Zemindar (lessor) until the latter is entitled to possession, i.e., until upon the expiration of the lease, and a suit for possession may be brought within 12 years from the date of the termination of the lease. The principle is, that possession which is adverse to the ijardar does not become adverse to the Zemindar until he is entitled to possession—Sharat Shundari v. Bhoba Pershad, 13 Cal. 101 (103); Krishna Govind v. Hari Churn, 9 Cal. 367 (370); Sheo Sahye v. Luchmessur, 10 Cal. 577 (580); Kishwar v. Kali, 10 C.W.N. 343; Bissesuri v. Baroda, 10 Cal. 1076 (1079); Thamman v. Maharaja of Vizianagram, 29 All. 593 (595); Gunga Kumar v. Asutosh, 23 Cal. 863 (866). But during the lease the Zemindar may bring a suit under sec. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, for a declaration of his title as against the trespasser—Bissesuri v. Baroda, 10 Cal. 1076 (1078). The Calcutta High Court has laid down in another case that in a case of a patni or other permanent tenure, if the Zemindar finds that the patnidar or other permanent tenant has allowed a trespasser to hold adverse possession of any land included in the permanent tenure for more than twelve years, such adverse possession would be adverse to the Zemindar also; and if the patnidar then relinquishes the patni in favour of the Zemindar, the Zemindar's suit to recover possession from the trespasser would be barred, because time ran not from the date of relinquishment but from the date of the trespasser's possession—Gobindo v. Surjakant, 26 Cal. 460 (465). In other words, the Calcutta High Court has laid down in this case that possession taken by a trespasser during the term of the lease becomes adverse to the zamindar also. The same view has also been taken in Prosonnomoyi v. Kali Das, 9 C.L.R. 347. These rulings are in conflict with the other rulings of the Calcutta High Court (9 Cal. 367, 10 Cal. 577, 13 Cal. 101, 23 Cal. 863) cited above. Where a non-transferable holding is transferred in its entirety, it amounts to an abandonment by the tenant of the holding. The landlord is entitled to exercise his right of re-entry on the date of transfer. The possession of the transferee is adverse from its very inception and time runs against the landlord from the date of the transfer and if the adverse possessor remains in possession for over twelve years, the title of the tenant is completely extinguished. The landlord's right to recover the same is also similarly extinguished if he does not enforce his right to re-enter or recover within the period of limitation—Bholanath v. Shyamsundra, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 235.

613A. Encroachment by tenant:—As regards encroachment by tenant on the lands of his landlord, see Note 597 under Article 142.

If a tenant during his tenancy encroaches upon the land of a third person and if it is proved that he encroached upon that land adversely to his landlord also, then adverse possession of the land for 12 years will give the tenant a title by limitation. But if the tenant encroaches upon the land of a third person, and holds it with his own tenure, as part of his tenure (i.e., not adversely to his landlord, but expressly or impliedly with the acquiescence of the landlord), he is considered to have made the encroachment, not for his own benefit but for that of his landlord; and if he has acquired a title against the third person by an adverse possession, he has acquired it for his landlord and not for himself, so that upon the termination of the tenancy, he must give it up to his landlord—Nuddyar Chand v. Meajan, 10 Cal. 820 (821). In other words, the tenant 'steals for his landlord.'

614. Adverse possession by mortgagee:—The possession by the mortgagee of the mortgaged property is not prima facie adverse to the mortgagor; even the fact that the mortgagee is in possession after the mortgage debt is paid off, does not make such possession adverse to the mortgagor—Harasit v. Jaladhar, 56 Cal. 1130, 33 C.W.N. 963 (965), A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 15, 121 I.C. 407. The mortgagee's possession remains that of a mortgagee until some adverse title is set up by him. Whether the mortgage is valid or not the position of the mortgagee is that of a mortgagee and nothing more unless some adverse title is set up by him—Baijnath v. Muneshwar, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 63, 160 I.C. 1066. The mere assertion of the adverse title by a mortgagee in possession does not make his possession adverse to the mortgagor or enable him (mortgagee) to abbreviate the period of 60 years which the law allows to a mortgagor for redemption—Ali Muhammad v. Lalta Baksh, 1 All. 655 (658); Massad v. Collector, 10 Mad. 189 (191); Bhagwant v. Kondi, 14 Bom. 279; Pandu v. Anpurna, 21 Bom. 793 (796); Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (164); his possession can become adverse only after the expiry of the term of the mortgage—Matadin v. Ahmad Ali, 34 All. 213 (233) (P.C.). This is in accordance with the principle laid down in Bejoy Chandra v. Kally Prosonno, 4 Cal. 327 (329) that possession does not become adverse to the true owner until he is entitled to immediate possession. The Privy Council has laid down that as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee neither exclusive possession by the mortgagee for any length of time short of the statutory period of 60 years, nor any acquiescence by the mortgagor not amounting to a release of the equity of redemption, will be a bar or defence to a suit for redemption if the mortgagor is otherwise entitled to redeem—Khiarajmal v. Daim, 32 Cal. 296 (P.C.); Mahendra v. Chandrapal, 24 O.C. 155, 63 I.C. 284 (285); Jiwan Singh v. Ghasita, 27 P.L.R. 402, 95 I.C. 9, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 549; Dinanath v. Rama Rai, 6 Pat. 102, 97 I.C. 348, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 512; Achche Mirza v. Ahmad, 1 Luck. 529, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 594, 97 I.C. 922. A person who lawfully comes into possession as mortgagee cannot, by setting up during the continuance of such relation any title adverse to that of the mortgagor inconsistent with the real relation between them, and that however notoriously and to the knowledge of the other party, acquire by the operation of the law of adverse possession a title as owner or any other title inconsistent with that under which he was let into possession—Bagha Singh v. Ram Narain, 47 All. 73, 22 A.L.J. 905, A.I.R. 1925 All. 133, 80 I.C. 935.

Where a mortgagee pays only a part of the consideration and is in possession of the whole of the mortgaged property, he cannot by the mere assertion of a larger interest than what was validly passed to him under the mortgage, acquire a title by 12 years' possession. The mortgage is valid to the extent of the amount actually advanced, and the mortgagee's possession of the property is not adverse to the mortgagor. The latter can redeem it within sixty years under Article 148—Rajai Tirumal v. Pandla Muthial, 35 Mad. 114 (119).

When a mortgagee in possession under a usufructuary mortgage holds over after the time limited in the mortgage-deed for surrender of the property, his possession does not, by that fact alone, become adverse to the mortgagor, who still has a period of sixty years within which to sue for recovery of possession—Pokhpal v. Bishan, 20 All. 115 (117). But a usufructuary mortgagee remaining in possession after satisfaction of the mortgage by redemption is a trespasser, and if he continues in such possession for the statutory period, the right of the mortgagor to recover possession becomes barred —Ram Kuer v. Govind Ram, 48 All. 145, 92 I.C. 414, A.I.R. 1926 All. 62.

A mortgagee can set up adverse possession if his possession at its inception was that of a trespasser—Jiwa Khan v. Lakshmi Chand, 232 P.L.R. 1911, 11 I.C. 429. Thus, a mortgagee who obtains possession of the mortgaged property where the mortgage deed does not confer on him a right to possession of the property is a trespasser, and his possession is adverse to the mortgagor—Jowahar v. Amarchand, 27 P.L.R. 235, A.I.R. 1926 Jour. 125, 93 I.C. 934. Where a person obtains possession under an invalid mortgage and there is nothing to show that at any time he has asserted possession under any claim of absolute right, he acquires on the lapse of 12 years a prescriptive right to the limited interest by way of mortgage—Purusottam v. Desouza, A.I.R. 1950 Orissa 213; Jamadar v. Amir Hassan, A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 213. A mortgage of lands under a Shortriem grant burdened with service is void from the inception and a mortgagee remaining in possession for more than 12 years acquires by adverse possession a prescriptive right under the mortgage—Adinarayana v. Srirangachariar, 1940 M.W.N. 404. Where in the case of an inalienable property the equity of redemption is sold to the usufructuary mortgagee both mortgage and sale are invalid. But if the same is not questioned and the mortgagee purchaser is allowed to remain in possession for more than 12 years, he acquires title by adverse possession—Markandra v. Naidu, 26 Pat. 717, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 197. Where a mortgagee obtained an unregistered sale of the equity of redemption (which was invalid under sec. 54, T. P. Act) and thereafter held possession of the property for more than 12 years, held that the unregistered sale deed, though inadmissible to prove the passing of the title of the vendor, was admissible for the purpose of determining the nature of the possession taken by the vendee (mortgagee). The deed of sale did not create any title in favour of the mortgagee, leaving him in the position of a trespasser, and as his possession extended for over a period of 12 years, he became full owner of the land—Qadar Baksh v. Mangha Mal, 4 Lah. 249 (251), 73 I.C. 889, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 495; Mahendra v. Chandrapal, 24 O.C. 155, 63 I.C. 284 (285); Sheo Nath v. Tulsipat, 12 O.L.J. 139, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 385, 87 I.C. 188. So also, where a mortgagor surrendered his equity of redemption to the mortgagee, but there was no registered deed, the possession of the mortgagee thereafter for more than 12 years perfected his title to the property—Bashir Hussein v. Chandrapal, 25 O.C. 83, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 133, 68 I.C. 223. Where a mortgagee, in spite of the foreclosure proceedings under Reg. XVII of 1806 being defective, enters into possession, he holds as a trespasser, and if he so holds for 12 years, the mortgagor's right of redemption is barred—Luchi v. Jaganath, 26 A.L.J. 149, A.I.R. 1928 All. 197 (198). Where a mortgage of a certain property was executed by persons other than the real owner, who however was aware of the mortgage and acquiesced in it, the mortgagee's possession became adverse to the real owner from the date of the mortgage, and the persons who executed the mortgage were entitled to redeem to the exclusion of the true owner—Pursottam v. Sagaji, 28 Bom. 87 (91, 92). A mortgagee remaining in possession of the mortgaged property for more than 12 years in full ownership in satisfaction of the mortgage debt, under an oral sale from the mortgagor, acquires an absolute title to the property, and the mortgagor's right to redeem is extinguished—Kandasami v. Chinnabba, 44 Mad. 253 (257) (dissenting from Ariyaputhira v. Muthukumaraswamy, 37 Mad. 423). The parties to a mortgage by conditional sale entered into an agreement whereby the mortgagor gave up all his equity of redemption in the property mortgaged. The agreement was not registered, but both parties consented to the complete transfer of the equity of redemption, and both parties acted on the agreement for nearly 40 years. On a suit being brought by the mortgagor for redemption, held that the mortgagees had been in adverse possession for more than 12 years, and the suit was barred—Khadu v. Sheo Person, 39 All. 423

(426), 17 A.L.J. 366. Although a mortgagee cannot, by a mere assertion of his own or by any unilateral act of his, convert his possession as mortgagee into possession as absolute owner, still if a mortgage deed provides that in default of payment of the mortgage amount within the stipulated period the mortgagee should take possession of the property and enjoy the same as absolute owner, and the mortgage money is not paid within the stipulated period, the possession of the mortgagee thereafter for over 12 years becomes adverse to the mortgagor, whose right to redeem is consequently barred—Usman v. Dasanna, 37 Mad. 545 (547), 23 M L.J. 360, 16 I.C. 694. If a mortgagee takes possession as mortgagee, and thereafter the equity of redemption is sold to him by the mortgagor himself, but the sale is invalid, the mortgagee cannot by merely asserting to hold as absolute owner under such purchase, change the original character of his possession as mortgagee; but if in a litigation between the parties it is decided that the mortgagee is entitled to possession not on the strength of his title as mortgagee but on the strength of his title as purchaser, his possession becomes adverse from the date of the sale—Ahmed v. Babu Devji, 53 Bom. 676, 31 Bom.L.R. 778, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 135 (139), 122 I.C. 113. Where a part of the mortgaged property was sold by the mortgagor to the mortgagee in possession, and from the consideration received the whole of the mortgage debt was paid off, but the mortgagee all the same continued in possession also of the portion of the property which had not been conveyed to him, the possession of the mortgagee as to that portion became adverse to the mortgagor—Keshab Lall v. Bhola Nath, 34 C.W.N 646, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 402, 129 I.C. 414; Ananthan v. Krishna, A.I.R. 1957 T. C. 145.

615. Adverse possession by co-mortgagor:—Where property has been mortgaged by several co-sharers and one of them redeems it, the possession of the redeeming co-sharer does not become adverse to the other co-sharers, until there is an assertion of an exclusive title and submission to the right thus set up. The principle is, that as long as a possession can be referred to a right consistent with the subsistence of an ownership in being at its commencement, so long must the possession be referred to that right rather than to a right which contradicts the ownership—Ram Chandra v. Sadashiv, 11 Bom. 422 (424); Bhaudin v. Sheikh Ismail, 11 Bom. 425 (428); Faki Abas v. Faki Nuruddin, 16 Bom. 191 (196); Chandbhai v. Hasanbhai, 46 Bom. 213 (215), A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 150, 64 I.C. 205; Moidin v. Oothumanganni, 11 Mad 416; Wajihuddin v. Ahmad, 2 Luck. 618, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 347 (350), 104 I.C. 400; Ma Khin v. Md. Ali, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 65.

Even if the co-mortgagor, after redeeming the property, remortgages it to a third party, this in itself would not amount to adverse possession as against the other co-mortgagors—Moidin v. Oothumanganni, 11 Mad. 416 (417); Ram Chandra v. Sadashiv, 11 Bom. 422. If a co-mortgagor, after redeeming the entire mortgage, gets the mutation of names in his favour on the basis of his possession, he cannot be subsequently allowed to say that merely by virtue of the said act he set up an exclusive title to himself and denied the title of his co-sharers. Unless he can prove that in the mutation proceedings he denied the title of his other co-sharers to their knowledge and remained thereafter in exclusive possession for more than twelve years, his adverse possession cannot be considered to have been made out—Wajihuddin v. Ahmad. supra.

But if the mortgagee is a usufructuary one, and the amount is satisfied out of the usufruct, one co-mortgagor cannot take possession of the entire property from the mortgagee but is entitled to recover only his individual share. If, however, he takes possession of the entire property, he is then deemed to hold the shares of the other co-mortgagors adversely to them—Gobardhan v. Sujan, 16 All. 254 (256); Inayat Hussein v. Ali Husein, 20 All. 182 (184). But if the usufructuary mortgage is redeemed by one co-mortgagor by paying the money out of his own pocket, and is not redeemed out of the usufruct, the redeeming co-mortgagor can retain possession of the property as a lien or until he is paid the shares of the money payable by the other co-sharers; and such possession is not adverse to them—Ramchandra v. Sadashiv, 11 Bom. 422 (424).

616. Adverse possession by third party against mortgagee or mortgagor:—Possession of mortgaged property obtained by a third party by ouster of the mortgagee in possession is not necessarily adverse to the mortgagor also, since the latter is not entitled to immediate possession during the existence of the mortgage; the possession can become adverse against the mortgagor only when he has become entitled to possession after satisfaction of the mortgage—Muhammad Husain v. Mutti Chand, 27 All. 395 (396); Chinto v. Janki, 18 Bom. 51 (58); Ismdar Khan v. Ahmad Hussain, 30 All. 119 (122); Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (164); Shambhu v. Nama, 35 Bom. 438 (442); Tarabai v. Dattaram, 49 Bom. 539, A.I R. 1925 Bom. 465, 87 I.C. 765; Khyaliram v. Onkarlal, A.I.R. 1950 M.B. 41. In such a case, a suit for possession by the mortgagor or those claiming under him will not be barred, although one by the mortgagee may be—Chinto v. Janki, 18 Bom. 51 (56). Nor does the right of redemption by the mortgagor is affected in such a case—Kunda v. Rangi, A.I.R. 1950 Pepsu 7. The mortgagor, having once put the mortgagee in possession, ordinarily has no right to possession himself until the mortgage is paid off. The mere fact of the mortgagee's letting the property go out of his possession cannot give the mortgagor such a right before payment. And the party in possession, though he may be a trespasser, would ordinarily be able to defend an action of ejectment at the suit of the mortgagor by setting up jus tertii—Chinto v. Janki, 18 Bom. 51 (58). See also, Kunwar Sen, v. Darbari, 38 All. 411 (415). If the true owner (mortgagor) has no right to immediate possession, it is practically immaterical to him who is in possession. Having no right to possession himself, he cannot eject the person in possession—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (51). If the trespasser pleads adverse possession both against the mortgagor and the mortgagee, the burden lies upon him to shew not only that his possession was adverse to the mortgagor—Chinto v. Janki, 18 Bom. 51 (54), but also that the mortgagor had notice that the trespasser was holding in denial of the mortgagor's right—Periya v. Shanmugasundaram, 38 Mad. 903 (915) (F.B.). Prima facie, the possession by the trespasser by ouster of the mortgagee in possession is not full proprietary possession but is possession of a limited nature which would have the effect ordinarily of extinguishing the limited interest of the mortgagee, and vesting it in the trespasser. But there may be cases where the adverse possession against the mortgagee would also be adverse possession against the mortgagor, as for instance, where the mortgagor is entitled to immediate possession or where the possession of the trespasser is coupled with a denial of the title of the mortgagor also—Ismdar Khan v. Ahmed Hussain, 30 All. 119 (121); Periya Aiya v. Shanmugasundaram, 38 Mad. 903 (913) (F.B.). See also, Khyaliram v. Onkarlal, A.I.R. 1950 M.B. 41. In such a case, a suit for redemption brought by the mortgagor or his heirs would not fall under Article 148, but would be governed by Article 144, and would fail if the person in possession succeeded in proving that his possession was adverse to the mortgagor for more than 12 years prior to the suit—Ram Piari v. Budh Sen, 43 All. 164 (168); Jai Gobind v. Abhairaj, 26 O.C. 308, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 40, 77 I.C. 125. Thus the plaintiff mortgaged his house with possession for a term which would expire in 1917. The mortgagee was dispossessed by the defendants in 1898. In 1908 they made certain additions to the building and when the plaintiff remonstrated with them they denied the plaintiff's title to the equity of redemption. The plaintiff then brought his suit for a declaration of his title. Held that the possession of the trespasser was not adverse to the plaintiff from 1898 to 1908, but it became adverse in 1908 when the plaintiff's title was repudiated—Peria Aiya

Ambalam v. Shunmuga Sundaram, 38 Mad. 903 (F.B.). The mere fact that the mortgagees have been paying surplus proceeds to a person who was once the owner of part of the equity of redemption should not be construed as taking away from the purchasers of the equity of redemption the right to redeem inherent in them—Pydivadu v. Suryanarayanaraju, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 384. As long as the mortgagee is in possession, he and all claiming under him represent the mortgagor's possession. If the mortgagee in possession is dispossessed by a third party on grounds affecting only his right (e.g., his right as heir to represent the original mortgagee or his right to possession in spite of a third party's lien on the property), then the dispossession of the mortgagee obviously does not imperil or call in question any right of the mortgagor, and the mortgagor is not concerned or entitled to insist on being immediately restored to possession, and the possession taken is not adverse to him and cannot cause time to run against him. But if there is an unequivocal ouster of the mortgagee by the third party preventing the possession of the mortgagor from continuing altogether by leaving no room for doubt that the person taking possession does not profess to represent the mortgagor but to hold in spite of him, then the mortgagor has a right to insist on immediate possession, because in such a case the mortgagor is as effectually and unmistakably displaced as if there had been no mortgage at all. When an ouster takes place in that manner, the mortgagor knows that no one is in possession who can represent or continue his possession or who is entitled preferentially to possession, and therefore he becomes entitled (and it is necessary and his duty) to claim possession immediately; if he does not protect his right, his equity of redemption will be barred—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (68, 69). When the person taking possession of the mortgaged property shows by his acts or by his open declaration avows that he does not pretend to represent either the mortgagee or the mortgagor, but is exercising a right claimed entirely on his own account, the disaster affects not the mortgagee's interest alone, but the mortgagor's and the mortgagor, having no one in his place professing to hold for him, is entitled to seek recovery and is under the necessity of taking action as if he had been personally ousted—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (58). See also Puttappa v. Timmaji, 14 Bom. 176 (179); Ammu v. Ramakrishna, 2 Mad. 226; and Cholmondely v. Clinton, (1820) 2 J. & W. 1 (at pp. 186, 187). In this English case, in which the owner of the equity of redemption had full notice of the claim of the trespasser, Lord Chancellor Eldon observed: "I say, without entangling myself with the difficulties about seisin and intrusion, I am of opinion that the adverse possession of an equity of redemption for 20 years is a bar to any other person claiming that equity of redemption, and it is an adverse possession which produces the same effect as those things you call abatement, intrusion and disseisin which belong to legal estates. It is an adverse possession which has the same effect, and for the peace of families and for the peace of the world, I think, ought to have the same effect, and therefore without going through more of the cases, I submit it to you Lordships that this bill cannot be maintained."

So also, in the case of a simple mortgage, adverse possession by a stranger against the mortgagor (taken after the mortgage) does not become adverse to the mortgagee until the mortgagee is entitled to possession; the principle is that adverse possession affects the interest only of the person who is entitled to immediate possession, and since the mortgagee under a simple mortgage is not entitled to immediate possession, his title is not affected by any adverse possession against the mortgagor. The interest of the mortgagor, that is, his equity of redemption, is extinguished, but the right of the mortgagee to enforce his charge upon the mortgaged property remains unaffected—Priya Sakhi v. Manbodh, 44 Cal. 425 (433); Kali Prosonno v. Tara Prasanna, 23 C.W.N. 815, 50 I.C. 304; Nandan v. Jumman, 34 All. 640 (645); Vyapuri v. Sonamma, 39 Mad. 811 (F.B.), 29 M.L.J. 645 (overruling Ramaswami v. Poona Padayachi, 36 Mad. 97); Parthasarathi v. Lakshmana, 35 Mad. 231, 21 M.L.J. 467; Raj Nath v.

Narain Das, 36 All. 567; Ludbrook v. Ludbrook, [1901] 2 K.B. 96. Where the defendant has been in possession adversely to the mortgagor for more than 12 years, a suit by the mortgagee for sale of the mortgaged properties is governed by Art. 132, and not by Art. 144, in as much as it is not a suit for possession of immoveable property; and the suit is not barred if it is brought within 12 years from the date on which the money becomes due. The adverse possession of the defendant against the mortgagor (which began subsequent to the mortgage) does not interfere with the mortgagee's right to bring the property to sale—Raj Nath v. Narain Das, 36 All. 567 (571) (F.B.). The possession of a person claiming to hold property adversely to the mortgagor does not become adverse to the mortgagee, who has purchased the property at a sale in execution of a decree on his mortgage, until after the sale, when the ownership in and the beneficial title to the land for the first time vest in him—Aimandar v. Makhan, 33 Cal. 1015 (1019), following Pugh v. Heath, (1882) 7 App. Cas. 235; Aditya v. Dhirendra, 53 C.W.N. 899. But this principle that the dispossession of the mortgagor having commenced after the date of mortgage does not run against the mortgagee does not apply in cases where limitation is prescribed by special Articles—Gagan v. Goljan, A.I.R. 1950 Dacca 1, Mohim v. Kanai, 33 C.W.N. 1085, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 311.

If, however, the adverse possession of a trespasser begins before the execution of the simple mortgage, it will run against the mortgagor and mortgagee both—Nandan v. Jumman, 34 All. 640 (645); Parthasarathy v. Lakshmanan, 35 Mad. 231; Nallamuthu v. Betha Naicken, 23 Mad. 37 (39); Tornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q.B. 143. The term 'adverse possession' clearly implies that the person against whom adverse possession is exercised is a person who is entitled to demand possession at the moment the adverse possession begins. Where such a person has the entire interest when the adverse possession begins, he cannot, by afterwards transferring a part of the interest by mortgage, prevent the operation of prescription upon the entire interest—per Munro, J. in Parthasarathy v. Lakshmana, 35 Mad. 231, 21 M.L.J. 467. In other words, a distinction should be drawn between cases in which the adverse possession of a third party began after the mortgage and cases in which the adverse possession began before the mortgage. Adverse possession against the mortgagor does not affect the right of the mortgagee, when it commences after the mortgage; but this rule does not apply if the adverse possession had begun before the mortgage, which was effected when the mortgagor was not in possession. Therefore, if the adverse possession had begun before the excution of the mortgage, the creation of the mortgage would not stop the running of time, and the mortgagee by purchasing the mortgaged property in execution of his mortgage decree would not be entitled to recover possession of the property, if the adverse possessor had been in possession for more than 12 years—Surendra v. Barisal Loan Co., Ld., 34 C.W.N. 519 (521, 522), 50 C.L.J. 317, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 313, 126 I.C. 257. This distinction was overlooked in the cases of Ramaswami v. Poona, 36 Mad. 97 and Pratab v. Maheshwar, 12 O.C. 45, 2 I.C. 57, where it was held that adverse possession which began against a mortgagor after the execution of the simple mortgage extinguished the security of the mortgagee also. (This view proceeded from a misconception of the Privy Council decision in Karan Singh v Bakar Ali 5 All. 1). These cases are not correctly decided. The Madras case has been expressly overruled by the subsequent Full Bench case of Vyapuri v. Sonamma, 39 Mad. 811, and the Oudh case also should not be accepted as sound law.

An obstruction to a mortgagee obtaining possession (as purchaser) under his mortgage, by persons who merely claimed a lien on the property and admitted a mortgagor's title to the property does not amount to adverse possession as against the mortgagee's title as purchaser—Purmanand v. Jamnabai, 10 Bom. 49 (57).

Possession obtained by a third party, not adversely to the mortgagee but under an agreement with the mortgagee, cannot be adverse to the mortgagor. It is only when the possession commences to be in opposition to or in displacement of the mortgagor's rights and it comes to his notice or knowledge, that it becomes adverse to him—Tarubai v. Venkatrao, 27 Bom. 43 (69). The principle is that limitation does not begin to run against a plaintiff until he is under some necessity or duty to assert his title —Ibid (at p.68). Thus, where after the redemption of a usufructuary mortgage, the tenants who had been let into possession of the mortgaged land by the mortgagee continued in possession, it was held that in the absence of notice to the mortgagor that the tenants claimed to hold adversely to him, possession of such tenants subsequent to the redemption was not adverse to the mortgagor, and they should be deemed to hold under the mortgagor on the same term as they held under the mortgagee—Chinnappa v. Pazhaniappa, 2 L.W. 1132, 18 M.L.T. 492, 31 I.C. 630.

If the mortgaged property is redeemed by a third party with the knowledge and consent of the mortgagor, he gets a lien on the property which he must enforce within 12 years under Article 132; but so long as the lien exists, his possession is not adverse to the mortgagor. If he does not enforce his lien within 12 years, the lien will be extinguished, and if he still holds possession of the property, such possession is that of a person having no right and therefore adverse to the mortgagor. And if the adverse possession continues for more than 12 years, his title will become perfect, so that the mortgagor will be threafter debarred from bringing a suit for redemption—Sambhu v. Nama, 35 Bom. 438 (443). If the mortgaged property had been redeemed by the third party without the knowledge and consent of the mortgagor, the possession of the third party would have been adverse to the mortgagor from the date of redemption—Ibid (p. 411). It is well settled that adverse possession cannot affect the right of a prior mortgagee to bring the properties to sale, and adverse possession against the purchaser under that sale cannot commence prior to the date of that sale—Nagubai v. Shama Rao, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 593.

617. Adverse possession by vendor or vendee:—If the vendor remains in possession after sale, such possession is adverse to the purchaser, and if the purchaser does not bring a suit for possession within twelve years from the date of sale, he will be barred under this Article—Ananda Coomari v. Ali Jamin, 11 Cal. 229 (231); Tew v. Jones, 13 M. & W. 12.

If a sale takes place by an unregistered sale-deed, the possession of the purchaser under that deed becomes adverse to the vendor from the date of the invalid sale—Sheonath v. Tulsi Pat. 12 O.L.J. 139, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 384, 87 I.C. 188; Qudar Buksh v. Mangha Mal, 4 Lah. 249 (251), A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 495, 73 I.C. 889; Mohipal v. Sarjoo, 13 O.L.J. 326, 3 O.W.N. 100, 92 I.C. 99, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 141; Bashir Husain v. Chandrapal, 25 O.C. 83, 68 I.C. 223, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 133; Jasoda v. Janak Misra, 4 Pat. 394, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 787, 92 I.C. 1034, or where the sale is invalid on account of sale of an inalienable property—Markandra v. Naidu, 26 Pat. 717; A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 197. This principle applies even if the real owner is a minor—Chhedilal v. Gopi, A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 351.

Possession by vendor as tenant:—The plaintiff purchased some land under a deed of conditional sale which provided that the purchaser should become absolute owner if the vendor did not exercise his right of re-purchase in ten years. After the execution of the deed, the vendor, according to the terms of the sale-deed, remained in possession of the property as a tenant under the purchaser, and as such he and his representatives continued to hold over for more than twelve years after the date fixed in the sale deed. Held that the possession of the vendor after the date fixed in the sale-deed was that of a tenant holding over after the expiry of the term of the lease, and did not become hostile to the plaintiff so as to defeat the latter's claim to recover possession—Anantha v. Holeya, 19 Mad. 437 (439).

618. Adverse possession by trustee:—Where a trust is express, even though the cestui que trust chooses to put up with the acts of the trustee and takes no steps to recover trust property for more than twelve years, yet he is not barred when he does so choose to pursue and endeavour to recover it. Section 10 applies to the case. But where the relations between the trustee and the cestui que trust are not express but have arisen by implication of law only (e.g., in case of a resulting trust, upon failure of the declared trust) when if the trustee assumes an adverse attitude towards his cestui que trust, the latter must seek his remedy within the period of twelve years. But so long as the trustee occupies the position of a trustee as soon as the declared trusts have failed and there is a resulting trust in favour of the settlor (i.e., so long as he does not assume an adverse attitude) his possession is essentially that of his cestui que trust and can only be changed into adverse possession against the cestui que trust by a conscious and deliberate act. This is to say, he must repudiate all intention of holding for the resultant cestui que trust and he must assert his intention of continuing to apply the trust fund to uses which the Court has declared or which are known to him to have failed. In that event his possession becomes adverse to his legal cestui que trust, and if that person does not take steps within 12 years, he will not be able to avail himself of the provisions of section 10—Casamally v. Curimbhoy, 36 Bom. 214 (239, 243, 244). This case has however been disapproved of in Mahomed Ibrahim v. Abdul Latif, 37 Bom. 447 in which it has been held that a person claiming under a resulting trust is always barred by the 12 years' rule without reference to the question whether the trustee assumed an adverse attitude. See also Kherodemoney v. Doorgamonye, 4 Cal. 455 which lays down that where a trustee takes possession of any property under a trust which is not valid under the law, his possession is adverse to the lawful title, and if the possession of this so-called trustee is for a period of more than 12 years, the rightful owner is barred.

A trustee can not by his declaration that he has committed or is about to commit breach of trust, prejudice the rights of the beneficiaries and claim that as from the day of his declaration he began to hold adversely to the trust. In order to make time run he would have to surrender the property to the proper custodian and then enter upon it as a trespasser. It is only in such circumstances that either he or those claiming under him can justifiably say that their title had become adverse—Afzal v. Din Mahommad, I.L.R. (1946) Lah. 300, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 117. So also, expenditure for construction of the trust property by a trustee holding trust funds as well as his own funds does not go to show a breach of faith in order to make the property his own—Sajjad v. Shahid, A.I.R. 1950 All. 316.

The principle that a trustee cannot acquire title by adverse possession of the trust property applies equally to quasi or constructive trustees, the managers of religious endowments and in fact to all persons who stand in a fiduciary relation to others—Venkatanarasimha v. Gangamma, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 258.

Adverse possession by third party against trustee or cestui que trust:—Where a trustee in possession of lands has been dispossessed, and the twelve years have run after his dispossession, the cestui que trust, although entitled successively on the prior estate and estates, will be barred—Wych v. East India Co., (1734) 3 P. Wms. 308. Similarly, where a cestui que trust, who has been let into possession by the trustees, has been dispossessed and the twelve years have run after his dispossession (whereby the cetui que trust is barred), the trustees are also barred—Melling v. Leak, (1855) 16 C.B. 652. In other words, the rule that the statutes of limitation are no bar in the case of trusts is only a rule applicable between the cestui que trust on the one hand and the trustee on the other hand; and it is not a rule extending to third parties who have been in adverse possession—Hovenden v. Lord Annesley, (1806) 2 Sch. & Lef. 629; Lewin on Trusts (5th Edn.), pp. 623-625.

Adverse possession against idol:—Authough an idol is a perpetual minor for certain purposes, it is not a perpetual minor for the purpose of limitation. So, the property of an idol can be acquired by adverse possession as against the idol—Chittar Mal. v. Panchu Lal, 48 All. 348, 93 I.C. 652, A.I.R. 1926 All. 392, following Damodar v. Lakhan Das, 37 Cal. 885 (894) (P.C.); Dasami v. Param Shameshwar, 51 All. 621, 1929 A.L.J. 473, 116 I.C. 433, A.I.R. 1929 All. 315 (318); Periyanan v. Govindu, 62 M.L.J. 496, 137 I.C. 487, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 328 (333). And the mere fact that the idol remained in the house of the adverse possessor does not make any difference; because there can be adverse possession not only against the idol but over the idol itself—Dasami v. Param, supra. Adverse possession can be acquired against the property of the idol not only by a total stranger but even by the donor himself—Dasami v. Param, supra. An idol installed in a particular asthan is a juridical person capable of holding property, and getting it managed through its manager, shebait or mohant, who would represent the idol for the time being completely; and possession, if adverse against the mohant or shebait for the time being must be deemed to be adverse against the idol or the institution—Parkas Das v. Janki Ballabha, 2 Luck. 239, 95 I.C. 27, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 444, 3 O.W.N. Supp. 1; Dasami v. Param Shameshwar, 51 All. 621, A.I.R. 1929 All. 315 (318), 116 I.C. 433.

But a mohant or shebait himself cannot hold adversely to the idol because he stands in a fiduciary relation to the idol—Surendra Krishna v. Sree Sree Bhubaneshwari, 60 Cal. 54, 144 I.C. 792, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 295 (304). The Supreme Court recently expressed its perfect accord with this view—Sree Sree Iswar Sridhar v. Sushila Bala, (1954) S.C.J. 17, A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 69. See also Shyamsundar v. Raghunath, A.I.R. 1954 Orissa 78 and Md. Shah v. Ansari, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 713. Possession of a shebait is in accordance with the title of the deity—Jagannath v. Bhagaban, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa, 255. But a person who has never accepted the office of a shebait is to all intents and purposes a stranger. He can therefore claim to hold adversely against the idol—Ibid.

Adverse possession of co-shebaiti claim:—A co-shebaiti claim in respect of a family idol is barred by twelve years' adverse possession, under Art. 124 or this Article, respectively, whether the claim is regarded as one to a share in the office or as one to a share in the endowed property. Where the shebaiti of a family idol descends by inheritance like secular property, the possession of the co-heir shebait must be considered to be the possession of all, until some thing is done which amounts to an ouster. The fact that the elder brother who managed the family properties saw to the debsheba, collected the income and defrayed the proper expenses, is very far from being cogent proof of ouster—Lachhmi v. Ram Rup, I.L.R. (1944) Kar. (P.C.) 170, 1944 A.L.J. 143, (1914) 1 M.L.J. 844, 1944 O.W.N. 323, A.I.R. 1944 P.C. 24, 48 C.W.N. 304.

619. Adverse possession against successor-in-title:—The word "plaintiff" in column 3 includes a person through whom the plaintiff derives his right to sue. See sec. 2 (8). It follows that if the statute has commenced to run against a person entitled, it continues to run both against him and as against persons deriving title under him, or claiming through him. Lightwood, p. 9. On this principle, possession which has already become adverse against a preceding trustee or shebait becomes adverse against the succeeding trustee or shebait as well. Thus, if a trustee or mohant of a temple or a shrine becomes dispossessed of the trust property, and the dispossessor is in possession of the property for more than 12 years, a suit brought thereafter by a succeeding trustee or mohant for possession of the property is barred. The period of limitation runs from the date of the dispossession of the previous trustee, and the succeeding trustee does not get a fresh period of limitation from the time when he succeeds to the office as trustee—Chidambaram v. Minammal, 23 Mad. 439 (440); Lakshmidhar v. Upendra, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 92. As regards limitation and adverse possession, a succeeding stani is in the position of a person who inherits an estate so that if the period of limitation has begun to run during the life time of a person who holds the property, his successor in interest will also have such period running against him—Kotharayan v. Muthu, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 12, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 355.

619A. Possession by manager:—Where a Burmese Buddhist father at the time of his re-marriage made over certain lands to his four children by his first wife, but he continued in possession and management, held that the possession of the father was as that of a manager on behalf of his children, and not adverse to their interest—Maung Aung v. Maung San, 5 Rang. 576, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 13, 105 I.C. 598. So also where an adopted son of a Hindu widow takes muchilikas for the properties in his own name while he remains in management of the properties standing in the name of the widow and collects rents and income of the same, his possession is not adverse to that of the widow, as such possession is that of a manager—Sitamma v. Sitapatirao, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 220, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 606, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 8. But where one co-heir, who was in possession of the property with the consent of the other co-heirs and was managing it on behalf of all, alienated a portion of the property, the act of alienation was one adverse to the interests of all; and the period of limitation for a suit by the other co-heirs for recovery of possession of the property ran from the date of sale and not from the date of subsequent suit for partition—Maung Tun v. Maung Tun Aung, 5 Rang. 93, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 158, 101 I.C. 691.

620. Possession between co-owners, co-sharers, etc.:—Mere occupation or enjoyment or management of joint property by one co-sharer does not constitute adverse possession as against the other co-sharers, unless there is a disclaimer of the latter's title by open assertion of a hostile title by the former, or unless there is actual ouster or some act equivalent to ouster—Baroda v. Annada, 3 C.W.N. 774; Ujalbi v. Umakanta, 31 Cal. 970 (973); Bhairabendra v. Rajendra, 50 Cal. 487; Ayenenussa v. Sheikh Isuf, 16 C.W.N. 849; Gobinda v. Upendra, 47 Cal. 274 (278); Hasim Ali v. Afzal Khan, 40 C.L.J. 30; Faizuddin v. Raju, 21 C.L.J. 192; Nilo v. Govind, 10 Bom. 24; Dinkar v. Bhikaji, 11 Bom. 365; Gangadhar v. Parashram, 29 Bom. 300; Amrita v. Shridhar, 33 Bom. 317 (322); Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (159); Varada Pillai v. Jeevaratnammal, 43 Mad. 244 (252) (P.C.); Hashmal v. Mazhar, 10 All. 343 (346); Ahmed Razu Khan v. Ram Lal, 37 All. 203; Mubarakunnissa v. Muhammad Raja Khan, 46 All. 377 (379), A.I.R. 1924 All. 384, 79 I.C. 174; Bashir Ahmad v. Parshottam, 6 O.W.N. 536, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 337; Mahipal v. Sarjoo, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 141, 3 O.W.N. 100; Hardit Singh v. Gurmukh Singh, 64 P.R. 1918 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1918 P.C. 1, 47 I.C. 626; Chandbibi v. Hasanbhai, 46 Bom. 213 (215), A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 150, 64 I.C. 205; Velayutham v. Subbaroya, 39 Mad. 879 (882); Ma Fatima v. Momin, 7 Rang. 164; Burns v. Bryan, (1887) 12 A.C. 192; Masumali v. Custodian, E.P., Rajkot, A.I.R. 1951 Sau. 73; Thopi v. Para Ram, A.I.R. 1951 J. & K. 27 (case of unregistered gift by one co-sharer to another). See also Peeran v. Pedda, A.I.R. 1958 Andhra 48. The requirements to make possession adverse vary according to peculiar facts and relationship of parties and other like circumstances in which the adverse possession commences. The acts which prima facie are acts of dispossession may under peculiar circumstances fall short of evidencing any kind of ouster. They may be susceptible of another explanation, bear some other character or have some other object when placed in juxtaposition with some other facts and circumstances—

Dipnarain v. Pundeo, 25 Pat. 412, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 99. Many acts which would be clearly adverse and might amount to dispossession as between a stranger and a true owner of land, would, between joint owners, naturally bear a different construction—Mahmad Ali Khan v. Khaja Abdul Gunny, 9 Cal. 744 (753); Venkatachalam v. Annapurni, 55 M.L.J. 223, 109 I.C. 553, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 625; Prescott v. Nevers, (1827) 4 Mason 326. The exclusive possession of one co-sharer, even though coupled with the non-payment of profits cannot amount to a clear adverse possession unless there has been an ouster of the other co-partners to their knowledge and openly. In the absence of a clear demand and a clear refusal, the possession of one co-sharer cannot become adverse as against the other—Harkesh v. Hardevi, 49 All. 763, 102 I.C. 66, A.I.R. 1927 All. 454; Ghulam Muhammad v. Begum, 31 P.L.R. 113. In order to destroy a co-sharer's title it must not only be shown that the other co-sharer was in exclusive possession of the joint property, but that there was a denial of title and an ouster of the former co-sharer or something equivalent to it. The mere fact that one co-sharer is in exclusive possession of a joint property would not amount to a denial of title or an ouster so as to destroy his title—Ram Manohar v. Baboo Singh, A.I.R. 1937 All. 124 (125); Corea v. Appuhamy, (1912) A.C. 230 foll. See also Reddy v. Reddy, A.I.R. 1957 S. C. 314. This principle applies even more strongly where the co-sharer is in possession as representing all the co-sharers—Suraj v. Ram, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 298. No question of adverse possession arises where the possession is held under an arrangement between the co-sharers—Chhote Khan v. Mal Khan, A.I.R. 1954 S. C. 575, 1954 S.C.J. 577, (1955) 1 S.C.R. 60.

The question whether exclusive possession by a co-sharer amounts to an ouster or not, depends upon the circumstances of each case. Where the remaining co-sharers had previously been in exclusive possession of all the joint lands without, however, denial of the plaintiff's right and without any objection by him, and they leased out to a third party a part smaller than what they would get on partition, held that there was no ouster—Bibi Aimana v. Saburannessa, 32 C.W.N. 449 (451), following Nabadwip v. Bhagaban, 31 C.W.N. 496, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 462, 101 I.C. 27. The act of a lambardar in granting a lease of banjar land over which the co-sharers exercised rights does not amount to their ouster as mere dispossession does not result in an ouster—Baldeo v. Rewaram, (1950) N.L.J. 51, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 107. If one co-sharer separately occupies a portion of the common land without objection from his co-sharers and with their express or implied consent, such sole occupation is not to be regarded as amounting to exclusion or ouster of the other co-sharers from the possession of that portion, and they need not bring a suit for joint possession thereof. If the co-sharers are dissatisfied with the manner in which the plot of land is being held in possession by the first-named co-sharer, their proper remedy is to bring a suit for partition. On the other hand, if the separate occupation of a co-sharer is continued after objection from any of his co-sharers and in defiance of their claim to be in joint possession, then the co-sharers who are excluded and ousted from joint possession are entitled to bring a suit to obtain joint possession of the common property—Durga Sankar v. Kamini Kumar, 55 Cal. 653, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 535 (536), 111 I.C. 74; Ram Chandra v. Lakshmi Kanta, 47 C.L.J. 603, 111 I.C. 19, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 574.

Where a special relationship exists between the parties, such as tenants in common or members of an undivided family, the Court will presume that possession held by one is possession held on behalf of all the co-owners or members of the family, and it will lie on the possessor to prove that he held exclusive possession to the knowledge of those whose rights he seeks to affect by his possession—Muthurakkoo Thevan v. Orr, 35 Mad. 618 (621); Venkatachalam v. Annapurni, 55 M.L.J. 233; Prem v. Tej, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 252; Lakshminarasamma v. Rama, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 350, A.I.R. 1950 Mad.

680; Sobagh v. Pirthe, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 160, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 259; Abdul Kareem v. Gowlivada, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 40. See also Jadho v. Jadho, A.I.R. 1958 Andhra 19. When co-owners are in joint possession, the ouster of one co-owner has got to be proved very definitely; and the mere fact that the co-owner never enjoyed a definite benefit from the estate will not lead to the inference of ouster, if it is found that he visited the house from time to time and there was no break of social relation between the parties—Ma Bi v. Makhatoon, 7 Rang. 744, 121 I.C. 785, A I.R. 1930 Rang. 72 (73). The mere entry of a name in the mutation register is no indication of adverse possession until it is shown that it was obtained after a clear declaration to the effect that the title of the other co-sharers was denied—Bashir Ahmed v. Parshotam, 6 O.W.N. 536, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 337; Ahmad v. Mt. Mukhti, A.I.R. 1951 J. & K. 21. The entry on, and possession of, land under the common title of one co-owner will not be presumed to be adverse to the others but will ordinarily be held to be for the benefit of all the co-owners, for the reason that the possession of one co-owner is rightful possession and does not imply hostility as would be implied in case of possession by a stranger. A co-owner might however establish a plea of adverse possession if it is clearly shown that he repudiated the title of his co-owners by an overt claim to exclusive ownership for more than 12 years before suit—Jogendra v. Baladeo, 35 Cal. 961 (968, 969); Clymer v. Dawkins, (1845) 3 Howard 674; Hari Pru v. Mi Aung Kraw, 12 Bur.L.T. 129, 52 I.C. 629. The overt acts which constitute a definite and continuous assertion of an adverse right must be of an unequivocal character clearly indicating an assertion of ownership of the premises to the exclusion of the other co-tenants—Jagannath v. Chandni, 26 C.W.N. 65, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 647, 67 I.C. 31. Thus a sale of the whole property held in common by several tenants-in-common by one of them, openly and with the knowledge of the other co-tenants must be taken as repudiation of title of the others—Thingaraja v. Appavoo, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 22; Nizamuddin v. Mangal, A.I.R. 1949 All. 699. And the burden lies on the defendant to shew, not merely that he has been in sole occupation of the disputed lands, but also that there has been a disclaimer by the assertion of a hostile title and notice thereof to the owner either direct or to be inferred from notorious acts and circumstances—Jogendra v. Baladeo, 35 Cal. 961 (970); Alima v. Kutti, 14 Mad 96 (97). Much stronger evidence is required to show an adverse possession held by a tenant-in-common than by a stranger; a co-tenant will not be permitted to claim the protection of the statute of Limitation, unless it clearly appears that he has repudiated the title of his co-tenant and is holding adversely to him; it must further be established that the fact of adverse holding was brought home to the co-owner, either by information to that effect given by the tenant in common asserting the adverse right, or there must be outward acts of exclusive ownership of such a nature as to give notice to the co-tenant that an adverse possession and disseisin are intended to be asserted—Jogendra v. Baladeo, 35 Cal. 961 (969). Exclusion or ouster involves not merely the act of the person ousting but the state of mind of the person ousted. Knowledge on the part of the latter, therefore, is essential. Such knowledge may be proved directly or inferentially. On the principle of constructive notice it may also be proved by showing that the co-sharer against whom the possession was exercised had sufficient notice of facts or sufficient information which would put a reasonable person on enquiry and on receipt of which a reasonably attentive person could not but realise that he was ousted—Abdul Wahed v. Mohar Bashi, 34 C.W.N. 246 (249), A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 466. If no actual notice is given to the co-sharer of the denial of his right, the occupant must make his possession so visibly hostile and notorious and so apparently exclusive and adverse as to justify an inference of knowledge on the part of the co-owner sought to be ousted, and of laches if he fails to discover and assert his rights—Jagannath v. Chandni, memory a presumption of ouster may be made on principle analogous to that of lost grant—Maddelakrishnayya v. Maddela Udayalakshmamma, (1953) 2 M.L.J. 241, 1953 M.W.N. 473. When one of several co-sharers lets into possession a stranger who proceeds to cultivate the land for his own benefit the other co-sharers must, unless they deliberately close their eyes, know of what is going on, but if they are so regardless of their own interests they must take the consequence. So where a person who is in possession under a usufructuary mortgage granted by one of several coparceners remains in possession of the land and cultivates it for years, there can be no doubt that the requirements of continuity, publicity and extent for adverse possession are fully complied with—Palania v. Amjath, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 15, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 321, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 622 (F B.). It is not the law that a non-diligent co-sharer is bound to suffer; he will suffer only if the circumstances unequivocally tell him that he has been ousted or excluded or when he has sufficient information that will put a reasonable man on enquiry which if pursued would unmistakably show that he has been excluded or ousted—Abdul Wahed v. Mohan, supra. "A silent possession accompanied with no act which can amount to an ouster or give notice to his co-tenant that his possession is adverse ought not to be construed into an adverse possession"—per Marshall C. J. in McClung v. Ross, (1820) 5 Wheaton 116.

In the case of co-owners, the possession of one co-owner is in law the possession of the other co-owner as well, and it is not possible for one co-owner to put an end to that possession by any secret intention in his mind—Corea v. Appuhamy, [1921] A.C. 230. Nothing short of ouster or something equivalent to ouster can bring about that result—Ibid. The exclusion from the portion in dispute must be complete and total, otherwise there is no ouster—Sobhag v. Pirthe, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 160, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 259. Thus, if a person setting up ouster has agreed to maintain the member, whom he says he has ousted, from the proceeds of the estate in dispute there is no ouster. Ibid. There can be no question of ouster, if there is participation in the profits to any degree—Mohammad Baquar v. Naimunnissa Bibi, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 548 To enable one of the co-owners to acquire title by adverse possession as against the others, his possession must be of such an actual, open, notorious, exclusive and hostile character as to amount to an ouster of the other owners. The only facts that one of the co-owners has been in actual possession of a house, that he has been alone making repairs in it, and that a short time before the institution of the suit when certain portion of the house fell down, he built them afresh, do not constitute an act of adverse possession on the part of the co-owner, so as to extinguish the rights of the other co-owners—Mahadeo Prasad v. Ram Phal, 1 Luck. 62, 3 O.W.N. 186, 92 I.C. 685, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 258; Sidheswar v. Ganga Sagar, 13 O L.J. 61, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 464, 2 Luck. 172, 96 I.C. 455. The same prrinciple applies to the case of co-heirs—Bholanath v. Sarbamangala, 44 C.W.N. 221, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 93; Aziman v. Abdul, 1940 A.M.L.J. 9; Ahmad v. Mt. Mukhti, A.I.R. 1951 J. & K. 21 (case of co-heirs of a Mahomedan owner). But where the defendant has taken the property not as co-heir but as one who had a right to it under custom administering them his possession must be deemed to be adverse from the beginning—Amir v. Aziz, A.I.R. 1944 Pesh. 45. So also, as between brothers in a joint family, where no partition is proved, the mere fact that one of the brothers went to live in a neighbouring village would not make the possession of the other brothers who continued to live in the family house necessarily adverse—Jagivandas v. Bat Amba, 25 Bom. 362 (365). Where a part of the property inherited by two sisters was in the exclusive possession of one, and the rest of the joint property was in joint possession, the exclusive possession of the particular portion was not adverse to the other sister in the absence of any facts from which an adverse possession may be presumed—Barada Sundari v. Annoda Sundari, 3 C.W.N. 774 (776). Where there has been no partition, mere non-participation in the rents and profits by one co-sharer and exclusive occupation by another would not constitute adverse possession against the former in favour of the latter—Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (159); Dinkar v. Bhikaji, 11 Bom. 365 (368); Ahmadulla v. Bashir Ahmed, 94 I.C. 855, A I.R. 1926 J. 102; Md. Wasil Ali v. Naimuddin, 91 I.C. 614, A.I.R. 1926 J. 166; Prem v. Tej A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 252; Lakshminarasamma v. Rama, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 350, A.I.R. Mad. 680. But such non-participation or non-possession may, in the circumstances of any particular case, amount to an adverse possession; and among the circumstances to be taken into consideration are the relationship of the parties, their position, the mode of life in the particular community to which the parties belong, the character of the property, and other circumstances of a similar character—Ayenenussa v. Sheikh Isuf, 16 C.W.N. 849, 14 I.C. 722; Gobinda v. Upendra, 47 Cal. 274 (278), 23 C.W.N. 977, 56 I.C. 141. As between co-widows, the possession of one is not adverse to the other, especially if the latter receives a maintenance allowance from the former—Indoobunse v. Girbhirun, 12 W.R. 158.

Where certain property is inherited jointly by two persons and enjoyed as tenants-in-common, the co-ownership does not cease by the death of one of them. The legal representatives of the deceased becomes co-owner with the surviving co-owner—Lakshminarasamma v. Rama, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 350, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 680. The position of a co-owner's heir is like that of an assignee from a co-owner and does not stand on a better footing than an assignee. Such heir, therefore, in order to establish adverse possession against another co-owner must show that there was an ouster of which that co-owner had either actual or constructive notice—Dipnarain v. Pandeo, 25 Pat. 415, A I.R. 1947 Pat. 99. See also Sunder v. Phuljharia, A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 534.

The above rules apply not only among persons who are co-tenants, but extend to all who afterwards acquire undivided interests in the property, by purchase from the co-tenants. Thus, if the interest of a co-tenant is purchased by a third person, such purchaser becomes a tenant-in-common with the other co-tenants, and the possession of such co-tenants cannot, in the absence of clear proof to the contrary, be adverse to such purchaser. But if the purchaser, on going to the land to obtain possession is resisted by the other co-tenants, the possession of the co-tenants becomes adverse only from the date of such resistance—Biswanath v. Rabija, 56 Cal. 616, 33 C.W.N. 46 (49), 117 I.C. 593, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 250. A purchaser from a co-sharer under an invalid sale-deed is in the same position as a co-sharer, and if he enters into possession under the invalid sale, his possession is not adverse to the co-sharers,in the absence of anything to show that he asserted a different title from that of a co-sharer—Sheo Raj v. Ajudhiya, 4 Luck. 503, 116 I.C. 195, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 284 (285). But in case of purchase of the whole property held in common by several tenants-in-common from one of such tenants-in-common, openly and with the knowledge of other co-tenants he must be taken to have repudiated the title of the others, there and then, and possession becomes adverse from the time of his purchase. In such a case the purchaser does not become a tenant-in-common with other co-sharers—Thiagaraja v. Appavoo, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 22; Nizamuddin v. Mangal, A.I.R. 1949 All. 699.

But it is not correct to say that one co-owner can never hold adversely to the other co-owner. The question depends upon the nature of the former's possession. Thus, one of the two brothers, joint owners of certain immoveable property, executed a deed of relinquishment in favour of the other (the plaintiff). The deed was never registered, but the brother (plaintiff) in whose favour it was made remained in possession of the entire property. Held that the document (though unregistered) was admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing the nature of the plaintiff's possession from the date of the document, and that coupled with the other evidence in the case, it was sufficient to show that the plaintiff had been holding adversely to his brother —Jhamplu v. Kutramani, 39 All. 696 (698), 15 A.L.J. 761. See also 35 Cal. 961 cited ante. The possession of a co-owner is not ordinarily adverse to the other co-owners. But where a person originally entered not as a co-owner, but asserting a hostile title, and then became a co-owner and continued to assert the hostile title and exercised his possession to the exclusion of the other co-owner, his possession did not cease to be adverse—Pankaj Mohon v. Bipin Behari, 38 C.L.J. 220, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 118, 76 I.C. 511. Ordinarily, the sole possession by one tenant-in-common is not adverse to the others, but the sole possession by one tenant-in-common maintained continuously for a long period without any claim or demand by the other tenants-in-common is an evidence from which an actual ouster of the latter may be presumed—Gangadhar v. Parashram, 29 Bom. 300; Chandbhai v. Hasanbhai, 46 Bom. 213 (216), 64 I.C. 205, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 150; Muhammad Ishaq v. Nathu, 10 A.L.J. 59, 16 I.C. 342; Culley v. Deo, (1840) 11 A. & E. 1008.

Where the rights of the claimants to a certain share in property were recognised by a decree of competent Court to which all the contesting co-owners were parties and they submitted to that decree no question of adverse possession arises in a suit for partition—Isabi v. Abdulla, A.I.R. 1950 Tra-Co. 60 (F.B.).

These principles apply with suitable modification even in some impartible estates —Sobha v. Pirtha, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 160, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 259.

It cannot be assumed as a matter of law or as a matter of fact that possession of one member of a Mahomedan family is the possession of all members. But where there has been a compromise decree and admission of title of the plaintiff and acceptance of the character of permissive possession of the defendant, it is obvious that adverseness of possession is terminated and the continuance of possession after the decree is permissive—Alli v. Krishna, A.I.R. 1950 Orissa 250.

Effect of partition:—After partition, the possession of one-co-sharer cannot be taken as possession held on behalf of the others, even though the property has not been divided by metes and bounds—Deba v. Rohtagi Mal, 28 All. 479 (480). Therefore, after partition, a co-sharer remaining in possession of the share belonging to another co-sharer must be deemed to hold it adversely to the latter; and the latter cannot say that the possession by the former does not become adverse to him (the latter) until the latter has demanded and has been refused possession of his allotted share—Mansa Ram v. Behari, 6 P.R. 1912, 218 P.L.R. 1911, 12 I.C. 453 (455).

620A. Adverse possession by Hindu female:—Where a widow is in possession of her life-estate in her husband's property it is not competent to her, by mere assertion of an absolute proprietary title, in course of time to acquire such title by prescription against the reversionary heirs of her husband, who are not entitled to obtain possession till the widow's death—Anund Kaur v. Sodi Narindan, 83 P.R. 1881. But where widows, who are only entitled to maintenance, take possession of the estate and dispose of it to strangers, and the possession of the widows and the strangers covers a period of more than 12 years, a suit by the reversioners after the lapse of 12 years from the date of the widows' taking possession, would be barred, unless such possession was under an arrangement with the reversioners—Sham Koer v. Dah Koer, 29 Cal. 664 (P.C.); Kirpal Kuar v. Bachan Singh, A.I.R. 1958 S.C. 199. Where a Hindu family is joint at the time of the death of its member, his widow, entitled to maintenance only, gets possession of her husband's share and gets her name mutated, there being no presumption that mutation in the name of a Hindu widow is by way of consolation, her possession is clearly unlawful at its inception—Pirthi v. Kalpu, 1951 All.W.R. 53, A.I.R. 1952 All. 190. If a Hindu widow who has not a scrap of title to the possession of the property (e.g., a widow, during the life of her son or son's widow) takes possession of the property not in the capacity of a widow but absolutely and without any qualification, and makes a gift of the property to strangers, her possession would be a bar to the title of all persons who claim as reversioners either of her husband or of her son —Lachhan Kunwar v. Manorath, 22 Cal. 445 (449) (P.C.). Where the widow asserted that she was entitled as full heir to the separate share held by her husband; where in a written statement in a suit brought against her she had asserted that she and her co-widow were the heirs of their husband and had all along been in possession and it was only as an alternative pleading that she set up a title to possession on the footing of a right to maintenance; where in an application to the Court she made an assertion publicly that she and her co-widow were the heirs and the only heirs to the property, from which assertion mutation of it to her name followed; where the widow made an absolute gift of part of the property; and where she made such public assertion of a right to exclusive possession from 1859 to her death in 1895, the true inference was that her possession was adverse, and the reversioner's title was barred by limitation —Satgur Prasad v. Raj Kishore Lal, 42 All. 152 (157) (P.C.). Where, according to the custom of the community to which the parties belonged, the widows were excluded from inheritance, the widow's possession for more than 12 years barred the reversioner's suit for possession—Desai Ranchhoddas v. Rawal Nathubhai, 21 Bom. 110 (117). A separated Hindu died leaving two widows and a daughter-in-law, the widow of his predeceased son. Upon the death of the two widows, the daughter-in-law took possession of the property and remained in possession thereof for more than 12 years, and after her death the reversioners sued to recover possession. Held that as the widows' daughter-in-law was not entitled to the estate, her possession must be regarded as adverse to the reversioners, whose cause of action accrued upon the death of the two widows of the last male holder. The suit was therefore barred—Gajadhar v. Parbati, 33 All. 312 (314). Where the widow of a member of a joint Hindu family takes possession on the death of her husband of property which was in his possession during his lifetime, there is no presumption that the possession taken is merely that of a widow of a separated Hindu. In the absence of any evidence to show that her claim was limited to a widow's estate, she must be held to have acquired full tittle—Kali Charan v. Piari, 46 All. 769 (772), 22 A.L.J. 725, 83 I.C. 754, A.I.R. 1924 All. 740; Rikhdeo v. Sukhdeo, 49 All. 713, A.I.R. 1928 All. 45, 102 I.C. 175; Uman Shankar v. Aisha Khatun, 45 All. 729, A.I.R. 1924 All. 86, 74 I.C. 869. It is not an invariable rule that wherever a Hindu widow is found in adverse possession, she must be treated as being in adverse possession of a widow's estate only. Where it is found that a Hindu widow took possession of the property absolutely and not in lieu of maintenance or as the result of any arrangement with the heirs and successors of the last male holder at any time, she acquires full title by adverse possession—Raj Bahadur v. Kanhaiya Bakhsh, 4 O.W.N. 350, 99 I.C. 890, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 138.

Where, A, a widow who inherited the property of her husband and was entitled only to a limited interest, transferred certain property of her husband to B the widow of a predeceased coparcener of her husband in 1883, and the latter remained in possession of the property for more than 12 years after the death of A (which took place in 1843) and then B transferred the property to the defendants as though she had absolute title in it, and then died in 1886, and then the plaintiffs who were the reversionary heirs of the last male holder (and as such entitled to the property after A's death) sued to recover possession of the property in 1888, held that the suit had been barred long ago by the adverse possession of B for more than 12 years after A's death (1843). Although a widow's estate for life never constitutes a possession adverse to the reversionary heir, still since in this case B did not obtain the property as a widow but in a different capacity, her possession for more than 12 years after A's death became adverse to the reversioners (plaintiffs) entitled to come in after A's death —Mahabir v. Adhikari, 23 Cal. 942 (P.C.).

Possession taken by a Hindu widow under an arrangement with the other members of the family and in pursuance of an award, cannot be adverse to the members of the family—Radha Dulaiya v. Rashick Lal, 45 All. 1 (5), A.I.R. 1923 All. 25, 75 I.C. 14, 20 A.L.J. 814.

If a Hindu widow in possession of her husband's estate never claimed to have anything more than the limited estate of a Hindu female, she did not acquire any personal title to the property as her stridhan, but she makes it good to the estate of her deceased husband—Lajwanti v. Safa Chand, 5 Lah. 192 (198) (P.C.), 28 C.W.N. 960, 80 I.C. 788, A.I.R. 1924 P.C. 121; Umrao Singh v. Pirthi, 86 I.C. 445, A I.R. 1925 All. 369; Chakradhar v. Shabkant, 6 P.L.R. 363, 88 I.C. 767, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 460; Brindaban v. Ram Narain, A.I.R. 1925 All. 330, 85 I.C. 449; Deshrani v. Thakur Kishore Singh, 22 N.L.R. 175, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 104, 100 I.C. 446. If a widow (daughter-in-law) who was not entitled to succeed to her father-in-law's property, but was entitled only to maintenance, was allowed to remain in possession of the property in lieu of maintenance, and there was no evidence to show that she asserted any title adverse to the person entitled to inherit the property, held that the widow did not acquire the property as her stridhan, and that the only interest which the widow could have in the property was that of maintenance only. Consequently, an alienation of the property made by her was voidable after her death by the heirs of her father-in-law—Jagmohan v. Prayag Narayan, 6 P.L.T. 206, 87 I.C. 473, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 523. But if the female claims to hold the property not merely for her life, but absolutely, the property so held by her for 12 years would become her absolute property—Maluka v. Pateshar, 1 Luck. 273, 3 O.W.N. 536, 96 I.C. 672, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 371; Varada Pillai v. Jeevaratnammal, 43 Mad. 244 (252) (P.C.).

When a widow, who is entitled only to maintenance and residence, continues in possession of the property, after the death of the last male holder, to whom she is not the heir, and she holds possession simply because the reversioners have not yet come forward to take possession, her possession cannot be said to be adverse until the reversioners assert their right to possession and demand it from her. There can be no question of adverse possession prior to each assertion—Muthuswami v. Ponnayya, 51 Mad. 815, 55 M.L.J. 436, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 820 (822), 110 I.C. 613. Where on the supposed death of her husband, his widow enters on her widow's estate in the undivided share of an estate which belonged to her husband and she thereafter enjoys it for a period much exceeding the twelve years, the possession is not adverse, as possession to be adverse must be against a living person and as the widow was asserting a right adverse to one whom she regarded as dead, though in fact the husband was living—Bibhabaty v. Ramendra, 73 I.A. 246, 51 C.W.N. 98, 49 Bom.L.R. 246, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 442, A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 19, 1946 A.L.J. 441 (P.C.), I.L.R. (1947) Kar. (P.C.) 85.

621. Other cases of adverse possession:—In case of a religious endowment, if adverse possession is proved, time will run not only against the shebait, but against the idol also, and time will run against the idol even in a case where no shebait has been appointed—Administrator-General v. Balkissen, 51 Cal. 953 (959), A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 140, 84 I.C. 91.

Under a mortgage of 1869 the mortgagee was entitled to immediate possession, but by arrangements between the parties, the mortgagor was allowed to remain in possession, the right of the mortgagee to claim possession being kept alive. The property was sold by the mortgagor in the same year. A suit for pre-emption was brought in respect of such sale and decreed, and the pre-emptor thereafter sold the property to the defendant in 1871. The mortgagee sued the defendant for possession in 1883. The defendant pleaded adverse possession for more than twelve years. Held that the possession of a person who purchases property by asserting a right of pre-emption is not analogous to that of an auction-purchaser in execution of a decree. He merely takes the place of the original purchaser, and enters into the same contract of sale with the vendor (mortgagor) that the purchaser was making. There is privity between him and the vendor, and he comes in under the vendor, and his holding must be taken to be in acknowledgment of all obligations created by his vendor. Neither the possession of the pre-emptor nor that of the purchaser from him in 1871 is adverse to the mortgagee—Durga Prasad v. Sambhu Nath, 8 All. 86 (90, 91).

Where lands granted to one member of a joint Hindu family were held by the joint family adversely to the individual interest of the grantee and his son, for more than 12 years, the rights of the grantee and his son were barred—Vasudeva v. Maguni, 24 Mad. 387 (396) (P.C.).

A wife, during the prolonged absence of her husband, who was erroneously supposed to be dead, made a mourasi grant of a portion of her husband's estate. The grantee remained in possession for upwards of 12 years. It was held that the lease being void, the position of the grantee was not that of a lessee but that of a trespasser, and that his possession for more than 12 years had perfected his title—Bejoy Chunder v. Kally Prosonna, 4 Cal. 327 (330). But see Bibhabaty v. Ramendra, 73 I A. 246, 51 C.W.N. 98, 49 Bom.L.R. 246, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 442, A.I.R. 1947 P.C. 19, 1946 A.L.J. 441 (P.C.), I.L.R. (1947) Kar. (P.C.) 85 where it has been held that the possession of the widow in such circumstances is not adverse to the husband.

Where the property of a deceased Hindu vests in an executor, in trust for the beneficiaries under the will, and the bequest fails, such executor does not under the Indian law hold the property in trust for the heir of the deceased. A Hindu executor takes no estate (unlike an English executor) but only a power of management, and upon the purpose for which the executor is to hold the property failing, the property undisposed of vests in the heir at once. Consequently, the possession by the executor becomes adverse to the heir from the date of the testator's death—Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal. 455 (468).

Where a person has been is possession of a property for over 12 years as legatee with an absolute estate under a will by a testator who had no disposing power over the property, and no objection has been made by the persons entitled to the property, the person in possession acquires an absolute title to the property—Ghanshamdoss v. Saraswathibai, 21 L.W. 415, 87 I.C. 621, A.I R. 1925 Mad. 861.

Possession of plaintiff's land taken by an adjoining landowner under a mistake on the part of both parties as to the true boundary is adverse to the plaintiff—Ma Shan v. Somasundaram, 1 Rang. 492, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 111, 83 I.C. 132.

An indefeasible title by adverse possession of diluvated lands reforming on their old site can be acquired by possession for more than statutory period after reformation. In such cases the doctrine that diluvated lands, reforming on their site remain the property of their original owner does not apply—Ram Kirpal v. Janki, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 420.

Adverse possession of fishery rights can be established in a public navigable river, if exclusive acts of possession are shown for the statutory period—Debendra Lal v. Secretary of State, 31 C.W.N. 473, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 403, 103 I.C. 13: affirmed, Secre- tary of State v. Debendra Lal, 61 Cal. 262 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 285, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 23; Narayan v. Laxmibai, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 382, I.L.R. (1951) Nag. 199, 1951 N.L.J. 338.

Assertion of right of ownership by transfer and possession over sixty years of land belonging to a Cantonment Board amounts to adverse possession against Government and matures into full ownership—Farid v. U. P. Government, A.I.R. 1950 All. 43. See also Keshav v. Municipal Commissioner, A.I.R. 1951 M.B. 114 where it has been held that although in theory the State is the over-lord in respect of land, a person can have rights of ownership.

621A. Adverse possession of a limited interest:—Possession of a limited interest in immoveable property may be adverse for the purpose of barring a suit for recovery of that interest, in the same way as adverse possession of a complete interest in the property operates to bar a suit for the whole property; consequently, such possession of a limited interest may be just as much adverse for the purpose of barring a suit for the determination of that limited interest, as adverse possession of a complete interest in the property operates to bar a suit for the whole property. Such adverse possession of a limited interest is good only to the extent of that interest, though it is a good plea to a suit for ejectment—Ishan v. Ramranjan, 2 C.L.J. 125; Gopal Krishna v. Lakhiram, 16 C.W.N. 634 (636), 14 I.C. 212; Icharam v. Nilmoney, 35 Cal. 470 (476); Madhava v. Narayana, 9 Mad. 244 (247); Thakore Fatesingji v. Bamanji, 27 Bom. 515 (536); Swarnomoyi v. Sourindra, 42 C.L.J. 14, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1189, 89 I.C. 747; Sankaran v. Periasami, 13 Mad. 467 (471); Bhairabendra v. Rajendra, 50 Cal. 487 (490), A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 45, 74 I.C. 193; Budesab v. Hanmanta, 21 Bom. 509; Subodh Gopal Bose v. Khairunnessa, 97 C.L.J. 171, 60 C.W.N. 361. Where a person is in possession by cultivating a plot of land in an agricultural area and there is nothing to show that he ever claimed a proprietory title in the plot, the presumption is that he is prescribing for a tenancy right and not for a proprietory title although there is no contract of tenancy between him and the owner and although no rent is settled—Ram Piari v. Nawab, A.I.R. 1950 All. 496. Where in an ejectment suit by an inamdar, it was shown that the defendants for more than 12 years before suit openly asserted their claim to hold as mirasi tenants, it was held that the defendants had acquired a title to the limited interest claimed by them, and could not be ejected—Trimbak v. Gulam Jilani, 34 Bom. 329; Narhar v. Ganpati, 31 Bom.L.R. 218, 117 I.C. 438, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 174 (185). Where in respect of inam land persons in occupation assert their right to the lands themselves in a course of dealings otherwise sufficient to fulfil the requirements of a prescriptive title, there is nothing to prevent the Court from upholding such a title (Kudiwaram interest) as such a right can be acquired by adverse possession —Bhagavathi v. Krishna, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 609, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 788. But the tenant will acquire only the limited interest claimed by him, but not a proprietary interest. If a trespasser while in possession claims a right less than the absolute ownership in the land, he will acquire by prescription only the inferior title set up by him. The title acquired will be determined by the animus possidendi of the trespasser—Muthurakhoo v. Orr, 35 Mad. 618 (621). Thus, if a tenant encroaches upon the lands of his landlord outside his tenancy, and claims to hold these lands as part of his tenancy (i.e., he professes to hold these lands in his character as a tenant), and thus he holds possession of those lands for more than 12 years, the landlord's right to eject the tenant and recover khas possession is lost; but his proprietary possession (i.e., possession by receipt of rent) is not lost, because the possession of the tenant, so far as the latter right is concerned, has not been adverse—Ishan v. Ramranjan, supra; Gopal v. Lakhiram, supra; Muthurakkoo v. Orr, supra. So also, where a landlord seeks to recover possession of land in his tenant's occupancy, and the tenant on the allegation of a perpetual tenancy successfully resists the landlord's attempt to dispossess him for the statutory period, the tenant can afterwards successfully plead the law of limitation in bar of a subsequent suit in ejectment by the landlord—Budesab v. Hanmanta, 21 Bom. 509 (515). In other words, the tenant, by asserting a claim to hold as a permanent tenant, will acquire a permanent tenancy. The landlord's possessory right is extinguished, but his proprietary interest (i.e., right to receive rent) remains intact. See also Thakore Fatesingji v. Bomanji, 27 Bom. 515 (546). A contrary view has been taken by the Patna High Court in Sahabu v. Hari, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 43 (case of possession under invalid lease). But in a later case it has been held that that such a claim is adverse to the landlord's claim for khas possession—Maharaj v. Budhu, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 46. So again, where a tenant transferred a non-transferable occupancy holding and the transferee was in possession for more than 12 years but he never repudiated the title of the landlord but claimed to hold possession as tenant, held that a suit for recovery of actual possession by ejectment of the transferee (defendant) was barred by limitation. Although the defendant did not set up an absolute title for the statutory period and had not consequently acquired by adverse possession such absolute title, he has yet acquired by prescription the limited interest which he has set up, namely, the interest of a tenant. Consequently it was too late for the plaintiff-landlord to seek to eject the defendant as a trespasser; his title to recover actual possession was barred, although his title to recover rent was not extinguished—Icharam v. Nilmoney, 35 Cal. 470 (477); Bhairabendra v. Rajendra, 50 Cal. 487 (490), A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 45, 74 I.C. 193; Bholanath v. Shyamsundra, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 235.

In 21 Bom. 509 and 27 Bom. 513 cited above, the tenant by pleading a permanent tenancy had successfully resisted the landlord's previous suit for possession. But where the landlord at first filed a suit to recover possession from the tenant (who was a yearly tenant), and the tenant unsuccessfully pleaded permanent tenancy, so that the landlord obtained a decree for possession, but the tenant continued in possession and paid rent, and 20 years afterwards the landlord again brought a suit in ejectment and the tenant again pleaded permanent tenancy, held that the plea could not prevail. Here there had been no successful resistance by the tenant of the landlord's claim to recover possession (in the first suit); the landlord had succeeded and though the tenant had remained in possession, it is not shown that he remained in possession in assertion of a hostile title. Consequently the landlord would get a decree for possession—Bhailal v. Kalansang, 52 Bom. 55, 107 I.C. 52, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 667 (668). See also Md. Mumtaz Ali v. Mohan, 45 All. 419 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 118, 28 C.W.N. 840, 74 I.C. 476; Madhab Rao v. Raghunath, 47 Bom. 798 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 205, 74 I.C. 362; Namapillai v. Ramanathan, 47 Mad. 337 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1924 P.C. 65, 82 I.C. 226, 28 C.W.N. 809.

A tenant is not precluded by an admission of tenancy from showing that the nature of the tenancy asserted by him to the knowledge of the landlord has been adverse to the right to evict either at will or on notice given—Thakore Fatesingji v. Mamanji, 27 Bom. 515 (539); Ram Rachhaya v. Kamakhya Narain, 4 Pat. 139, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 216, 84 I.C. 586.

The mere fact that the tenant made a yearly payment of rent is not fatal to the plea of adverse possession set up by the tenant; because the tenant is not denying the landlord's right to receive rent but merely denies the landlord's right to eject him, and claims to be a permanent tenant—Sankaran v. Periasami, 13 Mad. 467 (471); Thakore Fatesinji v. Bamanji, 27 Bom. 515 (536, 540); Charan Mahton v. Kamakhya Narain, 6 P.L.T. 98, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 357, 86 I.C. 387.

So also, the landlord's claim for enhanced rent may be barred, if the tenant denies the landlord's right to claim enhanced rent and continues to pay the original rent, for more than 12 years. In such a case, the tenant will be entitled to continue to hold the land at the original rate of rent—Gopalrao v. Mahadevrao, 21 Bom. 394 (396).

621B. Adverse possession of equity of redemption:—Although the equity of redemption in the case of a possessory mortgage is an intangible thing, yet it is an estate in land and is fully capable of possession. A claim for possession of the equity of redemption is an interest in immoveable property within the meaning of Art. 144, Limitation Act—Udhaibhan Singh v. Sheoamber Sahai, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 168, 1936 O.W.N. 243, 160 I.C. 290. Thus where the manager of a joint Hindu family executes an usufructuary mortgage providing payment of certain sum every year to the mortgagor and by partition thereafter amongst the members of the said family the mortgaged property falls to the share of another member, but the mortgagee in spite of the partition goes on paying the sum mentioned in the mortgage deed to the manager and after his death to his son, suit by the member to whom the property has been allotted by partition for redemption is barred as the equity of redemption has become barred by adverse possession as a result of the manager's and after his death his son's receiving rent from the very beginning of the mortgage—Gurunath v. Suryakant, I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 453, 42 Bom.L.R. 399, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 225.

621C. Effect of symbolical possession:—If the purchaser of a property in execution of a decree finds that the property is in the possession of the judgment-debtor or some other person, he may either make an application for delivery of possession under O 21 rr 95 and 96, or he may bring a suit for possession. The application falls under Art. 180, and the suit is governed by Art. 137 or 138. If the purchaser makes an application and obtains only symbolical, but fails to obtain actual possession by reason of the judgment-debtor or other persons continuing in possession of the property, he may bring a regular suit for possession and such suit falls under Art. 144—Bireswar v. Sadhiram, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 50. As to the starting point of limitation in such suits, the question has to be considered from two points of view:—(1) Whether the property is or is not capable of actual possession; and (2) whether the defendant was a party to the proceedings in which symbolical possession was delivered to the plaintiff.

(1) If the property is not capable of actual possession (e.g., if it is in the occupation of tenants, or other persons entitled to possession, or is an undivided share in joint property), so that the only possible method in which the auction-purchaser can take possession is symbolical possession, such symbolical possession is equivalent to actual possession and gives to the auction-purchaser a new starting point of limitation, and time runs from the date of delivery of symbolical possession, and not from the date of the sale or the date of confirmation of the sale—Mahadev v. Jamu, 36 Bom. 373 (F.B.); Juggobundhu v. Ram Chandra, 5 Cal. 584 (F.B.); Rajendra v. Bhugwan, 39 All. 460 (463); Gulab v. Ataulla, 5 O.W.N. 372 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 251, 110 I.C. 70; Sita Ram v. Ramsundar, 50 All. 813, A.I.R. 1928 All. 412 (413), 26 A.L.J. 573 (undivided share in joint property); Ram Chand v. Gopal Singh, 31 P.L.R. 519, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 914. But if the property is capable of delivery of actual possession (e.g., if the property is in the possession of the judgment-debtor himself, so that he can be evicted from the property), but the auction-purchaser gets only symbolical possession, does the symbolical possession operate as actual possession as against the judgment-debtor, and give the purchaser a fresh period of limitation? The views of the High Courts are divergent. According to the Calcutta High Court, symbolical possession is equivalent to actual possession, even though actual possession could have been delivered. The symbolical possession, though erroneous, is still possession through an officer of the Court and by process of the law; therefore the judgment-debtor who was a party to the proceeding relating to the delivery of possession cannot ignore it or treat it as a nullity. The period of limitation for the purchaser's suit for possession against the judgment-debtor runs from the date of delivery of the symbolical possession—Hari Mohan v. Baburali, 24 Cal. 715; Bhulu v. Jatindra, 27 C.W.N. 24, 77 I.C. 1035, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 138; Aditya v. Dhirendra, 53 C.W.N. 899, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 92. The same view is taken by the Madras High Court—Govind v. Venkata, 17 M.L.J. 598; Kamayya v. Mahalakshmi, 53 M.L.J. 339, 105 I.C. 243, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 849 (dissenting from Govindasami v. Pethapirumal, 44 I.C. 839). The Bombay High Court is of opinion that symbolical possession given under circumstances in which actual possession ought to have been delivered, is a nullity, and the judgment-debtor will be regarded as being still in possession as from the date of sale. Time will run from the date of the sale, and no fresh period will run from the date of taking symbolical possession—Mahadev v. Janu, 36 Bom. 373 (378) (F.B.); Raghunath v. Kondiba, 46 Bom. 932 (936), 68 I.C. 91, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 2; Shridhar v. Ganpati, 43 Bom. 559; Lakshman v. Moru, 16 Bom. 722. [The ruling in 36 Bom. 373 has been doubted in Mahadevappa v. Bhima, 46 Bom. 710 (715).] The same view is taken by the Allahabad High Court—Jang Bahadur v. Hanwant, 43 All. 520 (524) (F.B.).

(2) As to the second point, it has been authoritatively laid down by the Judicial Committee that if symbolical possession is delivered to the auction-purchaser, it is sufficient to put a stop to the previous adverse possession of a person who was a party to the proceedings in which symbolical possession was delievered—Radha Krishna v. Ram Bahadur, 22 C.W.N. 330 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1917 P.C. 197, 43 I.C. 268, 16 A.L.J. 33. Thus, if symbolical possession is delivered to the auction-purchaser, the judgment-debtor who was and must be taken to be a party to the execution proceedings, cannot treat the delivery of possession as a nullity, and claim to continue to be in adverse possession as from the date of the sale. His previous possession comes to an end, and in a suit for possession by the auction-purchaser, the period of limitation runs (under Art. 144) from the date of taking symbolical possession, and not from the date of confirmation of sale under Art. 138—Hari Mohan v. Baburali, 24 Cal. 715 (719, 720); Mangali v. Debi Din, 19 All. 499; Narain v. Lalta, 24 All. 269 (271); Janoki Nath v. Baikuntha, 27 C.W.N. 259, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 176; Kamayya v. Mahalakshmi, 53 M.L.J. 339, 105 I.C. 243, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 849 (850); Pratap v. Sunderbans, 3 P.L.T. 628, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 76; Harbhagwan v. Taja, 26 P.L.R. 546, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 35; Jogobundhu v. Purnanund, 16 Cal. 530 (F.B.); Jawala v. Jiwan, A.I.R. 1950 Pepsu. 22; Aditya v. Dhirendra, 53 C.W.N. 899, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 92. Symbolical possession is equivalent to actual possession not only against the judgment-debtor but also against his representative, e.g., a mortgagee from the judgment-debtor—Harasit v. Jaladhar, 33 C.W.N. 963 (964), 56 Cal. 1130, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 15, 121 I.C. 407; Ramanand v. Bindhachal, 27 Pat. 267, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 416. This principle applies also to the case of a defaulting proprietor whose land is sold for recovery of land revenue—Bireswar v. Sadhiram, A.I.R. 1950 Assam. 50.

But if the adverse possessor was not a party to the execution proceedings, the symbolical possession delivered to the auction-purchaser cannot take effect as actual possession as against the adverse possessor. And the period of limitation for a suit by the auction-purchaser against the adverse possessor runs not from the date when symbolical possession was delivered to the plaintiff, but from the date on which the defendant's possession commenced—Harjivan v. Shivram, 19 Bom. 620; Runjit v. Banwari, 10 Cal. 993; Jobeda v. Tulsi, 36 C.L.J. 472, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 82, 77 I.C. 564; Ranganatha v. Srinivasa, 49 M.L.J. 656, 90 I.C. 1037, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 42 (44); Lakshman v. Moru, 16 Bom. 722 (728). Thus, if a suit is brought in 1926 by the auction-purchaser against a person who had purchased the property in 1908 at a sale held in execution of a previous decree against the judgment debtor and was not a party to the execution proceedings held in 1914, in which symbolical possession was delivered to the plaintiff, the period of limitation runs from the date when the defendant had taken possession in 1908 and not when the plaintiff obtained symbolical possession in 1914, and the suit is barred. In other words, symbolical delivery of possession to the auction-purchaser cannot take effect as actual possession as against a purchaser of the rights of the judgment-debtor who has previously obtained actual possession—Ataullah v. Hansraj, 3 Luck. 668, 5 O.W.N. 616, 111 I.C. 362, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 391 (392); Narain v. Lalta, 21 All. 269 (271). In another Oudh case, under similar circumstances (where the defendant was a private purchaser) it was held that time ran not from the date when the defendant had taken possession but when the sale to the plaintiff was confirmed —Chunni v. Ashrafan, 4 O.L.J. 481, 42 I.C. 192 (193); see also Mahesh v. Manohar, 18 O.C. 369, 33 I.C. 657 (658).

622. Tacking of adverse possession:—A person who is in possession of land without title has, while he continues in possession and before the statutory period has elapsed, a transmissible and heritable interest in the property; and if such person is succeeded in possession by one claiming through him, who holds till the expiration of the statutory period, such a successor has then as good a right to the possession as if he himself had occupied for the whole period—Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 19, p. 157; Ram Piari v. Budh Sen, 43 All. 164 (169). If the period of possession of a trespasser and his predecessor-in-title who was also a trespasser extended over a period of 12 years, he acquired an absolute title to the property of which he had been thus in possession—Babu Ram v. Banke Behari, 3 A.L.J. 424. The word 'defendant' in this Article includes a person through whom the defendant derived his liability to be sued (see section 2) and hence he can tack the period of the adverse possession of his predecessor-in-title to that of his own—Namdev v. Ramchandra, 18 Bom. 37 (40); Ali Saheb v. Kazi Ahmed, 16 Bom. 197 (199); Ghisa v. Gajraj, 33 I.C. 371, 18 O.C. 289; Padajirav v. Ramrav, 13 Bom. 160 (165); Bibhuti v. Girish, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 191. One adverse possessor can tack the period of his own possession to the period of adverse possession held by another person through whom he derived his title, so as to make up the period of twelve years. The principle is that a title by adverse possession, in course of acquisition, is heritable, transferable and devisable—Gano v. Beni, 14 N.L.R. 82, 43 I.C. 943. The title of a wrong-doer may be transferred to a third person, while it is in course of acquisition, so that if the possession of the original wrong-doer together with that of his transferee covers a period of twelve years, the title of the original owner would be extinguished—Gossain Das v. Issur Chunder, 3 Cal. 224 (226). Where D sold a property to A, but did not give possession, and A sold the property to the plaintiff, and in execution of a money decree against D the property was sold as his and purchased by the defendants, and then the plaintiff brought a suit for possession of the property, held that the defendants had a right to tack the period of their own possession to that of D's possession as against A—Harjivan v. Shivram, 19 Bom. 620 (625). The auction purchaser acquires the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor; and therefore if a vendor retains possession of the property after the sale, and the property is subsequently sold in execution of a decree against the vendor, a suit by the vendee would be barred, if the possession of the vendor and the auction purchaser covers a period of more than 12 years—Ali Saheb v. Kazi Ahmed, 16 Bom. 197 (199). In a suit against an adopted son on the ground that his alleged adoption is invalid, the defendant can tack the period of his own adverse possession to the period during which the adoptive mother was in adverse possession, so as to complete the period of twelve years—Padajirav v. Ramrav, 13 Bom. 160 (165). A mortgagor can tack on to his own adverse possession the adverse possession of his mortgagee and use such combined possession as against a third party—Secretary of State v. Debendra Lal, 61 Cal. 262 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 285, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 23. The position of the possessor under a foreclosure decree is not that of an independent stranger, but in effect that of a mortgagee, and the mortgagor can add such person's adverse possession to that of himself—Secretary of State v. Debendra Lal, supra.

Article 144 read with sub-sections (4) and (8) of Section 2 shows that the expression "the possession of the defendant" in Article 144 includes also the possession of the person from or through whom the defendant derives his liability to be sued. The period of adverse possession of two or more defendants can be tacked together if one defendant derives his interest from the other—Jatu Das v. Mt. Sulochana, A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 37.

But the defendant cannot add to his own adverse possession the adverse possession of another independent previous trespasser from whom he did not derive his liability to be sued, within the meaning of the definition of 'defendant' in sec. 2 (8), and whom he does not represent by birth, transfer or devise—Secretary of State v. Debendra, 61 Cal. 262 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 285, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 23, 147 I.C. 545; Ganoo v. Beni, 14 N.L.R. 82, 43 I.C. 943; Ram Lakhan v. Gajadhar, 33 All. 224 (228); Secretary of State v. Krishnamoni, 29 Cal. 518 (P.C.); Rama Chandra v. Balaji, 45 Bom. 570; Charu Chandra v. Nahush Chandra, 50 Cal. 49 (66); Basanta Kumar v. Secretary of State, 44 Cal. 858 (874) (P.C.); Karan Singh v. Bakar Ali, 5 All. 1 (7) (P.C.); Sukh Deo v. Ram Dulari, 29 O.C. 131, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 313, 92 I.C. 825. The point was raised in Naru v. Krishna, 40 Bom.L.R. 166, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 210. A contrary view has been taken in Raj Bahadur v. Satranji, 1940 O.W.N. 291, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 184 where it has been held that a true owner would be barred by twelve years' continuous adverse possession, even if that possession be that of two or more independent trespassers, who do not claim under one another. The defendant cannot tack to his possession the possession of another person whom he has dispossessed—Vasudev v. Eknath, 35 Bom. 79 (90); Lakshman v. Vithu, 1895 P.J. 216; Ram Kishore v. Bandikartan, 13 Cal. 203 (207); Ganoo v. Beni, 14 N.L.R. 82, 43 I.C. 943. The possession of the persons who are not the predecessors-in-interest of that person cannot be tacked on to his possession—Padamavati v. Ramchandra, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 248. See also Note 604 under Article 142. But if the defendants were in possession, one after another, under a common agreement which provided that one would succeed after the other, the possession of the defendants could be tacked, even though they did not claim under one another—Mahomed Azim v. Mahomed Saadat, 8 O.W.N. 349, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 177 (226), 136 I.C. 642.

Moreover, the possession must be continuous, that is, there must be no interval between the defendant's own possession and the possession to which he was tacking his own. Thus, where in a suit by the landlord against the tenure-holder to recover possession of land encroached upon by him, the defendant was proved to have come into possession after an interval of some months after his father's death, the defendant was held to be an independent trespasser, and could not add his own possession to that of his father (alleging that the encroachment had been begun by his father), and hence there was no adverse possession for 12 continuous years to extinguish the plaintiff's title—Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Panday, 2 P.L.J. 506 (511), 41 I.C. 114. "In order that the title of the wrong-doer may be barred by the adverse possession of a series of trespassers, the possession by them must be continuous;.....but if a period of time should elapse, however short, after the abandonment of one trespasser who has not been in possession for the full statutory period, and before the entry of another, the title of the true owner is, as from the time of such abandonment, restored to him without any entry or act done on his part"—Dart's Vendors and Purchasers, (7th Ed), Vol. I, page 474.

The general principle regarding the tacking of possession of separate trespassers is that it will be tacked when the second trespasser derives his possession from the first, but that this cannot be done if the two trespassers are independent of each other and the second has obtained possession otherwise than through the first. Where the subsequent trespassers claim on behalf of the village proprietary body as the owners of the land and themselves got possession on the claim that the first trespassers were in fact trespassers with no rights, their possession was in no sense derived from that of the first trespassers but merely followed that possession—Mulla Ahmad v. Fazli Ahmad, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 133, 158 I.C. 968.

622A. Interruption or cessation of adverse possession:—If, while the defendant is in adverse possession, the rightful owner somehow manages to oust him, and obtains possession, the adverse possession is interrupted, and comes to an end; and if the defendant again dispossesses the rightful owner under a decree obtained under sec. 9, Specific Relief Act, the period of limitation for a suit by the owner to recover possession would run from the date of the second dispossession (under the decree), and not from the date of the original adverse possession—Jonab v. Surya Kanta, 33 Cal. 821 (825); Protap Chandra v. Durga Charan, 9 C.W.N. 1061 (1064). See Note 595 under Art. 142. In other words, the adverse possession comes to an end in consequence of a re-entry by the true owner. But the re-entry, in order to vest the possession in the person entering and to prevent the bar of the statute, must be effective, as opposed to a merely formal entry. The making of an entry amounts to nothing unless something is done to divest the possession out of the trespasser and re-vest it in fact in the owner—Deo v. Coombes, (1850) 9 C.B. 714 (at p. 718). Where during the currency of possession by a trespasser the real owner exercises various acts of possession, for however a short period, such acts divest possession of the trespasser and continuity of possession is broken—Narain v. Balabh, A.I.R. 1950 H.P. 6.

The rstatute ceases to run also, if the adverse possessor quits the land and leaves the possession vacant. "If a person enters upon the land of another, and holds possession for a time, and then, without having acquired any title under the statute, abandons possession, the rightful owner, on the abandonment, is in the same position in all respects, as he was before the intrusion took place. The possession of the intruder, ineffectual for the purpose of transferring title, ceases upon the abandonment to be effectual for any purpose. It does not leave behind it any cloud in the title of the rightful owner, or any secret process at work for the possible benefit in time to come of some casual interloper or lucky vagrant"—per Lord Macnaughten in Agency Co. v. Short, (1888) L.R. 13 A.C. 793.

Thus, if during the continuance of adverse possession, and before he has completed the 12 years, the defendant voluntarily abandons the land, the rightful owner is in the same position in all respects as he was before the intrusion took place—Secretary of State v. Krishnamoni, 29 Cal. 518 (535) (P.C.), following Agency Co. v. Short, supra. If the defendant's possession comes to an end by vis major (e.g., submersion of land under water), it has the same effect as voluntary abandonment—Ibid (at p. 535); Mazhar Hussain v. Behari Singh, 28 All. 760 (762); Ram Krishna v. Mul Chand, 1930 A.L.J. 1498, 123 I.C. 817.

An order of the Survey Officer under sec. 11, of the appellate authority under sec. 12 of Survey and Boundaries Act (IV of 1897) in itself has not the effect of causing a break in the continuity of the adverse possession held by the unsuccessful party so as to preclude his making use of his prior possession to make up the period of twelve years to complete his title—Sivaprasad v. Narasimha, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 501, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 79, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 187 (F.B.).

A suit by an auction purchaser for declaration of title and for recovery of possession from the judgment-debtor brought more than 12 years from the date of confirmation of the sale but within 12 years from the date of the actual delivery of possession is not barred as the actual delivery of possession interrupts adverse possession of the judgment-debtor and gives a fresh start of limitation—Lakshmi v. Narayana, A.I.R. 1952 Trac-Co. 86.

If, during the continuance of possession, the defendant, before he has completed 12 years, is ousted from the land by a decree obtained against him by a third person, which however is subsequently reversed and the defendant recovers possession, such erroneous decree would not prejudice the defendant, and the wrongful possession given to the third person by such decree would not prevent the continuous running of time against the plaintiff and in favour of the defendant—Dagdu v. Kalu, 22 Bom. 733 (736).

A judgment of a Court declaring that a party in possession of immoveable property has no title to it has not the effect of interrupting the continuity of his adverse possession as against the real owner, if the party continues in possession in spite of that judgment, and his possession remains undisturbed. The judgment rather appears to emphasize the adverseness of the possession of the trespasser as against the real owner —Singaraveli v. Chokkalinga, 46 Mad. 525 (527) (dissenting from Mir Akbar Ali v. Abdul Ajij, 44 Bom. 934); Shaik Mukbool Ali v. Shaik Wajid Hossain, 25 W.R. 249; Raghunath v. Tiruvengada, 9 M.L T. 171, 8 I.C. 883; Ayissa v. Lakshmana, 1911 M.W.N. 207, 9 I.C. 795; Akbar v. Tabu, 45 P.R. 1914, 22 I.C. 805; Hans Raj v. Maulu, 63 I.C. 881 (882) (Lah.). But the Bombay High Court is of opinion that such a decree puts an end to the adverse possession of the party in possession, and he must, if he wishes to acquire a good title by adverse possession, start afresh after the decree—Mir Akbar Ali v Abdul Ajij, 44 Bom. 934 (938). No doubt by a decree declaring title in favour of the plaintiffs, any adverse possession which the defendants had must be deemed to have been interrupted. But where such a declaration is by the decision of the trial court and no appeal against that part of the decree is taken, the appellate court's decision on different issues raised in appeal cannot be availed of by the plaintiff to make out that he had a subsisting title to the property on the date of his subsequent suit brought after twelve years of the trial court's decision but within twelve years of the appellate court's decision—Gopalan v. Sanku, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 32.

There is a considerable difference between a suit for mere declaration and a suit for declaration coupled with a prayer for possession. It is true that by a decree for declaration without more, the position of a person in wrongful occupation will not be disturbed, even if the decree be passed in his presence. If such person continues in possession even after the declaratory decree, he may nevertheless acquire a prescriptive title. The consequences are different, if the suit for declaration is coupled with a claim for possession and such suit is decreed—Acchiman Bibi v. Abdur Rahim, A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 437.

Adverse possession which has commenced during the life-time of the last male holder will not be interrupted by the interposition of a female heir holding a life-estate, and the reversioners will not be entitled to compute limitation from the death of the female heir—Sreepati v. Sarbeshwar, 34 C.W.N. 409, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 474 (476); Mohendra v. Shamsunnessa, 19 C.W.N. 1280, 21 C.L.J. 157 (164), 27 I.C. 954; Ramayya v. Kotamma, 45 Mad. 370 (373).

Once it is held that the possession of a co-sharer has become adverse to the other co-sharer as a result of ouster, the mere assertion of his joint title by the dispossessed co-sharer will not interrupt the running of adverse possession—Chenabasavana v. Mahabaleshwarappa, A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 337, 1954 S.C.J. 475.

623. Suits under this Article:—Suit by adopted son:—A suit by an adopted son to set aside an alienation made by his adoptive mother before the adoption, and for possession, is governed by this Article, and limitation runs from the date of adoption, not from the date of alienation—Sreeramulu v. Kristamma, 26 M.L.J. 143 (147); Sitaram v. Rajaram, 48 I.C. 230; Venkataratnam v. Venkataramiah, 27 M.L.J. 569, 25 I.C. 692; Hari v. Waman, 2 Bom.L.R. 441; Moro v. Balaji, 19 Bom. 809 (816); Ramakrishna v. Tripurabai, 23 Bom. 88 (95).

A suit by the adopted son of the junior widow to recover property from the adopted son of the senior widow on the ground that the adoption of the latter is invalid, falls under this Article, and limitation runs not from the date of the adoption of the plaintiff, but from the time when the defendant had taken possession of the property; see Padajirav v. Ramrav, 13 Bom. 160.

A suit for possession by an adopted son against the defendant who is in wrongful possession of the properties left by the plaintiff's adoptive father is governed by this Article, and not by Art. 119, even if the plaintiff's adoption is denied—Chandania v. Salig Ram, 26 All. 40 (47, 48). See Note 494 under Article 119.

Suits involving setting aside of sales etc.:—Where the main relief sought is the recovery of immoveable property, and a declaration of the invalidity of an instrument is sought only as an incidental step, the case will be governed by the 12 years rule of limitation. Thus, where the alienation of a property is void, it does not require to be set aside, a suit for recovery of the property by avoidance of such transfer is governed by this Article and not by Arts. 44, 91 and other similar Articles. Thus a suit to recover possession of property alienated by a de facto guardian without necessity is governed by this Article—Kailash v. Rajani, 24 Pat. 273, 1945 P.W.N. 323, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 298; Palaniappa v. Nallappa, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 265, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 817; so also this Article applies to a suit by a Hindu grandson to set aside an alienation of joint family property made by his grandfather before his birth. Article 126 has no application—Jiwaji v. Venkatashkrishna, I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 109, 42 Bom.L.R. 208, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 136. See Note 330 under Article 44 and Note 420 under Article 91.

Where a property not belonging to the judgment-debtor but to a stranger is sold in execution of a decree, such stranger may treat the sale as a nullity, and sue to recover the property at any time within twelve years from the sale; such a suit is not governed by Art. 12—Jawala v. Masiat, 26 All. 346 (353). See Note 281 under Art. 12.

Suit against redeeming co-mortgagor:—Prior to the amendment of the Transfer of Property Act in 1929, it was held that a co-mortgagor redeeming the entire mortgaged property and obtaining possession merely acquired a charge under sec. 95, Transfer of Property Act, and did not become a "mortgagee" within the meaning of Article 148; and a suit brought against the redeeming co-mortgagor by the other co-mortgagors to recover their shares of the property was not a suit for redemption under Art. 148 but a suit for recovery of possession under this Article—Vasudeb v. Balaji, 26 Bom. 500 (503); Ramchandra v. Sadashiv, 11 Bom. 422; Vithal v. Dinkarrao, 3 Bom.L.R. 685; Faki Abas v. Faki Nuruddin, 16 Bom. 191; Makhdum v. Jadi, 9 O.C. 91; Basanta v. Dharma, 55 I.C. 450 (451) (Lah.); Sheo Ganga v. Ranjit Singh, 52 I.C. 375 (Oudh); Munia v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 650 (657); Purna Chandra v. Barada, 46 Cal. 111 (116); Jaikishan v. Budhanand, 38 All. 138 (145); Ram Narayan v. Ram Deni, 6 P.L.J. 680, 63 I.C. 282 (283); Narain Das v. Saroj Din, 27 P.L.R. 65, 92 I.C. 980, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 238; Wajihuddin v. Ahmad Ashraf, 2 Luck. 618, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 347; see also Shankar v. Bhikaji, 53 Bom. 353, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 139 (140), 116 I.C. 225; and limitation ran not from the date of the possession by the redeeming co-mortgagor but from the date when the possession became adverse by the assertion of an exclusive title—Rama Chandra v. Sadashiv, 11 Bom. 422 (425); Faki Abas v. Faki Nurudin, 16 Bom. 191; Bhaudin v. Ismail, 11 Bom. 425 (429); Vithal v. Dinkar, 3 Bom.L.R. 685; Makhdum v. Jadi, 9 O.C. 91. That is, time ran when the redeeming co-mortgagor denied the right of the other mortgagors to enter into possession until they had paid to him their shares of the charge upon the property which he has defrayed—Narain Das v. Saraj Din, supra; Wazir v. Girdhari, 71 I.C. 847.

On the other hand, it has been held in Ashfaq v. Wazir, 14 All. 1 (F.B.), Khiali Ram v. Taik Ram, 38 All. 540 (547), Nura Bibi v. Jagat, 8 All. 295 (300), Saiduddin v. Ratanlal, 32 All. 160 (162) and Wazir Ali v. Ali Islam, 40 All. 683 (685) that a suit against the redeeming co-mortgagors falls under Article 148 (and not under Article 144) on the ground that the redeeming co-mortgagor stands in the shoes of the mortgagee, and the period of limitation runs from the date when the original mortgage becomes redeemable and not from the time when the defendant redeems the mortgaged property.

Under section 92, Transfer of Property Act (as recently amended in 1929) a redeeming co-mortgagor stands on the same footing as a mortgagee; so that a suit against him by the other co-mortgagors for recovery of the property is really a suit for redemption (Art. 148) and not a suit for possession (Art. 144). The latter set of rulings cited above (14 All. 1; 38 All. 540, etc.) will now stand as correct, and the former set of rulings (26 Bom. 500; 11 Bom. 422, etc.) are no longer good law.

Other suits:—A suit for possession of properties to be delivered in terms of an unregistered compromise decree but not delivered is governed by this Article—Supdu v. Soniram, 46 Bom.L.R. 931, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 143.

A suit to recover certain land, the title to which had been declared in favour of the plaintiff by an award, is not a suit to enforce specific performance of a contract under Article 113 (because an award is not a contract) but one falling under this Article; limitation runs from the date of the award—Sornavalli v. Muthayya, 23 Mad. 593 (596); Bhajahari v. Behary Lal, 33 Cal. 881 (883, 885); Sheo Narain v. Beni Madho, 23 All. 285 (287). See Note 471 under Article 113. Nor does Art. 120 apply to such a suit—Kurbannussein v. Mahomed, 49 Bom.L.R. 731; Kurbannussein v. Mahomed, 50 Bom.L.R. 604.

Where a lessee under a perpetual lease is not put in possession, a suit by him for possession is governed by this Article and not by Art. 113—Suraj v. Atul, I.L.R. (1938) All. 664, 1938 A.L.J. 561, A.I.R. 1938 All. 429.

Where a vendor delivers possession of only a part of the property sold, the remedy of the vendee is not by a suit for specific performance but by a suit for recovery of possession of the rest of the property; and such a suit is governed by Art. 144 not by Article 113—Bhanjan v. Sohaura, 18 P.R. 1911, 92 P.L.R. 1911, 9 I.C. 238 (239).

Where a vendor was out of possession at the time of sale, and subsequently recovered possession, a suit by the vendee to recover possession from the vendor would be governed by this Article (and not by Article 136), and the cause of action arises from the date of recovery of possession by the vendor and not when the vendor had been originally dispossessed—Ram Prosad v. Lakhi, 12 Cal. 197 (199); Sheo Prasad v. Udai, 2 All. 718; Syad Nyamtulla v. Nana, 13 Bom. 424 (428).

Where the sale deed is a mere paper transaction and inoperative a suit by the vendor for possession is governed by this Article and not by Art. 91—Basant v. Ram, I.L.R. (1940) Lah. 546, 41 P.L.R. 657, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 544.

Where the defendant has planted certain trees on the waste lands of the plaintiff, a suit for removal of the trees and for recovery of possession falls under this Article, and not under Article 32—Muhammad Shafi v. Bindeswari, 46 All. 52, A.I.R. 1924 All. 443, 75 I.C. 266. Where in substance a Zaminder's suit is really for recovery of possession of land in his Zamindary by the removal of certain structures, ditches and newly planted trees, it falls under this Article and not under Art. 120—Mahomed v. Jagat, 1940 O.W.N. 990, 16 Luck. 223, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh. 45.

A suit for assessment of fair rent in respect of a plot of land which the defendant claims to hold in lakheraj right is governed by this Article—Saroj v. Kamala Ranjan, 45 C.W.N. 126.

A suit by a widow to recover possession of her husband's properties falls under Art. 144—Chennamma v. Mangamma, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 709, 1935 M.W.N. 1154, 42 L.W. 535, 158 I.C. 121.

A suit by one of the heirs of a Muhammadan for partition of the property left by the deceased, is governed by Art. 144, so far as the immoveable property is concerned, and by Art. 120 as regards the moveables—Syed Noordeen v. Syed Ibrahim, 34 Mad. 74 (75). So also a suit for possession by one heir against the other falls under this Article—Aziman v. Abdul, 1940 A.M.L.J. 9.

A suit by the donor's heirs for recovery of possession of property endowed to an idol, on the ground that the endowment was invalid, is governed by this Article, and must be brought within twelve years from the date of the gift—Sitaramji v. Jadunath, 24 I.C. 72 (79) (Oudh).

A suit by one heir against another for recovery of his share is governed by this Article and not by Art. 123—Bholanath v. Sarbamangala, 44 C.W.N. 221, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 93.

Where the share in certain property is denied, a person may sue for declaration of title to the property or for the possession of the property. The former is governed by Art. 120 and the later by this Article—Abid v. Secy. of State, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 327, I. L.R. (1950) Nag. 633.

A suit for recovery of possession by right of survivorship is governed by this Article. Thus, if one of the two sisters (who inherited their father's property excludes the other from joint possession and enjoyment of the property, sells some of the lands, and then dies, a suit by the other sister to recover possession of the whole property by her right of survivorship is governed by this Article and not by Article 127—Atchamma v. Papaih, 44 Mad. 131 (138).

When one member of a family sues to recover immoveable property from another who is separate from him, this Article applies, if the property was never joint family property. Even if it was originally joint family property, the effect of the partition would be that any property which continued undivided after its separation would be no longer joint, and a suit to recover a share of that property would fall under Article 144, and not under Art. 127—Govindrao v. Rajabai, 27 N.L.R. 131 (P.C.), 35 C.W.N. 438 (443, 444), A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 48, 130 I.C. 673; even if the property was left undivided at a prior partition through fraud—Sidappa v. Vishvanatsha, 45 Bom.L.R. 825, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 419.

In a suit for possession by the heirs of one coparcener against the other, who is an insane and is in exclusive possession of half share of the property as his separate property to the knowledge of the deceased coparcener, who did not assert any claim till his death, that the entire property belonged to him, this Article is the proper Article to be applied and Art. 127 has no application—Ratneshwari v. Bhagwati, 1949 F.C.R. 715, A.I.R. 1950 F.C. 142.

In a suit by a tenant against a stranger having no right to possession, the defence of acquisition of heriditary tenancy under sec. 180, U.P. Tenancy Act is of no avail and the defendant must prove possession for over twelve years for establishment of any right by adverse possession. Such a suit is governed by this Article—Nanku v. Pathar, A.I.R. 1952 All. 305.

This Article applies to a suit for possession by an auction purchaser at a Court sale after obtaining formal or symbolical possession—Balgobind v. Lila Kuer, 24 Pat. 717; Aditya v. Dhirendra, 53 C.W.N. 899. So also, a suit for possession by an auction purchaser of a particular joint family property, described with boundaries in his sale certificate, sold in enforcement of a decree obtained by a creditor against inter alia, the manager of the family is governed by this Article—Vishnu v. Visvanath, 47 Bom.L.R. 1102, A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 192; Ouseph Chacko v. Krishna Pillai, A.I.R. 1958 Ker. 22 (F.B.).

There is no Article of the Limitation Act which specifically provides for a suit by an alienee from a coparcener for general partition, and where the main relief claimed is actual delivery of possession after effecting partition, the suit should be regarded as one for possession of immovable property and governed by this Article—Chettiar v. Dakshinamurthy, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 288. This view was recently adopted in Sitamahalakshmi v. Ramachandra, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 572.

Plaintiff claiming title and alleging defendant's tenancy:—Article 144 properly applies to a case in which the defendant is holding adversely to the plaintiff without title—Md. Yusuf v. Md. Waheed, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 147, 161 I.C. 585.

Where, in a suit for ejectment by a person claiming to be the landlord, the question of the title of the parties is gone into and the Court comes to the conclusion that the plaintiff has made out his title and that the defendant has not, but finds also that the defendant is not the tenant of the plaintiff, the plaintiff is still entitled to relief if the Court, finds that he was in possession within 12 years of the date of the suit—Md. Yusuf v. Md. Waheed, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 147, 161 I.C. 585.

If in a suit for possession the plaintiff claims title to the property alleging that it is being held by the defendants as his tenants, and it is found that the title of the plaintiff is established but that the tenancy is not proved; the proper Article to be applied is Art. 144 and not Art. 142. The defendant must prove his adverse possession and if he fails to do that then the plaintiff must get a decree for possession though the tenancy alleged by him has been found against him—Sulaiman Rowther v. Dawood Khan Shaheb, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 754, 1935 M.W.N. 740, 42 L.W. 593, 156 I.C. 581. See also Maluk v. Anwar, A.I.R. 1950 Pesh. 31.

Where a defendant puts forward a title to land by way of a definite transfer, no presumption can arise in favour of the continuance of the plaintiff's anterior possession. To hold otherwise would be to ignore the provisions of sec. 110, Evidence Act. Where a plaintiff avers that he was at one time the owner of immoveable property and that the defendant obtained possession from him, his suit falls under Art. 142, Limitation Act; and on his failing to prove the permissive nature of the occupation, the plaintiff cannot succeed without at first showing that he had been in possession within twelve years of bringing the suit—Ma Pyan Gyi v. U Shwe Kyun, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 124.

624. Starting point of limitation:—Limitation runs when the possession of the defendant becomes adverse to the plaintiff. Any overt act by the person in possession of the property starts adverse possession. The fact that the plaintiff (the party having title to the property) was not aware of the overt act does not make the possession less adverse—Khuda Baksh v. Karmun, 49 P.L.R. 1915, 27 I.C. 610 (611).

Thus, where some co-owners usufructuarily mortgage specific items of property held by the members of a Mahomedan family and the mortgagee enters into possession of the mortgaged items under the mortgage-deed, limitation begins from the date of the possession and not from the date of knowledge of the ouster of the other co-owners bringing the suit for recovery of possession—Palania v. Amjath, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 15, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 321, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 622 (F.B.) overruling Muthukrishna v. Sankaranarayana, 27 M.L.J. 600, A.I.R. 1915 Mad. 447); Ramchandra v. Kamoju, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 673, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 91; Venkataram v. Subramaniya, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 741; Maidin v. Kunhalikutti, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 1059, and Govindaswami v. Kothandapani, 52 M.L.J. 203, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 111.

A Hindu widow in possession of her husband's property mortgaged it with possession in 1900, and in the same year sold the equity of redemption directing the vendee to pay off the mortgage. In November 1907 she adopted the plaintiff and obtained possession of the land in March, 1908. The plaintiff sued to recover possession in December 1909. Held that the starting point of limitation under this Article was not when the right of the plaintiff accrued (November 1907) but when the defendant's possession became adverse. The defendant's (vendee's) possession did not become adverse until he obtained possession of the mortgaged property from the mortgagee (March 1908), for it was from this date that there was a clear indication in the shape of an overt act on the part of the vendee to indicate that he was asserting his rights under the sale-deed. The suit was therefore within time—Hanamgodda v. Irgowda, 48 Bom. 654, 26 Bom.L.R. 829, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 9, 84 I.C. 374.

The possession of the defendant does not become adverse to the plaintiff until the latter is entitled to possession of the property. The general principle of the Act is that a person who has a right to enter should be barred if he does not exercise that right in a certain time, not that those should be barred who cannot exercise a right of entry. The maxim is—contra non valentem agere non currit praescriptio, that is, prescription does not run against a person who is unable to act. Darby & Bosanquet, p. 289. So, in a suit by an adopted son to recover property alienated by the adoptive mother before his adoption, it was held that assuming that the possession of the alienee was adverse to the widow, that fact did not affect the plaintiff, who did not derive his right to sue from or through her and against whom the defendant's possession began to be adverse only after the adoption, when the plaintiff became entitled to possession—More v. Balaji, 19 Bom. 809 (816). In case of an adoption by a Hindu widow, limitation does not begin against the adopted son until the date of his adoption, and his right to his adoptive father's property is unaffected by any possession adverse to the adoptive mother—Hari Vithal v. Waman, 2 Bom.L.R. 411. See also Harek Chand v. Bejoy Chand, 9 C.W.N. 795 (802). But where the right of the sole coparcener is lost by adverse possession, an adoption subsequent to that does not entitle the adopted son to sue for possession as the adoption does not give any right at all—Narayan v. Gurunath, A.I.R. 1950 P.C. 43 (on appeal from Narayan v. Gurunath, I.L.R. 1939 Bom. 173, 40 Bom.L.R. 1134, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 1). A Hindu died leaving a widow and a daughter. The widow alienated the properties for purposes not binding on the reversioners, and died in 1865. The alienees continued in possession of the lands to the exclusion of the daughter who died in 1901, and a suit was brought in 1912 by the reversioners for possession of the properties. It was held that Art. 144 applied, and the possession of the defendants (alienees) was adverse to the plaintiffs only on the death of the daughter when they became entitled to possession, and the suit was not barred by limitation—Neelakanta v. Narayanaswami, 31 M.L.J. 847, 37 I.C. 733. The last male owner of a certain property died leaving a widow and his mother. The widow alienated a portion of the land without necessity and placed the alienee in possession.

She died in 1876. The mother afterwards died in 1892. The nearest reversioner died in 1903 without challenging the alienation or expressly assenting to it. In 1909 the reversioner next in succession of the deceased reversioner sued the alienee for possession of the land alienated. The defence was that the suit was barred by limitation. Held that the plaintiff's right to sue for possession was an independent right and not derived from or through the deceased reversioner, and consequently the defendant's possession though adverse to the deceased reversioner could not be adverse to the plaintiff till he was entitled to possession in 1903, and the present suit instituted within 12 years from that date was in time under Article 144—Sundar v. Salig Ram, 26 P.R. 1911 (F.B.), 9 I.C. 300 (302, 303), following Roda v. Harnam, 18 P.R. 1895. On the same principle, adverse possession by a third party against the mortgagor does not become adverse to the mortgagee, until the latter is entitled to the possession of the mortgaged property (see Note 616, ante). So also adverse possession by a trespasser against the tenant does not become adverse to the londlord until after the expiry of the period of tenancy. See Note 613 ante. Similarly, adverse possession by a female entitled to a limited estate does not become adverse against the reversioners. See Note 620A.

Where the defndants had been in possession of the suit property as purchasers in a money decree, but afterwards the plaintiff in execution of a mortgage decree purchased those properties, and not then having obtained possession brought a suit to recover possession from the defendants, it was held that time ran from the date when the plaintiff attempted to enforce his rights under the sale, i.e., when he had sought to obtain possession under his purchase—Ram Prasad v. Bindeshwari, 11 Pat. 165, 13 P.L.T. 121, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 145. In Jasraj v. Sugrabai, I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 315, A.I.R. 1943 Sind 242 it has been held that the time ran from the date of purchase by the plaintiff in execution sale. The plaintiff obtained a decree in 1873 by which he became entitled to certain portions of land which were in the possession of the defendant, the actual boundaries of which were not defined by the decree but were ascertained in execution in 1876. The defendant continued in possession of some of the lands and the plaintiff had to file a fresh suit to get possession of them, to which the defendant pleaded limitation. It was held that limitation began to run when the boundaries of the lands were finally ascertained in 1876, and not from the date of the decree in 1873—Jagajit v. Sarabjit, 19 Cal. 159 (171) (P.C.)

Where certain chakran lands, which had been included in a patni mahal, were resumed by the Government and settled with the zeminder, and the patnidar brought a suit against the zemindar for possession of those chakran lands, held that the period of limitation for the suit ran not from the date when the Government settled the lands with the zemindar, but from the date when the zemindar's possession became adverse to the patnidar, i.e., when some act was done by the zemindar indicative of a hostile attitude on his part towards the patnidar. The possession of the zemindar may become adverse to the patnidar in a variety of ways, e.g., when the lands are settled by the Zemindar with tenants, or when the patnidar after being invited to come and take the lands does nothing and the Zemindar thereafter makes other arrangements either for holding the lands in khas or for settling the same with ijardars or the like. In each case the facts have to be investigated having regard to the language of Article 144—Nagendrabala v. Bejoy Chand Mahatap, 50 Cal. 577 (584), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 734, 28 C.W.N. 114, 74 I.C. 153.

Adverse possession of an alinee dates from the moment the alienee is without lawful title. That time is, in the case of a void transfer, the date of the transfer; in the case of a voidable transfer, the date of avoidance and in the case of a transfer effective for a period (whether because of estoppel or otherwise), the date of the termination of the period. The starting point of limitation depends upon the nature of the transfer—Venkatasubramania v. Sivagurunatha, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 60. Thus where a trustee of a choultry alienates property belonging to the choultry as his own and not as a trustee the alienation is void abinitio and a suit for possession is to be brought within 12 years from the date of alienation and not from the death of the trustee—Ibid; Iswar Kalimata v. Bijni Raj, 4 D.L.R. (Cal.) 216; Hemanta v. Sridhar, 50 C.W.N. 629. The same principle applies also to wakf property—Fateh Nasib v. Swarup, I.L.R. (1941) 2 Cal. 434, 73 C.L.J. 475, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 1. But where the head of a mutt transfers the property of a mutt for valuable consideration, adverse possession begins from the death of the alienator and not from the date of alienation, even if this Article applies—Venkateswara v. Venkatesa, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 599, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 644, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 449 (F.B.). The same principle applies even if the alienation is not supported by necessity as the alienation is not void ab-initio. So a suit by the succeeding mahant for possession of the alienated property within 12 years of the death of the alienating mahant, though after more than 12 years of the alienation, is in time as the possession by the alienee does not become adverse to the Math till after the death of the alienating mahunt—Sri Thakurji v. Mathura, 22 Pat.L.T. 239, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 354. If a shebait mortgages debuttar property without necessity, but as a shebait the possession of the purchaser at a mortgage sale does not become adverse to the endowment during the lifetime of the shebait—Hemanta v. Sridhar, 50 C.W.N. 629; Charu v. Nepal, 43 C.W.N. 102, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 21.

A suit to set aside an alienation of sarva inam property made by the holder thereof must be brought within 12 years from the death of the alienating inamdar. Limitation runs from the death of the alienor—Ramchandra v. Lakshmibai, 40 Bom.L.R. 400, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 331. In the case of a grant which is not alienable by the holder, a suit by his successors to set aside an alienation by the last holder, and for possession on the ground that the holder was not full owner of the property dealt with, may be instituted within 12 years from the date of the death of the alienor. The cause of action for the suit arises only on the death of the alienor; the fact that a suit by the plaintiffs for a declaration of their reversionary interest might be barred long ago is irrelevant, because the causes of action are different—Dilafroz v. Ganhar, I.L.R. (1946) Lah. 569, I.L.R. (1946) Kar. (P.C.) 138, A. I. R. 1946 P. C. 165.

A suit by a beneficiary for possession of immoveable property transferred by a trustee within 12 years from the date of alienation is not barred—Ramabai v. Raghunath, A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 106, 53 Bom. L.R. 883.

Where a trustee alienates property which he honestly believes to be his own but which on a true construction of the deed of trust belongs to the cestui que trust, time, which the trustee allows to pass owing to this mistake, counts, when computing limitation for suit against alienee for possession—Venkatasubramania v. Sivagurunatha, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 60.

A suit instituted by a grandson to set aside alienation made by his grandfather before his birth would be barred if instituted more than 12 years after the date of alienation—Jiwaji v. Venkateshkrishna, I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 109, 42 Bom.L.R. 208, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 136.

A transfer of property by a widow who has been holding the property in lieu of her dower debt is valid during her life time, and the limitation against the true owners begins only upon her death—Yusuf v. Gafoor, 30 Pat. 357, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 123.

Where an adjudication order is annulled but no order vesting the property to the receiver is made under sec. 37 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, the possession of the receiver does not became adverse to the quondam insolvent. But if the receiver sells the property the possession of the purchaser becomes adverse to the quondam insolvent from the date of the sale and the suit for possession filed within 12 years from the date of sale is not barred—Chinna v. Kuppa, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 179, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 585, 64 Mad. L. W. 1097.

625. Burden of proof:—In a suit falling under Article 144, what the plaintiff is required to establish is his title to the property. The plaintiff need not prove possession; it is not for the plaintiff to prove that he was in possession within 12 years prior to suit—Syad Nyamtula v. Nana, 13 Bom. 424 (428); Karan Singh v. Bakar Ali, 5 All. 1 (6) (P.C.); Dolu Mal v. Rawal Baksh, 31 P.L.R. 231, A.I R. 1930 Lah. 608; Sukhdeo v. Ram Dulari, 29 O.C. 131, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 313, 92 I.C. 825; Siri Ram v. Bishan, A.I.R. 1952 Pepsu 46. It is only in cases failing under Articrle 142 that the plaintiff is required to prove possession within 12 years before suit. In cases under Article 144, the plaintiff may rest content with proof of title only in the first instance —Faki v. Babaji, 14 Bom. 458; Jai Chand v. Girwar, 41 All. 669 (673). If he fails to prove his title the suit fails—Suba v. Shiva, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 302 and the question of adverse possession does not arise in such a case; the question of adverse possession arises only when ownership is proved—Keshav v. Municipal Commissioner, A.I R. 1951 M.B. 114.

The plaintiff's title may be presumed under certain circumstances. Thus, the admission by Government that they had paid rent for some years to the plaintiff is sufficient in law to raise a prima facie presumption of title in his favour; and the onus of proving that the land belonged to Government and that rent was paid to the plaintiff under mistake lies upon the Government—Vithaldas v. Secy. of State, 26 Bom. 410.

After the plaintiff has established his title, his onus is discharged. He is not required to prove that his title has not been extinguished by the operation of limitation. It was held in Inayet v. Ali Husein, 20 All. 182 (185), Secy. of State v. Vira Rayan, 9 Mad. 175, Secy. of State v. Bavotti, 15 Mad. 315, and Secy. of State v. Kota Bapanamma, 19 Mad. 165, that in a suit under this Article, the plaintiff was required to prove not only a legal title to possession but also to prove by some pirma facie evidence that he had a subsisting title not extinguished by the operation of the statute of limitation, before the defendant could be called upon to substantiate a plea of adverse possession. That is, the plaintiff was required to prove title as well as possession within 12 years prior to suit. The same view has been taken in Komu v. Suppukutti—A.I.R. 1950 Tra-Co. 46. But these decisions have been practically overruled by the Privy Council ruling in Secretary of State v. Chellikani Rama Rao, 39 Mad. 617 (631), in which their Lordships have observed: "The onus of establishing title to property by reason of adverse possession for a certain requisite period lies upon the person asserting such possession (i.e., upon the defendant). If it were not correct, it would be open to the possessor for a year or a day to say: 'I am here, be your title to the property ever so good, you cannot turn me out until you have demonstrated that the possession of myself and my predecessors was not long enough to fulfil all the legal conditions.' .....It would be contrary to all legal principles thus to permit the squatter to put the owner of the fundamental right to a negative proof upon the point of possession." In other words, when the plaintiff has established his title to a land, the burden of proving that he has lost that title by reason of the adverse possession of the defendant lies upon the defendant—Radha Gobinda v. Inglis, 7 C.L.R. 364 (P.C.); Karan Singh v. Bakar Ali, 5 All. 1 (P.C.); Kuthali v. Kunharankutti, 44 Mad. 883 (891) (P.C.); Parmananda v. Sahib Ali, 11 All. 438 (443); Alima v. Kutti, 14 Mad. 96 (97); Jobeda v. Tulshi Charan, 36 C.L.J. 472, 77 I.C. 564, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 82; Faki v. Babaji, 14 Bom. 458 (462); Vasudeo v. Eknath, 35 Bom. 79 (91); Syad Nyamtula v. Nana, 13 Bom. 424 (428); Chinto v. Janki, 18 Bom. 51 (57); Ram Surat v. Badri, 50 All. 89,

A.I.R. 1927 All. 799; Jaichand v. Girwar Singh, 41 All. 669 (671), 17 A.L.J. 814; Kanhaiya v Girwar, 51 All. 1042; Md. Amanulla v. Badan Singh, 17 Cal. 137 (P.C.); Radha Kanta v. Bhagawati, 1 P.L.T. 192, 55 I.C. 247; Ram Prasad v. Bindeshwari, 11 Pat. 165, 13 P.L.T. 121, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 145 (146); Inderpal v. Thakur Din, 27 O.C. 77, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 266, 78 I.C. 895; Gursahai v. Chhedi, 27 O.C. 130, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 42, 79 I.C. 964; Maung Aung v. Maung San, 5 Rang. 576, 105 I.C. 598, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 13; Muthia Chetty v. Seena, 12 Bur.L.T. 234, 56 I.C. 951; Rauf v. Bodhi, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 484. Where a suit is brought by the plaintiff for possession as the rightful heir to the property and the defendant alleges to be in possession on the basis of an adoption-deed, the burden is not on the plaintiff to disprove the fact or validity of the alleged adoption. It will be enough for him to estabish his own case and treat the alleged adoption as of no effect—Bhoga v. Surajpal, A.I.R. 1951 M.B. 40. Where in a suit for possession by the auction purchaser within 12 years of his auction purchase, the defendant, who has purchased the property after the auction purchase of the plaintiff, wants to resist the plaintiff's suit by showing previous possession the burden is on him to show previous possession—Uchmatan v. Rajendra, 67 C.L.J. 115, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 689. When it is found as a fact that the defendant had admitted the plaintiff's ownership up to a certain period, then before the defendant can set up adverse possession, he must show when the alleged adverse possession commenced—Tulshibai v. Ranchhod, 26 Bom. 442 (444). When the possession of the defendant was in the beginning lawful and not inconsistent with the plaintiff's title, the burden lies on him to shew that his possession has assumed another character and has become inconsistent with the plaintiff's title—Ittappan v. Manavikrama, 21 Mad. 153 (159).

If the defendant fails to prove that he has been in adverse possession for more than 12 years, the plaintiff is entitled to succeed simply on the strength of his title. It is not necessary for him to go further and prove that he was in actual possession at some period within 12 years prior to the commencement of the suit—Jaichand v. Girwar Singh, 41 All. 669 (670). Thus, in a suit by Government for possession of land used as rastha, once the title of Government is proved it is not necessary for Government to prove continued possession—Province of the Punjab v. Asa, 43 P.L.R. 222, A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 241. Where in a suit for ejectment the defence taken is that the defendant is a tenant paying rent to the plaintiff, the onus is on the defendant to prove the same. The onus of proving possession within 12 years by the plaintiff is discharged by the admission of the defendant of his permissive possession—Sahabu v. Hari, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 43.

A person alleging that he has become owner of immoveable property by adverse possession must establish that he was in possession of the property peaceably, openly and in assertion of a title hostile to the real owner—Pandurang v. Malkappa, 52 Bom. L.R. 146, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 302. In the case of adverse possession claimed against a co-owner or of any one claiming through him, it is necessary to allege specifically the point of time when the possession became adverse and to prove exclusion of the other co-owner—Abdeali v. Taiyab, 1951 N.L.J. 89, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 355. A plea of adverse possession not raised in the pleadings is not allowed to be raised in second appeal—Krishnamraju v. Reddamma, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 608, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 49. See also, Siri Ram v. Bishan, A.I.R. 1952 Pepsu 46. But where the plaintiff does not frame the suit as one for possession, having regard to the nature of the right claimed by him, the defendant is not precluded from showing that the suit is barred by limitation merely because adverse possession is specially pleaded in the written statement —Ram Lal v. Lodha, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 201.

626. Invalid title cured by adverse possession:—If possession is acquired by a person under an invalid title and he continues to remain in possession for more than 12 years, although the document relating to his title may be invalid for want of registration or any other ground, yet the possession having lasted for more than 12 years, the title becomes an unassailable one. Therefore, where a party originally enters into possession under an unregistered sale-deed, and remains in possession for over 12 years, the defect of his title is cured by his having been in possession for the statutory period—Mahipal v. Sarjoo, 13 O.L.J. 326, 3 O.W.N. 100, 92 I.C. 99, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 141; Qadar Bakhsh v. Mangha Mal, 4 Lah. 249 (251), A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 495, 73 I.C. 889; Ram Udit v. Bhagwat, 95 I.C. 438, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 500. So also, where the registration of a sale-deed is found to be illegal, the purchaser gets full title to the property purchased, if he is put in possession in pursuance of the sale-deed, and continues to be in possession for over 12 years, openly and adversely to the knowledge of the vendor—Jasoda Kuar v. Nanak Missir, 4 Pat. 394, A I.R. 1925 Pat. 787, 7 P.L.T. 507, 92 I.C. 1034. Similarly, where the mortgagor surrendered his equity of redemption to the mortgagee but there was no deed of surrender, and the mortgagee remained in possession for 40 years, he acquired proprietary title to the property—Bashir Husain v. Chandrapal, 25 O.C. 83, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 133, 68 I.C. 223. A mortgagee remaning in possession under an invalid mortgage of lands of Shrotriem grant burdened with service is a trespasser from the very beginning and acquires by adverse possession for over 12 years a prescriptive right under the mortgage—Adinarayana v. Srirangachariar, 1940 M.W.N. 404. So also, where an usufructuary mortgage of an inalienable property is made and the equity of redemption is thereafter sold to the mortgagee, who by remaining in possession for more than 12 years without any challenge acquires a right by adverse possession—Markandra v. Naidu, 26 Pat. 717, A I.R. 1949 Pat. 197. A mortgagee remaining in possession of the mortgaged property for more than 12 years under an oral sale or an unregistered sale of the equity of redemption (which is invalid) acquires an absolute title to the property, and the mortgagor's right of redemption is extinguished—Kandasami v. Chinnabba, 44 Mad. 253 (257); Mahendra v. Chandrapal, 24 O.C. 155, 63 I.C. 284 (285); Qadar Bakhsh v. Mangha Mal, 4 Lah. 249 (251). Where one brother executed a deed of relinquishment in favour of another, but the deed was never registered, and the brother in whose favour it was made remained in possession, held that the unregistered deed being insufficient to pass title, the possession taken under it must be held to be adverse and if it continued for more than 12 years, it was sufficient to create a title in favour of the person in possession—Jhamplu v. v. Kutramani, 39 All 696 (698). A donee under an oral gift, which is invalid under the Hindu law, can perfect his title by possession for twelve years. If the donee is a female, the property becomes her stridhan—Maluka Kunwar v. Pateswar, 1 Luck. 273, 3 O.W.N. 536, 96 I.C. 672, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 371, following Varada Pillai v. Jeevaratnammal, 43 Mad. 244 (250) (P.C.). Possession for more than 12 years under an unregistered perpetual lease perfects a title by adverse possession, though the deed itself is invalid—Bank of Upper India v. Harnath, 93 I.C. 852, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 410, and entitles him to bring a suit for possession against any person other than the owner—Surya v. Tulsi, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 483. Where an adopted son held exclusive possession of certain property for over the statutory period, and a reversioner subsequently sued for partition and possession on the ground that the adoption was invalid, held assuming that the adopted son had an invalid title, he having been in exclusive possession, and the persons suing not being able to prove joint possession, the suit was barred—Ishwari Prasad v. Hari Prasad, 6 Pat. 506, 8 P.L.T. 34, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 145, 106 I.C. 620. A grant made in contravention of sec. 12A of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act is void, but if the grantee remains in possession for more than 12 years, he acquires a title by adverse possession—Bageswari v. Jagannath, 8 Pat. 549, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 117 (120), 115 I.C. 699. Where a person having no legal title remains in possession of the land under a colour of an invalid grant of the land in perpetuity, such possession, not being referable to any legal title, is adverse to the real owner from the very moment he takes possession under the invalid grant. Possession for over 70 years openly, without interruption creates a limited interest to hold the land in perpetuity. Thus where the Government grants certain land to the Municipal Committee for establishing a market free from payment of rent and the grant is found to be invalid for non-compliance of certain formalities and the Municipal Committee remains in possession for more than 70 years without payment of rent, the Municipal Committee acquires a limited interest to hold the land in perpetuity without payment of rent—Collector of Bombay v. Bombay Corporation, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 469.

PART IX—Thirty Years.

145.	Against a depositary or pawnee to recover moveable property deposited or pawned.	Thirty years.	The date of the deposit or pawn.

627. Scope:—According to some cases of the Calcutta High Court this Article applies even though the moveable property is not recoverable in specie—Gangahari v. Nabin, 20 C. W.N. 232 (233), 34 I.C. 959; Lala Gobind v. Chairman, 6 C.L.J. 535; Jameshwar v. Kailash, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 143 (144), 107 I.C. 473; Administrator-General v. Krishto Kamini, 31 Cal. 519 (affirming 7 C.W.N. 476). Therefore, the term "moveable property" as used in this Article includes money—Lala Gobind v. Chairman, 6 C.L.J. 535. So also, where the plaintiff made over to a goldsmith certain gold ornaments of the weight of one tola to be melted and made into new ornaments, and failing to get the ornaments on repeated demands instituted a suit for the return of one tola of gold or its price, it was held that this Article applied—Gangahari v. Nabin, supra. But in the earlier case of Ishur Chunder v. Jibun Kumari, 16 Cal. 25 (29), it was held that the term 'deposit' meant a deposit of goods to be returned in specie. In another earlier Calcutta case also it was held that this Article applied only to a case of a deposit which was recoverable in specie, and therefore the Collector was not a depositary of the surplus proceeds of a revenue sale remaining in his hands—Secy. of State v. Fazal Ali, 18 Cal. 234 (241).

According to Madras, Punjab and Allahabad High Courts, this Article is applicable only to a deposit returnable in specie, and is inapplicable to a deposit of money—Jasoda Bibi v. Parmanand, 16 All. 256 (258); Kalyan Mal v. Kishan Chand, 41 All. 643 (645); Balakrishnudu v. Narayanaswamy, 37 Mad. 175 (177); Ganesh Lal v. Chunni Lal, 74 P.R. 1882; Dalipa v. Labhu Ram, 4 P.R. 1919, 65 P.L.R. 1918, 47 I.C. 592; Mohini v. Rahmatulah, I.L.R. (1944) All. 554, 1944 A.L.J. 339, A.I.R. 1944 All. 241. The same view has been taken in Ahmed v. Yehiya, A.I.R. 1950 Hyderabad, 52. The Patna High Court has held that a suit by the heir of legal representative of a deceased employee for recovery of a sum of money deposited by the employee with his employer as security for good conduct is not governed by this Article—Ram Ran Bijoy Prasad v. Mt. Bachria, 20 Pat.L.T. 777, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 688. In the Allahabad case of 41 All. 643, Walsh J. did not apply this Article even to a case of deposit of gold mohurs (which were to be returned in specie), but applied Article 60, on the ground that the mohurs were 'money.'

The right to officiate as priest at funeral ceremonies of Hindus is in the nature of immoveable property, and a suit to redeem a share of such right is governed by Article 148 and not by this Article—Rabhoo Panday v. Kassy, 10 Cal. 73 (74).

628. Deposit:—Although the term 'deposit' ordinarily implies the deposit of specific property returnable in specie, it has a wider meaning. If a G. P. Note or a sum of money is delivered to be held as security for the performance of some engagement and upon the express or implied understanding that the thing deposited is to be restored to the owner as soon as the engagement is fulfilled, the person with whom the deposit has been made will be treated as a depositary—Lala Gobind v. Chairman, 6 C.L.J. 535, followed in Nand Lal v. Asutosh, 55 I.C. 515 (Cal.); see also Upendra v. Collector, 12 Cal. 113 (115).

But a simple deposit of money for safe custody (and not to be kept as security for the performance of any work) does not fall under Art. 145 (but under Art. 60)—Ganesh Lal v. Chunni Lal, 74 P.R. 1882; Balakrishnudu v. Narayanaswamy, 37 Mad. 175; Narmadabai v. Bhabanishankar, 26 Bom. 430 (so assumed); see also Kalyan Mal v. Kishan Chand, 41 All 643 (645), 55 I.C. 45; Jasoda v. Parmanand, 16 All. 256 (258). If ornaments, clothes and money are deposited with a person for safe custody, a suit to recover the ornaments and clothes (but not the money) falls under this Article—Narmadabai v. Bhabanishankar, 26 Bom. 430 (432); Trimbak v. Vithaldas, A.I.R. 1956 Hyd. 140, I.L.R. 1956 Hyd. 264. But where certain promissory notes remain with defendant, having been left by the plaintiff as security or at any rate for safe custody, this Article applies to a suit in respect of such notes—Habibul v. Haq Tikam, 1938 A.L.J. 264, 1938 M.W.N. 390, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 110.

Where certain G. P. Notes were made over by the plaintiffs to the defendant to be kept by him in deposit on their behalf and if necessary to be used by him for raising funds for his own purpose, and the defendant sold all the notes, but had neither replaced them nor paid their value to the plaintiffs, held, that a suit to recover the value of those notes was governed by Art. 145, in as much as the transaction amounted to a deposit—Administrator-General v. Krishto Kamini, 31 Cal. 519 (528); in this case, Hill J. however was of opinion (see pp. 533, 536) that the transaction did not amount to a deposit, for an essential characteristic of a deposit properly so called was that the thing deposited should not be used by the depositee, and that Article 145 would not apply, but Art. 49 would be the proper Article, or even Art. 115 or 120.

The Madras High Court has held in Balakrishnudu v. Narayanaswamy, 37 Mad. 175 (178) that "the term 'deposit' should be taken to mean the sort of bailment known to lawyers under the name of 'depositum' in the Roman law of Bailments which was accepted by Lord Bracton and afterwards by Lord Holt in Goggs v. Barnard, (1703) 1 Sm. L.C. 173, as fit to be enforced in England. This depositum is a bailment of a specific thing to be kept for the bailor and returned when wanted, as opposed to commodatum where a specific thing as a horse or a watch is lent to the bailee to be used by him and then returned; and both are contrasted with mutuum where corn, wine or money or other things are given to be used and other things of the same nature and quantity are to be returned instead. In the Limitation Act, the word 'deposit' does not include so called deposits of money or other things which are not intended to be kept but to be used." The same view seems to have been taken in Gangineni Kondiah v. Gottipati Pedda, 33 Mad. 56 (at p. 59) although it was not necessary for the decision of that case. Where the plaintiff deposited certain sum with the defendant as interest, and the defendant was not prohibited from using it nor was he bound to keep it invested in any particular way, and there was nothing to show that the defendant was a trustee of the fund, held that the defendant did not hold the money in deposit within Article 145—Samuel v. Ananthanatha, 6 Mad. 351 (352). The Madras High Court has also held that there can be no 'deposit' if the thing deposited is not to be returned in the condition in which it would naturally remain at the time of return. Therefore, where the plaintiff gave certain loose rubies to the defendant, so that he might get them converted into an ear-ornament, it was held that the transaction was not a deposit—Narayanasamy v. Ayasamy, 24 M.L.J. 184, 18 I.C. 921. But in the later case of Kishtappa v. Lakshmi Ammal, 44 M.L.J. 431, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 578, 72 I.C. 842, the same High Court has laid down that the term deposit is used in Article 145 in a plain and simple language to mean simply that where one man's property is handed by that man to another, the latter becomes a depositary of it; it is not the intention of the Legislature that the Courts who have to administer the law should have to study either the case of Goggs v. Bernard, or the Roman Law in order to ascertain what is the true meaning of Article 145, the term 'deposit' should not be confined to the strict meaning of depositum under the Roman Law, but also includes cases where a thing is handed over to a person on the understanding that the depositary might use the thing for his own benefit and then return it when demanded. See also Ahilyamba v. Subramania, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 101, where it was held that a "deposit" within the meaning of this Article includes a deposit of money.

A suit by a pledgor to recover certain jewels which had been unauthorisedly converted by the pledgee to his own use, is governed by Art. 115 or 145—Ramaswamy v. Palaniappa, 30 L.W. 898, 122 I.C. 37, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 364 (371). The suit does not fall under Article 36, as it is not a wrong independent of contract, but arising out of the contract of pledge—Ibid.

Where a person receives money in the first instance as defacto guardian of a minor, it is money had and received. The mere fact that in a receipt executed by him later for the money received, stating that the amount remained with him as "Amanat" does not render the amount as deposit in his hand so as to attract the application of this Article to a suit for recovery of the said amount—Shaikh Golam v. Najafunnessa, 4 D.L.R. (Cal.) 141, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 230.

The word "deposit" does not cover a transaction of the nature of a loan. Therefore, where the plaintiff lent some ornaments to the defendant to be used by the later in a Ram Lila procession, but the ornaments were stolen from the defendant, and the plaintiff sued to recover them, it was held that the transaction being a loan and not a deposit, Art. 145 did not apply, but Art. 115—Chaturgun v. Shahzady, 7 O.W.N. 769, 126 I.C. 682, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 395 (396). The plaintiff handed over a jewel to the defendant to pledge it and raise loan on it for the plaintiff. Plaintiff paid off the loan, but the defendant who got back the jewel retained it, and refused to return it to the plaintiff. Held that as there was no agreement that the lewel should remain in deposit with the defendant after the payment of the loan, this Article could not apply to a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover the jewel. The suit fell under Article 49—Gopalasami v. Subramania, 35 Mad. 636 (638), 12 I.C. 207.

A contract of deposit or pawn does not come to an end on the death of the depositary or pawnee, and the legal representative who succeeds to the estate of the deceased is bound by any contract to which the deceased was a party. Therefore a suit to recover the jewel from the legal representative of the original depositary falls under this Article and not under Article 48 or 49—Krishnaswami v. Gopalachariar, 20 L.W. 758, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 185, 84 I.C. 1026.

A depositary's depositary is not contemplated by this Article—Lorind v. Punjab National Bank Ltd., A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 254, 191 I.C. 830.

629. Demand and refusal:—A suit for recovery of moveable property deposited is governed by this Article, and not by Art. 48 or 49, even though there has been a demand for the return of the deposit and a refusal by the depositary; limitation runs from the date of the deposit, and not from the date of refusal—Narmadabai v.

Bhabanisankar, 26 Bom. 430 (432); Gangineni Kondiah v. Gottipati, 33 Mad. 56 (61); Promotho v. Prodyumno, 26 C.W.N. 772, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 416, 69 I.C. 900; Gangahari v. Nabin Chandra, 20 C.W.N. 232 (233), 34 I.C. 959. In England, however, time runs from the date of the demand, and no cause of action accrues until there is a demand and refusal—Wilkinson v. Verity, (1871) L.R. 6 C.P. 206; In re Tidd, [1893] 3 Ch. 154 (156).

630. Art. 145 and Art. 49:—Article 145 is a special Article dealing with a suit against a depositary to recover moveable property deposited. Article 49 on the other hand deals generally with a suit for other specific moveable property, and has no application where the specific provision contained in Art. 145 applies. Art. 49 cannot be deemed to provide for the cases where the possession of moveable property is transferred to another by reason of a confidential relation such as is involved in a deposit—Gangineni Kondiah v. Gottipati, 33 Mad. 56 (57); Promotho Nath v. Prodyumna, 26 C.W.N. 772, 69 I.C. 900, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 416. Article 49 does not apply where there is a 'deposit' in any sense of the term—Kishtappa v. Lakshmi Ammal, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 578, 44 M.L.J. 431, 72 I.C. 842.

The Allahabad High Court is of opinion that in order to entitle the owner to sue for possession of the goods deposited or to recover damages for their loss, if they are not restored to him, he must make a demand. As there is an implied contract that they will be returned on demand, on failure to return them on demand, there is a breach of contract; and the owner may sue in contract in which case Article 145 will apply. On the other hand, the owner may, sue in tort, owing to the unlawful withholding of the goods, and in that case Art. 49 would apply to the suit, being a suit for return of specific moveable property wrongfully detained—Kalyan Mal v. Kishen Chand, 41 All. 643, 55 I.C. 45. But all the other High Courts are of opinion that even though there is a demand for the goods and a refusal by the defendant, such refusal does not amount to a wrongful detention of the goods so as to attract the application of Art. 49. When goods are deposited, the Article applicable is Art. 145; and this Article is not controlled by Art. 49—Ma Shwe v. Ma Saw, 6 Rang. 547, 116 I.C. 468, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 309; Narmadabai v. Bhavanishankar, 26 Bom. 430 (432), 4 Bom.L R. 72; Gangineni Kondiah v. Gottipati, supra; Kistappa v. Lakshmi Ammal, supra; Gangahari v. Nabin, 20 C.W.N. 232 (233), 34 I.C. 959.

146. Before a Court established by Royal Charter in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction by a mortgagee to recover from the mortgagor the possession of immoveable property mortgaged.	Thirty years.	When any part of the principal or interest was last paid on account of the mortgage-debt.

631. Where no part of the principal or interest has been paid, the extended period of limitation prescribed by this Article cannot be taken advantage of, and the twelve years' rule will apply—Ram Chunder v. Juggutmonmohini, 4 Cal. 283.

This Article refers to suits instituted in High Courts; similar suits instituted in mofussil Courts are provided for in Article 135.

146A. By or on behalf of any local authority for possession of any public street or road or any part thereof from which it has been dispossessed or of which it has discontinued the possession.	Thirty years.	The date of the dispossession or discontinuance.

632. An application under sec. 364 (1), Calcutta Municipal Act is plainly not a suit and therefore this Article, which applies to suits can not apply to such an application—Corporation of Calcutta v. Dulal, 40 Cr.L.J. 870, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 470. This Article does not apply where the suit is brought not by any local authority, but by a private person to oust the defendant from the road encroached—Achar Singh v. Badhawa, 124 P.R. 1912, 15 I.C. 285.

The "local authority" need not be the owner of the street or road. This Article cannot reasonably be restricted to streets or roads formed by the Municipality on lands belonging to or acquired by it in a proprietary right. For instance, when the Legislature has vested a street in a Municipal Council, such vesting does not transfer to the Municipal authority the right of ownership in the site or soil over which the street exists. Still, the Municipality has a certain property in the soil of the street which would enable it as owner to bring a possessory action against trespassers; and such possessory suit would be governed by this Article—Sundaram v. Municipal Council, 25 Mad. 635 (650). Where the local authority is found not to have been in possession at all, this Article has no application as this Article contemplates prior possession of land by the local authority—Dhajudhari v. Union Board, 45 C.W.N. 802, 73 C.L.J. 608, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 151.

Under this Article an open assertion of hostile title is not necessary to start limitation. Possession, provided it is not permissive or in the alternative discontinuance of possession by the local authority is quite sufficient to make limitation run against it—Tila v. Municipal Committee, A.I.R. 1941 Pesh. 76, 196 I.C. 648. The word 'road' in this Article includes the portion which is used as a road as also the lands kept on both sides as parts of the road for the purposes of the road—Anukul Chandra v Chairman, Dacca District Board, 32 C.W.N. 396 (398), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 485, 113 I.C. 24.

If a person is in possession of the Municipal land for more than 30 years, the right of the Municipality to the land is extinguished—Ashutosh v. Corporation of Calcutta, 28 C.L.J. 494, 49 I.C. 93; Municipal Commissioners v. Sarangapani, 19 Mad. 154 (157). Where a person has his verandah encroaching upon the street lands for upwards of thirty years, the site becomes the property of the person to whom the verandah belongs, by the operation of this Article read with section 28. In such a case, it is no longer competent to the District Municipality to direct him to give up possession of the encroached lands under sec. 122 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (III of 1901), because it is no longer a public street, but the private property of the defendant—Tayaballi v. Dohad Municipality, 22 Bom.L.R. 951, 58 I.C. 326.

In a Madras case, Bhashyam Ayyanger, J., has made a distinction (known to English and Scotch law) between the ownership of a private person over the encroached land, and the ownership of the Government over the land, and made the following observations as to the effect of Art. 146A and sec. 28 on these two kinds of ownership: "The operation of sec. 28 upon this Article would be to extinguish the right of highway on the expiration of 30 years from the date of dispossession of the Municipality by encroachment, and thus free the land from the burden of the highway, if the person encroaching upon the land be the owner of the land. If the owner of the land on which the highway exists be a third party, an encroachment of a permanent character on the public highway will also, as a general rule, operate as occupation of the soil and dispossession of the owner of the soil equally with the Municipality, and his ownership will be extinguished in favour of the trespasser at the expiration of the ordinary period of limitation, viz., 12 years; and at the expiration of 30 years, the ownership thus acquired by the wrong-doer will be freed from the burden of the highway. But if the highway has been dedicated to the Municipality by the Crown, the right of the Crown can only be extinguished at the expiration of 60 years' adverse possession or occupation by the trespasser. Therefore in cases in which the site of the street belongs to the Crown, the Municipality will be barred after the expiration of 30 years from the date of its dispossession, but the crown will have the land freed from the burden of the highway and will be entitled to remove the obstruction or encroachment, and after removing the same, it may again dedicate as a highway the portion of the land thus freed from the burden. But if it suffers the obstruction to continue for a further period of 30 years, the trespasser would become the absolute owner of the land"—Sundaram v. Municipal Council, 25 Mad. 635 (650, 651); Basaweswaraswamy v. Bellary Municipal Council, 38 Mad. 6 (11).

The period limitation for a suit for ejectment of a trespasser who has encroached upon the municipal road commences from the time the encroachment is made, and there is continuing wrong so as to entitle the plaintiff to the benefit of sec. 23. The wrong is complete as soon as the encroachment takes place—Municipal Commissioners v. Sarangapani, 19 Mad. 154 (157); Ashutosh v. Corporation, 28 C.L.J. 494, 49 I.C. 93.

PART X—Sixty Years.

147. By a mortgagee for foreclosure or sale.	Sixty years.	When the money secured by the mortgage becomes due.

633. English mortgage:—It was laid down by the Privy Council (overruling a large number of cases) that Article 147 of the Limitation Act applied to the one class of mortgage in which alone a suit could be and always was brought for "foreclosure or sale" (i.e., foreclosure or sale in the alternative, and not distributively) viz., to English mortgages; it did not apply to suits on simple mortgages; these are governed by Art. 132—Vasudeva v. Srinivasa, 30 Mad. 426 (P.C.). But under sec. 67, clause (a) of the Transfer of Property Act, as amended by the T. P. Amendment Act (XX of 1929), the right of foreclosure has been taken away from English mortgages, so that Art. 147 can no longer apply to such mortgages They now stand on the same footing as simple mortgages allowing only a suit for sale, and the only Article applicable to such a suit is Art. 132. But a suit on a English mortgage executed prior to 1st April 1929, date of T. P. Amendment Act, is outside the scope of the amendment by reason of the saving clause in sec. 63 of the Amending Act of 1929 and will therefore be governed by this Article—Fozmal v. Shridhar, 48 Bom.L.R. 327, A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 499, 227 I. C. 135; Saradindu v. Jaharlal, I.L.R. (1942) 1 Cal. 326, 74 C.L.J. 61, 46 C.W.N.

33, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 153. A mortgage which fulfills all the requirements of an English mortgage does not loose its character as English mortgage by insertion of a clause changing the date of payment in certain event and providing for payment by mortgagor of costs of insurance etc. A suit on such a mortgage is governed by this Article—Rajagapala v. Ramachandra, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 851, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 406, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 628.

As the only class of mortgage in which a suit for "foreclosure or sale" was allowed has now been deprived of the remedy of foreclosure, and there is no other class of mortgage in which such alternative relief is available, the words "or sale" should be omitted from this Article. It would then apply to suits for foreclosure under anomalous mortgages the terms of which expressly provided for foreclosure. As at present worded, this Article has no application to any kind of mortgage suit whatsoever.

634. Mortgage by conditional sale:—A suit to recover money due under a mortgage by conditional sale, or for foreclosure is governed by Art. 132, not by Art. 147—Sheoram Singh v. Babu Singh, 48 All. 302, 24 A.L.J. 295, A.I.R. 1926 All. 493, 94 I.C. 849; Balaram v. Mangta, 34 Cal. 941 (945) (S.B.).

635. Usufructuary mortgage:—A usufructuary mortgagee cannot institute a suit either for foreclosure or for sale. But if the usufructuary mortgagee does not obtain possession under the mortgage, a suit to recover the money by sale of the property (treating the mortgage as a simple mortgage) is governed by Art. 132, not by Art. 147—Rama Chandra v. Madhu, 21 Mad. 326 (332) (F.B.).

636. Equitable mortgage:—A suit to recover money due under an equitable mortgage is now provided by Article 132, Explanation, clause (c), newly added by the Transfer of Property Amendment Supplementary Act, XXI of 1929 and the period of limitation is 12 years. See Note 558 under Art. 132. The ruling in Manekji v. Rustomji, 14 Bom. 269 (272, 273), where it was held that the mortgagee by deposit of title-deeds had a right to sue for foreclosure or sale within 60 years under Art. 147, is no longer good law.

148. Against a mortgagee to redeem or to recover possession of immoveable property mortgaged.	Sixty years.	When the right to redeem or to recover possession accrues: Provided that all claims to redeem arising under instruments of mortgage of immoveable property situate in Lower Burma which had been executed before the first day of May, 1863, shall be governed by the rules of limitation in force in that State immediately before the same day.

637. Suits under this Article:—A right to officiate as priest at funeral ceremonies of Hindus is in the nature of immoveable property and a suit for redemption of such right therefore falls under this Article and not under Art. 145—Raghoo Pandey v. Kassey, 10 Cal. 73 (74).

Suit by purchaser from mortgagor:—A purchaser of the equity of redemption in part of the mortgaged property is entitled to redeem his portion of the property, within 60 years from the date of the mortgage. All persons who have stepped into the shoes of the mortgagor are mortgagors for all purposes, and this Article is applicable to a suit by a purchaser of the equity of redemption of a portion of the mortgaged property—Wazir Ali v. Ali Islam, 40 All. 683 (685). The mere fact that the mortgagees have been paying surplus profits for a period of 12 years to a person who was once the owner of part of equity of redemption should not be construed as taking away from the purchasers of the equity of redemption the right to redeem inherent in them under the provision of this Article—Pydivadu v. Suryanarayanaraju, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 384.

Suit against mortgagee's assigns:—A purchaser who purchases the mortgaged property from the mortgagee upon the representation and in the belief that it was an absolute interest that he was purchasing, is a transferee for valuable consideration, and a suit by the mortgagor to recover the property from such purchaser is governed by the shorter period of limitation provided by Article 134. (See Note 363 under Article 134). But where the purchaser has knowledge that he was purchasing the limited interest of a mortgagee, i.e., where he simply takes a transfer of the mortgage, a suit against him is governed by Art. 148, not by Art. 134. See Drigpal v. Kallu, 37 All. 660; Muthu v. Kambalinga, 12 Mad. 316; Bhagwan Shahai v. Bhagwan Din, 9 All. 97. The burden of proving that the transferee had notice of the mortgage and that he was estopped from denying the mortgagor's title is on the plaintiff—Chunai v. Ramprasad, A.I.R. 1951 All. 167 (F.B.).

Redemption of usufructuary mortgage:—In a suit for redemption of an usufructuary mortgage the defence was that an order of the Debt Conciliation Board discharging the debt amounted to the satisfaction of the debt. It was held that the discharge of debt by operation of law did not amount to a redemption of the mortgage and was governed by this Article—Mulchand v. Mt. Ganga, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 366, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 68, 1949 N.L.J. 539.

Redemption of occupancy holding:—A mortgage of an occupancy holding is not permitted by law, but by entering into possession as mortgagee and continuing in such possession for more than 12 years, the mortgagee can only prescribe a title for the limited interest of a usufructuary mortgagee. A suit by the mortgagor against the mortgagee for possession of the holding is a suit for redemption under this Article and time runs from the date of the mortgage—Maha Mangal v. Kishum, A.I.R. 1927 All. 311, 100 I.C. 346.

Second suit for redemption:—Where a mortgagor brought a suit for redemption and obtained a decree, and about twenty-three years after the date of the decree, applied to execute the decree and prayed that this application be treated as a suit, held that as the decree was not executed, the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee did not cease to exist between the parties, and the present application though barred under sec. 48, C. P. Code, could be treated under sec. 47, C. P. Code as a fresh suit for redemption, if the period prescribed by Article 148 had not been expired—Hanmant v. Shidu Shambhu, 47 Bom. 692 (695). A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 300, 25 Bom L.R. 358, 72 I.C. 556. See also Muhamadi Begum v. Tufail, 48 All. 17, A.I.R. 1926 All. 20, 92 I.C. 260. But where the right to sue becomes barred under the old Act it can not be revived. Thus where a mortgage was executed in 1791 and a suit for redemption was brought in 1849 and the mortgagee's pleader filed a statement of account of the mortgaged property and in 1863 in another suit the existence of mortgage and the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee was admitted as subsisting in the memorandum of second appeal signed by the pleader for the mortgagee, it was held in a suit for redemption brought in 1933 that the said acknowledgments though good under the Act of 1908 were invalid under the Act of 1859 and the right to redeem became barred after 60 years from 1791, the date of mortgage and it can not be revived even though the acknowledgments would have been good under the Act of 1908 which governs the suit—Yoonus v. Sheikh Hassen, I.L.R. (1941) Bom. 260, 43 Bom.L.R. 194, A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 178. Under sec. 22, Mewar Limitation Act, corresponding to Art. 148 of the Limitation Act, an application for execution of a redemption decree passed prior to the said Act is required to be filed with six months of the introduction of the Act. An application for execution of redemption decree filed after the expiration of that period is barred by limitation—Khubilal v. Hiralal, A.I.R. 1951 Raj. 121.

Claim for surplus profits received by mortgagee:—See 26 C.W.N. 123, cited in Note 452 under Article 105.

Suit by puisne mortgagee to redeem prior mortgage:—As to whether Art. 148 or Art. 132 applies to a suit by a puisne mortgagee to redeem a prior mortgage, where both mortgagees have brought suits on their respective mortgages and purchased the property in execution of their decrees, see 47 M.L.J. 602, 14 C.W.N. 439, 5 Pat. 513, 14 Lah. 596, and other cases cited in Note 553 under Art. 132, where the subject has been fully discussed. When the suit is not a suit for enforcing payment of money, but a suit by the second mortgagee for redemption of the prior mortgage, the suit is governed by this Article and not Art. 132—Am. A. Firm v. Marudachalam, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 284, A.IR. 1948 Mad. 412, 1948 M.W.N. 238.

Suit against redeeming co-mortgagor:—Prior to the amendment of sec. 95, Transfer of Property Act by the Amendment Act of 1929 it was held that a co-mortgagor redeeming the entire mortgaged property and obtaining possession merely acquired a charge under sec. 95, Transfer of Property Act. and did not become a "mortgagee" within the meaning of Article 148; and a suit brought against the redeeming co-mortgagor by the other co-mortgagors to recover their shares of the property was not a suit for redemption under Article 148 but a suit for recovery of possession under Art. 144—Vasudeb v. Balaji. 26 Bom. 500 (503); Ramchandra v. Sadashiv, 11 Bom. 422; Ramchandra v. Ganesh, 57 Bom. 134; Faki Abas v. Faki Nurudin, 16 Bom. 191; Munia v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 650 (657); Purna Chandra v. Barada, 46 Cal. 111 (116); Jaikishan v. Budhanand, 38 All. 138 (145); Ram Narayan v. Ram Deni, 6 P.L.J. 680, 63 I.C. 282 (283); Narain Das v. Saroj Din, 27 P.L.R. 65, 92 I.C. 980, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 238; Jhandu v. Nur Mahomed, 32 P.L.R. 622; Ganda Ram v. Munshi Ram, 32 P.L.R. 649; Ram Agre v. Ram Udit, 8 O.W.N. 637; Wajihuddin v. Ahmad Ashraf, 2 Luck. 618, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 347; Ma Ekhin v. Mahomed, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 65, 176 I.C. 923.

On the other hand, it was held in Ashjaq v. Wazir, 14 All. 1 (F.B.), Khiali Ram v. Taik Ram, 38 All. 540 (547), Nura Bibi v. Jagat, 8 All. 295 (300), Saiduddin v. Ratanlal, 32 All. 160 (162); Wazir Ali v. Ali Islam, 40 All. 683 (685); Mukh Narain v. Ram Lochan, 19 Pat. 938, 189 I.C. 855, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 147; Raghavendra Charya v. Vaman, 45 Bom.L.R. 253, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 191; Kishen Gopal v. Abdul Latif, 15 Luck. 175, 1939 O.W.N. 1045, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 97, that a suit against the redeeming co-mortgagor fell under Article 148 (and not under Article 144) on the ground that the redeeming co-mortgagor stood in the shoes of the mortgagee, and the period of limitation ran from the date when the original mortgage became redeemable and not from the time when the defendant redeemed the mortgaged property.

But after the amendment of secs. 92 and 95 of the Transfer of Property Act effected by the T. P. Amendment Act XX of 1929, the redeeming co-mortgagor is subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee, and therefore a suit referred to above is now a suit for redemption under Art. 148.

Application under Punjab Restriction of Mortgaged Lands Act:— If in the period intervening after the coming into force of the Punjab Restriction of Mortgaged Lands Act, the redemption of a mortgage become barred under this Article, an application under sec. 4 of the Act is not maintainable—Ram Rakha v. Roda, A.I.R. 1951 Punj. 125.

Subsequent mortgagee subrogated to rights of prior mortgagee:— A subsequent mortgagee subrogated to the rights of the prior mortgagee by paying him off is a mortgagee within the meaning of Art. 148—Ramdayal Sen v. Chakrapani, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 60.

638. Suits not under this Article:—

Suit for annulment of mortgage and for possession:—A redemption suit is one in which the plaintiff accepting the position of a mortgagor or of a person interested in the equity of redemption asks for possession in accordance with the terms of the mortgage on payment of the amount due under it. But where the plaintiffs do not admit the validity of a mortgage executed by their father as the manager of joint family, and ask for possession not in accordance with but contrary to the terms of the mortgage, the suit is not one for redemption, but for possession after setting aside the father's alienation and falls under Article 126—Chokhey Singh v. Hardeo, 24 O.C. 330, A.I.R. 1921 Oudh 196 (197), 64 I.C. 757.

Suit for possession from auction purchaser in mortgage sale:—A suit contemplated by this Article is a suit for recovery of possession from a mortgagee as such. A simple mortgagee, who enters into possession by way of purchase of the equity of redemption, cannot be said to be in possession as a mortgagee. So a suit by a person in whom the equity of redemption was entirely vested for possession against a simple mortgagee auction purchaser in execution of the mortgage decree in which the plaintiff was not impleaded as a party is not governed by this Article—Batuk v. Rudra, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 206.

Invalid sale of equity redemption:—Where a mortgagee in possession gave the mortgaged property in lease to the mortgagor, and in execution of a decree against the mortgagor for arrears of rent in respect of the lease, attached the mortgaged property and brought it up to sale in contravention of sec. 99 (old), Transfer of Property Act, and purchased it himself, the sale is voidable and not void, and the mortgagor cannot successfully maintain a suit for redemption of the property without first getting the sale set aside (Art. 12). Even if in such a case the mortgagee-purchaser is treated as a trustee of the equity of redemption for the mortgagor, the suit by the mortgagor cannot be regarded as a suit for redemption under Article 148, but a suit to enforce a trust under Article 120—Uttam v. Rajkrishna, 47 Cal. 377 (396) (F.B.), 24 C.W.N. 229.

Suit on subsequent agreement:—Where after the expiration of the term of a mortgage, the mortgagor and mortgagee agreed that the mortgagee should continue in absolute possession for a fixed term in satisfaction of the debt and then restore the property free from the mortgage lien; it was held that the agreement was distinct from the original mortgage, and was not intended to be a mortgage but a conveyance for a term of years, and a suit to recover the property does not fall under this Article but must be brought within 12 years from the expiration of the term stipulated in the agreement—Gopal v. Desai, 6 Bom. 674 (680).

Suit for accessions:—Where a mortgagor after redemption sues to take over accessions made by the mortgagee, the suit is not one really for redemption. The redemption being already completed, the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee no longer subsists, and the subsequent suit for accessions is not a suit against a 'mortgagee' under this Article but a suit for possession under Article 144—Khudadad v. Girdhari, 163 P.W.N. 1917, 42 I.C. 468.

Suits under U. P. Debt Redemption Act:—A property comprised in a usufructuary mortgage more than 60 years old was sought to be recovered on the ground that by virtue of the help afforded by the U. P. Debt Redemption Act the whole of the mortgage money had been paid off. On a plea that it was barred by this Article, it was held that the suit is not governed by this Article for the right to recover possession did not arise until the Court determined the question of the mortgage money being paid off and when that was done, the suit was really a suit to recover possession against the defendant as trespasser—Ram Prasad v. Bishambar, 1946 A.L.J. 175, A.I.R. 1946 All. 400, 227 I C. 541. But the same High Court has dissented from this case in a subsequent case and has held that an application under sec. 12 of the said Act filed more than sixty years from the date of the mortgage, is barred under this Article—Ram Palhawan v. Ummedi, A.I.R. 1952 All. 300. See also, Shafiq Uddin v. Lakhan, 1949 A.L.J. 423, A.I.R. 1950 All. 60.

Adverse possession by mortgagee:—See Note 614 under Art. 144. This Article would apply to a case where the right to redeem or to recover possession is still in tact. But where the mortgagee has acquired the right of full owner by adverse possession for more than 12 years, there is no equity of redemption outstanding on which this Article can operate—Markanda v. Naidu, 26 Pat. 717.

639. Interest:—The mortgagee is entitled to interest for the whole period. Where interest is a charge on the property, the mortgagor cannot get a decree for redemption without paying all the money (principal and interest) for which the property sought to be redeemed is a security. The mere fact that if the mortgagee as plaintiff had brought a suit for recovery of interest, he could not recover interest for more than six years or 12 years before that suit, would not preclude the mortgagee from claiming (as a defendant) interest for the whole period, in a suit for redemption brought by the mortgagor. The law of limitation does not apply to a plea raised in defence—Akbar v. Ragnandan, 8 P.L.R. 1921, 57 I.C. 348 (349); Kamta v. Bishambar, 147 P.R. 1890 (F.B.); Hoshnakmal v. Sohna Mal, 114 P.R. 1894; Ghasita v. Ishar, 8 P.R. 1890. As to post diem interest, see Note "interest after due date" under Art. 116.

640. Latches:—The mortgagee can exercise his right of redemption at any time within the period of 60 years which the law allows him under this Article, and no Court of Justice would be justified in diminishing that period on the ground of his latches in the prosecution of his rights—Juggernath Sahoo v. Syed Shah Mahomed Hossein, 23 W.R. 99 (P.C.); Pokhpal v. Bishan, 20 All. 115 (117); Kishori Mohan v. Ganga Babu, 23 Cal. 228 (237). If the right of action is subject to a statutory limitation, latches does not have the effect of shortening the term within which the plaintiff can sue. A party cannot be said to be in delay because he takes advantage of the full period which the law allows and does not bring his action until that period is on the point of expiring. Lightwood, p. 254.

641. Starting point of limitation:—The right of redemption and the right of foreclosure are co-extensive. Ordinarily, and in the absence of a special condition entitling the mortgagor to redeem during the term for which the mortgage is created, the right of redemption can only arise on the expiration of the specified period—Bakhtawar

Begum v. Husaini, 36 All. 195 (199) (P.C.); Vadju v. Vadju, 5 Bom. 22; Husaini v. Husain, 29 All. 471 (473); Raghubar v. Budh Lal, 8 All. 95 (98); Tirugnana Sambandha v. Nallatambi, 16 Mad. 486 (489); Seeti Kutti v. Kunhi Pathumma, 40 Mad. 1040 (1062); Brown v. Cole, 14 Sim. 427; Shib Narain v. Chitru, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 389, 4 D.L.R. 151 (Simla). Sec. 2 of Bengal Reg. 1 of 1798 does not authorise the mortgagor to redeem at any time when a specific date is fixed for redemption—Khunkhun v. Mahabir, 1948 A.L.J. 90, A.I.R. 1948 All. 261 (F.B.). But see Asharfi v. Zamin, I.L.R. (1939) All. 990, 1939 A.L.J. 1127, A.I.R. 1940 All. 29. In Bhagwat v. Parshad Singh, 10 All. 602 (609), Rose Ammal v. Rajarathnammal, 23 Mad. 33 (35, 36) and Sri Setrucherla v. Sree Raja Varicherla, 2 Mad. 314 (316) it has been held that there is no general rule of law which precludes a mortgagor from redeeming a mortgage before the expiry of the term for which the mortgage was intended to be made. But these decisions are no longer correct, in view of the authoritative pronouncement of the Judicial Committee in Bakhtawar Begum v. Husaini Khanum, supra, and by reason of the recent amendment of sec. 60, Transfer of Property Act (by the amendment Act XX of 1929). But there is nothing in law to prevent the parties from making a provision that the mortgagor may discharge the debt at any time during the specified period and take back the property. So, where a usufructuary mortgage deed provided that the mortgage was for 9 years, but the mortgagor would be entitled to get back the property whenever the mortgage money would be satisfied out of the usufruct or paid by the mortgagor, whether before or after the stipulated time of 9 years, and it happened that the mortgage debt was satisfied by the usufruct in three years after the mortgage, it was held that time ran from the satisfaction of the mortgage debt, i.e., from the end of the third year and not after the expiration of 9 years—Bakhtawar Begum v. Husaini, 36 All. 195 (199) (P.C.).

Where a mortgage by conditional sale provided that if at any time within seven years from the date of the mortgage the vendors would pay a stated sum to the vendee, the latter would reconvey, it was held that the time for a suit for redemption did not begin to run until after the expiration of the seven years, as it was not obligatory upon the mortgagors to pay the money before that time—Kalka Prosad v. Bhuiyan Din, 31 All. 300 (303). So also where there is a term in the mortgage bond that if money be not paid within the period mentioned therein, the mortgagee can enter into possession of the mortgaged property, the period of limitation for redemption will start from the date fixed for payment—Mohammed Khan v. Mohammed Salim, 1951 A.L.J. 174, A.I.R. 1951 All. 392.

Where a usufructuary mortgage provides for the mortgagee paying himself the debt (both principal and interest) from the rents and profits of the estate and for the surrender of possession when the debt is so paid off, and no time is fixed for redemption, the mortgagor is not entitled to bring a suit for redemption before the mortgage debt is wholly satisfied out of the rents and profits—Tirugnana Sambandha v. Nallatambi, 16 Mad. 486 (490). But where a usufructuary mortgage provides that the profits are to be taken by the mortgagee in lieu of interest only, and that the mortgagor would be entitled to redeem and obtain possession on payment of the principal sum, and no date for redemption is specified, the right to redeem the mortgage arcrues to the mortgagor immediately from the date of execution of the mortgage—Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 35 All. 227 (230) (P.C.). If there was an express provision in a usufructuary mortgage that the mortgage was redeemable at any time at the will of the mortgagor, the mortgagor's right to redeem accrued on the date of the mortgage—Anwar Husain v. Lalmir, 26 All. 167 (171). In case of a lekha mukhi mortgage (a usufructuary mortgage by which the land is made over to the mortgagee who has to look to its produce for the payment of his debt, principal and interest, and in which the mortgagor undertakes no personal responsibility, and the mortgagee is not entitled to sue for the debt), the right to redemption accrues immediately from the date of execution of the mortgage, and time runs from that date—Khudu Lal v. Fazil, 1 Lah. 89 (90); Dittu Mal v. Ilahi, 28 P.L.R. 123, 101 I.C. 549, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 828.

If there is an acknowledgment of the mortgage by the mortgagee, the period of 60 years will run from the date of such acknowledgment—Vithu v. Keshav, 6 Bom.L.R. 38; Anwar v. Lalmir, 26 All. 167 (172).

But a payment of interest by the mortgagor or the receipt of the profits of the mortgaged property by the mortgagee does not extend the period of redemption, though it will extend the period in respect of the mortgagee's suit to bring the property to sale—Anwar v. Lalmir, 26 All. 167 (169); Kallu v. Halki, 18 All. 295; Bhagwan v. Madhab, 46 Bom. 1000, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 356, 70 I.C. 906. See Note 204 under sec. 20.

Burden of proof:—In a suit for redemption of a mortgage the burden is on the mortgagor and not on the mortgagee to prove that the claim is within time as prescribed by this Article—Suraj v. Rang Bahadur, A.I.R. 1950 All. 88. The mortgagor is required to prove positively that there is a subsisting mortgage which he is entitled to redeem and that must be proved by the actual proof that the mortgage was executed within the period of limitation or by proof of a valid acknowledgment which would save limitation—Sonkara v. Kuttani, 1940 M.W.N. 446, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 639.

149. Any suit by or on behalf of the Central Government or any State Government except a suit before the Supreme Court in the exercise of its original jurisdiction.	Sixty years.	When the period of limitation would begin to run under this Act against a like suit by a private person.

Amendment:—The words "the Secretary of State for India in Council" and the words "Secretary of State, the Crown Representative" were omitted by the Indian Independence Act (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinance) Order, 1948; the words "the Central Government or any Provincial Government" were inserted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937; the words "except a suit" were inserted by sec. 2 of the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act, 1937 (XIV of 1937); and the words "Supreme Court" and "State Government" have been substituted for the words "Federal Court" and "Provincial Government" by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950 issued under the Constitution of India.

642. Scope of Article:—Under the Act of 1871, this Article referred to suits "in the name of" the Secretary of State but in the Acts of 1877 and 1908, the words "in the name of" have been changed into "by or on behalf of." Under the Act of 1871, this Article applied to suits by private persons for their own benefit in the name of the Secretary of State; under the Acts of 1877 and 1908 such suits will no longer fall under this Article. The present Article applies only to suits which are brought for the benefit of or on behalf of the Government and it would seem as if it was not necessary that the suit should be actually in the name of the Secretary of State—Starling, 5th Edn., p. 446.

It is inapplicable to suits brought by persons claiming through Government, as for instance, to suits by persons claiming title under pattas from Government—Jaga- dindra v. Hemanta, 32 Cal. 129 (138) (P.C.); Madhava v. Lokenatha, 5 M.L.T. 107, 2 I.C. 314; Moolchand v. Amarnath, 140 P.L.R. 1917, 39 I.C. 971; or to suits by purchasers from Government—Kuthaperumal v. Secy. of State. 30 Mad. 245 (248); Annada Mohan v. Kina Das, 28 C.W.N. 66, 81 I.C. 675, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 394; Nawab Bahadur v. Gopinath, 13 C.L.J. 625, 6 I.C. 392; Governor General in Council v. Awadhoot, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 246, 1946 N.L.J. 223, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 228, 223 I C. 486. Therefore, where a purchaser of land from Government sued to recover possession within 60 years but more than 12 years from the commencement of adverse possession, though within 12 years from his purchase, held that the suit was barred under Article 144, Article 149 not applying to the case. The period of limitation was 12 years, and the period of adverse possession which had already run against the plaintiff's predecessor-in-title (Government) should be reckoned against the plaintiff—Annada Mohan v. Kina Das, supra. Even if the plaintiff (assignee from Government) in such a suit joins the Secretary of State as a co-plaintiff, the period of limitation for a suit for possession will not be sixty years under this Article, but 12 years—Pullanapalli Sankaran v. Vittil Thatakat, 28 Mad. 505 (506). In Kylashbashini v. Gocoolmoni, 8 Cal. 230 (235), there was a dictum that a person claiming under Government (e.g., an auction-purchaser from Government) could sue within 60 years under this Article. But this is no longer good law in view of the Privy Council decision in 32 Cal. 129 cited above.

A Municipality is not entitled to claim the benefit of this Article. So, where a suit is brought by a Municipal Committee for possession of land belonging to Government but vested in the committee for management the committee cannot take advantage of 60 years' limitation allowed by this Article—Mehar v. Municipal Committee, 50 P.L.R. 4, A I.R. 1948 Lah. 153 (F.B.) (overruling Labha Singh v. Municipal Committee, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 960, 153 I.C. 964). The reason is that, when the Government has ceded a land to a Municipal Corporation, it cannot, with the land, cede any right or privilege inherent in the sovereign power. Consequently the Municipality cannot, in a suit brought by it, claim the benefit of sixty years' rule, but the ordinary rule of limitation will apply—Municipal Commissioners v. Sarangopani, 19 Mad. 154 (156). That is, the learned Judges in this case laid down that after the Government had once vested a land in the Municipality, the Government would lose all right of proprietorship in the land by virtue of adverse possession of the land by a trespasser for the period of 30 years under Article 146A (or 12 years under Article 142, before Article 146A was enacted). But this view has been dissented from by Bhashyam Ayyangar, J. in Sundaram v. Municipal Council, 25 Mad. 635, where his Lordship has laid down that a Municipal Council does not, by the vesting of a street in it, become the full owner of the site or soil on which the street exists, and that although adverse possession by a trespasser for 30 years (Art. 146A) may extinguish the right of the Municipality over the land, the title of the Crown to the land will not be lost until the trespasser has had possession for 60 years, (Article 149).

This Article applies only to suits brought by or on behalf of Government; it does not apply to a suit brought by a private person against the Government—Secretary of State v. Bavotti, 15 Mad. 315 (318). The test for the applicability of this Article is whether the property or the benefit sought in the suit belongs wholly and solely to the State—Bank of Baghelkhand v. Ram Prasad, A.I.R. 1954 V.P. 1.

Where certain lands belonging to a railway company are transferred by the railway company to a person for cultivation under a licence a suit by the railway company and the Secretary of State for ejectment of the licencee and for rent and mesne profits is governed by Art. 149 and not Art. 109 or 116—B. N. W. Ry. Co. Ld. v. Janki Prasad, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 362.

This Article applies only to suits and not to appeals or applications; appeals by the Crown against acquittals are especially provided for in Article 157;. and applications by Government are subject to the same period of limitation which is applicable to a private individual—Appaya v. Collector, 4 Mad. 155 (156). An application by Government under the Bengal Resumption of Revenue Regulation (II of 1819) is not a suit, so as to make Art. 149 applicable—Mahabannissa v. Secretary of State, 53 Cal. 561, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1064, 98 I.C. 334.

643. Suits under this Article:—Where a zemindar sold a ghatwali mehal as a mal mehal, and not merely his right to receive the quit rent from the ghatwal, and the vendee in collusion with the former ghatwal granted him a mokurari tenure, thus changing the nature of the tenure from a ghatwali to a mal tenure, a suit by the Government to maintain its own nominee in possession of the land as ghatwal falls under this Article—Petumber v. Jugurnath, 18 W.R. 130 (131).

A suit by Government for possession of a plot of land encroached upon by the defendant falls under this Article, and is in time if brought within 60 years from the date of the encroachment—Ranchodlal v. Secretary of State, 35 Bom. 182 (189), 9 I.C. 768.

A suit for possession by Government under sec. 9, Specific Relief Act is governed by Article 149, and not by Art. 3—Secy. of State v. Dinshaw, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 275, 87 I.C. 1002.

A suit for resumption of lakhiraj land by Government falls under this Article and will be barred if the defendant was in possession of the land for more than sixty years before suit. A similar suit by a private person would be governed by Article 130. See Koylashbasini v. Gocoolmani, 8 Cal. 230 (236).

A suit by Government to assess revenue on land alleged to be lakhiraj is subject to the limitation under this Article and would be barred if the owner can prove 60 years' possession of it without payment of any revenue—Annada v. Secretary of State, 43 Cal. 973 (979).

644. Adverse possession against Government:—The period of limitation against the Government being 60 years, a person can convert his possession into an absolute title as against the Government, only by proving possession for 60 years. Possession which falls short of this period is insufficient to create a title. Mere evidence of long possession is not sufficient—Kodoth Ambu Narayan v. Secretary of State, 47 Mad. 572 (582) (P.C.); Krishna v. Singaravelu, 48 Mad. 570, 91 I.C. 130, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 780; Abdul Wahid v. Secretary of State, 7 Lah. 210, 96 I.C. 457, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 437; Secretary of State v. Challikani Rama Rao, 39 Mad. 617 (629) (P.C.); Bank of Upper India v. Secretary of State, 33 All. 229 (232). The possession of a person for a period of 12 years, though it would be sufficient to bar a claim by any other party, would not exclude a claim by the Crown to recover what could be shown to be Government property—Secretary of State v. Durbijoy, 19 Cal. 312 (321) (P.C.).

For adverse possession, it is sufficient that the possession is overt and without any attempt at concealment so that the person against whom time is running ought, if he exercises due vigilance, to be aware of what is happening. And the same rule applies to adverse possession against the Crown. If the rights of the Crown have been openly usurped, it cannot be heard to plead that the fact was not brought to its notice. The Limitation Act is indulgent to the Crown in one respect only, namely, in requiring a much longer period of adverse possession than in the case of a subject; otherwise there is no discrimination in the statute between the Crown and the subject as regards the requisites of adverse possession—Secretary of State v. Debendra Lal Khan, 61 Cal. 262 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 285, 147 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 23 (25). In this case the plaintiff was held to have acquired a prescriptive right of fishery in a large navigable river by adverse possession of the fishery, by operation of Art. 149 and sec. 28.

As long as a property remains in cantonments, it must be regarded as land held for Government under the Government regulations and under the control of the military authorities; and no person can acquire title thereto by adverse possession. It is only when the property is handed over to the civil authorities that adverse possession may be set up for the first time—Bank of Upper India v. Secretary of State, 33 All. 229 (231, 232).

In case of forests and immemorial waste lands, where the presumption is in favour of ownership of Government, the acts of adverse possession relied on by the claimant must be acts of undoubted ownership, such as the granting of leases to tenants for cultivation and the cutting of valuable trees for sale, and not such paltry acts as taking firewood, leaves and twigs and small trees and other acts which the Government permits in forests and waste lands for the benefit of the adjacent cultivation—Secretary of State v. Krishnayya, 28 Mad. 257 (298).

Where it was proved that a pucca thatched building had been erected and was in existence for a period of over 60 years and that the plaintiff had used the same openly for the purpose of tethering cattle and storing hay, etc., and it also appeared that the site had been enclosed by a kalli fence all round; held that the acts of user were sufficient to constitute title by adverse possession. Held also that the fact that the Government had issued patta for some stray and scattered trees on the suit land and that it had levied assessment for the same for some years past from the plaintiff cannot alter the exclusive possession of the plaintiff into mixed possession—Secretary of State v. Muthukumara, 25 L.W. 349, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 456 (458), 101 I.C. 96.

Where a devdasi service inam consists of the grant of the land itself and not of the melwaran alone, the effect of the enfranchisement of the service inam and the issue of a fresh title deed in favour of the grantee is to extinguish the old title and create a new one in the grantee. In a suit for possession by the grantee against the defendant, the latter cannot rely on long possession which he held, when the service tenure subsisted. In order to succeed on the strength of prescriptive title, he must show that by adverse possession against the Government for sixty years prior to the enfranchisement and the grant of fresh title, he had acquired a prescriptive title to the service inam lands—Rasa Koundan v. Janoki, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 177. 1950 M.W.N. 447, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 333.

Presumption and burden of proof:—Where a suit was brought by the Crown for incorporating certain lands into a reserve forest under the Madras Forest Act, such lands being certain islands formed in the bed of the sea near the mouth of a tidal navigable river and within 3 miles from the main land, and the defendant pleaded that he had acquired a title to the property by adverse possession, held that the Crown was prima facie the owner of the islands (which were jungle lands) and the onus lay on the defendant to prove that he had acquired a title by adverse possession for more than 60 years; it does not lie on the Crown to shew that the defendant's adverse possession commenced within 60 years before the suit—Secretary of State v. Chellikani Rama Rao, 39 Mad. 617 (P.C.) (reversing Chellikani Rama Rao v. Secretary of State, 33 Mad. 1). In 33 Mad. 1 (4, 5), it was held by the Madras High Court that if the lands came into existence as lands capable of occupation more than 60 years prior to the notification under sec. 4 of the Madras Forest Act and the defendant could prove that he was in possession of these islands, say, for 20 years prior to the notification, the presumption would be that he was in possession for 60 years, and the burden would lie on the Crown to prove that it had a subsisting title by showing that the defendant's possession commenced or became adverse within the period of limitation, that is, within 60 years before the notification; it would not be necessary for the defendant to prove adverse possession for 60 years. But the Privy Council in 39 Mad. 617 (632, 633) overruled this view and remarked: "The objectors to afforestation (defendants) prefering claims are in the same position as persons bringing a suit for a declaration of their right.....and in such a suit the onus of establishing possession for the requisite period would lie on those persons.....The view of the High Court is erroneous ...It is an undisputed fact that these islands formed in the sea belonged to the Crown. That fact is fundamental; until adverse possession against the Crown is complete, that is, for the period of sixty years, that fundamental fact remains. And it is no part of the obligation of the Crown to fortify own fundamental right by any inquiry into possession or the acceptance of any onus on that subject."

In some earlier Madras cases it was held that the presumption under the Madras Forest Act was that all unoccupied land was at the disposal of the Government; but if the land was really occupied when a notification was published under sec. 4 of that Act, it would be a ground for presuming that the occupant was the prima facie owner and for shifting the onus to the Government. Thus, if the claimant started with an admitted possession and enjoyment for, say, 30 years, the onus was certainly shifted to the Government; the Government could not compel the claimant to prove 60 years' possession but must show a subsisting title of its own—Secretary of State v. Kota Bapanamma, 19 Mad. 165 (166); Secretary of State v. Bavotti, 15 Mad. 315 (317, 321). These cases must be deemed as overruled by the Privy Council in 39 Mad. 617, cited above. See the remarks of Walsh J. in Jaichand v. Girwar, 41 All. 669 (at p. 671).

In the district of Malabar, and in tracts admitted as part of it, there is no presumption that forest lands are the property of the Crown; consequently, it is incumbent on the Crown either to show possession of the proprietary rights claimed within 60 years, or if the defendants prove possession, to show that the possession of the defendants commenced or became adverse within 60 years before suit—Secretary of State v. Vira Rayan, 9 Mad. 175 (184). This case has been distinguished by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 39 Mad. 617 (632), owing to the peculiarity of Malabar law.

Where there is evidence both oral and documentary to show that the claimants had for a period beyond living memory or at least for fifty years uniformly asserted their rights to the forest tracts, and there was no evidence to prove that before the challenge which led to the present litigation there was any similar assertion of right on the part of the Government, the presumption was that the claimants were in possession for more than 60 years, and have acquired a title by prescription—Sivasubramaniya v. Secretary of State, 9 Mad. 285 (303, 307), affirmed by the Privy Council in Secretary of State v. Siva Subramania, 15 Mad. 101 (109).

In a suit against Government for possession of lands other than forest lands, if it is found that the plaintiff has proved possession for more than 12 years (say for 30 or 40 years) and the defendant (Crown) has failed to establish his title to the land or any possession within 60 years before suit, it will be presumed that the plaintiff has held possession for 60 years, and the burden will be thrown upon the defendant (Crown) to prove that he (Crown) has a subsisting title—Krishna Aiyar v. Secretary of State, 33 Mad. 173 (175). In the above Privy Council case (Secy. of State v. Chellikani Rama Rao, 39 Mad. 617) the lands were jungle lands, and the presumption was that the lands prima facie belonged to the Crown and the onus was thrown upon the claimants, but in this case (33 Mad. 173), the lands not being forest lands, no such presumption was made in favour of the Government.

Where the plaintiff and his predecessors-in-title have been in possession of the plaint land for more than thirty years, previous to the suit, the presumption is that they were in possession prior to that time also, unless it is proved on behalf of Government that the land was unoccupied land or land in the occupation of Government before. When possession for a certain period is shown, it will be open to a Court deciding the facts to presume that possession prior to that period was also in the party whose subsequent possession is proved—Narayana Pillai v. Secretary of State, 23 M.L.J. 162, 15 I.C. 257; Venkatarama v. Secretary of State, 33 Mad. 362.

Where it was found that certain hills (the property in dispute) were within the immemorial boundaries of the village of the claimant, and he was in actual possession of the hills, and on the other hand, there was on behalf of Government nothing to meet or contradict the above evidence as to the possession of the claimant, held that the claimant had made out a strong prima facie title backed up by possession, and it did not lie on him to prove adverse possession as against Government. It lay on the Government to establish their title, if any—Nawab Ajajuddin v. Secretary of State, 28 Mad. 69 (71).

Where it is admitted or proved that the title to the property lay with the Government, and the plaintiff sues for a declaration that he has by prescription become the owner of the property, the suit must fail unless the plaintiff is able to show that he has been in adverse possession for more than 60 years. Until that period has elapsed, the Government's right in the property is not lost by section 28—Abdul Waheb v. Secretary of State, 7 Lah. 210, 96 I.C. 447, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 437; Secretary of State v. Sreeramamurthi, 22 L.W. 546, 91 I.C. 179, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 125.

SECOND DIVISION: APPEALS.

150. Under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, (V of 1898) from a sentence of death passed by a Court of Session or by a High Court in the exercise of its Original Criminal jurisdiction.	Seven days.	The date of the sentence.

The words "or by a High Court in the exercise of its original Criminal jurisdiction" were added by sec. 8 of the Criminal Procedure Amendment Act, 1943 (26 of 1943).

* * * * * * *

Item No. 150A, was omitted by sec. 6 of the Criminal Law (Removal of Racial Discrimination) Act, 1949 (17 of 1949) with effect from the 6th April, 1949.

151. From a decree or order of any of the High Courts of Judicature at	Twenty days.	The date of the decree or order.

Fort William, Madras, and Bombay, or of the High Court of Punjab in the exercise of its original jurisdiction.

The words "Madras, Bombay, Lahore and Rangoon" were substituted by Act 8 of 1930 and the words "and Lahore" were submitted for "Lahore and Rangoon" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937. The words "and Bombay or of the High Court of East Punjab" were substituted for the words "Bombay and Lahore" by the Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order, 1948 and the word 'Punjab' was subtituted for the words 'East Punjab' by A.O. 1950.

645. The date of the decree is the date on which judgment is pronounced (O. 20, r. 7, C. P. Code)—Ramey v. Broughton, 10 Cal. 652 (660); New Piecegoods Bazar Co. v. Jivazhai, 15 Bom.L.R. 681, 20 I.C. 537 (538). The decree of the High Court in its original side should bear the date as the judgment, and limitation should not be calculated from the date when the decree was signed by the Registrar—Hajee Abobuckar v. Official Assignee, 25 M.L.J. 560, 21 I.C. 545.

An appeal in a suit under the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869) falls under this Article—A. v. B. 22 Bom. 612.

This Article is applicable to an appeal against the judgment or order of a single judge passed in exercise of his jurisdiction under Article 226 of the Constitution of India—Chairman, Budge Budge Municipality v. Mongru Mia, A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 433 (S.B.)

The 'decree or order' includes a 'judgment' in the sense in which that word is used in the Letters Patent (Rangoon); therefore the period of limitation for an appeal under clause 13 of the Letters Patent from a judgment of the High Court (original side) is 20 days as prescribed by this Article—J. N. Surty v. T. S. Chettiar Firm, 4 Rang. 265, 98 I.C. 417, A.I.R. 1947 Rang. 20; Ariff v. Perumal, 5 Bur.L.J. 75, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 143, 98 I.C. 689.

The duty to file a requisition for drawing up a decree in the original side of the High Court is primarily cast in the plaintiff, and where he has filed the requisition within 4 days (according to High Court Rules) the period required by the plaintiff for drawing up the decree should be excluded in favour of the defendant-appellant in computing the period of limitation for his appeal against the decree, if he has been otherwise diligent. And the defendant cannot be said to be wanting in diligence in not having insisted upon the decree being filed sooner, when the plaintiff was taking unnecessary time in getting the decree drawn up; because, when the requisition for drawing up the decree has been filed by the plaintiff, the defendant is not called upon to interfere in the process of the drawing up of the decree—Sambhu Nath v. Gopi Lal, 56 Cal. 709, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 734 (735), 121 I.C. 307. For other cases in which the time taken in getting the decree prepared in accordance with the practice of the Original Side has or has not been deducted in computing the period of limitation for filing an appeal, see Beni Madhab v. Matungini, 13 Cal 104 (F.B.); In the goods of Pashupati, 59 Cal. 1215 (F.B.), 36 C.W.N. 469 (477) (overruling Nibaran Chandra v. Martin & Co., 32 C.L.J. 127); Pramatha v. Lee, 49 Cal. 999 (P.C.); Kamruddin v. M. N. Mitter, 52 Cal. 342. This subject has been fully discussed in Note 128 under sec. 12.

152.	Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, (V of 1908) to the Court of a District Judge.	Thirty days.	The date of the decree or order appealed from.

646. This Article must be read with O. XX, r. 7, C. P. Code, and the "date of the decree" for the purpose of calculating the time for appeal must be taken to be the day on which the judgment is pronounced—Narayanswamy v. Krishnasami, 25 I.C. 67 (Mad.).

Where a decree is amended after it is passed, the period of limitation will run from the date of the amended decree, on the analogy of clause (4) of Art. 182—Aditya Kumar v. Abinash, 34 C.W.N. 1002 (1007), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 323; Vishwanathan v. Ramanathan, 24 Mad. 646 (649); Amar Chandra v. Asad Ali, 32 Cal. 908 (909); Har Kishen v. Lahore Bank Ld., 64 P.R. 1919, 51 I.C. 712 (714). But in some other cases it has been held that it is not every amendment made in a decree which will enable the appellant to count the period of limitation from the date of the amended decree. If the grounds on which the appeal is based are intimately connected with the amendment of the decree, or if the grounds of appeal are directed against the decree is so far as it has been amended, the period of limitation for appeal will be counted from the date of the amendment. But if the grounds of appeal have no relation to the amendment, the period of limitation will run from the date of the decree and not from the date of the amendment—Brojo Lal v. Tara Prasanna, 3 C.L.J. 188; Soudamini v. Nabalak, 35 C.W.N. 251 (253), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 578; Deep Singh v. Raghunath, 7 C.W.N. 882, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 463 (465); Sheikh Golab v. Janki Koer, 5 P.L.J. 472 (478) (F.B.), 57 I.C. 236; Gajadhar v. Basant Lal, 43 All. 380; Janikumma v. Venkata, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 378, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 384, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 62; Venkata v. Sathiraju, I.L.R. (1946) Mad. 854, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 198, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 291, In a later case the Calcutta High Court has, however, expressed the opinion that the appellant is entitled to wait till the amendment before preferring his appeal, even though the amendment has no relation to the grounds upon which the decree is sought to be challenged in appeal—Nandalal v. Dasarathi, 59 Cal. 1052, 36 C.W.N. 218 (220, 221), A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 534 (dissenting from 3 C.L.J. 188). But in Kedar v. Gollam, 40 C.W.N. 83, 165 I.C. 53 the same High Court has held that in a case where the decree, or the judgment and decree are amended on an application under sec. 152 C. P. C., the judgment or decree is not superseded in the eye of law, such amendment does not give the appellant a fresh starting point of limitation for filing the appeal.

The date of the decree means the date on which the judgment is pronounced and not the date when the decree is signed—Kalimal v. Mohan, A.I.R. 1949 Assam. 23; Abdul v. Abdul, 47 P.L.R. 193, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 233; Shivan v. Radha, 196 I.C. 654, A.I.R 1941 Pesh. 74, Dagduba v. Abdul, A.I.R. 1954 Hyd. 104, and if the decree is signed on a date subsequent to the date of delivery of judgment, the period between the date of the judgment and the date of signing the decree shall not be excluded under sec. 12, unless the appellant has applied for a copy of the judgment and decree before the decree is signed—Parbati v. Bhola, 12 All. 79 (81, 82); Bechi v. Ahsanullah, 12 All. 461 (F.B.); Harish Chandra v. Chandpur Co., Ltd., 39 Cal. 766 (772); Jyotindra v. Lodna Colliery Co., 6 P.L.J. 350 (F.B.); Moung Po. v. Ma Lal, 7 Rang. 18, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 116; Topandas v. Manager, 5 S.L.R. 47, 10 I.C. 210; Khudadad v. Morio Khan, 9 S.L.R. 193, 34 I.C. 867; Dindayal v. Anopi, 22 N.L.R. 69, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 349. But a contrary view has been taken in several other cases, e.g., Ram Asray v. Sheonandan, 1 P.L.J. 573; Pondu v. Rajeshwar, A.I.R.

1924 Nag. 271; Sudhanshubhusan v. Mojho Bibi, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 732. See Note 127 under Art. 12.

The Nagpur High Court has laid down in another case that under ordinary conditions where the decree is drawn up within the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal, the limitation for filing an appeal must be counted from the day on which the judgment is pronounced; but where owing to the default of the Court the decree was drawn up 17 months after the judgment was pronounced, the period of limitation would run from the date of the decree and not from the date on which judgment was delivered —Pandu v. Rajeswar, 20 N.L.R. 131, 78 I.C. 996, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 271.

Under O. 20, rule 7, the decree shall bear the date on which the judgment is pronounced. Therefore if a judgment is written, signed and dated on the 17th January but is pronounced in open Court on the 10th February, the decree must bear the date of the 10th February, and limitation runs from that date. If the decree is dated 17th January, the date is wrong—Sagarmal v. Lachmisaran, 1 Pat. 771 (773), A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 129, 75 I.C. 879.

Where a Court gives judgment but refuses to give a decree till the successful party complies with a certain condition, the Court virtually postpones the decision of the suit. The effect of such an order is to pronounce a provisional judgment which does not become operative until the decree is prepared. The latter date is the date of the judgment as well as of the decree from which limitation runs. Where therefore a Court by its judgment directed that the decree was to be prepared only after a certain amount due as penalty was paid, and the decree was actually made three months after the judgment, on the day when the penalty was paid, held that the time commenced to run for the purpose of appeal from the date of the decree—Khudadad v. Moriokhan, 9 S.L.R. 193, 34 I.C. 867. See also Balarama v. Subbarama, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 360.

In appeals against execution proceedings where no formal order is drawn up in accordance with the judgment, the concluding portion of the judgment which embodies the order may be treated as an order against which the appeal is preferred. In such a contingency time will run from the date of judgment. Where, however, there is a judgment stating the grounds of decision and a separate order is also drawn up embodying the formal expression of the decision, the decree must be taken to be both the orders taken together and time for appeal must be computed from the date of the second order—Johuran v. Howrah Jute Mills Co., A.I.R. 1948 Cal. 134.

If an appeal is presented to a District Judge at his private house, after Court hours, on the last day of limitation, the Judge has jurisdiction to accept it (though he is not obliged to do so); if he accepts it the appeal must be deemed to have been presented in time—Thakur Din Ram v. Hari Das, 34 All. 482 (486) (F.B.); Mst. Lakshmi v. Mt. Tara, A.I.R. 1950 All. 104.

An appeal to the District Judge against the decree of a Revenue Court under the Agra Tenancy Act is governed by the procedure prescribed by the C. P. Code (vide sec. 193 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901) and is therefore governed by the rule of limitation prescribed by this Article—Ram Lal v. Amar Chand, 10 A.L.J. 535, 17 I.C. 653.

An appeal before the District Judge under Section 27 of the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act, 1949, cannot be treated as an appeal under the Civil Procedure Code within the meaning of this Article—Harendra v. Daulatmani, 62 C.W.N. 143.

153. Under the same Code	Thirty	The date of the order.

an order of a Subordinate Court refusing leave to appeal to the Supreme Court.

The words "the Supreme Court" were substituted for the words "His Majesty in Council" by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950.

647. This Article refers to an appeal under O. 3, rule 1, clause (v) of the C. P. Code, 1908, to the High Court from an order made by a subordinate Court refusing (under cl. 45, rule 6) to grant a certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Supreme Court.

154. Under the Code of Criminal Procedure 1898, (V of 1898) to any Court other than a High Court.	Thirty days.	The date of the sentence or order appealed from.

648. An application made to a Superior Court under sec. 195 (6) of the Criminal Procedure Code to revoke a sanction granted by an inferior Court is not an appeal coming under Article 154 or 155; and such applications are not governed by the rule of limitation provided by the Limitation Act—Bapu v. Bapu, 39 Mad. 750 (F.B.); Pachai v. Emperor, 40 Cal. 239; Punna v. Jamita, 1 Lah. 602. [The sanction provisions of sec. 195, Cr. P. Code have now been repealed.] So also, no question of limitation arises in respect of an application under sec. 520 of the Criminal Procedure Code—Ibrahim v. Emperor, A.I.R. 1946 N.L.J. 610, 225 I.C. 525.

In an appeal against complaint by Sub-Divisional Magistrate which was ordered to be withdrawn by the District Magistrate but was restored by the High Court, time for purposes of limitation, began to run from the date of the order of the High Court restoring the complaint—Nawab Jam v. Emperor, A.I.R. 1943 Sind 39; 44 Cr. L.J. 293, 204 I.C. 415 (F.B.)

Where a Court records a finding under sec. 476, Cr. P. Code that an enquiry should be made, such finding comes under the word "order" in Art. 154, and appeal against the order is governed by this Article. But limitation runs not from the date of recording the finding but from the time that a complaint is actually made as a result of that finding—Doga v. Devji, 52 Bom. 164, 30 Bom.L.R. 76, 29 Cr.L.J. 315 (316), A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 64. Time runs not from the date on which a Civil Court signs the complaint but from the date when it is actually filed—Labha Mal v. Wasawa, 29 P.L.R. 128, 29 Cr.L.J. 72. It may be that the appellant, may not know that a complaint has been filed till after the expiry of 30 days prescribed by this Article; but in such a case the Appellate Court may excuse the delay under sec. 5 if sufficient cause is made out—Doga v Devji, supra; See also Hakim Rai v. The State, A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 134 (F.B.).

An appeal to the District Judge under sec. 476B, Cr. P. Code, against an order of the Sub-Judge refusing to make a complaint under sec. 476, falls under this Article, and time runs from the date on which the Sub-Judge made the order refusing to take action under sec. 476—Chandra Kumar v. Mathuriya, 52 Cal. 1009, 29 C.W.N. 1035, 26 Cr.L.J. 1569 (1570). In Hamid Ali v. Madhusudan, 54 Cal. 355, 31 C.W.N. 281, A.I.R. 1927 Cal 284, there was a difference of opinion among the Judges as to whether the appeal was in the nature of a civil appeal or a criminal appeal; Chotzner, J. held that the appeal must be dealt with as an ordinary appeal under the Cr. P. Code, while Duval, J. was of opinion that the appeal must be treated as a miscellaneous civil appeal regulated by O. XLI, C. P. Code; but no question of limitation was raised in this case. The starting point of limitation for an appeal under sec. 476 B of the Criminal Procedure Code, is the date of the complaint, that is, the date on which it is signed, and not the date of its presentation to or receipt by the Magistrate—Narainḍas v. Emperor, I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 122, 209 I.C. 119, A.I.R. 1943 Sind. 157. The provisions of sec. 5 of the Limitation Act is applicable to such appeals—Bhikaji v. Sambhuram, 1938 N.L.J. 183.

155. Under the same Code to a High Court, except in the cases provided for by article 150 and article 157.	Sixty days.	The date of the sentence or order appealed from.

649. An appeal preferred to the High Court under the Extradition Act is not governed by the period of limitation prescribed by this Article which is restricted only to appeals under the Criminal Procedure Code—Hayes v. Christian, 15 Mad. 414 (415). An appeal to the High Court, under sec. 408 (b) Cr. P. Code, from a sentence exceeding 4 years passed by a Magistrate specially empowered is governed by the period of limitation prescribed by this Article—In re Abdulla, 2 Rang. 386. An appeal to the High Court against an order of a Civil Court (District Judge or Sub-Judge) making or refusing to make a complaint under sec. 195 or 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is not a civil appeal governed by the Civil Procedure Code, but a criminal appeal for which express provision is made under sec. 476 B of the Cr. P. Code, and the appeal being one "under the Criminal Procedure Code" the period of limitation is 60 days under Art. 155, and not ninety days under Art. 156—Rajani Kanta v. Bistoomoni, 46 C.L.J. 40, 104 I.C. 456, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 718 (719), 28 Cr.L.J. 840 (841); Sheo Prasad v. Sheo Bans, 24 A.L.J. 364, A.I.R. 1926 All. 211 (212), 93 I.C. 851. (See in this connection Hamid Ali v. Madhusudan, 54 Cal. 355, cited under Art. 154). In both the above cases (46 C.L.J. 40 and 24 A.L.J. 368) the appellant was granted an extension of time under section 5 as he had acted under a bona fide mistake of law in treating the appeal as a civil appeal governed by Art. 156. In a later Calcutta case, where there was an appeal to the High Court Division Bench against a complaint made by a single Bench under sec. 476 Cr. P. Code, the High Court did not decide whether Art. 151 or Art. 155 applied (i.e., whether it was a civil or criminal appeal), because in either case the appeal was within time—Ramjan v. Moolji, 56 Cal. 932, 33 C.W.N. 329 (332), 30 Cr.L.J. 974.

In an appeal to the High Court against an order directing a complaint to be made under sec. 476B, Cr. P. Code, time runs under this Article not from the date of the order directing that a complaint be drawn up but from the date of actually making the complaint—Fitzholmes v. Crown, 7 Lah. 77, 27 Cr.L.J. 1321 (1322), A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 54.

In cases coming under secs. 562 and 563 of the Criminal Procedure Code the proceedings fall into two parts as the sentence does not immediately follow the conviction, but that does not deprive the person convicted of the right given him by sec. 408 of appealing against either conviction only, or sentence only, or both. So a person against whom a conviction is recorded under sec. 562 and who is subsequently sentenced more than 60 days after the recording of the conviction, can appeal against the sentence if he does so within 60 days from the date of the sentence—Mohamed v. The King, 1940 Rang.L.R. 386, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 257.

Article 155 is not limited to appeals to the High Court from the Sessions Courts in the mofussil or from other Courts from which appeals to the High Court lie direct, but extends also to appeals to a Division Bench of the High Court from the order of a Judge presiding at the original Criminal Session of the High Court, under sec. 449 clause (c) of the Cr. P. Code—Thomas v. Emp., 53 Cal. 746, 27 Cr.L.J. 1304 (1305), A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1203; Gallagher v. Emp., 54 Cal. 52, 101 I.C. 657, 28 Cr.L.J. 481. If the appeal is barred by this Article, an application for leave to appeal under sec. 449 clause (c) of the Cr. P. Code is also barred, and an application for determination of the accused's status as to his being an European British subject under sec. 449 clause (c) read with sec. 443, Cr. P. Code, must be necessarily out of time—Thomas v. Emp. supra.

156. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, (V of 1908), to a High Court, except in the cases provided for by article 151 and article 153.	Ninety days.	The date of the decree or order appealed from.

650. Appeal under the C. P. Code:—Article 156 when it speaks of the Civil Procedure Code, is on the face of it speaking of a Code which relates to procedure and does not ordinarily deal with substantive rights, and the natural meaning of an 'appeal under the C. P. Code' appears to be 'an appeal governed by the C. P. Code so far as procedure is concerned.' Thus, an appeal to the High Court from the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon under the Burma Courts Act is, by virtue of sec. 97 of that Act, governed by the C. P. Code as regards procedure, and the period of limitation for such appeal is consequently governed by this Article—Aga Mahomed v. Cohen, 13 Cal. 221 (223, 224). There seems to be no good reason for holding that an "appeal under the C. P. Code" means only 'an appeal the right to prefer which is conferred by the Code itself.' On the other hand, an appeal the procedure with respect to which from its inception to its disposal is governed by the C. P. Code may rightly be spoken of as an appeal under the Code. Therefore, an appeal under the Land Acquisition Act, of which sec. 54 lays down that appeals from awards under that Act are governed as to their procedure from the date of the filing of the appeal to its disposal by the rules provided for in the C. P. Code, is governed by this Article, although in the Land Acquisition Act there is no allusion to this Article—Ramasami v. Deputy Collector of Madura, 43 Mad. 51 (55), 53 I.C. 405. Moreover it has been held in Manavikraman v. Collector of Nilgiris, 41 Mad. 943, 49 I.C. 27, 35 M.L.J. 110, that an appeal under sec. 54 of the Land Acquisition Act is to be treated as an appeal under sec. 98 of the C. P. Code. It has also been pointed out in Dropadi v. Hira Lal, 34 All. 496 (504), that there are several Acts, for example, the Succession Act, the Probate and Administration Act, and the Land Acquisition Act which make the C. P. Code applicable to the proceedings under those Acts, and give a right of appeal to the High Court but do not prescribe any period of limitation for the appeal; it has always been assumed that such appeals are appeals under the C. P. Code, and are governed by Article 156 of the Limitation Act —Ramasami v. Deputy Collector of Madura, 43 Mad. 51 (56), 53 I.C. 405.

A second appeal under section 27 of the Burma Courts Act is not subject to the limitation of time prescribed by this Article because that section gives a discretion to the Judicial Commissioner (High Court) under certain circumstances to admit a second appeal, and the period within which he may receive the appeal is also left to his discretion; to apply Art. 156 to such a case would be to curtail the discretion which is unfettered in this respect.—Mahamad Hosein v. Inodeen, 10 Cal. 946 (950).

Where an appeal directed against an appellate decree is presented with the certified copies of the judgment and decree appealed against within time allowed by this Article, no question of limitation arises if the certified copies of the trial Court's judgment and decree are not filed within the period of limitation—Brojendra v. Jana, I.L.R. (1946) 1 Cal. 396, 50 C.W.N. 213, A.I. R. 1947 Cal. 67.

Letters Patent Appeals are not appeals under the C. P. Code; they are governed by the special Rules of the several High Courts, and not by this Article. See Naubat Ram v. Harnam Das, 9 All. 115 (F.B.); In re Hurruck Singh, 11 W.R. 107; Hurruck Singh v. Toolsee Ram, 12 W.R. 548 (F.B.).

Section 19 (1) (g) of the Defence of India Act has the effect of excluding the application of the law of limitation to arbitration proceedings under that section, and an appeal arising out of an award of compensation made by the arbitrator under sec. 19 is not governed by the Limitation Act—Kollegal Silk Factories v. Province of Madras, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 490, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 378, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 39.

Date of decree:—See notes under Article 152.

Where a preliminary mortgage decree was passed ex parte but was subsequently set aside by the same Court within the appealable period, and therefore no appeal was thereafter competent to the defendant, but the High Court in revision restored the ex parte decree, the period of limitation for an appeal against the decree ran only from the date of the order of the High Court reviving the ex parte decree, and not from the date of the ex parte decree itself. The language of the third column should be so interpreted as to carry out the intention of the Legislature, that is to say, by dating the cause of action from a date on which the remedy is available to the party —Peer Ammal v. Nathusami, 54 Mad. 455, 60 M.L.J. 239, 130 I.C. 738, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 149.

The period of limitation begins to run from the date of the order appointing a guardian not conditional on furnishing security as the order becomes final on the date on which it is passed and not on the date on which the security is furnished—Mt. Amrati v. Bishamber, 41 P.L.R. 592, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 170.

157. Under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (V of 1898), from an order of acquittal.	Three months.	The date of the order appealed from.

651. This Article refers to an appeal by the Government under sec. 417 of the Cr. P. Code. The sixty days' rule prescribed by Article 155 does not apply to such appeals against acquittal—Empress v. Jaydulla, 2 Cal. 436 (438). The period of limitation has been changed to three months in place of six months by Act 26 of 1955, sec. 117 and Schedule thereto (w. e. f. 1. 1. 1956).

A complainant may apply for special leave to appeal from an order of acquittal to the High Court within a period of sixty days from the date of the order under the provisions of sub-sections 3 and 4 of s. 417, Cr. P. Code.

Justice, public interest, necessity and policy all require that appeals against acquittals should be preferred with all reasonable expedition possible, for there may be cases where a new trial may have to be ordered or further evidence to be taken, and the larger the interval that has elapsed since the investigation and trial, the greater is the inconvenience and difficulty, not only to get witnesses together but to obtain from them accurate or reliable testimony—Emp. v. Yakub Khan, 5 All. 253 (255); Emp. v. U San Win, 10 Rang. 312, 33 Cr L.J. 701.

The High Court may allow an appeal under this Article after the period of limitation has expired, for sufficient cause shown under sec. 5. See Government Pleader, Appellant, 1 Weir 791; Anonymous, 2 Weir 462.

THIRD DIVISION: APPLICATIONS.

158. Under the Arbitration Act, 1940, (10 of 1940) to set aside an award or to get an award remitted for reconsideration.	Thirty days.	The date of service of the notice of filing of the award.

652. This Article was substituted by sec. 49 and Fourth Schedule of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (10 of 1940) (with effect from the 1st July, 1940).

Prior to the amendment of this Article by the Repealing and Amending Act of 1919, it was held that the period of limitation ran from the date on which the award arrived at the Registrar's Office for the purpose of being filed, and not from the date when it was actually filed—Nobin Kally v. Ambica, 5 C.W.N. 815; or from the date of submission of the award in Court and not from the date of service upon the objecting party of the notice of filing the award in Court—Kalian v. Roshanbai, 8 S.L.R 190, 27 I.C. 371; Mansoor v. Mahomedin, 5 S.L.R. 125, 13 I.C. 234; or from the date fixed for the filing of the award and not from the date on which it was filed without the knowledge of the parties before the date fixed for its filing—Jawahir v. Mehr, 1915 P.W.R. 14, 34 I.C. 250. These decisions are no longer authoritative.

653. Scope:—Before amendment of 1940:—This Article applied only to applications to set aside an award, i.e., to applications referred to in sec. 512, C. P. Code, 1882 (para, 16 of the Second Schedule) to set aside an award on any of the grounds mentioned in sec. 521 (para. 15 of the Second Schedule)—Muhammad Abid v. Muhammad Asghur, 8 All. 64 (67). An objection to an award was preferred after a period of ten days from the filing of the award in Court. The objection was a statement in answer to an application for having the award made a rule of the Court. Held, Art. 158 had no application to the case—Manghooram v. Girdharilal, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 951. This Article did not apply to proceedings under para. 12 or 14 of the 2nd Schedule of C. P. Code, i.e., to an application to remit an award for reconsideration of the arbitrators owing to some illegality of the award apparent on the face of it—Appaya v. Venkatasami, 1918 M.W.N. 477, 47 I.C. 567; Kiroti v. Behari, 1933 A.L.J. 519, 146 I.C. 596, A.I.R. 1933 All. 648; or to an application to modify or correct an award—Hyder Saheb v. Giria Chettiar, 24 M.L.J. 483.

Article 158 did not apply to an award which is prima facie an illegal award, e.g., an award signed by only one of two arbitrators and by an umpire who has not been legally appointed. Such an award is a nullity and need not be set aside within the period of limitation prescribed by this Article. But where the award is prima facie a legal award, and can only be shown to be illegal after an enquiry into the allegations of the objector has been made, an application to set aside such award falls under this Article—Ram Narain v. Baij Nath, 29 Cal. 36 (41), explaining 8 All. 64.

Article 158 did not apply to the case of an application under Para. 20, Sch. 2, C. P. Code. The phraseology of Cl. 1, Art. 158 clearly suggests that the application contemplated by Art. 158 is the application which is mentioned in para 16, Sch. 2, C. P. Code—Lachhu Singh v. Ganesh Das, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 135.

After amendment of 1940:—Under this Article as it now stands amended by Act X of 1940, objections to the award have to be put in within 30 days from the date when the award is filed in Court and notice of the filing has been given to the parties, which is not the date when the order mentioning the filing of the award and the presence of the parties is recorded—Harichand v. Lachhman, 50 P.L.R. 57, A.I.R. 1948 E. P. 11. But where the objections do not relate to the validity or otherwise of the award but relates to the procedure of the Court under sec. 14 of the Arbitration Act in that the award being filed beyond limiation prescribed by Article 178, no decree should be passed upon it, this Article does not apply, and the objections have to be decided even if they are not filed within 30 days after the service of notice—Dwarka v. Pearay, 1948 A.L.J. 524, A.I.R. 1949 All. 234. Where certain ground to set aside award is not stated in the application but is stated in the affidavit filed during the course of hearing of the application the application must be treated as a new one and is barred by limitation if filed after 30 days after date of notice of filing of award—Ebrahim v. N. I. Oil Industries, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 230.

654. Applications under this Article:—An application to set aside an award on the ground that three out of five arbitrators were not present at the time of the award and did not sign it, although it contained their names, is an application to set aside an award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrators—which is a ground mentioned in sec. 521, C. P. Code: the application falls under this Article and must be made within the period prescribed by this Article—Ram Narain v. Baijnath, 29 Cal. 36 (38).

When a decree having been passed on an award, an application is preferred by the unsuccessful party to the High Court for revision, and it is found that the real object of the revision petition is to set aside the award, the revision petition is virtually an application to set aside an award, and is governed by the limitation of this Article —Ghulam Khan v. Muhammad Hassan, 29 Cal. 167 (185) (P.C.).

In Ebrahim v. Pannalal, I.L.R. (1949) 1 Cal. 245, it was held by the Calcutta High Court in dealing with an application, which was partly to set aside an award and partly for a declaration that the award was invalid, that the application in so far as it was to set aside the award was barred by limitation having been made beyond 30 days but that the application in so far as it asked for a declaration that the award was invalid was within time. But in Sankur v. Kalidas, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 293, the Bombay High Court dissented from this view and held that the Arbitration Act, 1940, contemplated only one application to set aside an award and to such an application this Article applied.

655. Limitation:—The object of the Legislature in allowing so short a period as ten days for the preferring of objections to awards as it stood before amendment of 1940 would seem to meet those cases where litigants who are at first very willing to have their cases referred to the decision of arbitrators whom they regard as amicably disposed towards them, subsequently do their utmost to resile from their agreement and to set aside the award the moment the arbitrators decide against them. The legislature has framed Article 158 with the object of discouraging and preventing such discreditable attempts—Ram Narain v. Baij Nath, 29 Cal. 36 (54).

When the arbitrators state a special case for the opinion of the Court, the award is not completed until the Court expresses its opinion upon the case submitted to it. Until this is done, there is no complete award, and the parties are not called upon to file their objections, if any, to the award—Lakshman v. Ramachandra, 48 Bom. 663, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 22, 84 I.C. 378, 26 Bom.L.R. 836.

Para. 10 of Sch. II, C. P. Code lays down that notice of the filing of an award shall be given to the parties. Article 158 as it stood before the amendment of 1940 must be read with this para; and the period of ten days must be computed from the day on which the parties receive notice that the award has been submitted and not from the day on which it is actually filed in Court—Sheo Buksh v. Masuma Sriam, 19 A.L.J. 404, A.I.R. 1921 All. 63, 63 I.C. 399; Sita Ram v. Rupram, 13 N.L.R. 172, 42 I.C. 66; Sahib Ram v. Chait Ram, 96 P.L.R. 1915, 28 I.C. 427. See sec. 14 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1940. Under this Article the starting point of limitation is the date of the service of notice of filing the award. The provisions as to service of notice of filing the award in sec. 14 (2) Arbitration Act is mandatory and the Court has no power to pass a decree on the award unless notice is given to the parties to file objections. But a party who is already cognizant of the filing of award appears in the case and applies to Court for leave to examine the award and for time to file objections, service of notice becomes unnecessary. In such a case the date of appearance in the proceedings will be deemed to be date of service of notice though actually no notice had been served, and an application filed more than 30 days from such date will be barred under this Article—Bhola Nath v. Mahadev, 56 C.W.N. 223, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 226.

The word "parties" is not confined to the parties personally but includes pleaders and other persons specially authorised by the parties to take notice. Therefore time would run when a notice of filing has been given to a duly authorised pleader—Gayan Singh v. Harbilas, 1930 A.L.J. 995, 128 I.C. 769, A.I.R. 1930 All. 711.

Section 5 of the Limitation Act does not apply to an application to set aside an award; the Court has no authority to extend the time prescribed by this Article on any sufficient ground whatever—Surya v. Banwari, 18 C.W.N. 626 (628), 17 I.C. 7; Devi Ditta v. Babu Ram, 8 Lah. 274, 100 I.C. 955, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 273; Gayan Singh v. Harbilas, supra; Hastimal v. Hiralal, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 243; Kawalsingh v. Baldeosingh, A.I.R. 1957 Nag. 57; Chandanmull v. Mohambal A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 561; Seonarain Lal v. Prabhu Chand, A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 252 (F.B.). But see Chaturbhuj v. Raghubar Dayal, 36 All. 354 (361), where the High Court after setting aside in revision all orders in the case directed the lower Court to take cognizance of an application to set aside the award passed 3 years ago.

But the time may be extended under sec. 4—Jawahir v. Mehr, 1916 P.W.R. 14, 34 I.C. 250 (251).

The time required for obtaining a copy of the award shall be excluded by sec. 12 (4) although it is not necessary to file a copy of the award with the application to set aside the award—Sova Chand v. Hurry Bux, 46 Cal. 721 (727), 23 C.W.N. 280; Ghulam Khan v. Md. Hassan, 29 Cal. 167 (183) (P.C.); Wajid Ali v. Nawal Kishore, 17 All. 211 (215).

The fact that the defendant had not applied to set aside the award within ten days prescribed by Art. 158 as it stood before the amendment of 1940 would not preclude him from appealing from the decree of the Court based upon the award, if he does not contest the award on any of the grounds mentioned in sec. 521, C. P. Code 1882 (para 15, Sch. 2, C. P. Code 1908)—Muhammad Abid v. Muhammad Asahur, 8 All. 64 (66).

A Court should pass a decree in terms of the award after the expiry of the period of 10 days prescribed by this Article as it stood before the amendment of 1940 for an application to set aside the award. If the decree is passed before that period, it is illegal and liable to be set aside—Lakshman v. Ramachandra, 48 Bom. 663, 84 I.C. 378, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 22; Velu Pillay v. Appaswami, 21 M L.J. 44, 9 I.C. 197; Surapparaju v. Narayanaraju, 1912 M.W.N. 1232, 17 I.C. 431; Nalmuddun v. Albert Peuch, 29 All. 584 (586); Ravjibhai v. Dahyabhai, 45 Bom. 832 (834); Ranga Chetty v. Govindasami, 1921 M.W.N. 793, A I.R. 1922 Mad. 179, 15 L.W. 160, 71 I.C. 266; Hardeo v. Thana, 48 P.R. 1882; Muni Ram v. Ram Asray, 24 O.C. 234, A.I.R, 1921 Oudh 148, 64 I.C. 690; Sri Krishan v. Relumal, 9 S.L.R. 183, 34 I.C. 845 (848); Joymungul v. Mohan Ram. 23 W.R. 429 (P.C.).

159. For leave to appear and defend a suit under summary procedure referred to in section 128 (2)(f) or under Order XXXVII of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.	Ten days.	When the summons is served.

Change:—The words "or under Order XXXVII" have been added by the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act, 1925 (XXX of 1925). For reasons of the amendment, see Notes under Article 5. ante in which a similar amendment has been made. The words "Code of Civil Procedure. 1908" were substituted for the words "same Code" by sec. 49 and Fourth Schedule of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (10 of 1940) (with effect from 1st July 1940).

656. When the summons is served:—The only date to which reference can be made as regards limitation, is the date of the service of summons as shown in the sheriff's return. The defendant cannot escape the law of limitation by alleging that there was no service of summons at all. The question as to whether the summons was served or not may be taken into consideration on an application to set aside the decree if made (O. 37, r. 4)—Madhub v. Woopendra, 23 Cal. 573 (575).

After the time fixed by the summons for obtaining leave to appear and defend has expired, the Court has no power to extend the time—Quazi Mohmudar v. Sarat, 5 C.W.N. 259 (262). A Court has no power to condone the delay in filing and obtaining leave to defend suits filed under Order 37, R. 2, Civil Procedure Code—James v. Jaya Narayan, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 767. But where the summons issued specially mentions in addition, the date of hearing of the suit, such mention is likely to mislead the defendant and if he has appeared and applied for leave on the date of hearing which is beyond 10 days from the date of service of summons, he ought to be granted leave—Srinivasan v. Bhakthavatsulu, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 909. The latter view, it is submitted, does not seem to be correct.

160. For an order under the same Code, to restore to the file an application for review rejected in consequence of the failure of the applicant to appear when the application was called on for hearing.	Fifteen days.	When the application for review is rejected.
161. For a review of Judgment by a Court of Small Causes other than a Presidency Small Cause Court or by a Court invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes when exercising that jurisdiction.	Fifteen days.	The date of the decree or order.

The word "Provincial" was omitted by sec. 2 and Sch. III of Berar Laws Act, 1941 (4 of 1941) (with effect from the 1st August, 1941) and the words "other than a Presidency Small Cause Court" were inserted, ibid.

657. This Article corresponds to Art. 160A of the old Limitation Act, XV of 1877, and was introduced into that Act by sec 36 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, IX of 1887. Before the introduction of this Article, an application for review of a judgment of a Small Cause Court was held to be governed by the 90 days' rule under Article 173; see Madon Mohan v. Purno Chundra, 10 Cal. 297 (298).

An application for review of judgment of a Small Cause Court is required to be accompanied with the deposit of costs, according to the provisions of sec. 17 of the Prov. S. C. C. Act. If the application for review of judgment is made within the period of limitation, but the deposit is not made along with the application, the Court will not allow the deposit to be made after the period of limitation, unless sufficient cause is shown for the delay (sec. 5). If no such cause is shown, the application for review of judgment will be dismissed as time-barred—Abdul Sheikh v. Md. Ayub, 24 C.W.N. 380, 56 I.C. 551, 31 C.L.J. 197.

162. For a review of judgment by any of the following Courts, namely, the High Courts at Calcutta and Madras and the High Courts of Bombay, Madhya	Twenty days.	The date of the decree or order.

Pradesh and Punjab in the exercise of its original jurisdiction.

The words "the following Courts, namely" were inserted by sec. 2 and Sch. 1 of the Repealing and Amending Act, 1927 (10 of 1927). The words "the High Courts at Calcutta and Madras and the High Courts of Bombay, Madhya Pradesh and Punjab" were substituted for the words "the High Courts of Judicature at Fort William, Madras, Bombay and Nagpur and the High Court of Punjab" by Adoption of Laws (No. 2) 1956.

658. The judgment of a High Court in the exercise of its matrimonial jurisdiction is a judgment of the High Court in its original jurisdiction—Harriette King v. James King, 6 Bom. 416 (434). The judgment of a High Court passed in its Insolvency jurisdiction may be a judgment of the High Court in its original jurisdiction for the purpose of enforcing the judgment under Art. 183 (In re Candas Narondas, 13 Bom. 530, 533 P.C.), but not for the purposes of Art. 162. The review of judgment referred to in this Article is a review contemplated by O. 47, r. 1, C P. Code; an application to the High Court for review of judgment passed by it in its insolvency jurisdiction, under the provisions of sec. 8 (1), Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), is not governed by Article 162; nor is it governed by Art. 173, because that Article is also restricted to applications for review under the C. P. Code. The proper Article is Art. 181—In re L. W. Nasse, 7 Rang. 201, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 228 (232), 118 I.C. 615. This Article does not apply to a review of a criminal case under cl. 26 of the Letters Patent—Padam Prosad v. K. E., 33 C.W.N. 1121 (1137), (S.B.), 30 Cr.L.J. 93, 50 C.L.J. 106. An application for review of judgment of the Original Side of a High Court must be made within 20 days from the date of the decree or order and not from the date of the knowledge of the decree or order—Debendra v. Satyabala, 54 C.W N. 110, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 217.

163. By a plaintiff, for an order to set aside a dismissal for default of appearance or for failure to pay costs of service of process or to furnish security for costs.	Thirty days.	The date of the dismissal.

Under Act XV of 1877, the words in column I ran thus: "By a plaintiff, for an order to set aside a dismissal for default."

659. Default:—When the plaintiff is absent, and although a pleader for the plaintiff appears, he is instructed only to apply for an adjournment, and is unable to answer all material questions relating to the suit, his appearance is no appearance; and the dismissal of the suit, after rejection of the application for adjournment, is a dismissal for default of appearance—Lalta Prasad v. Nand Kishore, 22 All. 66 (76) (F.B.); Shankar v. Radha Krishna, 20 All. 195; Hinga v. Munna, 31 Cal. 150 (154); Soonderlal v. Goorprasad, 23 Bom. 414 (422). Cf. Satish Chandra v. Ahara Prasad, 34 Cal. 403 (F.B.).

A plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for default under the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, may either apply for a new trial within 8 days under section 38 of that Act, or may apply to have the order of dismissal set aside within thirty days under this Article—Soonderlal v. Goor Prasad, 23 Bom. 414 (426).

Non-appearance by reason of death is not default of appearance—Debi Baksh v. Habib Shah, 16 O.C. 194 (P.C.), 17 C.W.N. 829, 19 I.C. 526. In such a case, the Court is not competent to dismiss the suit for default of appearance; and the plaintiff's representatives have six months (now 3 months) under Article 176 to be brought on the record—Ibid (overruling 14 I.C. 221 and 14 I.C. 711).

This Article requires that an application under this Article must be made within thirty days from the date of dismissal. If a mere notice of motion (original side) is given within 30 days to the effect that the application would be made on a future date (which is beyond 30 days), it will not prevent time from running—Hinga v. Munna, 31 Cal. 150 (154); Khetter Mohun v. Kashinath, 20 Cal. 899. But these two cases have been disapproved of in Jnanendra v. Amrita, 60 Cal. 1106, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 886 (887) (case under Art. 166). In Shree Chand v. Sohanlal, I.L.R. (1943) 2 Cal. 227, 47 C.W.N. 450, A.I.R. 1943 Cal 257 it has been held that merely giving notice of application or filing in the Registrar's office of the notice of application is not a sufficient compliance of this Article. This Article is not confined to applications under the Civil Procedure Code. It applies also to applications on the Original Side of a High Court—Debendra v. Satyabala, 54 C.W.N. 110, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 217; Shree Chand v. Sohanlal, I.L.R. (1943) 2 Cal. 227, 47 C.W.N. 450, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 257.

According to the Madras High Court Rules an application to the Registrar of the original side to issue a notice of motion is an application within the meaning of this Article and will save limitation notwithstanding that the notice mentions a date, beyond the thirty days, as the date on which the application will be heard—Kuttayan v. Elleppa, 17 M.L.J. 215.

Although under sec. 2(10) of the Limitation Act "suit" has been defined as not including an appeal or an application, yet for the purposes of this Article the application for restoration of an application for revocation of a probate dimissed for default must be deemed to be an application by a plaintiff—Raja Ram v. Lakshmi Narain, A.I.R. 1958 All. 149.

660. Starting point of limitation:—The starting point of limitation is the date of dismissal, and not the date when the applicant has knowledge of the dismissal. Unlike Art. 164, this Article says nothing about the applicant's knowledge of the dismissal—DeCruz v. Pitts, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 557.

If a vacation intervenes, the application must be made on the date the Court re-opens, and not on the first motion day after the vacation—Hinga v. Munna, 31 Cal. 150 (154).

Where a suit was dismissed for default on 19th December and an application to set aside the dismissal was made on the next day, but the application was rejected on the 23rd January because the applicant failed to produce a copy of the judgment and decree as directed by the Court, a second application for the same purpose made on the 16th February, i.e., nearly two months after the dismissal of the suit, was held to be barred—Subba Row v. Venkataratnam, 22 I.C. 689 (Mad.). But in an Allahabad case where an application for re-admission of a suit dismissed for default was made within 30 days but it was rejected because it was made by a person who held an invalid power-of-attorney from the plaintiff, a fresh application for the re-admission of the suit presented by that person under a proper power-of-attorney was granted, though presented more than 30 days after the dismissal for default but within 30 days from the date of the first application—Ajodhya v. Chhabila, 29 I.C. 1004 (All.).

The time during which the applicant had been erroneously prosecuting a suit to set aside the dismissal will be deducted under sec. 14 (2). The ruling in Sheoji Ram v. Sheo Chand Rai, 63 P.R. 1886 (decided under Act XV of 1877) is no longer good law, in view of sec. 14 (2) of the present Act, under which the applicant is entitled to deduct the time spent in any civil proceeding (including a suit) and not merely the time spent in prosecuting an application.

The period of time prescribed in this Article can be enlarged by sec. 4, i.e., if the last day of limitation is a holiday, an application presented on the re-opening day will be within time. But the day of closing of the wrong Court in which the application was erroneously filed will not be deducted—Bano Mal v. Bano Mal, 55 I.C. 55 (Lah.).

If an applicant fails to apply within the period prescribed by this Article he cannot evade the law of limitation by calling his application, which is in reality an application for setting aside a dismissal for default, an application for review of judgment—Nur Mahammad v. Dina, 15 P.R. 1897. But see Fateh Chand v. Menghi Bai, 109 P.R. 1913, 19 I.C. 481, where the Court held that it had power to entertain the application for review under the above circumstances. Cf. also Raj Narain v. Ananga Mohan, 26 Cal. 598.

The period prescribed by this Article cannot be extended under section 5—Mahadeo v. Lakshminarayan, 49 Bom. 839, 90 I.C. 610, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 521; Madha Ram v. Tupoo, 52 C.L.J. 23, 129 I.C. 779, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 319 (320); Ma Naw v. Somasundaram, 2 Rang. 655, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 187, 85 I.C. 324; Sahib Ditta v. Reda, 83 P.R. 1902; Soba v. Dayaram, 23 N.L.R. 83, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 91 (92). Nor can it be extended by adding thereto the time for obtaining a copy of the order of dismissal—Mohan Lal v. Sher Mahmmad, 93 I.C. 1023 (Lah.). The Court is not entitled to extend the period of limitation by taking into consideration circumstances which appear to operate harshly against the plaintiff—Debendra v. Satyabala, 54 C.W.N. 110, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 217. The Court has no inherent power to extend time when the application is filed beyond limitation—Chinnappa v. Deenadayalu, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 411, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 480, 1948 M.W.N. 400.

When an order setting aside an exparte decree is passed in the absence of the plaintiff there is no rule to issue notice to the plaintiff of the date on which the restored case is to be taken up. Where on the date so fixed the plaintiff is absent and his suit is dismissed, the limitation for filling an application for restoration of the suit is governed by Art. 163, and this cannot be avoided by recourse to sec. 151, C. P. C.—Mt. Karim Bhari v. Jagan Nath, A I.R. 1936 Lah. 495, 163 I.C. 274, 38 P.L.R. 697 (Bissamal v. Kesar Singh, A.I.R. 1920 Lah. 309 ref.).

164. By a defendant, for an order to set aside a decree passed ex parte.	Thirty days.	The date of the decree, or where the summons was not duly served, when the applicant has knowledge of the decree.

Change:—In column I, the word 'judgment' in the old Act has been changed into 'decree'; the words in column 3 in the old Act stood thus: "The date of executing any process for enforcing the judgment."

661. Old Act and new:—Where an application to set aside an ex parte decree was barred by the provisions of Art. 164 of the Act of 1877, long before the Act of 1908 was passed, the provisions of the new Act cannot revive the right to apply for setting aside the decree—Nepal Chandra v. Niroda Sundari, 39 Cal. 507 (509).

If the ex parte decree was passed while the old Act was in force, and the application was made after the Act of 1908 came into operation, the latter Act would apply, because the law to be applied to an application is the law existing at the time when the application is made—Jai Bibi v. Ilahi, 37 All. 597 (600); Monohar v. Sadiqa, 37 I.C. 292 (294), 101 P.R. 1916; Zaibulnissa v. Ghulam Fatima, 70 P.L.R. 1911, 10 I.C. 823; Chidambaram v. Karuppan, 35 Mad. 678 (679); Basiruddin v. Sonaulla, 15 C.W.N. 102 (105), 6 I.C. 154.

A decree was passed ex parte against a minor in 1894; he became a major on the 11th January 1909 and applied on the 25th January to set aside the decree. The application would be governed by Art. 164 of the Act of 1908 and would be barred. The plea of minority was available under the Limitation Act of 1877, section 7 (which applied to all applications), but it would not now be available under section 6 of the present Act which applies only to applications for execution—Chidambaram v. Karuppan, 35 Mad. 678 (679), 8 I.C. 543; Manohar v. Sadiqa, 101 P.R. 1916, 37 I.C. 292.

662. Scope:—Art. 164 prescribes a period of limitation for filing an application for setting aside an exparte decree. Sec. 3 renders it imperative that an application presented after the statutory period of limitation shall be dismissed, and it is not open to the Court to enlarge the period of limitation laid down by the statute—Ajab Khan v. Alfgul, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 146. This Article applies to any application (made under O. 9, r. 13, C. P. Code) which involves the setting aside of the original decree, whether made to the original Court or to the Court of appeal after an appeal has been filed. Where the application to set aside the ex parte decree is made to the appellate Court, the application falls under this Article and not under Article 169. This latter Article applies only to applications for rehearing of an appeal heard ex parte—Sankara Bhatta v. Subraya, 30 Mad. 535 (536). An application to set aside an ex parte decree passed by a Presidency Court of Small Causes falls within the terms of sec. 108 of the C. P. Code, 1882, (O. IX, r. 13) and the period of limitation for such an application is 30 days as prescribed by this Article and not 8 days as prescribed by sec. 38 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act—Roshanlal v. Lachmi Narayan, 17 Bom. 507 (509). An application for setting aside an ex parte order of adjudication of an insolvent passed under the Provincial Insolvency Act has to be made under O IX, r. 13, C. P. Code (as there is no provision in the Insolvency Act in respect of such application), and is governed by this Article—Umar Din v. Raghunath, 33 P.L.R. 698, 138 I.C. 377, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 522.

This Article applies not only to an application for setting aside ex parte decrees, but also to an application for setting aside ex parte orders in execution proceedings which come under section 47, C. P. Code, because such orders are treated as decrees —Subbia Naicker v. Ramanathan, 37 Mad. 462 (475), 26 M.L.J. 189, 22 I.C. 899.

This Article is not restricted to applications to set aside a decree passed in a suit. Where a person was served with a notice to appear on a certain date and to show cause why the award passed against him should not stand filed, and on his failing to appear on that date, the award was ordered to be filed, an application by that person to set aside the order passed ex parte falls under this Article. This Article applies to applications for setting aside ex parte orders passed in proceedings other than suits—Fleming Shaw & Co. v. Mangalchand, A.I.R. 1924 Sind 56. 75 I.C. 1035.

Where the plaintiff brings a suit to set aside an ex parte decree not merely on the ground that it was passed without service of summons but also on the ground that it was obtained by fraud, Article 164 cannot apply (as it refers only to an application); the suit falls under Article 95—Moti Lal v. Russick Chandra, 26 Cal. 326, at p. 333 (Footnote).

O. 9, r. 13, C. P. Code applies only to Mofussil Courts and not to the Original Side of the High Court; in the latter Court a different practice prevails in the matter of entering appearance, for here the question is not whether the defendant was present at the hearing, but whether he had entered appearance in the office. Consequently Art. 164 does not apply to an application to set aside an ex parte decree, and the High Court has a discretion to restore a suit although the application is presented beyond 30 days—Haji Ramjan v. Hafiz Abdul, 32 C.W.N. 411 (412), 116 I.C. 633, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 864, following S. N. Banerjee v. H. S. Suhrawardy, 32 C.W.N. 10, but a contrary view has been taken by the same High Court in Surendra v. Hrishikesh, 46 C.W.N. 280 where it has been held that this Article applies to set aside ex parte decree passed on the original side of the High Court. The same view has been taken in Debendra v. Satyabala, 54 C.W.N. 110; Abed v. Prafulla, 56 C.W.N. 97 (F.B.) (overruling S. N. Banerjee v. H. S. Suhrawardy, supra); Devji v. Santi, 87 C.L.J. 169, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 322. In a recent case the same High Court overruled the view taken in Debendra v. Satyabala, supra, and held that where the decree was passed on 28.3.'52, and the first day of the hearing of the motion was on 7.4.'52, and the Court on that day gave directions for the filing of affidavits and adjourned the hearing to 28.4.'52, the application was made on 7.4.'52, and was within time—Sohonlal v. Manicklal, 58 C.W.N. 313, 93 C.L.J. 119, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 352.

An application to set aside an ex parte decree of a Small Cause Court must be accompanied with a deposit of the decretal amount or a security bond for the amount. See sec. 17, Prov. S. C. C. Act. If the application is made within the period of limitation prescribed by this Article, but the deposit or security is given after the expiry of the period, the application must be deemed to be barred—Suraj v. Baldeo, 50 All. 254, 25 A.L.J. 1032, A.I.R. 1928 All. 111, 108 I.C. 464; Ram Charitar v. Hashim, 1 P.L.T. 323, 56 I.C. 810; Bishun v. Sheo Tahal, 62 I.C. 108 (109) (Pat.). Where an application for setting aside an exparte decree was made with the necessary security bond but the application was withdrawn as being defective in certain formalities and a second application was made subsequently attaching the security bond and the security bond was verified by the surety some time later, it was held that the bond was effective and valid from the date on which it was filed—Shiam Behari v. Banshidhar, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 35, 11 O.W.N. 1639, 152 I.C. 974.

When a Court finds it necessary to adjourn a pending suit, it is part of the duty of the Court to see that the date fixed for the adjourned hearing is communicated to the parties concerned or to their legal representatives, or any rate to such of them as are present or represented in Court when the adjournment takes place—Durga Prasad v. Het Ram, A.I.R. 1923 All. 79. See also Gobardhan Ram v. Banarsi Ram, A.I.R. 1957 All. 805.

663. 'Defendant':—In a probate application, the mere citing of a person does not make him a defendant. Under section 295 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925, the cause must be contentious and the person cited must appear to oppose the grant of probate, before he becomes a defendant. If such person does not appear and the probate is granted ex parte, it cannot be said that an order is passed ex parte against a 'defendant,' and this Article cannot apply to an application by such person for revocation of the probate—Saroja v. Abhoy Charan, 41 Cal. 819 (823), 24 I.C. 27.

664 Ex-parte decree:—A payment order made ex parte under sec. 150 of the Companies Act (1882) is not a decree, and this Article does not apply to an application for setting it aside—Hindusthan Bank Ltd. v. Mehraj Din, 1 Lah. 187 (191), 55 I.C. 820. An order granting leave to execute a decree against a person on the ground that he is a partner, made under O. 21, r. 50, sub-rules (2) and (3), is not a decree for the purposes of this Article, but is only treated as a decree for the purpose of an appeal or enforcement. Consequently Art. 164 cannot apply to an application to set aside an ex parte order of that kind—Kanji v. Vasanji, 53 Bom. 839, 31 Bom.L.R. 995, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 386 (388), 120 I.C. 833.

There is no distinction between a case decided ex parte by reason of the non-appearance of the defendant at the first hearing, and a case decided ex parte by reason of the absence of the defendant at an adjourned hearing. In both cases, the defendant may apply to set aside the ex parte decree—Jonardan v. Ramdhone, 23 Cal. 738 (F.B.) (overruling Sital v. Heera, 21 Cal. 269); Muniappan v. Balayan, 31 Mad. 505 (506); Hildreth v. Sayaji, 20 Bom. 380.

When on the day of hearing the defendant appears in person but only for the purpose of applying for adjournment, and the application is refused and a decree follows, such decree is not an ex parte decree, because the defendant cannot be said not to have appeared—Soonderlal v. Goor Prasad, 23 Bom. 414 (421); but if the defendant is absent and a pleader on his behalf applies for an adjournment and the pleader has no other instructions but to get an adjournment and is unable to answer all material questions relating to the suit, the defendant cannot be said to have put in appearance; and if the application is refused the decree which follows is an ex parte decree—Ibid (at p. 422); Cooke v. Equitable Coal Co. Ld., 8 C.W.N. 621 (624); Ram Tahal v. Rameshar, 8 All. 140; Shankar v. Radha, 20 All. 195; Ramanuja v. Rangaswamy, 18 M.L.J. 51.

According to the Bombay High Court, even giving to the expression "ex parte" its plain natural meaning, the expression "ex parte" does carry with it the connotation that a Court or a Judge or a Tribunal has proceeded in the absence of the other party when it could have had the other party before it or when it was not prevented by law from having the other party before it—P. N. Films Ltd. v. Overseas Films Corporation, A.I.R. 1958 Bom. 10.

Article 164 does not apply to an application made by a defendant against whom a decree has been passed in a summary suit when he was precluded from appearing by reason of the fact that leave to defend was not given. Such an application falls under O. 37, r. 4, C. P. C., and the Limitation Act has not dealt with it, and so the Article applicable is Article 181—P. N. Films Ltd. v. Overseas Film Corporation, A.I.R. 1958 Bom. 10.

665. Starting point of limitation:—The third column of Articles 164 and 169 should be compared with that of Articles 163 and 168. In the case of a plaintiff or appellant seeking to set aside an ex parte decision, limitation runs only from the date of the order, whereas if a defendant or respondent seeks such relief, he can, in cases where he has not had due notice, count limitation from the date of his knowledge of the order—Bissa Mal v. Kesar Singh, 1 Lah. 363 (364), 58 I.C. 739.

Time runs ordinarily from the date of the decree, if the defendant has been duly served with summons—Manindra v. Charumani, A.I.R. 1949 Assam 5; and not from the date of the knowledge of the suit. If the summons had not been duly served, the period of limitation runs from the date of the knowledge of the ex parte decree; but under no circumstances is the period to be reckoned from the date of the knowledge of the suit—Mir Ahmed v. Pir Bakhsh, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 397 (398), 129 I.C. 689; Rajeshwari Prasad v. Brahmanand, 12 Pat. 745, 145 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 279.

A decree was passed ex parte while the defendant was in jail. Five years afterwards the defendant applied to set aside the decree. It was held that if the application was treated as one for setting aside an ex parte decree, then it was barred by limitation, but if it was treated as an application for review of judgment, the Court should decide the question whether the applicant had shown sufficient cause for not applying earlier—Janki v. Parmeswar, 13 A.L.J. 482, 29 I.C. 975.

The mere fact that a party has not applied to set aside the ex parte decree within 30 days is no bar to his applying for a review of judgment—Chokkalingan v. Lakshmanan, 38 M.L.J. 224, 55 I.C. 444; Lal Chet Narain v. Rampal, 16 C.W.N. 643, 15 I.C. 554. But see contra:—Deodip v. Gopal Singh, 1 P.L.J. 547, 38 I.C. 53; Santu v. Arjun, 13 I.C. 318; Lal Devi v. Amar Nath, 57 I.C. 15 (Lah.); and Shavaksha v. Hugh Hogarth, 12 Bom.L.R. 886, 8 I.C. 616; in these cases it has been held that a party who has not applied to set aside the decree within 30 days cannot evade the law of limitation by calling his application an application for review of judgment.

If an application to set aside an ex parte decree, which was made in time, was consigned to the record room, that fact does not in any way necessitate a fresh application, and a subsequent application must be considered as merely in continuance of the suspended original application. Consequently no question of limitation arises—Barkatullah v. Fuzl Maula, 55 I.C. 824 (826) (Lah.).

Where service of notice on the defendant is not established, the Court has to decide whether the application is within time from the date when the petitioner came to know of the ex parte decree—Mohla v. Kahnun, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 577, 91 I.C. 798.

The words "where the summons was not duly served" in the 3rd column seem to refer to the summons given for the first hearing of the suit; so, where there has been due service of such summons, the mere fact that the defendant has not received notice of an adjourned hearing will not cause limitation to run from the date on which the defendant becomes aware of the decree having been passed—Lal Devi v. Amar Nath, 57 I.C. 15 (Lah.); Surjit Singh v. Torrie, 76 I.C. 14, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 666. So, where the defendant received due notice of the first hearing of the suit, but did not receive notice of the subsequent hearing owing to a transfer of the case to another Court, and even intentionally neglected to ascertain the date of hearing of the suit after the transfer, this would not entitle him to count the period of limitation from the date of knowledge of the decree—Sham Sundar v. Devi Ditta, 33 P.L.R. 838, 139 I.C. 354, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 539 (540).

In computing the period of limitation, the time taken in prosecuting an infructuous proceeding in a wrong Court can be deducted—Basiruddin v. Sonaulla, 15 C.W.N. 102 (106), 6 I.C. 154.

The period of limitation prescribed by this Article cannot be extended by the Court in the exercise of its inherent powers under sec. 151, C. P. Code—Ajodhya Mahton v. Phul Koer, 1 Pat. 277, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 479, 65 I.C. 341.

In Madras, the period prescribed by this Article can be extended under sec. 5 for sufficient cause; see Note 41 under sec. 5.

The time cannot be extended under sec. 6. See 35 Mad. 678 cited in Note 661 above.

"Duly served":—The word "duly" does not mean "personally"; so, if the defendant is absent, service on any male member is undoubtedly due service; so is service on an agent or servant under the circumstances indicated in O. 5, C. P. Code—Venkatachalam v. Subbayya, 54 M.L.J. 448, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 655 (657), 108 I.C. 889. A summons is said to have been "duly served" if it was served in such a manner that the defendant had knowledge of the suit or that the Court may presume that he had such knowledge (O. V, r. 19), even though it was not served in sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer on the day fixed in the summons—Kasarchand v. Lakhamsi, 11 S L.R. 71, 42 I.C. 611; Kasarchand v. Lakhamsi, 8 S.L.R. 153, 27 I.C. 351. But the Madras High Court has taken a contrary view. According to that High Court if a summons is served on a defendant too late to afford him sufficient opportunity of appearing at the hearing of the suit, it is not a case of a summons "duly served"—Stock and Share Exchange Bureau v. Kothari & Sons., (1941) 1 M.L.J. 319, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 435. See also Firm Kundan Lal v. Firm Bani Prasad, A.I R. 1957 All. 76; Nagappa v. Rangaswami, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 475.

Where the plaintiff knew that the defendant did not ordinarily reside in his ancestral house, and yet insisted upon the service of summons at that place, held that the summons was not duly served—Kumud Nath v. Jotindra Nath, 38 Cal. 394 (400). A summons cannot be said to have been duly served where substituted service has been ordered by the Court and effected upon a misrepresentation of facts —Kedar Mull v. Wazifunnissa, 38 C.W.N. 1066, 60 C.L.J. 106, A I.R. 1934 Cal. 745; or upon allegations which were false—Ram Kishen v. Mulla, 69 I.C. 467, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 191; or upon insufficient grounds—Krishna Padayachi v. Vinayakaswamier, 122 I.C. 35, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 22. In such cases, time runs from the date of the applicant's knowledge of the decree. But where substituted service has been lawfully made (e.g., where substituted service was directed by the Court after satisfying itself that the defendant was keeping out of the way to evade service) the summons is said to have been duly served, and time under this Article runs from the date of the decree, even though the summons does not come to the knowledge of the defendant—Dittu Ram v. Nawab, 26 P.L.R. 704, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 639, 92 I.C. 272; Hansraj v. Narain, 31 P.L.R. 1006, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 118, 131 I.C. 344; Thakur Prasad v. Barati, 8 O.W.N. 845, 132 I C. 778, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 369; Shariba v. Abdul, 51 Mad. 860, 55 M.L.J. 565, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 815 (816), 110 I.C. 490; Narasimha v. Balakrishna, 52 M.L.J. 512, A.I R. 1927 Mad. 487 (488), 101 I.C. 651; Doraisami v. Balasundaram, 52 M.L.J. 477, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 507, 102 I C. 243; Krishna Padayachi v. Vinayakaswamier, 122 I.C. 35, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 222. But in another Madras case it has been said that substituted service may be good service under the C. P. Code, but it is not due service within the meaning of this Article; the very word "substituted" clearly and conclusively indicates that it is not due service, i.e., it is not the service that is due to the defendant or that is due according to the provisions of law for the purpose of service—Venkatachalam v. Subbayya, 54 M.L.J. 488, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 655 (657), 108 I.C. 889. It has also been remarked by that High Court that it is incorrect to say that substituted service is necessarily due service, which can never be contested by the judgment-debtor, and it is equally incorrect to say that it is necessarily not due service. Each case must be decided on its own facts. If the defendants deliberately evaded service of summons, substituted service was due service—Muhaidin v. Lakshmanan, 61 M.L.J. 931, A I.R. 1931 Mad. 812 (813), 135 I.C. 344; see also Gyanammal v. Abdul Hussain, 61 M.L.J. 920, 134 I.C. 1202, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 813 (817); Shanmukhi v. Venkatarami, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 1 (F.B.). But in Shah Shantilaal & Co. v. Shibonwalla, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 815, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 282 the Madras High Court has held that a person on whom substituted service has been effected must be held to have been duly served. See however, Achari v. Parthasarathi, (1953) 2 M.L.J. 371, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 195. A Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has come to the conclusion that the mere fact that substituted service has been ordered by the Court and effected according to the discretion of the Court, is not by itself tantamount to due service. Whether there has been due service or not is to be considered by the Court having regard to all the circumstances of the case. If through no fault of his own the defendant was never put in a position to know that a suit had been instituted against him, then whatever steps might have been taken for serving the summons on him, these steps can never be accepted as amounting to due service—Ram Bharose v. Ganga Singh, 54 All. 154 (F.B.), 136 I.C. 609, 1931 A.L.J. 1049, A.I.R. 1931 All. 727 (729, 730). The Rangoon High Court has held that substituted service of summons effected in proper manner is not due service for the purpose of this Article. The reason is that the words "due service of summons" mean not only one that the summons was served in proper form according to the directions laid down in the Code but also that summons was served under circumstances which enabled the Court to be satisfied that the defendant had knowledge of the decree against him, except of course in the case where the defendant had purposely put it out of his power to have such knowledge—Chettyar Firm v. Sheerazee, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 436.

The fact that substituted service by order of Court has been declared under O. 5, r. 20 (2), C. P. C., to be as effectual as if it had made on the defendant personally does not necessarily mean that the first part of Art. 164 covers the application to set aside decrees which follow such service. The words "or where the summons was not duly served" in Art. 164 clearly connote an inquiry into the due service of the summons which can only be found out by giving a chance to the petitioner to prove that he has not been served according to law. The petitioner is entitled to prove that the substituted service was not carried out according to law —Ahmad Din v. Gokul Chand, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 137, 158 I.C. 355.

Where a summons was sent by registered post to the defendant, and he wired to the Court for an adjournment which was refused, and an ex parte decree was passed, held that the summons had been duly served, and time ran from the date of the decree—Ghansi Ram v. Misri Lal, 27 Bom.L.R. 690, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 444, 89 I.C. 223.

A summons is said to be duly served on a firm, if it is served on any one of the partners of the firm; and time runs from the date of the decree—Adiveppa v. Puragji, 26 Bom.L.R. 388, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 366, 80 I.C. 773.

A summons served personally on a public servant can be said to have been duly served under O. V. r. 9, C. P. Code, even though r. 27 gives a discretion to the Court to serve the commons by sending it to the head of the office in which he is employed. If he refused to accept personal service, the service was due service all the same and time ran from the date of the decree—Har Charan v. Azizullah, 9 O.W.N. 896, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 326 (327).

666. Knowledge of the decree:—This expression means a knowledge of the fact that a decree of the kind is in existence, but it does not embrace a knowledge of the contents and general effect of the decree—Abdool Hoosein v. Esmailji, 12 Bom.L.R. 462, 6 I.C. 901. But the words of the Article mean something more than a mere knowledge that a decree has been passed in some suit in some Court against the applicant. It means that the applicant must have knowledge not merely that a decree has been passed by some Court against him, but that a particular decree has been passed against him in a particular Court in favour of a particular person for a particular sum. It was not intended by the Legislature to lay down that the period under this Article would begin to run from the time the judgment-debtor might have received some vague information that a decree had been against him—Baapurao v. Sadhu Bhivha, 47 Bom. 485 (487), 25 Bom.L.R. 74, 76 I.C. 265, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 193; Kumud Nath v. Jatindra, 38 Cal. 394 (403); Palaniappa v. Vedachala, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 381, 99 I.C. 621; Chintaman v. Pannalal, 27 N.L.R.

53, 134 I.C. 279, A.I.R. 1931 Nag. 119. The mere knowledge of a suit pending against him, would not necessarily fix him with the knowledge of the decree passed against him, so as to compute limitation from the date of the decree—Murugayyan Kangiar v. Murudayyammal, (1956) 2 M.L.J. 86. The knowledge of the decree mentioned in Art. 164, Limitation Act, is the knowledge of the particular decree and not a knowledge of a decree. A vague information about there being a decree is not sufficient for the period of limitation to run against the applicant. The question whether the knowledge which an applicant had on a particular date can be said to be a knowledge of the decree is practically a question of fact—Kedar Nath v. Kesri Mull, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 17; Bapurao v. Sadhu Bhivba, 47 Bom. 485, (A I.R. 1923 Bom. 193 followed). Further, it must appear that the petitioner himself had a knowledge of the decree in the suit. Where the petitioner's brothers had knowledge of the ex parte decree passed against the petitioner, it cannot be reasonably inferred that the petitioner himself had a similar knowledge of it, particularly when it is proved that he lived away from his brothers who never communicated the fact of the decree to him—Kumud Nath v. Jatindra Nath, 38 Cal. 394 (403), 15 C.W.N. 399, 9 I.C. 189.

An omission on the part of the defendant on whom summons was served too late to afford him opportunity of appearing at the hearing to prosecute enquiry which might have led to a knowledge of the date of hearing cannot be regarded as culpable or wilful so as to carry with it the consequence of 'knowledge'—Stock and Share Exchange Bureau v. Kothari & Sons, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 319, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 435.

In an application under this Article the burden of proving want of knowledge of the decree till within 30 days before the application is on the applicant—Piroj Shah v. Qarib Shah, 7 Lah. 161, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 379, 95 I.C. 124; Sughru Mal. v. Sham Lal, 146 P.W.R. 1918, 46 I.C. 777; Mt. Ghulam v. Bilkis, 228 I.C. 121; Bengal Coal Co. v. Baul, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 535, 177 I.C. 1003.

667. Application by legal representative of defendant:—Where a defendant against whom an ex parte decree has been passed dies, an application by his legal representative (whether he has been brought on the record or not) to have the decree set aside must be made within the time allowed by this Article; Art. 181 will not apply. The word 'defendant' in this Article is wide enough to include the legal representative of the original defendant. The period of limitation runs from the date of the decree, as the summons was duly served on the original defendant. The alternative date mentioned in the second part of column 3 (viz., the date of knowledge of the decree) applies only where the summons was not duly served on the original defendant—Venkatasubbier v. Krishnamurthi, 38 Mad. 442 (443, 444). See also Shaligram v. Pundalik, A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 238.

[As stated before, the period of limitation under the Act of 1877 ran from the date of executing any process in enforcement of the judgment. The rulings in Hanmant v. Shankar, 31 Bom. 303, Bhoobanesury v. Judobendra, 9 Cal. 869, Poorno v. Prosonno, 2 Cal 123, Shah Muhammad v. Hanmant, 20 All. 311, Sunraj v. Ambika, 6 All. 144, Har Prasad v. Jafar Ali, 7 All. 345, Rajab Ali v. Upper India Paper Mills, 15 O.C. 289, 17 I. C. 420, decided with reference to the starting point of limitation under the old Act, are no longer of any importance.]

165. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, (V of 1908), by a person dispossessed of	Thirty days.	The date of the dispossession.

immoveable property and disputing the right of the decree-holder or purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree to be put into possession.

668. This Article contemplates the case of a person other than the judgment-debtor who applies to be restored to possession under O. XXI, r. 100 of the C. P. Code—Seshagiri v. Valambal, 65 Mad. L.W. 229, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 377; Merla v. Nallaparaju, (1955) 2 S.C.R. 938, 1956 S.C.J. 101, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 87. Where, therefore, a judgment debtor applies to be restored to possession of property seized by the decree-holder in excess of what has been decreed, the application falls under sec. 47 of the Code, and is governed by Art. 181 of this Act—Abdul Karim v. Islamunnisa, 38 All. 339 (344), 14 A.L.J. 401; Bahir Das v. Giris, 67 I.C. 663, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 287; Vachali Rohini v. Kombi Aliassan, 42 Mad. 753 (760) (F.B.) (overruling Ratnam Ayyar v. Krishna Dass, 21 Mad. 494); Rsaul v. Amina, 46 Bom. 1031 (1036), A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 271, 24 Bom.L.R. 771, 68 I.C. 349; Sharju v. Mir Khan, 1 Lah.L.J. 230; Maung Tha v. Ma Pyu, 46 I.C. 323, (1918) 3 U.B.R. 79; Jilai v. Abdul Rahaman, 4 Luck. 209, 115 I.C. 444, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 76 (79) (dissenting from 6 O.C. 44 and 17 O.C. 94). The contrary view is taken in Har Din v. Lachman, 25 All. 343, Rajaram v. Itraj Kunwar, 17 O.C. 94, 24 I.C. 137, and Jagannath v. Datta, 6 O.C. 44, where an application by a judgment-debtor has been held to fall under this Article. These three rulings are no longer correct, in view of the current of modern decisions cited above.

The judgment-debtor cannot even file a suit, and if he files a suit, it will be treated as an objection under sec. 47, C. P. Code—Jilai v. Abdul Rahman, supra.

166. Under the same Code to set aside a sale in execution of a decree, including any such application by a judgment-debtor.	Thirty days.	The date of the sale.

This Article corresponds to Arts. 166 and 172 of Act XV of 1877.

Change:—The words "including any such application by a judgment-debtor" were added in the first column by sec. 4 of the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act, 1927 (I of 1927), in pursuance of the following recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee: There is a difference of opinion as to whether this Article (166) which deals with a petition to set aside a sale in execution of a decree applies when the petition is by a judgment-debtor under sec. 47, Civil Procedure Code. It is sometimes contended that that Article applies only to a petition under Order XXI, Rule 90 alone. It will be better if the matter is made clear by adding words in the first column so as to include a petition under sec. 47, C. P. Code"—Civil Justice Committee Report, pp. 495-496.

669. Scope:—The scope of this Article is something wider than that of Arts. 166 and 172 of the Act of 1877 taken together; it applies to all applications under the C. P. Code for setting aside an execution sale.

Article 166 of the old Limitation Act applied only when the application was made on the ground of irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale (O. 21, r. 90), or on the ground that the decree holder purchased without the permission of the Court (O. 21, r. 72); and Art. 172 applied only where the ground of setting aside the sale was that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property.

But if the sale was sought to be set aside on any other ground, the application fell under Art. 178 (i.e., 181 of this Act). Thus, if the sale was sought to be set aside on the ground that it was brought about by fraud, Art. 178, and not Art. 166 applied—Nemai v. Deno, 2 C.W.N. 691; Sakharam v. Damodhar, 9 Bom. 468; Sarat v. Nemai, 5 C.W.N. 265; Bhuban Mohun v. Nunda Lal, 26 Cal. 324; Purna Chandra v. Anukul, 36 Cal. 654 (656); so was the case if the sale was sought to be cancelled on the ground that notice was not served on the judgment-debtor as required by section 248, C. P. Code (O. 21, r. 22)—Livinia Ashton v. Madhabmoni, 14 C.W.N. 560, 5 I.C. 390; Lakshmi v. Srish, 13 C.L.J. 162, 9 I.C. 584; or on the ground that the judgment-debtor had purchased the property in contravention of the provision of law —Chand Monee v. Santa Monee, 24 Cal. 707 (710).

But the present Article of the Act of 1908 is quite general in its terms and is not restricted to applications under O. 21, rules 72 and 89 to 91; it is comprehensive enough to cover all applications under the C. P. Code for setting aside execution sale on any ground whatsoever. An application under the C. P. Code to set aside a sale in execution of a decree falls under this Article, even though the application falls under sec. 47, C. P. Code and not under O. 21, rule 90—Ramdhari v. Deonandan, 2 Pat. 65, 3 P.L.T. 501, 77 I.C. 957, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 507; Ganapathi v. Krishnamachariar, 43 M.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 417, 70 I.C. 743; Kashi Ram v. Hasmat, 1931 A.L.J. 119, 130 I.C. 708, A.I.R. 1931 All. 145 (146); Ma Pwa v. *Md. (1947) Nag. 344, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 52, 1947 N.L.J. 240. In Ram Chandra v. Sarupa, I.L.R. (1939) Lah. 103, 41 P.L.R. 436, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 113, it has been held that there is no article applicable to an application under sec. 47, C. P. Code. In Seshagiri v. Valambul, 65 Mad. L.W. 229, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 377 the Madras High Court has held that an application under Or. 21 r. 90 is governed by this Article. The Patna High Court has held that where the sales are sought to be set aside only under the provisions of Or. 21 r. 90, this Article applies. If, however the allegations amount to a pleading that the sales were void, the party would be entitled to make an application under Art. 181—Md. Umar v. Moti Chand, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 244. This Article applies to an application to set aside a sale on the ground that the personal property of the applicant was sold in execution of a decree against the applicant's father—Satis Chandra v. Nishi Chandra, 46 Cal. 975 (977, 978), 54 I.C. 431; or that part of property sold was his personal property—Chakku v. Nemai, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 192, 189 I.C. 256; or that part of property sold was exempted from sale under sec. 60 of the Civil Procedure Code—Ramsagar v. Ramajodhya, supra; it applies to an application to set aside a sale on the ground that the sale took place contrary to the directions given in the decree—Muthia Chettiar v. Bava Saheb, 27 M.L.J. 605, 26 I.C. 46; it applies where the execution sale is sought to be set aside on the ground of fraud—Arjun v. Gunendra, 18 C.W.N. 1266, 27 I.C. 294; Rai Kishori v. Mukunda, 15 C.W.N. 965, 11 I.C. 295; Ganapathi v. Krishnamachari, 43 M.L.J. 184, 70 I.C. 743, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 417; Ramdhari v. Deonandan, 2 Pat. 65, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 507, 77 I.C. 957, 3 P.L.T. 501; Ghulam v. Negapattinam, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 432, 1950 M.W.N. 240, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 460; it applies to an application to set aside a sale on the ground of irregularity in the service of notice under O. 21 rule 22—Das Narayan v. Mir Mahammad, 6 P.L.J. 319 (326), A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 145, 61 I.C. 823; or on the ground of absence of notice under Or. 21 r. 66 C. P. Code, ——Ghulam v. Nagapattinam, supra; or on the ground that there was no attachment prior to the sale or that there had been a defective attachment—Ma Pwa v. Md. Tambi, 1 Rang. 533, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 124, 77 I.C. 368; or on the ground that the sale was held without valuation as required by sec. 13 of the Bihar Money Lenders Act—Sheo Dayal v. Moti Kuer, 21 Pat. 281, 23 Pat.L.T. 139, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 238.

Article 166 governs all applications made under the Civil Procedure Code to set aside a sale in execution of a decree. Art. 181 is the residuary Article and cannot apply when there is a specific Article which is applicable—Gulzarilal v. Sheocharan, A.I.R. 1935 All 880, 1935 A.L.J. 940, 156 I.C. 389.

An application made after the present Act of 1908 came into operation to set aside a sale held prior to that Act, on the ground of fraud, is governed by Art. 166 of the present Act and not by Art. 178 of the Act of 1877. Section 6 of the General Clauses Act does not preserve the right of the applicant to apply within three years of the date of sale, which he had under Art. 178 of the old Act—Rai Kishori v. Mukunda, 15 C.W.N. 965 (971), 11 I.C. 295; Ganapathi v. Krishnamachari, 43 M.L.J. 184, 70 I.C. 743, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 417.

Although this Article speaks of an application to set aside a sale, still if a notice of motion (given in the original side of the High Court) is made within the period of thirty days, it is in time, and the fact that it comes on for disposal after the expiry of thirty days does not matter—Jnanendra v. Amrita, 60 Cal. 1106, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 886 (887), dissenting from Hinga v. Munna, 31 Cal. 150, and Khetter Mohun v. Kashinath, 20 Cal. 899.

Under the C. P. Code, 1882, if the auction-purchaser failed to obtain possession of the property purchased owing to the judgment-debtor having no saleable interest in the property, the purchaser was entitled under sec. 315 of that Code to receive back the purchase-money, and an application for the refund of the money was governed by Article 178 of the Limitation Act of 1877; the purchaser was not required to make any application for setting aside the sale as contemplated by Article 172 of the Act of 1877. But the law has undergone a change after the passing of the C. P. Code of 1908. Under this Code, a purchaser who fails to obtain possession of the property purchased, on account of the judgment-debtor having no saleable interest in the property, is required to make an application under O. 21, rule 91 to set aside the sale, and then when the sale is set aside, to make another application for refund of the purchase-money under O. 21, rule 93. The first application is governed by Art. 166 of the present Limitation Act, and the second application by Article 181—Makar Ali v. Sarfuddin, 50 Cal. 115 (120-122), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 85, 70 I.C. 606, 27 C.W.N. 183; Balwant v. Bala, 46 Bom. 833, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 205, 67 I.C. 360; Veeraraghavayya v. Venkataraghavamiddi, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 522, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 468, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 226 (F.B.); Ammani v. Sabapathi, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 301, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 422, 1948 M.W.N. 469.

Under O. 21, rule 89, C. P. Code, the judgment-debtor may obtain a reversal of the sale by deposit of money in Court; such deposit must be made within thirty days from the date of sale, as provided by this Article—Chaudhury Rameshwar v. Chaudhury Sureshwar, 2 P.L.J. 164 (165), 39 I.C. 664; Md. Cassim v. David, 6 Rang. 490, A.I.R.

1928 Rang. 286. But it should be remembered at the same time that the mere deposit of money required by O. 21, r. 89 of C. P. Code cannot by itself be treated as an application to set aside the sale. There must be a separate application along with the deposit. If the deposit is made within 30 days but the application is made beyond the period, it is barred—Ram Autar v. Sheo Peary, 12 O.L.J. 137, 87 I.C. 722, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 411; Mathuria v. Ram Lal, 9 I.C. 33 (All.). See also Parath Veetil v. Ambulath Veetil, 32 I.C. 45 (Mad.), and Sarovi Begum v. Haider Shah, 9 A.L.J. 12, 13 I.C. 404.

This Article refers to applications under the C. P. Code. An application to set aside a sale conducted by the Insolvency Court in realising assets of the insolvent under secs. 20 and 23 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907) is governed by Article 181 and not by this Article—Mir Afzal Ali v. Mir Aman Ali, 107 P.L.R. 1914, 23 I.C. 397. So also, an application to set aside a sale under sec. 47 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act is not governed by this Article but by the special provision of sec. 231 of that Act—Nilmoney v. Roban Majhi, 1 P.L.J. 483 (484), 20 C.W.N. 1243, 37 I.C. 683. As regards an application under sec. 173, Bengal Tenancy Act to set aside a sale in execution of a rent decree on the ground that the judgment-debtor has purchased the property in the name of another person, the Calcutta High Court now holds that the application is cognizable under sec. 47, C. P. Code and attracts the operation of Art. 166 of the Limitation Act—Haripada v. Barada Prasad, 51 Cal. 1014, A I.R. 1925 Cal. 351, 82 I.C. 322. But in an earlier case, the same High Court gave the opinion that such application did not come under Art. 166, and that as no other Article of the Limitation Act or of the 3rd Schedule of the Bengal Tenancy Act was applicable, the application fell under the residuary Article 181—Chand Monee v. Santo monee, 24 Cal. 707 (709); and exactly same view was taken by the Patna High Court in Chandrama v. Maharaja of Dumraon, 38 I.C. 209 (case under sec. 173, Bengal Tenancy Act). The Patna High Court also holds that an application under sec. 227 of the Orissa Tenancy Act (corresponding to sec. 173, B. T. Act) for setting aside a sale on the ground that the holding was purchased by the judgment-debtor himself through another person is not an application under the C. P. Code, and Art. 166 cannot apply; and as it does not fall under any of the classes of applications mentioned in Sch. III of the O. T. Act, the special rule of limitation laid down in that Act does not apply; consequently Art. 181 of the Limitation Act will apply—Ananta Charan v. Nimai, 6 Pat. 366, 101 I.C. 564, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 177 (dissenting from 51 Cal. 1014).

670. Void sales:—If the execution sale is not binding on the judgment-debtor or is made without jurisdiction or is an absolute nullity, this Article does not apply —Payidanna v. Lakshminarasamma, 38 Mad. 1076; Shivbai v. Yesu, 43 Bom. 235, 48 I.C. 130; Seshagiri v. Srinivasa, 43 Mad. 313 (315), 56 I.C. 260; Joggeswar v. Jhapal Santal, 51 Cal. 224 (229); Samandam v. Malikandi, 26 M.L.J. 267, 23 I.C. 251; Behari Lal v. Tanuk Lal, 8 P.L.T. 28, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 397, 97 I.C. 798; Sundar Das v. Nikka, 32 P.L.R. 440, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 586, 132 I.C. 493; Rajendra v. Debi, 19 Pat. 393, 21 Pat.L.T. 223, AI.R. 1940 Pat. 303; Nirode v. Harendra, I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal. 280, 42 C.W.N. 87, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 113; Ballabhdas v. Sobhaji, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 344, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 52, 1947 N.L.J. 240; Venkateswara v. Ayyammal, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 22, 1950 M.W.N. 44, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 367. In such a case, the judgment-debtor need not make any application for setting aside the sale, but may bring a suit for recovery of possession, within 12 years from the date of delivery of possession. If, however, the judgment-debtor makes any application, the application would be governed by three years' rule under Art. 181—Behari Lal v. Tanuk Lal, supra; Merla v. Nallaparaju, (1955) 2 S.C.R. 938, 1956 S.C.J. 101, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 87. Article 166 can apply only where it is necessary to have a formal order setting aside the sale.

Where a sale is void ab initio for want of jurisdiction it is not necessary for an applicant to ask the Court to order the decree-holder to deliver back to him the property on the ground that he had obtained no title to it. Where the applicant makes such an application, it is governed by Art. 181 and not by Art. 166, and the mere fact that he has also asked for setting aside the sale will not affect the nature of the application—Ma We Gyan v. Maung Than Byn, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 126. Where there is an execution sale of an insolvent's property after his adjudication and in ignorance of it, and the Official Receiver applies to have it declared void this Article does not apply. Article 181 would apply to such an application—Motilal v. Nathu, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 377, 1940 N.L.J. 505, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 414.

Thus, if the judgment-debtor was not a party to the suit and was not sufficiently represented by any one in the suit, the sale is not binding on him, and does not require to be set aside either by a suit under Art. 12 or by an application under Art. 166—Payidamma v. Lakshminarasamma, 38 Mad. 1076 (1081). If the property of the defendant is exonerated by the decree from liability, a sale of his property held in execution of the decree is void, and an application by the defendant to set aside the sale would be governed by Art. 181, not by this Article—Seshagiri v. Srinivasa, 43 Mad. 313 (315), 56 I.C. 260, 38 M.L.J. 62. Where a sale took place in spite of the fact that the Court had ordered a stay of the sale on a claim having been preferred by a third party to the property, the sale was a nullity, and this Article could not apply to an application for setting aside the sale—Lakshmi Chand v. Phul Chand, 11 Lah.L.J. 457, 125 I.C. 53, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 17 (18).

The plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree for Rs. 86 against the defendant in 1906, and in execution thereof the defendant's house was sold and purchased by the plaintiff in 1910. Subsequently, the defendant succeeded in getting the ex parte decree set aside, and in having the case retried, but the result was a decree passed in 1914 in plaintiff's favour for Rs. 87. The defendant paid up the amount of the second decree and applied to have the previous sale set aside. It was held that the previous sale held under the previous decree which was set aside should be treated as a nullity, as having been no longer based on any solid foundation, and that the application was governed by Art. 181, not by this Article, and was quite in time—Shivabai v. Yesu, 43 Bom. 235 (239), 48 I.C. 130.

But a sale held without notice of the sale proclamation being given to the judgment-debtor is not a nullity, and an application to set it aside is governed by this Article —Neelu v. Subramania, 11 L.W. 59, 1919 M.W.N. 897, 53 I.C. 809. An execution sale of property which turns out not to belong to the judgment-debtor is not void ab initio but voidable only. A decree-holder auction purchaser whose decree has been recorded as satisfied cannot, upon a defect in the judgment-debtor's title appearing, reopen his decree and proceed to obtain further satisfaction of it, without first setting aside the sale under O. 21, r. 91, within the period of limitation prescribed by Art. 166 —Jagannadha v. Basawayya, 53 M.L.J. 255, 104 I.C. 614, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 835; Muthukumaraswami v. Muthusami, 50 Mad. 639, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 394, 100 I.C. 522.

So also, where the proclamation of sale was not published in the village in which the property was situate, the omission was an illegality, but such illegality did not make the sale a nullity, and an application by a judgment-debtor to set aside the sale is governed by Art. 166 and not by Art. 181—Paramasiva v. Pulukaruppa, 47 Mad. 525, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 137, 77 I.C. 631, 45 M.L.J. 829. The mere fact that there was an illegality in the procedure does not make the sale null and void. Article 166 applies to every application to set aside a sale, whether the ground for seeking to set aside the sale is the commission of an irregularity or an illegality—Ibid (at p. 529). In this case Spencer, J. warned against the common practice of stigmatising any and every illegal or irregular sale as a nullity, and remarked (at p. 530): "It is not uncommon to hear a sale described as a nullity if there is an illegality affecting the jurisdiction of the executing Court, and illegalities are commonly supposed to take applications to have sales set aside out of the scope of O. XXI, rule 90. Ever since the Privy Council in Malkarjun v. Narhari (25 Bom. 337) distinguished between a total absence of jurisdiction and an erroneous working out of a valid decree against an estate after its owner's liability is established, there should be no room for misconception. But unfortunately it is not uncommon to hear the expression 'nullity' indiscriminately applied to sales by Court, as if by that magic word the Statute of Limitation was abolished."

Where the notice under O. XXI, rule 22 has not been issued to the judgment-debtor in respect of an execution application filed more than a year after the decree, a sale held in execution is not merely voidable, but void as against the person to whom notice should have been, but was not, issued; such a sale does not require to be set aside; but if a party filed an application to set aside the sale either under sec. 47, C. P. Code or otherwise, the application is governed by Art. 181, not by Article 166. The party may also file a suit to recover the property within 12 years (Art. 144)—Rajagopala v. Ramanujachariar, 47 Mad. 288 (304) (F.B.), 46 M.L.J. 104, 80 I.C. 92, A.I R. 1924 Mad. 431 (disapproving Viswanathan v. Somasundaram, 45 Mad. 875, where such omission was held to be only a material irregularity not invalidating the sale); Monmatha v. Luchmi, 55 Cal. 96, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 60, 105 I.C. 65; Ram Kinkar v. Sthiti Ram, 27 C L.J. 528, 46 I.C. 221; Behari Lal v. Tanuk Lal, 8 P.L.T. 28, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 397, 97 I.C. 798; Hiralal v. Mst. Champa, A.I.R. 1955 All. 226.

A sale held in contravention of the terms of O. 34, rule 14 is not void but voidable, and an application to set aside the sale must be made under this Article within thirty days from the date of the sale. Even if the property is purchased by a third party and not by the mortgagee himself, the purchaser cannot bring a suit to set aside the sale but can only make an application (sec. 47, C. P. Code) to set aside the sale, and the application falls under Art. 166—Bhaichand v. Ranchhoddas, 45 Bom. 174 (186), 58 I.C. 231. An execution sale which is void as being eitirely beyond the jurisdiction of the Court does not require to be set aside at all. Any objection to such a sale is governed not by Art. 166, but by the residuary Art. 181—Ramanand v. Rakhal, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 496, 163 I.C. 34, (55 Cal. 96 folld.); Nirodekali v. Harendra, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 113.

671. Limitation:—Under the plain language of this Article, the period of limitation runs from the date of sale, and not from the date of confirmation of the sale—Sitaram v. Asaram, 19 N.L.R. 162, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 108, 78 I.C. 47; Vana v. Ratilal, 28 Bom.L.R. 510, 95 I.C. 549, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 335; Wasudeo v. Hiralal, 8 N.L.R. 177, 17 I.C. 884. The remark made by Oldfield J. in Tirumalaisami v. Subramania, 40 Mad. 1009 (at p. 1015) that the period of limitation under Article 166 is thirty days from the date of confirmation of the sale, is not correct. It is a mere obiter not necessary for the decision of the case.

If a sale took place on a certain date, but the sale officer did not make a declaration on that date as to who was the purchaser, but gave the information on a subsequent date, it is the latter date which must be taken as the date of sale. The mere making of a bid does not conclude the sale. For the conclusion of a sale it is necessary for the sale officer to accept the final bid and to make a declaration as to who is the purchaser and to order him to pay over 25 per cent. of the purchase-money—Munshi Lal v. Ram Narain, 35 All. 65, 17 I.C. 783.

The period of 30 days prescribed by this Article cannot be extended by the provision of sec. 5—Umrao Singh v. Beni Prasad, 92 I.C. 839 (Lah.), A.I.R. 1926 J. 100; Ram Autar v. Sheo Peary, 12 O.L.J. 137, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 411, 87 I.C. 722. But in computing the period of limitation, the time during which the applicant had been prosecuting a suit in good faith will be deducted under sec. 14—Ganapathi v. Krishnamachari, 43 M.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 417, 70 I.C. 743.

In Brij Behari v. Srinivas, 18 Pat. 327, 20 Pat.L.T. 275, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 248 (F.B.), the Patna High Court has held that an application for setting aside sale under Or. 21, r. 90, C. P. Code as amended by the Patna High Court unaccompanied by the deposit mentioned therein is within time under this Article if made within thirty days from the date of sale though the said application is admitted beyond thirty days on the deposit being made after thirty days. Where no deposit accompanies the application to set aside the sale, the Court has no power to reject such application forthwith.

Where the Collector sells property under the directions of the executing court under R. 211, Oudh Civil Rules, he is only a ministerial officer appointed to sell property and the sale is nevertheless by the Court and it is not completed until the Court formally accepts the bid and declares the purchaser under Or. 21, r. 84, C. P. C. Prior to such order, the bidder, whose bid has been accepted by the sale Officer at the time of the bid does not acquire any interest in the property. And limitation for an application under Or. 21, r. 89, C. P. Code begins to run only from the date on which the Court 'approves' of the sale, and not the date on which the Collector holds the sale—Hari Shankar v. Mt. Amina Bibi, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 131, 1935 O.W.N. 208, 153 I.C. 719; Hali v. Zainul, 1940 O.W.N. 381, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 261, 187 I.C. 603; Ramachandra v Arjun, 1938 N.L.J. 10.

672. Fraud:—If fraud is proved, the applicant is entitled to benefit of sec. 18; that is, the period of limitation runs from the date when the fraud first became known to the applicant—Arjun v. Gunendra, 18 C.W.N. 1266 (1271), 27 I.C. 294; Ramdhari v. Deonandan, 3 P.L.T. 501, 2 Pat. 65, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 507, 77 I.C. 457. But in order to entitle the applicant to get the benefit of sec. 18, he must show not only that there was fraud, but he was by reason of the fraud kept from the knowledge of his right to make the application. See the cases cited under sec. 18 at pages 181, 182, ante. Limitation runs from the date when the fraud first becomes known, and it is immaterial that the sale has been confirmed before that date in ignorance of the fraud—Mohendra v. Gopal, 17 Cal. 769 (dissenting from Gobind v. Umacharan, 14 Cal. 679); Golam v. Judhisthir, 30 Cal. 142 (153); Sheo Ram v. Ikramunnissa, 45 All. 316, 21 A.L.J. 176, A.I.R. 1923 All. 282, 71 I.C. 631. See Note 172 under sec. 18. The initial onus is on him to show that he had no knowledge of the sale until within 30 days of the application—Sobhan v. Gangadhar, A I.R. 1944 Pat. 40, 211 I.C. 533. If no fraud in conducting the sale is made out, the question of the date of knowledge of the judgment-debtor is irrelevant—Galstaun v. Syed Mahomed, 36 C.W.N. 242, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 627.

673. Application by minor:—Under the present Limitation Act, a minor entitled to make an application for setting aside a sale is not given the privilege of sec. 6 (which now applies only to an application for execution of a decree), but under the old Limitation Act he was entitled to such privilege. And a right which accrued to a minor judgment-debtor under the Act of 1877 to apply after attaining majority to set aside a sale which took place before the Act of 1908 came into force, is not taken away by the coming into operation of the later Act, that being a privilege which has been preserved by sec. 6 (c) of the General Clauses Act—Fazal Karim v. Amada, 15 C.W.N. 845 (847), 11 I.C. 401.

167. Complaining of resistance or obstruction to delivery of possession of immoveable property decreed or sold in execution of a decree.	Thirty days.	The date of the resistance or obstruction.

674. Scope:—The application contemplated in this Article is an application under O. 21, r. 97, C. P. Code.

A minor applicant was entitled under the Act of 1877 to make an application under this Article within one month of his attaining majority—Vinayakrao v. Devrao, 11 Bom. 473 (474). But the present Act gives no such privilege to a minor, as section 6 is restricted to applications for execution of decrees, and does not, like the corresponding section of the old Act, apply to all applications.

If an application made beyond the thirty days prescribed by this Article is admitted, no appeal lies against the order of an admission; but in an appeal against the final order passed under sec. 321, C. P. Code, 1882 (now O. 21, rule 99) the order of erroneous admission of the time-barred application can be objected to; and the Appellate Court is bound to entertain the objection and to dismiss the application if it is found to have been wrongly admitted by the lower Court—Lala v. Narayan, 21 Bom. 392 (393).

It is not obligatory upon the purchaser or the decree-holder to proceed to make an application complaining of resistance. The option rests with him to pursue his remedy either summarily by an application under section 328, C. P. Code, 1882 (now O. XXI, r. 97) or by a regular suit complaining of the obstruction and seeking possession. The two remedies are concurrent, and the fact that he has not made an application within 30 days under Article 167 is not a bar to his filing a regular suit—Balvant v. Babaji, 8 Bom. 602 (608). If the purchaser omits to make an application within thirty days as prescribed by this Article, he can bring a suit for possession, provided it is brought within 12 years from the date of his purchase—Shoteenath v. Obhoy, 5 Cal. 331 (333).

If the decree-holder purchaser makes an application within 30 days after the resistance, the application may be registered as a regular suit under sec. 331, C. P. Code and the rights of the parties will be determined as if an ordinary suit for possession has been instituted by the decree-holder against the defendant (under Article 138 or 144)—Namdev v. Ramchandra, 18 Bom. 37 (40). But if the decree-holder makes the application more than 30 days after the date of resistance, the application cannot be registered as a suit, but the decree-holder may file a separate regular suit—Valliammai v. Shanmugam, 7 M.L.T. 223, 6 I.C. 285.

In Madras, it has been laid down that even though the decree-holder or purchaser makes no application under Article 167 (complaining of resistance) within 30 days from the date of resistance, he is entitled to make an application for delivery of possession, the limitation period of which is three years (Art. 180)—Muttia v. Appasami, 13 Mad. 504 (507), followed in Abdul Karim v. Timmaraya, 24 I.C. 512 (Mad.). But the Allahabad and Bombay High Courts are of opinion that the failure to apply within 30 days of the date of resistance is a bar to an application for delivery of possession, because such application is virtually an attempt to renew the old proceedings which were allowed to fall through, and that the only remedy of the decree-holder is a regular suit for possession—Kesri Narain v. Abdul Hasain, 26 All. 365 (367); Vinayakrav v. Devrao, 11 Bom. 473 (474).

Fresh resistance:—Where at first there was an obstruction, but no application was made by the decree-holder within 30 days from the date of the obstruction, and then the decree-holder applied for and obtained a fresh warrant for possession, but was again resisted, held that the decree-holder was entitled to make an application under Article 167 within one month from the date of the second resistance, though more than one month after the first resistance. The fact that no application was made within 30 days from the first resistance did not bar the present application—Ramasekhara v. Dharmaraya, 5 Mad. 113 (114); Kotumal v. Gur Asharam, I.L.R. (1946) Kar. 317, A.I.R. 1947 Sind 118. A separate right arises on each occasion when there is obstruction provided a fresh writ for possession has been issued and the month would run from the time of the particular resistance or obstruction in respect of which the decree-holder is complaining—Kedar v. Baijnath, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 494. Where the decree-holder applied for possession of 19 shops decreed to him, but being resisted made an application complaining of the resistance, and the Court ordered that the decree-holder be put in possession of 15 out of 19 shops, and then the decree-holder having applied for possession of the remaining 4 shops, he was again resisted, and again made an application complaining of the resistance within 30 days from the date of the second resistance, held that the application was not barred—Narain Das v. Hazari Lal, 18 All. 233 (237), following 5 Mad. 113; Surama v. Kiran, 42 C.W.N. 478. See also Official Trustee v. Monmothonath, A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 499.

Where the original resistance was by a third person, and no application was made by the purchaser under Article 167 within 30 days of the resistance, and then the present obstruction is made by the judgment-debtor himself (who does not claim in any way through the third party who was the original obstructor), the purchaser may make an application for delivery of possession (Art. 180) within 3 years of the second resistance—Vinayakrao v. Devrao, 11 Bom. 473 (475).

An application for removal of obstruction filed by a decree-holder auction purchaser is an application under sec. 47, C. P. Code., and is governed by Art. 181 and not by Art. 167—B. I. S. N. & Co. v. Jiwanjee & Co., A.I.R. 1936 Sind 11.

168. For the re-admission of an appeal dismissed for want of prosecution.	Thirty days.	The date of the dismissal.

675. Scope:—This Article applies where the appeal is dismissed under the C. P. Code, and not where it is dismissed under the Rules of the Court. Thus, where an appeal is dismissed under Rule 17 of the Rules of the High Court, Part II, Ch. VIII, for failure to deposit the estimated amount of costs for the preparation of the paper book, an application for re-admission of the appeal does not fall under this Article—Ramhari v. Madan Mohan, 23 Cal. 339 (347). But the Rangoon High Court, dissenting from this view, holds that this Article makes no mention of the C. P. Code or any other Act, and therefore it applies to an application to re-admit an appeal dismissed (before the hearing) for default in payment of the costs of preparing the paper book. Such a dismissal is as much a dismissal for want of prosecution as a dismissal on the day fixed for hearing for default in payment of process-fees under O. 41, r. 18, C. P. Code—Abdul Gamny v. Russell, 8 Rang. 380 (F.B.) 127 I.C. 161, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 228 (231).

This Article has no application where the order of dismissal is ultra vires—Ata Mahamed v. Shankar Das, 69 I.C. 618, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 279.

This Article refers to an application under O. 41, rule 19 of the C. P. Code, which lays down that if an appeal is dismissed under O. 41, r. 11 (2), r. 17 or r. 18, the appellant may apply to the Appellate Court for the re-admission of the appeal, and if sufficient cause is shown for the default, the Court is bound to re-admit the appeal—Somubai v. Shivajirao, 45 Bom. 648 (652), A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 20, 23 Bom.L.R. 110, 60 I.C. 919.

According to the Madras High Court, this Article is not restricted to case of dismissal mentioned in O. 41, r. 19, but applies to other cases of dismissal for default; thus, if an appeal is dismissed under O. XLI, r. 10 (2) for failure to give security for costs, such a failure comes under the general description "want of prosecution" which includes default of appearance, failure to pay costs of process, or failure to furnish security for costs (compare Art. 163); and an application for restoration of the appeal falls under this Article—Sirur v. Mythili Ammal, 61 M.L.J. 688, 136 I.C. 45, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 170. The Calcutta High Court has expressed a doubt whether such an application would fall under this Article, but says that such an application must be made within a reasonable time, and by analogy of this Article this time should be thirty days—Goljan Bibi v. Nafar Ali, 28 C.L.J. 163, 40 I.C. 234 (235).

Where an appeal is dismissed because the appellant fails to pay proclamation charges for the service of the unserved respondent, the appeal is dismissed for want of prosecution and as such falls within this Article—Arjan v. Md. Husain, A.I.R. 1950, E. P. 255.

If on the day fixed for the hearing of the appeal, a pleader appears for the appellant, but he cannot argue the case and applies for an adjournment on the ground that the main pleader engaged by the appellant has gone elsewhere, held that the appearance of a pleader who is instructed only to apply for an adjournment is no appearance; consequently, if the application for adjournment is not granted and the appeal is dismissed, such a dismissal amounts to dismissal for want of prosecution (and not a dismissal on the merits)—Satish Chandra v. Ahara Prasad, 34 Cal. 403 (417) (F.B.). Cf. Lalta Prasad v. Nanda Kishore, 20 All. 66, and other cases cited in Note 659 under Article 163. Contra—Patinhare v. Vellur Krishna, 26 Mad. 267.

Time runs under this Article from the date of dismissal of the appeal, and not when the appellant has knowledge that his appeal has been dismissed—Bissa Mal v. Kesar Singh, 1 Lah. 363 (364), 58 I.C. 789. A comparison between Arts. 163 and 168 on the one hand and Arts, 164 and 169 on the other, will show that while for a plaintiff or appellant seeking to set aside an ex parte decree or order limitation runs only from the date of the decree or order, the starting point of limitation in case of a defendant or respondent seeking such relief, where he has not had due notice, is the date of his knowledge of the decree or order—Ibid.

The provisions of section 6 do not apply to an application under this Article—Sonubai v. Shivajirao, 45 Bom. 648 (653), 60 I.C. 919.

The period of limitation prescribed by this Article cannot be extended under sec. 5 on any ground whatsoever—Krishnasami v. Chengalroya, 47 Mad. 171, 76 I.C. 886, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 114; Ma Sein v. S. T. R. M. Firm, 142 I.C. 185, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 96; Mahi v. Jiwan, 141 P.R. 1879. And so, after the expiry of 30 days from the date of the dismissal, the order of dismissal becomes final. If after the expiry of 30 days the appellant applies for re-admission of the appeal, and the appeal is re-admitted and heard, all the proceedings subsequent to such application, including the re-admission of the appeal, must be set aside as invalid—Kabir v. Khwaja Md. Khan, 44 P.R. 1882.

This Article has no application when the appellant had no notice of date of hearing of appeal and the appeal is dismissed for default. The reason is that the order of dismissal is not under Or. 41 r. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code—Governor General in Council v. Mohamed Ali, 3 D.L.R. (All.) 96; and in such a case restoration of the appeal can be done in exercise of the powers under sec. 151 of the Code—Magraj v. Harnarain, A.I.R. 1951 Rajasthan 47; Anandi v. Jhamman, A.I.R. 1950 Ajmer 6.

But though an application for re-admission of the appeal is time-barred under this Article, it is open to the Court in a proper case to deal with the application under sec. 151 of the C. P. Code, in the exercise of the inherent powers of the Court, and the statute of limitation will have no application to the exercise of such powers—Sonubai v. Shivajirao, 45 Bom. 648 (653). But the Madras High Court dissents from this view in Krishnaswami v. Chengalroya, 47 Mad. 171, 45 M.L.J. 813, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 114, 76 I.C. 836. Where an appellant dies within thirty days of the dismissal of the appeal for default his legal representative cannot make an application for restoration beyond 30 days from the date dismissal. Sec. 151, C. P. Code does not apply—Bhanwarlal v. Gyarsi, A.I.R. 1952 Rajasthan 4.

The period of limitation for an application under this Article is 30 days; and the High Court is not entitled to make any Rule varying the period of limitation prescribed by the Limitation Act. Therefore, Rule 9 (2) of the Appellate Side Procedure of the Rangoon High Court, which prescribes a period of 8 days for an application mentioned in this Article, is ultra vires—Abdul Ganny v. Russell, 8 Rang. 380 (F.B.), 127 I.C. 161, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 228 (231).

169. For the rehearing of an appeal heard ex parte.	Thirty days.	The date of the decree in appeal, or, where notice of the appeal was not duly served, when the applicant has knowledge of the decree.

676. Change:—The words "or where notice.....decree" have been added in 1908. In view of this change, the case of Venkobachar v. Ragavendrachar, 18 M.L.J. 96 which decided that this Article had no application where the respondent had no notice of the appeal, is no longer good law.

677. Scope:—This Article applies only to an application for the rehearing of an appeal heard ex parte. An application to set aside an original decree which was passed ex parte falls under Article 164 and not under Article 169, even though the application is made to the appellate Court—Sankara v. Subraya, 30 Mad. 535 (536).

This Article does not apply where the appeal was heard ex parte by reason of the non-appearance of the respondent owing to his death. So, if, while the appeal was being heard, the respondent died, and an ex parte decree was passed in favour of the appellant, the legal representative of the respondent would get the usual period of six [now three] months (Art. 177) for applying to be brought on the record, and Article 169 would not bar such application—Daulat Rai v. Jagat Ram, 96 P.R. 1918, 47 I.C. 962.

678. Starting point of limitation:—Where notice has not been duly served, the period of limitation runs from the time when the applicant has knowledge of the decree in appeal—Daulat Rai v. Jagat Ram, 96 P.R. 1918, 47 I.C. 962. The expression "notice of appeal" in this Article should be taken to mean notice (actual or constructive) of the date on which the appeal is disposed of, and not of the filing of the appeal—Nil Chand v. Hamel, 42 P.L.R. 38, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 49, 186 I.C. 788. Where the circumstances justifying the service of summons in the manner laid down in Or. 5 r. 17, C. P. Code do not exist and the Court, in accepting the service does not act judicially or in accordance with law by disregarding the provisions of Or. 5, r. 19, C. P. Code, there is no due service within the meaning of this Article—Nripendra v. Mt. Chandramani, A.I.R. 1952 Assam 45.

The knowledge that is referred to in the latter part of this Article must be a clear knowledge of the ex parte decree and not any vague information about the appeal wherein that decree is passed—Union of India v. Abdul Razak, A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 511.

The Court has no power to extend the time prescribed by this Article—Sher v. Mohan Singh, 66 P.R. 1885.

An application for rehearing of an appeal presented originally within the period of limitation but returned for amendment and again presented after amendment after the period of limitation, cannot be rejected as out of time. The amendment relates back to the original presentation—Shama Prasad v. Taki Mallik, 5 C.W.N. 816 (817).

Where the application for rehearing of an appeal has been presented after 30 days, the applicant cannot evade Article 169 by calling his application an application for review of judgment. Such a practice would make this Article a dead letter—Santu v. Arjun Das, 131 P.W.R. 1912, 13 I.C. 318. Cf. Lal Devi v. Amar Nath, 57 I.C. 15 (Lah.) and other cases cited in Note 665 under Art. 164.

170. For leave to appeal as a pauper.	Thirty days.	The date of the decree appealed from.

679. An application for leave to appeal as a pauper must be presented within 30 days as prescribed by this Article. Even if an appeal is at first presented within time on an insufficient Court-fee and then upon demand by the Appellate Court to pay full Court-fee the appellant applies for leave to appeal as a pauper, after the period of limitation prescribed by this Article, the application will be barred—Mahadeo v. Lakshman, 19 Bom. 48 (50). So also, where a memorandum of appeal was presented to the High Court within 90 days but beyond thirty days, on an insufficient Court-fee, and upon demand made by the Court to pay the deficiency the appellant stated that he was enable to pay it and prayed that the memorandum of appeal should be treated as an application for leave to appeal as a pauper, it was held that the memorandum of appeal, not having been presented within 30 days as required by this Article, could not be treated as an application for leave to appeal as a pauper—Gati v. Rachla Kunwar, 13 A.L.J. 635, 29 I.C. 1003 (1004).

Section 5 of the Act of 1877 was not applicable to an application for leave to appeal as a pauper, so that the Court could not grant time on any sufficient cause—Parbati v. Bhola, 12 All. 79. But under the present Act, that section has been extended to an application for leave to appeal. Where the delay in filing an application, for leave to appeal in forma pauperis is due to the fact that copies of judgment and decree appealed from could not be obtained within the time prescribed by this Article, the delay should be excused under sec. 5 of the Act—Ram Charan v. Radha Kishan Ji, A. I.R. 1951 All. 242.

This Article applies to an application for leave to appeal as a pauper, and not to an application for leave to file cross-objections in forma pauperis. A cross-objection may be filed within 30 days from the date of service of the notice of the appeal (O. 41, r. 22, C. P. Code) and if the memorandum of cross-objection is presented within time, the application for leave to file the cross-objection in forma pauperis may be accepted by the Court at any time—Govind v. Radha Ballabh, 15 C.W.N. 205 (211), 12 C.L.J. 173, 7 I.C. 113; Chander Kala v. Dulhin Raj Kuer, 7 Pat. 827, 10 P.L.T. 387, 119 I.C. 900, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 31 (32).

Where an application for leave to appeal as a pauper is refused, the Court should grant a reasonable time to the appellant for paying the stamp-puty on the memorandum of appeal and if he pays the Court-fee within the time allowed, the appeal must be deemed to have been filed as on the original date of presentation of the application for leave to appeal as a pauper—Nallavadiva v. Subramania, 40 Mad. 687 (697). The Limitation Act prescribes the same period of limitation by Arts 152 and 170 respectively for the filing of an appeal itself and for the filing of an application for leave to appeal as a pauper, so that the result would often be that in every case where the pauper application happens to be refused, there would be no time to file a regularly stamped appeal within the period of limitation. Therefore the Court, while dismissing an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, should grant time to the appellant within which to file his appeal, and if he files his appeal within that period, the appeal is in time—Bai Ful v. Desai, 22 Bom. 849 (856); see also Girwar v. Lakshmi, 26 All. 329 (330, 331).

171. Under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, (V of 1908), for an order to set aside an abatement.	Sixty days.	The date of the abatement.

Articles 171 and 172 of the present Act together correspond to Art. 171 of Act XV of 1877.

680. This Article did not originally occur in the Act of 1877 but was added by the Amendment Act XII of 1879. Prior to the introduction of this Article, it was held that an application to set aside an order to abatement was governed by the three years' rule under Article 178 (now Article 181)—Bhoyrub v. Doman, 5 Cal. 139. This decision must be deemed as abrogated by this Article.

An application to set aside an order of abatement must be made within sixty days under this Article; otherwise it will be barred—Laksmi Chand v. Kachubhai, 35 Bom. 393 (395); Bhani Ram v. Narain, 1916 P.W.R. 12, 31 I.C. 697; but the period of limitation under this Article may be extended, if the applicant can show sufficient cause for the delay under sec. 5. See C. P. Code, O. 22, rule 9 (3). See also Bhani Ram v. Narain, supra; and Kandasami v. Murugappa. 16 M.L.T. 547. 26 I.C. 472. In 35 Bom. 393 (395) the application of the son of the deceased plaintiff, who died after the decree for partition was passed but before the partition was carried out in accordance with the decree, to set aside the order of abatement was dismissed as it was presented beyond the period, but the Court exercising its inherent powers to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice, directed that he should be made a defendant, as it was a partition suit in which all parties should be before the Court, and the presence of the deceased plaintiff's son was necessary in order to enable the Court to effectively conduct the partition proceedings.

If no application for substitution is made within the period of six months (now three months) prescribed by Article 176 or 177, the suit will abate (vide O. 22, r. 4, C. P. Code); but it will be open to him to make an application under O. 22, r. 9 (2) to set aside the order of abatement (within 2 months from the date of abatement)—

Lachmi Narain v. Md. Yusuf, 42 All. 540 (541), 59 I.C. 903; Secretary of State v. Jawahir, 36 All. 235 (237). Where an application to set aside the order of abatement and to revive the suit was made by the legal representatives of the plaintiff more than six months (but within eight months) after the plaintiff's death, the proper procedure for the Court would be first to declare the suit to have abated, and then at once to pass an order seting aside the abatement and reviving the suit, if sufficient cause was shown for setting aside the order of abatement—Ram Pratap v. Lal Chand, 9 C.W.N. 369 (370); Fulbahu v. Goculdas, 9 Bom. 275 (277); Lachmi Narain v. Md. Yusuf, 42 All. 540 (541).

681. Application by reversioner:—The nearest reversioner to the estate of a deceased Hindu instituted a suit to declare certain alienation made by the widow as void beyond her life-time, and died pending the hearing. Within six months of his death and without hearing any others among the surviving body of reversioners, the lower Court passed an order declaring that the suit had abated. Nearly two years after, the next reversioner applied to set aside the abatement, to be brought on the record as the legal represntative of the deceased, and to be allowed to continue the suit. Held, that a suit brought by a reversioner is one really brought on behalf of the entire body of reversioners; if one reversioner dies, the next reversioner can continue it; the suit does not abate, because the next reversioner must be deemed to have been already a party thereto; the present application to continue the suit is not an application to set aside the abatement (because the order of abatement is invalid and need not be set aside) but an application under O. 1, rules 1 and 8 (2), and is governed not by this Article but by Article 181—Krishnaswamy v. Seetalakshmi, 1918 M.W.N. 888, 9 L.W. 166, 49 I.C. 268.

172. Under the same Code by the assignee or the receiver of an insolvent plaintiff or appellant for an order to set aside the dismissal of a suit or an appeal.	Sixty days.	The date of the order of dismissal.

This was Article 171 of the Act of 1877.

173. For a review of judgment except in the cases provided for by article 161 and article 162.	Ninety days.	The date of the decree or order.

682. Before the enactment of Article 161, an application for review of a judgment of a Small Cause Court was governed by his Article; see Modan v. Purna, 10 Cal. 297 (298). Now it falls under Article 161.

This Article applies where a review, and not a new trial, is the proper remedy—Ibid.

An application for a review of the High Court's decree (appellate) must be presented within 90 days of the decree, and every day's delay over that period must be duly accounted for—Ramaswami v. Venkatanarasimha, 3 L.W. 244, 32 I.C. 1000.

This Article is restricted to an application for review under the C. P. Code, and does not apply to an application under sec. 8 (1) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, for review of judgment passed by the High Court in its Insolvency jurisdiction—In re Nasse, 7 Rang. 201, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 229 (232), 118 I.C. 615. So also, this Article is not attracted to an application for review of the order of an appellate officer exercising his function under the provisions of the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act—Sankatara v. Mahomed Ibrahim, 48 C.W.N. 492.

Even assuming that the filing of a copy of the decree is not necessary, an applicant for review would be entitled to the benefit of sec. 12 (2) if he has actually obtained and filed such a copy—Abdul Aziz v. Jai Ram, A.I.R. 1951 Him-Pra. 67.

Time runs from the date of the decree or order, and not from the date when the applicant made a discovery of a new evidence which is the ground for review. But the Court can extend the time for any sufficient cause—Debi Dayal v. Ambica, A.I.R. 1929 All. 545 (547), 119 I.C. 99. Nor does time run from the date when the applicant came to have knowledge of the decree or order. But in such a case, it would be open to the applicant to apply for an extension of time under sec. 5, if in fact he could prove that he had no knowledge of the decree or order within 90 days before the application—Baldeo v. Sukhdas, A.I.R. 1929 All. 485 (488), 121 I.C. 552.

174. For the issue of a notice under the same Code, to show cause why any payment made out of Court of any money payable under a decree or any adjustment of the decree should not be recorded as certified.	Ninety days.	When the payment or adjustment is made.

This Article corresponds to Art. 173A of Act XV of 1877.

683. The provisions of Art. 174 do not apply to a certification by a decree-holder—Sundar Das v. Bishen Das, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 194, 15 Lah. 910, 37 P.L.R. 196, 155 I C. 315; Abid v. Kunj Behari, A.I.R. 1939 All. 581, 184 I.C. 668; Vidyadhar v. Ramzan, 1952 A.L.J. 556, A.I.R. 1952 All. 715 (F.B.); Akbar Ali v. Ishwar Saran, A.I.R. 1957 All. 622. The application referred to in this Article is an application under O. XXI, rule 2 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code, made by the judgment-debtor. This Article has no application where the decree-holder takes steps under O. 21, r. 2, (1) to report satisfaction suo motu—Gopal Das v. Gangaram, 1888 A.W.N. 115. The decree-holder may apply at any time for having the payment or adjustment certified to the Court—Tukaram v. Babaji, 21 Bom. 122 (124). This Article does not impose a time limit for a certification by the decree-holder—Abid v. Kunj Behari, supra. A judgment-debtor who pleads payment or adjustment must issue notice upon the decree-holder within 90 days of the payment or adjustment, before he can certify payment. But there is no corresponding obligation imposed upon the decree-holder. He may certify payment at any time before execution or he may do so in his application for execution—Eusufzeman v. Sanchia, 43 Cal. 207 (210); Sheikh Elahi v. Nawab Lal, 4 P.L.J. 159 (169), 50 I.C. 364; Jatindra v. Gagan Chandra, 46 Cal. 22 (24), 45 I.C. 903; Balay Md. v. Aijanmal, 26 C.W.N. 529, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 30, 68 I.C. 780;

Bhajan Lal v. Cheda Mal, 12 A.L J. 825, 24 I.C. 215. O. 21, r. 2 contemplates that the decree-holder should certify the payment within a reasonable time in order that it might be recorded by the Court, and the judgment-debtor is protected by the provision that in the event of the decree-holder failing to certify the payment to the Court, the judgment-dector may apply to the Court under O 21, r. 2 (2) for a notice to issue to the decree-holder to show cause why the payment should not be recorded as certified, provision thereof being made under Art. 174 that such application should be made within 90 days of the payment. In view of these provis.ons, apparently, it was not thought necessary to provide any specified time within which the judgment-creditor must certify the payment under O. 21, r. 2 (1)—Shri Prakash v. Allahabad Bank, 3 Luck. 684 (P.C.), 1929 A.L J. 33, 31 Bom.L.R. 289, 33 C.W.N. 267 (273), 56 M.L.J. 233, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 19, 114 I C. 581. But he must certify within such time as is required to save the decree from limitation. See Note 691 under Art. 181.

This Article applies to an application made by the representative of the judgment-debtor. He is bound to apply within the period prescribed by this Article—Panduranga v. Vythilinga, 30 Mad. 537 (540).

If the judgment-debtor makes any payment or adjustment towards the decree, but no application is made to get it certified within the period prescribed by this Article, the judgment-debtor will not be entitled to obtain credit for those payments or to set up the payment or adjustment as a bar to the execution of the decree. See O. 21, r. 2 (3), C. P. Code. He cannot evade the provisions of this Article by securing investigation of the same matter under section 47, C. P. Code during the execution proceedings—Panduranga v. Vythilinga, 30 Mad. 537 (540); Golam Muzaffar v. Goloke Charan, 25 I C. 884 (Cal.); Kutubulla v. Durga Charan, 16 C.W.N. 396 (397), 13 I.C. 424; Mukunda Lal v. Bansidhar, 50 Cal. 468 (473), A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 342, 76 I.C. 311; Nistarini v. Kasim Ali, 12 C L.J. 65, 7 I.C. 258; Maroti v. Narayan, A I.R. 1925 Nag. 374; Jogendra v. Probhat, 19 C.W.N. 650, 19 C.L.J. 126, 21 I.C. 926; Monmohan v. Dwarka Nath, 7 I.C. 55, 12 C.L.J. 312; Kamini Devi v. Aghore Nath, 14 C.W.N. 357, 11 C.L.J. 91; Mulchand v. Champa, 26 P.L.R. 250, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 566, 87 I.C. 635. If he were allowed to do so, the provisions of Article 174 would be rendered nugatory—Kamini Devi v. Aghore Kumar, supra; Mukunda v. Bansidhar, supra. The Bombay High Court once took a contrary view in Trimbak v. Hari Laxman, 34 Bom. 575 (580), where Heaton, J. observed (by way of obiter) that the usual way in which the judgment-debtor informs the Court of a payment or adjustment is that when the decree-holder applies for execution, he (the judgment-debtor) pleads a payment or adjustment, and if the Court were debarred from enquiring into the payment or adjustment on the ground that it is uncertified, the effect would be to encourage fraud on the part of the decree-holder. The same view was expressed in another Bombay case—Hansa v. Bhawa, 40 Bom. 333 (336). But this view has been overruled by the Full Bench in Mehbunnissa v. Mehedunissa, 49 Bom. 548 (F.B.), 27 Bom.L.R. 403, A.I R. 1925 Bom. 309, 95 I.C. 687, where it has been said that the words of O. 21, r. 2 (3) are plain and unambiguous, and that the executing Court is debarred from considering any allegation that a payment not certified has been made.

This Article speaks of payment, and obviously refers only to money decrees and not to decrees for possession of immoveable properties; an application to record delivery of land made out of Court is not governed by this Article—Sankaran v. Kanara, 22 Mad. 182 (186). So also, this Article does not apply where the decree is not a decree for payment of money but a mortgage decree for sale in case the money due is not paid—Mallikarjuna v. Narasimha, 24 Mad. 512 (514). This Article refers to sec. 258, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 21, r. 2), and that section does not apply to an application made under sec. 89, Transfer of Property Act (now O. 34, r. 5, C. P. Code); therefore the limitation prescribed by this Article does not apply to any payment made before a final decree is made; and the defendant is not debarred from setting up the plea of payment—Hatem Ali v. Abdul Guffur, 8 C.W.N. 102 (104). But see Nistarini v. Kasim Ali, 14 C.W.N. 357, 4 I.C. 402.

Where under the terms of a decree the decree-holders remained in possession of the property, the amounts received by the decree-holders were not "money payable under a decree"; consequently these receipts need not be certified to the Court within 90 days from the date on which they were received—Yella Reddi v. Syed Muhammadali, 39 Mad. 1026 (1027); Vaidhinathasamy v. Somasundaram, 28 Mad. 473 (478) (F.B.). [Art. 174 of the old Act of 1877 provided for an application by a creditor of an insolvent judgment-debtor under sec. 353 of the C. P. Code, 1882. But after the law relating to insolvents was transferred from the C. P. Code to the Insolvency Acts, Art. 174 of the Limitation Act of 1877 was repealed. And since the Provincial Insolvency Act prescribes no period of limitation for an application by the creditor of an insolvent to be brought on the schedule of creditors, such applications are not barred by any rule of limitation, and the matter is left to the discretion of the Insolvency Court—Jhan Bahadur v. Bailiff, 5 Rang. 384, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 263 (264), 104 I.C. 816.]

Where under the terms of an agreement for an adjustment there would be no adjustment until and unless the judgment debtor is ready to pay the whole of the agreed sum in one payment, and the judgment-debtor would not be entitled to apply for the adjustment to be certified until the amount is tendered, the agreement does not become an adjustment until tender is made, and limitation for an application to record adjustment therefore commences to run only from the date of tender and not from the date of agreement—Gajanand v. Hari Bux, I.L.R. (1943) 1 Cal. 195, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 634, 211 I.C. 154.

175. For payment of the amount of a decree by instalments.	Six months.	The date of the decree.

This Article refers to an application made by the judgment-debtor under O. 20, rule 11 (2), C. P. Code.

This Article corresponds to Article 175A of the Act of 1877.

176. Under the same Code to have the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or of a deceased appellant made a party.	Ninety days.	The date of the death of the deceased plaintiff or appellant.

684. By sec. 2 of the Indian Limitation and C. P. Code Amendment Act (XXVI of 1920) the period of limitation has been reduced from "six months" to "ninety days." But where an appellant had died before the Amendment Act came into operation, his legal representative would get six months' time under this Article as it stood before the amendment—Ajit Singh v. Bhagabati, 36 C.L.J. 263, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 291, 70 I.C. 370.

It is interesting to note the changes in the period of limitation. This Article did not exist in the Act of 1871, and the period of limitation for the application was probably 3 years under the general Article. It appeared for the first time in the Act of 1877, and the period allowed was sixty days; then in 1888 the period was extended to six months. This period was retained in the Act of 1908 until recently it has been curtailed to 90 days. The same remarks apply also to Article 177.

Applications governed by this Article are applications made in the course of the suit. If the plaintiff died after having obtained (under s. 88, T. P. Act) a decree for sale on a mortgage and his sons applied more than six months after their father's death, to be brought on the record in the place of the deceased and to have an order absolute for sale made in their favour, held that as the suit was at an end when the conditional decree for sale was passed, the application was not one made in the course of the suit; this Article therefore did not apply and the application was not barred—Mehari Bibi v. Yakub, 11 C.W.N. 156 (157, 158).

The words 'plaintiff or appellant' show that this Article applies to applications made in the course of a suit or an appeal, and not to applications made during execution proceedings. Thus, it does not govern an application made by the representative of a deceased decree-holder claiming admission to continue the execution proceedings commenced by the deceased. The execution proceeding does not abate on the decree-holder's death; consequently his representative may come in at any time—Gulab Das v. Lakshman, 3 Bom. 221; Dulari v. Mohan Singh, 3 All. 759. See also Jaggattarini v. Rakhal, 10 C.L.J. 398, 3 I.C. 324. But he must of course apply within the period of limitation prescribed by Article 182—Dulari v. Mohan Singh, supra. So also, this Article is not applicable to a revision petition as there is nothing in this Article which would attract its provisions to such an application—Md. Saadat Ali v. Administrator, Corporation of City of Lahore, A.I.R. 1949 Lah. 186, Pak.L.R. (1948) Lah. 225; Jowala Singh v. Malkan, A.I.R. 1958 Punj. 171.

So also, this Article does not govern an application made by the representatives of a plaintiff coming in to appeal, where the plaintiff has died after decree. The representative has the same period to make his appeal as the plaintiff himself would have had—Ramananda v. Minatchi, 3 Mad. 236.

Where there are two rival claimants, the right to be brought on the record vests in the one or the other rival claimant from the date of death of the deceased party. The limitation therefore begins to run against both the rival claimants and each would get barred by time at the expiry of the limitation prescribed by Art. 176. One rival claimant who has not applied to be brought on the record within the limitation period, cannot continue a suit revived by his rival's application in time as the proceedings initiated by one rival claimant can never have been intended to enure for the other's benefit. The principle is that where each claims the benefit to continue the suit exclusively to himself, the case is one of clear antagonism between them, and one cannot be said to represent the other at all in the matter of substitution of names —Amritibai v. Ratanlal, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 343, 104 I.C. 398. But the matter would be different if both of them had a joint right to sue or to continue the suit in their joint names, and only one of them had sued or applied for substitution under a bona fide belief that he or she was or could be the sole plaintiff or sole legal representative—Ibid. Similarly where one party has been impleaded in time as a legal representative and it is found necessary later on to implead another person as the real legal representative and there is nothing to suggest that the earlier petition impleading the wrong person as the legal representative was not bonafide, there is no question of limitation as such which precludes the latter petition being entertained—Vedachala v. Sivasankari, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 241, 1948 M.W.N. 610.

This Article has no application to an application to add legal representatives of deceased applicants under the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act. The reason is that the provisions of O. 22 C. P. Code, in regard to substitution and abatement are inconsistent with the provisions of sec. 50 of the Encumbered Estates Act—Daya Ram v. Surendra, 1940 O.W.N. 735, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 394, 189 I.C. 388.

177. Under the same Code to have the legal representative of a deceased defendant or of a deceased respondent made a party.	Ninety days.	The date of the death of the deceased defendant or respondent.

This Article corresponds to Art. 175C of the Act of 1877.

685. Change:—The period of limitation has been reduced from six months to 90 days by section 2 of the Indian Limitation and C. P. Code Amendment Act (XXVI of 1920), and by the Amending and Repealing Act 1923 (IX of 1923).

Section 2 of the Act XXVI of 1920 ran as follows :—

"In the Third Division of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, in Articles 176, 178 and 179, for the word "Ditto" in the second column, the words "Ninety days," "Six months" and "Ninety days" respectively shall be substituted

It should be noted however that though this section made no mention of Article 177, its effect was to alter the period of six months provided by this Article into ninety days; for by retaining the 'Ditto' in Article 177 and changing the 'Ditto' in Article 176 to 'Ninety days," it practically prescribed 90 days for Article 177.

But as no mention was made of Article 177 in the above section, the Lahore High Court (and then the other High Courts also) held that the Amendment Act, XXVI of 1920 did not reduce the period of limitation of Article 177, as no mention of that Article was made in the body of the Amendment Act, though there might be mention of it in the Statement of Objects and Reasons—Gobind Das v. Rup Kishore, 4 Lah. 367; Rup Kishore v. Bhagat Govind Das, A I.R. 1922 Lah. 211, 69 I.C. 748; Arjun Das v. Nanak Chand, 78 I.C. 771; Skinner v. Makarram Ali, 92 I.C. 330, A.I.R. 1925 All. 77; Subramania v. Shanmugam, 49 M.L.J. 363, 92 I.C. 566, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 65; Rai Brijnandan v. Mahabir, 97 I C. 316. The same argument was advanced by Counsel in the Calcutta High Court case of Seodoyal v. Joharmull, 50 Cal. 549, 75 I.C. 81.

In view of this interpretation, this Article has been amended by sec. 2 of the Amending and Repealing Act, 1923 (XI of 1923) as follows :—

"2. In the Third Division of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, in Articles 176, 177, and 179, for each of the entries in the second column, the entry "ninety days" shall be substituted ." See Gazette of India, 1923, Part IV, p. 54.

The reasons have been thus stated: "This amendment is designed to correct a drafting error which had the effect of leaving the period of limitation in Article 177 as six months though the intention was to reduce it to ninety days." "In a recent case before the High Court of Judicature at Lahore a doubt arose as to the effect of amendments made by Act XXVI of 1920 in the period of limitation prescribed in items 176, 177 and 179 of the Schedule. The object of the present amendment is to substitute for the 'Dittos' the actual periods prescribed"—Gazette of India, 1923, Part V, pp. 93, 94.

Moreover, to prevent further misconceptions in the future, the Amending and Repealing Act of 1923 has omitted all 'Dittos' from the 2nd columns of all the Articles of the Limitation Act, and substituted the actual periods of limitation.

686. Scope:—This Article refers to applications under O. 22, rules 4 and 11, C. P. Code, 1908 (secs. 368 and 582, C. P. Code, 1882). But it does not refer to an application under O. 22, rule 2 (sec. 362 of the old Code). Thus, where one of several respondents dies and the right of appeal survives against the surviving respondents alone, an application for a declaration (under O. 22, rule 2) that the surviving respondents are the legal representatives of the deceased and that the appeal shall proceed against them does not fall under this Article. It would be governed by the general Article 181—Shamanund v. Rajnarain, 11 C.W.N. 186 (188).

This Article has no application to the case of the death of a person who was not a defendant in a pending suit as this Article prescribes time limit for substituting the legal representatives of a deceased defendant. Thus, where pending the disposal of an application to substitute A along with his brothers in the place of their father who died pending the suit, A himself dies, the suit does not abate as against A, as he was not a party defendant to the suit. An application to substitute the heirs of A is not an application for substitution but for amendment of the original application for substitution and is governed by Art. 181 and not by this Article—Manindra v. Santi, 55 C.W.N. 306, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 518.

This Article applies to applications made in the course of a suit or an appeal, and does not apply to an application for substitution made in execution proceedings. Such an application may be made beyond six months, and the execution proceedings will not abate—Amolak Ram v. Shanu Ram, 174 P.L.R. 1911, 10 I.C. 405; Sheogobind v. Kishunbansi, 11 Pat. 546, 138 I C. 91, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 222 (223). So, where after attachment of the judgment-debtor's property in execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor dies, the decree-holder is not bound to bring upon the record the legal representative of the judgment-debtor. He can execute the decree against the legal representative of the deceased, so long as execution is not barred by limitation—Bhagwan Das v. Jugal Kishore, 42 All. 570 (573), 18 A.L.J. 735, 57 I.C. 610. But this Article applies to an appeal from an order made in execution proceedings. Therefore, if the respondent decree-holder died pending the appeal, an application to bring his legal representatives on record should be made within 90 days as prescribed by this Article, and not within 3 years under Art. 181—Rajah of Kalahasti v. Jagannadha, 55 Mad. 1006, 63 M.L.J. 827, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 574 (579), 139 I.C. 402; Gangu v. Muthenna, 40 L.W. 623, 151 I C. 777, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 664.

This Article does not apply where the defendant dies after the decree in a suit but before any final order has been passed, and his legal representatives apply to be brought on the record in the further proceedings taken in pursuance of the decree. To such a case Art. 181 applies, and as it is an application in a 'pending suit' within the meaning of section 372, C. P. Code (for as there has not been any final order, the suit must be treated as pending) the right to apply under Article 181 accrues from day to day and the application is not barred, even though made more than three years after the defendant's death—Surendra Keshab v. Khetter Krishto, 30 Cal. 609 (following Kedar Nath v. Harra Chand, 8 Cal. 420). The ratio decidendi of the judgment is not very clear. It is difficult to understand why section 372, C. P. Code was applied instead of sec. 368, which is in fact more appropriate here, for that section refers to devolution of interest by death, whereas sec. 372 refers to other cases of devolution of interest.

In another Calcutta case it was held that if during the pendency of a suit to recover land a sole defendant died, the plaintiff's application to bring in the legal representatives of the deceased fell under section 372, C. P. Code (now O. 22, rule 10) and not under section 368 (now O. 22, rule 4) and that the applicant had three years to make the application under Article 178 (now 181) of the Limitation Act—Benode Mohini v. Sarat, 8 Cal. 837. The learned Judge in this case gave a very pedantic interpretation to the expression "right to sue" occurring in section 368, and held that the expression was used in the Code in the sense in which the term "cause of action" had an accepted meaning in the English Judicature Act, i.e., it was used with reference to personal actions for damages, for breach of contract or for tort, and did not apply to suits for recovery of land; and that if a devolution of interest took place by death in a suit relating to possession of land, the case would come not under section 368 but under the general provisions of section 372 which relate to "creations, assignment or devolution of interest." This case has been dissented from by the other High Courts in Ojagar v. Niagat, 1890 A.W.N. 21, Jamnadas v. Sorabji, 16 Bom. 27, and Jafar v. Jawaya, 76 P.R. 1884. The Punjab Chief Court points out that the expression "cause of action" or "right to sue" means any cause of action whether the suit be for damages or for personal property or for immoveable property or for some peculiar relief—Jafar v. Jaiwaya, supra. Further, since the expression used in the Judicature Act is "cause of action" whereas the C. P. Code uses the simpler expression "right to sue," this latter expression should be taken in its ordinary acceptation and not in the highly technical sense in which the former expression is used in the English Act. Moreover, as pointed out in the Bombay case, section 386 specifically provides for a case where a defendant or sole defendant dies, whereas sec. 372 refers to "other cases of creation, assignment or devolution of interest"—Jamnadas v. Sorabji, 16 Bom. 27 (28). In Venkat Narsimhan v. Konda, A.I.R. 1951 Hyderabad 55 it has been held that where one of the applicants in revision from an interlocutory order in a suit dies during the pendency of the revision and his name is struck off and the revision allowed in respect of the remaining applicants and the case sent back to the original Court for trial on merits, an application for substitution of the legal representatives of the deceased is maintainable in the original Court within reasonable time. In such a case no question of limitation arises. No question of limitation will arise if the petition for substitution was within time and an additional legal representative can always be added though his name was not disclosed in the first petition for substitution —Reddy v. Reddy, A.I.R. 1954 Hyd. 166 (F.B.).

This Article equally applies to an application for substitution made in the course of a second appeal as well as in the course of a first appeal, and is not restricted to applications made during first appeals only. Thus, where the respondent in a second appeal died during the pendency of the appeal, an application by the appellants to substitute his heirs on the record is governed by the six months' rule under Art. 177, and not by the three years' rule of Art. 181—Upendra v. Sham Lal, 34 Cal. 1020 (1023); Madhuban v. Narain Das, 29 All. 535 (536); Sheikh Adam v. Balaji, 10 Bom.L.R. 509. The Madras High Court, however, held that the period of limitation for bringing the legal representative of a deceased respondent in second appeal was three years and not six months—Susya Pillai v. Aiyakannu, 29 Mad. 529 (F.B.) (overruling Vakkalagadda Narasimham v. Vahizulla, 28 Mad. 498). This conflict of opinion was due to the defective language of Article 175C of the Act of 1877, the first column of which ran thus: "Under sec. 368 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to have the legal representative of a deceased defendant made a defendant, or under that section and section 582 of the same Code, to have the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff-respondent or defendant-respondent made a plaintiff-respondent or defendant-respondent." Thus, the words "plaintiff respondent" and "defendant respondent" led the Madras High Court to hold that this Article was restricted to first appeals only. The language of the present Article is quite general and the word 'respondent' undoubtedly includes a respondent in second appeal.

An application made after passing of the Act of 1908 to bring the legal representative of the deceased respondent who had died during the second appeal while the Act of 1877 was in force, will be governed by the six (now three) months' rule under the present Article, and not by the three years' rule (which was the opinion of the Madras High Court; see 29 Mad. 529, supra) of the Act of 1877. This cannot cause any hardship to the applicant, for though the new Limitation Act had been passed on the 7th August 1908, the period of its coming into operation was postponed till the 1st January 1909; and the applicant could have made his application during this intervening period. If he has not done so, his application must be dismissed as barred. Even the benefit of section 30 does not avail to the applicant as that section has reference to suits and not to applications—Arayil v. Sankaran, 34 Mad. 292, (293, 294), 20 M.L.J. 347, 5 I.C. 420.

This Article does not apply to proceedings under the Companies Act. So when a member against whom an application is made for an order for payment of the balance of contribution due from him dies pending the application, it is not necessary that his heirs should be substituted within the time prescribed by this Article—Sumitra v. Sitamarhi Sugar Works, Ltd., 19 Pat.L.T. 214, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 287, 173 I.C. 898.

Neither Article 176 nor Article 177 applies to an Income-Tax reference under sec. 66 (1) of the Income Tax Act of 1922 or to an application made by the Commissioner of Income-Tax for bringing the legal representatives of a deceased assessee on the record—Commissioner of Income-Tax v. Varshani, A.I.R. 1953 All. 414.

Extension of time for sufficient cause:—Under section 372A of the C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 22, r. 9, C. P. Code, 1908), sec. 5 of the Limitation Act was made applicable to applications under sec. 368A of that Code (O. 22, r. 4 of the present Code), so that an application for substitution could have been made beyond the period of six months prescribed by Article 175C, if there was sufficient cause for delay, as section 368 of the C. P. Code in express terms gave power to the Court to enlarge the period of six months for sufficient cause shown. See Madhuban v. Narain, 29 All. 535 (537); Chajmal v. Jagdamba, 11 All. 408. Thus, the appellant's ignorance of the fact of the respondent's death was a sufficient cause for not making the application within the time limited—Gaman v. Baksha, 42 P.R. 1887; Dadu v. Kadu, 113 P.R. 1907. So also, where the plaintiff acting bona fide brought in a wrong person as the legal representative of a deceased defendant within time, but came to know of the error more than six months after the death of the defendant, and then applied to have the right person brought on the record, his latter application would not be barred—Syed Hossein v. Abdur Rahim, 7 C.W.N. 529. But under the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, the law has been changed, for under O. 22, r. 4, if no application for substitution is made within the time limited (now three months), the suit or appeal shall abate, and that rule gives the Court no power to enlarge the time for sufficient cause. But after abatement, it is open to the plaintiff or appellant to make an application, under O. 22, r. 9, to set aside the order of abatement (within the period of two months prescribed by Article 171) on the ground that he was prevented by sufficient cause from making the application for substitution within time. See Secy. of State v. Jawahir, 36 All. 235 (237); Lachmi Narain v. Yusuf, 42 All. 540 (541), 18 A.L.J. 688, 59 I.C. 903; Daya Singh v. Buta Singh, 188 P.R. 1916, 38 I.C. 7 Where an application under O. 22, r. 4 (1), C. P. C., is made on the day on which a Court is first available, no question of the appeal having abated under O. 22, r. 4 (3) arises —Kamala v. Sridam, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 569.

178. Under the Arbitration Act, 1940, for the filing in Court of an award.	Ninety days.	The date of service of the notice of the making of the award.

The present Article was substituted by sec. 49 and Fourth Schedule of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (10 of 1940) (with effect from 1st July, 1940).

Formerly the Article corresponded to Art. 176 of Act XV of 1877,

687. Scope of Article:—This Article applies only when an application is made by the parties for filing an award. The arbitrators themselves may file an award more than six months after it is made, because the fact of the arbitrators in handing over the award to the proper officers of Court for the purpose of filing it is not an application for filing an award; this Article has therefore no application to the case—Roberts v. Harrison, 7 Cal. 333 (336) (case under the article before amendment of 1940. They can simply make over the award to the Court to be filed—Ibid (at p. 337).

This Article may apply to an application by a party to compel an arbitrator to file his award—Ibid (at p. 337). This is so even under the Article as it stands at present after the amendment of 1940. The article has reference to the application made by a party to the arbitration proceedings and is not intended to apply to an arbitrator filing an award in Court—Jhon v. Soomar, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 466, A.I.R. 1943 Sind 33; Jayantilal v. Chhaganlal, I.L.R. (1946) Bom. 113, 47 Bom.L.R. 317, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 417; Dwarka v. Pearylal, 1948 A.L.J. 524, A.I.R. 1949 All. 234; Gendalal v. Mathuradas, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 32; Dasaratha Rao v. Ramaswamy, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 893, A.I.R. (1956) Mad. 134, 1955 M.W.N. 832. So an award filed more than ninety days after notice of it had been served is not hit by this Article—Keshri v. Megh Raj, I.L.R. (1942) 2 Cal. 69, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 542, 203 I.C. 269. The filing of an award is a ministerial act of the arbitrator and has nothing to do with the validity of the award excepting so far as this Article affects the question—Ebrahim v. N. I. Oil Industries, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 230, 85 C.L.J. 176.

The 'date of the award' is the date on which it is delivered to the parties, so that they may have notice of its contents and may give effect to it, and not the date on which it is actually written and signed—Sreenath Chatterjee v. Kylash Chunder, 21 W.R. 248. When the award is not delivered to the parties till some time after it is made, limitation runs from the date of the delivery. It is clearly the intention of the Legislature that a party to an arbitration should have six months to enforce the award from the time when he is in a position to enforce it—Dutta Singh v. Dosad Bahadur, 9 Cal. 575 (578). The date on which a draft award was made is not the date of the award. The draft award is not an award at all, and its publication is not the publication of the award. It is the date of the final award that is the starting point of limitation—Kunja v. Banwari, 4 P.L.J. 394 (410), 48 I.C. 711, (cases under old article).

The notice referred to in the third column of this Article, as amended by the Arbitration Act, 1940 is the notice in writing required by sec. 14 (1) of the Arbitration Act to be given by the arbitrators. Time runs only from the date of the service of the notice under sec. 14 (1) of the said Act—Jagdish v. Sunder, 27 Pat. 86, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 393; and has no reference to the time when the arbitrators or umpire are requested to file the award—Lachmi v. Gobordhan, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 171.

The period of limitation prescribed by this Article cannot be extended by section 5, as that section does not apply to an application for filing an award—Ram Ugrah v. Achraj Nath, 38 All. 85 (91), 13 A.L.J. 1115, 31 I.C. 899.

If an award is not made a rule of Court (i.e., filed) within the period prescribed by this Article, the award does not become invalid and unenforceable. Therefore, if the plaintiff brings a suit, and the defendant meets the plaintiff's suit by producing an award (which had not been filed within the period of limitation prescribed by this Article) praying that a decree be passed in terms of the award, the Court may nevertheless pass a decree in the plaintiff's suit in terms of the award—Thakur Din v. Bhagwan Din, 124 I.C. 448, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 51. An application filed along with an award for making it a rule of the Court is not governed by this Article—Jaikishen v Ram Lal, 46 P.L.R. 232, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 398; Radha Kishen v. Madho Krishna, A.I.R. 1952 All. 856.

A person in whose favour an award is made may, instead of filing an application under para. 20 of Sch. II, C. P. Code, file a regular suit, and in that case the provisions of Art. 178 have no application—Retan Chand v. Rup Lal, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 134.

179. By a person desiring to appeal under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, to the Supreme Court, for leave to appeal.	Ninety days.	The date of the decree appealed from.

This Article corresponds to Article 177 of the Act of 1877.

The words "Code of Civil Procedure" were substituted for the words "same Code" by sec. 49 and Fourth Schedule of the Arbitration Act, 1940 (10 of 1940) (with effect from 1st July, 1940) and the words "the Supreme Court" were substituted for the words "His Majesty in Council" by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950 issued under the Constitution of India.

688. By section 2 of the Indian Limitation Act and C. P. Code Amendment Act (XXVI of 1920) the period of limitation has been reduced from 'six months' to 'ninety days'. "Delay in the conduct of Indian appeals to the Privy Council has been the subject of much adverse comment in judgment of the Judicial Committee and remedial measures have been undertaken for some time past. His Majesty's Order in Council, dated the 9th February 1920 has already been issued and the present Bill has been drafted with the object of giving legislative sanction to various further measures calculated to expedite the prosecution of those stages of these appeals whiich take place in India"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1920, Part V. page 156). In introducing the Bill, Sir William Vincent observed:—"This Bill is intended to reduce the delays which have occurred in Privy Council appeals. It affects other cases in certain respects also. The question of these delays in the Privy Council has exercised the minds of the Secretary of State, the Government of India, and their Lordships of the Judicipal Committee for some years. On many occasions the Privy Council have criticized the want of expedition in these appeals with great severity, at times they have almost become plaintive about this..... This Bill therefore provides a reduction of the period within which a person must apply for leave to appeal to the Privy Council"—Gazette of India, 1920, Part VI, page 1000.

An application for leave to appeal under sec. 66A, Income Tax Act involves the same considerations as are involved in sec. 109 (c) of the C. P. Code; consequently it is an application under the C. P. Code, and is therefore governed by this Article and not by Art. 181—Commissioner of Income Tax v. Shaw Wallace & Co., 59 Cal. 251 36 C.W.N. 127 (129), A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 587, 139 I.C. 236.

Where two separate appeals against the decrees of two separate suits were disposed of by the High Court in a single judgment, there should still be two separate applications for leave to appeal to the Privy Council. Where one such application was made with regard to both the suits within the period of limitation, and on the direction of the High Court to make two separate applications, two applications were subsequently made after the period of limitation, the only remedy of the applicant was to amend the first application (which was presented within time) so as to make it cover one of the two suits—Gopal Singh v. Johnstone, 33 P.L.R. 455, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 441 (442), 140 I.C. 17.

It would seem that this Article applies by its language directly to appeals to the Supreme Court from judgments, orders or decrees passed in Civil Proceedings—Azambad Tea v. Suraj Ratan, A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 296.

689. Extension of time:—The period prescribed by this Article cannot be extended on account of the minority of the applicants, as sec. 6 does not apply to an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council—Thurai v. Jainilabdeen, 18 Mad. 484 (485); Narendra v. Oudh Commercial Bank, 5 O.L.J. 153, 46 I.C. 68 (70).

But an application under this Article may be admitted after the period on proof of sufficient cause under sec. 5.

The time spent in obtaining a copy of the decree or the copy of the judgment incorporating the order sought to be appealed against will be excluded under sec. 12, sub-sections (2) and (3) in computing the period of limitation. See Note 133 under sec. 12, and Dharwar Bank v. Deshpande, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 525, Rajasthan State v. Nathmal, 1952 Raj. 180; Paokhohen v. Konsam Amujao Singh, 1956 Manipur 33 and Baldeo Pershad v. Dwarika, A.I.R. 1957 All. 334 (F.B.).

Time taken in prosecution of useless review application cannot be excluded—Mahabir v. Mukhtar, 1941 O.A. (Supp.) 880, 1941 R.D. 792; Anant v. Lal Mohomad, 1945 R.D. 405.

In computing the period of limitation for the purpose of an application for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court against a judgment of the Calcutta High Court passed in its revisional jurisdiction, it is not possible to take into account the date on which the Assistant Registrar may sign the cost sheet—Dudhewalla v. Govindram, A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 13.

180. By a purchaser of immoveable property at a sale in execution of a decree for delivery of possession.	Three years.	When the sale becomes absolute.

690. Scope:—This Article is new, and did not exist in the Act of 1877. It refers to an application under O. XXI, rule 95, C. P. Code.

According to the old Limitation Act, an application under sec. 318, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. XXI, r. 95, C. P. Code, 1908) by a purchaser at a Court sale to be put into possession fell under Art. 178 (now 181); and time ran from the date of grant of the sale-certificate—Hanmantrav v. Subaji Girmaji, 8 Bom. 257; Kashinath v. Durning, 17 Bom. 228; Basapa v. Marya, 3 Bom. 433; Sultan Saheb Marayakar v. Chidambaram, 32 Mad. 136; according to the Allahabad High Court, time ran from the date of confirmation of the sale—Ranjit v. Baldeo, 30 All. 390. But now such an application falls under this Article which specifically provides for the case, and not under the general Art. 181 —Viswasundara v. Paidigadu, 50 M.L.J. 72, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 385, 91 I.C. 485.

Where a sale was confirmed before the Limitation Act of 1908 came into force, but the application for possession of the purchased property is made after the coming into operation of the new Act, it is governed by Art. 180 and is barred if not brought within three years from the date when the sale became absolute—Hussain Bux v. Becha, 27 I.C. 420 (Cal.); Arunagiri v. Uthando, 12 M.L.T. 311, 17 I.C. 242.

An application by a decree-holder purchaser for delivery of possession of the properties purchased by him in Court auction is not an application to execute the decee under Article 182 but is governed by this Article—Ramasami v. Abdul Aziz, 19 M.L.T. 164, 32 I.C. 993 (following 32 Mad. 136). See also the recent Calcutta case Neckbar v. Prakash, 56 Cal. 608, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 86 (87), 120 I.C. 107, where the application was by the decree-holder purchaser, and Art. 180 was held to be applicable. The Nagpur Court is of opinion that such an application falls under sec. 47, C. P. Code, i.e., it is a matter relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, and is governed by Article 182, and not by Article 180. Where the auction-purchaser is the decree-holder himself, and he presents an application for possession, he occupies therein, in reality, a dual position. He is, from one point of view, the auction-purchaser applying to be put in possession of his property, while from another point of view he is the decree-holder claiming to have his decree fully satisfied by having, so to speak, the proceeds of the decree made over to him—Balaji v. Anandrao, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 294, 103 I.C. 335. In Pillay v. Madappan, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-Co. 37 it has been held that this Article applies to an application for delivery of possession of immoveable property purchased at a sale held by the Civil Court in execution of a certificate issued by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies under sec. 59 (a), Travancore Co-operative Societies Act if it be held that the decision of the Registrar when it is filed in a Civil Court becomes in effect a decree of the Civil Court. As to whether such application amounts to a step-in-aid of execution, see Note 715 in Art. 182, under sub-heading "To be put into-possession."

This Article refers to applications; a similar suit is governed by Article 137 or 138. The mere fact that an application by a purchaser for delivery of possession is rejected as made beyond the period of 3 years is no bar to a suit for possession, the period for which is twelve years—Sheo Narain v. Nur Muhammad, 29 All. 463 (466); Sêru Mohan v. Bhagaban, 9 Cal. 602; the purchaser may proceed either by a suit or by an application—Ishwar v. Jai Narain, 12 Cal. 169; Sevu v. Muthuswami, 10 Mad. 53; Kishori Mohan v. Chunder Nath, 14 Cal. 644. As regards the question whether a suit for possession is maintainable where the decree-holder is himself the purchaser, see Note 581 under Article 138. The word "purchaser" includes cases of a decree-holder purchaser and a purchaser who is not a decree-holder—Abdul Aziz Sahib v. Chokkan Chettiar, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 803, 69 M.L.J. 821, 1935 M.W.N. 926, 58 Mad. 893, 42 L.W. 375, 159 I.C. 279. Art. 180 applies to an application for possession by a decree-holder purchaser; the residuary Article 181 has no application. Art. 182 also cannot apply as the application for delivery cannot be regarded as an application for execution—Abdul Aziz Sahib v. Chokkan Chettiar, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 803, 69 M.L.J. 821, 1935 M.W.N. 926, 42 L.W. 375: 58 Mad. 893, 159 I.C. 279; Ramakrishnayya v. Venkata, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 831, (1954) 2 M.L.J. 89.

690A. Starting point of limitation:—In considering the meaning of the words "when the sale becomes absolute" regard must be had not only to the provisions of O. 21, r. 92 (1) of the C. P. Code, but also to the other material sections and orders of the Code including those which relate to appeals from orders made under O. 21, r. 92 (1). The result is that where there is an appeal from the order of the Court of first instance disallowing an application to set aside the sale, the sale will not become absolute until the disposal of the appeal, even though the Court of first instance may confirm the sale, as it was bound to do, when it decided to disallow the above-mentioned application—Chandra Mani v. Anarjan, 61 Cal. 945, 38 C.W.N. 901, A.I.R. 1934 P.C.

134 (136), 150 I.C. 11 (reversing Anarjan v. Chandramani 56 C.L.J. 574, 134 I.C. 1188, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 75). The same view was taken by the Calcutta High Court in Chhogan Lal v. Behari Lal, 147 I.C. 881, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 311. The contrary view taken in Neckbar v. Prakash Chandra, 56 Cal. 608, 120 I.C. 107, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 86 must be deemed as overruled by the above Privy Council decision. See also Kamakshi v. Arukkani, A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 440; (1957) 1 Mad.L.J. 180. When the formal order of confirmation of an execution sale is challenged within three years by a petition under secs. 47 and 151, C. P. Code, the order itself comes into question, and the sale becomes absolute not on the date when the formal order of confirmation was passed but on the termination of the litigation commenced by the judgment debtor for having the sale set aside—Krishnadatta v. Sindhuram, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 89.

The sale to a decree-holder purchaser was confirmed in 1911. He made an application in 1913, which resulted in an order "Deliver" passed on 7-7-13, but on 30-7-13 the Court ordered on the same petition: "No one to take delivery; petition dismissed." In 1915 the purchaser again applied for delivery of possession. It was held by Abdur Rahim J. (Oldfield J. contra) that the order of dismissal on 30-7-13 not having been made after hearing the purchaser, it must be deemed to be a dismissal only for statistical purposes, and that the application of 1915 might be treated as one for the execution of the general order for delivery made in 1913, and being in that view a continuation of the prior proceeding, was not barred by Article 180. Oldfield J. however held that the prior application having been dismissed on account of the purchaser's default, the prior proceedings could not be held to have continued thereafter, and that the application of 1915 could not therefore be regarded as a continuation of the previous application or as an application for further execution of the general order for delivery passed in the prior execution proceeding—Nandur Subbayya v. Rajah Venkatramayyah, 1918 M.W.N. 214, 43 I.C. 155, 7 L.W. 16. The view of Oldfield J. has been followed in Viswesundara v. Paidigadu, 50 M.L.J. 72, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 385, 91 I.C. 845; Md. Amin v. Co-operative Society, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 682, 1949 M.W.N. 727, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 234; and in Ramakrishnayya v. Venkata, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 831, (1954) 2 M.L.J. 89 and the view of Abdur Rahim J. has been supported by the recent case of Appavoo v. Lakshmana, 65 M.L.J. 305, 145 I.C. 397, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 745 (747, 748).

The period of limitation runs from the date on which the sale 'becomes absolute.' A sale does not necessarily become absolute as soon as it is confirmed. Thus, where a sale is confirmed without opposition, but afterwards a petition is made under O. 21, r. 90 to set aside the sale, the period of limitation for an application under this Article begins to run from the date of the order disallowing the petition to set aside the sale, and not from the date of the first confirmation, because the sale does not become absolute within the meaning of this Article until the application to set aside the sale has been disallowed and the sale upheld, though the order confirming sale had been passed before the application to set aside the sale was made—Muthukorakkai v. Madar Ammal, 43 Mad. 185 (197, 198) (F.B.) virtually overruling Arunagiri v. Uthando, 12 M.L.T. 311, 17 I.C. 242. But the Calcutta High Court dissents from this view and holds that the period of limitation runs from the date of the confirmation of the sale under O. 21, r. 92, and the fact that the judgment-debtor afterwards makes an application under O. 21, r. 90 to set aside the sale, does not entitle the auction-purchaser to compute the period from the date of the final dismissal of the application; because the mere fact that the judgment-debtor has made an application for setting aside the sale does not prevent the purchaser from making his application for delivery of possession —Neckbar v. Prakash, 56 Cal. 608, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 87 (89), 120 I.C. 107 (dissenting from 43 Mad. 185, and distinguishing Baijnath v. Ramgut, 23 Cal. 775 P.C.). In this case (56 Cal. 608) the learned Judge did not consider it necessary to decide whether the purchaser's right to apply for delivery of possession was suspended during the pendency of the judgment-debtor's application to set aside the sale, because even then the application was time-barred.

An execution sale was confirmed in April 1908, but the judgment-debtor appealed and the appeal was compromised, the judgment-debtor agreeing to pay the decretal amount in June, 1910, upon which the sale was to be set aside. He paid nothing, and in July 1912 the decree-holder purchaser applied for delivery of possession. Held that the compromise on appeal had the effect of suspending the right of the decree-holder purchaser to apply for delivery of possession; and the right was revived on June 1910 when the judgment-debtor failed to pay under the terms of the compromise, and that therefore the present application was not barred—Janak Prosad v. Net Ram, 22 I.C. 497 (Cal.).

In computing the period of limitation under this Article, the time during which an application under O. 21, r. 90 for setting aside the sale is pending will be deducted, as the sale will be deemed to be absolute when such application is disallowed (43 Mad. 185); but the period of pendency of a suit filed by the judgment-debtor to set aside the sale, after the dismissal of the application under O. 21, r. 90, cannot be deducted—Sornam v. Thiruvazhiperumal, 51 M.L.J. 126, 96 I.C. 657, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 857.

Under Art. 180 an application by a purchaser of immoveable property at a sale in execution of a decree for delivery of possession is to be made within 3 years from the time when the sale becomes absolute. But where the auction purchaser's application for delivery of passession is resisted by a third person, and the application is ultimately dismissed for default, and that third party obtains a declaration that the auction purchaser has obtained no right by his purchase, but the declaration is set aside on appeal whereupon the auction purchaser again applies for delivery of possession, the auction purchaser is entitled to avail of a fresh cause of action arising by reason of the removal of the cancellation of the cause of action for delivery of possession by the declaratory decree. The real effect of the first order dismissing the application for delivery of possession for default, is that the application for delivery of possession was not finally disposed of but remained pending in the eye of the law, and the second application must be treated as one for continuance or revival of the former one. Hence the second application is not barred by law although filed more than three years after the confirmation of the sale—Jateendrachandra v. Rabateemohan, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 333.

181. Applications for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this schedule or by section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (V of 1908).	Three years.	When the right to apply accrues.

This Article corresponds to Art. 178 of Act XV of 1877.

691. Scope of the Article:—The operation of this Article is limited to applications made under the Civil Procedure Code. Since all the other applications in this division are applications under the Code, it is natural to conclude that the applications referred to in this Article are applications ejusdem generis, i.e., applications under the C. P. Code—Bai Manekbai v. Manekji, 7 Bom. 213 (214); Wadia v. Purshotum, 32

Bom. 1; Madhab Mani v. Lambert, 37 Cal. 796; Shiam Lal v. Official Liquidators, 55 All. 912 (F.B.), 1933 A.L.J. 1203, A.I.R. 1933 All. 789; Empress v. Ajudhia Singh, 10 All. 350; Gnanamuthu v. Vana, 17 Mad. 379 (381); Ranbir v. Drigpal, 16 All. 23; Tiluck Singh v. Parsotam, 22 Cal. 924; Rahmat Karim v. Abdul, 34 Cal. 672 (674); In re Ishan Chunder, 6 Cal. 707 (708); Jagdip v. Halloway, 2 P.L.J. 206 (208), 39 I.C. 653. But see Messrs. Shah & Co. v. Messrs. Ishar Singh Kripal Singh, 93 C.L.J. 66, where the operation of this article has been extended to applications under sec. 33 of the Arbitration Act.

This Article should be read with sec. 48 C. P. Code. But this Article and sec. 48, C. P. Code are independant or parallel provisions, different in their scope and object—Yeshwant v. Walchand, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 16.

An application to enforce an award by the Registrar, Co-Operative Societies, in accordance with the procedure laid down by Rule 14 (5) of the Statutory Rules framed under the Co-operative Societies Act is an application under the Civil Procedure Code and is governed by Art. 181—Co-operative Credit Society, Arungunam v. Chinaswami Udayar, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 31, 71 M.L.J. 759, 44 L.W. 720. But a contrary view has been taken by the same High Court in Subba Rao v. Co-operative Urban Bank, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 649, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 268, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 635 where it has been held that Art. 182 applies and not this Article to an application for execution of an award passed under the Madras Co-operative Societies Act as under the rules framed under the said Act the Court shall enforce the award as if it was a final decree of the Court. The Bombay High Court has also held that the proper article of limitation applicable to the execution of an award under the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act by the Civil Court is Art. 182 and not this Article—Muppanna v. Gajanan Urban Co-operative Bank, I.L.R. (1947) Bom. 143, 49 Bom.L.R. 168, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 375; Bhim Sen v. Urban Bank, I.L.R. (1947) Bom. 44, 49 Bom.L.R. 160, A I.R. 1947 Bom. 370. The reason given is that awards which have to be executed in the same manner as decrees of Civil Courts, can legitimately be regarded as "decrees of Civil Courts" within the meaning of Art. 182. An application for delivery of possession of immoveable property purchased at a sale by a Civil Court in execution of a certificate issued by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies under sec. 59 (a), Travancore Co-operative Societies Act is governed by this Article—Pillay v. Madappan, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-Co. 37.

Under sec. 12 (2), C. P. Debt Conciliation Act, a registered agreement before the Board has the force of a decree and even though it is not in fact a decree passed by the Court of Civil jurisdiction, still for the matter of enforcement that is regarded as a decree of the Civil Court. Hence limitation for an application for execution of such a registered agreement is governed by this Article—Rukhadu v. Krishnarao, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 63, 1948 N.L.J. 24, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 147.

This Article does not apply to application under the Probate and Administration Act or Succession Certificate Act (now incorporated in the Indian Succession Act, 1925) for probate, letters of administration or succession certificate (though of course long and unexplained delay in making an application for probate may throw doubt on the genuineness of the will)—In re Ishan Chunder, 6 Cal. 707 (709); Kalinath v. Nagendra Nath, 62 C.W.N. 790; Gnanamuthu v. Vana Koilpillai, 17 Mad. 379 (381); Bai Manekbai v. Manekji, 7 Bom. 213 (214); Kashi Chundra v. Gopi Krishna, 19 Cal. 48 (50); Janaki v. Kesavalu, 8 Mad. 207 (208); or to an application under the Religious Endowment Act—Janaki v. Keshavalu, 8 Mad. 207 (208). It has no application to proceedings taken under the Bhagdari Act (Bombay Act V of 1862)—Collector v. Desai, 7 Bom. 546 (551). It has no application to an application under the Telegraph Act—Abdul v. Punjab, Govt., I.L.R. (1943) Lah. 677, 44 P.L.R. 275, A.I.R. 1942 Lah. 186. It does not apply to an application made under sec. 214 of the Indian Companies Act, 1882—Connel v. Himalayan Bank, 18 All. 12 (15). It does not apply to applications for enforcement of costs by a solicitor against his client by the summary method provided by the Rules of the High Court—Wadia v. Purshotam, 32 Bom. 1; Narendra Lal v. Tarubala, 48 Cal. 817, 25 C.W.N. 800, 66 I.C. 209; Lakhimoni v. Dwijendra, 46 Cal. 249 (253), 23 C.W.N. 473. It cannot apply to proceedings to set aside a fraudulent transfer under sec. 53, Provincial Insolvency Act—Daryai v. Kunj Lal, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 553; or to an application made by a Receiver under sec. 36 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907—Duraiya v. Venkatarama, 12 L.W. 535, 60 I.C. 123. (But see Mir Afzal v. Mir Aman, 107 P.L.R. 1914, 23 I.C. 397 and Nikka Mal. v. Marwar Bank, 151 P.R. 1919, 52 I.C. 188), or to proceedings under sec. 4 of the said Act—Ambabai v. Dani, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 506, 1948 N.L J. 264, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 367. So also it has no application to proceedings under sec. 55 or sec. 56 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act—Hurdutrai v. Official Assignee, 52 C.W.N. 343. The Rangoon High Court is of opinion that this Article is not restricted to applications under the Civil Procedure Code. If the third Division of the Schedule was intended by the legislature to apply only to applications under the Code, then the express reference in certain Articles in this division to applications under the Code and the omission of such reference in other Articles seem to be inexplicable—Jhan Bahadur v. Bailiff, 5 Rang. 384, 104 I.C. 816, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 263 (264). And so this Article has been applied by that High Court to an application under sec. 8 (1) of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act for the review of a judgment passed by the High Court in its involvency jurisdiction—In re L.W. Nasse, 7 Rang. 201, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 229 (232), 118 I.C. 615. According to the Lahore High Court also this Article is not restricted to applications under the C. P. Code but refers to all applications for the making of which the Civil Procedure Code gives authority. Thus, an application to set aside an ex parte order passed under sec. 150 of the Indian Companies Act (1882), is an application under O. 9, r. 13 of the C P. Code (read with sec. 141 of that Code), and is therefore an application governed by Article 181 of the Limitation Act—Hindustan Bank v. Mehraj, 1 Lah. 187 (191), 55 I.C. 820. So also, in some cases, Article 181 has been applied to an application to set aside a sale under sec. 173 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, as such application is not provided for by any other Article of the Limitation Act, or by Sch. III of the B. T. Act—Chand Monee v. Santo Monee, 24 Cal 707, (709, 710); Chandrama v. Maharaja of Dumraon, 38 I.C. 209 (Pat.); Ananta Charan v. Nimai, 6 Pat. 366, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 177, 101 I.C. 564. So also, an application under sec. 173 (3) of the Bihar Tenancy Act for setting aside a sale is governed by this Article—Radha v. Ram, 25 Pat. 692, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 391. This Article applies to the case of an application for pre-emption under sec. 26F, Bengal Tenancy Act, by a co-sharer tenant who has not been served with a notice under sec. 26C and his application is in time if made within three years of the sale. Time runs from the date of registration and not from the execution of the document—Gopi v. Namai, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 551. This Article is the proper article applicable to an application by a mortgagor in case of a usufructuary mortgage to get back possession under sec. 26G, Bengal Tenancy Act. Such an application is barred if not made within 3 years of the enactment of that section—Abinash v Gour, 55 C.W.N. 489, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 76.

But this Article does not govern an application made under an Act which is a complete code in itself. Therefore, it does not apply to an application under the Provincial Insolvency Act by a creditor of an insolvent to be entered in the schedule of creditors, because that Act is intended to be a complete code in itself and to prescribe its own period of limitation; and as the Prov. Insolvency Act prescribes no period of limitation for such applications, it follows that such applications are not barred by any rule of limitation, and the matter is left to the discretion of the Insolvency Court—Jhan Bahadur v. Bailiff, 5 Rang. 384, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 263 (264), 104 I.C. 816.

Where limitation is specifically provided for by the Rules framed by the High Court under the Indian Companies Act for filing objections to a notice served on a contributory as regards his having been placed on the list contributories, the specific provision must prevail and not the general provision in the Limitation Act—Shanti Lal v. Lyallpur Bank, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 645.

This Article is restricted to applications made to a Court asking it to exercise powers, which unless moved by such applications, it is not bound to exercise suo motu. It does not apply where a Court is asked to do an act which it is bound to do and has no discretion to refuse to do. Thus, a Court is bound of its own motion to bring a decree in conformity with its judgment, under sec. 206, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 20, r. 6); no application is necessary for that purpose; even if an application is made, it is not subject to the rule of limitation under this Article—Darbo v. Kesho, 9 All. 364 (365), (dissenting from Gaya Prasad v. Sikri Prashad, 4 All. 23); Kalu v. Lalu, 21 Cal. 259; Shivappa v. Sivpanch, 11 Bom. 284; Dhan Singh v. Basant, 8 All. 519. So also, where an order for partition has been made in a suit, it is the duty of the Court to effect the partition, and no application need be made by the plaintiff for the purpose of effecting a partition. Even if an application is made Article 181 does not apply to it, and such application is not barred by reason of the fact that it is made more than three years after a previous application. Article 182 also cannot apply, as it is a proceeding in the suit itself and not a proceeding in execution, no final decree having been made in the suit—Dwarka Nath v. Barindra, 22 Cal. 425 (434). Thus where a Court passes a decree for partition of lands assessed to the payment of revenue to the Crown under Or. 20 r. 18 (1) C. P. Code, and refers it to the Collector to carry out the partition under sec. 54, C. P. Code, the Court's duties are at an end, and a darkhast asking the Court to send the papers to the Collector is not necessary. If the same is made it is not governed by this article as there is no limitation for such an application—Ramabai v. Anant, I.L.R. (1945) Bom. 799, 47 Bom.L.R. 447, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 338 (F.B.). An application by the mortgagor for payment of money under O. 34, r. 8 is not governed by this Article, because no application is at all necessary for the purpose—Bhawani Prasad v. Ram Kanta, 28 O.C. 261, 90 I.C. 418, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 649. The appointment of a Commissioner is a matter which it is competent for a Court to make without being put in motion by any party to the litigation, and therefore an application by a party with reference to such matter is not governed by this Article—Latchmanam v. Ramanathan, 28 Mad. 127 (129). So also, it does not apply to an application to the Court to perform the functions of a ministerial character; e.g., an application by an auction-purchaser for a certificate of sale—Vithal Janardan v. Vithojirav, 6 Bom. 586 (587) (dissenting from Re. Khaja Pathanji, 5 Bom. 202); Devidas v. Pirjada, 8 Bom. 377 (380) (dissenting from 5 Bom. 202 and Tukaram v. Satvaji 5 Bom. 206); Kylasa v. Ramasami, 4 Mad. 172 (173); or to an application for preparation of decree-sheet—Rupchand v Kanhaya, 42 P.L.R. 148, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 202; it does not apply to an application made in a pending case (e.g., an application to receive a suit in which no final order has been made); such an application is not governed by any rule of limitation—Ramanathan v. Alagappa, 53 Mad. 378, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 528; Ram Nath v. Umacharan, 3 C.W.N. 750; Surendra v. Khetter, 30 Cal. 609; Kedarnath v. Harra Chand, 8 Cal. 420; Madhab Moni v. Lambert, 37 Cal. 796 (806); or to an application to revive a suit and restore it to the board, or to transfer a case from one board to another or to transfer a case to the bottom of the board and so forth—Govind Chunder v. Rungunmony, 6 Cal. 60 (64). This Article does not apply to an application asking the Court to pass judgment on an award filed in Court, because it is an act which the Court is bound to do—

Ishwardas v. Dosibai, 7 Bom. 316 (322); or to an application to bring the attached property to sale—Phiraya v. Adu Ram, 179 P.R. 1882.

An application falling under sec. 47 C. P. Code is governed by this Article—Abdul Kadir v. Ambika, 97 I.C. 697, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 57; Umapati v. Sheikh Soleman, 54 Cal. 419, 103 I.C. 233, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 614. Thus the title of a purchaser at a sale in execution of a mortgage decree (e.g., the question whether certain lands were or were not included in a mortgage decree for sale) should be determined by an application under sec. 47, C. P. Code; such an application falls under Article 181, and the right to apply accrues at the date of sale—Umapati v. Sheikh Soleman, supra. This Article applies to an applcation alleging the Court sale as void—Md. Umar v. Motichand, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 244; Ventaperumal v. Perumal, A.I.R. 1952, Tra-Co. 136.

This Article applies to an application for amendment of the original application for substitution by substituting the names of the heirs in place of the original heir who made the application for substitution and died pending the disposal of the application —Manindra v. Santi Rani, 55 C.W.N. 306, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 518.

This Article does not apply to an application made to the High Court for revision of an order of a Criminal Court. There is no time limit placed upon the power of the High Court to interfere by way of revision in a criminal case—Shah Naim v. Emp., 7 O.W.N. 663, 1930 Cr. C. 941.

Certification of payment:—The word "application" in this Article means an application ejusdem generis with the applications mentioned in the previous Articles; that is, an application on which the Court has to perform a judicial act or to decide some point judicially. An application by a decree-holder for certification of a payment made to him out of Court is not an application within Art. 181—Gangaya v. Seshagiri Rao, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 922, 159 I. C. 38. A certificate by a decree-holder of any payment out of Court, under O. 21 r. 2 (1), C. P. Code does not raise any point on which the Court has to decide judicially, and is not therefore an application under Article 181. There is no limitation which compels the decree-holder to certify a payment or adjustment under the provisions of O. 21, r. 2 (1) within any particular time—Prakash Singh v. Allahabad Bank, 1 Luck. 428, 29 O.C. 358, 98 I.C. 353, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 7; Eusufzoman v. Sanchia, 43 Cal. 207 (210); Haji Abdul Rahiman v. Khoja Khaki, 11 Bom. 6 (34); Tukaram v. Babaji, 21 Bom. 122 (124); Jatindra v. Gagan, 46 Cal. 22 (24); Jalin Chand v. Yusufali, 54 Cal. 143, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1012, 86 I.C. 1051; Sheikh Ilahi v. Nawab Lal, 4 P.L.J. 159 (161), 50 I.C. 364; Balai Mahomed v. Aijanmal, 26 C.W.N. 529, 68 I.C. 780, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 30. A certificate of payment given by the decree-holder to the Court is a mere intimation to it that he has received a certain sum of money from the judgment-debtor. It is not an application, because the decree-holder has not to make any prayer to the Court that the payment should be recorded, but only gives an intimation, and on receiving the intimation the Court records the payment. The certification of payment is not governed by any rule of limitation, and the decree-holder is not bound to certify any payment before his decree is barred——Joli Prasad v. Srichand, 51 All. 237 (F.B.), 26 A.L.J. 966, A.I.R. 1928 All. 629 (635). A certification of payment is not an application within the meaning of this Article, even though it is in the form of a petition and is headed as an "application under O. 21, r. 2, C. P. Code." The terms of O. 21, r. 2 do not provide for any application being made by the decree-holder. The Limitation Act does not prescribe any time within which the decree-holder is to certify a payment made out of Court by the judgment-debtor—Shri Prakash v. Allahabad Bank, 3 Luck. 684 (P.C.), 6 O.W.N. 29, 33 C.W.N. 267 (274), A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 19, 114 I.C. 581. But the certification must take place within such time as is required to save the case from being barred by limitation. The decree-holder cannot postpone the certification for a long period of years and then say that he will save the decree from being barred by certifying the payments then. That is, the certification must take place within three years before execution is applied for, to save the decree from limitation under sec. 20—Jalim Chand v. Yusufali, supra; Bahuballabh v. Jogesh, 23 C.W.N. 320 (321), 50 I.C. 242. See also Amar Krishna v. Jagat Bandhu, 59 Cal. 760 (F.B.), 35 C.W.N. 1192.

692. Applications in mortgage suits:—Application for final foreclosure-decree:—An application for a final decree decree in a foreclosure suit under sec. 87 of the Transfer of Property Act (O. 34, rule 3 of the C. P. Code of 1908) is governed by this Article, and time runs from the date fixed in the preliminary decree under section 86 for the payment of the mortgage money. Article 182 cannot apply, because the various clauses in the 3rd column of that Article are inapplicable to the present application. The only clause which can apply, if at all, is clause 1, but the decree or order referred to in that clause is a decree executable on the date it is passed, whereas the preliminary decree in a foreclosure suit is not executable on the date on which it is passed but only on the expiry of the date fixed therein for the payment of the mortgage money. Consequently, Article 182 is inapplicable—Ali Ahmed v. Naziran, 24 All. 542 (545, 546); Balaram v. Kanhai, 1 P.L.J. 364 (366), 38 I.C. 385; Rajkumar v. Kedar Nath, 1 Pat. 435, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 201, 66 I.C. 97. But in Parmeshri v. Mohan Lal, 20 All. 357 such an application was held to be an application for execution of the preliminary decree for foreclosure and therefore governed by Article 182. In Sham Sundar v. Md. Ihtisham, 27 All. 501 (505), it was not not decided whether Article 181 or 182 was applicable, but Stanley C.J. gave his opinion that an application for a final decree for foreclosure was an application for execution of the decree nisi.

The Calcutta High Court is of opinion that an application for a final decree for foreclosure is not governed by this Article (nor by any other Article) because it is an application made in a pending suit, i.e., it is an application to terminate a pending proceeding, and is in effect an application to the Court to do an act which the Court is bound to do. Consequently no question of limitation arises—Madhabmoni v. Lambert, 37 Cal. 796, (806, 807). Even if this Article applies, the right to apply may be deemed to accrue from day to day (as it is made in a pending suit)—Ibid (following 30 Cal. 609 and 8 Cal. 420).

Where the High Court on appeal modifying the decree of the lower Court for sale passed a preliminary decree for foreclosure, the period of limitation for a final decree for foreclosure ran from the date of the appellate decree of the High Court (or rather the date fixed in that decree for payment of the mortgage-money); if the other party preferred an appeal to the Privy Council, and that appeal was dismissed for default of prosecution, the decree-holder would not be entitled to compute the period of limitation from the date of the order of the Privy Council dismissing the appeal for default—Rajkumar v Kedar Nath, 1 Pat. 435 (441), 3 P.L.T. 565, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 201, 66 I.C. 97. The plaintiff sued for foreclosure of a mortgage which purported to comprise five villages, but he obtained a preliminary decree in 1899 in respect of three villages only. He appealed against the dismissal of his suit as regards the other two villages, and this appeal was dismissed by the High Court in 1902. In 1903 he applied for a final decree for foreclosure. Held that this application was not barred by limitation, because time ran not from the date fixed in the preliminary decree for payment of the mortgage money but from the date of the decree of the High Court, because it was not until that date that there was any final decision as to the property to be foreclosed—Sham Sundar v. Md. Ihtisham, 27 All. 501 (509). Where after the plaintiff, applied for a final foreclosure decree, the day fixed in the preliminary decree for payment of the mortgage money was postponed at the defendant's request, the postponement did not amount to a dismissal of the application of the plaintiff to have a final decree passed. The application must be deemed to have remained pending for final orders, and the Court must be deemed to have postponed the passing of the final orders. No further application for a final decree is necessary; and any subsequent application if made in that behalf is only for the continuation of the proceeding on the original application which has been suspended. Such an application, being an application made in a pending case, is not governed by Article 181 or by any rule of limitation —Chimnaji v. Sonaji, 21 N.L.R. 47, 88 I.C. 901, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 291.

Application for final decree for sale:—Before secs. 85-90 of the Transfer of Property Act were incorporated into the C. P. Code of 1908, an application under sec. 89 of the T. P. Act for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property was held to be an application for execution of the decree passed under sec. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, and was governed by the rule of limitation prescribed for an application for execution, i.e., Art. 182, and not by Article 181 which was limited to applications under the C. P. Code—Mallikarjunudu v. Lingamurti, 25 Mad. 244 (F.B.); Mammali v. Kutti Ammu, 39 Mad. 544; Bhagawan v. Ganu, 23 Bom. 644; Chunni Lal v. Harnam, 20 All. 302 (F.B.); Ranbir v. Drigpal, 16 All. 23; Badri Narayan v. Kunj Behari, 35 All. 178; Oudh Behari v. Nageshwar, 13 All. 278 (F.B.); Kista v. Banamoyi, 19 C.W.N. 649, 29 I.C. 120. And this was the view of the Privy Council in Abdul Majid v. Jawahir, 36 All. 350 (P.C.); Batuk Nath v. Munni Dei, 36 All. 284 (P.C.). In some cases, however, either Article 181 or 182 was held to be applicable—Ramayyan v. Kadir Bacha, 31 Mad. 68 (69); Baldeo v. Ibn Haider, 27 All. 625 (627, 628), whereas in Tiluck v. Parshatam, 22 Cal. 924, Pramatha v. Khettra Mohan, 29 Cal. 651 and Adjudhi Pershad v. Baldeo, 21 Cal 818, it was held that the application was governed by neither Article 181 nor Art. 182. In Rungiah v. Nanjappa, 26 Mad. 780 (789) the application was held to be governed by Article 181 and not 182.

After sections 85-90 have been incorporated into the C. P. Code, it has been held that an application for a final decree for sale in a mortgage suit (O. 34, r. 5) being an application under the C. P. Code, falls under this Article; and Article 182 cannot apply because strictly speaking the application is not one for execution of the preliminary decree (but is an application to obtain a further decree)—Ahmed Khan v. Gaura, 40 All. 235; Nizamuddin v. Bohra Bhim Sen, 40 All. 203 (205); Beni Singh v. Berhamdeo Singh, 19 C.W.N. 473, 28 I.C. 211; Bala Ram v. Kanhai, 1 P.L.J. 364 (366), 38 I.C. 385; Madho Ram v. Nihal Singh, 38 All. 21; Datto Atmaram v. Sankar, 38 Bom. 32; Venkayya v. Sathiraju, 44 Mad. 714 (715); Kuppal Chetty v. Krishnammal, 14 M.L.T. 194, 16 I.C. 799; Ramji v. Karan, 39 All. 532; Gajadhar v. Kishan, 39 All. 641; Maqbul v. Pateshri, 1929 A.L.J. 976, A.I.R. 1929 All. 677 (679), 118 I.C. 670; Harjiwan v. Gajanan, 25 Bom.L.R. 459, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 420, 73 I.C. 187; Swarnamoyee v. Rakhal, 1 D.R. 59; Buttan v. Saklal, I.L.R. (1945) All. 277, A.I.R. 1945 All. 161. This Article applies to an application for a final decree for sale in a mortgage suit in the High Court. Art. 183 has no application—Jesinglal v. Gangadhar, I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 273, 40 Bom.L.R. 507, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 354. Such an application is barred by limitation under this Article if made more than three years after the date of the preliminary decree. Such an application is not to enforce a preliminary decree and Art. 183 is, therefore inapplicable—Sisir v. Srish, 43 C.W.N. 537. An application for a final decree under O. 34, r. 2, C. P. C. for sale of the property does not fall within Art. 183 but is governed by Art. 181—M. Chettiar Firm v. Maung Po Hmyin, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 239, 13 Rang. 325, 157 I.C. 784. Time begins to run after the expiry of the period fixed by the preliminary decree for payment of money (if there is no appeal from the preliminary decree)—Ahmed v. Gaura, 40 All. 235 (237); Raj Behari v. Juman, 4 P.L.J. 523 (524), 50 I.C. 544; Nanhelal v. Gulshan, 18 N.L.R. 58, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 217, 68 I.C. 919. If there is an appeal against the preliminary decree, time runs from the date of the appellate decree or of the decree in second appeal as the case may be (even though the appellate Court confirms the decree of the lower Court), but not from the date for payment fixed in the preliminary decree of the Court of first instance—Fitzholmes v. Bank of Upper India, 8 Lah. 253 (P.C.), 31 C.W.N. 444, 100 I.C. 22, A.I.R. 1927 P.C. 25; Sayid Jawad Hossain v. Genda Singh, 6 Pat. 24 (P.C.), 7 P.L.T. 575, 31 C.W.N. 58, A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 93 (overruling 39 All. 21 on this point); Mahabir v. Kanhaiya Lal, 21 A.L.J. 526, A.I.R. 1924 All. 99, 74 I.C. 372; Gajadhar Singh v. Kishan Jiwan Lal, 39 All. 641 (F.B.); Nizamuddin v. Bohara Bhim Sen, 40 All. 203; Tula Ram v. Bhup Singh, 47 All. 913, 89 I.C. 214, A.I.R. 1925 All. 691; Uma Charan v. Nibaran, 37 C.L.J. 452, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 389, 75 I.C. 2; Saiyud Jawad Hussain v. Genda Singh, 1 Pat. 444, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 205, 66 I.C. 790; Venkayya v. Sathiraju, 44 Mad. 714 (717); Fitzholmes v. Bank of Upper India, 5 Lah. 257 (259), A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 582, 81 I.C. 649; Lallu v. Jot, 21 O.C. 176, 47 I.C. 206; Subbarajulu v. Sundararajulu, 35 M.L.J. 507, 48 I.C. 185; even if it is dismissed for default or non-prosecution e.g., non-compliance with an order to pay the deficient Court-fees on the appeal—Gour v. Mohun, 23 Pat. 635, 1944 P.W.N. 547. But see Pitambar v. Ramrup, 1946 A.L.W. 587. Where the appellate Court affirms the preliminary decree passed by the trial Court, the period of three years begins to run from the expiry thereafter of the period allowed to the mortgagors under the preliminary decree to make the payment, even though the appeal Court does not expressly allow the same period for payment—Pitambar v. Rupram, 1946 A.L.W. 587; but not from the date of the order of the Privy Council dismissing the Privy Council appeal for default of prosecution—Abdul Majid v. Jawahir, 36 All. 350 (P.C.); Sachindra v. Maharaj Bahadur, 49 Cal. 203 (P.C.), 48 I.A. 335, 26 C.W.N. 858, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 187, 74 I.C. 660. Where a preliminary decree is modified after the passing of the final decree, an application for preparation of a fresh final decree is barred if made more than three years after the preliminay decree as modified by the appellate Court—Ram Nath v. Deohinandan, I.L.R. (1947) All. 40, A.I.R. 1947 All. 83. If an appeal against the preliminary decree is withdrawn and the Court passes the order "appeal is withdrawn, it is dismissed with costs" and there is a direction by the appellate Court as to the distribution of costs, the preliminary decree becomes merged in the appellate decree, and the time for applying for a final decree runs from the date of the appellate decree and not from the date of payment of the mortgage money fixed in the preliminary decree—Jujesti Mahapatro v. Magata Patro, 56 Mad. 520, 64 M.L.J. 695, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 442 (446), 143 I.C. 412. Time runs from the date of withdrawal of appeal for non-payment of Court fees on memorandum of appeal—Sona v. Bhola, 25 Pat. 431, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 225.

Where on the application to set aside an ex parte preliminary decree passed in a mortgage suit a conditional order is passed and the application is dismissed on failure of fulfilment of the condition imposed, the right to apply for a final decree accrues on the date of the dismissal of the application inspite of the appellate order remanding the application to the trial Court for hearing, where it is dismissed for default—Velaguru v. Suppa, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 791, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 678, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 209.

The fact that there was a clerical error in the decree in the statement of the amount due would not entitle the decree-holder to count limitation from the date on which the error was corrected, as the correction of the error did not make any alteration in the decree, and the decree as corrected could not be said to be a new decree—Ram Chandra v. Jai Mal, 20 A.L.J. 640, A.I.R. 1923 All. 22, 69 I.C. 199.

Where the preliminary mortgage decree was passed against separate sets of defendants for separate amounts decreed against them, and some of them appealed while others did not, held that the period of limitation for an application for a final decree for sale against the non-appealing defendants began to run from the expiry of the date fixed in the preliminary decree for payment of the amount, and not from the date of the decree in appeal, because the appeal was not an appeal against the whole decree but was limited to that part of the decree which affected the appealing defendants only—Gyan Singh v. Ata Husein, 43 All. 320 (323, 324). Where the preliminary decree for sale was passed against all the members of the family, and some of the members only appealed but the appeal was preferred in the interest of and on behalf of the whole family, the period of limitation for an application for a final decree for sale would run from the date of the appellate decree—Tula Ram v. Bhup Singh, 23 A.L.J. 867, A.I R. 1925 All. 691, 89 I.C. 214.

If the preliminary decree, purporting to be in terms of the compromise of the parties provides for payment of the mortgage-amount by instalments payable on fixed dates, the right to apply for a final decree accrues on the date of default in the payment of an instalment—Nanku v. Paramatmanand, 1931 A.L.J. 58, A.I.R. 1931 All. 340 (341), 130 I.C. 487. Where in such a case it is also provided that in case of default of 'any one kist' the plaintiff shall have the option to have a final decree, the right to apply for a final decree is not restricted to the first default. It will arise, as well, on subsequent breaches of conditions of the compromise decree—Ram Dutta v. Mahpal, 1938 O.W.N. 360, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 112; Rohan Singh v. Badri Prasad, A.I.R. 1955 All. 254. There is nothing to indicate that the decree holders' right to apply for a final decree accrues only once. Where a preliminary decree for sale provides for payment in instalments, a new cause of action to apply for a final decree accrues on each default under this article—Buttan v. Sakhal, I.L.R. (1945) All. 277, A.I.R. 1945 All. 161; Gopal v. Alagirisami, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 770, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 532, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 581. A contrary view has been taken in Bhagwati v. Sant Lal, I.L.R. (1946) All. 570, A.I.R. 1946 All. 360, where it has been held that where no option is contained in the decree the right to apply for final decree accrues when the plaintiff or applicant becomes first entitled to apply.

Where the preliminary decree was passed in 1897 and the decree-holder after making several applications between 1898 and 1907, made a final application for a final decree for sale in 1909 when the new C. P. Code was passed, it was held that the right to apply accrued when the new C. P. Code conferred the right in 1909, and the application was therefore not barred. Prior to the passing of the C. P. Code of 1908, the right which decree-holder possessed was a right to enforce his judgment not by means of an application for a final decree but by means of an application for an order absolute, and to this application Article 182 was held to apply; it was the C. P. Code of 1908 that for the first time conferred on the mortgagee decree-holder the right to apply for a final decree for sale, and therefore the right to apply for the final decree accrued on the day on which the new C. P. Code came into operation, viz., 1st January 1909—Narsingrao v. Bandu, 42 Bom. 309 (319, 320), 20 Bom.L.R. 481, 46 I.C. 107.

Application under O. 34, rule 6:—An application for a supplementary decree under sec. 90 of the T. P. Act (O. 34, r. 6 of the C. P. Code of 1908), though an application in an execution proceeding, is not an application for the execution of a decree or order; Article 182 is inapplicable, and the application is governed by Article 181—Md. Iltifat v. Alimunnissa, 40 All. 551, 47 I.C. 562; Ram Sarup v. Ghurani, 21 All. 453; Gajadhar v. Alliance Bank of Simla, 28 All. 660 (663); Venkatasubba v. Shanmugam, 1913 M.W.N. 867, 21 I.C. 530; Chunni Lal v. Tikomdas, 13 N.L.R. 76, 39 I.C. 854.

An application for personal decree against a mortgagor is not a mode of enforcing preliminary decree or the final decree in the mortgage suit, but is an application for a new decree imposing liability upon the mortgagor personally, such an application is, therefore, governed by Art. 181 and not by Art. 183—A. Chokalingam Chettiar v. Maung Tun Yin, A.I R. 1935 Rang. 187, 13 Rang. 305, 156 I.C. 707.

In Rahamat Karim v. Abdul Karim, 34 Cal. 672 (674), Article 181 was held inapplicable to an application under sec. 90, T. P. Act because that Article is limited to application under C. P. Code and does not apply to applications under the T. P. Act. But now that sec. 90 of the T. P. Act has been incorporated into the C. P. Code, the ruling in 34 Cal. 672 is no longer good law. In Bishwambhar v. Ramsundar, 42 Cal. 294 (299) Article 181 was held to be inapplicable even to an application under O. 34, r. 6 of the C. P. Code. In a later Full Bench case (overruling the above two cases) the Calcutta High Court has laid down that an application under O. 34, r. 6 is governed by Article 181—Pall v. Gregory, 52 Cal. 828 (F.B.), 29 C.W.N. 678, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 834, 89 I.C. 1; Sailen v. Promode, 53 C.W.N. 631.

As regards the time when the right to make such application accrues, the decisions are not unanimous. In some cases it has been held that the right to apply accrues when it is found that the sale proceeds are insufficient to satisfy the debt—Gajadhar v. Alliance Bank, 28 All. 660 (664); Md. Iltifat v. Alimunnissa, 40 All. 551 (552); Raj Narain v. Santi Lal, 21 A.L.J. 37, 79 I.C. 85, A.I.R. 1923 All. 203; this means that the right to sue accrues on the date on which the sale is confirmed (and not the date of sale), because it is on the date of confirmation of the sale that the Court is in a position to ascertain whether the net proceeds are insufficient to pay the amount within the meaning of O. 34, r. 6—Krishna Bandhu v. Panchkari, 58 Cal. 741, 35 C.W.N. 231 (232), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 166; Prodyumna Kumar v. Gopendra, 60 Cal. 19, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 251; Kempegowda v. Annegowda, A.I.R. 1951 Mysore 48. But there are several other decisions to the effect that it is not necessary that the applicant should make his application within 3 years of the date of the confirmation of the mortgage sale; it is the date of the suit and not the date of the application which must be looked to; if he had his personal remedy at the date of the institution of the suit on the mortgage, i.e., if the suit on the mortgage had been brought within 6 years from the due date of the mortgage (Art. 116), the application for personal decree is not barred, though made more than 3 years after the date of sale. When an application is made under O. 34, r. 6, C. P. Code, the Court has to consider, if any question of limitation arises, whether the personal remedy was barred at the date of the institution of the suit, and not whether it would be barred at the date of the application under O. 34, r. 6—Rahmat Karim v. Abdul Karim, 34 Cal. 672 (675), following Purna Chandra v. Radha Nath, 33 Cal. 867 (873); Hamid-ud-din v. Kedar Nath, 20 All. 386; Sheo Charan v. Lalji, 18 All. 371 (372); Chattar Mal v. Thakuri, 20 All. 512; Jangi Singh v. Chandra Mal, 30 All. 388 (389); Gulam Hussein v. Mahamadalli, 34 Bom. 540 (545); Peria Tiruvadi v. Muthammel, 2 L.W. 66, 27 I.C. 770 (771); Amratlal v. Mulji, 46 Bom.L.R. 851, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 169, see also Bishambar v. Ram Sundar, 42 Cal. 294 (297). If a mortgage was executed in 1908, and there were several payments on account of the mortgage debt which were made down to the year 1916, and the mortgage suit was instituted in 1920, i.e., within six years of the last of those payments, but the proceeds of the sale held in execution of the mortgage decree being insufficient to pay off the whole mortgage debt, the plaintiff made an application under O. 34, r. 6, C. P. Code, the application was held not barred—Dharanidhar v. Indranarayan, 36 C.W.N. 117 (118).

Where after a final decree for sale in a mortgage suit, it is found in a suit filed by a third party wherein the mortgagee is impleaded as a defendant, that the mortgaged property did not belong to the mortgagor, the right to apply for personal decree accrues to the mortgagee when it is finally decided in appeal that the mortgagor had no title to the property—Kamakshi v. Ananthanarayana, I.L.R. (1947) Mad. 731, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 142, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 33. The terminus a qua dates from the first accrual of the right to apply, provided it is definite and absolute. But where the very basis of the accrual of right is itself in litigation in an appellate Court, the person entitled to the right, has the option but not the duty to exercise the right till the question on which the right accrued is finally adjudicated upon—Sailen v. Promode, 53 C.W.N. 631.

Where after the sale of the mortgaged property in execution of the mortgage-decree, the sale is set aside and the mortgagee is required to refund the proceeds to the purchaser, he can apply under O. 34, r. 6, and the time for making such application runs from the date on which he refunded the purchase money to the purchaser (and not when the decree for setting aside the sale was passed)—Badal Singh v. Debi Saran, 49 All. 506, 101 I.C. 775, A.I.R. 1927 All. 395.

Application under O. 34, r. 8:—Where a preliminary decree for redemption is passed, but the mortgagor fails to pay the decretal amount on or before the fixed date, the Court may extend the time under O. 34, r. 8, proviso [now O. 34, r. 7 (2)], and the mortgagor is entitled to pay into Court within the extended time and apply for a final decree. The application for a final decree for redemption is governed by this Article, and the period of limitation runs from the date on which the mortgagor pays the money—Moru v. Gangabai, 50 Bom. 730, 98 I.C. 943, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 32. The rights under Or. 34, r. 7 (2) and r. 8 (1), C. P. Code, are available to a mortgagor in the case of redemption of a usufructuary mortgage also. The mortgagor is not bound to take out an application within three years of the time fixed for payment under the preliminary decree, and he can deposit the amount at any time so long as a final decree has not been passed and this article has no application—Angammal v. Mahomed, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 239.

If a preliminary decree for redemption is passed by the lower Appellate Court, against which a second appeal is preferred to the High Court, which eventually dismisses the appeal, the period of limitation for an application for a final decree for redemption runs from the date of the decision of the High Court and not from the date of decision of the lower Appellate Court. The decision of the High Court is a decision after hearing the merits of the case, and supersedes the decree of the lower Appellate Court—Venkatarama v. Doddachariar, 58 M.L.J. 207, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 353 (354), 125 I.C. 95. The fact that the second appeal was dismissed by the High Court on the ground that there was no question of the law does not make the decision of the High Court any the less a decision on the merits. But the matter would have been different if the High Court had dismissed the appeal summarily as time-barred or for default of appearance or want of prosecution or some similar reason. In such a case the period of limitation would have run from the date of the decree of the lower Appellate Court—Ibid.

693. Application for execution:—This article is a residuary article and cannot be applied if the case falls within Art. 182—Sahule v. Arunachalam, I L.R. (1945) Mad. 80, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 192, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 561; Sooramma v. Venkanna, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 271, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 441. Applications for execution are generally governed by Article 182, and the period of limitation runs from the various points of time enumerated in the several clauses of the 3rd column of that Article. But sometimes it may happen that the various points of time enumerated therein will not apply to a particular application; in such a case, the application will fall under Article 181. Article 182 is not exhaustive of applications for execution of decrees, and Article 181 may sometimes be applied to such an application. The law has been thus stated: "The true criterion in determining whether Article 181 or 182 applies to a particular application is to ascertain whether any one of the several points of time specified in col. 3 of Art. 182 is applicable to it; and if none of them is applicable, it is only then that Art. 181 will apply"—Rungiah Goundan v. Nanjappa, 26 Mad. 780, Hameed v. Arunachalam, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 192, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 561, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 80. A decree (passed under sec. 88, Transfer of Property Act) directed the sale of the mortgaged property in default of payment of the mortgage-money on or before a date fixed in the decree. On default of payment the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree. It was held that Article 182 could not apply, because none of the points of time enumerated in the various clauses of that Article was applicable to the application: thus, clause 1 did not apply, because the decree was not executable on the date of the decree but only at some future time if default was made; clause 7 also did not apply, because the decree as such did not direct the payment of any money on a particular date, but directed the sale of the property if a particular sum was not paid by a given time. Consequently, Article 181 was the proper Article applicable to the case—Rungiah Goundan v. Nanjappa, 26 Mad. 780 (789). Where a foreclosure decree provides that it should not be executed till the expiry of a certain period, none of the clauses of Art. 182 applies to an application for execution of such decree. Consequently, Art. 181 applies, and time runs from after the expiry of such period—Thakur Das v. Shadi Lal, 8 All. 56 (67). A decree for possession of a property was passed subject to the condition that if the judgment-debtor paid to the decree-holder year by year so long as he might live an allowance of Rs. 200 per year for his maintenance the decree for possession would not be executed, but if the judgment-debtor made default in payment of any year's allowance, the decree-holder would be entitled to delivery of possession of the property in execution of that decree. A default having occurred, the decree-holder applied for possession under the above decree. Held that Article 182 could not apply; for it was quite clear that clause 7 of that Article was inapplicable, since the application was for possession and not to enforce a payment of money; and that the other clauses of Article 182 were inapplicable. Consequently, Article 181 governed the application—Muhammad Islam v. Muhammad Ahsan, 16 All. 237 (239). In this case it was further held (at p. 238) that the decree-holder was not bound to execute his decree upon the occurrence of the first default, but might execute it on occasion of a subsequent default; thus, in this case, a default took place in 1878, and then another in October 1889, and the decree-holder applied in March 1892; it was held that the application was not barred, as time ran from October 1889 and not necessarily from 1878.

Decree not in existence:—The Limitation Act, in so far as it applies to execution, requires that there must be some decree in existence which can be executed. No application for execution of any decree can be entertained unless an executable decree exists. So a preliminary decree for sale cannot be executed—Ramnath v. Deokinandan, I.L.R. (1947) All. 40, A.I.R. 1947 All. 83. An execution application was filed on 1st September 1921; on the 16th September 1921 a suit was filed to set aside the decree, and the next day an injunction was granted restraining the decree-holder from executing the decree. The injunction expired on 26th August 1922, but meanwhile the decree had been set aside, and it was only on 6th April 1925 that the order setting aside the decree was reversed, and an execution application was filed on 26th June 1925. Held that the application was not barred, because from the 17th September 1921 to the 6th April 1925, the decree-holder was either restrained by an injunction from executing the decree or there was no decree whatever to execute—Ram Ghulam v. Raj Kumar, 6 Pat. 635, 102 I.C. 327, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 86.

Decree incapable of immediate execution:—Where the decree is not capable of immediate execution, and the right to apply for execution depends upon the fulfilment of certain contingencies provided for in the decree, Art. 182 does not govern the application, for none of the several clauses of that Article can be applied to it; the only Article that can apply is Art. 181—Rameshwar Singh v. Homeshwar Singh, 6 P.L.J. 132 (136) (P.C.); Narain v. Brij Narain, 1931 A.L.J. 319, A.I.R. 1931 All. 326 (327), 131 I.C. 559. A decree prohibiting the defendant from obstructing the village path is not capable of execution on the date it is passed, or in other words, until an obstruction is caused there is nothing to execute. The cause of action arises as soon as any obstruction is caused and the Court's order in that behalf is breached. This article applies in such a case and the decree-holder's right to apply for the enforcement of the decree accrues when the obstruction is caused—Shyam v. Ramdas, 25 Pat. 397, A.I.R 1946 Pat. 392. A decree which was passed in 1894 directed that the plaintiff would be entitled to get possession upon payment of Rs. 750 to the defendant in any year in the month of Jeth. The money was deposited in 1915 and the application for execution was made in 1916. It was held that the decree in this case being indefinite as to the date on which the payment of Rs. 750 was to be made, was not capable of execution on the date on which it was passed; therefore Art. 181 applied and not Art. 182, and the right to apply for execution accrued when the payment was made in 1915; the application was therefore not barred—Rukmina v. Sheo Dat, 17 A.L.J. 841, 51 I.C. 576. In this case the decree gave an option to the plaintiff decree-holder to pay the money in any year. But where under the decree the decree-holder's right to recover possession of some property from the defendant was made contingent upon the decree-holder paying certain sums of money to the defendant but no date for payment was specified, it was held that the decree-holder was entitled to pay the money on the date when the decree was passed, and to ask for possession immediately after the payment had been made. The right to apply for execution accrued to the decree-holder immediately the decree was passed and he was not entitled to prolong the date of payment by his inaction or laches. The decree-holder's application for execution made more than 3 years after the date of decree was held to be barred—Narain v. Brij Narain, supra. So also where a decree for possession is passed conditional on payment of a sum of money on a future date, this article applies and the time begins to run from the date of the decree or at any rate on the date fixed for payment of the amount —Gopal v. Dnyanu, I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 649, 40 Bom.L.R. 512, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 367. But if no time is fixed for payment of the amount this article does not apply. In such a case the decree-holder is entitled to deposit the money within a period of twelve years or within such period which falls short of the period necessary for the judgment-debtor to acquire an independant title to the property—Jugal v. Lochan, I.L.R. (1944) All. 717, 1944 A.L.J. 449, A.I.R. 1945 All. 10.

In a suit against E and J of whom J died pendente lite, a decree was passed in 1906 which did not provide that E should be personally liable but declared that the decretal amount should be realised by the sale of the property of J in E's possession. E for the first time obtained possession of J's property in 1914, and the decree-holder applied in the same year to execute the decree. Held that in as much as the decree was not capable of immediate execution in 1906, and the application for execution could not be made till E got possession of J's property; the Article applicable was Art. 181, and the right to apply accrued in 1914 when E obtained possession of J's property—Rameshwar Singh v. Homeshwar Singh, 6 P.L.J. 132 (139) (P.C.), 25 C.W.N. 337, 59 I.C. 636, A.I.R. 1921 P.C. 31.

A pre-emption decree is incapable of execution until the decree-holder pays the pre-emption price into Court, and consequently clause 1 of Art. 182 is inapplicable; and no other clause in Art. 182 being under the circumstances applicable, the general Art. 181 would apply, and the time for an application for execution of the pre-emption decree commences to run when the price is paid—Chhedi v. Lalu, 24 All. 300; Chandika v. Kalu, 22 O.C. 82, 52 I.C. 156.

Where by mistake of Court, the name of the judgment-debtor has been omitted from the decree, the decree is incapable of execution until it is amended and the name of the judgment-debtor brought on the record; the right to apply (under Art. 181) for execution accrues from the date of amendment—Debi Baksh v. Shambhu Dial, 48 All. 281, 24 A.L.J. 266, A.I.R. 1926 All. 384, 94 I.C. 877 (following 17 All. 39).

Where a decree is not executable at once as regards certain matters but leaves them to be subsequently ascertained, the period of limitation would run (under this Article) from the date when they are ascertained, as the decree becomes capable of execution as regards those matters only then—Ratnachalam v. Venkatarama, 29 Mad. 46 (47). When a decree is one for payment of a certain sum of money composed of three items, one of which has to be ascertained, limitation, for execution of the whole decree runs (under this Article) from the date of ascertainment of the unspecified sum —Vydianatha v. Subramania, 36 Mad. 104 (107).

Where a money decree was by its terms not capable of execution till after the expiry of six months from the date of the decree, because the judgment-debtor had been allowed the option of paying the decretal money without interest within that period, held that Art. 181 applied, and the period of limitation ran after default was made in the payment of the money, i.e., after the expiry of six months from the date of the decree-Surajman v. Anjori Shukul, 46 All. 73 (74), A.I.R. 1924 All. 263, 79 I.C. 605, 21 A.L.J. 861, following Rameshwar Singh v. Homeshwar, 6 P.L.J. 132 (P.C.). Where a decree, dated July 1882, directs the plaintiff to deliver certain lands to the defendant in January 1883, before he can recover certain lands from the defendant, limitation runs from January 1883 and not from July 1882—Narayan v. Vithal, 12 Bom. 23 (25). Where a decree for redemption provided that the plaintiff would be put into possession upon payment by him to the defendant of the mortgage amount and the value of the improvements to be determined in execution, the decree became a complete decree on the date when the Court determined the value of improvements, and limitation (Art. 181) ran from that date—Krishnan v. Nilakandan, 8 Mad. 137 (139).

Decree for perpetual injunction:—Order 21, rule 32, C. P. Code only prescribes the mode for the execution of a decree for injunction. If, however, the Court is moved to enforce execution of the decree under this provision of law, the application must be made within limitation as prescribed by Art. 181 of the Limitation Act. When a person has obtained an injunction forbidding the defendants from building their house in such a way as to interfere with the passage of light and air through the ventilators in his house, and the defendants violate the injunction by building a wall against the ventilators, the plaintiff may file an application for execution of his decree within three years of the breach. The building of the wall is not a continuing wrong and sec. 23 has no application—Moti Ram v. Hans Raj, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 702, 37 P.L.R. 576. When a decree for perpetual injunction has been granted, the decree may be enforced on each successive breach of it. An application for execution of the decree falls under this Article and must be made within three years of the date of the particular breach which is the occasion for the application. But the decree-holder is not bound to take action in case of every petty infringement; and the fact that he does not enforce his rights on a petty breach will not deprive him of the fruits of his decree if a serious infringement were afterwards made—Venkatachellam v. Veerappa, 29 Mad. 314 (317). See also Ram Saran v. Chatar Singh, 23 All. 465 (466), where it is held that Art. 182 is inapplicable to an application to enforce an injunction upon its disobedience. It was held in Sadagopachari v. Krishnamachari, 12 Mad. 356 (364), and Goswami Gordhan v. Goswami Makandan, 40 All. 648 (651) that an application for execution of a decree for injunction was to be brought within 3 years of the date of the breach of the injunction, but no Article was mentioned in the judgment.

694. Revival or continuation of previous application for execution: —An application for execution of a decree may be treated as one in continuation or for revival of a previous application for execution similar in scope and character, the consideration of which had been interrupted by objections and claims subsequently proved to be groundless or had been suspended by reason of an injunction or like obstruction.

Section 15 contemplates the filing of an application for execution and does not in terms apply to any other application. If, therefore, an application is made by the decree-holder, after the removal of the bar to execution, to revive or continue an application for execution which could not have been, by reason of the bar, proceeded with, such an application not being in terms a fresh application for execution does not come within section 15—Kristo Kamini v. Girischandra, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 239,—(Chattar Singh v. Kamal Singh, A.I.R. 1927 All. 16, 49 All. 276 (F.B.) followed on this point).

Where an execution case is still pending, but cannot be proceeded with further by reason of an injunction, and has been 'struck off the file', or is removed by an order which does not terminate it finally but has the effect of only removing it from the list of pending cases, the decree-holder is not bound to apply for revival of the same proceedings after the removal or discharge of the injunction. His application in substance only conveys to the Court the information that bar has been removed. It is also the duty of the Court to have in sight all undisposed of cases and when the bar is removed to direct the party to take necessary steps for further progress of the case. Such an application of the decree-holder is not a fresh application for execution, and Art. 181 has no application. To an application of this nature there is no rule of limitation prescribed—Kristo Kamini v. Girishchandra, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 239. Where an execution petition has been closed erroneously by a Court either for statistical purposes or under an error and the decreeholder is free from blame, the injured decree-holder has got a right to have that old execution petition revived and proceeded with from the stage immediately before the error, and a subsequent execution petition filed by him is only to be treated as reminder to the Court to revive the old execution petition irregularly and erroneously closed by it and no question of limitation arises—Satyanarayana v. Nagabhushanam, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 647, 1950 M.W.N. 800, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 429. The Patna High Court has, however taken a contrary view and has held that the subsequent application cannot be taken as a continuation of the previous one even though dismissed as a result of Court's mistake. The reason is that such an order operates as res judicata between the parties unless set aside—Anis v. Daughter of Jamunabai, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 117. Where an application though in form is under Or. 21, r. 11, but in reality is one under sec. 39, C. P. Code, is returned for amendment and for filing certain unnecessary papers, which is not complied with, a second application by the decree holder under sec. 39 C. P. Code is to be treated as a request that the earlier application be proceeded with—Peary v. Shessaran, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh. 118, 1939 O.W.N. 267. So also where the application for execution is for the time being "filed" owing to an order of the superior court staying sale in execution and for no fault of the decree-holder, a later application after the stay order is vacated to continue the application is not a revival application and is not governed by any article of the Limitation Act. In fact no such application is necessary on the part of the decree-holder, as the Court is bound to watch the proceedings and to continue the proceedings after the obstacle is removed of its own motion—Pandurang v. Rameshwar, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 320, 1948 N.L.J. 262, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 284.

An application for execution, which is in effect an application for revival of a previous execution application, although filed after 12 years of the decree is governed by Art. 181, Limitation Act, and not by sec. 48, C. P. Code—Saukhi Singh v. Thakur Prasad, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 43.

A distinction should be made between a new application for execution of a decree and an application which amounts to a revival or continuation of a previous one. And it is now an established rule of law that if the application is to initiate a new execution, it would be governed by Art. 182, and not by Art. 181; but if it is intended merely to revive or carry through a pending execution, it would fall under Art. 181 and not Art. 182—Subha Chariar v. Muthu Veeran, 36 Mad. 553 (556); Chalavadi v. Poloori, 31 Mad. 71 (75); Raghubans v. Sheo Saran, 5 All. 243 (245); Akshay v. Abdul Kader, 57 Cal. 860, 34 C.W.N. 102 (105); Maharaj Kishore v. Raja Ram, I.L.R. 32 Pat. 540, A.I.R. 1954 Pat. 164.

Whether a subsequent application is to be treated as a new application or as a continuation of a prior application is a question of fact to be decided with reference to the circumstances of the case. It is really a question of fact—Saco v. Sheo, 1942 O.A. (Supp.) 429, 1942 R.D. 699; a question of the intention of the decree-holder as to what he wants; it is not a question of pure law. In deciding this question, the substance of the application will have to be looked to, and not the form of it—Chattar Singh v. Kamal Singh, 49 All. 276 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1927 All. 16, 25 A.L.J. 201, 100 I.C. 692; or on the interpretation of the order passed and the inference to be drawn from it as to Court's intention—Mangal v. Court of Wards, A.I.R. 1952 Repsu. 52.

The principle is, that where the proceedings in respect of an application for execution have been interrupted by the intervention of objections and claims subsequently proved to be groundless, or have been suspended by reason of an injunction or like obstruction, a subsequent application for execution, similar in scope and character, may be treated as one in continuation or revival of the previous application—Madhabmani v. Lambert, 37 Cal. 796 (804); Ajodhya Nath v. Srinath, 26 C.W.N. 338, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 472, 68 I.C. 207.

The mere fact that a prior application is dismissed does not necessarily render the subsequent application a fresh application, so as to make Article 182 applicable to it. For, sometimes orders of dismissal are loosely made on applications with the object of removing cases, in which no immediate proceedings can be taken, from the list of pending cases. If the order of dismissal is of this character, a subsequent application is not to be considered as a fresh application for execution under Article 182 but as a continuation of the previous application and governed by Article 181—Lal Govind v. Bhikar Sahu, 20 I.C. 439 (441) (Cal.); Kaniz Zohra v. Boondi Sahu, 2 P.L.J. 115 (117), 39 I.C. 89; Ajodhya Nath v. Srinath, supra. The dismissal by the Court of an execution application without notice to the parties and without removing the attachment is no more than a direction to the officers of the Court to remove the proceedings from the pending list, and has not the effect of closing the proceedings. The proceedings initiated by the decree-holder are pending, and a subsequent application which merely asks for sale of the properties already under the prior application is a continuation of the first—Chalavadi v. Poloori Alimelammah, 31 Mad. 71 (74).

The dismissal of an application only for administrative or statistical purposes amounts only to a suspension of the proceedings and not to a termination of the proceedings; consequently, a subsequent application is to be treated as a continuation of the prior application—Ayissa v. Abdulla, 19 L. W. 613, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 178, 76 I.C. 126; Pattanayya v. Pattayya, 50 M.L.J. 215, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 453, 92 I.C. 782.

The mere fact that an execution application is struck off does not by itself indicate the final determination of the execution proceedings—Manorath v. Ambika, 13 C.W.N. 533 (540), 1 I.C. 57, 9 C.L.J. 443; Prem Narain v. Ganga Ram, 1931 A.L.J. 436, A.I.R. 1931 All. 458, 133 I.C. 316. An order made by a Judge upon an application which is still pending, that it be 'struck off' or 'sent to the record room' made either without notice to the decree-holder or without giving him an opportunity of being heard, is a ministerial order, and cannot be regarded as a judicial disposal of the application on the merits—Chattar Singh v. Kamal Singh, 49 All. 276 (F.B.), 100 I.C. 692, A.I.R. 1927 All. 16; Kristokamini v. Girishchandra, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 239. The application must be treated as still pending and the next application must be regarded as one asking for revival of the execution which has thus been suspended—Baij Nath v. Ram Bharos, 49 All. 509 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1927 All. 165, 104 I.C. 116. Where the order of the Court on an execution application is merely an order of striking off and not an order finally disposing of it, a subsequent application for execution must be treated as one to revive and carry through the pending execution proceeding which was merely suspended, and is not an application to initiate a new execution—Qamaruddin v. Jawahir, 27 All. 334 (338) (P.C.). Thus where the application for execution is stayed owing to a claim being preferred and is consigned to the record room the order does not finally dispose of the case and the subsequent application is one for revival and carrying through of a pending execution application and not an application to initiate a new one—Babulal v. Ramji, A.I.R. 1950 M.B. 71. So also, where an application for execution is struck off as old and the decree-holder is awarded costs, the case is removed from pending file. So a subsequent application for execution is a continuation of the previous one —Priya v. Sudhir, 69 C.L.J. 288, 43 C.W.N. 519, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 471. Where the dismissal of an application for execution is a mere routine dismissal, the execution petition must in eye of law be treated as still pending, though the records of the case are consigned to the record-room. A subsequent application is to be treated as a continuation of the prior application—Sudhansu v. Balabhadra, 26 Pat. L.T. 155, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 276, 220 I.C. 134. If the execution petition is "struck of," "lodged," "recorded" or 'closed," while yet the reliefs prayed for, or some of them, remain undisposed of, without being covered by final orders either granting or refusing those reliefs, then the petition will continue to be on the file of the Court despite its being "struck off," "lodged," "recorded" or 'closed'—Muthuveeranna v. Muthuvenkatarama, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 196, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 711.

If an application for the execution of a decree is struck off or suspended for no act or default of the decree-holder, the latter has a right to ask the Court to revive and carry through the execution proceedings, and the subsequent application is considered as a revival of the previous one—Madho Prasad v. Draupadi, 43 All. 383 (385); Bhagwanta, v. Zamir Ahmed, 3 Pat. 596, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 576, 78 I.C. 766; Akhtar Hussain v. Qudrat Ali, 26 O.C. 206, 80 I.C. 775, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 31; Qamaruddin v. Jawahir, 27 All. 334 (P.C.); Majibulla v. Umad Bibi, 30 All. 499 (504); Rajani Bandhu v. Kali Prasanna, 74 I.C. 279, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 419; Jawahar v. Md. Rafiq, 212 I.C. 628, A.I.R. 1944 Pesh. 17. And the order of revival is not without jurisdiction, even though is was passed without notice to the judgment-debtor—Girdarilal v. Ram Charan, 24 A.L.J. 437, 94 I.C. 613, A.I.R. 1926 All. 331.

Where execution proceedings were stayed at the instance of the judgment-debtor, and the case was struck off the file "for the present" and for the convenience of the Court, a second application for execution was one in continuation of the former proceedings—Baikantha v. Aughore Nath, 21 Cal. 387 (391); Babu v. Ramji, A.I.R. 1950

M.B. 71. Where on account of an order passed by the Board under sec. 25 of the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act, execution is stayed, the second application is a continuation of the previous application—Vishan v. Chandi, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 36, 228 I.C. 607. Where the sale in execution could not take place owing to absence of bidders, and the decree-holder was ordered to pay fees for fresh sale-proclamation, which the decree-holder did not pay, and thereupon the application for execution was struck off "for the present," held that the words "for the present" in the Judge's order showed that the proceedings did not come to an end but were merely kept in abeyance, that the attachment still continued, and that the next application for execution made by the decree-holder would be treated as one for revival of the former proceedings. Further, as the decree-holder was not bound by law to pay the costs of the fresh sale proclamation, the dismissal of the previous application could not be said to be a termination of the proceedings in consequence of the decree-holder's omission to do something which he was bound to do, and therefore the subsequent application could not be treated as a fresh application for execution—Majibulla v. Umad Bibi, 30 All. 499 (502, 504). But see contra—Dhukhiram v. Jogendra, 5 C.W.N. 347 (349). Where on account of the absence of the decree-holder on the date of sale, the Court passed an order "the decree-holder takes no steps. Dismissed for default", it was held that though in form the order was one for dismissal for default, it was in substance an order removing the case from the pending file of cases and that a subsequent application must be treated as a continuation of the previous one—Sarada v. Jabbar, 43 C.W.N. 429, 69 C.L.J. 165, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 331, 184 I.C. 151.

Where the judgment-debtor applied for setting aside an ex parte decree and rehearing of the case and then the decree-holder applied for execution of that decree, but the execution Court passed an order staying the execution proceedings until the rehearing be disposed of and recording an order "struck off" such an order did not amount to a dismissal of the execution application, and an application for execution made within three years from the date when the proceedings relating to the rehearing of the case were finally disposed of on appeal was within time—Radhaballav v. Peary Lall, 58 Cal. 1113, 35 C.W.N. 540, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 939.

Where an application to execute an ex parte decree was struck off the file on the application of the judgment-debtor to set aside the decree, and the decree-holder filed another application after the rejection of the judgment-debtor's application for rehearing of the suit, it was held that the decree-holder's second application for execution was only a continuation of the previous proceedings that had been suspended—Chandra v. Gopi Mohan, 14 Cal. 385 (387).

If a prior application is dismissed for default of appearance, or default in filing processes, or owing to the decree-holder taking no steps, a second application is a new application, and not a continuation of the first one—Ahmad Khan v. Gaura, 40 All. 235 (237); Langtu v. Baijnath, 28 All. 389 (390); Kartik Chandra v. Nilmani, 20 C.W.N. 686, 32 I.C. 931 (933); Fateh Bahadur v. Parmeshwar, 6 Pat. 694, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 145 (146), 108 I.C. 430. Where the previous execution proceedings had been struck off upon satisfaction being entered on the decree, a second application for execution was not a continuation of the previous application, because the former proceedings had been properly and finally disposed of—Khairunissa v. Gauri, 3 All. 484 (487). But where in consequence of a suit being brought by certain persons who objected to the attachment, the application for execution was struck off and the sale of the attached property was postponed, held that the application was merely suspended and a subsequent application by the decree-holder after the termination of the suit was a continuation of the previous application—Sheo Prasad v. Indar, 30 All. 179 (180). So also where after the full satisfaction of the decree by sale, the sale is set aside at the instance of a mortgagee of the properties sold, the subsequent application for sale of the very same property by the decree-holder is a continuation of the previous application. The reason being the order setting aside the sale results in setting aside of orders consequent of sale including the order dismissing the first execution case on full satisfaction—Kamalshwar v. Hari, 22 Pat.L.T. 992, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 112, 197 I C. 708.

Where a decree-holder applied for the sale in execution of five villages of his judgment-debtor, and two villages were sold and the decree satisfied, but subsequently at the nstance of another the sale was held to be a nullity, whereupon the decree-holder made another application for sale of the remaining three villages, praying that as the sale of the two villages had been declared to be a nullity, the prior application should be proceeded with, and that the three villages which it was not then necessary to sell by reason of the sale-proceeds of the two other villages being sufficient to satisfy the decree, should now be sold, held that this was in substance an application to take proceedings in continuation of the previous application and was governed by Article 181, and not by Article 182. Time ran from the date when the sale was declared to be a nullity—Bihari v. Jagannath, 28 All. 651 (653). An application for execution of a decree was made in 1917, and two properties were sold in 1918; but in 1919 a third person F sued the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor and got the sale set aside in respect of one of the properties, and in 1920 the judgment-debtor got the sale of the other property set aside on the ground of irregularity. The decree-holder again applied in 1921 for execution of his decree. Held that by reason of the litigation which took place after the sale the execution proceedings could be said to have been revived, and the present execution application must be regarded as a continuation of the previous execution proceedings. Art. 181 applied, and time ran from the date on which the sale was set aside either in 1919 or 1920, and in either case the application was in time —Radha Kishun v. Kashi Lal, 2 Pat. 829 (832), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 273, 76 I.C. 927; Issuree v. Abdul Khalek, 4 Cal. 415.

Where a previous application for execution was dismissed because of a successful application under O. 21, r. 90, a subsequent application for execution is one in continuation of the previous application. But where a previous application was made against one only of several judgment-debtors and has been dismissed for that reason, a subsequent application made against all the judgment-debtors cannot be treated as an application in continuation of the previous application; the previous application being ab initio a bad application, the subsequent application is not one made in continuation of it—Kamfal Nain v. Kesho Prasad, 1 Pat. 701 (704), 4 P.L.T. 226, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 310, 68 I.C. 638.

Where upon application being made for the execution of a decree a property was sold, but the sale was set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtor, a second application for execution by sale of the identical properties is one in continuation of the previous application—Kaniz Zohru v. Boondi Sahu, 2 P.L.J. 115 (116), 39 I C. 89; Kameshwar v. Harichand, 22 P.L.T. 992, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 112.

Where an application for execution of a rent decree was made and the sale took place, but on the application of the judgment-debtor the sale was set aside, and the execution case was dismissed for default as the decree-holder took no further steps, it was held that the execution proceeding came to an end, and a subsequent application for execution field by a decree-holder was not a continuation of the previous application as there was no continuity between the two applications—Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Dinanath, 22 C.W.N. 766, 45 I.C. 712.

Where the original decree-holder died pending his application for execution, leaving a major and a minor son, and the major son applied to execute the decree as the legal representative of the deceased decree-holder, but he too died pending his application, and the execution application originally preferred by the decree-holder was struck off on the report of the decree-holder's vakil that he had no instructions, and more than three years thereafter the minor son made an application for execution in continuation of the previous execution application, it was held that as the original application for execution was dismissed as infructuous, the order of dismissal had disposed of the whole matter for the time being, and that the second application was a fresh application for execution (and not in continuation of the previous one) and, having been presented more than three years after the disposal of the prior application, was barred—Rati Ram v. Naidar, 41 All. 435 (439, 440), 17 A.L.J. 649, 49 I.C. 990.

In order that the subsequent application may be treated as a continuation of the previous one, it is necessary that the second application must be similar in scope and character to the previous one—Madhabmoni v. Lambert, 37 Cal. 796 (804); Ibrahim v. Sheo Pratap, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 129, 89 I.C. 886. So, a subsequent application cannot be treated as a revival of the prior application, if the relief claimed in the two applications are entirely different. Thus, where the second application was for arrest of the judgment-debtor while the previous application had proceeded against his property, it was held that the second application was a fresh application and could not be regarded as a continuation of the previous proceeding, as it was perfectly distinct in its nature from the former one—Virasami v. Athi, 7 Mad. 595 (597); Krishnaji Raghunath v. Anandram Ballal, 7 Bom. 293 (296); Lalumia v. Mazhur, 95 I.C. 718, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 698; Ram Shivendra v. Awadh Behari, 4 P.L.T. 295, 68 I.C. 629, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 159; Har Sarup v. Balgovind, 18 All. 9 (11). If the second application for execution asks for the attachment of properties other than those which were proceeded against in the proceedings instituted by the previous application, the second application is to be treated as a new application and not as a continuation of the previous one—Chalavadi Kotiah v. Pallori, 31 Mad. 71 (73); Raghunandan v. Bhugoo, 17 Cal. 268; Sreenath v. Yusoof, 7 Cal. 556 (558); Baikantha v. Aughorenath, 21 Cal. 387 (391). Thus where an execution petition was filed giving a list of properties and praying for attachment and appropriate relief, a subsequent application giving a fresh list of properties against which the decree is sought to be executed, is a fresh application, and not a continuation of the earlier one—Krishna v. Kunjan, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 184. So also a second application for execution praying for execution of crops in plots different from those mentioned in the previous application is not a continuation of the previous application but is a fresh one—Tirkha v. Nazeer, 1941 A.L.J. (Supp.) 19, 1941 O.A. (Supp.) 129, 1941 R.D. 105. A landlord decree-holder applied for execution of a rent decree, when the executing Court held that the execution should proceed as on the basis of a money decree, and not as a rent decree. It proceeded in that way, and certain property of the judgment-dobtor was hold. The sale was however set aside on the application of the judgment-debtor under O. 21, 90, C.P. Code. The decree-holder than applied once more to execute his decree as a rent decree. Held that the second application should be treated as a continuation of the preceding application, being of the same character, in as much as the prayers in both were to execute the decree as rent decree—Deo Narayan v. Ram Prasad, 7 P.L.T. 410, 90 I.C. 799, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 143. The fact that the first execution contained a prayer for attachment which is absent in subsequent execution is not in itself a ground for holding that they were different in character and scope—Md. Ummal v. Md. Ummal, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 179. Where the first application for execution was against rents and moveables but was executed against rents only and the decree was not fully satisfied, the second application is made for execution against moveables, it is not a fresh application as it is similar in scope and character—Mohabee Ali v. Chhotey, 1940 R.D. 533, 1941 A.L.J. (Sup.) 5.

When execution proceedings were stayed by injunction or prohibitory order, it was held under the Act of 1877 that a second application for execution made after the removal of the injunction was to be regarded as an application for revival of the former proceedings under Art. 181 and not as a fresh application under Art. 182, and the period of limitation for this subsequent application would run from the date of removal of the injunction—Basant Lal v. Batal Bibi, 6 All. 23; Amulya v. Preo, 7 I.C. 886; Madhab Mani v. Lambert, 37 Cal. 796; Ghulam Nashiruddin v. Hardeo, 34 All. 436 (441); Sakina v. Ganesh, 3 P.L.J. 103 (105), 44 I.C. 560; Bibi Hajo v. Harsahai, 7 P.L.T. 39, 89 I.C. 992, A I.R. 1926 Pat. 62; Kalyanbhai v. Ghanesham, 5 Bom. 29; Narayan v. Sono, 24 Bom. 345; Chintaman v. Balshastri, 16 Bom. 294; Issuree v. Abdul, 4 Cal. 415; Lutful v. Shumbhudra, 8 Cal. 248; Hurronath v. Chunni, 4 Cal. 877; Chandra v. Gopimohan, 14 Cal. 385 (387); Ashrafuddin v. Bipin Behari, 30 Cal. 407 (411); Gurudeo v. Amrit, 33 Cal. 689; Ruddar v. Dhanpal, 26 All. 156 (159); Lakhmi v. Ballam, 17 All. 425 (427); Rangiah Goundan v. Nanjappa, 26 Mad. 780. Contra—Rajaratnam v. Shivalayammal, 11 Mad. 103 (105). It should be noted that many of these cases were decided under the Act of 1877, in which section 15 applied only to suits and did not apply to an application for execution of a decree; under the present Act all the cases relating to injunction cited here would fall under Article 182, and the time during which the execution was stayed by the injunction or prohibitory order would be excluded from computation under section 15, which now applies to applications for execution of decrees. See 34 All. 436, at p. 442. But applications for revival of a previous application for execution would be governed by Article 181, as before. This subject has been elaborately discussed in the Full Bench case of Chhattar Singh v. Kamal Singh, 49 All. 276 (F.B.) cited in Note 159 under sec. 15.

Similarly, where the execution of a decree was ordered to be stayed pending an appeal from the decree and the execution proceedings struck off, a subsequent application for execution of the decree after dismissal of the appeal was regarded as one for the revival of such proceedings, and was held to be governed by this Article—Buti Begam v. Nihal Chand, 5 All. 459 (461); Raghubans v. Sheo Saran, 5 All. 243.

Where the decree-holder is obstructed by violence or fraud, and a litigation is necessary to get rid of such obstruction, the execution is suspended owing to such litigation, and a second application made after the termination of such litigation would be a continuation of the first—Kartick v. Nilmoni, 20 C.W.N. 686, 32 I.C. 931 (932).

Where a property attached in execution is released on the claim of a third party against whom the decree-holder has to institute a regular suit, an application for execution against that property made by the decree-holder after succeeding in the suit is to be regarded not as a fresh application, but as a revival of the previous proceedings and governed by Article 181, and the period of limitation runs from the date of the decree in the claim suit and not from the date of the previous application—Paras Ram v. Gardner, 1 All. 355 (357) (F.B.); Baboo Pyaroo v. Syad Nazir, 23 W.R. 183; Rudra Narain v. Panchu Maiti, 23 Cal. 437 (440). This principle applies equally to the case of an attachment before judgment. Thus, where certain properties of the defendant in a money suit were attached before judgment, and after a decree was obtained in that suit, a claim petition was put in by a third party and allowed, and the decree-holder consequently filed a suit to establish his right to sell the properties in execution and obtained a decree in his favour, an application by the decree-holder for the sale of the properties attached before judgment was governed by Art. 181 and not by Art. 182, and the period of limitation ran from the date of the decree in the latter suit, and not from the date of the decree under execution—Surayya v. Venkataratnam, 47 Mad. 176 (179, 180), 45 M.L.J. 822, 79 I.C. 779, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 210. But the same High Court has overruled this decision in the Full Bench case of Hameed

v. Arunachalam, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 192, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 80, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 561 and has held that where execution proceedings were interrupted and it became necessary for the decree-holder to get his right of sale declared before starting the execution proceedings does not take the case out of Art. 182 and relegate it to the residuary Art. 181. An attachment before judgment does not operate to keep alive the subsequent decree until the attachment is removed, however lengthy may be the interval. For its continuance beyond three years from the date of the decree an application for execution must be filed within that period, otherwise the decree-holder loses his remedy. See also, Lakshmi v. Venkayya, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 670.

But where the objector's claim to two-thirds of the attached property having been allowed, the attachment of two-thirds of the property was raised and the decree-holder filed a regular suit against the objector, but he was unsuccessful in that suit, and then he made a second application for execution, praying for attachment of the one-third share which was not released from attachment, it was held that as the property sought to be attached and sold in the second application was one which the decree-holder might have proceeded against, notwithstanding the order in the claim proceedings, the second application was held not a continuation of the previous proceeding for execution —Raghunandan v. Bhugoo, 17 Cal. 268 (271).

Where the decree-holder has failed to remove the obstacle (i.e., the claim put in by the third party) to his executing the decree, the second application cannot be treated as a revival or legal continuance of the first—Shivram v. Sarasvatibai, 20 Bom. 175 (178); Khairunnissa v. Gouri Shankar, 3 All. 484; Gunpat v. Mehra, 30 P.R. 1882.

An application for execution by the assignee of a decree was dismissed on the objection of the judgment-debtor that the assignment was for the benefit of the judgment-debtor and that the assignee was therefore not entitled to execute the decree. The assignee thereupon brought a suit to establish her claim that the assignment was for her own benefit, and she obtained a decree declaring that she had obtained a valid assignment and establishing her right to execute the decree. She then applied again to execute the decree. It was held that the second application was one to revive or continue the previous application—Suppa Reddia v. Avudai Ammal, 28 Mad. 50 (53) (F.B.).

In June 1892, an application was made for execution of a decree and was dismissed, the applicant being relegated to a suit to establish his rights. He did not sue, but in September 1892 he put in a fresh application to execute, which was dismissed, as he had not chosen to bring the suit as directed. He then sued, and in March 1895 a decree was passed in his favour. He now put in a petition in October 1895 praying that his petition of September 1892 be revived or continued. It was held that as the last application of September 1892 had not been merely suspended but finally and properly dismissed, the present petition should be treated as a fresh application (and not as a continuation of the first) and therefore barred—Suryanarayana v. Gurunada, 21 Mad. 257 (260).

Within 3 years from the time fixed in a preliminary decree for sale on a mortgage, the decree-holder made an application for a final decree, but the application was returned for a correct statement of the amount due and for a proper description of the mortgaged property. No time was fixed for the amendment and the decree-holder presented his amended application more than 3 years after the time fixed in the preliminary decree. Held that this application was a continuation of the previous application and was not barred—Kallu Mal v. Kashi Nath 20 A.L.J. 580, A.I.R. 1922 All. 446, 68 I.C. 175.

694A. Limitation in respect of such application:—It has been held in some cases that where an application is made to continue proceedings in a pending execution, the application is not governed by Art. 181 or by any other Article of this Act; the right to apply accrues from day to day and will not be barred until 3 years have elapsed after the proceedings have ceased to be pending—Subha Chariar v. Muthuveeran, 36 Mad. 553 (557); Puttayya v. Puttanayya, 47 M.L.J. 608, 84 I.C. 897, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 152; Chalavadi v. Poloori Alimelammah, 31 Mad. 71 (76); Pattanaya v. Pattayya, 50 M.L.J. 215, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 653, 92 I.C. 782; Kedar Nath v. Harra Chand, 8 Cal. 420; Ikbal Narain v. Jagrani, 28 O.C. 158, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 552, 85 I.C. 450; Bhan v. Thesa, I.L.R. (1940) All. 246, 1940 A.L.J. 180, A.I.R. 1940 All. 151 (F.B.). So long as the execution case is pending, an application to continue it is not barred by any Article (181 or 182) of the Limitation Act. It may be that where a bar to the further progress of execution proceedings has been created by an order of a Court of competent jurisdiction, such proceedings may only be revived by an application under Art. 181 after the removal of the bar; but in a case where the Court intended to and did as a matter of fact maintain an application for execution on its pending file, and stopped proceedings for the time being and did not finally dispose of the application, an application made to the Court for the sole object of drawing its attention to the pending file, so that it may proceed with it, is not governed by any Article of the Limitation Act. When an application is as a matter of fact pending, the decree-holder has a right every moment to ask for further progress in the matter of the application—Ikbal Narain v. Jagrani, 28 O.C. 158, 85 I.C. 450, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 552 Thus, the decree-holder applied for execution of the mortgage decree in 1925 but the decree-holder and judgment-debtor then compromised the suit in April 1926 on condition that the latter would pay the money in three months, and if he failed to pay, execution would proceed. The comprimise was filed in Court in May 1926, and thereupon the Court passed an order striking off the execution proceedings on the ground that the matter had been compromised; at the same time the Court put it on record that the execution could proceed if the judgment-debtor did not pay within 3 months. The judgment-debtor not having paid the money within 3 months which expired on 24th July 1926, the decree-holder again applied for execution on 24th July 1929. It was held that this Article did not apply, and the application was not barred, because the previous application must be considered as pending; even if this Article applied, still as the second application was made within 3 years of the date (24th July 1926) when the right to apply accrued, the application was just in time—Prem Narain v. Ganga Ram, 1931 A.L.J. 436, 133 I.C. 316, A.I.R. 1931 All. 458; see also Venkataro v. Bijesingh, 10 Bom. 108 (111).

In cases where the previous application is not treated as pending, the subsequent application is governed by Article 181, and time runs when the right to apply accrues. Where a sale held in execution of a decree was set aside, and the decree-holder was ordered to refund the purchase-money, a second application for execution of the decree was governed by this Article and time ran not from the date on which the sale was set aside but from the date on which the decree-holder was ordered to refund the purchase-money to the purchaser, for it was on this date that his right to apply accrued, and till then he had no right to call upon the judgment-debtor to pay his judgment-debt a second time—Ramineedi Venkata v. Lakhoju China, 30 Mad. 209 (212). In execution of a mortgage-decree, the mortgaged property was sold and the judgment-debtor purchased it benami. The decree-holders made an application in November 1891, to set aside the benami purchase and resell the property. The first Court found that the purchase was not benami and confirmed the sale on 12th April 1892, but this decision was reversed on appeal in 1893. The decree-holders thereupon made another application for execution and re-sale of the property in December 1894,

It was held that this application might be regarded as a continuation of the application of November 1891 for re-sale of the property; and as the decree-holders were precluded by the first Court's finding of 12th April 1892, from asking for sale until it was reversed on appeal in 1893, the application was in time under this Article—Raghunath v. Lalji, 23 Cal. 397 (402).

The words "when the right to apply accrues" mean when the right to apply first accrues. Where the sale held in execution of a decree was set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtor, and then the auction-purchaser filed an appeal against the order setting aside the sale, and the appeal was dismissed and the order setting aside the sale was confirmed, the decree-holder's second application for execution must be filed within three years from the date on which the sale was set aside, and not from the date of the dismissal of the appeal preferred by the auction purchaser. The prior execution proceeding had terminated on the date on which the sale was set aside, and the right to revive the execution proceeding accrued on that date. The general principles of suspension of limitation apply only to those cases where the plaintiff or the decree-holder is prevented from taking action in pursuance of his rights; but in this case the appeal by the auction purchaser (who was a third party) did not prevent the decree-holder from making a fresh application for execution after the sale was set aside. Consequently limitation was not suspended during the appeal—Akshoy Kumar v. Abdul Kader, 57 Cal. 860, 34 C.W.N. 102 (105), A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 329, 126 I.C. 268. So also where in a case there is no option contained in a decree, the limitation under this Article for an application for preparation of a final decree runs from the date when the plaintiff or applicant becomes first entitled to make the application—Bhagwati v. Sant Lal, I.L.R. (1946) All. 570, A.I.R. 1946 All. 360; Ram Charan v. Sant Ltd., 1946 A.W.R. (H.C.) 558. The Bombay High Court has taken the same view in Chunilal v. Shivram, 52 Bom.L.R. 250, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 188 (F.B.) and has held that once the right to enforce the default clause accrues to the decree-holder for the first time, time begins to run from the date of such accrual and would not be stopped by reason of subsequent defaults. So an execution application to enforce the default clause filed more than three years from the date of such accrual would be barred under this Article. Where however, the instalment decree does not provide clearly that the decree-holder has no option but to execute the entire decree on the happening of a default, the decree-holder is entitled to execute the decree for any of the instalments that are not barred—Hardeo v. Bimraj, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 334, 1943 N.L.J. 108, A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 170.

If the judgment-debtor prefers an objection to the attachment of the property, the period of limitation in respect of the decree-holder's second application for execution runs as soon as the judgment-debtor's objection is dismissed, whether by the Court of first instance, or on appeal. If the judgment-debtor's objection is allowed by the Court of first instance, but is dismissed on appeal, the right of the decree-holder to apply for a second time accrues from the date of the appellate decree recognizing his right to execute the decree—Suppa Reddiar v. Avudai, 28 Mad. 50 (53) (F.B.). If the judgment-debtor's objection is dismissed on appeal, limitation would run from the date of the appellate decree, and the fact that the judgment-debtor has preferred a second appeal to the High Court will not postpone the running of time—Chalavadi Kotiah v. Poloori, 31 Mad. 71 (73); Kartick v. Nilmoni, 20 C.W.N. 686, 32 I.C. 931. If the judgment-debtor's objection is dismissed by the Court of first instance, time runs from the date of the decree of that Court, and the pendency of an appeal by the judgment-debtor from such decree cannot give the decree-holder a right to defer execution until the disposal of such appeal, because the filing of an appeal by the objector could not operate as a bar to the decree-holder taking out fresh execution—Ibrahim v. Sheo Pratap, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 129, 89 I.C. 886.

So also, if a third party prefers an objection to the attachment and the objection is allowed, in consequence of which the decree-holder has to institute a suit against him, the period of limitation runs as soon as the decree-holder gets a decree in his favour in that suit; and the subsequent application must be made within three years from that period. The fact that that person has preferred an appeal and that appeal has been dismissed will not entitle the decree-holder to count the period of limitation from the date of the appellate decree—Desraj v. Karam, 19 All. 71 (72). But in another Allahabad case, where the objector's suit was dismissed by the Court of first instance, but decreed on appeal, and was finally dismissed by the High Court in second appeal, it was held that the final decision of the High Court in decree-holder's favour had the effect of reviving the decree-holder's previous application for attachment and sale —Sheo Prasad v. Indar, 30 All. 179 (181). But this was merely an obiter. If, however, the order of the Court of first instance is irregular and opposed to rule, time runs from the date of the Appellate order confirming the first Court's order—Narayan v. Sona, 24 Bom. 345 (349).

Where a decree-holder himself purchased the property of the judgment-debtor in execution of the decree, but he lost possession of the same as the result of a suit brought by a third party, his next application, for satisfaction of the decree might be treated either as an application for execution (Art. 182) or as a revival of the prior execution proceedings (Art. 181), and in either case the right to apply arose when the third party's suit was decreed by the Court of first instance or in any case when the decree-holder was actually dispossessed by virtue of that decree, but not on the date when an appeal preferred against that decree was dismissed by the Appellate Court—Saling Ram v. Lachhman, 50 All. 211, 107 I.C. 42, A.I.R. 1928 All. 46 (49). Where there is an obstacle to the execution proceedings, for instance possession of the property by a third party, as soon as that obstacle is swept away by a Court of competent jurisdiction declaring the title of the judgment-debtor to the property as against that party, the duty arises upon the decree-holder to take execution proceedings within three years notwithstanding appeal preferred by that party—Kanwar v. Munshi, 40 P.L.R. 481, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 695.

A final decree for sale was passed on the 7th June 1913, and an application for execution was made on 4th January 1916. While the execution was pending a suit was filed on the 13th November 1916 to obtain a declaration that the property ordered to be sold was not liable to be sold in execution of the decree. On the same day the Court granted an injunction restraining the decree-holder from proceeding with the execution. The suit was dismissed by the trial Court, but was decreed in appeal, but on second appeal the suit was dismissed in toto by the High Court on 6th July 1920. Held that the obstacle to the execution of the decree was removed on the 6th July 1920, and an application for revival of the execution proceedings filed within 3 years of this date was within time—Chattar Singh v. Kamal Singh, 49 All. 276 (F.B.), 100 I.C. 692, A.I.R. 1927 All. 16. But it has been held by some cases of the same High Court that where execution is stayed by an injunction, limitation will commence to run as soon as the order granting the injunction is withdrawn. If the injunction comes to an end by the order of the Court of first instance, limitation will run from the date of the order of that Court, and the fact that an appeal has been preferred by the other party from that order will not entitle the decree-holder to deduct the time of pendency of the appeal—Balwant v. Budh Singh, 42 All. 564 (566); Madho Prasad v. Draupadi, 43 All. 383 (per Piggot J.; Walsh J. contra). If the injunction comes to an end by the order of the appellate Court, the time for making a fresh application runs from that date, and the fact that there is a second appeal to the High Court will not entitle the decree-holder to calculate the period from the date of the decree of the High Court confirming the lower appellate Court's order—Ruddar v. Dhanpal, 26 All. 156 (161).

An application by a party to the suit to recover possession of properties which had been taken delivery of under a void execution sale would be in time under this Article, if it was filed within three years of his dispossession. It is not until the purchaser acting under colour of sale interferes with his possession that the person whose properties have been sold is really aggrieved, and what gives him right to apply under this Article is such interference or dispossession and not the sale—Merla v. Nallaparaju, (1955) 2 S.C.R. 938, 1956 S.C.J. 101, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 87.

695. Other applications:—Where a money decree-holder and his judgment-debtor agreed that the amount of the decree should be payable by instalments and that if default was made in payment of any one instalment the whole decree should be executed and the Court sanctioned this agreement, an application by the decree-holder for recovery of the whole amount, upon a default being made, was one to enforce the agreement rather than an application for execution of the decree in the strict sense of the term, and therefore Article 181, and not Article 182, applied. Time ran from the date of the default—Sham Karan v. Piari, 5 All. 596.

Where an instalment decree nisi was passed in a mortgage suit, and it provided that a certain sum should be paid every year in Jeth, and that if default were made for three years in succession in the payment of the instalments the decree-holder would be at liberty to recover at once whole amount, i.e., to apply for an order absolute for sale of the property, held that none of the clauses (not even clause 7) in the third column of Article 182 applied to the case, and that Article 181 was the proper Article applicable to an application for enforcement of the instalment decree by an order absolute for sale; and the right to apply for an order absolute for sale accrued on the occurrence of the third consecutive default—Badri Narayan v. Kunj Behari, 35 All. 178, 18 I.C. 731.

An application by a judgment-debtor for restoration of immoveable property seized by the decree-holder in excess of what has been decreed is governed by this Article, and not by Art. 165, because that Article does not apply to an application by a judgment-debtor—Abdul Karim v. Islamunnissa, 38 All. 339. See this case and several other cases cited in Note 668 under Art. 165. Time runs when the property claimed by the judgment-debtor has been wrongly delivered to the other party—Jilan v. Abdul Rahman, 4 Luck. 209, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 76 (79), 115 I.C. 444.

This Article applies to an application for resale of property by the decree-holder under Or. 21 r. 86, C. P. Code—Sivasubramanian v. Murugesa, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 537, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 566.

An application for leave under Or. 21 r. 50 (2), C. P. Code, although an application in execution, is not an application for execution and consequently does not come under Art. 182 or Art. 183. It is governed by this Article—Jagannath v. Kaniram, 48 C.W.N. 280. So also an application to enforce a security bond against the sureties to whom the judgment-debtor's properties were entrusted after attachment in execution of a decree is not an execution application. So this Article applies to such an application which must be made within three years after the date on which the seruties failed to produce the property and the right to enforce the bond accrued—Annamalai v. Sundaresa, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 444. So also where a security bond is executed by the guardian of the minor, this Article applies to an application by the minor on attaining majority for its enforcement—Ramamurthy v. Tirupatiraju, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 287. The Calcutta High Court has taken a contrary view and has held that such an application is an application for execution of a decree and as such is governed by Art. 182—Harendra v. Gurupada, 41 C.W.N. 1099, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 452.

On the death of a plaintiff who filed a representative suit on behalf of himself and others having the same interests as members of the community, the suit does not abate, and any person on whose behalf also the suit was filed can apply to the Court to be added as a plaintiff for continuing the suit. Art. 181 may be applied to such an application—Mahomed Kanni v. Naina Mahomed, 54 Mad. 770, 132 I.C. 289, 60 M.L.J. 659, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 590 (591), following Krishnaswami v. Seethalakshmi, 9 L.W. 166, 1918 M.W.N. 888, 49 I.C. 268. See Note 681 under Art. 171.

An application by the legal representatives of a deceased decree-holder for reviving the execution proceedings dismissed for default on the death of the decree-holder, is not governed either by this Article or by Art. 182. The Court will exercise its inherent powers if it considers that justice requires its exercise if it is satisfied that there are no such laches on the part of the applicant which would disentitle him to relief—Ananda v. Sushil, 46 C.W.N. 326, 75 C.L.J. 114, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 390. But in Puttamma v. Hammia, A.I.R. 1950 Mysore 18 it has been held that this Article is applicable for fixing the time within which an application can be filed by the decree-holder's legal representatives or the assignee decree-holders to be brought on record and to proceed with the execution.

Where pending an appeal to the Privy Council, some of the parties died, and their legal representatives were not brought on the record before the decree, an application to add the representatives as parties to the decree falls under this Article, and the right to apply accrued from the date of the decree—Kalyani v. Tiruvengadaswami, 47 Mad. 618, 47 M.L.J. 154, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 695, 80 I.C. 85.

Where a sale held in execution of a decree was set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtors, and possession was restored to them, an application made by them to recover compensation for the period during which they were kept out of possession is governed by this Article, as it is an application under the C. P. Code (sec. 144) or at least contemplated by the C. P. Code, and must be made within three years from the restoration to possession—Jagdip v. Holloway, 2 P.L.J. 206 (208), 39 I.C. 653; Suryapal v. Bijai, 1938 R.D. 182. The limitation commences to run from the date on which the sale is set aside—Gopal v. Harihar, 51 C.W.N. 302, A.I.R. 1948 Cal. 37.

When the sale is void ab initio and not voidable, an application to set aside the sale is governed by this Article and not by Art. 166—Nirode v. Harendra, I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal. 280, 42 C.W.N. 87, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 113; Rajendra v. Debi, 21 Pat.L.T. 223, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 303; Ettu v. Ayyamal, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 22, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 367; Md. Umar v. Motichand, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 244; Ventaperumal v. Perumal, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-Co. 136. Thus where no notice under Or. 21 r. 22, C.P. Code is issued an application to set aside the sale as void is governed by this Article as the sale is a nullity—Venkata v. Kanakaraju, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 290, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 801. But where a sale is held without service of notice under Or. 21 r. 66, C. P. Code on the judgment-debtors treating them as minors though they were in fact majors the sale is not a nullity and an application for setting aside the sale is not governed by this Article but by Art. 166—Ghulam v. Negapathinam, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 432, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 460. So also, where an application is made by the judgment-debtor for setting aside the sale on the ground that he has no saleable interest in the property sold, the application is not governed by this Article but by Art. 161 as the sale is not a nullity—Muthaluru v. Chundi, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 522, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 468, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 226 (F.B.). Where a decree is against the assets of the deceased judgment-debtor, and the property sold is claimed as the personal property of the applicant, an application by him for setting aside the sale on that ground is not governed by this article as the sale is not a nullity—Chakku v. Nemai, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 192.

An application by a creditor of an insolvent to prove his debt and to have his name inserted in the Schedule is governed by this Article as it is an application under sec. 352 of the C. P. Code of 1882; the right to apply accrues from the declaration of the insolvency—Parshadi Lal v. Chuni Lal, 6 All. 142 (144).

An application by a creditor under sec. 37 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (1907) for a declaration that a sale made by the insolvent within 3 months prior to the application for adjudication is null and void as against the Official Receiver, is governed by this Article, and the starting point of limitation would be the date on which the debtor was adjudicated an insolvent—Nikka Mal v. Marwar Bank Ld., 151 P.R. 1919, 52 I.C. 188. But it is doubtful whether Article 181 would apply, as it is not an application under the C. P. Code. See Pirthi v. Basheshar, 69 I.C. 403, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 331. So also an application by an official receiver for declaration that an execution sale held after adjudication is void is governed by this Article—Motilal v. Nathu, 1940 N.L.J. 505, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 414. When a property is sold during the insolvency proceedings, the official receiver's application for possession of the property sold is governed by this Article and the right to apply commences from the date of adjudication and not from the date of the sale or application for insolvency—Bhalchandra v. Palsule, 1946 N.L.J. 597, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 937, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 76.

Application to bring decree in conformity with judgment:—Where a decree is not drawn up in accordance with the judgment, an application to the Court to make a decree in accordance with the judgment is not subject to any rule of limitation—Monmatha v. Matilal, 33 C.W.N. 614 (617).

Application for extension of time to pay mortgage debt:—An application for extension of time for payment of the mortgage debt made either by the mortgagor who has obtained a redemption decree or by a person to whom the decree has been assigned by the mortgagor, is not provided for elsewhere, and falls under this Article; the right to apply accrues on the date of the decree or at the latest on the expiry of the period fixed for the payment of the mortgage-debt—Vasudeb v. Gopal, 43 Bom. 689 (699, 700).

Application for refund of money:—An application by a purchaser for refund of purchase-money, where the sale has been set aside as void upon a suit brought by the judgment-debtor, falls under this Article, and time runs from the date of the final order (passed by the High Court in second appeal setting aside the sale—Girdhari v. Sital Prasad, 11 All. 372 (374). In Veeraswami v. Nammayya, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 121, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 751 a point was raised but not decided as to whether this Article or Art. 182 would apply to an application under Or. 21 r. 93, C. P. Code by the auction purchaser for refund of pourdage fee on a sale being set aside.

So also, an application by an auction-purchaser, who has failed to obtain possession of the property purchased owing to the judgment-debtor having no saleable interest in the property, for refund of the purchase money after setting aside the sale, is governed by Article 166 so far as the setting aside of the sale is concerned, and by Art. 181 in respect of refund of purchase-money—Makar Ali v. Sarfuddin, 50 Cal. 115 (see this case cited in Note 669 under Article 166).

Certain persons obtained shares in rateable distribution on the basis that they held money decree. Subsequently, on appeal it was held that one of them was not entitled to a money decree but only to a charge decree. On the application by one of the other persons obtaining shares for refund of assets wrongly paid to the other, it was held that either this Article or Art. 183 would apply—Suryarao v. Chalamayya, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 87, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 339.

Where an ex parte decree, under which the decree-holder realised the decretal amount, was afterwards set aside, and after retrial of the suit another decree was passed by which the original decretal amount was reduced by a certain sum, an application by the judgment-debtor for refund of the excess amount (i.e., the difference between the sum realised by the decree-holder and the sum finally decreed) fell under this Article. The right to apply accrued upon the passing of the latter decree—Bithal v. Jamna, 30 All. 476 (478).

The judgment-debtors against whom a decree had been executed, applied for refund of the money which they alleged had been recovered in execution by the decree-holder in excess of what was actually due. Upon this application an account was taken by order of the Court. The judgment-debtor then applied to the Court for an order upon the judgment-creditor to refund the excess. It was held that this Article applied to the application, and time began to run when the account was taken (and not when the excess amount had been paid to the decree-holder)—Mula Raj v. Debi Dihal, 7 All. 371 (372). An application by the judgment-debtor under sec. 47 C. P. Code for the refund of excess amount paid by him by mistake is governed by this Article. The right to apply accrues on the date the mistake is discovered—Daulat v. Gurbakhsh, 30 P.L.R. 294, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 213.

696. Application for ascertainment of mesne profits:—When a decree for possession of immoveable property awarded mesne profits which were left to be ascertained in execution under secs. 211, 212 of the C. P. Code 1882, an application for ascertainment of the mense profits was not governed by any rule of limitation either under Article 181 or Article 182. Article 181 was inapplicable, because it was the duty of the Court to ascertain the mesne profits awarded by a decree, without any application being made. Article 182 was not applicable, because the proceedings for determining the amount of mesne profits were not proceedings in execution of a decree in regard to any fixed sum but merely a continuation of the original suit and carried on in the same way as if a single suit were brought for mesne profits by itself—Puran Chand v. Roy Radhakishen, 19 Cal. 132 (136, 138) (F.B.); Waliya Bibi v. Nazar Hasan, 26 All. 623; Md. Umarjan v. Zinet, 25 All. 385. But it was pointed out by the Madras and Bombay High Courts that since sec. 244 of the old C. P. Code expressly directed that the mesne profits should be ascertained in execution, an application for the ascertainment of mesne profits was consequently an application in execution and the rule of limitation applicable to such application was the same as that applicable for execution applications—Ramana Reddi v. Babu Reddi, 37 Mad. 186 (195, 196, 198); Gangadhara v. Balakrishna, 45 Bom. 819 (826, 828); Usuf Ali v. Papa Miya, 47 Bom. 778 (781), 25 Bom.L.R. 810, 73 I.C. 233, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 366 (following 45 Bom. 819).

But the ascertainment of mesne profits is now provided in O. 20, r. 12 of the new C. P. Code of 1908, and has been made a part of the suit, and in continuation thereof —Rudra Pratap v. Sardar Mahesh Prasad, 47 All. 543. Such a proceeding is no longer a separate proceeding, and an application for ascertainment of mesne profits is no longer an application in execution; consequently Article 182 is not applicable; but it is assumed that Article 181 would now apply to such applications—Harakhpan v. Jagdeb, 4 Pat. 57, 5 P.L.T. 626, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 781 (782), 84 I.C. 272; and as O. 20, r. 12 requires that the decree shall direct an enquiry to be made for the ascertainment of rent or mesne profits from the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession to the decree-holder or the relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor or the expiration of three years from the date of the decree, whichever event first occurs, it is clear that the right to apply arises not from the date of the decree, but will arise either when the delivery of possession is actually given or three years expire from the date of the preliminary decree—Ibid.. In two other cases the Patna High Court has expressed the opiniin (following 19 Cal. 132 F.B.) that an application for ascertainment of mesne profits being an application in the suit itself is not governed by any provision of the Limitation Act—Kamakhya Narayan v. Akloo, 8 Pat. 482, 10 P.L.T. 762, 117 I.C. 647, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 368; Bhatu Ram v. Fogal Ram, 5 Pat. 223, 7 P.L.T. 340, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 141 (143), 92 I.C. 629. Where a decree for mesne profits has been passed, and an application has been made for ascertainment of the mesne profits, it is not competent to the Court at any stage to dismiss the application, it being beyond its power to dismiss a claim which has already been decreed, and it is always open to the decree-holder to ask the Court to ascertain the mesne profits, in as much as an application for mesne profits is an application in the suit itself. The law of limitation has no application to it so long as the suit is a pending suit—Bhatu Ram v. Fogal Ram, supra. The same view has been taken by the Bombay High Court—Shanker v. Gangaram, 52 Bom. 360, 30 Bom.L.R. 503, 109 I.C. 734, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 236 (237). The Madras High Court is of opinion that such application is governed by Art. 181 and must be made within 3 years from the date of the preliminary decree for possession—Timmaraju v. Narasimha, 54 M.L.J. 665, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 522, 109 I.C. 528. But in a later case the same High Court has held that the word application in sub-rule (3) of r. 12 of Or. 20, C. P. Code, added by the Madras High Court, should be read as meaning a motion entirely free from the mischief of Art. 181. It is not obligatory on the decree-holder to file an application asking for an enquiry into mesne profits awarded by the appellate decree and for passing of a final decree, within three years of the final decree as required by Art. 181. There is no question of limitation in such a case—Ramasubramanya v. Karimbil, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 372, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 54, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 124 (F.B.) Even where a preliminary decree in a partition suit directs "that the mesne profits due to the plaintiff be determined on a separate petition by the plaintiff in execution" the application filed by the plaintiff for ascertainment of mesne profits cannot be treated as an application coming under this Article—Chandra Kantam v. Chandramowliprasada (1948) 2 M.L.J. 206, 1948 M.W.N. 617.

697. Application in pending suit:—An application in a pending suit desiring the Court to proceed to judgment is not governed by any rule of limitation. Thus, where in a suit for dissolution of partnership, a preliminary decree has been passed dissolving the partnership, appointing a commissioner to examine the report and accounts, and directing the defendant to collect outstandings and to account to the other partners for the same, an application to the Court to pass a final decree in pursuance of that direction is an application in a pending suit, and is not governed by Article 181 or by any other Article. Consequently it is not barred (if brought more than 3 years after the date of the preliminary decree—Ramanathan v. Alagappa, 53 Mad. 378, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 528 (533), 59 M.L.J. 102. Where a decree for partition has been passed, an application for the appointment of a commissioner to work out the shares recoverable under the decree is a step in the suit itself, and not subject to any rule of limitation—Srinivasa v. Ramasami, 2 L.W. 693, 1915 M.W.N. 725, 30 I.C. 238. See also Kedar Nath v. Harra Chand, 8 Cal. 420. The suit cannot be dismissed for failure on the part of the plaintiff to take further steps. A party need not make an application to make the preliminary decree final. It is no doubt usual for the plaintiff to make an application for the appointment of a commissioner, but there is no legal bar to the Court appointing the Commissioner suo motu and asking the plaintiff to deposit the commission fee. There is no limitation for making the decree final in such cases and this Article does not apply—Bhusan v. Chhabimoni, 53 C.W.N. 582, A.I.R. 1948 Cal. 363.

Application for restitution:—See Note 718 under Article 182. An application for restitution under sec. 144 of the C. P. Code has been treated by some Courts as an application for execution of the decree as restored by the order of restitution, and governed by Art. 182 and not by Art. 181—Somasundaram v. Chockalingam, 40 Mad.

780 (782); Kurgodigowda v. Ningangowda, 41 Bom. 625 (630); Muthukarappan v. Annamalai, 11 Rang. 275, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 180 (182); Hamidalli v. Ahmedalli, 45 Bom. 1137; Chandika Singh v. Bithal Das, 7 O.W.N. 1153, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 51 (52); Kochu v. Mariayam, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-Co. 40. But the other High Courts are of opinion that whatever might have been the nature of an application for restitution under sec. 583 of the old C. P. Code of 1882, as sec. 144 of the new C. P. Code has not been placed in the chapter of the Code relating to execution but has been put in a chapter relating to miscellaneous matters, it is clear that the Legislature has not intended an application for restitution to be treated as an application for execution and consequently such an application is governed by Art. 181 and not by Art. 182—Saroj Bhushan v. Debendra, 59 Cal. 337, 35 C.W.N. 1294 (1297); Hari Mohan v. Parameshwar, 56 Cal. 61; Balmukund v. Basant Kumari, 3 Pat. 371 (387) (F.B.) (overruling 2 Pat. 277); Chandra Singh v. Bishen Singh, 76 I.C. 501, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 166, 5 Lah. L.J. 389; Jiwa Ram v. Nand Ram, 44 All. 407; Brij Lal v. Damodar, 44 All. 555; Bhabaranjan v. Nibaran, 43 C.W.N. 515, 69 C.L.J. 293, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 349; Telu v. Raja Ram, 40 P.L.R. 692, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 456; The Punjab National Bank v. Nanhe, I.L.R. (1938) Lah. 571, 41 P.L.R. 208, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 73; Ujagar v. Likha, A.I.R. 1941 All. 28, 1940 O.A. 1166, 1940 A.W.R. (H.C.) 579; Khaja Allawalli v. Kesarimal, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 176, 1947 N.L.J. 197, A.I.R. 1947 Nag. 239; Mela Ram v. Dharam Chand, A.I.R. 1958 Punj. 132 (F.B.). In the above-noted Nagpur case it has been held that an application under sec. 144, C. P. Code is made for the purpose of having an executable order or decree and therefore it can not be an application for execution. The Calcutta High Court has held that an application under sec. 144, C. P. Code, to have restitution in consequence of an order of His Majesty in Council is governed by this Article. Such an application cannot be regarded as one for enforcement of the final judgment or decree within the meaning of Art. 183, but is one for relief which is consequential upon the appellate Court's decree of reversal—Birendra v. Surendra, I.L.R. (1940) 1 Cal. 486, 44 C.W.N. 438, 71 C.L.J. 127, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 260.

Time runs from the date when the appellate Court for the first time gave the applicant the right of restitution, and not from the date on which a second appeal from the order of restitution was dismissed by the High Court—Saroj Bhushan v. Debendra, supra; Hari Mohan v. Parameshwar, supra; Bhabaranjan v. Nibaran, supra, The Punjab National Bank v. Nanhe, supra; Ujagar v. Likha, supra; Kishan v. Harman, 48 P.L.R. 138, A.I.R. 1946 Lah. 416. But the Rangoon High Court holds that time runs from the order of the final Court of appeal—Muthukarappan v Annamalai, 11 Rang. 275, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 180 (182).

But an application for restitution not under sec. 144, C. P. Code, but as the result of a decree passed in a separate suit brought for the purpose of obtaining restitution, is an application for execution of that decree, and is governed by Art. 182, clause (6).

Application by Government:—Government is not entitled to exemption from the provisions of the Limitation Act relating to applications. Therefore an application by the Government under sec. 441 of the Code of Civil Procedure (1882) to recover the amount of Court-fees from a party ordered by the decree to pay the same is subject to the provisions of this Article—Appaya v. Collector of Vizagapatam, 4 Mad. 155 (156).

Application by minor:—Section 6 refers only to an application for the execution of a decree, and does not apply to an application under this Article. Consequently, a minor, in making an application for a final decree for sale on a mortgage (which is now governed by this Article) cannot get the privilege of section 6—Nizamuddin v. Bohra Bhim Sen, 40 All. 203 (205); Vinayakrao v. Baijnath, 15 N.L.R. 36, 48 I.C. 934.

182. For the execution of a decree or order of any Civil Court not provided for by Article 183 or by section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (V of 1908).	Three years; or where a certified copy of the decree or order has been registered, six years.	1. The date of the decree or order, or 2. (where there has been an appeal) the date of the final decree or order of the Appellate Court, or the withdrawal of the appeal, or 3. (where there has been a review of judgment) the date of the decision passed on the review, or 4. (where the decree has been amended) the date of amendment, or 5. (where the application next hereinafter mentioned has been made) the date of the final order passed on an application made in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution or to take some step in aid of execution of the decree or order, or 6. (in respect of any amount, recovered by execution of the decree or order, which the decree-holder has been directed to refund by a decree passed in a suit for such refund) the date of such last mentioned decree or, in the case of an appeal therefrom, the date of the final decree of the appellate Court or of the withdrawal of the ap-

7. (where the application is to enforce any payment which the decree or order directs to be made at a certain date) such date.

Explanation I.—Where the decree or order has been passed severally in favour of more persons than one, distinguishing portions of the subject-matter as payable or deliverable to each, the application mentioned in clause 5 of this Article shall take effect in favour only of such of the said persons or their representatives as it may be made by. But where the decree or order has been passed jointly in favour of more persons than one, such application, if made by any one or more of them, or by his or their representatives, shall take effect in favour of them all.

Where the decree or order has been passed severally against more persons than one, distinguishing portions of the subject-matter as payable or deliverable by each, the application shall take effect against only such of the said persons or their representatives as it may be made against. But, where the decree or order has been passed jointly against more persons than one, the application, if made against any one or more of them or against his or their representatives, shall take effect against them all.

Explanation II.—"Proper Court" means the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree or order.

This Article corresponds to Art. 179 of Act XV of 1877. Clause 4 did not exist in the old Act. Clauses 5, 6 and 7 correspond to clauses 4, 5 and 6 respectively of Article 179 of the old Act.

Change:—Clauses 5 and 6 have been amended by the Indian Limitation (Second Amendment) Act, 1927 (IX of 1927). For amendment of clause 5, see Note 709 below. Clause 6 is entirely new; see Note 718.

698. The law of limitation applicable to proceedings in execution is not the law under which the suit was instituted, but the law in force at the date of the application for execution. Therefore, where the suit had been instituted under the Act of 1871, but the application for execution of the decree was made when the Act of 1877 came into operation, the application would be governed by the latter Act—Gurupadapa v. Virbhadrapa, 7 Bom. 459; Kuppu v. Saminath, 18 Mad. 482; Becharam Dutta v. Abdul Wahed, 11 Cal. 55 (dissenting from Behari Lal v. Gobardhan, 9 Cal. 446); Jagmohun Mohto v. Luchmessur Singh, 10 Cal. 748.

698A. Sec. 48, C. P. Code:—This Article and sec. 48, C. P. Code should be read together as this Article expressly refers to the section. But they are independant or parallel provisions, different in their scope and subject. Sec. 48 (2), C. P. Code extends the 12 years' period of closure by a further period of similar duration but the necessity of resort of this Article is not thereby obviated. The decree-holder must have been taking steps to keep the decree alive except in the case of existence of fraud under sec. 18 of the Act—Yeshwant v. Walchand, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 16. By reason of of sec. 8, C. P. Code sec. 48 of the Code does not apply to a decree passed by a Presidency Small Cause Court, whether it is being executed by that Court itself or by some other Court of original jurisdiction. So where a decree of a Presidency Small Cause Court is transferred for execution to a Court of original jurisdiction an application for execution filed in the latter Court beyond 12 years of the decree will not be barred by the limitation under sec. 48 C. P. Code, but will be in time if filed within 3 years of the last execution as provided by this Article—Ranganadhan v. Ponnacharamma, 23 Pat. L.T. 87, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 128. The same view has been taken by the Madras High Court in Gopalaswami v. Thaigarajaswami, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 504, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 437, 1950 M.W.N. 265, 5 D.L.R. (Mad.) 187 (F.B.).

698B. Construction:—The provisions of this Article should receive a fair and not too technical a construction. Its language ought not to be strained in favour of the judgment debtor who has not paid his debt and the words should be liberally interpreted in favour of the decree-holder—Annapurnamma v. Venkamma, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 135, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 323. This Article should receive a fair and liberal construction so as to enable the decree-holder to reap the fruits of his decree—Akshoy v. Nalini, 54 C.W.N. 815, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 493.

699. Applications under this Article:—

Execution by a co-sharer:—An application for execution of a decree for a sum not exceeding Rs. 500 obtained by a co-sharer landlord for his share of the rent is governed by this Article and not by Article 6, Schedule III of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The latter provision is not applicable to the case, because the Bengal Tenancy Act (sec. 188) does not contemplate a suit by one co-sharer only but only contemplates a suit brought by all the joint landlords acting together or by their authorised agent—Kedar Nath v. Ardha Chaundra, 29 Cal. 54 (58).

Application under Or. 21, r. 50, cl. (2), C. P. C.:—An application under Or. 21, r. 50, Cl. (2), C. P. Code for leave to execute the decree against the partners of a firm who were not personally served in the suit is merely an ancilliary application in the application for execution and is not barred so long as the decree against the firm is alive. Such an application is governed by Art. 182, and not by Art. 181—Kuppuswami v. Rathilal S. & Co., A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 926, 1935 M.W.N. 849, 158 I.C. 907; Seeomal v. Lahnibi, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 589, A.I.R. 1939 Sind. 161 (F.B.).

Execution of order of contribution:—After the winding up of a company, and the passing of an order of contribution, an application for enforcement of the order of contribution against a contributory is governed by this Article, in as much as the order of contribution must be enforced in the same manner as a decree of Court—People's Industrial Bank v. Mahesh Charan, 1 Luck. 153, 93 I.C. 631, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 289.

Application for enforcement of awards under the Co-operative Societies Act:—The proper article governing an application for the enforcement of an award by the Registrar under the Co-operative Societies Act is this Article—Subba v. Co-operative Urban Bank, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 695, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 304; Anjuman v. Imam, 48 P.L.R. 538, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 269.

Application by Government:—Government is bound to make an application for execution within the same time as any private person—Collector v. Sreehury, 22 W.R. 512; see also Appaya v. Collector, 4 Mad. 155.

Art. 182 governs applications to execute decrees of Revenue Courts in the Punjab —Sardar Ali v. Budhu Ram, 14 L.L.T. 15.

700. Application by minor:—This Article provides several points of time from which the period of three years shall begin to run, and for the purposes of this Act the period which begins from each point is a separate period, and if the person entitled is under a disability at the time when any one of such period commences, the operation of this Act is suspended during the continuance of the disability by the operation of sec. 6. Therefore, a step taken in aid of execution by a minor during his minority more than three years after a previous step-in-aid of execution taken by him, is not barred—Lolit Mohun v. Janoky, 20 Cal. 714 (716). But the prohibition contained in sec. 48, C. P. Code is not modified by virtue of this article read with sec. 6 of the Limitation Act as this article only applies in cases not covered by sec. 48, C. P. Code—Nathu v. Jai Karan, 46 P.L.R. 24, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 68.

700A. Applications not under this Article:—Where there is a specific article, Art. 181, applicable to a case, this article can have no application and can not be invoked—Ambujammal v. Singarammal, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 444, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 67. So also, where the application is not an application for execution, this article does not apply. Thus, where in a partition suit, an order is made decreeing partition of lands assessed to Government revenue and directing the parties to be put into possession and referring it to the Collector to carry out the partition, an application is made to Court to send the papers to the Collector, that application is not an application in execution as by that application the Court is asked to do a ministerial work. There is no article of the Limitation Act relating to an application of that sort and this article does not apply to such an application—Jacinto v. Fernandez, 41 Bom.L.R. 921, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 454. This article does not apply to an application filed in the Court after the partition decree is sent to the Collector for execution under sec. 54, C. P. Code for deciding who are the legal representatives of the decree-holder—Gendmal v. Laxman, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 852, A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 86.

701. Clause 1:—Under clause 1, time runs from the date of the decree; it therefore applies only to those cases where the decree is executable from the very date on which it is passed. If the decree is not so executable and the other clauses of this Article are also inappropriate to the case, then this Article cannot apply and Article 181 will govern the application. See Note 693 in Article 181 under heading "Applications for execution". As observed by the Privy Council, this clause contemplates only a decree or order made in such form as to render it capable of being enforced in execution; if a further application is necessary to make the decree executable then Article 181 applies to such further application—Rameshar Singh v. Homeshwar, 6 P.L.J. 132 (139) (P.C.), A.I.R. 1921 P.C. 31, 59 I.C. 636.

When in a redemption decree no time is fixed for payment, the decree can be executed from the date on which it is passed, and an application to execute the decree (i.e., redeem the mortgage) is governed by the rule of limitation under clause 1 of this Article—Krishna Chandra v. Jakeral, 10 C.L.J. 115, 1 I.C. 71; Maloji v. Sagaji, 13 Bom. 567; Narain Das v. Udham, 68 P.R. 1913, 44 P.L.R. 1913, 18 I.C. 48.

An application for execution of a decree allowing redemption of mortgage on payment of a certain sum of money by the decree-holder and fixing no period within which the sum is to be paid is governed by Art. 182 and not by general Art. 181—Budhu Ram v. Mustoq Shah, 158 I.C. 517.

Even though the redemption decree fixes a time for payment, the decree is executable by the decree-holder (mortgagor) from the date of the passing of the decree, because it is open to the mortgagor to pay the decretal amount on the very date of the decree. An application to execute the decree is governed by this Article—Etyati Pooparambil v. Matalakot Krishna, 28 Mad. 211; Maruti v. Krishna, 23 Bom. 592.

In 1908, a decree was made ex parte against three brothers D, U and G. In 1912, G applied for an order to set aside the ex parte decree. In 1913 the Court granted the application so far as G was concerned. On the rehearing of the case against G, no notice was given to D and U, and in September 1913, the suit was dismissed against G and decreed ex parte against D and U. The decree-holder applied in July 1916 for execution of the decree of Steptember 1913 against D and U. Held that the decree of Steptember 1913 against D and U was neither an amendment nor a review of the original decree of 1908, and hence clause (3) or (4) did not apply; that the decree of September 1913 was a mere surplusage and a nullity; that the decree of 1908 had remained untouched throughout and had from that date remained enforceable throughout; that the present application must be deemed to be one for the execution of the decree of 1908, and therefore barred under this clause—Umesh Chandra v. Akrur, 46 Cal. 25 (29, 30), 50 I.C. 15.

An application for execution of an ex parte decree, against which no appeal is preferred, is governed by clause (1), and the time taken by the defendant in prosecuting his application for setting aside the ex parte decree cannot be deducted—Jabar Khan v. Rahim Khan, 18 N.L.R. 190, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 197, 68 I.C. 728.

A pre-emption decree is incapable of execution until the decree-holder pays the pre-emptive price in Court, and consequently clause 1 is inapplicable; and no other clause of Article 182 being under the circumstances applicable, Article 181 would apply to an application for the execution of such decree—Chhedi v. Lalu, 24 All. 300; Chandika v. Kalu, 22 O.C. 82, 52 I.C. 157. Mr. Rustomji is of opinion that such decree is capable of immediate execution, as it is open to the decree-holder to pay the price on the day the decree is passed, and therefore an application for execution comes within clause 1 of Art. 182: Rustomji's Limitation, 3rd Edn., p. 723. Where there was a direction in a pre-emption decree that the purchase money should be deposited in Court within 31 days from the date of its being final, the decree did not become final until the time for the appeal allowed by law had expired, or, if appealed from, had been decided by the ultimate appellate Court—Shaikh Ewaz v. Mokuna Bibi, 1 All. 132; Ramshahai v. Gaya, 7 All. 107.

702. Date of the decree:—The date of the decree is the date on which the judgment is pronounced (O. 20, rule 7 of the C. P. Code) and not the date on which the decree is actually prepared and signed by the Court—Afzal v. Umda, 1 C.W.N. 93; Rakhhal v. Jogendra, 10 C.L.J. 467, 3 I.C. 391; Surajdeo v. Musahroo, 20 C.W.N. 950, 1 P.L.J. 359, 34 I.C. 504; Hiralal v. Jamuna Prosad, 5 P.L.J. 490, 1 P.L.T. 394, 51 I.C. 531; Golam v. Goljan, 25 Cal. 109; Narsingrao v. Bando, 42 Bom. 309 (317); Rasdas v. Gangasagar, 24 Pat. 421; Ramachandra v. Bhabu, A.I.R. 1950 Orissa. 125 (F.B.); and the fact that the Court-fee required to be paid in order to validate the decree (which was passed in a suit for accounts) was not paid till some months later would not give a different starting point; nor would the payment of Court-fee constitute a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of clause 5—Bhajan v. Girish, 17 C.W.N. 959, 19 I.C. 410. The same principle applies to decrees passed in partition suits—Ram v. Maharaj, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 337; Banwari v. Ramhari, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 335; Venkatappa v. Venkatappa, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 266, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 112, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 650, or to decrees for mesne profits—Md. Idris v. Md. Kafir, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 524. Where a decree provides that the decree-holder should pay the deficit Court-fee on the decretal amount before its execution the decree is not a conditional one in the sense that some extraneous event is to happen on the fulfilment of which alone it can be executed—Yeshwant v. Walchand, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 16.

Where, however, the decree-holder is supplied with a copy of a decree bearing a date on which it is drawn up instead of the date of the pronouncement of the judgment and the decree-holder files an application for execution within three years from the date of the decree as stated in the copy supplied, the application is not time-barred as the decree holder cannot be prejudiced by mistake of the Court—Kali v. Bibi Aziz, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 149.

Time runs from the date of the final decree. Thus, a decree for sale on a mortgage was passed against several defendants jointly on the 25th August 1900, and made absolute on the 21st December 1901. As against one of the defendants the decree was ex parte, and it was set aside as against her on the 11th March 1902. Subsequently a decree was passed on the merits against her also on November 16, 1904 and it was made absolute on November 27, 1905. Held that the latter decree supplemented and completed the decree previously passed, and limitation for execution ran from the date of the latter decree (Nov. 27, 1905), that being the "date of the decree" under this clause—Ashfaq Hussain v. Gouri Sahai, 33 All. 264 (P.C.).

Where in a suit an interlocutory judgment is passed against one out of two persons and a final judgment later on against both limitation begins to run from the date of the interlocutory judgment so far as the former party is concerned as if there have been two decrees, one bearing the former date—Hock Sein v. Kyaiklat Municipality, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 313.

The date of award under rules of the Co-operative Societies Act does not mean the date written therein but the date on which such award is officially communicated to the person or persons affected thereby—Lakshmi v. Lalit, I.L.R. (1940) 2 Cal. 460, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 152. In case of awards under sec. 15 of the Arbitration Act (IX of 1899) the date of decree is the date of filing the award into Court as it acquires the incidents of a decree when it is filed in Court—Albuquerque v. Catholic Bank, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 244, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 352.

703. Clause (2)—Appeal:—A decree-holder is entitled to wait until the decision of the lower appellate Court before applying for execution of the decree of the Court of first instance, and the period of limitation runs from the date of the decree of the lower Appellate Court—Krishna Lal v. Satyabala, 51 Cal. 342, 81 I.C. 569, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 686. If there is a second appeal to the High Court, time runs from the date of the judgment of the High Court—Nagendra v. Ambica, 35 C.W.N. 958 (959). Time is to be calculated from the date of the appellate decree, whether that decree affirms or modifies or sets aside the original decree—Md. Mehdi v. Mohini Kanta, 34 Cal. 874; Kristnama v. Mangammal, 26 Mad. 91 (95); Sahu Nandlal v. Sahu Dharam, 48 All. 377, A.I.R. 1926 All. 440, 94 I.C. 961.

The words "where there has been an appeal" mean an appeal from the decree sought to be executed, and not an appeal from another decree, though made in the suit—Jacinto v. Fernandez, 41 Bom.L.R. 921, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 454. So also it does not cover appeal from an order passed in a collateral proceeding or having no direct or immediate connection with the decree under execution—Bhawanipur Banking Corp. v. Gauri, A.I.R. 1950 S.C. 6; Subba Iyer v. Metal Corporation of India, 93 C.L.J. 255, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 169; Shah Sankal v. Punamchand, A.I.R. 1954 Raj. 273; Narayanan v. Lakshmi, A.I.R. 1953 T.C. 220 (F.B.); Ratikanta v. Ramesh, A.I.R. 1953 Orissa 85.

The words "where there has been an appeal" mean 'where a memorandum of appeal has been presented to the proper Court' and not 'where the memorandum has been presented and admitted'. Therefore, if a memorandum of appeal was rejected for non-payment of additional Court-fees declared to be leviable thereon, limitation would still run from the date of the Appellate Court's order of rejection—Rup Singh v Mukhraj Singh, 7 All. 887; Basanta Kumar v. Manjuri, 74 I.C. 679, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 349. But the Calcutta High Court has taken a contrary view in Prodyot v. Mathura, 42 C.W.N. 698, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 533 and has held that the order of the appellate court rejecting a memorandum of appeal for non-payment of requisite court fees within the time allowed has not the effect of a decree and it does not deal judicially with the appeal at all which never came into existence. Consequently limitation will run from the trial court's decree and not from the order of the appellate court rejecting the memorandum of appeal. The Allahabad High Court has also taken the same view in the Full Bench Case of Harihar v. Beni, 1951 A.L.J. 824, A.I.R. 1951 All. 79. But where an appeal is preferred on insufficient court fees and is duly registered as an appeal and numbered as such but subsequently rejected after notice to the parties and after hearing them, the time for execution begins to run from the date of the order of the appellate court—Krishna v. Radhey, 19 Pat.L.T. 243, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 79. Where the matter is carried in appeal, the date of the final order is the date of the appellate order—Abhe Ram v. Bholar, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 203, 37 P.L.R. 257, 157 I.C. 604.

It is sufficient that an appeal has been presented and heard, to bring the case under this clause, although the appellate Court may have decided that no appeal would lie—Wazir Mohan v. Lalit Singh, 9 Cal. 100. Even though an appeal is incompetent on the ground that no appeal lies, the order dismissing the appeal would give a fresh starting point of limitation under this clause—Thandavaroya v. Arumugha, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 421, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 261. (But the Allahabad High Court holds contra in Sahu Nandlal v. Sahu Dharam, 48 All. 377). So also, a decree of the Appellate Court dismissing the appeal as barred by limitation will give a fresh starting point of limitation —Akshoy v. Chunder Mohan, 16 Cal. 150. Similarly, an order of the Appellate Court dismissing the appeal for non-payment of printing costs or by reason of the appellant not pressing the appeal is an appellate order within the meaning of this clause— Raghu Prasad v. Jadunandan, 6 P.L.J. 27, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 6, 2 P.L.T. 28, 59 I.C. 896; Fazlur Rahman v. Shah Mahammad, 30 All. 385. So also, an order dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution is an appellate order within the meaning of this clause —Bijaya v. Kesho Prasad, 1938 P.W.N. 449, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 401.

The intention of the Legislature in enacting clause (2) of this Article is that if an appeal in any way imperils the decree sought to be executed, then the date of the final disposal of the appeal should be the date from which the period of limitation ought to be computed. A preliminary mortgage decree was passed in 1921. There was an appeal against this decree to the High Court; during the pendency of this appeal the mortgagee decree-holder obtained a final decree for sale on 28th October 1922. The appeal to the High Court against the preliminary decree was dismissed on 29th October 1925. Held that for an application for execution of the final decree limitation ran from 29th October 1925, because the final decree for sale which was made during the pendency of the appeal against the proliminary decree was clearly imperilled by the appeal, and the decree made by the High Court clearly supplemented and completed the decree of the 28th October 1922. The words "where there is an appeal" should not be interpreted to mean "where there has been an appeal against a decree or order for the execution of which the application is made"—Somar Singh v. Deonandan, 6 Pat. 780, 102 I.C. 811, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 215. The same view has been taken by the Allahabad High Court in Bugain v. Chhotey Lal, 1943 A.L.W. 40 and by the Madras High Court in Veeran v. Koya, I.L.R. (1939) Mad. 828, (1939)

2 M.L.J. 86, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 735. But the Bombay High Court has taken a contrary view in Mahadeo v Fatumiya, I.L.R. (1948) Bom. 521, 50 Bom. L.R. 221, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 337 where it has been held that the word "appeal" means appeal from the decree or order sought to be executed; therefore, an appeal from the preliminary decree is not competent to extend the limitation for the execution of the final decree passed during the pendency of the appeal from the preliminary decree.

The language of this clause is sufficiently wide to include an appeal the result of which may affect the decree or order which it is sought to execute in such a way as to render the execution proceedings in connection with such decree or order infructuous. Where therefore after an order for restitution was obtained by the respondent, the appellant continued litigation in various courts and at last his final appeal failed, an application for execution of the order of restitution filed within three years from the date of the order in such final appeal but more than three years after the order for restitution was made, is not barred by limitaton—Saraswati v. Dwarik, 44 C.W.N. 859.

The word "appeal" in col. (2) which is no doubt a general word must bear a meaning restricted by its context and it means "an appeal from a decree or order of the nature mentioned in cls. 1, 3 and 4; that is to say an appeal from the original decree or order, an appeal from a decree following a review of judgment, an appeal from the amended decree." The true test is that the decree of the appellate Court in the appeal must be the decree which is sought to be executed. This irresistibly follows from reading col. 3 along with col. 1 of the Article—Sivaramachari v. Anjaneya, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 245, 1951 M.W.N. 636, 64 M.L.W. 742, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 962 (F.B.); Balkishan v. Dhanraj, A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 200. The word "appeal" means not only an appeal from the original decree but also an appeal against an order passed in review of the original judgment—Narsing v. Madhu, 4 All. 274, Ramesh Chandra v. Ghansiam Dass, A.I.R. 1955 All. 552, 1955 All.L.J. 501; Birendra v. Shyam, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 333. Sub-clause (2), Art. 182 does not refer exclusively to appeals against a decree, it refers to an appeal of any sort, and covers an appeal against an order allowing an application for review—Narayan Ganpati v. Radhabai Krishnaji, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 162, 38 Bom.L.R. 215, 162 I.C. 223, 57 Bom. 388, 60 Cal. 1 (P.C.) folld. But it does not contemplate an appeal against an order of dismissal of a petition for review of judgment, because such an appeal does not lie—Ram Ratan v. Upendra, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 288, 68 I.C. 727. So also, the word 'appeal' does not contemplate an appeal from an order dismissing an application made by the judgment-debtor to set aside the original decree (which was passed ex parte); because the infructuous efforts of the defendant to set aside the ex parte decree obtained by the plaintiff cannot have the effect of extending the period within which the plaintiff is allowed by law to execute his decree—Jivaji v. Ramchandra, 16 Bom. 123; Sheo Prosad v. Anrudh, 2 All. 273; Raj Brijraj v. Nauratan, 3 P.L.J. 119, 44 I.C. 575; Baikantha v. Aughore, 21 Cal. 387; Mulkh Raj v. Gurditta, 30 P.L.R. 283, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 283, 120 I.C. 179; Jabarkhan v. Rahim Khan, 18 N.L.R. 190, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 197, 68 I.C. 728; Harischandra v. Dinesh, I.L.R. (1946) 1 Cal. 637, 50 C.W.N. 667, 82 C.L.J. 226, A.I.R, 1946 Cal, 375; Kunwar v. Sheo Shankar, A.I.R. 1950 All. 327; Rameshwar v. Parmeshwar, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 1 (F.B.); Sivaramachari v. Anjaneya, supra; Chandmal v. Baburmal, A.I.R. 1951 Rajasthan 150; for an appeal from an order dismissing an application under Or. 9 r. 9 C. P. Code for restoration of proceedings dismissed for default—Bhawanipur Banking Corp. v. Gouri, A.I.R. 1950 S.C. 6. When an ex parte decree was passed, and an application was made by the judgment-debtor to set aside the ex parte decree under O. 9, r. 13, C. P. Code, and the Court having refused to set aside the ex parte decree, the judgment-debtor appealed against the order of refusal, and this appeal was dismissed, held that this order of dismissal did not give a fresh starting point of limitation for an application to execute the ex parte decree. The "decree of the Appellate Court" means the decree on appeal from the decree sought to be executed; but here the appellate decree was not passed on an appeal from the ex parte decree sought to be executed; because the appeal was not preferred against the ex parte decree but against the order refusing to set aside the ex parte decree. Moreover, the application to set aside the ex parte decree did not keep the decree open, and could not be regarded as an appeal from the ex parte decree itself—Fakir Chand v. Daiba Charan, 54 Cal. 1052, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 904, 104 I.C. 466. The contrary view taken in Lutful v. Sumbhudri, 8 Cal. 248 has been disapproved of in almost all the above cases and is no longer good law. The Madras High Court has also taken a contrary view and has held that the word "appeal" means an appeal in the suit which is likely to affect the decree sought to be executed. So an appeal from an order dismissing an application for setting aside the ex parte decree is included within the word "appeal"—Ramachandra v. Venkateswara, I.L.R. (1939) Mad. 252, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 1048, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 157. The same view has been taken by the Bombay High Court in Narmadabai v. Hidayatalli, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 115, 50 Bom.L.R. 696, and by the Patna High Court in Kaviraj Basudevanand v. Raghubir Saran, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 284. A contrary view has also been taken in Rahati v. Ghulam, A.I.R. 1952 J. & K. 16, the reason being cl. (2) does not state in its strict grammatical construction that the appeal must be against the decree in the suit.

There is no warrant for reading into the words "where there has been an appeal" any qualification as to the character of the appeal or as to the parties to it; the words mean just what they say. So where an appeal is remanded with costs for de novo trial the limitation for execution of the order for costs runs from the date of appeal after remand and not from the date of passing the order for costs—Krishna v. Sohan, 18 Luck. 68, 1942 O.W.N. 315, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 464.

The word "appeal" does not mean any appeal which only affects the decree-holder's right to execute it at a particular time and a particular circumstance. So, an appeal against an order dismissing an application by the judgment debtor to record satisfaction of the decree, which would leave the decree valid and without modification, can not be regarded as an 'appeal' within the meaning of this clause for purposes of extending limitation—Seetharama v. Abdul, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 371, 1940 M.W.N. 898, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 40; affirmed in Letters Patent Appeal in Seetharama v. Abdul, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 703, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 614, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 616. So also an appeal from an order passed on an application to cancel or modify an order recording satisfaction of a decree and to revive it is not an 'appeal' within the meaning of this clause—Moideen v. Subramanya, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 892, 1939 M.W.N. 996.

An order of the High Court in revision modifying the decree of the first Court is an order in appeal, according to the Calcutta High Court, and time runs from the date of the order—Gurupada v. Tarit Bhusan, 22 C.W.N. 158, 44 I.C. 141. But the rejection of a revision petition without summoning the respondent cannot enlarge the time, because such an order is not an appellate order—Mastan v. Pahlwan, 81 P.L.R. 1909, 4 I.C. 629. On the other hand, the Madras High Court has in the Full Bench case of Chidambara Nadar v. Rama Nadar, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 385, 45 M.L.W. 457, 1937 M.L.J. 453, 168 I.C. 561, held that the word 'appeal' in cl. (2) of Art. 182, is not used in a restricted sense so as to exclude civil revision petitions, and that the expression appellate Court is not confined to a Court exercising appellate jurisdiction as opposed to revisional powers. See also Abubaker v. Muhammad, A.I.R. 1954 T.C. 97. Consequently when a revision petition is filed before the High Court fresh starting point of limitation runs from the date of the order (even if the order be one of dismissal) on that petition for the execution of the decree concerned. The same view has been taken by the Allahabad High Court in Ajodhya v. U. P. Government, I.L.R. (1947) All. 191, A.I.R. 1947 All. 390.

An appeal not against the original decree but against an order passed in execution is not contemplated by this clause and will not save limitation. If, however, the order in the appeal is in the nature of a decree and capable of execution, time will run from the date of the appellate order—Hulasi v. Maiku, 5 All. 236.

An order under Or. 41, r. 17, C. P. Code, dismissing an appeal for default is a final order within the meaning of Cl. (2) in Col. 3, Art. 182—Bank of Upper India v. Sri Krishna Das, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 771, 16 Lah. 564, 37 P.L.R. 727. An order dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution is a judicial order disposing of the appeal. Since no further appeal is provided against such an order, it is a final order within the meaning of this clause—Ram Kumar v. Rudra, 1950 A.L.J. 565, A.I.R. 1951 All. 493. See also Bijaya v. Kesho Prasad, 1938 P.W.N. 449, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 401.

The plain meaning of Cl. (2) of Art. 182 is that the time for execution runs from the final order of the Appellate Court, whether that be an order for dismissal for default of prosecution or an order passed on the appeal on merits—Budhu Ram v. Mushtaq Shah, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 129, 158 I.C. 517.

It has been determined by the Privy Council that an order of a final Appellate Court holding that the appeal had abated and refusing to set aside the abatement is a "final order of the Appellate Court" within the meaning of this clause, since it deals judicially with the matters before the Court and has the effect of finally disposing of the appeal. Such an order gives a new starting point for the period of limitation prescribed by this Article—Abdulla Asghar Ali v. Ganesh Das, 60 Cal. 662 (P.C.), 37 C.W.N. 412 (416), A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 68, 142 I.C. 326. The Calcutta High Court also laid down that an order declaring that an appeal had abated would come within cl. (2) of Art. 182, and time would run from the date of such order, and not from the date of the original decree—Gohur Bepari v. Ram Krishna, 32 C.W.N. 387 (391), 104 I.C. 566, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 760; Ramgati v. Nagendra, 1 C.L.J. 17n. The same view was taken by the Allahabad High Court in Mahammad Razi v. Karbalai, 32 All. 136 (dissenting from 20 All. 124); and not from the date of death—Ajodhya v. U. P. Government, I.L.R. (1947) All. 191, A.I.R. 1947 All. 390. The contrary view taken in Fazl Husen v. Raj Bahadur, 20 All. 124 and Tikait Krishna v. Wazir Narain, 5 P.L.J. 731, must be deemed as overruled. The same view has been taken in Bhimanna v. Elhara, A.I.R. 1950 Hyderabad 46. Where during the pendency of the appeal, one of the respondents (decree-holders) died, but no substitution of his legal representative was made and the appeal against him abated, held that in an application for execution by the legal representative of the deceased decree-holder, time ran from the date of the appellate decree, and not from the date of the original decree. The fact that the judgment-debtors allowed their appeal against the deceased decree-holder to abate cannot prevent his representatives from taking the benefit of the date of the appellate decree—Hira Lal v. Gamu, 4 Pat. 844, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 585, 91 I.C. 308.

The word 'Appellate Court' in this clause means a proper Appellate Court, i.e., a Court having jurisdiction to hear the appeal; and therefore where an appellant preferred an appeal to a wrong Court and the appeal was returned for presentation to the proper Court, the decree-holder is not entitled to calculate the time for the execution of his decree from the date of such return, as the starting point. Such an order returning an appeal is neither a final order of an Appellate Court nor a withdrawal of the appeal—Mahomod Abdul Kadir v. Samipandia, 43 Mad. 835 (837), 39 M.L.J. 441, 60 I.C. 267. The order of the Appellate Court contemplated in this clause is an order which disposes of the appeal on the merits in some form, and not simply one which intimates to the party that the appeal should be filed elsewhere—Ibid (p. 841). But see 7 All. 887, 16 Cal. 250, 6 P.L.J. 27 and other cases cited above where the dismissal of an appeal on the ground of non-payment of court-fee or for default of prosecution was held to be an appellate order, although the order did not dispose of the appeal on the merits.

Appeal from amended decree:—See 33 C.W.N. 958 in Note 706 below.

Appeal to Privy Council:—The word "appeal" included an appeal to the Privy Council and the term "Appellate Court" included the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council sitting for the purpose of hearing appeals from orders passed by Courts in India—Gopal v. Joyram, 7 Cal. 620; Narsingh v. Narayan, 2 All. 763; Kishen v. Collector of Allahabad, 4 All. 137. See also Somar Singh v. Premdei, 3 Pat. 327, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 40, 5 P.L.T. 21, 79 I.C. 794. In such a case the only order capable of execution is the order of the Privy Council, and the period of limitation is 12 years under Art. 183. See Note 722 under Art. 183. There is a distinction between an appliiation for leave to appeal to the Privy Council and the appeal itself. Hence the date of dismissal of an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council even if filed along with the memorandum of the proposed appeal to the Privy Council, cannot be taken into account as marking the commencement of the limitation for the execution application. The final order in such a case is the dismissal of the appeal by the High Court—Rupai v. Gashain, I.L.R. (1951) 2 All. 210, 1950 A.L.J. 286, A.I.R. 1952 All. 391.

But an order of the Privy Council dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution is not a judicial determination of the matter in suit; therefore it is neither to be treated as a decree or order of the Appellate Court, nor does it amount to an affirmance of the decision appealed from; and in such a case the only decree capable of execution is the decree appealed against, i.e., the decree of the High Court—Abdul Majid v. Jawahir, 36 All. 350 (353) P.C. (reversing Abdul Majid v. Jawahir, 33 All. 154); Batuk Nath v. Munni Dei, 36 All. 284 (288) (P.C.); Sachindra Nath v. Maharaj Bahadur Singh, 49 Cal. 203 (213) (P.C.).

703A. Appeal as to part of the decree:—Though an appeal is preferred in respect of only a part of the decree, limitation will be saved as regards the entire decree—Imam v. Dasaundhi, 1 All. 508. The intention of the Legislature is to treat the decree as a whole, although only a part of the decree may be the subject of an appeal—Vydianatha v. Subramania, 36 Mad. 104 (106). Thus, where the plaintiff preferred an appeal against a part of the decree which was adverse to him (e.g., as regards a part of the claim which was disallowed) and then being defeated in the appeal, made an application to execute the unappealed portion of the decree, time began to run from the date of the appellate decree—Kristo Churn v. Radha Churn, 19 Cal. 750 (754); Abdul v. Maidin, 22 Bom. 500; Kristnama v. Mangammal, 26 Mad. 91 (93) (F.B.) (dissenting from Muthu v. Chellappa, 12 Mad. 479). Where a plaintiff claims several reliefs, but the Court passes a decree granting some of such reliefs and refusing the others, and an appeal is preferred only against a portion of the decree regarding a particular relief, limitation for the execution of the other unappealed reliefs also runs from the date of the appellate decree—Kanniamal v. Balkrishna, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 557, 1935 M.W.N. 329, 156 I.C. 1029. As observed by the Calcutta High Court, the Court executing the decree need not go into questions so complicated as those which must sometimes arise in determining whether in such a case the whole decree was or might have become or became imperilled in the Court of Appeal. The Court should follow the plain meaning of the words of Article 182, viz., that the period of limitation runs from the date of the decree or order of the Appellate Court, whenever there has been an appeal—Kristo Churn v. Radha Churn, supra; Kristnama v. Mangammal, 26

Mad. 91 (93). The word 'appeal' in this Article does not mean only an appeal against the whole decree and by which the whole decree is imperrilled; it means any appeal by any party. The words of this Article must be construed in their natural sense as permitting an extension of time whenever an appeal is preferred—Abdul Rahiman v. Maidin, 22 Bom. 500 (505, 508). In any case in which there has been an appeal from a decree, limitation shall begin to run from the date of the decree on appeal, irrespective of whether the decree was appealed from in whole or in part. When a portion of the decree is appealed from, and a portion is not appealed from, the appellate Court, in adjudicating on the appeal affirms the portion of the decree to which no exception has been taken, and though the appellate decree does not in terms affirm that portion, it must be construed as so doing; and limitation runs from the date of the decree on appeal—Kristnama v. Mangammal, 26 Mad. 91 (92, 93). When a person obtains a decree for only a portion of the amount or the properties claimed by him and prefers an infructuous appeal as regards the disallowed portion, limitation for execution as regards the portion allowed will run from the date of the appellate decree. Here there is but one decree, for it cannot be argued that in this case there was one decree so far as the plaintiff's claim was allowed, and another and separate decree so far as the plaintiff's claim failed—Harkant v. Biraj Mohan, 23 Cal. 876 (883); Abdul Alim v. Abdul Hakim, 53 Cal. 901, 31 C.W.N. 262, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 89, 97 I.C. 838; Sakhalchand v. Velchand, 18 Bom. 203 (205). When a decree is appealed against, even though the appellant appeals against only a portion of the decree, the whole decree of the first Court is superseded by or becomes merged in the decree of the Appellate Court, and there is no part of the first Court's decree that remains to be executed. No part of the decree of the first Court can be held to be in separate existence after an appeal in the suit has been decided. Hence time for execution of the part of the decree not appealed against runs from the date of the Appellate Court's decree—Abdul Alim v. Abdul Hakim, 53 Cal. 901, 31 C.W.N. 262 (264), A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 89, 97 I.C. 838. The words "where there is an appeal" mean that once there was an appeal, time ran from the date of the decision in the appeal, and there is no suggestion that it would be material as to whether all or only some of the parties appealed or whether the whole or only a part of the decree was challenged. Though the decree may decide a number of matters in controversy, there is only one decree and not a number of decrees. The Appellate Court deals with the decree as a whole; and after appeal the only decree that can be executed is the decree of the Appellate Court whether it reverses, modifies or confirms the decree of the lower Court—Ibid. Where certain plaintiffs obtained a decree for pre-emption in respect of four villages and the defendants appealed but the lower Appellate Court dismissed the appeal, and the defendants again appealed to the High Court, but, in this appeal they questioned the decision of the Lower Appellate Court in respect of two of the villages in suit and in the second appeal the plaintiff's suit was dismissed as to one of the villages with regard to which the appeal was preferred and the defendants' appeal was dismissed as to the other village; it was held that in respect of all the three villages as to which the final decree stood in favour of the plaintiffs limitation began to run from the date of the decree in second appeal, and not as to two of them from the date of the lower appellate court's decree—Badunnissa v. Shamsuddin, 17 All. 103 (105). [It should be noted that in all these cases the parties in the original suit and the parties in the appeal were the same].

Appeal against some of the defendants:—The plaintiff brought a suit against A and B. The suit against A was decreed, but it was dismissed as against B. The plaintiff appealed against the dismissal but did not implead A as a party respondent in the appeal. His appeal was dismissed. Held that the period of limitation for the execution of the decree against A ran from the date of the appellate order of dismissal—Satis Chandra v. Girish Chandra, 47 Cal. 813, 60 I.C. 915. But in Raghunath v. Abdul Hye, 14 Cal.

26, it was held that in such a case time ran from the date of the original decree. In Muthu v. Chellappa, 12 Mad. 479, it is laid down that even though A is made a party respondent in the appeal, the time for applying for execution against A would run from the date of the original decree, because A was not a necessary party to the appeal, and the original decree as against A was not imperilled by the appeal preferred by the plaintiff against B.

Appeal against decree for partition:—Where a final decree for partition directed one set of defendants to pay the costs of another set of defendants, but the decree was appealed against by the plaintiffs, and the different sets of the defendants were all made parties to the appeal, and the appeal was dismissed, the period of limitation for the recovery of the costs awarded to the one set of defendants against the other, ran from the date of dismissal of the appeal; because when the appeal against the final decree was filed by the plaintiffs in the partition suit the entire partition was under review, and if it so happened that any relief had been given to the plaintiffs in that appeal, the necessary consequence would have been that the whole partition decree would have had to be altered—Kashi Prasad v. Matkura Prasad, 48 All. 6, 23 A.L.J. 878, 89 I.C. 286, A.I.R. 1926 All. 145.

703B. Appeal by some of the defendants:—If the decree passed against the defendants was a joint one, and an appeal was preferred by some of the defendants, the appeal would imperil the whole decree, and the time for execution against the non-appealing defendants would run from the date of the appellate decree, and not from that of the original decree—Gopal v. Gosain, 25 Cal. 594 (F.B.); Mullick Ahmed v. Md. Sayed, 6 Cal. 194; Loke Nath v. Gaju, 20 C.W.N. 178, 31 I.C. 426; Pancho Bania v. Anand Thakur, 2 Pat. 712 (714), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 160, 77 I.C. 357; Shivaram v. Sakharam, 33 Bom. 39; Basant Lal v. Najmunnessa Bibi, 6 All. 14 (15). Cf. Gauri v. Ashfak, 29 All. 623 (626). (But see Abdul Khadir v. Ahmmad, 38 Mad. 419, 423 (obiter), where White, C. J. observes that it would be inequitable that a judgment-debtor should be deprived of the benefit of the prescribed limitation by reason of acts of his joint judgment-debtor over whom he has presumably no control, and for whose action he is not responsible. See also Rangamma v. Rangamma, A.I.R. 1952 Mys. 121.

Where a decree is passed severally (not jointly) against several defendants individually (though in form there is but one decree contained in one piece of paper) and an appeal is preferred only by some of the defendants on a ground not common to all the defendants, the time for execution against the non-appealing defendants will run from the date of the original decree, and not from that of the appellate decree, and this clause will not apply; because, in such a case the rights of the non-appealing defendants would not be affected by the appeal, nor would their liabilities be extended or varied—Mashiatunnissa v. Rani, 13 All. 1 (F.B.); Wise v. Rajnarain, 10 B.L.R. 258; Raghunath v. Abdul Hye, 14 Cal. 26 (32); Sangram Singh v. Bujharat Singh, 4 All. 36 (37). Where the decree is for separate sums found to be due from separate defendants, and only one defendant appeals, execution as against the non-appealing defendants can only be of the original decree, because in such a case, the whole decree is not in peril and the plaintiff might execute his decree against the non-appealing defendants without waiting for the decision of the appeal—Abdul v. Moidin, 22 Bom. 500 (507); Raghunath v. Abdul Hye, 14 Cal. 26 (32, 33); Sangram Singh v. Bujharat, 4 All. 36 (37). Where a decree was passed against two persons and one of them appealed, but the circumstances of the case were such that the whole decree was imperilled by the appeal, held that the time for an application for execution against the non-appealing defendant would run from the date of the appellate decree and not from the date of the original decree—Nundun Lal v. Rai Joy Kishen, 16 Cal. 598 (602);

Nur-ul-Hasan v. Md. Hasan, 8 All. 573 (575); Viraraghava v. Ponnammal, 23 Mad. 60 (67).

Therefore, in dealing with the question of limitation for an application for execution of a decree, where there has been an appeal, the Court should see whether the original decree was a joint decree or an incorporation of several decrees, and whether the appeal against it imperilled the whole decree or not—Christiana Sens Law v. Benarasi Prasad, 19 C.W.N. 287 (289), 22 I.C. 685; Pancho Bania v. Anand Thakur, 2 Pat. 712 (714), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 160, 77 I.C. 357.

In some cases, however, the Judges are unwilling to draw a distinction between a joint and a several decree, and they refuse to enter into such subtle points as to whether the decree is imperilled or not by the appeal of one defendant only. Thus, in a Madras case it has been remarked that even though all the judgment-debtors do not appeal, no question arises as to whether the decree as against the remaining judgment-debtors is imperilled by the appeal or not. The words of clause 2 of this Article are clear and should be followed by the Courts, viz., that whenever an appeal is preferred, the period of limitation runs from the date of the final decree of the Appellate Court; whether all the judgment-debtors or some only of them have appealed, makes no difference. There is only one decree that can be executed, and that is the final decree of the Appellate Court—Viraraghava v. Ponnammal, 23 Mad. 60 (67) (dissenting from Muthu v. Chellappa, 12 Mad. 479). In a more recent case the same High Court observes that the question of limitation ought not to be made to depend upon the difficult and doubtful point whether an appeal by one of the defendants as against a part of the decree of the first Court imperils the decree passed against the other defendants or the other portion of the decree. Such subtle distinction not warranted by the language of the Legislature should not be introduced by the Courts—Ari Chetty v. Theerthamalai, 3 L.W. 521, 34 I.C. 791. See also, Sooranna v. Venkanna, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 271, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 441. In the Full Bench case of Mashiatunnissa v. Rani, 13 All. 1, the minority of the Judges (Mahmud and Broadhurst JJ.) have expressed the view that the words "decree" in clause 2 of Article 182 should not be qualified by any such epithet as "joint' or "several," that the words of Article 182 are so clear and distinct that they scarcely admit of any such distinction being drawn, and that the Article contains nothing as to whether the appeal shall have been made by all the parties or by one, or how far the appellate Court's order may or may not affect the rights of parties who have not appealed. The same opinion has been expressed by Maclean C.J. in the Calcutta Full Bench case of Gopal Chandra v. Gosain, 25 Cal. 594 (599, 602), and has been approved of in the recent Calcutta case, Abdul Alim v. Abdul Hakim, 53 Cal. 901, 31 C.W.N. 262 (263, 268). This view was also taken in an earlier Allahabad case, Nurul Hasan v. Muhammad Hasan, 8 All. 573 (575, 576). A recent case of the Patna High Court also seems to support this view —Somar Singh v. Premdei, 3 Pat. 327 (336), 79 I.C. 794, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 40; and the Punjab Chief Court was also of the same opinion in Anwar Ali v. Inayat Ali, 32 P.R. 1907. In Shivram v. Sakharam, 33 Bom. 39 (43), the Bombay High Court has held that the plain words of clause 2 of Article 182 should not be disregarded; and therefore if there is an appeal by some of the defendants, the period of limitation for execution against all the defendants including those who have not appealed, runs from the date of the appellate decree. This case has been followed in another recent case where the period of limitation for execution against the sureties of the defendants has been held to run from the date of the Appellate decree, even though the sureties were not parties in the appeal—Cholappa v. Ramchandra, 44 Bom. 34 (40, 42), 21 Bom.L.R. 861, 53 I.C. 187. Whatever the nature of a decree, whether a decree proceeds upon a ground common to the defendants or not, and whether one defendant appeals from such decree in so far as it affects his own interest or whether all the defendants appeal from only a part of the decree, and whether the parties against whom execution is sought were parties to the appeal or not, the period of limitation under this clause commences to run only from the date of the appellate decree—Pandurang v. Kunwarlal, 1940 N.L.J. 571, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 19.

704. Withdrawal of appeal:—The words "or the withdrawal of the appeal" did not exist in the Act of 1877, and were for the first time introduced into the Act of 1908 to remove the conflict of decisions which existed under the Act of 1877 as to whether the withdrawal of an appeal did or did not give a fresh starting point for limitation. In the case of Ramanuja v. Lakshmi, 30 Mad. 1 (F.B.) it was held that the withdrawal of the appeal gave a fresh period; whereas the contrary opinion was expressed in the case of Patloji v. Ganu, 15 Bom. 370; Chudasama v. Mohant Iswargar, 16 Bom. 243, Abdul v. Moidin, 22 Bom. 500 (506), Bhagwan v. Mohan Lal, 54 P.R. 1908, and Kandra v. Govind, 1 M.L.J. 745. These 5 cases are now superseded.

Where an appeal is filed against the decree but withdrawn, an application to execute the decree made within three years of the date allowing withdrawal of the appeal is not time-barred—Ram Chandra v. Nazir Ali, 24 A.L.J. 544, 94 I.C. 390, A.I.R. 1926 Jour. 153.

705. Clause 3—Review of judgment:—Owing to the absence of any provision in the old Act as regards amendment of decree, it was held in some cases that the term "review of judgment" in this clause included amendment of decree—Kali Prasanna v. Lal Mohan, 25 Cal. 258; Venkata Jogayya v. Venkata Simhadri, 24 Mad. 25 (26). Under the present Article a separate provision has been made in clause 4 for Amendment of decree. See Note 706 below.

In order to save limitation there must have been actually a review; a mere application for review or a refusal of the application for review cannot give a fresh starting point—Kurupam v. Sadasiva, 10 Mad. 66; Mastan v. Phalwan, 81 P.L.R. 1909, 4 I.C. 629. The words "where there has been a review of judgment" cover only the cases where the application for review has been allowed and do not cover cases where the application for review has been rejected—Bengali Mal v. Baijnath, 1942 A.L.J. 352, A.I.R. 1942 All. 338; Mahomed v. Alauddin, 22 Pat.L.T. 26, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 213; Laxman v. Dagdu, I.L.R. 1954 Bom. 1038, 56 Bom.L.R. 563, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 457. So only where the application for review is granted limitation runs from the date of the decree substituted on review and in cases where the application for review is rejected limitation runs from the date of the original decree—Bengali Mal v. Baijnath, supra; Mahomed v. Alaudin, supra. An order dismissing an application for the rehearing or review of a suit which has been dismissed for default is not a review of judgment—Raj Brijraj v. Nauratan, 3 P.L.J. 119, 44 I.C. 575. An application under Or. 9 r. 13, C. P. Code is not an application for review within the meaning of this clause and an order thereon does not give a fresh start of limitation—Ramakrishna v. Srinivasalu, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 648, 1950 M.W.N. 380, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 552. So also an application under Or. 9 r. 9 C. P. Code for restoration of a proceeding under sec. 36 of the Bengal Money Lenders' Act dismissed for default is not a review of the final decree. If there is a review at all, it is of the order dismissing the judgment-debtor's application under sec. 36 for default. Consequently, the execution of the final decree is not saved by this clause—Bhawanipur Banking Corp. v. Gauri, A.I.R. 1950 S.C. 6. An application for restoration is not an application contemplated by this clause—Kunwar v. Sheo Shankar, A.I.R. 1950 All. 327. But the Patna High Court held in Dodhraj v. Bhagwan, 16 Pat. 306, 18 Pat.L.T. 231, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 337 that such an application amounts to "review" within the meaning of this clause, but this decision has been over-ruled by the Full Bench decision in Rameshwar v. Parmeshwar, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 1.

As in the case of appeal, so in the case of review or amendment of decree, it may be said that if only a part of the decree is sought to be reviewed or amended, limitation is saved as regards the whole decree. The intention of the Legislature is to treat the decree as a whole, although only a part may be the subject of an appeal or an application for review or amendment. Limitation runs with respect to the execution of the whole decree, only when the proceedings in appeal, review or amendment come to an end—Vydianatha v. Subramania, 36 Mad. 104 (106).

The words in Art. 182 (3) "decision passed on review" mean a decision passed in review proceedings, and whatever such a decision is it gives a fresh starting point of limitation.

706. Clause 4—Amendment of decree:—This clause has been introduced for the first time into the Act of 1908, to set at rest the conflict of opinion which existed as to the question whether, when a decree was amended, limitation ran from the date of the decree or from the date of the amendment. In some cases an amendment of the decree was regarded as a review of judgment and therefore time ran under clause 3 from the date of amendment—Kali Prasanna v. Lal Mohan, 25 Cal. 258; Kishen Sahi v. Collector, 4 All. 137 (141); Venkata Jogayya v. Venkata Simhadri, 24 Mad. 25; Vishvanathan v. Ramanathan, 24 Mad. 646. This view was however doubted in another Calcutta case, Rakhal v. Jogendra, 10 C.L.J. 467, 3 I.C. 391. Another Allahabad case went so far as to say that as there was no clause of this Article applicable to amendment of decrees, Article 181 applied and time ran from the date of the amendment—Muhammad Suleman v. Muhammad Yar, 17 All. 39. This divergence of opinion is now set at rest by the specific provision contained in the present clause.

This clause cannot be invoked to find the starting point for the twelve years period under sec. 48 C. P. Code—Mt. Dulhin v. Harihar, 18 Pat. 395, 20 Pat.L.T. 932, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 607. See also Ramachandra v. Parasuramayya, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 349, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 235, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 127 (F.B.).

If a decree has been amended, time runs under this clause from the date of the amendment—Narotum v. Sukhraj, 3 Luck. 719, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 442 (448), 116 I.C. 49. The 'date of amendment' means the date of the judgment ordering the amendment (on the analogous principle that a decree bears the date on which judgment is delivered) and not the date on which the decree in actually amended—Nirit v. Kalananda, 36 I.C. 533 (Patna); Venkataswami v. Venkatasubba, 49 Mad. 807, 50 M.L.J. 554, 95 I.C. 196, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 747.

This clause does not specify the nature of the amendment, and therefore it must be said to include all kinds of amendment, whether an amendment of a clerical error under sec. 152, or an amendment under O. 47, C. P. Code or any other provision of law—Aditya Kumar v. Abinash, 34 C.W.N. 1002 (1007). According to the Patna High Court an amendment of a decree giving a fresh starting point of limitation under this clause must be an amendment in the real sense of the term, that is, of some substance affecting the rights of the parties, and not merely the correction of a clerical error, or a trifling arithmetical mistake such as the Court might at any time correct of its own motion—Rameshwar v. Raghunandan, 16 Pat. 453, 18 Pat.L.T. 679, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 57. The same High Court has held in Kesho Singh v. Bhuneshwari, 1942 P.W.N. 179, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 478 that if the alteration in the decree amounts to an amendment within the meaning of this clause, limitation will begin to run from the date of the amendment even though amendment has been made more than three years from the date of the original decree. But if the alteration does not amount to an amendment within the meaning of this clause, time will run from the date of the original decree. Thus where a decree is drawn up in the name of a wrong person and is amended after the lapse of three years from the original decree, limitation runs from the date of amendment—Gauri v. Rambilas, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 158, 2 D.L.R. 647.

Where a decree was incapable of execution at the time when it was passed (in as much it did not at all specify the relief granted or did not contain the names of the judgment-debtor and decree-holders), time ran from the date of amendment, even though the amendment was made more than 3 years after the decree was passed—Mohamaya v. Abdul Hamid, 18 C.W.N. 266 (268), 21 I.C. 615; Sanatan v. Dinabandhu, 34 C.L.J. 397, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 89, 64 I.C. 622. In other words, a barred decree is revived by amendment, and time for execution runs from the date of amendment, provided that the decree was incapable of execution before the amendment. If, however, the decree was capable of execution before the amendment, and contained a mere orthographical or clerical error (e.g, where a person's name was wrongly written as Jwala Prosad instead of Joti Prasad, which may be easily mixed up in Urdu writing, or where the decree was passed against a dead person, through a clerical error, but the decree-holder knew who the legal representatives of the deceased were), an application for execution made more than three years after the date of the decree is barred, and the decree-holder cannot take advantage of such slight errors and claim an enlarged period of limitation because of the amendment—Maharani v. Debi Das, 1929 A.L.J. 427, 115 I.C. 118, A.I.R. 1929 All. 253 (254); Anandram v. Nityananda, 32 I.C. 744 (Cal.); Rabiuddin v. Ram Kanai, 59 I.C. 186 (Cal.); Sureshwar v. Maharaj Bahadur Singh, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 581. Where an amendment in an ex parte rent decree consisted merely in a correction of the rate of rent, the amount of rent decree remaining the same, such amendment could not revive a barred decree and provide a fresh starting point, for the amendment was made merely in an ancillary part of the decree. Here it could not be said that the decree was incapable of execution before the amendment—Kalanand v. Rajkumar, 2 P.L.J. 286 (287), 39 I.C. 624.

The words of the Article 182 (4) must be given their plain meaning. And for an application for execution of a final decree which has been amended, 3 years' limitation runs from the date of amendment. It is not open to the judgment-debtor to plead that the application is time-barred on the ground that on the date of application for amendment of the earlier final decree it was time-barred, or on the ground that the amendment was unnecessary—A. Lakshmikanta v. N. Ramayya, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 97, 40 M.L.W. 896, 154 I.C. 847, 58 Mad. 743, 67 M.L.J. 904.

In a Calcutta case it has been stated that if a decree has been amended, the period of limitation should run, according to the plain language of this clause, from the date of the amendment irrespective of the question whether the amendment was properly made or whether the decree was capable of execution at the time when it was passed, or whether the Court was wrong in making the order of amendment. It is not for the executing Court to enquire into these questions, because that Court does not sit as a Court of appeal over the Court which has passed the decree or made the amendment. What the executing Court has to see is whether the decree has been amended and whether the application for execution has been prescribed within three years of the date of the amendment. To introduce other considerations as regards the correctness or propriety of the amendment would be to usurp the functions of a Court of appeal—Durga Prasad v. Kedar Nath, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 650 (651). Once the decree is amended the executing Court has got to take the amended decree as it stands and allow execution of it provided the application for execution is made within three years from the date of the amended decree—Manohar v. Sudhi, 41 C.W.N. 1330, 65 C.L.J. 455. Following the ruling reported in A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 650, the Patna High Court has observed (after reviewing all the cases on this point) that if the application for amendment had been made within three years from the date of the decree, and the application for execution has been made within three years from the date of the amendment, the execution is not barred, although the amendment was made by the Court more than three years after the date of the decree. The execution Court is not entitled to introduce other considerations into the case, such as the validity of the amendment or whether the decree was capable of execution before amendment—Bhagwati v. Narsingh, 11 P.L.T. 181, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 286 (288), 125 I.C. 785, 9 Pat. 782; Maganlal v. Sitaram, 16 Pat. 290; Rameshwar v. Raghunandan, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 57, 16 Pat. 453, 18 Pat.L.T. 679. The Bombay High Court has held that there is no warrant for holding that the date of the amendment given in the third column of this clause refers only to cases where the decree is still capable of execution at the date of amendment. It has further held that an amendment, whether formal or substantial, gives a fresh starting point of limitation—Baswachambasawraj v. Somashe, 49 Bom.L.R. 557, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 49. The same view has been taken by the Allahabad High Court in Ballabh v. Shiva, 1951 A.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1951 All. 245 (F.B.) (overruling Haidri v. Bhawani, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh. 43); this will be so even if a former application for execution of the unamended decree has been dismissed as barred by limitation—Ghafoor v. Ram Nath, 1950 A.L.J. 676, A.I.R. 1950 All. 655. It is not the function of the executing Court to question the correctness or the propriety of the amendment of the decree even though the amendment was made at a time when the decree was not a subsisting one—Iman v. Peoples' Instalment and Saving Bank Ltd., I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 659, 43 P.L.R. 11, A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 131.

When an application for amendment of a final decree is allowed, the period of limitation for execution of that final decree runs from the date of the order allowing amendment—Bahal Singh v. Mt. Chameli, A.I.R. 1935 All. 606.

But where an application for execution of a final decree is filed more than three years after the date of the final decree, but the decree is subsequently amended, the amendment does not enure to the benefit of the decree-holder, and time runs from the date of the final decree, and not from the date of the amended decree—Administrator-General, Madras v. Thotta Radhakrishna, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 434, 70 M.L.J. 700, 161 I.C. 969 (57 Mad. 795 Dist.). Here the application was filed before the amendment and was for execution of the decree as originally passed, and not of the amended decree.

Where a decree is amended on account of the scaling down order under the Madras Agriculturists Debt Relief Act, limitation will begin to run from the date of the amendment even though the order for scaling down the debt in respect of one of the debtors was passed more than three years before the application for execution—Parasa v. Stayanarayanamurthi, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 39, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 147. So also where a decree is amended under sec. 8 of the U. P. Debt Redemption Act, limitation begins to run from the date of the amendment and not from the original decree—Bashir v. Wajid, A.I.R. 1947 All. 249. Under sec. 24, Cochin Agricultural Relief Act, scaling down of the debt covered by a decree is an amendment of the decree and the amendment gives a fresh starting point of limitation for execution—Vasudevan v. Neelakantan, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 79.

Appeal against amended decree:—Where a decree was amended, on the application of the decree-holder, and then the judgment-debtor appealed against the amended decree to the District Judge and finally to the High Court, which dismissed the appeal, held that time ran from the date of the judgment of the High Court, and not from the date of the amendment, because there was an appeal against the decree as amended. An appeal from an amended decree stands on the same footing as an appeal from any other decree, and gives a fresh starting point for limitation—Nagendra v. Ambica, 33 C.W.N. 958 (960), 50 C.L.J. 12, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 676.

707. Clause 5:—Scope:—The wording of this clause shows that it refers to an application for execution where there has been a previous proceeding in execution in Court. The other clauses of the article do not deal with such a question. Those clauses deal with the question as to the time from which limitation begins to run in the case of the first application—Latafat v. Kalyan, I.L.R. (1938) All. 342, 1938 A.L.J. 117, A.L.R. 1938 All. 210.

Application:—The defence by the decree-holder of an appeal preferred by the judgment-debtor in an execution proceeding is not an application to take a step-in-aid of execution—Baij Nath v. Hari Charan, 48 I.C. 187 (Pat.). This clause requires that the decree-holder should make a direct and independent application for execution of his decree on his own account; a resistance by him to the execution of another man's decree cannot be a step-in-aid of execution of his own decree—Shib Lal v. Radha Kishen, 7 All. 898.

There must be an application by the decree-holder to take some step-in-aid of execution. In the absence of any evidence to the effect that such an application was made, a mere order by the Court that the decree-holder should take the necessary steps will not bring the next application for execution within time—Kara Pasi v. Ramnath, 8 P.L.T. 670, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 323, 103 I.C. 37. But where an order made in aid of execution is of such a nature that the Court could not have made it without an application by the decree-holder, it may be presumed that due application (possibly an oral one) had been made for it—Trimback v. Kashinath, 22 Bom. 722; Mulchand v. Jamanbi, 27 Bom.L.R. 671, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 443, 89 I.C. 228; Adimuthu v. Adiappa, 12 Bur.L.T. 113, 52 I.C. 656. Thus, where there was an order of the Court to the effect that the service of notice to the judgment-debtor was proved and that a warrant be issued for his arrest, held that the order showed conclusively that the Court must have acted on some application (possibly oral) made by the decree-holder—Mohan Lal v. Kasimuddin, 47 C.L.J. 362, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 302, 108 I.C. 588; Somasundaram v. Ma Shwe, 7 Rang. 132, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 152 (153), 117 I.C. 578.

In the absence of any application, the mere appearance of the decree-holder in a proceeding under O. 21, r. 90, C. P. Code, cannot amount to a step-in-aid of execution and save limitation in respect of a subsequent application—Baldeo v. Lachman, 6 Pat. 280, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 113, 99 I.C. 869.

It is necessary that the prior application must have been made by the decree-holder; where an application was made by the judgment-debtor for postponement of the sale, and the decree-holder consented to the postponement, held that there was no application by the decree-holder and the consent of the decree-holder to the postponement could not be treated as an "application" made by him so as to save the bar of limitation—Sreenivasachariar v. Ponnusamy, 28 Mad. 40.

This clause contemplates an application to take a step, and not a suit. A suit by a decree-holder for a declaration that the property released from attachment on the claim of a third party is liable to be attached, and an appeal to the High Court from the decision of the lower Court, are not steps-in-aid of execution—Raghunandan v. Bhugoo, 17 Cal. 268; Sadakshara ppa v. Karlingawa, 47 Bom.L.R. 848; Sadaksharappa v. Karlingawa, I.L.R. (1945) Bom. 893, 47 Bom.L.R. 795, A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 187; Maung v. Chettyar Firm, 1940 Rang. L.R. 82, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 296; Rajaram v. Paiku, I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 334, 1938 N.L.J. 336, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 534; Gumti v. Jugal, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 33, 69 C.L.J. 543, 43 C.W.N. 604, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 399; Ram Subbayya v Thimmiya, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 754, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 51; Samshudin v. Jan Mahomed, I.L.R. (1946) Kar. 412, A.I.R. 1947 Sind 48; Ram Swarup v. Dulraj, 1946 A. M.L.J. 13. But in Laxmiram v. Bhalashankar, 39 Bom. 20, 26 I.C. 262, it was held that an appeal by the decree-holder against an order adjudging the judgment-debtor an insolvent was a step-in-aid of execution. See also Sheo Ram v. Ram Bharosey, 26 O.C. 71, A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 9, 69 I.C. 660, where the word 'application' was held to be a comprehensive term so as to include a suit.

The prosecution of an appeal from an order made in the course of a proceeding in execution of a decree cannot be looked upon as an application in accordance with law for execution or to take some steps-in-aid of execution—Nand Kishore v. Sipphi Singh, 26 All. 608; Kristo Coomar v. Mahabat Khan, 5 Cal 595; Govinddas v. Ganapatdas, 47 Bom. 783, 25 Bom.L.R. 518, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 431, 73 I.C. 1030.

708. Oral application:—The application mentioned in this clause need not be in writing; an oral application will satisfy its requirements—Trimback v. Kashinath, 22 Bom. 722; Mulchand v. Jamanbi, 27 Bom.L.R. 671, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 443, 89 I.C. 228; Maniklal v. Nasia, 20 Bom. 179; Mohan Lal v. Kasimuddin, 47 C.L.J. 362, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 302, 108 I.C. 588; Abdul Kadir v. Krishnamalammal, 38 Mad. 695; Amar Singh v. Tika, 3 All. 139; Surjamal v. Sarjoog, 2 P.L.J. 5, 38 I.C. 540; Gulzari Lal v. Ram Bhajan, 22 O.C. 76; Narayan v. Balkrishna, A.I R. 1923 Nag. 11, 67 I.C. 889, Krishna Aiyar v. Veetil, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 30, 70 I.C. 80, 15 L.W. 14; Somasundaram v. Ma Shwe, 7 Rang. 132, 117 I.C. 578, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 152; Adimuthu v. Adiappa, 12 Bur.L.T. 113, 52 I.C. 656; Ram Lal v. Udit Narain, 2 Luck. 419, 100 I.C. 308. A.I.R 1927 Oudh 134; Contra—Masilamani v. Sethhuswami, 41 Mad. 251 (per Ayling, J. at pp. 253, 254, dissenting from 38 Mad. 695).

Thus, an oral application to the Court to enter partial satisfaction of the decree is a step-in-aid of execution—Adimuthu v. Adiappa, supra; an oral application made to the Court to proceed with the sale is one in aid of execution and saves limitation—Gulzari Lal v. Ram Bhajan, 22 O.C. 76; an oral application asking the Court to issue a warrant of attachment and sale of certain property in order that the decretal amount might be satisfied from the sale proceeds is a step-in-aid—Ram Lal v. Udit Narain, (supra); an oral application for an adjournment of the hearing of a previous execution application, in order to enable the decree-holder to produce an encumbrance certificate in respect of the attached property is a step-in-aid of execution which would save limitation—Abdul Kadir v. Krishnamalammal, 38 Mad. 695.

The Madras High Court has further laid down that where the C. P. Code requires a written application for execution, a mere oral application would not be a step-in-aid of execution; and where a written application is filed as required by the Code, an oral application is a mere superfluity, and such superfluous oral application cannot save limitation. In order that the oral application may be effective as a step-in-aid of execution, the application must be one which it is necessary to make in order to get the main relief sought for in the execution petition. It must be of such a nature that if the application were not made, further proceedings in execution could not be taken either by reason of the specific prayer not being contained in the execution application, or by reason of the Code or the Rules of practice regarding further acts to be done before the main relief prayed for in the execution application could be granted or enforced—per Kumaraswami Sastry, J. in Masilamani v. Sethuswami, 41 Mad. 251 (255), 41 I.C. 701, 33 M.L.J. 219.

Where in execution proceedings there was an application for arrest and warrants had been issued which proved ineffective and the decree-holder thereupon orally requested to issue fresh warrants, it was held that the oral request was not a superfluity but a definite and necessary act, and as such was a step-in-aid of execution—Hanumankala v. Sheonarayan Sonar, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 131; 31 N.L.R. 333, 156 I.C. 114.

709. "Date of final order passed on an application":—These words have been substituted by the Indian Limitation Second Amendment Act (IX of 1927), in place of the words "date of applying." Previously, it was the date of making the previous application for execution or to take some step-in-aid of execution, which gave a fresh starting point of limitation, and not the date on which it was heard and an order passed thereon—Saratkumari v. Jagat Chandra, 1 C.W.N. 260; Thakur Ram v. Katwaru, 22 All. 358; Raj Behary v. Kalihar, 10 C.L.J. 479, 3 I.C. 336; Trimback v. Kashinath, 22 Bom. 722; Treilokya v. Jyoti Prokas, 30 Cal. 761 (770); Mochai v. Meseruddin, 13 C.L.J. 26, 9 I.C. 213; Annapurna v. Dhirendra, 24 C.W.N. 55, 54 I.C. 1; Bhagwanta v. Zamir Ahmed, 3 Pat. 596, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 576, 78 I.C. 766; nor the last day or any other day on which the application was pending—Fakir v. Gulam, 1 All. 580 (F.B.). As a result of the Amendment, the period will run from the date of the order passed on the application. This amendment has been made in pursuance of a recommendation of the Civil Justice Committee to extend the period of limitation under this clause. See Gazette of India, 1927, Part V, p. 13; Civil Justice Committee Report, p. 403.

According to Art. 182, cl. 5, as amended in 1927, limitation is to be reckoned not from the date of the application, but from the date of the final order passed on an application to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution. And, consequently, an order of the Court which merely directs the office to prepare a certificate cannot be considered to have finally disposed of the application which prayed that the certificate be transmitted. That application should be considered to have been finally disposed of only when the required certificate was prepared and handed over to the decree-holder who had undertaken to present it before the transferee Court—Hafizuddin v. Parshadilal, A.I.R. 1935 All. 757, 1935 A.L.J. 370, 154 I.C. 718; or ordered to be sent under the seal of the judge—Mahidhar v. Kalyani, 23 Pat. 707, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 71. See also, Kesho Ram v. Suraj, 1949 A.L.J. 309, A.I.R. 1949 All. 741.

The date of the final order is not the date when the order is written but the date when it is pronounced—Venkatappiah v. Seetharama, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 454, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 371. The date of the final order is the date of the final order of the final Court of appeal in case of an appeal being preferred—Nacharmmal v. Veerappa, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 197, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 485; Ahmad v. Masiti, 211 I.C. 114; Golum v. Arifunnessa, 51 C.W.N. 316; Harit v. Anil, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 370.

Where the decree-holder receives part payment of his decree and grants the judgment-debtor two months' time to pay the balance and files a petition to that effect before the Court and the Court in consequence passes an order recording dismissal on part satisfaction of the decree the time for filing a fresh application runs from the date of the order of the Court dismissing the application on part satisfaction and the period of grace allowed by the decree-holder to the judgment-debtor cannot be taken into account—Mahesprasad v. Shyamlal, A.I.R. 1935 All. 909, 1935 A.L.J. 1087, 158 I.C. 273.

"Final order" :—The word "final" does not mean last in point of time. The words "final order" imply that the proceeding has terminated so far as the Court passing it is concerned. It need not be an order on the merits or a judicial determination of the matter involved in the application—Muthu v. Motilal, supra. The words involve the notion of putting an end to something; and an order cannot be called a final order unless it puts an end to something or other—Chidambaram v. Murujesam, supra. The words mean only the order by which an execution application is finally disposed—Alagappa v. Rama, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 493, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 858. The question whether an order is a 'final order' is not to be judged by reference to what the court passing the order thought at the time nor by the language employed by it. It is for the court before which the nature of this order is properly in question at a later stage which has to deal with the matter and to consider the legal character of the earlier order and the decision must be arrived at on an independant consideration of the correct rule of law as applied to the true facts—Ghulam v. Viswanathayyar, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 357, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 768, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 297. The substance of the order and not the form is to be considered—Annapurnamma v. Jagannadham, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 836, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 298; Kaliappa Reddiar v. Thangamuthu, (1956) 2 Mad.L.J. 301. When an order is made returning a petition, it contemplates a final order to be passed at a subsequent stage, when the defects are remedied and the petition is re-presented—R. Kesavuloo v. Official Receiver, West Tanjore, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 613, 71 M.L.J. 336, 163 I.C. 354; Muthu v. Motilal, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 326; A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 113; Chidambaram v. Murugesam, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 60, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 671, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 841; Official Receiver v. Narayanaswami, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 1018, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 216; Ghulam v. Viswanathayyar, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 357, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 768, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 297; Arjuman v. Mahomed, 46 P.L.R. 68, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 158; even though the order is wrong—Anjuman v. Mahomed, supra; Krishnamachari v. Chengalareya, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 469, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 281.

In Mowlavi Kholiloor Rahaman v. Collector of Etwah, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 14, 55 All. 993 the Judicial Committee seem to regard the result of an application as being synonymous with the final order passed upon it.

Where the Court intends to dispose of the matter completely and no longer keep it pending on its file, and does not merely suspend the execution or consign the record to the record room for the time being, the order must be deemed to be a final order which will give a fresh start for purpose of limitation, and that the proceeding not being pending, there would in such a case be no question of revival—Md. Taqi v. Raja Ram, A.I.R. 1936 All. 820 (F.B.) where an order passed in the following terms without notice to the parties, namely, "execution struck off for partial satisfaction of the decree costs on the judgment-debtors" was construed as a final order on an application made as referred to in cl. (5), Art. 182, Limitation Act. See also Ram Dahin v. Raghunandan, A.I.R. 1952 Assam 172.

An order dismissing an application for execution for default in compliance with the directions of the court is a final order—Seshagiri v. Subbarami, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 684, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 270, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 154 (F.B.); the contrary view taken in Sundarabala v. Avudai, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 542, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 495 seems to be overruled; Parankusa v. Ayyanna, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 445, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 517; Nataraj v. Narayanaswami, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 385, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 393; so also an order rejecting an application represented beyond the time fixed by the court with or without any petition to excuse the delay amounts to a final order—Gopalswami v. Executive Officer, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 428, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 347; Muthuvenkatasubba v. Thangavel, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 327, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 462, I.L.R. (1949) Mad. 88; Ramabadra v. Ramachandra, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 74; but see Ghulam v. Viswanathyyar, supra, where a contrary view has been taken; even if the application for execution is not admitted or numbered—Seshagiri v. Subbarami, supra; Ramachandra v. Muthu, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 236, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 340; Veerabhadraiah v. Seshiah, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 369, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 250; a contrary view has been taken in Kuppuswami v. Rangaswami, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 374, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 217; so also an order rejecting an application which is not taken back though ordered for representation after making amendments—Parankusa v. Ayyanna, supra; Seetharama v. Muthukrishna, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 553, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 43; an order dismissing an application for decree-holder's default is a final order—Shankarlal v. Mahadeo, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 245, 1940 N.L.J. 418, 1944 Mad. 43; an order reciting that the execution case came before the court to be mentioned as "settled" is a final order even though the word "dismissal" or "final disposal" is not included in the order—Nagappa v. Lakshmanan, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 350, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 80. An order stating that the appeal has abated is a final order—Kunjithapatham v. Suraswathi, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 66, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 671; Murlidhar v. Mahabir, I.L.R. (1942) All. 658, 1941 A.L.J. 480, A.I.R. 1941 All. 371. Where on the application of the decree-holder a decree is transferred, and an application is made in the transferor court for execution, an order is passed "copy of decree has not been received from the transferee court. Returned," it is held that such an order is a final order—Kandasami v. Gokuldas, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 837, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 731.

An order sending the application for rateable distribution to the Court executing the decree under which the properties were attached, is not a final order—Mangi Lal v. Raghubar, A.I.R. 1952 Rajasthan, 66.

An order passed on an execution petition as "recorded" is not a final order—Govindarajulu v. Lakshmana, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 437, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 362; so also, a mere order for attachment is not a final order—Venkatappayya v. Venkata, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 274, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 261; an intimation by the transferee court to the transferror court of non-execution or non-satisfaction due to default of decree-holder to take steps does not amount to a final order—Krishna v. Ganga, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 388; an order prima facie disposing of an execution application obtained by means of fraud of some official of the Court, is not a final order—Sheoraj v. Kamalay, I.L.R. (1945) All. 213, 1945 A.L.J. 92, A.I.R. 1945 All. 172. During the pendency of an appeal against an order rejecting the objection of the judgment-debtor, some of the judgment-debtor's properties were sold, and the executing Court dismissed the execution case on part satisfaction; the appellate Court remanded the execution case, and the lower Court again rejected the objection and an appeal against that order was also dismissed for default; the executing Court passed an order "No steps taken. Case disposed." It was held that the order of the appellate Court was the final order and not that of the executing Court, though it was the "last" order in the execution case—Rameshwar v. Rajendra, 30 Pat. 388, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 8.

The Amendment Act came into operation from 1st January 1928, and all applications made after that date would be governed by this Act, because the law of limitation applicable to a suit or proceeding is the law in force at the date of the institution of the suit or proceeding, unless there is a distinct provision to the contrary. If the petitioner's application for execution had not been barred before the new law came into force, the application made after the Amendment Act would be governed by the new law—Kanai Lal v. Purna Chandra, 34 C.W.N. 733 (734). Thus, where an application for execution was at first made on 24th April 1925 and dismissed on 8th August 1925, and the next application was made on 8th August 1928, held that the new Act applied, and the application was not barred, as it was made within 3 years from the date of the final order passed on the previous application (8th August 1925). The Amendment Act will not disturb vested rights. The Act came in force from 1st January 1928 and on that date the decree-holder was still within time under the old Act. The application made on 8th August 1928 was governed by the Amendment Act, and as no right had vested by 1st January 1928, there was nothing to impede the operation of the Amending Act—Sapani v. Damodar, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 207; Kanai Lal v. Purna Chandra, supra. It was further contended in the Patna case that the words "date of final order" referred only to the words "for execution" and not to the words "to take some step-in-aid of execution", for the stage of taking a step-in-aid must necessarily precede the "final order" in the execution case; and it was suggested that the period limited by the amendment is three years from the final order in cases in which no steps-in-aid are taken, and in cases where steps are taken, three years from the last step-in-aid of execution. This contention was over-ruled, as it was too theoretical and did violence to the plain language of the clause as amended, under which time runs from the date of the final order passed on an application for execution or on an application to take some step-in-aid of execution—Sapani v. Damodar, supra.

710. "Proper Court":—An application although it is a step-in-aid of execution will not save limitation unless it is presented to the proper Court—Penugonda v. Korasika, 31 M.L.J. 90, 35 I.C. 237.

In Explanation II, "proper Court" has been defined as a Court whose duty it is to execute the decree or order.

The expression 'proper Court' means "the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree"—Khushi Ram v. Ram Sumer, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 430 (431).

Where a decree is obtained in a Small Cause Court and execution is pending in that Court and a suit for a declaration is filed in a Munsif's Court that judgment-debtor's property is liable to attachment in execution of the decree, but the decree has not been transferred to the Munsif's Court when the plaint is filed, the Munsif's Court is not a proper Court within the meaning of Art. 182 and cl. (5) of that Article does not apply for the purposes of saving limitation—Khushi Ram v. Ram Sumer, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 430, 1935 O.W.N. 672, 155 I.C. 505.

The Collector is not a Court when he acts under r. 14 (5), framed under sec. 43 (1), Co-operative Societies Act—Abdul Razack v. Kilpathi Co-operative Society, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 150. The Collector acting under sec. 59 (1) (b) of the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act is some agency for carrying out an award, different from Court. Hence an application to the Collector to enforce an award under the aforesaid section cannot be regarded as an application made to a Court—Maratha Co-operative Credit Bank v. Kashab, 40 Bom.L.R. 889, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 424.

If, as a result of execution, a decree has been satisfied and if the decree-holder is competent to refund or restore the property as a result of proceedings taken subsequently by the judgment-debtor or by a third party, the satisfied decree revives on the refund or restoration of the property and an application to execute the revived decree would be competent within three years from the time when the right to apply accrued to the decree-holder. The starting point for an application would be the date when the decree-holder is compelled to refund the amount or restore the property—Akbar Ali v. Meher Ali, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 166, 158 I.C. 5.

An application made under sec. 28 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act for leave to execute the decree is not an application made to the "proper Court". The Insolvency Court which is entirely a creature of the Provincial Insolvency Act is a different Court from a Court which is to execute a decree obtained independently of the Insolvency Act, and the mere fact that the Judge is the same person will not make the two Courts the same—Rarichan v. Kunhamu, 57 Mad. 808, 67 M.L.J. 762, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 392, 150 I.C. 113. See also, Nandlal v. Ram Datta, 1940 N.L.J. 605, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 60.

When a decree is transferred from one Court to another, the "proper Court" within the meaning of this clause is the Court to which the decree is transferred, until it has made its return to the Court which made the decree; and any application made to the Court which passed the decree would be insufficient to save limitation—Manorath v. Ambika, 13 C.W.N. 533 (540), 9 C.L.J. 443, 1 I.C. 57; Abu Begam v. Mirzaffar, 20 All. 129; Maharaja of Bobbili v. Narasaraju, 39 Mad. 640 P.C. (affirming 37 Mad. 231); Jnanendra v. Jogindra, 2 Pat. 247, 74 I.C. 608, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 384; Syed Mohd.

Shakir v. Jugal Kishore, 28 O.C. 169, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 492, 85 I.C. 455. An application for execution made to the Court which has transferred the decree to another Court for execution and which has not received a certificate of non-satisfaction from the Court to which the decree has been transferred is not one made to the "proper court"—Bishundeo v. Raghunath, 19 Pat. 354, 1940 P.W.N. 504, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 677; Kamakhya v. Kali Podo, 20 Pat.L.T. 356, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 289; Rameshwarlal v. Tilokkchand, 23 Pat. 729, 1945 P.W.N. 15, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 129; Krishna v. Ganga, 25 Pat. 790, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 388. The transferee court is bound to execute the decree and a darkhast presented in that Court is one made to the proper Court—Tejaji v. Motilal, 48 Bom.L.R. 583; notwithstanding that rules 5 and 8 of Or. 21, C. P. Code have not been complied with at the time of transfer of the decree as non-compliance with those rules is a mere irregularity and does not affect jurisdiction—Inderdeo v. Deonarayan, 25 Pat. 50, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 301. An application for execution made to a Court to which the decree has not been transferred is not an application made to the proper Court—Jugal Kishori v. Butto Krishto, 55 Cal. 608, 32 C.W.N. 192 (193), 104 I.C. 668, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 952. When a decree is transferred from Court A to B, then until the Court B has returned the decree to Court A, any application for a further transfer of the decree to any other Court C must be made to the Court B; if made to Court A, it will be insufficient to save limitation—Rangasami v. Sheshappa, 47 Bom. 56 (64), 24 Bom.L.R. 798, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 359, 68 I.C. 506. But a contrary view has been taken in Govind v. Lakman, 23 N.L.R. 126, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 29; Muthurama v. Motilal, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 326, 1937 M.W.N. 943, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 113; Radheysham v. Devendra, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 213. The reason given is that by transfer of the decree to another court for execution, the court does not divest itself of all its jurisdiction and retains control of the execution proceedings. On the same principle it has been held that an application to the transferring court after transmission of the decree for transmission to the same transferee court is an application made to the proper court—Kandasami v. Gokuldas, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 837, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 731; Ramlal v. Ratanlal, I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 7, 44 Bom.L.R. 830, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 1. In Radheshyam v. Devendra, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 213 (F.B.) the Patna High Court, after reviewing all the cases has held that where a decree is transferred for execution to another Court, the question whether an application for execution of the decree made to the transferor Court before the transferee court has sent a certificate under sec. 41 Civil Procedure Code is an application to the 'proper court' depends upon the relief applied for. If it is one which the transferor Court can grant, the application is made to the 'proper Court.' So also, an application made to the transferor court to recall the proceedings from the transferee court is made to a proper court—Dwarkadas v. Saligram, 17 Pat. 617, 20 Pat.L.T. 353, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 144.

When a money decree has been transferred by the Court which passed it for execution to another Court, an application to the first Court (a) to execute the decree, (b) to transfer it to another Court for execution, and (c) to transfer it for execution to the same Court is a valid application, even if such an application is made before the proceedings taken in the other Court have first been reported and certified by that Court, and such an application is a step-in-aid of execution so as to save limitation provided by Art. 182, Sch. 2, Limitation Act—Kanti Narain and others v. Madan Gopal, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 465 (F.B.), 37 P.L.R. 636, 157 I.C. 488. (Per Jai Lal and Rangi Lal, JJ. Contra—Skemp, J).

Where a decree passed by the Sub-Court of Tanjore was transferred to the District Court for execution, but the decree-holder not having made any application for execution within six months, the District Court returned the decree to the Sub-Court (under the Civil Rules of Practice), and then the decree-holder applied to the District Court for execution, when he was informed that the decree had been returned to the original Court, held that this application was not made to the proper Court—Mir Mahomed Noorulla v. Hasarath, 51 M.L.J. 554, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1209, 98 I.C. 455.

If a decree is transferred from one Court to another, an application for substitution of names of the legal representatives of the deceased decree-holder may be made to the latter Court, because that Court has jurisdiction to substitute the names—Mohan Singh v Jagat Singh, 50 All. 621, 109 I.C. 412, A.I.R. 1928 All. 299 (300), 26 A.L.J. 417. In Deputy Commissioner v. Newazish, 20 Luck. 449, 1945 O.W.N. 210, A.I.R. 1945 Oudh. 298 it was held that where a court transfers a decree to another court for execution and the decree has not been returned to the transferring court with the certificate of non-satisfaction, the transferring court is the "proper court" for purposes of making applications for substitution of parties or for setting aside substitutions made. Such an application must be made to the court which passed the decree—Daulat v. Khem Raj, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer. 31. Where a decree has been transmitted from one Court to another, the notice required to be issued under O. 21, r. 22 must be issued by the Court to which the decree has been transferred; consequently an application for the issue of such notice if made to the Court which passed the decree ,is not an application in accordance with law, as it is not made to the proper Court—Hazari Lal v. Baidyanath, 26 C.W.N. 292, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 3, 63 I.C. 116.

Where the area of the property, over which the Court which passed the decree had local jurisdiction at the time of passing it, was, by reason of alteration of the local jurisdiction of the Court, transferred to the jurisdiction of another Court at the time of presenting the application for execution, the proper Court for applying for execution within the meaning of this clause is the Court which passed the decree—Seeni Nandan v. Muthuswami, 42 Mad. 821 (F.B.); Jagannath v. Ichharam, 27 Bom.L.R. 649, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 414, 89 I.C. 87. The reason of this decision is that "otherwise a decree-holder when he decides to apply for execution, possibly at the last moment, will be bound to stop and enquire whether the limits of the territorial jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree have been altered, and if so, whether the immoveable property which is the subject of the suit or the place where the cause of action arose is within the limits of the transferred area, on pain of losing his right to execute under this Article if he omits to make these enquiries or comes to a wrong conclusion in making them. This is so unreasonable and involves such hardships to the decree-holder in a country like India with a stringent law of limitation that we should hesitate to impute such an intention to the Legislature"—per Wallis, C.J. in 42 Mad.821 (F.B.). A contrary view was taken in two earlier cases of the Madras High Court—Penugonda v. Korasika, 31 M.L.J. 90, 35 I.C. 237 and Seshadri v. Ananthayee, 1917 M.W.N. 788, 42 I.C. 671. These two cases are now practically overruled by the Full Bench case cited above. The Calcutta High Court has held that assignment of business under sec. 13 (2) of Civil Courts Act is not transfer of business within the meaning of sec. 150, C. P. Code. Consequently, where an application for execution of a mortgage decree is filed in a Court other than the Court which passed the decree on the ground that subsequent to the passing of the decree the particular area where the mortgaged property is situated has been assigned to that Court under sec. 13 (2) of the Civil Courts Act, such an application is not made to the "proper Court"—Nasrab v. Deb Nath, 75 C.L.J. 255.

Where a decree was passed by the third Court of Additional Subordinate Judge, an application filed by the decree-holder for execution in the third Court of the Sub-ordinate Judge is not an application to the 'proper Court'—Sam Narain v. Raghubans, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 4.

An application for execution made to the Court which passed the decree can be said to have been made to the proper Court, even though the presiding officer of the Court at the time of the application may not have pecuniary jurisdiction to try the suit in which the decree was passed—Ishwari Prasad v. Farkat Hossein, 2 P.L.J. 113, 39 I.C. 63. So also, an application for arrest of the judgment debtor made to a court which had on the face of it jurisdiction is made to the proper Court even though the judgment debtor lived outside the jurisdiction—Chettyar v. Than, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 345. The Calcutta High Court has held that in order to constitute an executing Court the "proper Court", it is essential that the Court must possess both precuniary and territorial jurisdiction, apart from being otherwise competent—Prasanna v. Kamrup Co-operative etc., 48 C.W.N. 821.

An appeal to the High Court against an order made in an execution proceeding is not an application to the proper Court for execution, for the High Court is not a Court whose duty it is to execute decrees passed by the lower Courts—Gobinddas v. Ganapatdas, 47 Bom. 783 (784), A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 431, 25 Bom.L.R. 518, 73 I.C. 1030.

A Conciliator appointed under the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act is not a Court, and an application for execution made to him does not save limitation—Manohar v. Gebiapa, 6 Bom. 31.

An application made to a Criminal Court to restrain the parties from acting contrary to the terms of a decree is not a step-in-aid of execution—Sadappachari v. Krishnamachari, 12 Mad. 356 (364).

Transfer of decree from British Court to Native State Court and vice versa :— Where a decree of a British Indian Court is sought to be executed in a Court in a Native-State (e.g., Travancore) which is not established or continued under the authority of the Governor-General, the application made by the decreeholder to the Court in the Native State for execution does not give a fresh starting point in computing the period for a subsequent execution of the decree in the British Court, because an application to a Foreign Court is not application "in accordance with law to the proper Court." The 'proper Court' contemplated by this clause is a Court in British India, and not a Court in a Native State. The expression 'in accordance with law' means in accordance with the law of British India, and cannot be extended to an application made to a Foreign Court to execute a decree of a British Court under powers conferred upon it by the legislative authority of that Foreign State. Moreover, if the decreeholder applies to the British Court for a certified copy of the decree and other necessary papers to be transmitted to the Court in Native State, it is not a step-in-aid of execution, because the execution sought in this case is execution in a Foreign Court and not execution in a British Indian Court. Consequently such an application cannot give a fresh starting point in respect of a subsequent execution of the decree in British Court—Pierce Leslie v. Perumal, 40 Mad. 1069 (1079, 1080) (F.B.) (per Wallis, C.J.). This view was also taken in an earlier case of the Punjab Chief Court—Nawab Saadat Ali Khan v. Nawab Md. Ali Khan, 107 P.R. 1881.

The latter part of the ruling in this Full Bench case (40 Mad. 1069) has been strongly disapproved of in a converse case recently coming up before a Division Bench of the same High Court. In this case a decree had been passed in 1911 by a District Court in Mysore State, and after various fruitless attempts at execution, the decreeholder applied to the Mysore Court in 1916 to transmit the decree to the High Court at Madras for execution. The Mysore Court ordered the decree to be transmitted to the Madras Court in 1919. Thereupon the decree-holder applied in the Madras Court for execution of the decree, and the question arose whether the application made by the decree-holder in 1916 to the Mysore Court for transmission of the decree to the Madras Court was an application in accordance with law so as to be treated as a step-in-aid of execution. Held that "an application in accordance with law" means an application in accordance with the law of the place where the application is made,

i.e., the law of Mysore, in the present case; and as according to the law of Mysore an application to transmit a decree from a Mysore Court to a British Court is a step-in-aid, the application of 1916 must be deemed to be a step-in-aid of execution according to the Limitation Act of British India—Sreenivasa v. Narayan, 45 Mad. 1014, 69 I.C. 932, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 72. In this case Schwabe, C.J., disapproving of the Madras Full Bench case (40 Mad. 1069) cited above, remarked: "The difficulty arises owing to the fact that a converse case of the transmission of papers from this Court to a Native State for the purposes of obtaining the assistance of the Court of that Native State in executing a decree of a Court in this Presidency came up before a Full Bench of this Court in Pierce Leslie v. Perumal, 40 Mad. 1069, and it was there held that such a step was not a step-in-aid of execution. We, therefore, have the anamalous position that in interpreting statutes in identical terms, the Chief Court in Mysore has held that an application to transmit the papers in a Mysore case to this Court is a step-in-aid of execution, while this Court has held that the application to transmit the papers in a Madras case to Travancore is not a step-in-aid of execution .....I do not agree with that decision. It has been strongly disapproved of by a Division Bench in Janardan v. Narayan, 42 Bom. 420. The point has been argued before us, and the inclination of my mind is to agree with the Bombay decision and not with that of the Full Bench of Madras and if the same point arises again, I should wish to have it reconsidered by a Full Bench" (pp. 1019, 1021). See also Prabhulingappa v. Gurunath, 45 Bom. 453 (458), A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 256, 22 Bom.L.R. 1389, 59 I.C. 747, where it has been held if a decree passed by a Court in a Native State is transferred to a Court in British India, all proceedings taken in the Court which passed the decree must be regarded as having been taken in a "proper Court" within the meaning of this clause to save limitation.

The above Madras Full Bench case (40 Mad. 1069) has been dissented from in Janardan v. Narayan, 42 Bom. 420 (428, 429) where Beaman J. expressed the view that the rather curiously-worded phrase "step-in-aid of execution" was comprehensive enough to include an application made to the British Indian Court to transfer its decree to a Court in a Native State for execution.

A fortiori, where there is an agreement between the British Government and the Government in a Native State, that they shall execute each other's decrees, an application by the decree-holder to transfer the decree of the British Indian Court to the Court of the Native State for execution, and vice versa, is an application in accordance with law to take a step-in-aid of execution—Janardan v. Narayan, 42 Bom. 420 (431), 20 Bom.L.R. 421, 46 I.C. 56; Fatehchand v. Jitmal, 53 Bom. 844, 31 Bom.L.R. 1105, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 418.

After the Constitution of India, the difference between Courts in British India and in Native States does not exist as there is no such thing as "British India" or "Native States."

711. "In accordance with law":—It is well-settled that the words "in accordance with law" mean in accordance with the law relating to the execution of the decrees—Govind Prasad v. Pawankumar, 70 I.A. 83, A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 98. The expression "in accordance with law" does not mean an application prescribed or required by law. An application would be in accordance with law, even though it is not required by law, provided it does not contravene any express provision of law or conflict with any principle of law. The expression cannot be restricted to cover only such applications as fall under some express provision of the Code of Civil Procedure. The fact that there is no specific provision in the Code of Civil Procedure to cover an application in execution would not render it one not in accordance with law—Hassomal v. Lalchand, I.L.R. (1948) Kar. 371: A.I.R. 1947 Sind 149. See also Krishna v. Krishna, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 187; Daroji v. Kameshwar, A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 299. Thus, although the C. P. Code nowhere lays down that an application to bring the legal representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor is a necessary preliminary step to the making of an application for execution of the decree against the deceased's representatives, still such an application is one in accordance with law, because there is nothing in the C. P. Code which prohibits a Court from entertaining such application. Merely because the decree-holder, instead of asking the Court to execute the decree against the legal representatives after service of notice under O. 21 r. 22, asks the Court to first complete the array of parties and thereafter makes an application for execution, he cannot be said to have acted in a manner which does not accord with law—Ramchandra v. Uka, 24 N.L.R. 36, 103 I.C. 279, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 308 (309). So also the C. P. Code does not require that the transferee of a decree-holder should make an application for substitution of his name in place of the original decree-holder, but only requires that the transferee should make an application for execution after giving notice to the transferor and the judgment-debtor. Still if the transferee makes an application for recognition as transferee, and the judgment-debtor makes no objection thereto, the application must be taken as one made in accordance with law—Annamalai v. Ramier, 31 Mad. 234 (235).

Where the prior application for execution which was barred by time admitted by the executing Court and execution was ordered to issue thereon, the order though erroneously made was nevertheless valid, unless reversed on appeal, and the application was in accordance with law and a step-in-aid of execution. The judgment-debtor cannot object to a subsequent application for execution on the ground that the previous application was barred by time, the matter being res judicata—Desaiappa v. Dundappa, 44 Bom. 227, 22 Bom.L.R. 76, 55 I.C. 329; Gulappa v. Erava, 46 Bom. 269 (271), A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 118, 63 I.C. 844; Mungal Pershad v. Grijakant, 8 Cal. 51 (59) (P.C.); Jago Mahton v. Khirodhar, 2 Pat. 759, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 122, 74 I.C. 130; Lakshmanan v. Kuttayyan, 24 Mad. 669; Prabhulingappa v. Gurunath, 45 Bom. 453 (459). But although the matter is resjudicata between the parties, it is open to a third party to dispute the correctness of the prior adjudication allowing a time-barred application. So, a judgment-dobtor who was not a party to a previous application for execution of a decree or to any order made upon it, is not precluded from showing that the said application was barred by limitation and that therefore it was not in accordance with law—Harendralal v. Sham Lal, 27 Cal. 210 (213). Whether the previous application for execution was in accordance with law can not be agitated for the first time in appeal —Prabha v. Hans Raj, A.I.R. 1951 J. & K. 8.

Where a decree gives certain reliefs, and the application for execution seeks some or all of them, and the Court after going into the merits of the application and considering all the circumstances of the case, comes to the conclusion that the particular relief or reliefs shall not be granted, held that such an application would still be an application in accordance with law provided it meets in substance the requirements of the C. P. Code or any law relating to execution—Bando v. Narsinha, 37 Bom. 42, 17 I.C. 210 (212); Subramanian v. Ramaswami, 49 M.L.J. 753, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 179, 91 I.C. 11. Thus where a decree contains a personal liability, but the arrest of the judgment debtor is no longer possible because of his discharge in insolvency proceedings subsequent to decree, an application for execution asking for arrest of judgment debtor is not one not in accordance with law—Ayyamma v. Thanlavan, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 355, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 352. But if the judgment debtor is not personally liable an application for execution praying for arrest of the judgment-debtor is not in accordance with law—Bhola Nath v. Parmeshwar, I.L.R. (1944) All. 183, 1943 A.L.J. 607, A.I.R. 1944 All. 35. But the Madras High Court has held that even though a decree does not make the judgment-debtor personally liable but only against the family properties in his hand, an execution application praying for his arrest is in accordance with law—Naujunda v. Lakshmanan, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 30. The Patna High Court has held that an application for execution praying for arrest of the heirs of the deceased judgment debtor is not in accordance with law—Mahidhar v. Kalyani, 23 Pat. 707, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 71. Where an application asks partly for a relief granted by the decree and partly for a relief totally outside the decree, the application may be void as to the latter, but all the same it is good in law as to the former, and therefore in "accordance with law"—Bando v. Narsingha, (supra).

An application for execution would be in accordance with law, if it is in accordance with the rules of procedure prescribed therefor, and it does not cease to be such an application even though on an adjudication on the merits of the case the court rejects the relief for which it prays—Gobardhan v. Jang Bahadur, 1 Luck. 569, 3 O.W.N. 749, 98 I.C. 33, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 616. The fact that subsequent enquiry may show that the execution application must fail is no reason for holding that it is not in accordance with law, when on the face of it, it is so—Virumal v. Chellaram, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 448, A.I.R. 1943 Sind 29.

Where a decree directs that the decree-holder shall be entitled to a certain relief in a certain event or on a certain condition, and the decree-holder applies for that relief before the happening of that event or before fulfilling that condition, it does not follow that he has applied for a relief which is outside the decree and that therefore the application is not one in accordance with law—Bando v. Narsinha, supra; Nathubhai v. Pranjivan, 34 Bom. 189, 5 I.C. 601. Thus, where a decree ordering partition directs that the plaintiff shall not be entitled to execute (i.e., recover his share) until he has paid the amount of Court fee leviable on his claim, an application for execution unaccompanied with the Court fee is still an application in accordance with law—Nathubhai v. Pranjivan, 34 Bom. 189, 5 I.C. 601.

If a person irregularly executes a decree with the Court's permission—a permission which the Court is authorised to give—it cannot be said that he is not doing so in accordance with law. Thus, where a decree is transferred (really or nominally), and the ostensible transferee executes the decree with the permission of the Court (given after due notice to the judgment-debtor and decree-holder), the proceedings taken and the application on which they are based are in accordance with law as between him and the judgment-debtor, although he is a benamidar, and the decree is kept alive—Balkishen v. Bedmati, 20 Cal. 388 (394, 395). So also an application for execution asking for transmission of the decree under the mistaken impression that the property sought to be proceeded against is situated outside the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree and the Court also passes transmission order under the same mistaken belief, is an application in accordance with law—Arunachala v. Rajagopala, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 389, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 338. Such a mistake is a mistake of fact and not of law—Santhappa v. Siddalingayya, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 827, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 378; Bisundeo v. Raghunath, 19 Pat. 354, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 354; Ayyanna v. Tandavan, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 352.

An application for execution by some only of the decree-holder's legal representatives, though not purporting to be on behalf of the other representatives, is sufficient to save limitation—Vasudevpatta v. Narayanapanigrahi, 1916 M.W.N. 112, 31 I.C. 853. But an application for execution by a stranger to the decree is not in accordance with law even though it can be shown that the person making the application has a fair claim of right. Such an application will not avail the proper legal representative of the deceased decree-holder—Unichira v. Ramu, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 51, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 674. But where the stranger files an application for execution praying that both he and the widow of the deceased decree-holder should be brought on record as the legal representatives of the deceased decree-holder and the decree should be executed for their joint benefit, such application is deemed to be on behalf of the widow, the real legal representative and is in accordance with law—Annapurnnamma v. Venkamma, (1938) 1 M.L. J. 135, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 323.

An application for execution by the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder without bringing his name on the record is an application in accordance with law—Alagirisami v. Venkatachellapathy, 31 Mad. 77; K. Somayajulu v. Annappa, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 66 (F.B.)

An application by a decree-holder, after assigning his decree, for transfer of the decree, is an application made in accordance with law—Jethanand v. Bherumal, I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 88, A.I.R. 1943 Sind. 108; Atma Ram v. Shyama, 22 Luck. 217, A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 176.

Where an application for execution of a decree is made by a person who, at the time of making it, was on the face of the decree the only person entitled to execute it, the application does not cease to be an application in accordance with law merely because it is afterwards decided that that person had no title to execute the decree—Hari Krishnamurthi v. Suryanarainamurthi, 43 Mad. 424. A decree-holder filed an application for execution of two decrees against the same judgment-debtor, but the application being defective with respect to one of the decrees, was rejected without issue of any notice to the judgment-debtor. Another application for execution of one of the decrees (with respect to which the previous application was in order) was filed within 3 years of the previous application, but after more than 3 years after the passing of the decree. It was contended, inter alia, that the application was time barred. This contention was overruled, and it was held that the application was within time: a new start for limitation arose from the order rejecting the previous application—Md. Shakir Dad Khan v. Sahu Nand Kishore, A.I.R. 1936 All. 467, 1936 A.L.J. 571, 163 I.C. 841.

A decree having been obtained against a minor represented in suit by his mother as guardian, the decree-holder erroneously took out execution against the mother personally and not as the guardian of her son. The application was granted and a property belonging to the minor was attached. It was held under the circumstances that the application was one in accordance with law notwithstanding the technical defect therein —Hari v. Narayan, 12 Bom. 427.

An application for execution of a decree against a minor represented by his mother, without any application to the Court for an order appointing the mother as guardian ad litem, is an application in accordance with law—Keshwa Surendra v. Mulukrani, 4 P.L.J. 35, 48 I.C. 415. There is no provision in Or. 21, C. P. Code, that such an application should be made and that he should get himself appointed as next friend. It is in the execution application that he has to describe himself as next friend and file an affidavit or application to get himself recognised as next friend. Therefore, an application presented by a person as next friend of a minor is in accordance with law though the applicant does not get himself appointed as next friend—Muthukrishna v. Viswalinga, 1940 M.W.N. 547, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 893.

Where a decree granted simple interest, and an application for execution was made in which the interest calculated was compound interest, held that the mere mistake in calculating more interest than what was due did not prevent the application from being one in accordance with law. Although the relief claimed had been exaggerated by the extra amount of interest, it would be competent to the Court to treat the extra interest as a surplusage and to strike it out and then grant relief—Jamiluunnissa v. Mathura Prasad, 43 All. 550, A.I.R. 1921 All. 208, 19 A.L.J. 509, 63 I.C. 362. The mere fact that more money is claimed than what is due would not render the application one not in accordance with law—Muthukrishna v. Viswalinga, 1940 M.W.N. 547, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 893; Subramanian v. Muthuswami, 1941 M.W.N. 171, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 578.

Where a decree is erroneously passed in favour of a firm in the name of an agent, and applications for execution are put in by its other agents not named in the decree, such applications are in accordance with law and sufficient to keep the decree alive —Lachman v. Patni, 1 All. 510. An application for execution filed against a firm is in accordance with law even though no leave of Court is taken under Or. 30, r. 9, C. P. Code as leave of the Court is not made a condition precedent to the maintainability of execution proceedings under the same rule—Jaychand v. Waman, 52 Bom.L.R. 205, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 184 (F.B.).

An application for execution, in which no notice is taken out under sec. 148 (g), Bihar Tenancy Act, is still one in accordance with law as the service of notice under sec. 148 (g) is not a condition precedent to the starting of an execution case or to the executing Court obtaining jurisdiction to proceed with the execution itself—Sayeeda v. Bishun, 24 Pat. 153, 1946 P.W.N. 61, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 268.

A decree in a redemption suit directed the plaintiff to recover possession of the mortgaged property on payment of a certain amount, but the decree did not fix the time within which the payment was to be made. The decree-holder applied for execution of the decree but the application was dismissed on the ground that he had not paid the decree-amount. In a subsequent application the question arose whether the prior application was in accordance with law. It was held that though the payment of the amount was a condition precedent to the making of an order for the delivery of the property, it was not a condition precedent to the making of an application for a conditional order; and the prior application for execution of the decree without paying the amount was an application in accordance with law—Syed Hussain v. Rajagopala, 30 Mad. 28.

An application for execution of a decree dependent on the payment by the decree-holder of a sum of money was an application for execution made in accordance with law even though the money had not been deposited—Budhu Ram v. Mushtaq Shah, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 129, 158 I.C. 517; Nacharammal v. Veerappa, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 197, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 485.

An application for execution is in accordance with law if it complies with the requirements of Or. 21, rr. 11 to 14, C. P. Code. And the absence of succession certificate does not make such an application as one not in accordance with law. The want of succession certificate no doubt deprives the applicant of his remedy, namely, the execution of his decree, but that cannot vitiate the application itself—Pilwasao v. Mt. Khairun Nissa, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 1, 31 N.L.R. 126, 153 I.C. 955.

An application for execution made against persons whose whereabouts are not known is an application in accordance with law—Mahmud Hosain v. Enayat, 36 All. 482.

An application for execution of a decree, which was made while the decree was under attachment and was dismissed on that ground, is an application in accordance with law which would save limitation—Gopala Menon v. Manavikraman, 22 M.L.J. 146, 13 I.C. 179; Adhar v. Lalmohan, 24 Cal. 778.

An application which omits to mention an uncertified payment made out of Court is, notwithstanding such omission, an application in accordance with law—Marimuthu v. Ramaswami, 10 L.W. 66, 51 I.C. 114.

An application for execution of a decree against a dead person under the influence of bona fide mistake, though that application could not be acted upon, is nevertheless an application in accordance with law and is a step-in-aid of execution—Bepin v. Bibi Zohra, 35 Cal. 1047 (1049); Samia v. Chokkalinga, 17 Mad. 76. An execution application filed bona fide within the time prescribed by law against a dead person, though it cannot be acted upon, is nevertheless a step in aid of execution, which has the effect of saving the decree from being barred—Subramania Desika Ganasambana P. Sannadhi v. Rangaswami Chettiar, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 161, 68 M.L.J. 261, 1935 M.W.N. 15, 155 I.C. 327. A contrary view has been taken in Gulabsingh v. Nathu, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 419, 1944 N.L.J. 200, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 145 where it is held that such an application is not in accordance with law and the good faith of the decree-holder is immaterial and cannot affect the position. So also, an application for execution in which owing to a bona fide mistake the minor judgment-debtor was described under the guardianship of a dead person, is a step-in-aid of execution—Puran Mal v. Dilwa, 4 P.L.T. 54, 72 I.C. 1003, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 333. An application for execution against a wrong person is one in accordance with law, where the decree itself is wrongly passed against that person—Devi Baksh v. Shambhu Dayal, 48 All. 281, 24 A.L.J. 266, A.I.R. 1926 All. 384, 94 I.C. 877. An application made against persons who are not the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor is valid if the decree-holder bona fide believes that they are the legal representatives—Ganeshwar v. Than Mull, 8 P.L.T. 217, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 92, 99 I.C. 501; Balkishen v. Bedmati, 20 Cal. 388 (396). Where a petition for execution is filed within time bona fide against a wrong legal representative, in spite of the mistake, it will still be an application to take a step in aid of execution—Subramania Desika Gnanasabanda P. Sannadhi v. Rangaswami, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 161, 68 M.L.J. 261, 1935 M.W.N. 15, 41 L.W. 178, 155 I.C. 327. In an Allahabad case, however, it has been held that an application for execution of a decree against persons alleged to be the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor is not a good application and cannot save limitation, if those persons are subsequently found not to be the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor—Gyanendra v. Rani Nihalo, 32 All. 404 (409). Where a decree was passed against certain persons as trustees, but they have been removed from the trustee-ship after the decree, an execution petition against them will not be invalid as a step-in-aid so long as the decree-holder bona fide believes that they are still the proper judgment-debtors—Parakkat Devaswam v. Venkatachalam, 50 M.L.J. 153, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 321, 92 I.C. 709. But a wrong application made under an ignorance of law is not an application in accordance with law. Thus, where the judgment-debtor died, and the decree-holder was aware of it, but instead of bringing the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor on record, the decree-holder made an application for attachment, assuming that he had a decree in rem which he could proceed to execute against the estate without bringing on record the representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, held that the application was not one in accordance with law—Madho Prasad v. Kesho Prasad, 19 All. 337 (339).

An application for execution filed, not with any real intention of proceeding with it, but solely for the purpose of keeping the decree alive, is in accordance with law if all the requirements of Or. 21, r. 11, C. P. Code are satisfied—Kodumal v. Assudomal, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 428. An execution application which is filed not with the idea of proceeding with the execution but only to save limitation will nonetheless be an application in accordance with law and save limitation if it complies with the provisions of Or. 21, r. 11, C. P. Code—Mahomed v. Ramji, 4 D.L.R. (All.) 208. Even if the application for execution is not numbered or registered it does not cease to be an application in accordance with law if it is so when presented—Mahalakshmi v. Subramania, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 513, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 43; Seshagiri v. Subbarami, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 684, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 270, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 154 (F.B.). When the application for execution is in accordance with law, the decree-holder's bona fides are not to be looked at—Maung v. Shahul, 1939 Rang.L.R. 587, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 433; Lokumol v. Dhanamil, I.L.R. (1946) Kar. 450, A.I.R. 1947 Sind. 152.

An application would be in accordance with law, even though it is not made in good faith, i.e., even though the applicant does not really wish to obtain the execution for which he has asked. The mala fides may stand in the way of a litigant being granted relief, but it would not render the application an application not in accordance with law. Where the decree-holder makes his application to the proper Court in proper form, and demands, the remedy to which he is entitled, his intention is immaterial—Ruqya v. Prag Tewari, 3 Luck. 580, 5 O.W.N. 353, 110 I.C. 704, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 337 (338)[1] And in a recent Privy Council case the Judicial Committee have laid down that for the purposes of this Article it is sufficient to show that an application was made in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution or to take some step-in-aid of execution, but it is not necessary to show that such application had been made with a bona fide intention of obtaining execution of the decree or to take such step, and is not a mere colourable application for the purpose of gaining time and keeping the decree alive—Khalilur Rahman v. Collector of Etah, 11 O.W.N. 41 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 229, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 14, 147 I.C. 323. It is sufficient if the application is in accordance with law. It is immaterial whether the application is made in good faith for the purpose of executing the decree or merely for the purpose of keeping the execution proceedings alive—Hanumanlala v. Sheonaryan Sonar, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 131, 31 N.L.R. 343, 156 I.C. 114. It is not proper for the execution Court to hold any inquiry as to the intention with which the application might have been filed. It is wrong to read in this clause any requirement of good faith and due diligence—Kayastha Co., Ld. v. Sita Ram, 52 All. 11 (F.B.), 1929 A.L.J. 982, 118 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1929 All, 625 (631, 650) The contrary view taken in Sheo Prasad v. Naraini, 48 All. 468, A.I.R. 1926 All. 95, 90 I.C. 938 must be deemed as overruled by the above Privy Council case.

712. Defective application.—An application must be in accordance with law in order that it may be regarded as an application for execution or a step-in-aid of execution; but it is not every defect that would invalidate an application and take it out of this clause; it is only material defects that can vitiate an application. An application containing merely defects of a minor character (e.g., mistake in the right number or description of suit and date of decree) is one in substantial compliance with law, and can save limitation—Gopal Chunder v. Gosain Das, 25 Cal. 594 (597-598) (F.B.); Keshawesarindra v. Debendra Bala, 4 P.L.J. 213 (233); Abdul Rafi v. Maula Bakhsh, 37 All. 527 (528), 13 A.L.J. 706, 29 I.C. 479; Brindaban v. Monmath, 42 C.W.N. 842; the Madras High Court has however, taken a contrary view in Naidu v. Naidu, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 864, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 215; Satyanarayana v. Kajireddi, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 427, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 61. So also, an application for execution wherein the judgment-debtor's name is wrongly recorded is in accordance with law—Narayanan v. Chitraru, A.I.R. 1950 Tra-Co. 79. Where a decree is transmitted to another Court for execution giving incorrect number of suit and names of judgment-debtors, the mere fact of such mistake in the certificate of non-satisfaction of the decree or omission of the decree-holder to have the mistake corrected does not render the application one not in accordance with law—Kameshwar v. Lalu 1938 P.W.N. 73, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 513. An application for execution which is defective only in omitting immaterial particulars is still an application "in accordance with law." These words should be taken to mean that the application though defective in some particulars is such upon which execution can issue. If the omissions are such as to make it impossible for the Court to issue execution upon it, it is not in accordance with law. But where it is such as to enable the Court to take further steps in execution, it cannot be said that such an application, if not defective in material and substantial particulars, is not an application in accordance with law—Pitambar v. Damodar, 53 Cal. 664, 30 C.W.N. 918 (923), 98 I.C. 166, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1077; Atma Ram v. Shyama, 22 Luck. 217, A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 176; Kanmal v. Govind, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 563, 1946 N.L.J. 354, A.I.R. 1946 Nog. 365. In each case it is a question of fact as to whether the execution application is so defective as not to be an application according to law at all—Ibid; Gopal v. Gosain, 25 Cal. 594 (597) (F.B.); Durga Prasad v. Jokhu Ram, 28 O.C. 382, 2 O.W.N. 70, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 399 (400), 86 I.C. 591. The onus is on the decree-holder to show that the requirements of law are complied with—Bansari v. Rabindra, 76 C.L.J. 35, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 131. An application, which requires amendment in some minor particulars, such as calculation of interest and statement of costs incurred in the previous execution proceedings, and which has not been amended by the decree-holder although it was returned to him for amendment, is an application in substantial compliance with the law, and gives a fresh starting point for limitation—Ramanadan v. Periatambi, 6 Mad. 250 (251); Pitambar, v. Damodar, 53 Cal. 664, 30 C.W.N. 918 (923); Seetharama v. Muthu, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 553, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 43. When the right to apply exists, a mere omission to give correctly the amount of interest due or the date of the previous application or the names of the parties, is a mere irregularity and does not affect the legality of the application and the application is in accordance with law—Fulchand v. Pal Marian, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 584, 1943 N.L.J. 391, A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 296. An application for execution giving all the particulars under Or. 21, r. 11 (g), C. P. Code and asking for attachment and sale of properties within the jurisdiction of another Court without expressly praying for transfer of the decree does not make it not in accordance with law—Kammal v. Govind, supra. So also, an application which is irregular by reason of an omission to state the previous applications and their result, and which has not been amended by the decree-holder, although it was returned to him for amendment, is still an application in accordance with law, the defect being of a minor character—Ram v. Varada, 16 Mad. 142 (143); a contrary view has been taken in Dularam v. Mulomal, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 272, 185 I.C. 835. An application which was not accompanied with an encumbrance certificate (as required by the Rules of Practice) and a draft proclamation of sale, and which, having been ordered to be returned to the decree-holder for amendment, was neither taken back by him nor amended, was still an application in accordance with law, as the defects were merely formal and did not affect the validity of the application—Natesa v. Ganapathia, 40 Mad. 949 (951); Ghulam v. Visvanathayyar, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 357, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 768, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 297. Where the execution petition as made is in accordance with law but is dismissed for persistent refusal of the decree-holder to carry out certain directions which are necessary for effectual execution, the application is still in accordance with law—Venkataraman v. Rama Kottayya, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 152, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 511. Thus in the case of an application for execution of an equitable mortgage decree the omission of the decree-holder to comply with the order of the Court directing him to file the documents of title mentioned in the decree is not such a defect in the application which would prevent the Court from proceeding with it and the application is in accordance with law—Bansari v. Rabindra, 76 C.L.J. 35, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 131.

But if the defects in the application are of a material character, and the Court cannot proceed to execution unless they are amended, (e.g., if the application does not comply with the requirements of O. 21, rr. 11-14), the application is not one made in accordance with law; and if it is not amended within the period fixed by the Court, it cannot give a fresh starting point for limitation—Gopal Sah v. Janki, 23 Cal. 217 (223); Bhagwat v. Dwarka, 2 Pat. 809 (811), A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 23, 74 I.C. 174.

Thus, an application for execution by attachment of property of the judgment debtor, if it is unaccompanied by an inventory of the properties to be attached is defective in material particulars, and is not an application in accordance with law—Abdul Rafi v. Maula Bakhsh, 37 All. 527 (529); Hira Lal v. Dulari, 1892 A.W.N. 3; Mangal v. Baldeo, 1892 A.W.N. 70; Asgar Ali v. Troilokya, 17 Cal. 631 (F.B.); Mahomed v. Ramji, 4 D.L.R. (All.) 208. The Patna High Court has held that an omission to comply with Or. 21, r. 12, C. P. Code, viz., failure to annex a talika or inventory of the property to be attached, cannot per se be held to render the application not in accordance with law, in the absence of anything to show whether the decree-holder in fact wants to proceed against any property belonging to the judgment-debtor not in his possession or whether any inventory of the properties is necessary at all, and it is not known in what mode the assistance of the Court is required in the application of the decree-holder. The question can not be decided merely with reference to an order dismissing such an application on the ground that no inventory was supplied within the time given, without having the application itself before the Court—Lachmi v. Kapil, 18 Pat.L.T. 954, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 75. According to the Bombay High Court, the omission to file an inventory of the property with the application for execution is a purely technical defect, and the application is substantially in accordance with law—Bando v. Narsinha, 37 Bom. 42, 17 I.C. 210 (213); Hasan v. Ramchandra, 31 Bom.L.R. 355, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 196, 117 I.C. 526. The Calcutta High Court has held that an application for attachment and sale of moveable properties as per list though no list is filed is in accordance with law—Akshoy v. Nalini, 54 C.W.N. 815, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 493. The same view has been taken in Nathmal v. Bal Krishna, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 152, 194 I.C. 641. An application in which the heading is blank, the names of the decree-holders are not mentioned, and the list of the properties sought to be attached is not given is a materially defective application and is therefore not in accordance with law—Bhupendra v. Janeswar, 7 P.L.T. 350, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 533 (534), 90 I.C. 761. Where the application for execution did not indicate the mode in which the decree-holder wanted the assistance of the Court to execute the decree, held that the application was defective in an essential matter, and was not in accordance with law—Maharaj Bahadur Singh v. Basiruddin, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1135, 41 C.L.J. 607, 93 I.C. 364. An application which does not comply with the requirements of rules 11 to 14 of O. 21, is a materially defective application, and is not an application in accordance with law unless it is amended within the time allowed by the Court. See O. 21, r. 17 (1) (2). But an application which fulfils all the requirements of rules 11 to 14, but is defective for some other reason (e.g., on the ground that a copy of the Record-of-Rights has not been filed, or that no Court fee has been paid on the additional interest claimed, or that the application has not been verified by all the decree-holders, etc.), is still an application in accordance with law—Bhagwat v. Dwarka, 2 Pat. 809 (811), 4 P.L.T. 513, 74 I.C. 174, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 23; Jogendra v. Mangal, 7 P.L.T. 330, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 160 (161), 90 I.C. 847; Bibi Aisha v. Mahabir, 6 Pat. 440, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 324 (325), 104 I.C. 218, 8 P.L.T. 671; Amin Chand v. Khiali, 28 P.L.R. 93, 100 I.C. 475, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 106 (107); Marimuthu v. Abdul, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 521, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 38 (without court-fees on future mesne profits). So also, where an application for execution complies with the requirements of Or. 21, rules 11 to 13, C. P. Code, mere non production of certified extracts from collector's record does not make the application not in accordance with law—Govind v. Pawan-kumar, 70 I.A. 83, I.L.R. (1943) Kar, (P.C.) 109, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 669, 46 Bom.L.R. 306, 1943 A.L.J. 323, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 121, A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 98, 47 C.W.N. 715 (P.C.). If an application complies with the requirements Or. 21, rules 11 to 13, C. P. Code but does not comply with the order passed under Or. 21, r. 14, C. P. Code, the application is nevertheless in accordance with law, as rule 14 is merely permissive unlike rules 11 to 13 which are mandatory—Seshagiri v. Subbarami, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 684, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 270, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 154 (F.B.); Venkata v. Surya, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 320, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 2. Where an application for execution complies with the requirements of Or. 21, r. 11, C. P. Code, it is in accordance with law even though the Court does not pass any order on such application. Thus omission of the Court to pass any order on the application of the decree-holder for arrest of the judgment debtor does not render the application not in accordance with law as the provisions of Or. 21, r. 11, C. P. Code are complied with by the application—Vallabhdas v. Kantilal, 49 Bom.L.R. 420, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 430.

The principle deducible from all the decisions cited above is, that if the application for execution gives all the particulars required by rules 11 to 14 of Or. 21, but is defective in some minor particulars, the application is nevertheless an application in accordance with law, and it is immaterial that the defect has not been amended at all by the decree-holder, or has been amended after the time allowed by the Court. But if the application does not comply with any of the requirements of rules 11 to 14, O. 21, it is not an application "in accordance with law," unless it is amended within the time fixed by the Court. See O. 21, r. 17 (2). In a recent Madras case, however, it has been said that the word "in accordance with law" occurring in O. 21, r. 17 (2), C. P. Code should not affect the construction of the same words in clause 5 of Art. 182, Limitation Act, and therefore even though the application is defective in not giving certain particulars required by r. 11 of O. 21, and the amendment is not carried out within the time fixed by the Court, it is nevertheless an application in accordance with law within the meaning of Art. 182, clause 5—Abdul Khadim v. Lakshmanaswami, 27 L.W. 475, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 440 (441), 112 I.C. 36, following Kamakshi v. Pichu Ayyar, 4 L.W. 103, 31 M.L.J. 561, 35 I.C. 876. Where an application for execution is returned for filing certain document and for amending the petition within the time fixed by the Court and the petition is represented after the time fixed with a prayer for condoning the delay and for granting further time and the Court passes the order "to be renewed. Rejected" it is held on the construction of the order that the delay in representation must be considered to have been excused and the application is in accordance with law—Shanmughan v. Namagiri, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 454, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 71.

If the Court fixes no time under O. 21, r. 17 (1), for amending the material defects, and the defects are rectified after the period of limitation, the application should be held to be time-barred—Salimulla v. Sainaddi, 18 C.L.J. 538, 22 I.C. 337; and the same result happens if the Court passes the order for amendment at a time when the application has already become time-barred—Bhupendra v. Janeswar, 7 P.L.T. 350, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 533 (535), 90 I.C. 761.

An application for execution which is returned by the Court but never represented thereafter should be treated as if it had never been presented at all—Venkata v. Gomoji & Co., (1948) 2 M.L.J. 488, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 363.

Other instances of minor defects:—Where a decree is passed against the estate of a deceased in the hands of the judgment-debtors (the heirs of the deceased), the decree falls under sec. 52, C. P. Code, and O. 21, r. 12 is not applicable, and no inventory is required; in such a case, an application for execution unaccompanied by an inventory is nevertheless a step-in-aid of execution—Birdichand v. Badesaheb, 28 Bom.L.R. 1322, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 52, 98 I.C. 941.

An application which is unverified and is defective in the statement of minor particulars which may be easily gathered from the decree filed therewith, may be regarded as one substantially in accordance with law, if the defects are not calculated to mislead the Court or prejudice the judgment-debtor—Ramayyan v. Kadir Bacha, 31 Mad. 68 (70). But in Raghunatha v. Venkatesa, 26 Mad. 101 (103), an unverified application for execution was held to be an application not in accordance with law,

An application for execution not signed or verified by the decree-holder but by the pleader who had conducted the original proceedings and who was therefore acquainted with the facts of the case, is an application in accordance with law, as it fulfils the requirements of O. 21, r. 11 (2)—Hasan v. Ramchandra, 31 Bom.L.R. 355, 117 I.C. 526, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 196; Sunder v. Khilanda, 197 I.C. 521, A.I.R. 1941 Pesh. 103. But the Madras High Court has held that such an application is not in accordance with law. The reason given is that the requirements laid down in Or. 21, r. 11, C. P. Code are not fulfilled—Sanyasamma v. Swami, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 224, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 97. So also, an application for execution filed by a pleader without vakalatnama from the decree-holder is in accordance with law, if it is in order in other respects—Kanhaiya v. The Panchayati Akhara, 1949 A.L.J. 105, A.I.R. 1949 All. 367.

Where the only defect in an application for execution was that the date of a previous application (which date was not material) had been wrongly stated therein, but even such trivial defect was amended after a delay of only two days beyond the time allowed by the Court, such application was held to be one substantially in accordance with law so as to give fresh starting point—Kalka v. Bisheshar, 23 All. 162.

Any incorrectness or superfluity as to the relief asked for in the application does not vitiate the application to such an extent as to debar the application from being treated as a step-in-aid of execution—Kishore Mal v. Jugdish Narain, 3 Pat. 42, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 471, 75 I.C. 312.

If the Court applied to for execution is not the Court which passed the decree, the name of the latter Court need not find a place in the application for execution. The omission to mention the name of such Court does not render the application one not in accordance with law—Vithal v. Gopal Rao, 5 N.L.R. 8, 1 I.C. 240.

An insufficiently stamped application for execution may suffice to keep the decree alive—Ramasami v. Seshayyangar, 6 Mad. 181.

An application for execution of a decree, though not accompanied with a copy of the decree, as required by the Rules of the High Court, is an application in accordance with law, because the defect has reference only to extraneous circumstances—Ramchandra v. Laxman, 31 Bom. 163; Pachiappa v. Poojali, 28 Mad. 557, and there is no obligation on the decree-holder to produce a copy of the decree under Or. 21, r. 11, C. P. Code—Venkatarama v. Venkatanarasamham, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 881, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 144; Arunachala v. Muthusadasiba, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 617, 62 L.W. 804, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 261 overruling the decision of Somasundaram J., in Kamalammal v. Rajanathna, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 66, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 631 where a contrary view was taken.

An application for execution of a decree made by the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder, without the production of a succession certificate, is nevertheless one made in accordance with law—Balkrishna v. Wagarsing, 20 Bom. 76; Mangal v. Salimullah, 16 All. 26; Hafizuddin v. Abdool, 20 Cal. 755; Bibi Aisha v. Mahabir, 6 Pat. 440, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 324 (325), 104 I.C. 218. It is sufficient if the certificate is produced and tendered in Court at any time before the Court proceeds to pass an order for execution—Kalian v. Ram Charan, 18 All. 34.

An application for execution by the assignee of a decree is in accordance with law even though he fails to produce the assignment deed—Vinayak v. Ananda, 34 Bom. 68; Neenakshiammal v. Krishnaswamy, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 90, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 35, 1951 M.W.N. 570; or though he produces an unregistered assignment deed—Abdul Majid v. Muhammad Faizulla, 13 All. 89. The Madras High Court has held that such an application is not in accordance with law as the transfer is void ab initio—Vythinatha v Ammalu, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 595, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 610. But where the assignment is not void abinitio but is afterwards declared void or cancelled in a separate suit as from the date of the suit an application by the assignee is in accordance with law—Ramchandra v. Vithu, 42 Bom.L.R. 1057, A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 65. Thus an application by the assignee of a decree to the Court which passed the decree for transfer of the decree to another Court is one in accordance with law—Bhagwandas v. Motilal, I.L.R. (1946) Bom. 977, 48 Bom.L.R. 583, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 113.

An application for execution would be in accordance with law even though unaccompanied with the Conciliator's certificate as required by sec. 47 of the Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act—Sadasiv v. Narsingrao, 17 Bom.L.R. 203, 28 I.C. 493. So also, an application for execution of a decree passed against a Taluqdar, although unaccompanied with a certificate of the Managing officer under sec. 29E of the Gujrat Taluqdars Act, 1888, is an application in accordance with law—Hargovind v. Naja Sura, 43 Bom. 44, 20 Bom.L.R. 872, 47 I.C. 726.

Where after a decree was transferred for execution to another Court, the interest of the decree-holder became vested by operation of law in another person, and the latter applied for execution to the Court to which the decree was transferred, without previously obtaining from the Court which passed the decree a certificate authorising him to proceed with the execution, but subsequently produced such certificate, it was held that the certificate would relate back to the time when the rights under the decree became vested in the applicant, and the application was made to the proper Court in accordance with law—Monorath v. Ambika, 13 C.W.N. 533 (537), 1 I.C. 57.

An application for execution of a decree made by one member of a firm which has obtained a decree, is no doubt defective, but it is still an application in accordance with law, being provided for by O. 21, r. 15 (1) of the C. P. Code; and the mere fact that the Court does not allow the application under rule 15 (2) but dismisses it as defective does not make it any the less an application in accordance with law—Gobardhan v. Satish Chandra, 1 Pat. 609 (611), 4 P.L.T. 263, 69 I.C. 668, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 597. It does not cease to be an application in accordance with law merely because the Court does not pass an order under Or. 21, r. 15 (2) C. P. Code—Shankar v. Damodar, I.L.R. (1945) Bom. 463, 47 Bom.L.R. 104, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 380. An application for execution by one of the several assignees is one in accordance with law—Shankar v. Damodar, I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 1, 43 Bom.L.R. 883, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 29. On the same principle an application by one of the joint decree-holders for execution can be taken into consideration on the question of limitation even though the decree cannot be executed unless the provisions of Or. 21, r. 15, C. P. Code are complied with. Such an application is in accordance with law—Adikanda v. Narayana, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 188.

An application, even though it may be so defective as not to be application for execution, may still be regarded as an application to take a step-in-aid of execution —Sadaya v. Paresh Nath, 32 C.L.J. 82, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 44, 64 I.C. 571.

Retrospective effect of amendment of defective application:—O. 21, r. 17 (2), C. P. Code lays down that if an application, which does not comply with the requirements of rules 11-14, is amended within the time fixed by the Court, "it shall be deemed to have been an application in accordance with law and presented on the date when it was first presented." This provision did not exist in the old section 245 of the C. P. Code of 1882, which simply provided that the Court might allow the defective application to be amended within the time fixed by the Court. No mention was made in that section as to the retrospective effect of the amendment. And so it was held that if a defective application was amended within the time fixed by the Court, the application should be deemed as presented on the date when it was presented after amendment, and not on the date of its first presentation; and consequently if it was amended at a time when the period of limitation had expired, though within the time fixed by the Court, the application was barred—Raghunath v. Venkatesa, 26 Mad. 101 (103).

In some other cases the amendment was held to relate back to the original presentation of the application—Kalka v. Bisheshar, 23 All. 162; Jiwat v. Kalicharan, 20 All. 478; MacGregor v. Tarini, 14 Cal. 124; Hurry Charan v. Subadar Sheikh, 12 Cal. 161; Bishan v. Ganga Ram, 27 P.R. 1905. Under O. 21, r. 17 (2) of the C. P. Code of 1908, the amendment relates back to the original presentation of the application, if the amendment is made within the time fixed by the Court. When the amendments are accepted the amendments date back to the date of the application—Sri Narain v. Gur Charan, 1949 A.L.J. 532, A.I.R. 1950 All. 177.

But so far as the defective application is treated as an intermediate application for execution or a step-in-aid of execution so as to give a first starting point for a subsequent application for execution, neither the date of the original presentation nor the date of the amendment is material; for this clause now distinctly lays down (as a result of the Amendment of 1927) that the starting point is the date of the final order passed on the application.

713. Application not in accordance with law:—The words "in accordance with law" are adjectival not only to the words "to the proper Court for execution" but also to the words "to take a step-in-aid of execution." Therefore it is necessary that the prior application which was a step-in-aid of execution was in accordance with the law of limitation, i.e., was within time—Bhagwan v. Dhondi, 22 Bom. 83 (85); Nilmoney v. Ram Jeebun, 8 C.L.R. 335. If the prior application, which was made in a Native State, was time-barred according to the law of limitation in British India (being made more than 3 years after the date of the decree) though it was not time-barred according to the law of the Native State, it is incapable of saving limitation, and the execution of the decree is barred—Nabibhai v. Dayabhai, 40 Bom. 504 (508), 18 Bom.L.R. 481, 36 I.C. 369.

The expression "applying in accordance with law" means applying to the Court to do something in execution which by law that Court is competent to do. It does not mean applying to the Court to do something which either to the decree-holder's direct knowledge in fact, or to his presumed knowledge of the law, the Court was incompetent to do—Purna Chandra v. Radha Nath, 33 Cal. 867; Chatter v. Newal, 12 All. 64; Stevens v. Kamta, 10 C.L.J. 19, 2 I.C. 941; Munawar v. Jani Bijai, 27 All. 619; Langtu v. Baijnath, 28 All. 387 (389); Khet Singh v. Onkar Seth, 1 N.L.R. 61; Bishundeo v. Raghunath, 19 Pat. 354, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 677; Satyabati v. Puri Bank Ltd., 12 Cut.L.T. 62, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 199; Munnu v. Hari, I.L.R. (1946) All. 856, A.I.R. 1947 All. 352. Therefore, an application for execution made to a Court which has no jurisdiction to entertain it (e.g., an application to execute a Small Cause Court decree made to a Court having no small cause powers, without the decree being transferred to such Court), is not an application in accordance with law—Ram Raj v. Umraji, A.I.R. 1926 All. 345, 93 I.C. 292. So also an application made to a Court of Small Causes for execution of a money decree by attachment and sale of immoveable property is not in accordance with law—Munnu v. Hari, supra. An application to have the judgment-debtor arrested in contravention of the terms of sec. 341, Civil Procedure Code (1882), and an application to bring the mortgaged property to sale in contravention of sec. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act are not applications in accordance with law within the meaning of the clause—Chatter v. Newat, 12 All. 64. Where the judgment-debtor has applied for declaration of insolvency and proceedings in insolvency are pending on his application, no application for execution can be made by the decree-holder against the judgment-debtor or his surety. Therefore an application made against the surety under such circumstances will not be an application in accordance with law—Langtu v. Baijnath, 28 All. 387 (389); Satyabadi v. Puri Bank Ltd., supra. So also an application for execution during the pendency of the insolvency proceeding of the judgment debtor without leave of the Insolvency Court is not an application in accordance with law—Nawab v. Fateh, 41 P.L.R. 799, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 270; Nagaratnam v. Ramaswami, 1939 M.W.N. 344, AI.R. 1939 Mad. 195. But the presumed knowledge of law refers to the general law and not to knowledge of any particular orders varying the pecuniary jurisdiction of Court—Bishundeo v. Raghunath, supra.

The expression "made in accordance with law" is to be read along with the concluding words "to take some step in aid of execution". As the Insolvency Court is not the proper Court for execution, it follows that any so-called steps taken in that Court do not extend the period—Nandlal v. Ram Datta, 1940 N.L.J. 605, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 60.

Where the Court which passed the decree was abolished when the decree was put to execution, and the Court in which the decree was executed, had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, if it were filed, on the date when execution application was made, the decree executed is in accordance with law—Mangi Lal v. Raghubar, A.I.R. 1952 Rajasthan 60.

An application to transfer a decree to a Court which is pecuniarily incompetent to execute the decree is not an application in accordance with law—Amrit Lal v. Murlidhar, 1 Pat. 651 (653), 3 P.L.T. 422, 67 I.C. 538, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 188; Mojibunisa v. Kadir, A.I.R. 1950 All. 380. Similarly, an application for execution of a decree by attachment of property beyond the local jurisdiction of the executing Court is not one in accordance with law—Sheo Prasad v. Naraini, 48 All. 468, A.I.R. 1926 All. 95, 90 I.C. 938. But see Ghasiram v. Abhin, 8 Cut.L.T. 7 where such an application has been held to be in accordance with law. So also, an application for execution of a decree by attachment of properties which does not contain a description of the property sufficient to identify it as required by Or. 21, r. 13, C. P. Code is not one in accordance with law—Arunachala v. Raghava, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 477, 1940 M.W.N. 352; Khodaijtul v. Ugrah, 23 Pat. 103, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 214. But where the property is attached before judgment, an application for execution for sale of the attached property without giving any description of the property is an application in accordance with law as the provisions of Or. 21, r. 13 do not apply where the property has already been attached —Baliram v. Sakharam, 42 Bom.L.R. 423, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 250.

Where a decree directs that the plaintiff should be maintained in possession of a share of a village by cancelment of the order of the settlement officer directing the entry of the defendant's name in respect of such share in the revenue registers, the Court executing the decree should not issue an order to the Collector to amend the entry in such register, but must simply forward a copy of the decree for his information. Therefore, an application for execution, which prays the Court executing the decree to order the Collector to amend such entry in the revenue record, instead of asking it to send such officer a copy of the decree for his information for the purpose of amendment, is not an application in accordance with law—Muhammad Umar v. Kamila Bibi, 4 All. 34.

The application for execution contemplated in this clause must be one made in accordance with law and asking to obtain some relief given by the decree and to obtain it in the mode that the law permits. If the application asked for a relief which the decree did not give, or if execution was asked for in a way different from that provided by the decree, it was not an application in accordance with law to execute or further the execution of the decree—Pandarinath v. Lilachand, 13 Bom. 237; Bando v. Narsinha, 37 Bom. 42, 17 I.C. 210 (212); Nathubhai v. Pranjivan, 34 Bom. 189; Sri Ram v. Majiduddin, 98 P.R. 1901. It is essential that the particulars of the mode in which the assistance of the Court is required must be one in accordance with law. If the decree holder would not be entitled to ask for the relief in the "mode" stated in the application and the Court has no power to grant such relief, prima facie the application would be one not in accordance with law—Gopal v. Damodar, 45 Bom.L.R. 707, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 353. The main test of an application being in accordance with law is whether it is possible for the Court to issue execution upon it, i.e., whether it is within the power of the Court to grant the kind of relief asked for, though in a particular case, the relief may not, on the merits be granted owing to some findings of facts not to the nature of the application—Gopal v. Damodar, 45 Bom.L.R. 707, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 353; Akshoy v. Nalini, 54 C.W.N. 815, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 493; Shankar v. Damodar, 47 Bom.L.R. 104, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 380. The Bombay High Court in a recent Full Bench has held that whether a particular application is or is not in accordance with law must largely depend upon the nature of the application and the circumstances under which it came to be made, and to lay down a sort of an all pervasive test to be applied to all applications would be not only unsafe but almost an impossible task —Jaichand v. Waman, 52 Bom.L.R. 205, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 184. Thus, where an instalment decree did not provide that in default of payment of an instalment the whole amount would become due, but on the judgment-debtor making default the decree-holder applied for execution of the whole decree, held that the application, not being in accordance with the terms of the decree, was not one in accordance with law—Jayanuddin v. Jamiluddin, 21 C.W.N. 835, 37 I.C. 916. Where the decree-holder asked in his application that he might be put in possession of a certain house, while the decree did not provide for such thing, held that the application was not in accordance with law nor one to take a step-in-aid of execution as it asked for a relief outside the decree altogether—Pandarinath v. Lila Chand, 13 Bom. 237. Where the decree directed payment of a money out of the mortgaged property, an application to recover the money from the other properties of the judgment-debtor, was not an application in accordance with law—Sri Ram v. Majiduddin, 98 P.R. 1901. Where a decree creates a charge on immoveable property in respect of the decretal amount and provides for recovery of the amount by sale of the charged properties, an application in execution of such a decree praying for rateable distribution under sec. 73, C. P. Code out of sale proceeds realised in another decree holder's execution, is not an application in accordance with law—Gopal v. Damodar, supra.

An application praying for issue of notice under Or. 21, r. 22, C. P. Code is not in accordance with law as the issue of notice under Or. 21, r. 22, C. P. Code is not a mode of execution and is not a relief awarded by the decree—Vallabdas v. Kantilal, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 430, 49 Bom.L.R. 420.

Where an application for execution is forbidden by any special enactment, it is not an application according to law—Chatim Kushalchand v. Mohada Bhagaji, 10 Bom. 91.

An application for execution which omits to mention a previous application for execution, as required by O. 21, r. 11 (f) is materially defective, and is not an application in accordance with law—Sahigram v. Tower, 15 S.L.R. 156, A.I.R. 1922 Sind 29, 65 I.C. 14; Dularam v. Mulomal, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 272, 185 I.C. 835.

An application made by a benamidar for execution of a decree and for substitution of his name as decree-holder is not an application made in accordance with law within the terms of this Article—Gour Sundar v. Hem Chunder, 16 Cal. 355; Denonath v. Lalit, 9 Cal. 633. Where a decree is transferred by a deed of assignment in writing the person named as the assignee is the transferee, though he is a benamdar of another person. The real or beneficial transferee is not the "transferee". An application by the real assignee for execution is not in accordance with law. The mere fact that he gets a decree in a suit declaring that he is the real assignee can not entitle him to apply in execution or to make his application one in accordance with law—Mohammad v. Bhupendra, 17 Pat. 223, 19 Pat.L.T. 901, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 457.

An application made by the pleader of the decree-holder after the decree-holder's death has not the effect of saving limitation, as the authority of the pleader ceases on the death of his client—Kallu v. Muhammad Abdul, 7 All. 564.

An application for execution made to the Court which passed the decree after transfer of the decree to another Court is not in accordance with law—Ram Kishon v. Satya, 43 C.W.N. 185, 69 C.L.J. 562, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 741.

An application for partial execution of a decree is not "in accordance with law." But a judgment-debtor who did not appeal against a previous order for execution of a portion of the decree and who did not dispute the validity of such order, cannot, in the matter of a subsequent application for execution of the remaining portion of the decree, contend that the first application was not "in accordance with law"—Dali Chand v. Bai Shivkor, 15 Bom. 242; Babagowda v. Tanibai, 76 I.C. 1041, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 112; Nanda v. Raghunandan, 7 All. 282; Nepal Chandra v. Amrit Lal, 26 Cal. 888.

If the decree-holder himself resides within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, an application by a person holding a general power-of-attorney from the decree-holder is not in accordance with law, with reference to secs. 36 and 37 of the C. P. Code (1882)—Murari v. Umrao, 23 All. 499; Kasumri v. Beni, 26 All. 19.

An application for execution made by a guardian for the decree-holder who is described as a minor but is found to be a major at the time, is not in accordance with law—Saramma v. Seshayya, 28 Mad. 396.

Where the plaintiff assigned his rights to another person pending the suit, and a decree was passed in favour of the assignor, but the assignee applied for execution of the decree, held that the execution application was not one in accordance with law, as there was no assignment of the decree under O. 21, r. 16, C. P. Code after the decree was passed, nor did the applicant apply to the Court under O. 22, r. 10 to be made a party to the suit and get the decree passed in his favour—Genaram v. Hanmantram, 28 Bom.L.R. 761, 96 I.C. 833, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 406. So also an application by the assignee decree-holder to the transferee Court before his assignment is recognised and the decree is transferred to that Court is not in accordance with law—Ranga v. Subba, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 461.

714. Step-in-aid of execution:—Clause 5 of Art. 182 contemplates an application in accordance with law to the proper Court, asking the Court to do one of two things, either to execute, or to take some step-in-aid of execution—Murgeppa v. Basawantrao, 37 Bom. 559, 15 Bom.L.R. 557, 20 I.C. 252.

To take some step-in-aid means to obtain an order of the Court in furtherance of the execution of the decree—Troilokya v. Jyoti, 30 Cal. 761; Umesh v. Soonder, 16 Cal. 747. After having set the Court in motion to execute a decree, any further application during the continuance of the same proceeding is an application asking the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution—Chowdhury Poroosh v. Kali Puddo, 17 Cal. 53; Sujan v. Hira, 12 All. 399 (F.B.). So an application for execution cannot be treated as a step in aid of execution, as a step-in-aid is to be distinguished from an application for execution, only those steps which are to be taken prior to the presentation of an application for execution and which will advance the execution are steps-in-aid—Mahomed Liaq v. Ramji, 4 D.L.R. (All.) 208. Therefore, an application for execution of a decree made to a wrong Court cannot be considered as a step-in-aid of execution —Abdur Rahim v. Fateh Mohammad, 40 P.L.R. 721, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 451.

Where an application for substitution and for execution of decree is signed by a pleader and is accompanied by a Vakalatnama in which however the place meant for the name of the pleader is left blank, and the Vakalatnama does not bear any signature of the pleader showing that he has accepted it, the application as filed cannot be treated as being filed by a duly authorised person and does not save limitation—Official Receiver, Aligarh and others v. Hiralal, A.I.R. 1935 All. 727.

An execution application filed by a Vakil who had no Vakalatnama from the decree-holder is not one in accordance with law and therefore not a step-aid which will save limitation—Midono Mahono Deo v. Kunja Behari, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 786, 158 I.C. 891.

An application, in order to be a step-in-aid of execution, must be made in the course of a pending execution proceeding. The words "step-in-aid of execution" appear to be intended to cover an application which is not an initial application for execution but is an application to take some step to advance an execution proceeding which is already pending. If the prior application was made at a time when no execution proceeding had been initiated, the application was not a step-in-aid of execution—Kuppuswami v. Rajagopala, 45 Mad. 466 (471), A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 79, 42 M.L.J. 303, 70 I.C. 324; Sankara v. Thanganna, 45 Mad. 202 (205) (per Ayling, J.); Balaguruswami v. Guruswami, 48 M.L.J. 506, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 703, 87 I.C. 989. In some other Madras cases it has been held that an application in order to be a step need not be made in a pending execution—Kannan v. Avvulla, 50 Mad. 403, 52 M.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 288 (291), 99 I.C. 677; Sankara v. Thanganna, 45 Mad. 202 (per Ramesam, J.); Krishna v. Seetharama, 50 Mad. 49, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1178 (1180), 98 I.C. 156 (obiter). The Madras High Court in a recent Full Bench case has held that it is not necessary that the application taken as a step-in-aid of execution should be made in a pending execution petition—Ayi Goundan v. Solai Goundan, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 468, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 47, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 139 (F.B.). The same view has been taken in Uttar v. Hamid, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 326, 178 I.C. 202; Sheolal v. Ram, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 572, 1947 N.L.J. 399, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 197; Risal v. Lal, I.L.R. (1939) All. 728, 1939 A.L.J. 746, A.I.R. 1939 All. 483.

But the Patna High Court is of opinion that Art. 182, clause 5 does not require that the application to take some step-in-aid of execution of the decree should be made in the course of execution proceedings; the application may be made in any other proceeding which may not, strictly speaking, be proceeding in execution but which affects the execution of the decree—Jagdeo v. Bhubaneswari, 7 Pat. 708, 9 P.L.T. 817, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 612 (613), 113 I.C. 582. Any step taken by the decree-holder to remove an obstacle thrown by the judgment-debtor in the way of the execution of the decree is a step-in-aid of execution. It is not necessary that the step must be taken in the execution proceedings; the step may be taken in any proceeding which has the effect of throwing an obstacle to the execution of the decree—Sheo Sahay v. Jamuna, 4 Pat. 202, 6 P.L.T. 777, 88 I.C. 807, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 459. Therefore the decree-holder's act of filling a list of the witnesses in a proceeding at the instance of the judgment-debtor to set aside the sale, is a step-in-aid, in as much as the proceeding to set aside the sale threw an obstacle in the way of the decree-holder's taking out execution, though there was no execution proceeding pending at that time—Jagdeo v. Bhubaneswari, supra.

In order to constitute step in execution there must be an application. So where the only prayer is made to the Court for issue of a non-satisfaction certificate of the decree without any application for that purpose, the step-in-aid of execution is valueless —Framji v. Eastern Union Bank, A.I.R. 1951 Punj. 371.

The step must be taken to "aid", i.e., to advance the execution proceeding. That is, the application contemplated by this clause is one to obtain some order of the Court in furtherance of the execution of the decree—Amolakchand v. Hoshihar, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 138. So, an application merely stating that the necessary steps may be taken without making it clear what steps are required to be taken, is not an application to take step in aid of execution—Khodajtul v. Ugrah, 23 Pat. 103, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 214. The mere appearance of the decree-holder or his pleader to oppose the proceedings taken by the judgment-debtor to set aside the execution sale is not a step-in-aid of execution, because the execution of the decree is not further advanced than it was before the appearance of the pleader—Umesh Chander v. Soonder Narain, 16 Cal. 747. So also, where a judgment-debtor filed a petition for entering satisfaction of the decree which he claimed to have discharged, and the decree-holder filed a counter-statement denying receipt of the decretal amount and asking that the petition should be dismissed, such counter-statement did not amount to a step-in-aid of execution. The counter-petition may tend to prevent the Court placing an obstacle in the way of future execution of the decree, but it does not ask the Court to take any step-in-aid of execution: for the execution of the decree is no further advanced than it was before the counter-petition was presented—Kuppuswami v. Rajagopala, 45 Mad. 466 (470), 42 M.L.J. 303, 70 I.C. 324, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 79; Krishna Pattar v. Seetharama, 50 Mad. 49, 51 M.L.J. 480, 98 I.C. 456, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1178. Where an execution petition was returned by the Court for being re-presented with the sale-papers and encumbrance-certificate, and the petition was re-presented without the papers, but with a request, in the petition, for extension of time for obtaining the necessary papers, held that the request for extension of time could not be deemed a step-in-aid of execution, because the execution was not advanced by it in any way—Katifi Mahamed v. Ghouse, 51 M.L.J. 480, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1197, 89 I.C. 763. An application for an order excusing the delay in complying with the order of the Court is not a step-in-aid of execution —China v. Peda, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 266, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 112, A.I.R. 1943 Mad, 650. So also, an application which is returned for amendment by Court but is not represented after amendment cannot be treated as a step-in-aid of execution. The proper way to deal with such an application is to treat it as not having come into existence at all—Municipal Council v. Sundaresan, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 87, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 429; Chidambaram v. Murugesam, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 60, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 671, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 841; Lakshminarasimham v. Gomaji & Co., (1948) 2 M.L.J. 488, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 363.

An application for transfer of a decree is a step-in-aid of execution. By that application the decree-holder asks the Court which passed the decree to assist him for the purpose of carrying further proceedings to realise his decree—Manmatha v. Sarada, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 651. The above view was recently adopted by a Full Bench of the Mysore High Court in Sundara v. Appiah, A.I.R. 1954 Mys. 1 (F.B.).

The mere fact that the application contains mistake and gives incorrect figure as to the costs of the previous application for execution does not go to show that the application is not a step in aid of execution—Abdul v. Rahimuddin, 1939 N.L.J. 596, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 87.

In order to be a step-in-aid of execution, it is not necessary that the prior application for execution must have been a successful one. Therefore where an application for execution was duly made in accordance with the terms of this clause, the mere fact that the application was dismissed does not prevent it from furnishing a fresh starting point of limitation—Adhar Chandra v. Lal Mohan, 24 Cal. 778; Narsingh v. Kalicharan, 14 C.W.N. 486, 5 I.C. 147; Shankar v. Narsingrao, 11 Bom. 467, Gulappa v. Eravva, 46 Bom. 269, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 118, 63 I.C. 844; Appathurai v. Panayappan, 57 M.L.J. 468, 122 I.C. 526. Thus, an application under O. XXI, rule 22 of the C. P. Code for execution of a decree with a prayer for substitution of the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor is a step-in-aid of execution, though it was eventually dismissed for non-payment of process-fees—Aptabuddin v. Jogendra, 31 C.L.J. 389, 55 I.C. 231. So also, an application by the transferee of a decree for execution under Or. 21, r. 16, C. P. Code, is a step in aid of execution, although such application is dismissed for non-payment of process-fees and for failure to serve notice on the judgment-debtors —Dayalbhai v. Dayabhai, 40 Bom.L.R. 411, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 309.

An application which has been dismissed for default without any determination as to the propriety of the application is effective for the purpose of saving limitation. It is only when the order of rejection amounts to a finding that the application is not in accordance with law that the application is ineffective for the purposes of saving limitation—Harumanlal v. Sheonarayan Sonar, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 131, 31 N.L.R. 333, 156 I.C. 114; Chandika v. Kamla, 13 Luck. 162, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh. 233; Abdul v. Rahimuddin, 1939 N.L.J. 596, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 87.

As to an application which is withdrawn by the decree-holder on account of some formal defects in it, it was once held that such an application could not afford a new starting point for limitation—Sarju Prasad v. Sita Ram, 10 All. 71; Kifayat Ali v. Ram Singh, 7 All. 359; Radha Charan v. Man Singh, 12 All. 382; Pirjade v. Pirjade, 6 Bom. 681. These cases were decided by applying the principle of sec. 374, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 23, rule 2 of the present Code) to execution proceedings. That section laid down that if suit was withdrawn and a fresh suit instituted, the plaintiff would be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted. On the analogy of this rule, it was held in the above cases, that the question of limitation with reference to a subsequent application for execution of a decree must be determined on the supposition that the previous application (which had been withdrawn) had not been made. But the authority of the above two cases has been shaken by the Privy Council decision in Thakur Prasad v. Fakirullah, 17 All. 106 (P.C.) and by the enactment of sec. 375A, C.P. Code, 1882 (O. 23, rule 4, C. P. Code, 1908) which expressly lays down that the provisions relating to the withdrawal of suits shall not apply to execution proceedings. From this it follows that a prior application for execution which is withdrawn by the decree-holder will no longer be considered as non-existent but will help to keep the decree alive, and will act as a step-in-aid of execution with respect to a subsequent application. See Muzaraf v. Amir, 15 C.W.N. 71, 8 I.C. 833.

But a mere application to withdraw a prior execution petition with liberty to make a fresh application in a future time for execution of the decree does not amount to a step-in-aid of execution. It is simply an application for further time to proceed with the pending execution proceeding; and the mere granting of further time to make a subsequent application cannot be said to be a step, as the taking of it does not assist the Court in executing the decree or advance the execution proceeding in any way—Tarak Chandra v. Gyanada Sundari, 23 Cal. 817 (821) (dissenting from Ram Narain v. Bukhtu Kuar, 16 All. 75).

The step-in-aid of execution has to be taken not by the applicant, but by the Court. An application by the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder for a succession certificate is a mere preparation or preliminary to the execution of a decree, and is not an application asking the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution—Murgeppa v. Baswantrao, 37 Bom. 559, 15 Bom.L.R. 557, 20 I. C. 252.

But the step has to be taken by the Court at the instance of the decree-holder. The mere act of the Court confirming a sale in execution, which act is not shown to have been performed upon any application of the decree-holder, is not a step—Motendra v. Mohendra, 10 C.L.R. 330. In the absence of any allegation and any evidence to the effect that an application to take some step-in-aid of execution was made by the decree-holder, a mere order by the Court in the order-sheet that the decree-holder should take the necessary steps will not bring the application for execution within time—Kara Pasi v. Ram Nath, 8 P. L. T. 670, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 323, 103 I.C. 37. Steps taken by a person claiming adversely to the decree-holder cannot be taken advantage of by the decree-holder as steps in execution, in spite of an agreement between the decree-holder and the rival to act in a particular manner—Achutanand v Saran, 1938 P.W.N. 652, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 531. Thus an attachment of a decree by a creditor of the attached decree is not a step-in-aid of execution as far as the holder of the attached decree is concerned—Anil v. Hemanta, 60 Cal. 1357, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 234; Walchand, v. Yeshwant, 51 Bom.L.R. 608, A.I R. 1949 Bom. 379. A contrary view has been taken in Shivalomal v. Bhola, I.L.R. (1945) Kar. 445, A.I.R. 1946 Sind 103 where it is held that an execution application of one creditor operates as a step in aid of execution in respect of an execution application of another decree-holder. See also Nukamma v. Bansayya, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 303, I.L.R. (1947) Mad. 515, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 121, where this point was raised but was not decided. But it was held that such an application would enure to the benefit of the decree-holder as such an application would be treated as application for execution of the decree by the decree-holder through his representative-in-law. See also, Arulaprakasom v. Inpamuthu, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-co. 69 where it is held that an application by the State to execute the decree for costs in a forma pauperis suit charged on the decree is a step-in-aid of execution for the decree-holder.

Again, there must be an application to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution; the mere act of the decree-holder's taking a step-in-aid will not keep the decree alive. For instance, the mere payment by the decree-holder of Nazir's fee for the issue of sale proclamation, unless accompanied with an application, will not extend the time—Madan v. Ganga, 17 C.L.J. 422, 13 I.C. 189 (dissenting from Radha Prasad v. Sundar Lal, 9 Cal. 644, 646); and the mere fact that the payment was made pursuant to an order of the Court on a previous application is not sufficient—Ibid. An application to the Collector to enforce an award under sec. 59 (1) (b) of the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act is not a step-in-aid of execution as the application is not made to a Court to take step-in-aid of execution—Co-operative Credit Bank v. Kashav, 40 Bom.L.R. 889, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 424.

Two things are essential: there must be an application, and that application must ask the Court to take a step-in-aid of execution. The fact that a party took some steps would not be enough—Rangachariar v. Subramania, 12 L.W. 9, 58 I.C. 536. Before a judgment-creditor can get any benefit, he must show that he asks the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution. A step taken by the judgment-creditor himself is not sufficient—Raghunundun v. Kallydutt, 23 Cal. 690 (692).

In deciding whether any particular act is or is not an application for, or a step-in-aid of, execution, it is the nature of the act that must be looked to, and not the time at which it may be possible to do it—Koormayya v. Krishnamma, 17 Mad. 165.

715. Step, what is:—"The decided cases on the subject of step-in-aid of execution reveal an extreme conflict of view; they fail to disclose even a principle of general or uniform application. The wording is so uncertain that it leads to the spending of efforts in barren and fruitless discussion, and a good deal of time of the Court is wasted. Such a large body of case-law has now grown up on the point that the legislature may well with the aid of the decided cases catalogue the applications which in its opinion ought to serve as steps-in-aid of execution. This is a suggestion which I venture to make with a view to make the law more certain."—Per Venkatasubba Rao J., in Vappu v. Sivakataksham, 53 Mad. 390, 58 M.L.J. 406, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 588 (589), 123 I.C. 577.

An application by the decree-holder praying that the judgment-debtor's property be sold subject to a mortgage of a claimant-mortgagee—Lalraddi Mullick v. Kala Chand Bera, 15 Cal. 363; an application by the son of the deceased decree-holder to be brought on the record and to have money levied and paid—Govind v. Appaya, 5 Bom. 246; Keshavlal v. Pitambardas, 19 Bom. 261; an application to the Court to issue notice under sec. 248, C. P. Code to the heir of the deceased judgment-debtor and to require him to adjust the account—Ibid; Gopal v. Gosain, 25 Cal. 594 (F.B.); an application made by a judgment-debtor stating that he had come to an adjustment of the decree with the decree-holder and praying that the execution case might be struck off—Ghansham v. Mukha, 3 All. 320; an application by a judgment-creditor to the Court which passed the decree for a certificate that a copy of a Revenue Register of the land is necessary as a preliminary to the execution of the decree by attaching the land—Kunhi v. Sheshagiri, 5 Mad. 141; an application by a decree-holder to the Court to which a decree has been transferred for execution, to return the decree (which has been partially executed) to the Court which passed it, for further execution—Krishnayyar v. Venkayyar, 6 Mad. 81; an application for payment out of money in court deposit—Kannappa Chettiar v. Manickam Chettiar (1957) 2 Mad. L.J. 105; these are steps-in-aid of execution. But an application by a decree-holder to the Court to which the decree had been transferred to give the partially executed decree to him is not a step-in-aid of execution—Aghore Kali v. Prosonno, 22 Cal. 827.

An application for execution presented against a deceased judgment-debtor by mistake due to negligence but honestly made is a step-in-aid of execution though it can not be acted upon—Chinnan v. The Estate Manager, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 377, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 348; Harbans v. Munshi, 40 P.L.R. 25.

An application for execution of a mortgage decree for sale, wrongly returned for want of a certificate under sec. 238, C. P. Code, 1882 (now O. 21, r. 14), although not re-presented, is a step-in-aid of execution—Mootha v. Kandan Sankunni, 27 I.C. 811.

An application by a decree-holder to execute a decree belonging to his judgment-debtor and attached in execution of his own decree is a step-in-aid of execution of the latter decree and has the effect of keeping it alive—Lachman v. Thondi Ram, 7 All. 382; Adhar v. Lalmohan, 24 Cal. 778; Gya Loan Office v. Dhirit, 8 I.C. 675.

Where the decree-holder made an application to the executing Court that the original records of the case should be sent for as they were necessary in order to get rid of the objections raised by the judgment-debtor, and the executing Court sent for the record, held that the application was a step-in-aid of execution—Raghunath v. Lachmi Narain, 47 All. 667, 23 A.L.J. 422, A.I.R. 1925 All. 394, 88 I.C. 271.

A prior application will be regarded as a step-in-aid of execution so as to save limitation in respect of a subsequent application, even though the properties sought to be attached in the subsequent application are different from those attached in the prior application—Keshaweswarindra v. Debendra Bala, 4 P.L.J. 213, 48 I.C. 245.

Where a decree directs that the decretal debt shall be paid in instalments, an application for recovery of one of the instalments due is a step-in-aid of execution with regard to all the instalments then due. Thus, an application was made in 1915 to recover the instalments due for 1911, 1912 and 1913; another application was made in 1918 to recover the same instalments, and they were afterwards recovered. In 1919 an application was made to recover the instalments for 1914 and 1915. Held that although the present application was apparently barred in regard to these instalments the application of 1918 saved it; for that application, although an application for recovery of the instalments of 1911, 1912 and 1913, must be considered as a stepin-aid so as to start a new period of limitation wth regard to all the instalments then due —Sitabai v. Keshavrao, 46 Bom. 719, 24 Bom.L.R. 284, 67 I.C. 169, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 194. If there is an application for so much of the decree as is executable, that is a step in execution. So an application for execution of an instalment decree for the instalments then accrued due is a step-in-aid and saves limitation in respect of later application for execution of all the instalments due under the decree—Dasharath v. Gopal, I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 317, 42 Bom.L.R. 276, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 148.

Consent:—The judgment-debtor having applied to the Court to postpone the sale of some of the attached lands until others had first been sold, the vakil for the decree-holder consented in part to this application, but insisted that certain other lands should also be sold in the first instance. It was held that this act of the vakil was a sufficient application to the Court to make some step-in-aid of execution—Dharanamma v. Subba, 7 Mad. 306. The judgment-debtor applied for two month's time on the day fixed for the sale of his property, and the decree-holder assented to postponement for that length of time only. The application was granted, and the Court thereupon struck the case off the file. This application was held to be in aid of execution—Rajlukhy v. Rash Munjury, 5 C.L.J. 515. But see Sreenivasachariar v. Ponnusamy, 28 Mad. 40.

Application for partial execution:—An application for partial execution of a decree, though not in accordance with law, is a step-in-aid of execution especially when the judgment-debtor did not object to it—Dali Chand v. Bai Shivkor, 15 Bom. 242; Nepal Chandra v. Amrita, 26 Cal. 888. Where a decree grants several reliefs based upon different causes of action, an application for execution of one of those reliefs is a step-in-aid of execution and the decree-holder is entitled to ask for limitation being calculated from the dates of the final order on that application even though the said application sought execution of reliefs other than that sought in the subsequent one—Lakshminarasimham v. Suryanarayana, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 624, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 443, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 246.

For recognition or substitution:—An application by the legal representatives of a deceased decree-holder, for substitution of their names in place of the deceased decree-holder is a step-in-aid of execution—Mohan Singh v. Jagat Singh, 50 All. 621, 109 I.C. 412, A.I.R. 1928 All. 299 (300); Appaniangar v. Dharani, 17 M.L.J. 475; Tanba v. Chandra Shankar, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 367, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 191. An application for the substitution of the name of the legal representative for that of the deceased decree-holder made to the Court which passed the decree after the transfer of the execution application filed in that Court amounts to a step-in-aid of execution—Prayagdas v. Indrabai, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 734, 1943 N.L.J. 499, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 80; Nihamal v. Lachmibai, I.L.R. (1947) Kar. 216, A.I.R. 1948 Sind. 110.

An application made by the transferee of a decree asking for substitution of his name in place of the name of the original decree-holder is a step-in-aid of execution—Pitam Singh v. Tota, 29 All. 301; Bhagwanta Kuer v. Dewan Zamir, 3 Pat. 596, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 576, 78 I.C. 766; Annamalai v. Ramier, 31 Mad. 234 (235); Rajitagiripathy v. Bhawani, 47 Mad. 641, 47 M.L.J. 4, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 673, 80 I.C. 103. An application asking for time to find out the address of the judgment-debtor and to serve notice on him of the substitution application is also a step-in-aid of execution—Ibid. See also Bhubeneshwar v. Lokenath, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 234. A decree passed by one Court was transferred to another Court for execution. The decree-holder assigned the decree to another person. The assignee applied to the latter Court asking that the records be sent back to the Court which passed the decree, in order that he might be recognised as the assignee of the decree. Held that the application was a step-in-aid of execution for his claim as assignee could be recognised only by the Court which passed the decree, and for that purpose it was necessary to send back the records to that Court—Ayyiru v. Varadaraja, 50 M.L.J. 116, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 431, 92 I.C. 770; or to have his name substituted and to have intimation sent to the transferee Court, as a preliminary to and to enable him to make an execution application to the transferee Court, is a step-in-aid of execution—Nihalmal v. Lachmibai, I.L.R. (1947) Kar. 216, A.I.R. 1948 Sind. 110. An application by the judgment-creditor for substitution of the heirs of the deceased judgment-debtor is a step-in-aid of execution—Adhar v. Lalmohan, 24 Cal. 778; Saday Chandra v. Paresh Nath, 35 C.L.J. 82, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 44, 64 I.C. 571; Ramchandra v. Uka, 24 N.L.R. 36, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 308 (310); though against a wrong legal representative—Harbans v. Munshi, 40 P.L.R. 25; even though it contains errors in the matter of proper reliefs and is therefore not strictly in accordance with law, still it is a step-in-aid—Varadiati v. Kumara Venkata, 26 M.L.J. 83, 21 I.C. 782. Such an application made to the Court which passed the decree after transfer of decree to another Court for execution is a step-in-aid of execution—Hasomal v. Lalchand, I.L.R. (1946) Kar. 371, A.I.R. 1947 Sind. 149; Daulat v. Khemraj, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer. 31.

An application by the transferee of a decree to bring in the legal representatives of a deceased defendant is a step-in-aid of execution, though the applicant himself has not been recognised as the transferee of the decree-holder—Mahalinga v. Kuppanachariar, 30 Mad. 541.

For payment:—An application by the judgment-creditor for payment of a fund or money attached is a step-in-aid of execution, if the money or the fund of which payment is sought has been already realised in execution as the result of the attachment—Apurba v. Chundermoney, 10 C.W.N. 354. But if the money has been realised and is lying in Court, an application for the payment of the money is an application for merely a ministerial order and does not amount to a step-in-aid of execution. See Fazal Imam v. Metta Singh, 10 Cal. 549; Hem Chunder v. Brojo Soondery, 8 Cal. 89, and other cases (as well as the contrary rulings) cited in Note 716 (sub-heading "To take out money").

For payment towards decree out of money deposited:—Where money is deposited in Court as security for the costs of the suit, and order of the Court is necessary to make it available for payment towards the decretal amount, and an application for such order is a step-in-aid of execution—Thangi v. Durga Shetti, 35 M.L.J. 575, 48 I.C. 226.

For rateable distribution:—An application for rateable distribution is one to take a step-in-aid of execution—Gobardhan v. Jang Bahadur, 3 O.W.N. 749, 1 Luck. 569, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 616, 98 I.C. 33. Where such an application was made and distribution was granted without fixing the amounts, and another application was made for an order to be paid the money so ordered to be distributed, it was held that the second application was also a step-in-aid of execution—Baijnath v. Ghanashyam, 8 C.W.N. 382. But if the order granting the application for rateable distribution also stated the precise amounts to be paid to the decree-holders, an application for an order of withdrawal of the amounts was one for a mere ministerial order and was not a step-in-aid of execution—Sadananda v. Kalishankar, 10 C.W.N. 28.

For issue of notice:—An application by the decree-holder under sec. 248, C. P. Code of 1882 (O. 21, rule 22 of the Code of 1908) for the issue of a natice to the judgment-debtor, should be regarded as a step-in-aid of execution—Ramchandra v. Krishna Lal, 1 Pat. 328, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 301, 65 I.C. 332; Jogendra v. Mangal Prasad, 7 P.L.T. 330, 90 I.C. 847, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 160; Gobardhan v. Satischandra, 1 Pat. 609, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 597, 69 I.C. 668; Pachiappa v. Poojali, 28 Mad. 557; Ramakshi v. Ramaswami, 18 M.L.J. 14; Gobind v. Appayya, 5 Bom. 246; Gopal Chandra v. Gosain, 25 Cal. 594 (599) (F.B.); Behari v. Salik Ram, 1 All. 675; Md. Nawaz Khan v. Ram Das, 22 P.R. 1905; Shankar v. Zarowar, 116 P.R. 1907; Saday Chandra v. Paresh, 35 C.L.J. 82, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 44, 64 I.C. 571; Keshav Lal v. Pitamber Das, 19 Bom. 261; Subramanyan v. Naraina, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 710; Satyanarayana v. Kajireddi, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 427, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 61, I.L.R. (1946) Mad. 562; Akshoy v. Nalini, 54 C.W.N. 815, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 493. In some cases it has been held that a mere service of notice would not save the application from limitation unless there was some other proceeding in relation to the execution of the decree after the service of the notice—Biswambhar v. Mahesh, 6 Pat. 277, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 218, 103 I.C. 39; Sripati Charan v. Belchambers, 15 C.W.N. 661, 8 I.C. 22; Umed Ali v. Abdul Karim, 35 Cal. 1060. In Mahomed v. Dawood, I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 708, 40 Bom.L.R. 676, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 405 the point was raised but was not decided. Where an order was made for attachment of the judgment-debtor's properties after the service of notice under O. 21, r. 22, this would save a subsequent application for execution from the bar of limitation—Biswambhar v. Mahesh, supra.

A batta memorandum which mentions that batta is paid for the issue of notice to the judgment-debtor under section 248, C. P. Code, 1882 (now O. 21, r. 22) is an application to take a step-in-aid of execution—Algamuthu v. Devasagaya, 3 L.W. 34, 1916 M.W.N. 78, 32 I.C. 484.

Where a decree has been transmitted from one Court to another, the notice required under O. 21, r. 22 to be served on the judgment-debtor must be issued by the Court to which the decree has been sent; in such a case an application made to the Court which passed the decree, for issue of the notice, is not a step-in-aid of execution—Hazari Lal v. Baidya Nath, 26 C.W.N. 292, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 3, 63 I.C. 116.

Filing affidavit of service of process:—According to the Patna High Court, the filing of an affidavit in proof of service of a process of attachment is a step-in-aid of execution—Thakur v. Sheo Bhajan, 4 P.L.J. 521, 49 I.C. 892. So also, in some Calcutta cases it has been held that the filing of an affidavit of the service of notice on the judgment-debtor (under O. 21, r. 22) is equivalent to a step-in-aid—Mohan Lal v. Kasimuddin, 47 C.L.J. 362, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 302, 108 I.C. 588; Pran Kishna v. Pratap, 21 C.W.N. 423, 38 I.C. 536. But a contrary view has been taken in another Calcutta case—Krishna Prasad v. Dhirendra, 24 C.W.N. 55, 30 C.L.J. 518, 54 I.C. 1. The Bombay High Court is of opinion that the filing of such affidavit does not amount to a step—Mohan v. Bapuji, 11 Bom.L.R. 729, 3 I.C. 771. In a recent Patna case it has been held that where the decree-holder was ordered to file written processes as well as the identifier's affidavit as to service of notice under O. 21, r. 22, but he filed only the identifier's affidavit but not the written processes, and did not even give any explanation for his failure to do so, and accordingly the Court dismissed the execution case for default, held that the mere filing of the affidavit did not in the circumstances of this particular case amount to a step-in-aid of execution—Fateh Bahadur v. Parmeshwar, 6 Pat. 694, 9 P.L.T. 833, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 145 (146), 108 I.C. 430 (distinguishing 4 P.L.J. 521).

For time:—An application asking for time to enable the applicant to adduce evidence of due service of notice under O. 21, r. 22, C. P. Code is a step-in-aid of execution—Narasingh v. Kalicharan, 14 C.W.N. 486, 5 I.C. 147. So also, an application asking for extension of time for the purpose of ascertaining the whereabouts of the judgment-debtor—Bhairan v. Amina, 38 All. 690; or an application by the decree-holder for time to enable him to ascertain the share of the judgment-debtor in the property put up for sale—Vishvanath v. Narsu, 23 Bom.L.R. 107, A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 33. 60 IC. 916; or an application for time to obtain copies of extracts required by O. 21, r. 14.

C. P. Code—Seshadasacharya v. Bhimacharya, 37 Bom. 317, 17 I.C. 969; or an application asking for time to enable the applicant to obtain copies of decree and judgment, made after presenting a darkhast to execute a decree—Haridas v. Vithaldas, 36 Bom. 638; so also, an application by the mortgagor, who has obtained a redemption decree, for an extension of time for depositing the redemption money in Court—Sankara v. Thangamma, 45 Mad. 202, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 247, 70 I.C. 333. But an application for extension of time to enable the decree-holder to file an encumbrance certificate does not amount to a step-in-aid of execution because it does not ask the Court to take any step in furtherance of the execution of the decree—Ramaswami v. Veeranna, 53 M.L.J. 766, A I.R. 1928 Mad. 143, 106 I.C. 648; Katifi Mahomed v. Ghouse, 51 M.L.J. 489, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1197, 98 I.C. 163. In an earlier Madras case, however, such an application was considered as a step-in-aid of execution—Abdul Kadir v. Krishnan, 38 Mad. 695, 26 M.L.J. 433, 23 I.C. 533.

For attachment:—An application asking for attachment of the properties of the judgment-debtor is a step-in-aid of execution. Consequently, a batta application which states that batta is paid to attach the properties of the judgment-debtor is a step-in-aid—Govindaswami v. Govinda, 48 M.L.J. 678, 89 I.C. 894, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 880. An application by way of appeal to a Court of appeal to set aside an order of the trial Court raising an attachment ordered earlier is a step-in-aid of execution of the decree. When the appeal is dismissed, a subsequent application made within three years of the date of the final order of the appellate Court would be in time—Annamalai v. Valliammai, 72 I.A. 296, 49 C.W.N. 776, 47 Bom.L.R. 956, 1945 P.W.N. 462, A.I.R. 1945 P.C. 176, I.L.R. (1945) Kar. (P.C.) 393, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 224 (P.C.) overruling Annamalai v. Valliammai, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 485, (1943) 11 M.L.J. 95, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 398. The contrary view taken in Chandrabali v. Baidyanath, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 471 is no longer good law.

To issue sale proclamation—To deposit process fee:—An application to a Court to issue a sale proclamation is a step-in-aid of execution—Ambica Pershad Singh v. Sardhari Lal, 10 Cal. 851 (F.B.); Chowdhury Paroosh Ram Das v. Kali Paddo Banerjee, 17 Cal. 53; Manek Lal v. Nasia, 15 Bom. 405; Rajkishore v. Gurcharan, 9 I.C. 634; Vijiaraghavalu v. Srinivasalu, 28 Mad. 399. But the mere payment of stamps or process-fee unless accompanied by an application to issue the sale proclamation, will not keep the decree alive—Vellaya v. Jagannatha, 7 Mad. 307; Thakur Ram v. Katwaru, 22 All. 358; Sheo Prasad v. Indar, 30 All. 179 (180); Malukchand v. Bechar Natha, 25 Bom. 639 (F.B.); Trimbak v. Kashinath, 22 Bom 722; Toree Mohomed v. Md. Mabood, 9 Cal. 730 (731); Arunachalam v. Latchumanan, 47 M.L.J. 537, 82 I.C. 497, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 906; Bhawani v. Syid Iftikhar, 7 I.C. 759; Modan Mohan v. Ganga Charan, 17 C.L.J. 422, 13 I.C. 189 (dissenting from Radha Prasad v. Sundar Lal, 9 Cal. 644, 646); Peoples' Industrial Bank v. Mahesh Charan, 1 Luck. 153, A I R. 1926 Oudh 289, 93 I.C. 631. So also, the deposit of additional Court-fee for service of a notice under O. XXI. r. 22 of the Civil Procedure Code is not a step-in-aid of execution when the deposit was made after the application to the Court and the step taken by it, and where it did not appear that any application for execution or to take a step-in-aid was made at the time when the additional Court-fee was paid—Dwarkanath v. Anandrao, 20 Bom. 179. In Narendra v. Bhupendra, 23 Cal. 374 (387) and Bhupendra v. Rajendra, 18 I.C. 455, the deposit of process fee was itself treated as an application to take a step-in-aid of execution.

To correct sale proclamation:—An application made for the purpose of having the forms of the proclamation corrected, for having a date fixed for the settlement of the terms of proclamation under O. XXI, r. 66, and for issue of notice for a specified date is a step-in-aid of execution—Surajmal v. Sarjoog, 2 P.L.J. 5, 38 I.C. 540.

For sale:—An application made for bringing to sale the property which had been handed over by the judgment-debtor to his son, is a step-in-aid of execution—Mahna v. Ishar, 41 P.L.R. 577.

For transfer of decree:—An application to the Court which passed a decree, that it may be sent for execution to another Court, is a step-in-aid of execution—Collins v. Moula Baksh, 2 All. 284; Latchman v. Maddan, 6 Cal. 513; Rajbullubh v. Joy Krishen, 20 Cal. 29; Chundra Nath v. Gurroo, 22 Cal. 375; Suja v. Monohur, 24 Cal. 244; Rama Nath v. Gouri, 2 C.W.N. 415; Bhabani v. Pratap, 8 C.W.N. 575; Ramchandra v. Krishna Lal, 1 Pat. 328, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 301, 65 I.C. 332, 3 P.L.T. 298; Todar Mal v. Bhola, 35 All. 389; Sahodra v. Bhagwan, A.I.R. 1926 All. 473, 94 I.C. 482; Bishundeo v. Raghunath, 19 Pat. 354, 1940 P.W.N. 504, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 677; Sheonath v. Bindeshwari, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 518; even if no application for execution is pending—Ramnarayana v. Radha Gobinda, I.L.R. (1940) 2 Cal. 252, 71 C.L.J. 535. A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 557; Akshoy v. Nalini, 54 C.W.N. 815, A I.R. 1950 Cal. 493; Sheolal v. Ram, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 572, 1947 N.L.J. 399, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 197 or even if at the time of the application the judgment-debtor is dead and the decree-holder has knowledge of the same—Radhaballav v. Mahendra, 45 C.W.N. 342. But an application to transfer a decree to a Court which has no pecuniary jurisdiction to try the suit in which the decree was passed and therefore has no jurisdiction to execute the decree, is not a step-in-aid of execution—Amir Lal v. Murlidhar, 1 Pat. 651, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 188, 67 I.C. 538; Sita Ram v. Madho, I.L.R. (1939) All. 97, 1938 A.L.J. 1128, A.I.R. 1939 All. 57. The Allahabad High Court has held in a subsequent case that an application to transfer a decree to a Court having jurisdiction as to the decree amount but not having the pecuniary jurisdiction if the original valuation of the suit was taken into consideration, constitutes a step in aid of execution—Kashi v. Sajjiadi, I.L.R. (1940) All. 318, 1940 A L.J. 381, A.I.R. 1940 All. 331. An application for transmission of the decree to another Court for execution is a step-in-aid of execution, but the transmission of the decree is not by itself an execution of the decree—Atherton & Co. v. Habib, 1929 A.L.J. 553, 115 I.C. 865, A.I.R. 1929 All. 390 (392).

"The date from which a fresh start is given is the date upon which the judicial order is made on the application as a step in aid of execution." An order made on an application for transferring a decree for execution to another Court, is a step in aid of execution and gives a fresh start to the decree-holder under Art. 182 (5)—Bhagwant Sahay v. Ram Sukrit Ram, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 313, 162 I.C. 984, (1 Pat. 328 folld.)—Wort. J., who delivered the judgment, was personally of opinion that an application for transferring a decree from one Court to another is not in fact a step-in-aid of execution —An application for transfer of a decree amounts to a step-in-aid of execution. A decree-holder is not required to show his bonafide or to prove that the step-in-aid of execution was taken by him with a genuine intention to execute his decree—Mansa Ram v L. Badri Prasad, A I.R. 1936 All. 369, (35 All. 389, A.I.R. 1929 All. 625 fold.).

An application to a Court in British India to send a decree passed by it for execution to a Court in a Native State, there being reciprocal arrangement between that State and the Government of India whereby the decrees of the State shall be executed in British India and the decrees in the British Indian Courts shall be executed by the Courts in that State, is a step-in-aid of execution—Chinnasami v. Annamalai, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 574, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 242, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 309 (F.B.).

An application made to the Court which passed the decree for an order re-transferring the decree sent to another Court for execution is a step in aid of execution—Nagi v. Kotamma, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 117, (1947) 1 M.L J. 156. A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 431. But an application to the Court which passed the decree and transferred it for execution to another Court, to recall the decree from that Court and to send it back again to that

Court for execution is not a step-in-aid of execution—Maruti v. Nanjappa, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 539, 1942 N.L.J. 101, A.I.R. 1942 Nag. 63.

Simultaneous execution:—An application for simultaneous execution in different Courts and an order for the same without notice to the judgment-debtor is not null and void and serves as a step-in-aid of execution. The irregularity is only a mere defect in procedure—Venkatarami v. Rami, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 787, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 582.

For fixing date of sale:—A sale of immoveable property having been adjourned, an oral application for the fixing of a fresh date for the sale is an application to enforce the decree—Amar Singh v. Tika, 3 All. 139.

For leave to bid at sale:—An application by the decree-holder for permission to bid at the sale in execution of his decree is a step-in-aid of execution. The fact that the decree-holder is prepared to bid for the property and is anxious to purchase it brings the decree within nearer distance of complete execution and satisfaction—Dalal v. Umrao, 22 All. 399; Bansi v. Sikree Mal, 13 All. 211; Vinayakarao v. Vinayak Krishna, 21 Bom. 331; Troylokya v. Jyoti Praksh, 30 Cal. 761 (769); Safia Begam v. Raisunnissa, 8 O.C. 161. Contra—Raghunandan v. Kallydut, 23 Cal. 690 (692); Toree Mahomed v. Md. Mabood, 9 Cal. 730 (732); Moulvi Md. Shaffee v. Budri Mal, 88 P.R. 1884. In another Calcutta case, it has been laid down by Mookerjee, J. that it cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that an application for leave to bid at a sale must in every case or may not in any case amount to an aiding of the execution; if the decree-holder can show that the circumstances under which the application was made were such that the grant of leave did in fact aid, or would have aided the execution, the application would be treated as a step-in-aid—Hira Lal v. Dwija, 10 C.W.N. 209 (214, 216).

An application not merely asking for leave to bid but also praying that the amount he would bid might be set off against the decree amount due to him is a step-in-aid of execution—Nabadip v. Bepin, 12 C.W.N. 621; Vappu v. Sivakataksham, 53 Mad. 390, 58 M.L.J. 406, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 588 (589), 123 I.C. 577. An application for re-auction of the property (there being no bid at the first auction) with a prayer for permission to bid at the re-auction is a step-in-aid—Salig Ram v. Lala Rai Chand, 60 P.R. 1912, 14 I.C. 468.

To be put into possession—An application made by the decree-holder to be put into possession of the property which he had purchased at an auction held in execution of his decree, is a step-in-aid of execution—Moti Lal v. Makund, 19 All. 477; Kannan v. Avvulla, 50 Mad. 403, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 288, 99 I.C. 677; Lakshmanna v. Kannammal, 24 Mad. 185; Appathurai v. Panayappan, 57 M.L.J. 468, 122 I.C. 526; Babu Ram v. Peary Lal, 41 All. 479, 50 I.C. 143; Sadashiv v. Vithal, 35 Bom. 452, 11 I.C. 987; Sariatoolla v. Raj Kumar, 27 Cal. 709; Prem Krishna v. Juramoni, 13 C.W.N. 694, 1 I.C. 430; Annoda v. Somoruddi, 23 C.W.N. 926, 30 C.L.J. 135, 54 I.C. 839; Sankara v. Sundra, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 322, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 9, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 129 (F.B.) In 23 C.W.N. 926, Cuming J. held, to the contrary, that all steps in execution must be taken by the decree-holder as decree-holder and not as auction-purchaser, and therefore the application mentioned above, not being made by the decree-holder as such, was not a step. This opinion was also expressed by the Allahabad High Court in Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal, 31 All. 82 (F.B.) though the question was not definitely before the Full Bench. And this opinion is now confirmed by a recent decision of the same High Court—Mohsin v. Haider, 50 All. 670, 26 A.L.J. 498, 115 I.C. 869, A.I.R. 1928 All. 368 (369, 370) (following 31 All. 82 (F.B.) and dissenting from 19 All. 477 and 41 All. 479). See Suraj Dei v. Gulab Dei, A.I.R. 1955 All. 49 (F.B.), 1955 A.L.J. 79. The Patna High Court likewise holds that such an application is not a step, because since the decree-holder takes possession not as decree-holder but as an auction-purchaser, the question between the judgment-debtor and the purchaser cannot be said to be one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree —Kamal v. Kesho Prasad, 1 Pat. 701 (705), 4 P.L.T. 226, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 310, 69 I.C. 638; Triloke Nath v. Bansman, 2 Pat. 249, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 22, 5 P.L.T. 30, 72 I.C. 938.

To have witnesses summoned:—An application by a decree-holder, in the course of an investigation into an objection to the attachment of property, to have his witnesses summoned is a step-in-aid of execution—Kedar Nath v. Lakhi Kant, 21 C.W.N. 868, 40 I.C. 1005; Brojendra v. Dil Mahmud 22 C.W.N. 1027, 44 I.C. 604; Mohamed Siddiq v. Misri Lal, 19 A.L.J. 843, A.I.R. 1922 All. 432, 64 I.C. 524; Ali Muhammad Khan v. Gur Prashad, 5 All. 344; Sheo Sahay v. Jamuna, 4 Pat. 202, 88 I.C. 897, 6 P.L.T. 777, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 459; Surajmal v. Sarjoog, 38 I.C. 540, 2 P.L.J, 5; Shugan v. Ramjos, 5 I.C. 292. So also, the filing of a list of witnesses by the decree-holder in a proceeding to set aside the execution sale at the instance of the judgment-debtor, is a step-in-aid of execution—Jagdeo v. Bhubaneswari, 7 Pat. 708, 9 P.L.T. 817, 113 I.C. 582, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 612 (614).

For issue of a seal warrant:—An application made to the Calcutta Small Cause Court for the issue of a seal warrant is an application to take a step-in-aid of execution —Jugarnath v. Brojonath, 29 Cal. 580; Lachman Das v. Narain Das, 3 A.L.J. 815.

Application to proceed with the case:—On an objection being put in by the judgment-debtor to the execution, the Court ordered the parties to produce evidence in support of their respective cases, and in the course of those objection proceedings the decree-holder filed a list of witnesses and intimated to the Court that he was ready to proceed with the case. It was held that the decree-holder's action implied an application on his part to the Court to take the evidence which he was prepared to adduce and repel the objection taken by the judgment-debtor, and that in effect this should be taken to be an application to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution —Brojendra v. Dil Mahomed, 22 C.W.N. 1027, 44 I.C. 604.

To have objections dismissed:—An application to the Court executing a decree asking that certain objection to the execution of the decree be dismissed is a step-in-aid —Tamajunnissa v. Najju, 40 All. 668, 16 A.L.J. 704, 48 I.C. 38. An application by a decree-holder praying that the objections taken by the judgment-debtor to the sale of property in execution of the decree should be disallowed, is a step-in-aid of execution—Kewal Ram v. Khadim Hussain, 5 All. 276; Gobind v. Rung Lal, 21 Cal. 23.

For arrest of surety:—An application asking the Court to execute the entire decree by the arrest of the surety who has made himself liable for satisfaction of the decree, is an application to take a step-in-aid of execution of the decree as against the original judgment-debtor—Mahomed Hafiz v. Mahomed Ibrahim, 43 All. 152, 18 A.L.J. 988, 58 I.C. 794; Kishan v. Prem, I.L.R. (1940) Lah. 223, 42 P.L.R. 723, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 587; Suraj v. Firm Narayan Rao, I.L.R. (1939) All. 538, 1939 A.L.J. 415, A.I.R. 1939 All. 463.

For arrest of Judgment-debtor:—An application for execution of a decree by arrest of the judgment-debtor will operate to save limitation is respect of a subsequent application in which the prayer was first for the arrest of the judgment-debtor and secondly for the arrest of two persons who had become sureties for the due satisfaction of the decree by the judgment-debtor—Badruddin v. Muhammad Hafiz, 44 All. 743, A.I.R. 1922 All. 491, 77 I.C. 129. But an application for the arrest of the judgment-debtor residing outside India does not provide a step-in-execution—Ahmad v. British Medical Stores, 189 I.C. 738, A.I.R. 1940 Pesh. 27.

For re-arrest of judgment-debtor:—Where an arrested judgment-debtor was released from jail on his applying to be declared an insolvent, an application by the decree-holder for re-arrest of the judgment-debtor is a step-in-aid of execution—Suraj v. Mahabir, 33 All. 279.

For drawing up final decree:—An application in a partition suit for preparation of a formal decree on stamp paper supplied by the decree-holder is a step-in-aid of execution as the granting of the application will aid execution—Ram v. Maharaj, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 337. But the Patna High Court opines that an application praying the Court to assess and receive the deficit Court-fees or to prepare a final decree in a suit for mesne profits, when the Court fixes the amount of mesne profits, but defers the drawing up of the decree until payment of the necessary Court-fees by the plaintiff, can not be considered to be a step-in-aid of execution. The reason given is that step-in-execution implies that there is already a decree which can be executed and in furtherance of which the step is taken—Mahomed v. Mahabir, 21 Pat. 366, 1942 P.W.N. 139, A.I R. 1942 Pat. 410. An application for a final decree made by mistake after a final decree had already been passed is not step-in-aid of execution—The Corporation of Calcutta v. Majoor, 70 C.L.J. 320, 43 C.W.N. 800, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 488. So an application for a final decree after a compromise decree has been passed in a mortgage suit can not be called a step-in-aid of execution. The application must be regarded as a proceeding in the suit itself though entirely superfluous because the relief claimed had already been got—Bajya v. Tarachand, 1947 N.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 308, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 683. A contrary view has been taken in Raghunath v. Subedar, 14 Luck. 453, 1939 O.W.N. 219, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 155 on the ground that the ultimate object of such an application is to hasten the realisation of the decree debt.

For final decree for sale:—An application by the holder of a preliminary decree in a mortgage suit, for a final decree for sale, is a step-in-aid of execution—Gulappa v. Eravan, 46 Bom. 269, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 118, 63 I.C. 844.

Compromise:—A compromise to have the rest of the decree executed on a future date is an application for taking a step-in-aid of execution—Bindeswari v. Awadh Behari, 6 I.C. 366.

Application for substituted service:—An application for substituted service is a step-in-aid of execution—Amina v. Banarsi, 36 All. 439.

For continuance of sale:—An application by the decree-holder for continuance of the sale in order to secure the attendance of more bidders is a step-in-aid of execution —Desireddy Yellamandar v. Sitakolli Chinna, 16 M.L.T. 103, 1 L.W. 573, 25 I. C. 58.

716. Step, what is not:—An application by a decree-holder asking for the release of a portion of the property from attachment, for postponement of the sale and for the striking of the case off the file, the attachment of the remainder of the property being maintained, is not an application to take some step-in-aid of execution because it does not 'aid' or advance the execution proceedings—Abdul Hossein v. Fazilun, 20 Cal. 255; Fakir v. Ghulam, 1 All. 580.

When a person goes to serve notice on the judgment-debtor as mentioned in old cl. 6, the mere fact that the decree-holder accompanied the peon to identify the judgment-debtor is not itself a step-in-aid of execution—Jugalkishore v. Chintamoni, 18 C.W.N. 1288, 27 I.C. 225; nor does the filing by the peon of an affidavit of service of the notice on the judgment-debtor amount to a step-in-aid of execution—Annapurna v. Dhirendra, 24 C.W.N. 55, 30 C.L.J. 518, 54 I.C. 1. But see page 911, ante.

Where a decree has been lost or destroyed, an application to the Court to reconstruct the decree is not a step, because it is needless for the decree-holder to have the decree restored before he applies for execution. Limitation will run from the date when the judgment was pronounced—Raj Gir v. Ishwardhari, 11 C.L.J. 243, 5 I.C. 660.

An application by a decree-holder, who has himself purchased the judgment-debtor's property, to receive the amount of poundage fee from him is not a step-in-aid of execution—Aghore Kali v. Prosonno, 22 Cal. 827; Anando v. Harasundari, 23 Cal. 196.

An application by the decree-holder for return of the decree to him for the purpose of enabling him to execute his decree subsequently is not a step-Mahalinga v. Narayana, 6 M.L.J. 23; Aghore Kali v. Prosonno, 22 Cal. 827; Rajaram v. Banaji, 22 Bom. 311.

An application made by both the parties to postpone the hearing of a pending execution with a view to arrive at a compromise is not a step-in-aid of execution, because such an application is not made in furthering the execution of a decree, but on the contrary it is a step which if successful would avoid the necessity for execution. —Vishnu v. Narasimha, 25 Bom.L.R. 490, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 461, 73 I.C. 1011.

An application by the decree-holder to be allowed to set off the purchase-money of the property purchased at auction by the decree-holder himself, against the decree, instead of paying it into Court, is not a step-in-aid of execution—Anando v. Harasundari, 23 Cal. 196. Contra—Safia Begam v. Raisunnissa, 8 O.C. 161; Nabadwip v. Bepin, 12 C.W.N. 621.

An application by the decree-holder for sanctioning an agreement to give time to the judgment-debtor for payment, and not for execution of the decree, is not a step-in-aid of execution—Barrow v. Javerchund, 19 Mad. 67.

An application by the decree-holder for a list of the properties attached in execution of his decree is not a step-in-aid of execution—Ranga Chariar v. Balaramasami, 21 Mad. 400.

An application by a decree-holder opposing the application of the judgment-debtors to sell the property in a certain order, is not a step-in-aid of execution—Troylokya v. Jyoti Prokash, 30 Cal. 761 (771).

An application by the decree-holder objecting to the judgment-debtor's application to record satisfaction of the decree is not a step-in-aid of execution—Kuppu Swami v. Rajagopala, 45 Mad. 466 (470), 42 M.L.J. 303, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 79, 70 I.C. 324; Krishna v. Seetharama, 50 Mad. 49, 98 I.C. 456, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1178 (1180). So also, an application by the decree-holder for modifying or cancelling an order recording satisfaction of the decree and to revive the decree, which according to the record stands satisfied can not be regarded as a step-in-execution of that decree, which, unless and until it is revived, has no judicial existence—Moiden v. Subramanya, 1939 M.W.N. 996, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 892.

Where an application for execution by an assignee of a decree from an adult decree-holder who transferred the same on behalf of himself as well as his own minor brothers, was dismissed in toto, as leave of the Court was not obtained for the assignment, such application, being made by a person not entitled to make it, was not a step-Kailasa v. Ramanuja, 6 L.W. 19, 39 I.C. 950.

An application which asks for a relief beyond and outside the decree altogether is not a step-in-aid of execution—Pandarinath v. Lila Chand, 13 Bom. 237; Bando v. Narasinha, 37 Bom. 42, 14 Bom.L.R. 861, 17 I.C. 210; Nathabhai v. Pranjivan, 34 Bom. 189.

An application for an injunction restraining the defendant to transfer a portion of the mortgaged property after a final mortgage-decree is not a step-in-aid of execution as the transfer is not an obstacle in the way of the decree-holder's remedy to execute the decree—Risal v. Lal, I.L.R. (1939) All. 728, 1939 A.L.J. 746, A.I.R. 1939 All. 483.

An application asking for time is not a step-in-aid of execution—Kartick v. Juggernath, 27 Cal. 285 (288). But under certain circumstances it may amount to a step-in-aid. See page 911, ante.

In the absence of an application to proceed with the sale, the mere filing of an affidavit by the decree-holder stating that there are no incumbrances over the property does not amount to a step-in-aid of execution—Chiranji v. Ganga Sahai, 22 A.L.J. 410. A.I.R. 1924 All. 811, 78 I.C. 631.

When the judgment-debtor has applied for insolvency, the resistance of the decree-holder to the judgment-debtor's application will not amount to the taking of a step-in-aid of execution—Langtu v. Baijnath, 28 All. 387 (390). So also, an application by the decree-holder to get his debtor adjudicated insolvent is not a step-in-aid of execution —Walchand v. Yeswant, 51 Bom. L.R. 608, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 379.

Application for copy of decree:—An application by a decree-holder for a copy of the decree is not a step-in-aid of execution—Gopilandhu v. Domburu, 11 Mad. 336; Ganga Pershad v. Debi Sundari Dabia, 11 Cal. 227; Rajkumar Banerjee v. Raj Lakhi Debi, 12 Cal. 441; Muthia Veettil v. Irakkat Karnavan, 39 M.L.J. 572, 60 I.C. 117.

To bring decree into conformity with judgment:—An application to amend a decree or to bring a decree into conformity with the judgment cannot be treated as a step-in-aid of execution—Kallu v. Fahiman, 13 All. 124; Daya Kishen v. Nanhi Begam, 20 All. 304; Ashanulla v. Dakkhini, 27 All. 575. But when such amendment is made by the Court, it will give a fresh starting point of limitation for the execution of the decree under clause 4.

For stay of execution:—An application by the decree-holder for stay of the execution proceedings is not a step-in-aid of execution—Fakir v. Ghulam, 1 All. 580.

For postponement of sale:—An application by the decree-holder for postponement of sale in execution on the ground that he had allowed time to the judgment-debtor is not a step-in-aid of execution—Mainath Kuari v. Debi Bakhsh Rai, 3 All. 757. An application by the decree-holder for postponement of the sale not with a view to enable him to bring the properties to sale more advantageously to him, but on other grounds, is not a step-in-aid of execution—Troilokya v. Jyoti Prokash, 30 Cal. 761. But a joint application made by the decree-holder and judgment-debtor stating that certain payment has been made by the judgment-debtor and that the decree-holder has agreed to give time to the judgment-debtor for the payment of the balance, and praying that the sale may be postponed and time granted, constitutes a step-in-aid of execution —Sitla v. Sheo Prosad, 4 All. 60.

Certification of payment:—A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has decided that a certification by the decree-holder of a payment made by the judgment-debtor is not an application to the Court to take some step-in-aid of execution; consequently such certification of itself cannot afford a fresh starting point of limitation under Art. 182, clause (5)—Amar Krishna v. Jagat Bandhu, 59 Cal. 760 (F.B.), 35 C.W.N. 1192 (1201), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 719, 134 I.C. 922, overruling Jatindra v. Gagan, 46 Cal. 22 and Tarini v. Bishtoo Lal, 12 Cal. 608. But the Bombay and Allahabad High Courts are of opinion that an application by the decree-holder to certify certain payments made by the judgment-debtor is a step-in-aid of execution, provided the payment has actually been made—Bacharaj v. Babaji, 38 Bom. 47, 21 I.C. 407; Lecky v. Bank of Upper India, 33 All. 529; Chote Singh v. Iswari, 32 All. 257, 7 A.L.J. 251; Muhammad Husain v. Ram Sarup, 9 All. 9. The Bombay High Court has however held in a subsequent case that an application made to the Court to record a part payment or adjustment of the decretal debt under Or. 21, r. 2, C. P. Code is not a step-in-aid of execution as such an application is a mere certificate and is no application at all under Art. 181 or Art. 182—Atmaram v. Malloppa, I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 11, 43 Bom.L.R. 880, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 7. See also Narayana v. Kunhi Raman, 20 L.W. 190, 82 I.C. 743, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 131. As regards the effect of uncertified payment under sec. 20, see Note 205, ante. In a case before the Judicial Committee, their Lordships did not decide (as it was unnecessary in the case to decide) whether a certification of payment amounted to a step-in-aid—Prokas Singh v. Allahabad Bank, 3 Luck. 684 (P.C.), 33 C.W.N. 267 (274), 114 I.C. 581, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 19. A certificate by the decree-holder certifying payment of the decretal amount by the judgment-debtor is not an application within the meaning of Art. 182—Maheshwar v. Dineshwari, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 386, 163 I.C. 915; Ganjsoo v. Hari, 21 Pat. 481, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 7.

An application by the decree-holder asking Court to record part payment, is not an application to the Court to take a step-in-aid of execution, and consequently such an application does not save limitation—President, Union Board, Pentapadu v. Thirumala Venkata Srinivasacharyulu, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 118.

It was held in a Calcutta case that an application made by the judgment-debtor and signed by the decree-holder, to have certain payments, which were made out of Court, certified, and praying that time be allowed to pay the balance of the decree, the attachment in the meantime continuing was a step-in-aid of execution—Wasi Imam v. Poonit Singh, 20 Cal. 696. This decision must also be deemed to have been overruled by the Full Bench case of Amar Krishna v. Jagat Bandhu, 59 Cal. 760 cited above.

To take out money:—According to the Calcutta and Patna High Courts and the Punjab Chief Court, an application made by a judgment-creditor to take out of Court certain monies deposited by the judgment-debtor, or to withdraw a money awarded to him upon rateable distribution, or to take out the proceeds of an execution sale of the judgment-debtor's property, is not a step-in-aid of execution. The reason is, that so long as the money or the fund out of which payment is sought has not been realised in execution, an application for payment of the money is an application to take a step-in-aid of execution. But when the moneys have been realised and are lying in Court, an application for payment of the money is an application for merely a ministerial order, and not to take a step-in-aid of execution—Hem Chunder Chowdhury v. Brojo Sundari Devi, 8 Cal. 89; Fazal Imam v. Metta Singh, 10 Cal. 549; Gunga Pershad Bhoomik v. Devi Sundari Dabia, 11 Cal. 227; Sadananda v. Kali Sankar, 10 C.W.N. 28; Kasu v. Atar Singh, 103 P.R. 1908, 207 P.L.R. 1908 (F.B.); Mulchand v. Kour Singh, 27 P.R. 1888; Amolakchand v. Hoshihar, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 138; Hira Lal v. Mohna, I.L.R. (1938) Lah. 586, 40 P.L.R. 494, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 678; Noorul v. Nohar, 1941 P.W.N. 559, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 428. But according to the other High Courts, it is a step—Venkatarayulu v. Narasimha, 2 Mad. 174; Koormayya v. Krishnamma, 17 Mad. 165; Paran Singh v. Jawahir Singh, 6 All. 366; Kerala Verma v. Shankaram, 16 Mad. 452; Bapuchand v. Mugutrao, 22 Bom. 340; Sujan Singh v. Hira Singh, 12 All. 399; Mulchand v. Jamanbi, 27 Bom.L.R. 671, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 443, 89 I.C. 228; Latafat v. Kalyan, I.L.R. (1938) All. 342, 1938 A.L.J. 117, A.I.R. 1938 All. 210; Sankara v. Sundra, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 322, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 9, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 129 (F.B.).

The Madras High Court has made another kind of distinction, viz., that if the monies lying in Court are the proceeds of an execution sale, the application by the decree-holder for payment of the money is a step-in-aid of execution; but if the monies lying in Court are not the proceeds of a sale in execution of the decree, but have been deposited by the judgment-debtor (or his agent) for payment to the decree-holder, the decree-holder's application for payment is not a step-in-aid of execution—Balaguruswami,

v. Guruswami, 48 M.L.J. 506, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 703, 87 I.C. 989; Appaswami v. Jotha Naicken, 22 Mad. 448. See, however, Chettiar v. Chettiar, A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 665. The Bombay High Court has expressed the opinion that there is no difference between money paid into Court in satisfaction of a decree and money lying in Court which is the proceeds of a sale held in execution of the decree—Mulchand v. Jamanbi, supra.

For confirmation of sale:—As the Court is bound to confirm a sale after thirty days, in the event of no application under O. 21, r. 90, C. P. C. being made, an application to confirm the sale cannot be regarded as one in aid of execution even though it is made by the decree-holder as purchaser—Umesh v. Shib Narain, 31 Cal. 1011 (dissenting from Gobind v. Rung Lal, 21 Cal. 23 and Kewal Ram v. Khadim, 5 All. 576); Panchanan v. Nrisinha, 11 C.L.J. 356, 6 I.C. 264; Triloke Nath v. Bansman, 2 Pat. 249, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 22, 5 P.L.T. 30, 72 I.C. 938.

For recovery of costs:—An application for realisation of costs incidental to the execution proceedings is not an application for the execution of the original decree or any part of it—Sahu Nandlal v. Sahu Dharam, 48 All. 377, A.I.R. 1926 All. 440, 94 I.C. 961. A decree was passed directing the execution of a muchalka by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff, and for costs. An application was made for enforcement of the decree by execution of the muchalka. This application was made more than 3 years after the last application for the same relief, and less than three years after the last application for realisation of the costs of certain execution proceedings. Held that the last application for realisation of costs was for incidental costs in execution, and was not an application for execution of the decree or any part of it. Consequently, it could not save limitation so far as the relief by way of execution of the muchalka was concerned—Appu Rao v. Ramakrishna, 24 Mad. 672.

717. Clause 6:—The clause is new. The old clause 6 stood as follows:—

6. (Where the notice next hereinafter mentioned has been issued) the date of issue of notice to the person against whom execution is applied for to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him, when the issue of such a notice is required by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908.

718. Restitution:—The old clause 6 has been replaced by an entirely new clause, and this new clause is intended to set at rest the conflict of decisions as to whether an application for restitution falls under Art. 181 or Art. 182.

An application made to obtain restitution under a decree in accordance with section 583 of the old C. P. Code (1882) was held to be a proceeding in execution of that decree, and governed by this Article—Venkayya v. Raghavacharlu, 20 Mad. 448; Nand Lal v. Sita Ram, 8 All. 545. In Karupam v. Sadasivam, 10 Mad. 66, Gangadhar v. Lachma, 11 C.L.J. 541, 6 I.C. 125, and Harish Chandra v. Chandra Mohan, 28 Cal. 113, however, such an application was held to fall under Article 181. So also, the question as to whether this Article applies to an application under the new C. P. Code (section 144) has been the subject of conflicting decisions. In the following cases it has been held that the words "an application for execution of a decree" occuring in this Article mean an application to enforce the decree, and in case of applications for restitution on reversal of a decree, the legal obligation arising from the appellate decree itself is sought to be enforced, and not any independent obligation. Consequently an application for restitution is an application for execution of a decree and is governed by Art. 182, and not by Article 181—Unnamalai v. Mathan, 33 M.L.J. 413, 42 I.C. 530; Somasundaram v. Chokkalinga, 40 Mad. 780 (782); Kurgodigowda v. Ningangowda, 41 Bom. 625 (630), 19 Bom.L.R. 638, 41 I.C. 238; Hamidalli v. Ahmedalli, 45 Bom. 1137, 23 Bom.L.R. 480, A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 67, 62 I.C. 233; Chandika Singh v. Bithal Das, 7 O.W.N. 1153, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 51 (52); Kochu v. Mariayan, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-Co. 40. But the other High Courts have drawn a distinction between sec. 583 of the old C. P. Code and sec. 144 of the new Code, and are of opinion that an application for restitution under sec. 583 of the old Code was an application for execution within the meaning of Art. 182 but under the new Code of 1908, an application for restitution, unless such is expressly ordered by the Appellate Court, is not an application for execution, but is a miscellaneous application in the nature of an application for execution and falls under Article 181—Ram Singh v. Sham Parshad, 15 P.L.R. 1918, 44 I.C. 301, 61 P.R. 1918; Chandra Singh v. Bishen Singh, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 166, 76 I.C. 501, 5 Lah.L.J. 389; Kripa Sindhu v. Mahanta Balbhadra, 47 I.C. 47, 3 P.L.J. 367 (369, 371); Balmukund v. Basanta Kumari, 3 Pat. 371 (387) (F.B.), A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 1. 78 I.C. 200 (overruling Basant Kumari v. Balmukund, 2 Pat. 277); Saroj Bhushan v. Debendra, 59 Cal. 337, 35 C.W.N. 1294 (1296); Fazlar Rahaman v. Abdul Samad, 92 I.C. 960, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 981; Hanifunnissa v. Chunni, 19 A.L.J. 549, 63 I.C. 184 (185); Asutosh v. Upendra, 21 C.W.N. 564 (569), 38 I.C. 17; Hari Mohan v. Parameshwar, 56 Cal. 61, 32 C.W.N. 971 (972, 982), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 646. See also Jiwa Ram v. Nand Ram, 44 All. 407; Brij Lal v. Damodar Das, 44 All. 555; Ram Singh v. Dhyan Singh, I.L.R. (1945) Lah. 1, 47 P.L.R. 201, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 190 (F.B); Mela Ram v. Dharam Chand, A.I.R. 1958 Punj. 132 (F.B.).

According to the new clause 6 of this Article, an application for restitution (in respect of money) is treated as an application for execution; but it should be noticed that this clause applies only where restitution is applied for in pursuance of a decree obtained in a separate suit brought for the purpose of obtaining the restitution and not where restitution is applied for in consequence of the reversal of the original decree on appeal or review. The scope of this clause is limited. for sub-section (2) of sec. 144, C. P. Code expressly bars a separate suit for restitution, and allows it only where the restitution could not be obtained by an application under sec. 144.

The period of limitation runs from the date of the decree passed in the suit for restitution; if there is an appeal, time runs from the date of the order of the final Appellate Court confirming the decree of the first Court, and not from the date of the decree of the first Court. Cf. Fazlar Rahman v. Abdul Samad, 92 I.C. 960, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 981. The starting point of limitation for an application for restitution under this Article is the date of the decree in a suit under Or. 21, r. 63, C. P. Code or if there be an appeal the date of the final decree in the appeal and not the date of the order on the claim petition—Venkataraju v. Suryonarayana, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 411, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 791, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 248; or when the appellate Court, while reversing the decree. remands the case with a direction to apportion the liability of the properties claimed in the suit, the starting point is not from the date of the decree of the appellate Court but from the date when the liability is fixed—Chengal v. Mohammal, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 143, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 133. The claim for restitution must be made within three-years from the date on which the right to make the claim arises upon reversal of the decree in question. But when that is not done and the rights of the parties have to be decided afresh in the suit, the cause of action would arise on the date when a decree is passed on remand upholding the claim of the party seeking restitution—Gampat v. Navrittal, 41 Bom.L.R. 1204, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 30.

Where an application is made to obtain restitution as the necessary result of the order of His Majesty in Council, the application is to be taken as one to enforce an order of His Majesty in Council, and falls under Art. 183—Sohan v. Baijnath, 50 All. 767, 26 A.L.J. 587, 112 I.C. 876 A.I.R. 1928 All. 293 (294); Brij Lal v. Damodar, 44 All. 555, 66 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1922 All. 238.

719. Clause 7:—Instalment decrees:—When a decree is made payable by instalments, with the further provision that in default of payment of any instalment the whole of the money shall become due and be recoverable by execution, the decree falls under this clause, because the whole amount must be held to have been directed to be paid on a 'certain date,' viz., the date of such default; and limitation for execution begins to run when the first default is made—Mon Mohun v. Durga Churn, 15 Cal. 502 (505); Bir Narain v. Darpa Narain, 20 Cal. 74; Judhistir v. Nobin, 13 Cal. 73 (75); Zahur Khan v. Bhaktawar, 7 All. 327 (330); Dulsook v. Chugon, 2 Bom. 356; Shankar v. Jalpa, 16 All. 371 (372); Ugranath v. Laganmani, 4 All. 83 (85); Raichand v. Dhando, 42 Bom. 728; Chattar v. Amir, 38 All. 204 (207); Allah Baksh v. Bhawani, 100 P.R. 1902; Sk. Elahy Bux v. Nawal Lal, 4 P.L.J. 159 (162), 50 I.C. 364. But a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has recently laid down that where a decree (a) directed payment of the decretal amount by instalments on particular dates and (b) also authorised the decree holder in the case of a default in the payment of two successive instalments to realise the balance of the decretal amount at once, held (a) that if the application for execution was an application under the first part of the decree to recover certain instalments already overdue, Article 182, cl. 7 applied and limitation ran in respect of each instalment from the date on which it became payable; (b) but if the application for execution was an application under the second part of the decree to recover the entire balance of the decretal amount at once upon default, this clause could not apply, because at the date of the decree it was not certain whether and when the default of two consecutive payments would occur; it was therefore impossible to say that the decree had fixed a certain date for the payment of the whole amount in a lump sum. Such a date was not at all certain (the word 'certain' means a date which must certainly occur). Consequently, Article 181 (the general Article) applied, and time ran from the date of the later of the last two successive instalments unpaid—Joti Prasad v. Srichand, 51 All. 237 (F.B.), 26 A.L.J. 966, A.I.R. 1928 All. 629 (634, 639), 112 I.C. 73. The same view has been taken in Mata Din v. Sita Ram, 17 Luck. 1, 1941 O.W.N. 1079 A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 33 and in Peoples Bank v. Aijaz, 17 Luck. 449, 1941 O.W.N. 1313, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 219. See also Sheo Lal v. Devidas, A.I.R. 1952 All. 900 (F.B.).

Where a decree for money is made payable in instalments and in default of payment of any instalment the whole of the decree becomes payable immediately it is open to the decree-holder to apply, even after three years from the date of the default, to recover such of the instalments as have become due within three years of the date of his application—Bomatu Bhadu v. Govardhandas Nanabhai, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 268, 38 Bom.L.R. 492, 163 I.C. 937; Vehérbhai v. Javer Soma, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 17, 60 Bom. 62, 37 Bom.L.R. 942, 160 I.C. 527.

Where payments were made towards an instalment decree (which contained the usual default clause) but such payments were not certified, the Court would assume that no payments were made, and so the period of limitation ran from the date when the first instalment was due—Chattar Singh v. Amir Singh, 38 All. 204 (207); Mithu Lal v. Khairati, 12 All. 569 (570). Where an instalment decree directed that in case of failure of payment of an instalment, the decree-holder was to wait for one year, and that if during that time the debtor did not pay the amount of the instalment the decree-holder would be entitled to recover the whole amount, held that the time for the execution of the decree ran from the expiry of one year after the date of default—Hira Chand v. Abu Lala, 46 Bom. 761, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 95, 67 I.C. 153, 24 Bom.L.R. 269.

On 30th September 1916, plaintiff obtained a decree under which certain properties were to be left in possession of the defendant, who was to pay to the plaintiff annually a sum of Rs. 2,000 in the mouth of Kason, or in default of payment of the same (Rs. 2,000 annually) the said properties would be made over to the plaintiff. On 8th October 1924, the plaintiff decree-holder filed an application for execution of the decree against the defendant judgment-debtor in default of payment of two instalments of Rs. 2,000 each, for 1923 and 1924 respectively, and claimed, as the judgment debtor failed to pay according to the decree, that the Court might direct the delivery of the lands by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder. It was pleaded that the execution was time-barred. Held that upon a true construction of the decree, each instalment as it became due was a claim originating under the decree from the date when such claim arose and that clause 7 applied; that on the occasion of a default in each payment, the right of the decree-holder to have the property made over to him arose and therefore the claim to the lands was not time-barred; that time did not necessarily run from the date of the earliest default, if any occurred before 1923—Maung Sin v. Ma Tok, 5 Rang. 422 (P.C.), 32 C.W.N. 1, 53 M.L.J. 22, 29 Bom.L.R. 1014, A.I.R, 1927 P.C. 146, 101 I.C. 736; Mst. Parmeshri v. Mst. Atti, A.I.R. 1958 Punj. 79.

Waiver:—On the application of the principle of Article 75 it has been held that even though an instalment decree provides that upon default of payment of any one instalment, the whole amount shall become due, it is open to the decree-holder to waive the default by accepting an overdue instalment (instead of putting into force the decree for the whole amount at once upon the default), and to apply for execution in respect of a subsequent instalment on a fresh default, and this application will not be barred on the ground that more than three years have elapsed after the first default—Ram Culpo v. Ram Chunder, 14 Cal. 352 (355); Mon Mohan v. Durga Charan, 15 Cal. 502 (505); Kashiram v. Pandu, 27 Bom. 1 (13) (F.B.) (virtually overruling 2 Bom. 356); Hurri Pershad v. Nasib Singh, 21 Cal. 542 (546); Jalim Chand v. Yusufali, 54 Cal. 143, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1012, 86 I.C. 1051; Rajeswar v. Hari, 19 Mad. 162. In an Allahabad case it has been held that since in this clause no mention is made of waiver as in Art. 75, the principle of waiver would not apply to instalment decrees. A decree-holder is therefore always bound to take out execution within 3 years from the first default—Ugrah Nath v. Laganmani, 4 All. 83 (85).

Where a decree payable by instalments provides that the decree-holder shall have discretion or option, on default being made in payment of any one instalment, to realise the full amount of the decree with interest without waiting for any future instalment, the period of limitation does not necessarily run from the date of the first default—Janki v. Ghulam Ali, 5 All. 201 (206). This clause applies only where the decree directs any payment to be made on a certain date. If, however, the decree provides that the decree-holder shall have discretion to realise the whole decretal money when the default is made, the date of default cannot be taken as being the date directed by the decree. In such a case, the decree-holder is not bound to execute his decree for the whole amount remaining due as soon as the first default is made, but he may waive the default by receiving the overdue instalment and execute the decree for the subsequent instalments as they become due. Time runs from the due date of each instalment—Lachmi v. Sarju, 39 All. 230 (233), 15 A.L.J. 102, 38 I.C. 634; Nilmadhub v. Ramsodoy, 9 Cal. 857 (860); Appayya v. Papayya, 3 Mad. 256; Allah Baksh v. Bhawani, 131 P.L.R. 1902, 100 P.R. 1902; Kishen Chand v. Bhai Gopal, 6 P.R. 1913, 172 P.L.R. 1912. 16 I.C. 842; Shanker v. Jalpa, 16 All. 371 (374). In such a case, the decree-holder's omission to apply for execution of the whole decree within three years of the first default, will only affect his right to recover the instalment in respect of which the default was made and to recover the whole of the decretal amount at once, but will not affect his right to recover subsequent instalments which have fallen due within three years before the application for execution—Asmatulla v. Kally Churn, 7 Cal. 56 (60); Allah Baksh v. Bhawani, supra; Kishen Chand v. Bhai Gopal Singh, supra.

Where a compromise decree directs payment of the decretal amount by instalments on particular dates and provides that in case the defendant fails to pay any instalment at the stipulated period then the entire decretal amount might be realised by execution, an application made more than three years after the first default but relating only to instaments which fell due within three years of the application is within time." ....the correct interpretation to be placed upon the decree is that primarily it gives the decree-holders a decree for money for which the judgment-debtor is found liable but allows the judgment-debtor the indulgence of paying the amount of instalments. The provision for payment by instalments is thus a provision for the benefit of the judgment-debtor. But it makes this indulgence subject to the condition that in case the judgment-debtor commits a default he would forfeit the benefit of the indulgence, and the decree-holders will have the power to enforce payment of the entire decretal amount. This provision is therefore for the benefit of the decree-holders. If the decree-holders do not choose to enforce within limitation, this provision which was inserted for their benefit, they may be debarred from enforcing it afterwards, but they ought not to be prevented from recovering the future instalments, the claim in respect of which is made within time—Ajodhia Prasad v. Bansi Lal and others, 11 Luck. 276, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 465, 1935 O.W.N. 837, 156 I.C. 764 (F.B.). The decree-holder cannot be compelled to take advantage of the default clause on pain of losing further instalments. There is no reason why the judgment-debtor seeking to take advantage of his own default should be allowed to require the decree-holder to prove condonation of the default. If the decree-holder says he did condone the default, then in the absence of evidence or conduct by the decree-holder proving the contrary, his statement should be accepted. Hence where the decree-holder has failed to take advantage of the default clause, his right to recover instalments due to him within three years of the application for execution is not barred—Lekhraj v. Khubchand, I.L.R. (1940) Kar. 385, A.I.R. 1939 Sind. 49.

The question whether the decree-holder may waive the benefit of the provision or must execute his decree within 3 years from the due date of the first instalment of which default is made in payment, is a question purely of construction to be decided on the terms of the whole decree in each case—Judhistir v. Nobin, 13 Cal. 73 (75); Nirash v. Baldeo, 25 Pat. 664. An instalment decree is to be construed as much as possible in favour of the decree-holder, and unless the decree clearly leaves the decree-holder no option on the happening of a default but to execute the decree once and for all for the whole amount under it, the decree-holder may execute it on the happening of the first, second or any subsequent default, and limitation will run against him in respect of each instalment separately from the time when such instalment may become due—Shankar v. Jalpa, 16 All. 371 (373); Lachmi Narain v. Sarju, 39 Cal. 230 (233); Allah Baksh v. Bhawani, 100 P.R. 1902, 131 P.L.R. 1902. The Calcutta High Court has held in a recent Full Bench case that the decree-holder has the option to take advantage of this provision or not to do so. When there is no evidence that the option has been exercised it must be deemed to have been waived. An application by the decree-holder for execution relating to subsequent instalments, as such, is maintainable and is governed by this clause. The application would be in time if it relates only to instalments which fell due within three years of the date of application, although made more than three years after the first default—Rangalal v. Shyamlal, I.L.R. (1946) 2 Cal. 552, 50 C.W.N. 735, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 500 (F.B.).

In order to constitute waiver, there must be payment and acceptance of an overdue instalment. The mere silence on the part of the decree-holder, or his abstinence from suing after there has been a default, does not amount to a waiver on his part —Hurri Pershad v. Nasib Singh, 21 Cal. 542 (547); Bir Narain v. Darpa Narain, 20 Cal. 74 (78); Kashiram v. Pandu, 27 Bom. 1 (F.B.); Chattar Singh v. Amir Singh, 38 All. 204 (207). And this is so, whether the decree provides that on non-payment of an instalment the whole amount shall become due, or it provides that on non-payment of an instalment the whole amount may be sued for—Hurri Pershad v. Nasib Singh, supra. There must be proof of payment of the overdue instalment. Where the decree-holder alleged payment of an instalment by the judgment-debtor, which the latter denied, and the payment has not been certified, held that there was no evidence of payment, and consequently no evidence of waiver; and therefore limitation ran from the date of the first default—Mitthu Lal v. Khairati, 12 All. 569 (571). But see Zahur v. Bakhtawar, 7 All. 327 (330); Rajeswara v. Hari, 19 Mad. 162, and Hurri Prasad v. Nasib Singh, 21 Cal. 542 (549) where it was held that the mere fact that the payment was not certified was not a ground for holding that the payment could not be recognized by the Court in evidence of waiver.

So long as there is no waiver, the decree-holder is entitled to execute the whole decree (i.e., for the whole amount remaining due) as soon as a default is made; but if the decree-holder waives a default by receiving an overdue instalment, he cannot, upon a subsequent default, put in force the decree as a whole, to recover the remaining instalments that are due all at once; he can execute the decree only for those instalments which are due. Time in respect of each such instalment runs from the due date of that instalment—Buddhu Lal v. Rekhab Das, 11 All. 482 (485); Nilmadhab v. Ramsodoy, 9 Cal. 857 (860); Radha Prasad v. Bhagwan, 5 All 289 (292). In other words, the acceptance of the overdue instalments will amount to a waiver of the decree-holder's right to enforce the penalty which the decree allowed to him in the event of failure to pay the instalments—Radha Prasad v. Bhagwan, supra.

In Ramprasad v. Jadunandan, A.I.R. 1934 All. 534, 149 I.C. 598 there was a compromise decree for instalments with a clause that the decree-holder would be entitled to realise the total amount in case of default. It was held that the decree-holder had two distinct rights under this decree: (1) to receive instalments as and when they fall due, and (2) to enforce the payment of all the instalments that might remain unpaid in the event of two successive instalments remaining unpaid. That this right had become time-barred as the application to execute that right had first accrued beyond the period of three years from the date of the application, but that the bar of the second right did not necessarily bar the first right and that the decree-holder could recover such instalments as had fallen due by the date of the application for execution under Art. 182 (7). This case was considered and followed in Hariram v. Himmanlal, 1935 A.L.J. 1291, A.I.R. 1935 All. 259.

If the decree-holder wishes to execute the entire decree, owing to default in the payment of an instalment, he must bring his application within three years of the date of the first default. If he brings his application to execute the whole decree more than three years after the date of the first default, he will not be allowed, in order to save his application from limitation, to fall back upon the instalment arrangement and claim to recover the instalments that fell due within three years before the date of the application—Bir Narain v. Darpa Narain, 20 Cal. 74 (78).

So also, where the holder of an instalment decree has once applied for execution of the entire decree, upon a default being made in the payment of an instalment, and has thus elected to put an end to the instalment arrangement, he cannot subsequently fall back on the provisions of the decree relating to payment by instalments for the purpose of saving limitation. The creditor has two rights viz., to recover the amount by instalment or to realise the entire amount. These two rights are inconsistent and the credtor cannot exercise both of them; corresponding to the rights are the two obligations of the debtor and on exercise of the either right, the obligation of the debtor becomes fixed—Hanmant v. Gururao, I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 55, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 36; Lakshman v. Parvatibai, 44 Bom.L.R. 903; A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 63; Ram Kishen v. Gopal, A.I.R. 1950 Hyderabad 14. Thus, where upon the judgment-debtor's failure in the payment of two instalments in 1900 the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree for the whole amount on the 15th May 1901, but the application having been dismissed for default of prosecution, he again applied on the 1st July 1904 for execution, for recovery of such instalments as remained unpaid, held that the application was barred by limitation, as it was no longer open to the decree-holder to adhere to the instalment arrangement—Bhagwan Das v. Janki, 28 All. 249 (251).

In a suit on a pronote, a compromise petition for instalment decree was filed in which there was a provision that default being made in the payment of one kist the whole amount would become due; and subsequently an instalment decree was passed in which the amount was decreed as per instalments but the condition as to the whole amount being due in default of payment of one kist was not stated. It was held that the decree and the compromise petition might be taken together and that the terms of the compromise should be taken as incorporated into the decree, so that the decree must be construed as one providing that the whole amount of the decree would become due on the default in payment of one kist—Jayamuddin v. Jamiruddin, 21 C.W.N. 835, 37 I.C. 916.

Certain date:—Where a decree directed that the amount decreed should be paid on the expiration of 5 years, the period of limitation for execution ran from the day on which the period of 5 years from the date of the decree expired; and therefore an application made within 8 years from the date of the decree was within time—Ram Lal v. Natha Singh, 45 P.R. 1882.

If in a decree a certain sum is ordered to be paid monthly or annually, it means that the amounts decreed are to be paid monthly or yearly from the date of decree, i.e., on the date of each month or year corresponding to the date of the decree—Lakshmibai v. Madhavrav, 12 Bom. 65; see also Md. Kamaruddin v. Piari Lal, 13 P.R. 1892. Although a decree may not in express terms fix a specified date, yet if it can be gathered from the decree that payments are directed to be made on dates or at periods which are sufficiently indicated by the terms of the decree, the requirements of this clause are satisfied—Keveri v. Vankamma, 14 Mad. 396; Gopal v. Mt. Kauran, A.I.R. 1947 Pesh 38. In the Act of 1871 the words in this clause were "specified date"; these words have been replaced by the words "certain date" in the Acts of 1877 and 1908. The substtution of the word "certain" in place of 'specified' has widened the scope of its meaning. It is no longer necessary to mention by the year, month and day the exact date in the decree. It simply requires a 'certain' date. The words 'certain' is used in contra-distinction to 'uncertain.' It obviously means a date which though not expressly mentioned or ascertained must yet be a date which must certainly occur—Joti Prasad v. Srichand, 51 All. 237 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1928 All. 629 (634), 112 I.C. 73. Thus, where a decree directed the defendant to pay maintenance to the plaintiff at a certain rate per year from the date of the plaint which was 18th July 1876, untill her death, it was held that the proper construction of the decree was that payment should be made on the 18th July 1877, 18th July 1878, and so on in every subsequent year on the corresponding date; and so the decree was one which directed payment to be made on a certain date—Aitamma v. *Narain*a, 30 Mad. 504. The cases of Subhanatha v. Lakshmi Ammal, 7 Mad. 80 and Yusuf v. Sirdar, 7 Mad. 84 decided under the Act of 1871 are on longer good law.

Where a money decree directs that the plaintiff should not be entitled to take out execution of the decree until after a certain event, e.g., until the disposal of the petition for insolvency made by the defendants, held that clause 7 cannot apply, because there is no direction in the decree that any payment is to be made at the date of the disposal of the insolvency petition or on any other date—Ashrafuddin, v. Bepin Behari, 30 Cal. 407 (412).

A decree which directs the sale of the mortgaged property in default of payment of the mortgage money within the date fixed in the decree is not a decree 'directing payment of the amount to be made on a certain date' within the meaning of this clause, and an application for sale of the property upon non-payment of the money within the date fixed is not an application to 'enforce payment of the money.' This clause does not apply and the application falls under Article 181. If, however, there is also a personal decree against the mortgagor, and the application is to enforce the decree as such, limitation will run, under clause 1, from the date of the decree, if payment is enforceable under the decree from the date thereof; or, under clause 7, from a future date, if payment can be enforced only on or after such future date fixed in the decree—Rungiah Goundan v. Nanjappa, 26 Mad. 780 (784). See 16 All 237 cited in Note 693 under Article 181.

If a decree passed by the trial Court in 1911 directed payment to be made in three instalments on March 15, 1912, March 15, 1913 and March 15, 1914, and the decree was finally confirmed by the appellate Court in October, 1914, held that the date for payment must be taken to be 15-3-1915, 15-3-16, and 15-3-1917, as the effect of confirmation by the appellate Court was to extend the time—Darubhai v. Behar, 49 Bom. 305, 27 Bom. L. R. 96, 86 I.C. 894, A.I.R. 1915 Bom. 270.

An application by the Board of Commissioners for Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras, made to the District Judge for recovery of contributions under sec. 70 (2) of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act is governed by Art. 182. And the right to apply accures only after the expiry of three months from the date of the demand made by the Board and the amount becomes only payable then—President of the Board of Commissioners for H.R.E. Madras v. Shirur Mutt, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 217, 68 M.L.J. 200, 1935 M.W.N. 142, 41 L.W. 264, 156 I.C. 747.

An application to execute a decree for rent made in a suit between landlord and tenant to whom the provisions of the Bihar Tenancy Act apply, is an application falling under Art. 6 of Sch. III of the Act, notwithstanding that the decree is an instalment decree. This clause has no application to such a decree—Kedar v. Parsidh-singh, 24 Pat. 222, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 398.

Such date:—The words "such date" in the clause refer to the date on which a default is made. On the occasion of each default the decree-holder would be entitled to enforce his claim—Ainul v. Newaban, 1939 O.W.N. 768, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh. 281; in other words, the date on which each instalment falls due—Ramji v. Asghar, 209 I.C. 424. Under this clause, the time from which the limitation of three years begins to run where the application is to enforce any payment which the decree or order directs to be made at a certain date is "such date". Where, therefore, under a surety bond under sec. 55, C.P. Code, the surety undertakes to pay the entire decretal amount if the judgment-debtor does not file an insolvency petition within a month or does not prosecute it, and the insolvency petition filed by the judgment-debtor is dismissed for non-deposit of certain charges, the limitation for execution application against the surety begins to run from the date of the dismissal of the execution petition—Lakshminarasayya v. Appalaswami, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 20, 1950 M.W.N. 57, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 756. Where a decree directs that the plantiff is entitled to receive every year from the defendant half the share of the Iskel of Patwari Giri, the right to apply accrues to the decree holder each time when the amount becomes payable to the defendant by the Revenue Department and not from the date when the amount is actually received by the defendant—Bapurao v. Hanumanthrao, A.I.R. 1950 Hyderabad 48.

720. Explanation I—Separate rights and liabilities;—Where a decree is passed separately against several persons, an application for execution against one of them is inoperative to keep the decree alive against the others—Ghulam Muhiuddin v. Damber Singh, 40 All. 206 (209). A decree which specified different sums as being realisable from three distinct tenures must be construed as three distinct decrees, and a prior application in respect of the sums decreed, so far as one of the tenancies was concerned, could not operate to save limitation for the sum due under the other tenancies —Dhirendra v. Nischintapore Co., 36 I.C. 398 (Cal.). Where a decree was passed originally in favour of one person, and was afterwards owned by more persons than one in severalty by virtue of assignment from the original single decree-holder, it cannot be said that the decree has been "passed severally in favour of more persons than one" within the meaning of the first sentence of this Explanation. The rights of all the several decree-holders in this case will be treated as joint, and an application for execution made by one of them will keep the decree alive in favour of all—Venkata Reddayya v. Yera Kayya, 45 Mad. 35, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 129, 69 I.C. 277.

Where a decree is obtained against a number of persons and the decree requires each judgment-debtor to pay his own share only of the decretal amount and costs, it must be considered that there are separate decrees against them individually. The rule of limitation is applicable separately against each judgment-debtor, so that time begins to run as regards him individually irrespective of the period of limitation as regards other judgment-debtors—Umrao Singh v. Hafiz Mad., A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 949.

721. Joint rights and liabilities:—Although the C. P. Code does not allow one of several decree-holders to apply for execution of a joint decree, yet an application by one of such decree-holders for execution of the decree in respect of so much of the relief granted to all as he considers appertains to him individually, may keep alive the decree, especially when such application has been accepted by the Court and an order has been made for execution after service of notice to the parties, and the judgment-debtor has not raised any objection thereto—Kanakaprava v. Dhirendra, 32 C.W.N. 1107 (1109), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 861; Ponnampilath v. Ponnampilath, 3 Mad. 79. According to the Allahabad High Court, however, a decree passed jointly in favour of more persons than one can be executed by one or more of such persons as a whole, for the benefit of all, and not partially to the extent of the interest of each individual decree-holder. An application for such partial execution is not in accordance with law, and cannot keep the decree in force—Collector v. Surjan, 4 All. 72; Ram Autra v. Ajudhia, 1 All. 231; Banarsi v. Maharani, 5 All. 27. But where an application for such part execution is made, and no objection is taken to execution in this form, it would save limitation as regards the whole decree in favour of all the decree-holders—Nanda v. Raghunandan, 7 All. 282.

A decree for partition is a decree in favour of both the plaintiff and the defendant; consequently an application by the plaintiff (one co-sharer) to execute it will keep it alive in respect of a subsequent application by the defendant (another co-sharer) for execution—Sheikh Khoorshed v. Nubee, 3 Cal 551; Mohun Chunder v. Mohesh Chunder, 9 Cal. 568; Vasudeva v. Vithal Sastry, 43 M.L.J. 379, 70 I.C. 296, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 456; Ramasami v. Narayana, 42 M.L.J. 94. A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 327, 65 I.C. 990; this is so even where the decree partly grants separate possession over certain lands and partly grants joint possession over other lands—Babu Lal v. Kanhai, A.I.R. 1952 All. 303.

A father obtained a decree declaring him entitled to a share of certain property on partition, but he never executed it. Subsequently his son obtained a decree declaring him entitled to a certain share of what the father should obtain under the former decree, and applied to execute his father's decree, giving notice to his father, who refused to join in the application. Subsequently the father applied to execute his decree,

It was held that although the effect of the son's decree was not to make him and his father joint decree-holders in respect of the father's decree, the son was a transferee, by operation of law, of part of his father's decree, and was entitled to make the application he had made, which was consequently an application in accordance with law and kept the father's decree alive—Ramaswami v. Anda Pillai, 14 Mad. 252 (reviewing Ramaswami v. Anda Pillai, 13 Mad. 347).

In the case of a joint and several decree an application for execution made against any one of the judgment-debtors is a step-in-aid of execution against all—Kamal v. Birjinder, 23 Pat L.T. 734, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 285.

Where a decree awards mesne profits against A and B jointly and costs against A, B, and C jointly, an application to execute the decree for mesne profits against A and B keeps alive the right to execute the decree for costs against C—Subramanya v. Alagappa, 30 Mad. 268, followed in Puttayya v. Puttanayya, 47 M.L.J. 608, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 152, 84 I.C. 897.

Where a decree is jointly passed against all the defendants in one matter, and severally against different defendants with respect to other matters, the first para of this Explanation should apply to that portion of the decree which is passed severally, and the second para of the Explanation will apply to that portion of the decree which is passed jointly. In such a case, the execution of the joint portion of the decree against one of the joint judgment-debtors will not keep the decree alive so as to save from limitation an application for execution of the several portion of the decree against a judgment-debtor who was not a party to the prevous execution proceeding. Because, while the decree-holder was executing the joint portion of the decree against one of the joint judgment-debtors, there was nothing to prevent him from executing the other portion of the decree against the several judgment-debtors who were liable thereunder —Sahu Nandlal v. Sahu Dharam, 48 All. 377, 24 A.L.J. 465, 94 I.C. 961, A.I.R. 1926 All. 440. But the Madras High Court holds that a decree is a joint decree if any portion of the relief given in the decree is against the defendants jointly, even though some other reliefs may be given against each defendant separately—Pattanaya v. Pattayya, 50 M.L.J. 215, 92 I.C. 782, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 453 (following 30 Mad. 268); Vyravan v. Rayalu, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 298, 64 M.L.W. 824, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 844. The Patna High Court has taken the same view in Sarju Prasad v. Deoki, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 147 and in Sarju v. Baldeo, 25 Pat. 95, 27 Pat.L.T. 205, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 371 and has held that in such a case the decree must be regarded as a joint decree even though the decree provides for separate possession of some properties in a suit for partition. The Calcutta High Court has also taken the same view in Mahomed Ishak v. Karunamoy, I.L.R. (1946) 1 Cal. 184, 50 C.W.N. 155, 81 C.L.J. 207, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 266, and has held that a decree is a joint decree within the meaning of this Explanation if any one of the reliefs given in the decree is against the defendants jointly, even though some other reliefs may be given against the defendants separately. See also, Charu v. Hrishikesh, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 547; Dhulesaheb v. The Municipal Borough, 51 Bom. L.R. 252, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 260 where it is held that the test to be applied is whether the separate relief given against a particular defendant is really a part of the joint decree passed against all the defendants. If it is so, then the execution of the joint decree will keep alive the separate relief also; but if it is in substance a separate decree that principle will not apply.

The Explanation lays down that where a decree has been passed jointly against more persons than one, the application if made against any one or more of them shall take effect as against them all. But this Explanation does not say that an order made on such an application is to be binding against all. Therefore, where a decree was passed against 4 persons, and an application for execution was made against two of them after the period of limitation, but nevertheless the Court ordered execution, the order was not binding on the other two judgment-debtors who were not parties to the execution proceedings, and consequently they are not precluded from showing that the previous application was time-barred—Harendra Lal v. Sham Lal, 27 Cal. 210 (215, 216).

Where in a mortgage suit against the members of a joint Hindu family, it was found that a portion only of the mortgage debt was incurred for legal necessity, and in respect of such portion the usual mortgage decree was passed against all the defendants, and simultaneously a simple money decree for the balance was passed against the two executants of the bond in suit, held that the decree-holder's application for execution of the decree for sale would keep alive the simple decree passed against two of the defendants—Ram Brichh Rai v. Deo Tewari, 44 All. 166, 65 I.C. 358, A.I.R. 1922 All. 388. Where in a suit on a mortgage, a decree for sale in respect of the mortgaged property in respect of certain amount is passed against all the defendants and a personal money-decree for a different sum is passed against some of the defendants, the application for execution of the money portion of the decree must be filed within three years from the date of the decree as the decree was not a joint decree—Sri Hanumanjee Idol v. Surajdeo, 23 Pat. 150, 1944 P.W.N. 132, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 188. Where in a mortgage suit a mortgage decree is passed only against the Hindu father's share in the family property and subsequently a money decree is passed against the son to the extent of his share in the said property, there is no joint decree against the father and the son within the meaning of the Explanation and the final order in an execution application against the son would not save the bar of limitation against the father—Vyravan v. Rayalu, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 298, 64 M.L.W. 824, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 844.

A decree was passed against some major persons and two minors. Application was at first made to execute the decree against the minors. The decree as against the minors was set aside on objection being taken by them. The decree-holders thereupon applied to execute the decree against the major judgment-debtors. Held that the prior application against the minor only took effect against all the judgment-debtors, and helped to keep the decree alive, as the liability of the minors and of the majors was a joint liability—Lalta Prasad v. Suraj Kumar, 31 All. 309.

The latter portion of the 2nd para of the Explanation I lays down that if the judgment-creditor does something which keeps alive a joint decree as against one of the joint judgment-debtors, the decree is to be regarded as alive as against all the joint judgment-debtors, and if it is alive, it is of course capable of execution. But where one of the joint judgment-debtors has prevented the decree-holder by fraud or force from executing his decree against that judgment-debtor, he is no doubt entitled to claim extension of time against the person, but not against the other judgment-debtor who has not prevented him by force or fraud. Explanation I does not apply to this case, because the judgment-creditor has done nothing to keep alive the decree but relies upon something (i.e., fraud or force) which one of his judgment-debtors has been doing—Abdul Khader v. Ahammad, 38 Mad. 419 (422). On the same principle it has been held that suspension of the running of limitation against one of the judgment-debtors owing to the supervening of insolvency so far as he is concerned, cannot keep the remedy of the decree-holder alive against the other judgment-debtors, because there is no bar to the decree-holder executing the decree against the other judgment-debtors during the pendency of the insolvency proceedings against one of them—Bijoy v. Nageshwar, 1938 P.W.N. 397, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 395; Sivalinga v. Srinivasa, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 653, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 583, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 346; Seethayya v. Venkanna, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 299, 1951 M.W.N. 557, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 1010.

Where the rights and liabilities are separate and several an application by one party will not enure to the benefit of the other. So where under a decree in a suit for redemption of mortgage the liability of the defendant is to surrender possession of the property on receipt of the mortgage money and that of the plaintiff to pay the costs of the defendant, the liability cannot be said to be a joint liability. Hence an execution application by the defendant for costs does not enure for the benefit of the plaintiff—Ouseph v. Varki, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-Co. 78.

An application for execution against one of the representatives of a sole judgment-debtor saves limitation against all the representatives because the liability of all the representatives is a joint one—Krishnaji Janardan v. Murarav, 12 Bom. 48; Ram Anuj v. Hinghku Lal, 3 All. 517; Arusupalli v. Marikuruthu, 22 M.L.J. 169, 13 I.C. 313; Akshoy v. Nalini, 54 C.W.N. 815. 1950 Cal. 493. Similarly an application for execution by some only of the decree-holder's legal representatives, though not purporting to be on behalf of the other legal representatives also, is sufficient to save limitation as regards all—Vasudevapatta v. Narayanapanigrahi, 1916 M.W.N. 112, 31 I.C. 853. The term "representatives" in Explanation 1 of this Article does not apply to transferees pendente lite—Gendmal v. Laxman, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 852, A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 86.

Execution against surety:—Where after the passing of a decree a party has stood as surety for the due performance of the decree, it may be executed against the surety in the same manner as it may be executed against the defendant, under sec-253, C. P. Code, 1882 (sec. 145 of the present Code). But that does not imply that the surety is jointly liable with the principal debtor, or that the decree is "jointly passed" against the principal debtor and surety within the meaning of this Explanation. Unless the decree is expressly passed against both of them jointly, no joint liability will be deduced by combining the surety bond with the provisions of sec. 253 of the C. P. Code, and an application for execution against one will not keep the decree alive against the other. In other words, the time for an application for execution against the surety runs from the date of the decree, and not from the date of any previous application made against the judgment-debtor—Narayan v. Timmaya, 31 Bom. 50, 8 Bom.L.R. 807; Yusuf Ali v. Sayad Amin, 47 Bom. 778 25 Bom.L.R. 810, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 366, 73 I.C. 233; Raghunandan v. Kirtyanand, 8 Pat. 310, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 595 (596), 120 I.C. 309; Mahomed Cassim v. Jamila,, 6 Rang. 334, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 282 (283), 111 I.C. 479. Where the sureties had not made themselves liable for any part of their decretal amount, but had only made themselves personally liable for a certain amount, as distinct from the decree, the sureties were not co-judgment-debtors with the principal debtors and an execution, taken against them does not save limitation against the principal debtors—Birendra v. Tulsi Charan, 85 I.C. 657, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 267.

On the other hand, the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that if a party stands surety for the payment of a decretal amount, the effect is that the decree may be said to have been passed jointly against the original judgment-dobtor and his surety. Therefore, an application for execution against a judgment-debtor or against any one of the sureties affords a starting point for a fresh period of limitation in respect of a subsequent application, even though this latter application is made against a different surety—Badr-ud-din v. Muhammad Hafiz, 44 All. 743 (744), 20 A.L.J. 726, A.I.R. 1922 All. 481, 77 I.C. 129, affirming Muhammad Hafiz v. Muhammad Ibrahim, 43 All. 152. Where a decree-holder, after executing the decree against the principal judgment-debtor and getting part satisfaction, files an application against the surety more than three years after the date of the decree, the case is governed by Art. 182 (5), Limitation Act. Explanation I to the Article does not apply to the case. The prior execution against the principal judgment-debtor saves limitation against the surety also—Gangaraju v. Subbayya, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 188, 68 M.L.J. 119, 1935 M.W.N. 90, 41 L.W. 148. 58 Mad. 276, 155 I.C. 864. The same view has been taken in Bhikulal v. Govind, 1951 N.L.J. 288, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 440. The Bombay High Court has also taken the same view and has held that a decree executed against a judgment-debtor alone can be executed against the surety even though no execution was taken against him within three years from the date of the decree. The reason given is that the last sentence in this Explanation must clearly be read with the earlier part of Paragraph 2 regarding more than one judgment-debtors or persons against whom an order is passed, the expression "passed jointly against more persons than one" being in contradiction to the expression "distinguishing portions of the subject-matter as payable or deliverable by each." The first parts of the two paragraphs of this Explanation provide a clarification of or an exception to the general principle of clause (5) of this article, and the second parts of the said paragraphs must be regarded, as amounting to provisos re-affirming that general principle in cases other than those to which the said exception would apply. Therefore the scope of the Explanation can not be used in determining the scope of clause (5)—Vyasrao v. Ramchandra, 47 Bom.L.R. 434, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 489. This decision has been followed in Bhawani v. Naranibhai, 49 Bom.L.R. 554, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 13. Where an execution of a decree for possession is stayed on the judgment-debtor furnishing security for mesne profits during the pendency of the appeal against the decree, the application for realisation of mesne profits against the surety after the dismissal of the appeal is governed by this Article and not by Art. 181—Nanu v. Amar, 40 P.L.R. 473, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 590. The Oudh Chief Court, however, does not admit that the decree can be said to be jointly passed against the judgment-debtor and the surety, because when the decree was, passed the surety did not appear on the scene. Art. 182 does not apply, but Art. 181, and the starting point of limitation for execution against the surety is not date of the decree, because time cannot run against the surety before he signed the surety-bond and undertook the liability. Time would run from the date of the last application for execution against the judgment-debtor—Shyam Lal v. Nasiruddin, 8 Luck. 427, 10 O.W.N. 571, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 209 (212, 213), 143 I.C. 808.

Where a surety was liable for the principal debt only and not for interest and costs, an application for execution against the surety cannot operate to keep the decree alive in respect of a subsequent application for execution against the principal debtor to recover the interest and costs, because there was not joint liability of the surety with the principal debtor for interest and costs—Kusaji v. Vinayak, 23 Bom. 478.

Explanation II—Proper Court—See Note 710 ante.

183. To enforce a judgment, decree or order of any Court established by Royal Charter in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, or an Order of the Supreme Court.	Twelve years.	When a present right to enforce the judgment, decree or order accrues to some person capable of releasing the right: Provided that when the judgment, decree or order has been revived, or some part of the principal money secured on such money has been paid, or some acknowledgment of the right thereto has been given in writing signed by the person liable to pay such principal or interest, or his agent, to the person entitled thereto or his agent, the twelve years shall be computed from the date of such revivor, payment or acknowledgment or the latest of such revivors, payments or acknowledgments, as the case may be.

This Article corresponds to Art. 180 of Act XV of 1877.

The words "Supreme Court" have been substituted for the words "His Majesty in Council" by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950 issued under the Constitution of India.

721A. Application:—The filling of a tabular statement in accordance with O. 21 r. 11 before the Master, who is the officer of the High Court designated to receive applications, amounts to an application to enforce the decree of the High Court under this Article—Atarmoni v. Bepin, 55 Cal. 1341, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 193 (195), 115 I.C. 83.

722. Order of the Privy Council:—Although an order of His Majesty in Council may confirm a decree of the Court below, that order is the paramount decision in the suit, and any application to enforce it is, in point of law, an application to execute the order and not the decree which it confirms. Article 183 applies to it, and time runs from the date of such order—Luchman Pershad v. Kishun Pershad, 8 Cal. 218; Kamini Debi v. Aghore Nath, 14 C.W.N. 357, 11 C.L.J. 91, 4 I.C. 402; Fatteh Narain v. Chundrabati, 20 Cal. 551; Narsingh Das v. Narain Das, 2 All. 763. If the preliminary mortgage-decree on which the final decree is based is affirmed by the Privy Council on appeal from the preliminary decree the effect of the order of the Privy Council is not to destroy but to affirm the final decree passed during the pendency of the appeal, and the time within which the final decree could be enforced is twelve years from the date of the order of the Privy Council by reason of this article—Bholanath v. Jogendra, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 477, 69 C.L.J. 355, 43 C.W.N. 401, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 601.

But an order of the Privy Council dismissing an appeal for want of prosecution is not an order which judicially deals with the matter in suit; therefore it is not an order contemplated by this Article. The only decree capable of execution is the High Court's appellate decree, and not the order of the Privy Council, and consequently Article 182, and not Article 183, applies—Abdul Majid v. Jawahir, 36 All. 350 (353) (P.C.), 18 C.W.N. 963, 12 A.L.J. 624, 27 M.L.J. 17, 16 Bom.L.R. 395, 23 I.C. 649, A.I.R. 1914 P.C. 66 (reversing 33 All. 154).

An application for execution of a final decree prepared by the District Judge in pursuance of an Order in Council passed on an appeal against a preliminary decree in a mortgage suit is governed by this Article and not by Article 182, since it is really one to enforce an Order of the Privy Council and not the decree of the District Judge. The preparation of the final decree by the District Judge is purely a ministerial act to enable the order of His Majesty in Council to be enforced—Bhagwanta v. Dewan Zamir Ahmad, 3 Pat. 596 (605), 5 P.L.T. 451, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 576, 78 I.C. 766.

Whether the order passed by His Majesty in Council be right or wrong, the Indian Courts are not competent to go behind that order, but are bound to give effect to that order, and to punctually observe, obey and carry the same into execution—Somer Singh v. Prem Dei, 3 Pat. 327 (332), A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 40, 5 P.L.T. 21, 79 I.C. 794.

722A. "Enforce":—Where a High Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction passed a decree for sale under sec. 88 (old) of the Transfer of Property Act, an application under sec. 89 of that Act for an order absolute for sale of the mortgaged property was held to be an application to "enforce" the preliminary decree. "To enforce" in this article is wider than "to execute" a decree in Art. 182 and should be interpreted as equivalent to "to give full effect to"—Jaggannath v. Chimanlal, I.L.R. (1945) 1 Cal. 102, 84 C.W.N. 645, A.I.R. 1949 Cal. 113; Ram Krishna v. Ratan Chand, A.I.R. 1956 All. 32; Shamrao v. Asaram, A.I.R. 1956 Nag. 129. The word "enforce" is not limited to realisation by execution, but may have a wider meaning, e.g., the passing of an order absolute for sale—Munna Lal v. Sarat, 42 Cal. 776 (779) (P.C.) (affirming Amlook v. Sarat, 38 Cal. 913). This decision was given with reference to the law as it stood before the passing of the C. P. Code, 1908. After the passing of this new Code, the application by a mortgagee decree-holder under O. 34, r. 5 is an application for a final decree for sale (as distinguished from an application for an order absolute for sale), and it is doubtful whether the above ruling would apply under the new Code. It has been held by the Calcutta High Court in Sisir v. Srish, 43 C.W.N. 537 that this article does not apply to an application for final decree in a mortgage suit as it is not one to enforce the preliminary decree. The same view has been taken in Jesinglal v. Gangadhar, I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 273, 40 Bom.L.R. 507, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 354.

An application to enforce an order absolute for sale passed by the High Courts must be made within 12 years from the date of passing the order—Apurba Krishna v. Rash Behary, 47 Cal. 746, 60 I.C. 880. But in a recent case the Calcutta High Court has held that what is barred after 12 years under this Article is an application when that application is to enforce the High Court's judgment or decree. Where there is no such application, this Article has no operation—Nirmala v. Sudhir Kumar, 96 C.L.J. 31, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 484. See also Lala Baijnath v. Nursingdas, 61 C.W.N. 494, A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 1.

An application for a personal decree under O. 34, r. 6, C. P. Code, is an application for a new decree, and is not an application to enforce a judgment or decree within the meaning of this Article—Pell v. Gregory, 52 Cal. 828 (F.B.), 29 C.W.N. 678, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 834, 89 I.C. 1.

An application under sec. 144, C.P. Code for restoration to possession of property which had been taken possession of by the other party in execution of a decree of the High Court, which had since been reversed by the Privy Council, is an application to enforce an order of the Privy Council, and is governed by this Article—Brij Lal v. Damodar, 44 All. 555, 20 A.L.J. 456, 66 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1922 All. 238; Sohan v. Baijnath 50 All. 767, 26 A.L.J. 587, A.I.R. 1928 All. 293 (294), 112 I.C. 876. The Calcutta High Court has held that such an application cannot be regarded as one for enforce- ment of the final judgment or decree within the meaning of this article, but is one for relief which is consequential upon the appellate Court's decree of reversal. Therefore this article has no application to such an application and Art. 181 governs such an application—Birendra v. Surendra, I.L.R. (1940) 1 Cal. 486, 44 C.W.N. 438, 71 C.L.J. 127, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 260. Where the High Court directed that the appellant should pay costs to the respondent who thereupon realised the costs, but the Privy Council on appeal directed the parties to pay their own costs, an application by the appellant under sec. 144, C. P. Code to recover the costs realised by the respondent is an application to enforce the order of the Privy Council and falls under Article 183—Madhusudan v. Brij Lal, 61 I.C. 806 (All.).

Since an application to enforce a decree is virtually an application for execution of a decree, a minor is entitled to claim the benefit of sec. 6—Kurgodigouda v. Ningangouda, 41 Bom. 625 (629), 19 Bom.L.R. 638, 41 I.C. 238.

The right to enforce a decree prima facie accrues from the date of judgment. The time for preparation of decree including assessment of costs cannot be deducted in computing the period for an application for execution—Raghunath & Co. v. Ram Gopal, I.L.R. (1939) Lah. 319, 41 P.L.R. 105, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 110.

A person who has obtained a decree from the Privy Council for costs against the father since dead can enforce that decree against the sons and can proceed (under sec. 53, C. P. Code) at once against the property in the hands of the sons who are liable under the Hindu law for the payment of the debts of their deceased father. Such an application is governed by Art. 183. Art. 120 cannot apply as the proceeding is not a suit but an application—Chandra Chur v. Shyam Kumari, 11 Pat. 445, 13 P.L.T. 719, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 261 (264), 139 I.C. 397.

An application for transmission of the order in Council under Or. 45, r. 15, C. P. Code is one for enforcing the Order. The transmission order is a sine qua non for execution proceedings—Partap v. Harkishan, 199 I.C. 46.

723. Decree of the High Court:—This Article applies to a judgment of the High Court in its insolvency jurisdiction, because such a judgment is one passed by the High Court in the exercise of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, and not by way of special or extraordinary action—In the matter of Condas Narrondas, 13 Bom. 520 (533) (P.C.). So also an order passed by the High Court under sec. 186, Companies Act, is an order passed in the exercise of its Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction and is governed by this Article and not by Art. 182—Banaras Bank Ltd. v. Jyoti, A.I.R. 1951 All. 362. Judged by the test laid down by Lord Hobhouse in In the matter of Candas Narrondas, supra, the jurisdiction conferred on the Madras High Court by the Banking Companies Act, 1949, is part of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction within the meaning of this Article. That jurisdiction has to be exercised in the ordinary course of law without any special step being necessary to assume it—Munia Servai v. Hanuman Bank Ltd., A.I.R. 1958 Mad. 418. But though by reason of sec. 164, Companies Act the District Judge has the same powers and the same jurisdiction as the High Court, yet the District Judge does not become a High Court for the purposes of this article. Hence to a payment order passed by the District Judge under powers conferred upon by sec. 164, Companies Act, this article has no application and the only article applicable is Art. 182—Panna Lal v. Jain Bank, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 368.

A decree does not become a decree of the High Court merely because it has been transferred to that Court for execution and may have to be enforced in the same manner as a decree of the High Court—per Trevelyan, J. in Jogemaya v. Thackomani, 24 Cal. 473 (491). The rule of limitation depends upon the status of the Court which passed the decree, and not upon the status of the Court executing it, and so if a decree of a mofussil Court is transferred to the High Court for execution, the limitation for execution is 3 years and not 12 years—Tincowrie v. Debendra, 17 Cal. 491. So also, a decree passed by the High Court on appeal from a mofussil Court is not a decree of the High Court within the meaning of this Article—Kisto Kinkar v. Burrodacaunt, 10 B.L.R. 101 (P.C.), 17 W.R. 192; Ram Charan v. Lakhi Kant, 7 B.L.R. 704 (F.B.), 16 W.R. 1.

Under sec. 15 of the Arbitration Act (1899), an award filed in Court is enforceable as if it were a decree of that Court and for the purposes of execution is governed by the period of limitation prescribed for execution of decree of that Court. Consequently, an award filed in the Chartered High Court under that section is governed by Article 183 of the Limitation Act—Belvedere Jute Mills Ld. v. Hardwarimull & Co., 31 C.W.N. 1097, 104 I.C. 808, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 853.

If a decree passed by the late Chief Court of Lower Burma is executed by the Rangoon High Court which has succeeded it, the decree does not become a decree of the High Court. Consequently, Art. 182 applies, and not Art. 183. Sec. 26 of the Burma Courts Act (IX of 1922) simply lays down that the decree passed by the Chief Court "shall be deemed for the purpose of execution to have been passed or made by the High Court." The object of this section is simply and solely to provide for the execution of decrees of the Chief Court by the High Court; it is not intended that a decree of the Chief Court should come under a different law of limitation simply because it is executed by the High Court. It does not say that the decree shall be deemed to be a decree of the High Court for all purposes—Allibhai v. Md. Noormahomed, 6 Rang. 566, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 317, 114 I.C. 674.

724. Revivor:—The word "revivor" is a term of art, which the Legislature ought to have defined but has not defined. It is a term borrowed from English law, and in the absence of a definition in this Act, the Indian Judges and lawyers have to grope among the English authorities in the quest of a guiding principle—Palaniappa v. Valiammai, 52 Mad. 590, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 252 (254), 118 I.C. 775. In using the term 'revivor of judgment' in this Article, the Legislature had in view the procedure embodied in Order XXI, r. 22, C. P. Code, the object of which was to give notice so as to prevent undue surprise to a judgment-debtor, where more than one year had elapsed between the date of the decree and the applicatiin for execution, or when the decree was sought to be enforced against the legal representatives of the party against whom the decree was originally made—Jogendra v. Shyam Das, 36 Cal. 543. The Statute of limitation to which the judgment is subject ceases to run upon a revivor of judgment, and time runs afresh form the date of the revivor—Ibid. This doctrine of revivor owes its origin to the writ of scire facias prevailing in English and Irish Courts. By the common law of England, in the case of judgments in personal actions, if more than a year and a day passed without execution, the plaintiff was not entitled to take execution without a writ of scire facias; and the effect of an award of execution in pursuance of the scire facias was to revive the judgment. The writ of scire facias is now almost out of use in England, and is replaced by the equitable remedy of filing a bill of revivor.

To constitute a revivor of the decree, there must be expressly or by implication a determination that the decree is still capable of execution and that the decree-holder is entitled to enforce it. Raja of Ramnad v. Velusami, 48 I.A. 45, A.I.R. 1921 P.C. 23, Ramnath v. Amarchand, I.L.R. (1954) Bom. 377, 55 Bom. L.R. 980, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 208. An order for execution of the decree made after notice to the judgment-debtor (to show cause why execution should not issue) as provided for in sec. 248

(now O. 21, r. 22), C. P. Code will operate as a revivor because it necessarily implies such a determination—Kamini v. Aghore, 14 C.W.N. 357, 11 C.L.J. 91, 4 I.C. 402; Jagendra v. Shyam Das, 36 Cal. 543, 9 C.L.J. 271 (dissenting from Tincowrie v. Debendra, 17 Cal. 491); Tribikram v. Badri, 1 P.L.J. 385, 20 C.W.N. 1051, 36 I.C. 633; Futteh Narain, v. Chandrabati, 20 Cal. 551; Suja Hossein v. Monohar, 24 Cal. 244 (247); Umrao v. Lachmi, 26 All. 361 (364); Ashootosh v. Doorga, 6 Cal. 504 (511); Ganapathi v. Balasundara, 7 Mad. 540 (543). So an order of attachment of the properties of the judgment debtors after notice to them under Or. 21, r. 22, C. P. Code amounts to a revivor of the decree, although the notice to one of the judgment debtors who is a minor is not served on the proper guardian of the minor, but on a wrong guardian—Sarju v. Bhagwat, 19 Pat.L.T. 193, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 372. So also when a person is a minor at the date of the decree a notice served on his guardian would be sufficient and would operate as a revivor though in fact he has become a major subsequently—Gopalarayudu v. Gopalakrishnayya, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 284, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 325. But the mere fact that an application has been made and notice has been issued to the judgment-debtor, without their terminating in an order for execution cannot create a revivor of the decree—Manohar v. Falteh Chand, 30 Cal. 979, 7 C.W.N. 793; Har Narain v. Dayabhai, 19 Pat. 909, 1940 P.W.N. 896, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 596. An order for execution made after one year from date of the decree without issue of notice to the judgment-debtor under sec. 248, C. P. Code, has not the effect of reviving the decree—Venkatesa Perumal v. Srinivasa, 33 Mad. 187.

Where, however, an order contains a qualification as to limitation, e.g., when the order is stated to be without prejudice to the contention of the judgment-debtors that the execution of the decree is barred by limitation, it can not be said to be a "positive order" that the decree-holder should be allowed to execute the decree. The Court in such a case does not determine the question whether the execution is barred or not, and such order cannot operate as revivor—Hasan v. Isap, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 27, 40 Bom.L.R. 1180, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 51.

Where the objection of the judgment-debtor as to limitation was overruled, and it was decided that the decree was not barred by limitation, the effect of the order was to entitle the decree-holder to proceed with the execution, and there was consequently a revivor of the decree-Kamini v. Aghore, 14 C.W.N. 357, 11 C.L.J. 91, 4 I.C. 402. But proceedings for obtaining leave under Or. 21, r. 50, C. P. Code is not an application for execution; nor does the leave granted amount to any order for execution—Har Narain v. Dayabhai, supra. An order by the High Court on an application by the decree-holder for leave under Or. 21 r. 50, C. P. Code to proceed against certain partners of a firm granting such leave does not "revive" the decree—Firm Mohar Lal v. Har Krishna, 28 Pat. 935, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 339. A contrary view has been taken by the Calcutta High Court in Jagannath v. Chimanlal, I.L.R. (1945) 1 Cal. 102, 48 C.W.N. 645, A.I.R. 1949 Cal. 113 on the ground that such an application is ancilliary to an application for execution and is one to enforce a decree. So also, where on an application being made for execution, one of the judgment-debtors applied for adjournment and obtained leave to sue for a declaration that he was not bound by the decree on the ground that he was not a partner of the defendant firm against which the decree was obtained, and then the suit was dismissed on the ground that he was a partner, held that the dismissal of that suit did not amount to a revivor of the decree; the only point for determination in that suit was whether the judgment-debtor was or was not a partner of the firm; no question of the decree-holder's right to execute the decree was raised therein, and the order of dismissal could not be regarded as an order determining the question whether the decree-holder had a subsisting right to execute the decree—Muthiar v. Chidambaram, 55 Cal. 578, 32 C.W.N. 336, (341, 342), 110

I.C. 404, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 686. See also Nirmala v. Sudhir, 96 C.L.J. 31, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 484. See, however, Ramnath v. Amarchand, I.L.R. (1954) Bom. 377, 55 Bom.L.R. 980, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 208. If a decree is assigned, and the Court has recognised the assignment and has passed an order allowing the assignee to execute it, that amounts to a revivor and gives a fresh starting point of limitation—Palaniappa v. Valiammai, 52 Mad. 590, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 252 (256), 118 I.C. 775.

An order of the Master of the High Court for transmission of a decree to another Court for execution does not constitute a revivor within the meaning of Art. 183, nor does the notice issued by the master and served upon the judgment debtor before the order for transmission operate as a revivor—Sarju Singh v. Bhagwat Prasad, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 398, 15 Pat. 102, 17 P.L.T. 317, 163 I.C. 411.

Where an Order in Council is transmitted to a subordinate Court for execution without any notice being given to the judgment debtors, it would not be a revivor of the Order—Tribikram v. Badri, 1 P.L.J. 385, 20 C.W.N. 1051, 36 I.C. 633.

An application for the transfer of a decree from the High Court to the District Court is not itself an application for execution and does not amount to a revivor of the decree—Chatterput v. Saita Sumari Mull, 43 Cal. 903 (F.B.), 20 C.W.N. 889, 36 I.C. 602; Suja Hussein v. Monohar Das, 22 Cal. 921; Khaja Sahebuddin v. Afzal Begum, 28 C.W.N. 963, 84 I.C. 68, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 23; Narain Das v. Banka Behari, 78 I.C. 1001, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 213, affirmed by the Privy Council in Banku Behari v. Narain Das, 54 Cal. 500 (P.C.), 31 C.W.N. 589, A.I.R. 1927 P.C. 73, 101 I.C. 24; Palaniappa v. Valiammai, 52 Mad. 590, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 252 (253), 118 I.C. 775; even if upon such application an order is passed for transfer of the decree, such an order is not an order for execution; nor does it show that the Court is of opinion that the execution is not barred. Consequently, it has not the effect of a revivor—Chatterput v. Daya Chand, 23 C.L.J. 641, 11 I.C. 216; Suja Hussein v. Monohar Das, 22 Cal. 921. But if an application for transfer of a decree is made after the expiry of one year, and the Court acting under sec. 248, C. P. Code (O. 21, r. 22) issues a notice to show cause why execution should not be granted, and on no cause being shown by the judgment-debtor, the Court makes an order for the transfer of the decree and the issue of a certified copy of the decree with a certificate of non-satisfaction, the order of the Court amounts to a revivor of the decree—Suja Hossein v. Monohur, 24 Cal. 244 (247) (following 6 Cal. 504 and 20 Cal. 551); Umrao v. Lachmi, 26 All. 361 (364). If an assignee of a decree applies for transfer of the decree to another Court for execution, and the Court passes an order transferring the decree and allowing the assignee to execute the decree, the order amounts to a revivor of the decree—Palaniappa v. Valiammai, supra.

Where execution cannot proceed without leave of the Court, the granting of the leave is a revivor of the decree. But as no leave is necessary for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, the superfluous issue of a notice under section 245B, C. P. Code (O. 21, r. 37) is not a revivor—Chatterput v. Daya Chand, 23 C.L.J. 641, 11 I.C. 216; B. K. Mitra v. B. L. Choudhury, 23 Pat. 923, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 182.

As observed before, to constitute a revivor there must be a determination that the decree is capable of execution, and that the decree-holder is entitled to enforce it; and such determination must be made by a Court or person duly qualified to make it. Where after issue of notice under sec. 248, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 21, r. 22, C. P. Code, 1908) and the judgment-debtor not appearing the Registrar ordered execution to issue, it was held that there was no judicial determination of the question whether the decree was capable of execution, and consequently the order did not constitute a revivor. The order of the Registrar was merely a ministerial act—Chatterput v. Saita

Sumarimull, 43 Cal. 903 (F.B.), 36 I.C. 602; Narain Das. v. Banku Behari, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 213, 78 I.C. 1001. O. 21, r. 16 (proviso), C. P. Code lays down that if a decree is assigned, and the assignee applies for execution, notice of the application shall be given to the transferor and the judgment-debtor, and the decree shall not be executed until the Court has heard their objections, if any. If, however, such notices have been given, and those persons did not appear to prefer any objection, and then the Registrar or Deputy Registrar, acting in behalf of the Court, passes an order for execution or an order for transmission of the decree to another Court for execution, such an order is not merely a ministerial act, but an order of the Court speaking through the Registrar, and constitutes a revivor—Palaniappa v. Valiammai, 52 Mad. 590, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 252 (256), 118 I.C. 775, 56 M.L.J. 555.

An order bringing on record legal representatives of decree-holder and allowing them to execute the decree is an order of revivor within the meaning of this Article—Murugesam v. Kanniappa, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 194, 64 M.L.W. 702, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 124.

A revivor of decree against one of two-judgment-debtors would not keep the decree alive against the other judgment-debtor—Krishnaiyah v. Gajendra, 40 Mad. 1127, 33 M.L.J. 533, 40 I.C. 609; Har Narain v. Dayabhai, 19 Pat. 909, 1940 P.W.N. 896, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 596; Iswar v. Ram Kristo, 51 C.W.N. 560; Murugasam v. Kannaiappa, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 194, 64 M.L.W. 702, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 124. A decree was passed against two persons in 1900, in the original side of the High Court. An application was made in 1903 for execution against one judgment-debtor only, and an order was made granting execution against him. In 1914 the decree-holder applied for execution against the other judgment-debtor. It was held that this application was barred, in as much as the revivor of the decree against one of the judgment-debtors did not save the decree from being barred as against the other judgment-debtor after 12 years from the date of the decree—McLaren v. Veeriah, 38 Mad. 1102, 38 I.C. 1003.

The proviso to this article has application only if the application for execution on the face of it is made more than 12 years after the date of the decree—Shavji v. Haridas, 45 Bom.L.R. 400, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 238.

"Payment:—A fresh starting point is given from the time of payment, i.e., the date of actual payment and not the date of order of payment passed by the Court —Subapathi v. Shanmugappa, 46 M.L.J. 453, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 638, 78 I.C. 832.

The provisions of this Article regarding acknowledgment as well as payment are self-contained, and must be read independently of secs. 19 and 20—Tugan Mull v. Ladhu Lal, 10 Pat. 213, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 218, 12 P.L.T. 88. Thus, the payment is not required to be made either by the judgment-debtor or by some person duly authorised by him in that behalf. It is sufficient if payment is made by some person on behalf of the judgment-debtor. The words of sec. 20 are not to be imported into this Article —Probappa v. Desikachari, 49 M.L.J. 101, 90 I.C. 1028, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1131.

Moreover, the word 'payment' is used in this Article in a wider sense than in sec. 20, and is not qualified in any way as to the mode in which the payment is to be made or as to the person who is to make it. Therefore a sum of money realised in execution in partial satisfaction of the decree amounts to payment and provides a fresh starting point for limitation—Tugan Mull v. Ladhu Lal, supra.

The expression "money secured by the decree" includes costs, and so a payment made by the judgment-debtor towards costs will give rise to a fresh starting point—Tugan Mull v. Ladhu Lal, supra.

An admission of liability in respect of a decree of a High Court which amounts to an acknowledgment within the meaning of sec. 19 is sufficient to extend the period of limitation for execution of the decree, although the admission is not made to the decree-holder—Sree Narain v. Bhagwan, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 523, 44 C.W.N. 322, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 210; Lala Baijnath v. Nursingdas, 61 C.W.N. 494.

725. Section 48, C. P. Code:—This Article is independent of sec. 230, C. P. Code, 1882 (sec. 48, C. P. Code, 1908) and not controlled by it. According to the express provisions of this Article, the decree-holder is entitled to a fresh period of 12 years from the date of every revivor, payment or acknowledgment; therefore the limitation provisions contained in section 48, C. P. Code do not apply to cases governed by this Article—Mayabhai v. Trivuban Das, 6 Bom. 258; Ganapathi v. Balasundara, 7 Mad. 540 (544); Futteh Narain v. Chandrabati, 20 Cal. 551. The signature of the advocate on the endorsement on the brief recording a consent decree is sufficient to comply with the requirements of the proviso under this Article—Nirmala v. Sudhir, 96 C.L.J. 31, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 484. Sec. 48, C. P. Code ought not to be so construed as to conflict with the provisions of this Article of the Limitation Act. The provisions of the two Acts ought not to be so interpreted as to contradict each other, and section 230 of the Code of 1882 cannot be taken to limit this Article—Jogendra v. Shamm Das, 36 Cal. 543. Note that section 48 (2) (b) of the new C. P. Code of 1908 expressly exempts this Article from the operation of that section.
