PREFACE TO THE FOURTEENTH EDITION.

Nearly seven years have elapsed since the publication of the last edition of this work. In the task of preparing the present edition I have confined myself to revise and supplement the last edition in the light of legislative amendments and judicial pronouncements since made and I have tried to adhere to the previous commentaries as much as possible. Most of the relevant and important Indian and English cases reported during the period ending with March 1959 have been referred to in their proper places, and only such of them as could not be incorporated on account of the present edition going through the press have been included in the Addenda. It is therefore, needless to notice any of them here. No pains have been spared to make this edition quite upto date within the prescribed compass, but should any errors or omissions be detected they may be kindly pointed out for future correction.

It is hoped that the present edition will prove to be of use like its predecessors.

I desire to record my thanks to Mr. Sudhindra K. Palit, Advocate, for his able assistance in the preparation of this edition.

THE

INDIAN LIMITATION ACT.

ACT NO. IX OF 1908.

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

(Received the assent of the Governor General on the 7th August, 1908.)

An Act to consolidate and amend the law for the Limitation of Suits, and for other purposes.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the limitation of suits, appeals and certain applications to Courts; and whereas it is also expedient to provide rules for acquiring by possession the ownership of easements and other property; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. History of the Law of Limitation:—Before the time of Justinian præscriptio included both sorts of limitation, viz., (i) positive or acquisitive, and (ii) restrictive (limitation). The first kind was denominated usucapio, the second, exceptio. The Roman usucapio has descended to modern jurisprudence under the name of "prescription," and exceptio under that of limitation proper. Under the Civil Law of Rome there were some actions which could be filed at any time as there was no time limit for these actions. They were known actiones perpetuæ. The other kind of actions which were to be instituted within a definite time-limit was known as actiones temporalis. In 1424 A.D. a formal statute of limitation was introduced by Emperor Theodosius. The object of the statute was to fix a period within which all sorts of actions were to be instituted.

In England, at first, actions for real property were forbidden beyond the return of John or accession of Henry I, though no particular duration was prescribed. In 1540 during the time of Henry VIII fixed periods of limitation for real actions were introduced and in 1623 it was extended to personal actions during the time of James I. Before 1834 limitation was recognised as a judicial bar only and in that year during the time of Williams the principle of extinctive limitation or prescription was recognised.

For Statement of Objects and Reasons, see Gazette of India, 1908, Pt. V. p. 22; for Report of Select Committee, see ibid, 1908. Pt. V, p. 223; and for Proceedings in Council, see ibid, Pt. VI, pp. 2, 13, 37 and 145.

The Act has been declared in force in the Sonthal Parganas by Notification under the Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation (3 of 1872), and in the Angul District by the Angul Laws Regulation, 1936 (5 of 1936). Extended to Berar by the Berar Laws Act, 1941 (4 of 1941).

In India, though from 1793 Regulations were passed from time to time for fixing the period of limitation for institution of actions, a definite recognition of the law of limitation was deferred till 1859, when for the first time, a law on the subject was passed into a Code (Act XIV of 1859). Since then the law has undergone considerable amendments and has now come as Act IX of 1908.

Though the old Hindu Law recognised both "prescription" and "limitation" and the Moslem Jurisprudence recognised neither of them (Acharya's Codification T.L.L. 1912 p. 84; Khejaruannissa v Risa Unnissa, 5 B.L.R. 87) now both are amenable to law of limitation, which makes no racial or class distinction, Fattehsanghi v. Kalliamraiji, 1 I.A. 34, 21 W.R. 178 (P.C.).

1A. Distinction between Limitation and Prescription:—A Law of Limitation limits the time after which a suit or other proceeding cannot be maintained in a Court of Justice.

A Law of Prescription prescribes a period, at the expiry of which a substantive or primary right is (under certain circumstances) acquired or extinguished (Mitra's Law of Limitation and Prescription; T.L.L. 1896 pp. 1 and 2). From the above definitions it is apparent that limitation is concerned only with the judicial remedy of a person whose rights have been infringed and is a part of adjective law whereas prescription affects the substance of the conflicting rights between rival claimants and comes under the category of substantive law. In other words, Limitation only bars the remedy and Prescription extinguishes the right. Cf. Gouri Shanker v. Sheo Nandan, 46 All. 384, A.I.R. 1924 All. 543; Suttar v. Ladha, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 633.

1B. Object:—The object of the Limitation Act is to quiet long possession and to extinguish stale demands—Luchmee v. Runjeet, 20 W.R. 375 (377) (P.C.), 13 B.L.R. 177. "Statutes of limitation are statutes of repose, to quiet title, to suppress frauds, and to supply the deficiency of proofs arising from the ambiguity and obscurity or the antiquity of transactions. They proceed upon the presumption that claims are extinguished or ought to be held extinguished whenever they are not litigated within the prescribed period. They quicken diligence by making it in some measure equivalent to right. They discourage litigation by burying in one common receptacle all the accumulations of past times which are unexplained and have now from lapse of time become inexplicable. It has been said by John Voet that controversies are limited to a fixed period of time, lest they shou'd be immortal, while men are mortal"—Story's Conflict of Laws, 8th Edn., p 794. For this reason the statute of limitation has been termed a statute of repose, peace and justice—Mangu v. Kandhai, 8 All. 475 (484); Jag Lal v. Har Narain, 10 All. 524 (529); Tolson v. Kaye, (1822) 3 Brod. & Bing. 222 (223) (per Dallas, C.J.); Hunter v. Gibbons, (1856) 26 L.J. 5 (per Bramwell, B.). "All statutes of limitation have for their object the prevention of the rearing up of claims at great distances of time when evidences are lost, and in all well regulated countries the quieting of possession is held an important point of policy"—per Lord St. Leonards in Trustees of the Dundee Harbour v. Dougall, (1852) 1 Macqueen H. L. 321. "The public have a great interest in having a known limit fixed by law to litigation, for the quiet of the community, and that there may be a certain fixed period, after which the possesser may know that his title and right cannot be called in question. It is better that the negligent owner, who has omitted to assert his right within the prescribed period, should lose his right, than that an opening should be given to interminable litigation, exposing parties to be harassed by stale demands, after the witnesses of the facts are dead, and the evidence of the title lost."—per Plumber M. R. in Cholmondelay v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & W. 140. Statutes of limitation are definite rules of law giving to the population for whom those laws have been framed a guarantee that after the lapse of a certain period they may rest in peace and rely upon titles or other rights which they have acquired—Ramjiwan v. Chand Mal, 10 All. 587 (595). The object of the Act is not to create or define causes of action but simply to prescribe the period within which existing rights can be enforced in Courts of law—Suryamani v. Kalikanta, 28 Cal. 37 (46); Jivi v. Ramji, 3 Bom. 207; Binda v. Kaunsilia, 13 All. 126 (142). The principle of the Act is not to enable suits to be brought within certain periods, but to forbid them from being brought after periods, each of which starts from some definite event—Hurry Bhusan v. Upendra, 24 Cal. 1 (7) (P.C.). The Limitation Act merely prescribes a period for the institution of a suit, and does not of itself create an obligation to sue where none existed—Narayana v. Lakshmanan, 39 Mad. 456 (458), 28 M L.J. 571, 29 I.C. 1. "The intention of the law of limitation is not to give a right where there is not one, but to interpose a bar after a certain period to a suit to enforce an existing right"—per Sir Richard Couch in Hurrynath v. Mothoor, 20 I A. 183, 21 Cal. 8 (18) (P.C.); Bhajja v. Mahomed Said, 54 All. 525, 1932 A.L J. 489, A.I.R. 1932 All. 543, 138 I.C. 396; Ram Narain v. Barkandi, 12 O.L.J. 77, 86 I.C. 725, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 400; Kalicharan v. Sukhoda, 20 C.W.N. 58 (61), 30 I.C. 821.

2. Construction:—The Act of Limitation, being an Act which takes away or restricts the right to take legal proceedings, must, when its language is ambiguous, be construed strictly, i.e., in favour of the right to proceed—Umiashankar v. Chhotalal, 1 Bom. 19 (22); Collector v. Rajaram, 7 Bom. 542 (545); New Fleming Spinning Co. v. Kessowji, 9 Bom. 377 (402); Balvant v. Secretary of State, 29 Bom. 480 (498); Chunilal v. Dahyabhai, 32 Bom. 14 (22) (F.B.), Venkanna v. Venkata Krishnayya, 41 Mad. 18 (22), 33 M.L.J. 35, 41 I.C. 807; Murlidhur v. Mulu, 11 N.L.R. 18, 27 I.C. 935 (936); Sundar v. Salig Ram, 26 P.R. 1911, 9 I.C. 300 (302) (F.B); Dheru v. Sidhu, 56 P.R. 1903 (per Chatterji, J.); Om Prakash v. Sohan Devi, A.I R. 1956 All. 435; Ramaswami v. Krishnier, A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 431; Kandaswami Pillai v. Kannappa Chetty, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 186 (F.B.); P. N. Flms Ltd. v. Overseas Films Corpn. Ltd., A.I.R. 1958 Bom. 10. Statutes of Limitation are in their nature strict and inflexible and are not susceptible of equitable construction—Naurangi v. Ram Charan, 9 Pat. 885, 11 P.L.T. 403, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 455 (472), 127 I C. 817; Deutsch Asiatische Bank v. Hiralal, 47 I.C. 122 (124) (Cal.). The statute of limitation, the object of which is to prevent stale demands, must be construed strictly—Kaikhusroo Mankeshah v. Gangadas, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 322, 38 Bom.L.R. 712, 165 I.C. 184. Where the interpretation sought to be put upon the technical words of a statute like the Limitation Act is arrived at by implication and inference, the Court ought not to adopt a construction which has a restricting and penalising operation, unless it is driven to do so by the irresistible force of language—Abdul Karim v. Islamunnissa, 38 All. 339 (343). The scope of the Limitation Act can not be extended by implication, and a party's rights to go to Court cannot be taken away unless the Act expressly provides that his right is so barred—Madhavprosad v. S. G. Chandavarkar, 50 Bom.L.R. 747, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 104. No man is to be deprived of rights which would by law belong to him, unless the specific provisions of law which are alleged to take away those rights can be shown to apply clearly and in precise terms to his case—Sundar v. Salig Ram, supra. The provisions of this Act, when set up as a defence, must not be extended to cases which are not strictly within the enactment, whilst exceptions or exemptions from its operations are to be construed liberally—Poorna v. Sassoon, 25 Cal. 496 (503); Roddam v. Morley, 1 DeG & J. 1 (23). "A statute of Limitation, like any other statute, must be interpreted in accordance with the fair meaning of the language used, and a litigant who relies upon it must bring his case within its terms as so interpreted"—Lightwood's Time Limit on Actions, p. 2. The Act ought to receive such a construction as the language in its plain meaning imports—Luchmee v.

Runjeet, 20 W.R. 375 (377)', 13 B.L.R. 177 (P.C.). It should not be so interpreted as to include cases not falling within the strict meaning of the words used—In re-Ramsankar, 3 C.L.R. 400; Parashram v. Rakhma, 15 Bom. 299 (305).

In construing the clear words of the Limitation Act it is not permissible to alter or cut down their effect by a comparison with the language of the earlier statutes. In dealing with a statute of limitation which curtails the rights of parties, it is for the litigant who pleads the bar, to justify a construction which is other than literal and which would have the effect of depriving the party entitled to a right of the benefit arising by a literal construction—Maduri Lakshminarasimham v. Maduri Surayanarayana, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 624, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 443; A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 246.

In certain Allahabad cases, however, Mahmood, J. expressed the opinion that statutes of limitation must be construed strictly in favour of their operation, i.e., against the right to take legal proceedings—Mangu v. Kandhai, 8 All. 475 (484). The learned Judge also remarked that statutes of limitation are statutes of repose, intended to check tendency of dilatoriness, and they should be administered not slackly but as strictly as possible in order to strengthen the repose at which they aim. The rule of limitation is not to be administered as a lax system to be modified, varied or fluctuating according to the individual views or wishes of the Judge—Ramjiwan v. Chand Mal, 10 All. 587 (595, 596); Jag Lal v. Har Narain, 10 All. 524 (529).

In construing the Limitation Act, the Courts cannot allow any question of hardship to influence them, where the wording of the Act is plain and unambiguous. They have to construe the Acts of the Legislature as they find them, whether they approve of them or not—and not to alter or amend them. They have no power to read into the Limitation Act an Article which is not there or any section or words which it does not contain—Balkaran v. Gobind Nath, 12 All. 129 (137) (F.B.). The provisions of the Limitation Act require to be strictly construed. The Court should not attempt to interpret the law of limitation whereever possible in favour of the creditor on the ground of suggested technical difficulty—Ram Swarup v. Dulraj, 1946 A.M.L.J. 13. Courts have no power to devise their own technique from saving claims from the bar which the statutes of limitation create—Gulab Singh v. Nathri, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 419, 1944 N.L.J. 200, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 145. The fixation of the periods of limitation must always be to some extent arbitrary, and may frequently result in hardship. But in construing such provisions equitable considerations are out of place, and the strict grammatical meaning of the words is the only safe guide. There is no warrant for reading any qualifications into the words of any Article—Nagendra Nath v. Suresh Chandra, 60 Cal. 1 (P.C.), 36 C.W.N. 803 (809), 137 I.C. 529, A.I.R. 1932 P.C. 165. Ashutosh v. Kumedkamini, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 422, 144 I.C. 150—Rama Chandra v. Bhalu, A.I.R. 1950 Orissa 125 (F.B.). The bar of limitation is purely arbitrary. It is sometimes harsh and it is very often regarded as inequitable. But the Courts have to enforce the bar, because the Legislature has cast a duty upon the Courts to see that suits and applications are within time. The Courts have no option in the matter, and it would not be a proper way of interpreting an article by rejecting a particular interpretation, though following logically from the language used, on the ground that it would create a hardship—Parmeshar v. Sitla Din, 1934 A.L.J. 503 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1934 All. 626 (633), 150 I.C. 1096, Kripal Shah v. Shri Harikishan, A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 273. It is clear that there is no general judicial discretion outside the Limitation Act which would enable a Court to relieve a suitor from the operation of the Limitation Act on the ground of hardship. There is no question of equity in cases governed by the Limitation Act. "There is no room for the introduction of equitable principles in the administration of the law of limitation. There is no sanction in law to invoke in aid principles of equity to enlarge the period of limitation by excluding some time in computing the period of limitation, for which no authority is to be found within the four corners of the Limitation Act. When the law is clear, it is the duty of the Court to give effect to it irrespective of the fact that the result leads to some injustice to one party or the other"—Md. Yunis v. Tilokchand, 1935 A.L.J. 201, A.I.R. 1935 All. 323, 153 I.C. 1058. Equitable or ethical considerations cannot weigh with Courts in interpreting limitation statutes which are technical in their nature—Narayanappa v. Revenue District Officer, A I.R. 1955 Mad. 23. See also Balabhau v. Rangulal, A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 145 (F.B.). There is no judicial discretion to relieve the parties from the operation of the Limitation Act in a case of hardship or any authority in the Court to dispense with its provisions—Eng. Gim Moh v. Chinese Merited Banking Co. Ltd., A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 276 (F.B.). Limitation Act is meant to be exhaustive—Ram Gopal v. Mt. Ganga Devi, A.I.R. 1936 All. 383. But while an interpretation of any article ought not to be based on any ideal of mitigating a hardship that may be supposed to follow from a strict application of that article, it is also clear that an interpretation which works in nothing but hardship should not be accepted, and if possible any other interpretation which is not quite foreign to the language used by the statute should be adopted—Ibid.

The construction of Acts not in pari materia with the Limitation Act (e.g., the Court Fees Act) cannot be called in aid of the construction of the Limitation Act—Dayachand v. Hemchand, 4 Bom. 515 (526) (F.B.); Assan v. Pathumma, 22 Mad. 494 (502); though similar words and expressions occuring in statutes in pari materia (e.g., Limitation Act and Code of Civil Procedure) should be given same meaning unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context—Rama Chandra v. Bhalu, A.I.R. 1950 Orissa, 125 (F.B.); P. N. Films Ltd. v. Overseas Films Corpn. Ltd., A.I.R. 1958 Bom. 10. The various articles dealing with a variety of particular cases should be so construed as to make them harmonious and consistent—Sati Prasad v. Jogesh, 31 Cal. 681 (684) (F.B.), 8 C.W.N. 476; Amme Raham v. Zia Ahmed, 13 All. 282 (284) (F.B.). The language of the third column of the first schedule should be so interpreted as to carry out the true intention of the Legislature, that is to say, by dating the cause of action from a date when the remedy is available to the party—Muthukorakkai v. Madar Ammal, 43 Mad. 185 (213) (F.B.).

Where there is a positive enactment of the Indian Legislature the proper course is to examine the language of that statute and to ascertain its proper meaning, uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law—or of the English law upon which it may be founded—Ramanandi v. Kalawati, 55 I.A. 18, A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 18; Hansraj v. Official Liquidators, 60 I.A. 13, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 63; Emperor v. Benoari Lall, 1943 F.C.R. 96, A.I.R. 1943 F.C. 36.

3. Effect of change in law—Which law applicable:—The general rule is that a statute of limitation is retrospective in its operation and governs all proceedings from the moment of its enactment, even though the cause of action might have accrued before the Act came into existence—Baijnath v. Doolarey, 50 All. 865, 26 A.L.J. 1317, A.I.R. 1828 All. 798, 110 I.C. 719. Hence, the law of limitation applicable to a suit or proceeding is the law in force at the date of institution of the suit or proceeding, unless there is a distinct provision to the contrary—Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya, 35 All. 227 (234) (P.C.); Kanai Lal v. Purna Chandra, 34 C.W.N. 733 (734); Begam Sultan v. Sarvi Begum, 48 All. 121, 90 I.C. 274, A.I.R. 1926 All. 93 (94); Gurupadapa v. Virabhadrapa, 7 Bom. 459 (462); Ram Karan v. Ram Das, 54 All. 299, A.I.R. 1931 All. 635, 1931 A.L.J. 1018 (F.B.); Gangaram v. Secy. of State, 21 S.L.R. 195, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 270 (271); Jethmal v. Ambsingh, A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 97 (F.B.); Dayachand

v. Sanwalchand, A.I.R. 1956 Raj. 6; Lakhmir Singh v. I. T. Commissioner, A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 538. Thus, a suit brought in 1904 on a mortgage executed in 1870 would be governed by the Limitation Act of 1877, not by the Act of 1859—Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya, 35 All. 227 (235) (P.C.). If an ex parte decree is passed when the Act of 1877 is in force, and the application for setting aside the decree is made when the Act of 1908 comes into operation, the application would be governed by the latter Act (Art. 164)—Jia Bibi v. Ilahi, 37 All. 597 (600); Monohar v. Sadiqa, 101 P.R. 1916, 37 I.C. 292 (294); Chidambaram v. Karuppan, 35 Mad. 678 (679); Zaibulnissa v. Ghulam Fatima, 70 P.L.R. 1911, 10 I.C. 823. If a sale takes place before 1908, and an application to set aside the sale (Art. 166) is made after the passing of the Limitation Act of 1908, it will be governed by the new Act—Rai Kishori v. Mukunda, 15 C.W.N. 965 (971), 11 I.C. 295. An application for execution is governed by the Act in force at the time when the application is made, and not by the Act which was in force at the time when the decree was passed—Gurupadapa v. Virabhadrapa, 7 Bom. 459 (463), distinguishing Mungul v. Grijakant, 8 Cal. 51 (P.C.) and Behary v. Goberdhan, 9 Cal. 446. No one has a vested right in any period of limitation. It cannot be said that there is any substantive right in an appellant to wait for a particular period of time before filing the appeal. Rules of limitation are rules of procedure, and the rules applicable to an appeal would be the rules which are in force at the time when the appeal is filed Baijnath v. Doolarey, supra. A suit is governed by the law of limitation which is actually in force at the time when it is instituted; thus, a suit brought in September 1877 would be governed by the Act of 1871, and not by the Act of 1877, because the latter Act came into force from 1st October 1877, although it was passed on 19th July 1877——Mohesh v. Busunt, 6 Cal. 340 (347).

4. Effect of change in law—If retrospective:—The law of limitation is not always a law of procedure, that is to say, a purely adjective law; for amongst its other consequences it has the creation of rights by prescription; and if those rights have vested in individuals under one law of limitation, they cannot be divested by the introduction of a new law of limitation, or by an amendment in the law—Chotmal Ganeshram v. Ramchand, (1957) 59 Bom.L.R. 828; Gajanan v. Waman, 12 Bom.L.R. 881, 8 I.C. 189; Moro v. Balaji, 19 Bom. 809 (814); Gangaram v. Secy. of State, 21 S.L.R. 195, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 270 (271). The repeal of a statute or other legislative enactment cannot, without express words or clear implication to that effect in the repealing Act, take away a right acquired under the repealed statute or other enactment while it was in force—Sitaram v. Khanderav, 1 Bom. 286 (291); Fazal Karim v. Annada, 15 C.W.N. 845 (847); Baijanath v. Doolarey, 50 All. 865, 26 A.L.J. 1317, A.I.R. 1928 All. 708; Sahib Dad v. Rahmat, 90 P.R. 1904 (F.B.), 88 P.L.R. 1904; Maganlal v. Mulji, Kutch. 15. When the retrospective application of a statute of limitation would destroy vested rights, or inflict such hardship or injustice as could not have been within the contemplation of the Legislature, the statute is not, any more than any other law, to be construed retrospectively—Khushalbhai v. Kabhai, 6 Bom. 26; Gopeswar v. Jiban Chandra, 41 Cal. 1125 (1140) (S.B.); Ram Ditta v. Tehlu, 4 P.R. 1902, 153 P.L.R. 1901; Ramakrishna v. Subbaraya, 36 Mad. 101 (103), 24 M.L.J. 54, 18 I.C. 64. The statute of limitation is a law of procedure and that ordinarily it is retrospective in its operation. But when under the existing law a right of suit has become barred and a person has consequently acquired a title, such right of suit cannot be revived, and such title cannot be extinguished by subsequent legislation. A new law of limitation or an amendment in the law cannot divest a person of a right or title which has vested in him under the previous law of limitation—Tej Bahadur v. Kothi Radha Kishan, A.I.R. 1936 All. 858 (859-60), 1936 A.L.J. 1393, 1936 A.W.R. 1044. Where an Act contains provisions for the limitation of suits which take away altogether a vested right of suit, without providing any equivalent remedy, then according to the approved rule of construction, the provisions must be considered to have been enacted subject to the implied exception that they were not to extend to such vested rights of suit which were to continue subject to the rules of limitation in force at the time of the passing of the Act—Rajah of Pittapur v. Venkata, 39 Mad. 645 (650), 29 M.L.J. 1, 30 I.C. 94 (F.B.). Thus where a suit is within time under the Indian Limitation Act as applied by the Kutch (Application of Laws) Order, 1949, but is barred under the new Limitation Act as applied by the Merged States (Laws) Act, 1950 the suit is governed by the old Limitation Act inasmuch as the result of applying the new Act would be to destroy the right to sue which was vested in the plaintiff at the time the new Act came into force—Maganlal v. Mulji, A.I.R. 1951 Kutch. 15. "When a new enactment deals with rights of action, unless it is so expressed in the Act, an existing right of action is not taken away. But where the enactment deals with procedure only, unless the contrary is expressed, the enactment applies to all actions whether commenced before or after the passing of the Act"—per Wilde B in Wright v. Hale, (1860) 30 L.J. Ex. 40, 6 H. & N. 227 (232); Hope Mills Ld. v. Vithaldas, 12 Bom.L.R. 730, 7 I.C. 982 (985).

Similarly, a suit or an application which has been already barred by the old Act cannot be revived by the new one—Khunnilal v. Govind, 33 All. 356, 15 C.W.N. 545 (551) (P.C.); Mohesh v. Taruck, 20 Cal. 487 (497) (P.C.); Nepal v. Niroda, 39 Cal. 507 (509); Fatimatulnissa v. Sundar Das, 27 Cal. 1004 (1011) (P.C.); Shumbhoonath v. Guruchurn, 5 Cal. 894; Nursing v. Hurryhur, 5 Cal. 897 (900); Jagamba v. Ram Chandra, 31 Cal. 314 (317); Vinayak v. Balaji, 4 Bom. 230; Dharima v. Govind, 8 Bom. 99 (103); Mahomed Mehdi v. Sakinabai, 37 Bom. 393, 14 Bom.L.R. 908, 17 I.C. 629 (632); Narayan v. Govind, 29 Bom.L.R. 1563, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 28 (31); Bhogilal v. Amritlal, 17 Bom. 173 (183); Dhondi v. Lakshman, 31 Bom.L.R. 1287, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 55 (57); Appasami v. Subramanya, 12 Mad. 26 (33) (P.C.); Teka v. Sohnu, 39 P.R. 1901; Khan v. Hakim, 97 P.R. 1905; Somasundaram v. Vaithilinga, 40 Mad. 846 (867), 41 I.C. 546; Pearey Lal v. Solu Gir, I.L.R. 1945 All. 896, A.I.R. 1946 All. 58; 223 I.C. 175; Mangapathi v. Krishnaswami, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 107, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 762; Ramanathan v. Kandappa, A.I R. 1951 Mad. 314, 1950 M.W.N. 650, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 624; Fakiraya v. Achappanaick, A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 600. A contrary view has been taken by the Patna High Court in Baleswar v. Latafat, 24 Pat. 249, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 368; Sarab Devaprasad v. Dwarka Prasad, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 59, 219 I.C. 159; Jagadish Prasad v. Saligram, 24 Pat. 391, A.IR. 1946 Pat. 60, and by the Orissa High Court in Pitambar v. Lakshmidhar, A.I.R. 1949 Orissa, 64. According to these High Courts though a right which has been extinguished by the pre-existing law of limitation cannot be revived by the new one, this principle is confined only to a case of title to property under sec. 28 of the Limitation Act and not to debts. Though the remedy to recover the debt is barred by limitation the right to the debt is not extinguished thereby and no question of revival of an extinguished right can arise. So also, a judgment or decree which had become unenforceable by lapse of time before the passing of the present Act cannot be revived or made effective by any retrospective operation of this Act—Sachindra v. Maharaja Bahadur, 49 Cal. 203 (214), 26 C.W.N. 859 (P.C.).

It should be noted in this connection that section 2 of the Limitation Act of 1877 contained a provision that "Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect any title acquired or to revive any right to sue barred, under the Limitation Act, 1871." But this clause has been omitted in the Act of 1908, in view of a similar provision existing in the General Clauses Act (X of 1897). Section 6 of the General Clauses Act provides that the repeal of any enactment "shall not revive anything not in force of existing at the time of the repeal or affect any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under any enactment so repealed."

5. Pending proceedings:—Since the law of limitation applicable to a suit or proceeding is the law in force at the date of institution of the suit (see Note 3 above), any change in the law of limitation during the pendency of a suit does not affect the proceedings. A suit is governed by the provisions of the statute of limitation in force at the time of its institution and not by the provisions of a subsequent statute coming into operation during the pendency of the suit—Maula Baksh v. Bhaba Sundari, 19 C.L.J. 187 (188), 19 I.C. 968.

6. Applicability:—The Limitation Act applies to immoveable property made wakf, notwithstanding that the ownership in such property is said to be in God. It is impossible to read into Limitation Act any exception for property made wakf for the purpose of mosque whether the purpose be merely to provide money for the upkeep and conduct of a mosque or to provide a site or building for the purpose—Shahid Gang v. Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee, 67 I.A. 251, I.L.R. (1940) Lah. 493, 44 C.W.N. 957, 72 C.L.J. 199, 1940 M.W.N. 818, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 903, 1940 A.L.J. 522, 1940 P.W.N. 671, 22 P.L.T. 140, 42 Bom.L.R. 1100 (P.C.).

The provisions of the Limitation Act do not govern suits and applications provided for by the Agra Tenancy Act; Fakhruddin v. Abdul, 1938 A.L.J. 208, A.I.R. 1938 All. 213, 175 I.C. 20.

When there is a specific Article in the Limitation Act which covers a particular case, it is not proper to apply another Article, the application of which is not free from doubt—Kalipada v. Palani, 1953 S.C.R. 503, (1953) S.C.J. 208, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 125.

6A. Applicability of sections and artcles:—The applicability of particular sections and articles of the Limitation Act ought to be determined by the character of the thing sued for, and not by the status, race, character or religion of the parties—Fattehsangji v. Dessai, 21 W.R. 178 (P.C.), 13 B.L.R. 254. In order to decide which article is applicable, the nature of the suit and the relief claimed are important. At the same time, one has to see what is in substance the nature of the claim, and if the language of a statutory enactment is imperative, the evasion of that law cannot be tolerated simply because the phraseology of the plaint has been carefully selected—Jawahar v. Mathura, 151 I.C. 585, A.I.R. 1934 All. 661 (668) (F.B.), 1934 A.L.J. 1035, 3 A.W.R. 845. In order to determine which of the Limitation Act is applicable to a suit the Court is not tied down to the statements in the plaint. It is the duty of the Court to consider the facts and circumstances admitted and proved in the case —Jai Mangal v. Bindeshuri, 15 Luck. 157, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 134, 185 I.C. 736, 1939 O.W.N. 1005.

When a section and an Article contradict each other, the former is to be regarded the best interpreter of the intention of the Legislature—Dhoneswar v. Roy, I.L.R. 2 Cal. 336 (F.B.); New Fleming etc. Co. Ltd. v. Kessowji Naik, I.L.R. 9 Bom. 373.

When there are two articles which may possibly govern a case, the one more general and the other more particular and specific, the latter ought to be applied—Sharoop v. Joggessur, 26 Cal. 564 (567) (F.B.); Ishur v. Jibun, 16 Cal. 25 (29); Mangu v. Dolhin, 25 Cal. 692 (698, 699); Natesan v. Soundararaja, 21 Mad. 141 (142); Municipal Board v. Goodall, 26 All. 482 (487); Madras Steam Navigation v. Shalimar Works, 42 Cal. 85 (108); Runchordas v. Parvatibai, 23 Bom. 725 (736) (P.C.); Narmadabai v. Bhabanishankar, 26 Bom. 430 (432); Md. Mazaharal v. Md.

Azimuddin, 27 C.W.N. 210 (212); Tofa Lal v. Moinuddin, 4 Pat. 448, 93 I.C. 129, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 765 (767); Venkatasubba v. Asiatic Steam Navigation Co., 39 Mad. 1 (12); Sesha Naidu v. Periasami, 44 Mad. 951 (957). If there is a conflict between two periods of limitation, one of which, the longer, is applicable to all circumstances, and the other, the shorter, to special circumstances only, the longer term given by the statute to bring the suit ought to be applied, unless there is clear proof of the special circumstances which would make the shorter term applicable—Tara Nath v. Iswar Chandra, 16 C.W.N. 398 (401), following Crum v. Johnson, [1902] 92 N.W. 1054. But if two articles limiting the period for bringing the suit are wide enough to include the same cause of action, and neither of them can be said to apply more specifically than the other, that which keeps alive rather than that which bars the right to sue should generally, and apart from other equitable considerations, be preferred—Tofa Lal v. Moinuddin, supra; Kasturchand v. Hari Govind, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 491 (495); Jairam v. Bhilaji, 27 N.L.R. 152, 127 I.C. 889, A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 300.

7. "Suits":—The Limitation Act is applicable to suits brought by the plaintiff; it does not apply to a right set up by the defendant in defence. The rule of law is that there is no limitation against a defence. A defendant will not be precluded from setting up a right by way of defence, even if he could not have done so as plaintiff by way of substantial claim—Deodhari v. Dayanand, 35 I.C. 610 (611) (Cal.); Sri Krishan v. Kashmiro, 20 C.W.N. 957 (967) (P.C.), 34 I.C. 37; Akbar v. Ragnandan, 57 I.C. 348 (349) (Lah.); Kamra v. Bishambar, 147 P.R. 1890 (F.B.); Venkatachalapathi v. Robert Fischer, 30 Mad. 444 (445); Lakshmi Doss v. Roop Laul, 30 Mad. 169 (178); Meherban v. Raghunath, 5 O.L.J. 768, 49 I.C. 115; Gaya Prasad v. Gur Dayal, 22 O.C. 32, 51 I.C. 549 (552); Kanhaiya Lal v. Gulab Singh, 7 Luck. 655, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 9 (13), 138 I.C. 206; Raisunnissa v. Zorawar, 1 Luck. 92, 29 O.C. 118, 92 I.C. 675, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 228 (229); Mahadev v. Sadashiv, 45 Bom. 45; Mg. Po Kywe v. Mg. Po Tin, 7 Rang. 288, 199 I.C. 744 A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 251 (252); Ram Kishore v. Ram Nandan, 25 A.L.J. 1086, A.I.R. 1928 All. 99 (101), 108 I.C. 149; Nizam Din v. Ram Sukh, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 286, 182 I.C. 510; Sant Bux v. Ali Raza, 21 Luck. 194, A.I.R. 1946 Oudh 129; Ram Sarup v. Ram Chandar, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 29. But where a suit by the defendant would have been barred under sec. 26 or 28, the defendant cannot set up his right by way of defence—Mahadev v. Sadashiv, 45 Bom. 45 (49), 22 Bom.L.R. 1082, 59 I.C. 118. So also when the defence raises a plea of some inchoate or imperfect right, the establishment of which would depend upon a suit within a particular time, he should not be allowed to urge that defence if the suit which has not been brought would, at the time when urged in defence have been time-barred; Krishna v. Subba, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 770, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 678, 1939 M.W.N. 590, 189 I.C. 200. In other words when a man loses not only the remedy but also right by his failure to bring an action within time as laid down in section 28 the defence is barred—Ram Sarup v. Ram Chunder, 50 P.L.R. 167.

7A. Arbitration proceedings:—By S. 37 of the Arbitration Act of 1940, all the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act have been made to apply to arbitrations as they apply to proceedings in Court. S. 46 of the Arbitration Act, however, expressly excludes S. 37 thereof in its application to statutory arbitrations. It has recently been held in Savitra Khandu v. Nagar A. S. and P. Co-op. Society Ltd., A.I.R. 1957 Bom. 178 that the Board of Arbitrators appointed to resolve disputes under S. 54 of the Co-operative Societies Act is not required to apply the law of limitation to claims made before it. In this case the leading cases reported in A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 103, 1938—2 All. E.R. 152 and (1899) 68 L.J.Q.B. 252 were considered and distinguished.

7B. Set off—Limitation:—A set off may be purely defensive, that is, it may amount to an adjustment or satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, or it may be a counter-claim under which the defendant claims a decree for the surplus amount due to him. Limitation applies to both these claims. In a defensive set off the set off caimed must be recoverable at the plaintiff's suit. In a counter-claim, the sum claimed by the defendant should be legally recoverable at the date when he makes the claim, that is, at the date when he files written statement. The words legally recoverable in Or. 8, r. 6, C.P.C. mean legally recoverable at the date of the institution of the suit in one case, and as meaning legally recoverable at the date when the counter-claim is made in the other case—Jitendranath v. Jnanada Kanta, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 277.

8. "Certain applications":—It should be noticed that this Act does not provide for all kinds of applications to Court, but is limited to certain applications mentioned in the 1st schedule. The following applications are not covered by this Act.—

(1) An application for a succession-certificate to collect the debts due to the estate of a deceased person—Janaki v. Kesavalu, 8 Mad. 207 (208).

(2) an application for probate or letters of administration—In re Ishan Chunder, 6 Cal. 707 (709); Bai Manekbhai v. Manekji, 7 Bom. 213 (214); Gnanamuthu v. Vana, 17 Mad. 379 (381);

(3) an application for revocation of a probate—Kashi Chundra v. Gopikrishna, 19 Cal. 48 (50);

(4) an application under the Religious Endowments Act, or an application for the appointment of new trustees—Janaki v. Kasavalu, 8 Mad. 207 (208);

(5) an application to a Court to exercise the functions of a ministerial character (e.g., an application for the grant of a sale-certificate)—Kylasa v. Ramasami, 4 Mad. 172 (173); Vithal v. Vithojirav, 6 Bom. 586, (587); Laxmibai v. Tukaram, 26 N.L.R. 166, 122 I C. 441, A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 206; Moolla Cassim v. Moolla Abdul, 35 I.C. 950 (951), 8 L.B.R. 422;

(6) the Limitation Act must be held to apply to applications for the exercise, by the authority to which the application is addressed, of powers which it would not be bound to exercise without such application, and does not apply to an application to a Court to do what the Court is bound to do and has no discretion to refuse to do—Darbo v. Kesho, 9 All. 364 (365); Balaji v. Kushaba, 30 Bom. 415; Madhabmoni v. Lambert, 37 Cal. 796 (806); Laxmibai v. Tukaram, supra; Moolla Cassim v. Moolla Abdul, supra; as for example, an application to a Court to pass judgment according to an award—Iswardas v. Dosibai, 7 Bom. 316 (322); or an application for a certificate of sale by a purchaser of land at a Court sale—Devidas v. Pirjada, 8 Bom. 377 (380); Kylasa v. Ramasami, 4 Mad. 172 (173); or an application for amendment of a decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment—Darbo v. Kesho, supra. See Note 691 under Art. 181.

This Act applies only to applications to Courts. An application to the Collector to make a reference to the District Court under sec. 18, Land Acquisition Act, virtually amounts to an application to the District Court, and is therefore governed by this Act—Burjorjee v. Special Collector, 5 Bur.L.J. 26, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 135 (136), 96 I.C. 110.

9. Criminal proceedings:—The Limitation Act does not apply to criminal proceedings unless it is made applicable to them by express provisions—Q. v. Ameeroddeen, 15 W.R. 25 (Cr.); Q. v. Nageshappa, 20 Bom. 543 (546); Q. E. v. Ajudhia Singh, 10 All. 350; In the matter of Kittu, 11 Mad. 332. Thus, an application for sanction under sec. 195, Cr. P. Code was not governed by any rule of limitation—

Q.-E. v. Ajudhia Singh, 10 All. 350; Q. v. Nageshappa, 20 Bom. 543. Act XIII of 1859 (Workmen's Breach of Contract Act) being a penal enactment, the Limitation Act is no bar to a claim under sec. 2 of that Act to recover an advance made to a labourer —In the matter of Kittu, 11 Mad. 332. Certain criminal appeals are specially provided for in Articles 150, 154, 155 and 157.

In a recent case in Venkata v. Duvvuru, A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 406, it has been held that Sec. 5 of the Limitation Act applies to an application for special leave to appeal under S. 417(4), Cr. P. C.

9A. The Act is a complete Code:—The Limitation Act, being the enactment of the Legislature which has dealt with all matters connected with the limitation of all actions, appeals, applications and so on, is a complete Code; and no Court would be entitled to invoke any principle for the purpose of holding a claim as not barred by the law of limitation, which is not contained or necessarily implied in any of the sections or articles of the Limitation Act—Ammalu v. Narayanan, 51 Mad. 549, 111 I.C. 210, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 509 (513). See also Ram Charan v. Goga, 49 All 565, A.I.R. 1927 All. 446, 102 I.C. 96; Sarat Kamani v. Nagendra, 29 C.W.N. 973, 89 I.C. 1000, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 65; Satyanarayana v. Seethayya, 50 Mad. 417, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 597, 100 I.C. 776; Maqbul Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85; Md. Yunis v. Tilokchand, A.I.R. 1935 All. 323; Ram Gopal v. Mt. Ganga Devi, A.I.R. 1936 All. 383. PART I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Limitation Act, 1908.

(2) It extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

(3) This section and section 31 shall come into force at once. The rest of this Act shall come into force on the first day of January, 1909.

Note:—The words "and section 31" occurring in sub-section (3) should be omitted, because section 31 has been repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act, VIII of 1930, as it has been obviously spent. In sub-s. (2) the words "the whole of India except Part B States" were substituted by A.O. 1950 for the words "all the Provinces of India" and the words "except the State of Jammu and Kashmir" were substituted for the words "except Part B States" by Act 3 of 1951.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "applicant" includes any person from or through whom an applicant derives his right to apply:

(2) "bill of exchange" includes a hundi and a cheque:

(3) "bond" includes any instrument whereby a person obliges himself to pay money to another, on condition that the obligation shall be void if a specified act is performed, or is not performed, as the case may be:

(4) "defendant" includes any person from or through whom a defendant derives his liability to be sued:

(5) "easement" includes a right not arising from contract, by which one person is entitled to remove and appropriate for his own profit any part of the soil belonging to another or anything growing in, or attached to, or subsisting upon, the land of another:

(6) "foreign country" means any country other than [India, but includes also the State of Jammu and Kashmir].

(7) "good faith": nothing shall be deemed to be done in good faith which is not done with due care and attention:

(8) "plaintiff" includes any person from or through whom a plaintiff derives his right to sue:

(9) "promissory note" means any instrument whereby the maker engages absolutely to pay a specified sum of money to another at a time therein limited, or on demand, or at sight:

(9A) "India" means the territory of India excluding the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

(10) "suit" does not include an appeal or an application: and

(11) "trustee" does not include a benamidar, a mortgagee remaining in possession after the mortgage has been satisfied, or a wrong-doer in possession without title.

The words "Ind'a, but includes also any Acceding State" were substituted for the words "British India" by the Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order, 1948. The Clause (9A) has been inserted by the Adaptation of Laws Order, 1950 issued under the Constitution of India.

10. Effect of a Definition Clause:—Where a term is defined in an Act, it should, all throughout the Act, be understood in the sense assigned to it by the Act—Umacharan v. Ajedunnissa, 12 Cal. 430 (433); Q. E. v. Ramlal, 15 All. 141. The words of an enactment must be taken first in the sense given to them by the Legislature, and secondly in their natural meaning, if not inconsistent with the Preamble or the context—Robert Wigram v. Richard, 4 M.I.A. 179. When the term is not so defined, it is to be understood in its popular or dictionary meaning unless a contrary intention prima facie appears, Janki v. Sahebunnessa, 7 O.C. 74 or in the sense in which it had previously been used, Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhy, 5 M.I.A. 234 (250). Where the Legislature has left a term undefined, the Court should not lay down a rigid definition for it, and thereby crystallise the law—Krishna v. Sarat, 44 Cal. 163 (178), 25 C.L.J. 24.

10A. Cl. (3)—'Bond':—The definition is the same as in sec. 2 (5) (a) of the Indian Stamp Act, II of 1899. The definition given in this Act is not exhaustive, for in defining the term the word "includes" has been used. It is not limited in its meaning to conditional bond. It has been used in the same sense in which it is used in the ordinary legal parlance as meaning an instrument whereby a person obliges himself to pay money to another—Lachman Singh v. Karansee, 1947 M.L.R. 94. Where 40 maunds of wheat were advanced to the defendants who agreed in writing to repay the same with interest in kind, held that the instrument was a bond within the meaning of this section, and not a mere agreement—Wadhawa v. Karim Baksh, 6 Lah. 276, 86 I.C. 844, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 415.

11. Cl. (4)—'Defendant'—'from or through':—Adverse possession of a defendant may be added to the previous adverse possession of the widow by whom the defendant was adopted, as the defendant derived his liability to be sued from the widow and thus brought himself within the definition of a "defendant" as provided by this section—Padajirav v. Ranrav, 13 Bom. 160 (165). So also, adverse possession by the defendant of the office of archaka may be supplemented by the previous adverse possession of his predecessor-in-office—Krishnaswami v. Veeraswami, 36 M.L.J. 93, 49 I.C. 393. Adverse possession of the defendant may be supplemented by the previous adverse possession of the judgment-debtor from whom the defendant purchased, and may be pleaded in a suit by the auction-purchaser under sec. 331 of the C. P. C. of 1882 (rr. 99 and 103, Order XXI of the Code of 1908)—Namdev v. Ramchandra, 18 Bom. 37 (40). A son in a Mitakshara family acquires an interest by devolution, as soon as he is born, in the property vested in his father and other members of the family, and thus he derives his liability to be sued from or through his father and those members and to be impleaded as a defendant in a suit against the family property—Hari Prasad v. Sourendra, 1 Pat. 506 (521), 3 P.L.T. 709, 66 I.C. 945, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 450. A purchaser at an auction sale acquires the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, and in virtue of that, is put in possession, by reason of which he becomes liable to be sued by the true owner. He therefore, derives such liability, within the contemplation of this section, from or through the judgment-debtor—Ali Saheb v. Kaji Ahmad, 16 Bom. 197 (199). A char which was found to be reformation in situ of the plaintiff's land was occupied for some years by Government. It was then claimed by the defendants as their property, and Government made over possession to them. On plaintiff's suing to recover possession, the defendants pleaded limitation and to make out their plea, claimed to tack on to their own occupation the period of Government's possession. Held that the defendants did not derive liability to be sued from or through the Government but on the other hand they had claimed against the Government and had recovered the land from the Government; they therefore could not tack the period of Government's possession to their own—Bsanta Kumar v. Secretary of State, 44 Cal. 858 (874) (P.C.), 21 C.W.N. 642, 40 I.C. 337.

In construing the Law of Limitation the Court must confine itself strictly within the terms of the Limitation Act and not enlarge the scope of the Act by introducing 'notional' defendant in the place of the word 'defendant'—Manindra v. Santi Rani, 55 C.W.N. 306, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 518.

12. Cl. (5)—'Easement':—The definition of "easement" given in this section shall not apply to those places where the Easements Act applies, viz., Madras, C.P., Coorg, Bombay, U. P. and Oudh. See sec. 29, sub-section (4). In those places, the definition given in sec. 4 of the Easements Act will be adopted. See Note 227 under sec. 26. Though a right to take earth from the land of another is not an easement, but a profit in prendre in gross, it falls within the extended meaning given to the word "easement" in this clause—Darbari v. Khatir, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 202.

13. Cl. (7)—'Good faith':—The definition is almost the same as that given in sec. 52 of the Indian Penal Code. Cases of the nature where the plaintiff seeks protection under sec. 14, Limitation Act, are governed by the definition given in that Act—Tirumala v. Panasa, I.L.R. (1956) Cut. 135, A.I.R. 1956 Orissa 124.

14. Cl. (8)—Plaintiff—'from or through':—Under clause (8) of this section, the word "plaintiff" includes any person through whom the present claimant derives his right to sue. Compare the language of sec. 1 of the (English) Real Property Limitation Act, 1874:—"The person through whom another person is said to claim shall mean any person, by, through, or under, or by the act of whom, the person so claiming became entitled to the estate or interest claimed, as heir, issue in tail, tenant by the courtesy of England tenant in dower, successor, special or general occupant, executor, administrator, legatee, husband, assignee, appointee, devisee or otherwise, and also any person who was entitled to an estate or interest to which the person so claiming or some person through whom he claims became entitled as lord by escheat."

A stanom, according to the customary law of Malabar is descendible from one stanom-holder to another in a peculiar line of succession, and each successive holder is in the same position as an ordinary heir succeeding on intestacy. Stanom-holders, therefore, derive their title to sue from or through their immediate predecessors within the meaning of this clause—Rajah of Palghat v. Ramanunni, 41 Mad. 4 (10), 33

M.L.J. 26, 42 I.C. 22. A succeeding watandar derives his title as son and heir of the preceding watandar; and therefore adverse possession against the preceding watandar bars the present watandar who derives his title from and through the preceding watandar —Tuka Lakhu v. Gamu Vithu, 55 Bom. 21, 32 Bom.L.R. 1398, 129 I.C. 145, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 24 (27). But a ghatwal does not 'claim through' a previous ghatwal within the meaning of this clause, even though the latter may be the father of the former—Prosanna v. Srikant, 40 Cal. 173 (180), 17 C.W.N. 139, 16 I.C. 365. A reversioner claiming an estate under the Hindu law does not claim from or through the widow in whom the estate vested at the death of the last male holder—Sambasiva v. Ragava, 13 Mad. 512 (515). Therefore, adverse possession against the widow does not necessarily bar the reversioners. See this subject discussed under Article 141. An adopted son, who is adopted by a widow after the death of her husband, does not derive his right to sue from or through his adoptive mother—Harek Chand v. Bejoy Chand, 9 C.W.N. 795 (800). But see 13 Bom. 160 cited in Note 11, ante.

A trustee of an endowment derives his title from or through the trustee preceding him—Gnanasambandha v. Velu Pandaram, 23 Mad. 271 (280, 281) (P.C.). See also Kalipada v. Palani, 1953 S.C.R. 503, (1953) S.C.J. 208, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 125. But one of several joint tenants does not claim from or through a deceased joint tenant, because where one of the joint tenants dies, no one claims anything under him, as there is no transmission of interest—Richardson v. Young, L.R. 6 Ch. 478 (481), cited in Bhogilal v. Amrita Lal, 17 Bom. 173 (178). And where there are several reversioners entitled successively under the Hindu Law to an estate held by a Hindu widow, no one of them claims through or derives his title from another, but each derives title from the last full owner—Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (43) (F.B.). If therefore the right of the nearest reversioner to contest an alienation by the widow is allowed to be barred by limitation as against him, it will not bar the similar rights of the remoter reversioners. See Notes under Article 125.

15. Cl. (9)—'Promissory note':—Compare the definition given in sec. 4, Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881): "A promissory note is an instrument in writing (not being a bank note or a currency note) containing an unconditional undertaking, signed by the maker to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a certain person, or to the bearer of the instrument."

This clause is not subject to the provisions of law contained in paragraph 3 of sec. 5 of the Negotiable Instruments Act. According to the definition given in this clause an instrument which otherwise has the real and substantive character of a promissory note does not cease to be so merely because it contains a stipulation for payment of interest—Lachman Singh v. Karansee, 1947 M.L.R. 94.

'Specified sum':—Where an amount due under an instrument including interest can be found out from the instrument itself without any extraneous aid, it is a "specified sum" of money within the meaning of this clause even though a little calculation may be necessary—Lachman Singh v. Karansee, 1947 M.L.R. 94.

16. Cl. (10)—'Suit':—The word "suit" ordinarily means, and apart from some context must be taken to mean, a civil proceeding instituted by the presentation of a plaint—Hansraj v. Official Liquidators, 54 All. 1067 (P.C.), 1933 A.L.J. 175, 37 C.W.N. 379 (386). Therefore a proceeding under sec. 244, C. P. Code, 1882 (sec. 47 C. P. Code, 1908) is not a suit, as the proceeding does not begin with a plaint but with an application—Venkatachandrappa v. Venkatarama, 22 Mad. 256 (258). The word 'suit' in this Act does not include an appeal or an application—Sahdeo v. Nathuni, 8 B.R. 397. Thus, it does not include an appeal in a divorce suit—A. v. B., 22 Bom.

612. Nor does it include an application under sec. 214, Indian Companies Act (1882)—Connell v. Himalaya Bank, 18 All. 12 (15). An application (under sec. 186, Indian Companies Act, 1913) in the winding up, by the official liquidators of a company seeking to recover certain sums from certain persons as debtors to the company is an application and not a suit for the purposes of this Act—Hansraj v. Official Liquidators, supra.

Cl. (11)—'Trustee':—See Notes under sec. 10.

PART II.

LIMITATION OF SUITS, APPEALS AND APPLICATIONS.

Dismissal of suit, etc., instituted, etc., after period of limitation.

3. Subject to the provisions contained in sections 4 to 25 (inclusive), every suit instituted, appeal preferred, and application made, after the period of limitation prescribed therefor by the first schedule shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been set up as a defence.

Explanation.—A suit is instituted, in ordinary cases, when the plaint is presented to the proper officer; in the case of a pauper, when his application for leave to sue as a pauper is made; and, in the case of a claim against a company which is being wound up by the Court, when the claimant first sends in his claim to the official liquidator.

16A. Special or local laws:—By section 29 (2), as amended by the Indian Limitation Amendment Act, 1922, this section has been made applicable to special or local laws.

Thus, a suit under the Bengal Tenancy Act, if brought after the period prescribed by Sch. III, Art. 3 of that Act must be dismissed, although limitation has not been pleaded as a defence—Gajadhar v. Ram Charan, 9 Pat. 788 (F.B.), 125 I.C. 565, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 256 (260). Where the local or special law is silent on the matter of limitation in respect of suits, appeals or applications contemplated or authorised by it, and some Article of Sch. 1, Limitation Act, would cover them the provisions of this section would be applicable. The amendment of sec. 29 by Act 10 of 1922, does not affect the position—Province of Bengal v. Amulya, 54 C.W.N. 297, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 356.

17. Government:—Even the Government is not entitled to an exemption from the provisions of the Limitation Act—Appaya v. Collector, 4 Mad. 155 (156).

18. Custom:—No custom will be allowed to override the positive prescriptions of the Limitation Act—Mohanlal v. Amratlal, 3 Bom. 174.

19. Agreement of parties, waiver, etc.:—The parties cannot by consent or agreement extend or alter the period of limitation—Kristo Komul v. Huree Sirdar, 13 W.R. 44 (F.B.); Lalla Ram Sahoy v. Dodraj, 20 W.R. 395; Noban v. Dhon Mahomed, 5 Cal. 820 (821); Khetra Mohan v. Mohim, 18 I.C. 595 (596) (Cal.); Midnapur Zemindary Co. v. Deputy Commissioner, 3 P.L.J. 132 (136), 44 I.C. 370. Compare sec. 28, Contract Act, which enacts: "Every agreement.....which limits the time within which any party may enforce his rights is void to that extent." So also, the parties cannot waive the statute or contract themselves out of the law of limitation in this country. For, it is well settled that there can be no estoppel against an Act of the Legislature. An agreement by a person against whom a cause of action has arisen, that he would not take advantage of the law of limitation is ineffective—Sitharama v. Krishnaswami, 38 Mad. 374 (381), 25 M.L.J. 264, 21 I.C. 24. No one can contract himself out of the statute of limitation; and consequently, where the result of a compromise between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor was that the limitation provided by law was extended, it was open to the judgment-debtor to plead that the decree-holder's application for execution was barred by limitation—Gobardhan v. Dau Dayal, 54 All. 573 (F.B.), 1932 A.L.J. 365, 138 I.C. 583, A.I.R. 1932 All. 273 (281). This section places it beyond the power of the Judge, as well as beyond the power of the defendant, to ignore or waive the plea of limitation—Mangu v. Kandhai, 8 All. 475 (483); Samuel v. Improvement Trust, 26 O.C. 324, 73 I.C. 127; Ramanatha v. Commissioner, 6 Rang. 175, A I.R. 1920 Rang. 152 (153); Shanker Dass v Sita Ram, A.I R. 1956 Pepsu 83. A covenant not to raise the plea of limitation in case a suit has to be filed is inoperative and invalid, since its effect is to defeat the provisions of this Act, and as such falls within section 23 of the Contract Act—Ramamurthy v. Gopayya, 40 Mad. 701 (705). Such a covenant will not prevent the Court from interfering and dismissing the suit—Chaturbhuj v. Muhammad Habib, 54 I.C. 36 (38) (Pat.).

20. Consent of parties:—The consent of parties cannot give a Court jurisdiction to hear an appeal when the same has been presented beyond the time prescribed by the Limitation Act—Debi v. Mulhu, 1894 A.W.N. 19.

20A. Plea of limitation:—It is against all law and equity to overlook limitation, and rob the vested rights of parties, in the absence of fraud, or at least fraud in equity though it is a technical right and may grate against the ordinary layman's sense of fair-play. Limitation is as valid and binding as any other plea in law, when it is fully proved—Lakshminarasamma v. Seshayya, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 150, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 491.

21. Onus of proof:—This section compels the Court to dismiss the suit, if it is time-barred, although the defence of limitation has not been set up, and the plaintiff must show that his suit has been instituted within the period of limitation, or that there are circumstances which take his case out of the ordinary period of limitation—Mahomed Arsad v. Eakoob, 24 W.R. 181 (182); Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand, 97 P.R. 1910, 8 I.C. 999 (1011). The plaintiff must on his own allegations be able to show that his suit is within time; if he cannot do so, and if his own allegations seem to show that the suit is time-barred, he cannot be allowed to adopt this and that allegation of the defendant in order to show that his claim is not barred—Mansa Ram v. Behari, 6 P.R. 1912, 12 I.C. 453 (454). The burden rests in the first instance upon the plaintiff to show that his suit is not instituted after the period prescribed therefor by the first Schedule and accordingly is not required to be dismissed under this section. Thus in a suit for redemption where there is no evidence that the mortgage was for any fixed time, the plaintiff has to show that the mortgage was effected within 60 years of the date of suit. Mere proof that it was in existence within that period is not sufficient to shift the burden to the defendant for showing that the suit was not filed within time—Md. Akbar v. Mt. Motal, 74 I.A. 285, I.L.R. (1947) Lah. 729, 52 C.W.N. 132, A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 36; Mt. Bhari v. Des Raj, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 157. See also Thayammal v. Rangaswami, A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 15, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 426; Chouthmal v. Ramchandra, I.L.R. (1955) Nag. 321, A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 126; Peerumuhammad v. Kassim, A.I.R. 1955 T.C. 188. But if the plaintiff proves his case and the defendant sets up the defence of limitation, the defendant must plead it and show that the claim is barred—Radha Prasad v. Bhajan, 7 All. 677 (680). If the defendant asserts that a shorter period applies, then the burden lies on the defendant to prove the circumstances which bring the suit within the shorter period. See Mohan Singh v. Henry Conder, 7 Bom. 478 (480). If when the plaintiff proves his case (in a suit to recover money on a bond) it appears from the facts that the debt accrued at a date earlier than the period of limitation, and the defendant has set up the plea of limitation, in that case the defendant will be entitled to judgment—Radha Prasad v. Bhajan, supra.

So also, this section compels the Appellate Court to dismiss a time-barred appeal although the respondent has not taken the objection; and it lies upon the appellant to prove affirmatively that the appeal has been presented in proper time—Ramey v. Broughton, 10 Cal. 652 (658, 661).

Where a suit on the face of it is time-barrred, the Court is bound to do its duty under sec. 3 and dismiss the suit to that extent, even though limitation has not been set up as a defence. The principle is applicable even to appellate Court—Jiwandas v. Babu Lal, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 285.

22. Suit instituted:—Before 1908 there was a difference of judicial opinion as to whether for the purposes of limitation, the date of presentation of a plaint with insufficient Court-fees or the date of payment of requisite Court-fees within the period fixed by the Court, though after the period of limitation prescribed therefor, should be deemed to be the date of institution of the suit. But the controversy has been set at rest by sec. 149, C. P. Code, 1908, which lays down:—"Where the whole or any part of any fee prescribed for any document by the law for the time being in force relating to Court-fees has not been paid, the Court may, in its discretion, at any stage, allow the person by whom such fee is payable to pay the whole or part, as the case may be, of such Court-fee; and upon such payment, the document in respect of which such fee is payable shall have the same force and effect as if such fee had been paid in the first instance." So the grant of time by court after limitation relates the plaint back to the date of original filing—Venugopal v. Thirugnana, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 934; Faizulla v. Mauladad—33 C.W.N. 781 (P.C.).

If a plaint has been insufficiently stamped at its presentation, and the deficiency is supplied after the expiration of the period of limitation, and after expiry of the time fixed by the Court for the supply of the deficient stamps, it will be liable to rejection and the suit will be considered as barred—Haji v. Samjan, 44 C.W.N. 449; Ram v. Tribeni, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 234. As to application of S. 151, C. P. C. to such cases, see Bibi Aliquannissa v. Sk. Md. A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 358.

Similarly, when a plaint is returned and ordered to be amended within a time fixed by the Court, it is the date of the original presentation of the plaint, and not the date of the subsequent presentation after amendment, which is taken to be the date of institution of the suit—Patel Mafatlal v. Bai Parson, 19 Bom. 320 (323); Ram Lal v. Harrison, 2 All. 832; Durgagir v. Kallu, 7 N.L.R. 33, 10 I.C. 731 (733). A plaint may be amended after it has been registered, and it is competent for the Court to return the plaint for necessay amendment, even though at the time of such return the period of limitation for the suit may have expired—Barakatunnissa v. Muhammad Asad Ali, 17 All. 288 (291). Even though the amendment (which is made after the expiry of the period of limitation of the suit) may be tantamount to a new cause of action which as an independent suit may be barred, still if the Court admits the amendment, the suit must be deemed to have been instituted when the plaint was filed and not when the amendment was admitted by the Court—New Fleming Spinning Co. v. Kessowji, 9 Bom. 373 (402), following Ram v. Harrison, 2 All. 832. If the Court specifies a date for presentation of the plaint after the amendment, and the amended plaint is presented within that date (even though it is a date beyond the period of limitation), the plaint is deemed as filed within time, the date of original presentation being the date material for the purpose. But if the Court specifies a date for amendment which is beyond the period of limitation and the amended plaint is presented after that date, the date of subsequent presentation will be treated as the date of presentation, and the plaint will be deemed as filed out of time. It is a settled rule of law that the date of amendment is immaterial, unless indeed the time expressly allowed by the Court has been exceeded—Durgagir v. Kollu (supra).

It is no doubt true that the Courts would, as a rule, decline to allow amendments, if a fresh suit on the amended claim would be barred by limitation on the date of the application. But that is a factor to be taken into account in exercise of the discretion as to whether amendment should be ordered, and does not affect the power of the Court to order it, if that is required in the interests of justice—Leach & Co. Ltd. v. Messrs. Jardine Skinner & Co., (1957) S.C.J. 313, A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 357. The ultimate test is: Can the amendment be allowed without injustice to the other side?—Patil v. Patil, (1957) S.C.J. 371, A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 363.

Where a plaint filed in time but returned owing to want of pecuniary jurisdiction is refiled after limitation in the same Court with reduced scope so as to bring it within the jurisdiction of the said Court, the new plaint can not be treated as a continuation of the previous suit—Chandrayya v. Seethunna, 1940 M.W.N. 662, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 590, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 689 overruling the decision of Wordsworth J. reported in 1939 M.W.N. 449, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 397.

But amendment of the plaint at a later stage on account of certain circumstances happening after the institution of the suit cannot be considered to mean the institution of a new suit, particularly when the parties are the same and the dispute is the same. Hence, a suit does not become time-barred on account of an amendment which added consequential relief to the declaration prayed for when the original suit for declaration without the consequential relief was within limitation—Ganda v. Zora, A.I.R. 1950 Pepsu 21.

Where a suit was by two plaintiffs, but the plaint being signed by one alone, it was returned for the signature of the other, and the same was re-presented after the period of limitation prescribed for the suit, held, that the suit was barred—Vellappa v. Subramanian, 26 M.L.J. 494, 23 I.C. 431 (433). So also where one of joint mortgagees brings a suit without impleading the other mortgagees, who are added after the period of limitation, the suit fails and is not maintainable as there is no cause of action under this section—Adiveppa v. Rachappa, 50 Bom.L.R. 30, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 211 (F.B.). Where a plaint presented within time was returned to the plaintiff after issue of summonses, the defendants not having been found, for being re-presented when the whereabouts of the defendants could be found, the suit would be in time, though when the plaint was re-presented the period of limitation had expired—Torobaz v. Pir

Bakhsh, 22 P.R. 1887. Where plaint presented in time to the proper Court was returned by that Court to be presented to the Court deputed to try the suit, and was re-presented to the Court deputed at a time when the period prescribed had already expired, the suit should not be dismissed. The principle is that when a plaint is presented to the proper Court, which makes it over for disposal to a subordinate Court, the date of the suit is the date of original presentation, and the fact that the Court improperly returned the plaint to the plaintiff for presentation to the subordinate Court instead of itself forwarding it direct to such Court, does not affect the question of limitation—Seth Thandi Ram v. Mahadia, 7 P.R. 1895.

A suit is within time if the plaint is presented to the proper officer within the period of limitation, even though leave under Clause 12 of the Letters Patent is obtained after the expiry of such period—Suprokash v. Amullya, 44 C.W.N. 604.

Where the plaintiff unites several causes of action against the same defendant the question of limitation has to be regarded with special reference to the jurisdiction of that Court to try the suit and not to the jurisdiction of other Courts to try those suits when the causes of action are split up and filed before them—Maha Latchayya v. Seshayya, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 244, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 786, 1941 M.W.N. 807.

As to the effect of addition of a new party, see Notes under sec. 22.

Proper presentation:—See the Explanation. The plaint must be presented to an officer authorised to receive it; otherwise there is no proper presentation and the suit is not 'instituted'—Ram Chunder v. Googul Gope, 18 W.R. 172. Thus, a plaint presented to the Naib-Sheriff who is not authorised to receive plaint under O. IV, r. 1, C. P. Code, cannot be said to be presented to the proper officer, and the suit is not properly "instituted"—Nur Muhammad v. Ghulaman, 15 Lah. 308, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 622. So also, where a plaint was presented to a karkum left in charge of the Court during vacation, it was held that such presentation was invalid—Nandavallabh v. Allibhai, 6 B.H.C.R. A C. 254. A despatch by post is not presentation to the proper officer of the Court; but if such plaint is accepted and the party afterwards appears and takes out the necessary processes under the Court's orders, within the period of limitation, it may be held that the institution was not bad—Sankarnarayana v. Kunjappa, 8 Mad. 411 (413).

Suit against minor:—A suit against a minor defendant is instituted when the plaint is filed, and not when a guardian ad litem for him is subsequently appointed—Khem Karan v. Har Dayal, 4 All. 37 (39); Imami v. Sadan, 18 P.R. 1901, 31 P.L.R. 1901.

Suit relating to mosque:—This section applies to every suit and provides no exception for suits concerning wakfs, religious institution, or lands and buildings dedicated to sacred uses—Masjid Sahid v. Shiromani, 40 P.L.R. 319, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 369 (F.B.).

Application by official Assignee u/s. 7 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. It has been held by the Madras High Court in Muthusamy v. Official Assignee, 59 Mad. 1020, 71 M.L.J. 289, 1936 M.W.N. 609, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 778 that an application by the Official Assignee under section 7 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act is equivalent to a suit for purposes of this section.

23. Appeal preferred:—In cases of appeals too, a conflict of opinion exists as to whether an appeal should be treated as preferred on the day on which it is first presented, or on the subsequent date on which it is presented after putting in of proper stamps. According to some cases, the date of the original presentation of the memo-stamps, is deemed to be the date of filing of the appeal, and therefore the fact that the deficiency of stamps is supplied after the expiry of the period of limitation does not make the appeal time-barred—Patch Saheb v. Sub-Collector, 15 Mad. 78; Sheo Partab v. Sheo Gholam, 2 All. 875; see also Chennappa v. Raghunath, 15 Mad. 29. But in Yakubunnissa v. Kishori Mohan, 19 Cal. 747, and Balkaran v. Gobind Nath, 12 All. 129 (141) (F.B.) it has been said that a memorandum of appeal not properly stamped when presented cannot be treated as properly presented, and the subsequent presentation after supply of proper stamps beyond the period of limitation is ineffectual. The two last-mentioned cases are no longer good law in view of section 149 of the C. P. Code, 1908. See that section cited under Note 22 above. But it should be noted that that section gives a discretion to the Court to allow or not to allow the party to pay the deficient Court-fee afterwards. And so it has been held that if an appellant deliberately without any excusable ground and to suit his own convenience pays on his appeal insufficient Court-fees, the Court is not bound to accept the appeal and give the appellant time to make good the deficiency—Ram Sahay v. Lachmi Narayan, 3 P.L.J. 74, 42 I.C. 675. Again, where the appellant files the memorandum of appeal on the last day of limitation with insufficient Court-fees and pays the deficit amount of his own accord after the period of limitation, the appeal is out of time as it must be deemed to have been presented when the Court-fee is paid in full—Ayyappa v. Marimuthu, 165 I.C. 57, 44 L W. 249.

Where an appellant presented a memorandum of appeal within the period of limitation, but the Appellate Court returned it for correction, without specifying any date for such correction, and it was afterwards presented after amendment at a time when the period of limitation had expired, held that the appeal should be taken as preferred on the date of the first presentation (and not the subsequent presentation after amendment) of the memorandum of appeal, and was in time—Jagannath v. Latman, 1 All. 260.

Proper presentation of appeal:—An appeal is said to be 'preferred' when it is presented in accordance with sec. 541 of the C. P. Code, 1882 (O. XLI, R. 1 of the Code of 1908), i.e., by a proper person to the proper Court—Akshoy Kumar v. Chunder Mohun, 16 Cal. 250 (251). Presentation of an appeal without a copy of the decree appealed from is not a proper filing of the appeal—Masum v. Madan, 9 I.C. 222 (223), 1911 P.W.R. 8; Balkaran v. Gobind Nath, 12 All. 129 (139) (F.B.); Chamila v. Amir Khan, 16 All. 77 (78); Akbar Ali v. Ram Chand, 53 P.R. 1887; Nihal v. Iswar, 147 P.R. 1879; C v. C., 22 P.R. 1903; Bhag Singh v. Jhanda Singh, 7 P.R. 1879. But a copy of the decree of the first Court is not required to be filed with the memorandum of a second appeal—Pirathi v. Vencatramanayyan, 4 Mad. 419 (420) (F.B.); Chunilal v. Dahyabhai, 32 Bom. 14 (24) (F.B.). If a memorandum of appeal is presented to the District Jurge at his private residence after Court hours, on the last day of limitation, the Judge has jurisdiction to accept it, although he is not bound to do so. If he accepts the appeal at his private residence, he cannot afterwards reject it on the ground that it was presented out of Court hours after the expiry of the limitation period—Thakur Din Ram v. Hari Das, 34 All. 482 (486) (F.B.), 14 I.C. 744, 9 A.L.J. 743.

In a case under the Sea Customs Act, 1878, the Supreme Court has recently held that the date of receipt by the appellate authority of the memorandum of appeal is the date of filing appeal and not the date of posting the memorandum—Roy v. Collector of Customs, A.I.R. 1957 S.C. 648.

Appeal by prisoner:—Under the provisions of sec. 420, Cr. P. Code, presentation of the petition of appeal by a prisoner in jail to the officer in charge of the jail is equivalent to presentation to the Court—Queen v. Lingaya, 9 Mad. 258 (259).

24. "Application made":—For the purposes of limitation, application may be made at any time in the day, notwithstanding the rules of the Court prescribing certain hours for the receipt of petitions and hearing of motions—Desputty v. Dootas Roy, 1 C.L.R. 291. Thus, an application for execution presented to proper officer beyond Court hours on last day of limitation is a valid one and no ratification by the Judge is necessary for such presentation—Kishanlal v. Narain, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 451, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 46, 174 I.C. 597. An application made to the High Court (original side) of Bombay is deemed to be made for the purposes of limitation when the notice of motion is first filed in the proper office of the Court, and not when the motion is made—Venkapaiya v. Nazerally, 47 Bom. 764 (772).

When an application for execution is defective in certain particulars, and a supplemental application furnishing such particulars is put in, the two may be considered as one application put in on the date of the first—MacGregor v. Tarini Churn, 14 Cal. 124 (127). If an application presented within time is returned by the Court for amendment, and is re-presented after amendment after the period of limitation, the amendment relates back to the original presentation—Shama Prasad v. Taki Mullik, 5 C.W.N. 816 (817). But it has been held by the Allahabad High Court that an insufficiently stamped application for review will be considered as made, for the purposes of limitation, only on the date the deficiency in stamp is supplied—Munro v. Cawnpore Municipal Board, 12 All. 57 (60). Compare the cases cited ante as regards insufficiently stamped plaints. The Allahabad case is no longer good law in view of the provisions of sec. 149 of the C. P. Code, 1908.

The application must be made to the proper officer, otherwise there is no proper making of application. The presentation of an application for review to the Munsarim of the District Court instead of to the Judge was held to be improper—Munro v. Cawnpore Municipal Board, 12 All. 57 (59).

The principles of this section applies to execution proceedings—Karali v. Probodh, 54 C.W.N. 900, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 513.

25. "Shall be dismissed":—"Reasons of public policy having dictated the enactment of the Law of Limitation, the Indian Legislature has expressly declared that, whether the defence of limitation be pleaded or not, the Courts whether of first instance or of appeal are bound to give effect to such law. The bar of limitation cannot be waived, and suits and other proceedings must be dismissed if brought after the prescribed periods of limitation."—U. N. Mitra's Limitation (5th Edn.), p. 38. Sec. 3 requires that every suit or application made after the period prescribed therefor shall be dismissed, although limitation has not been set up as a defence. An obligation is thus cast upon the Court to dismiss a suit or application, if it is barred by limitation —Asutosh v. Upendra, 21 C.W.N. 564 (568), 24 C.L.J. 467, 38 I.C. 17. It has been held in a Madras case that the obligation cast upon a Court to dismiss a suit exists only in cases where it is in a position to dismiss the whole suit. It does not exist, where the plaintiff's claim is partially admitted by the defendant—Kandasamy v. Annamalai, 28 Mad. 67 (68, 69). But the correctness of this decision may be doubted. If the portion of the claim before the Appellate Court is barred by limitation, may not the Court dismiss that portion?

It is well settled that the Court has no general discretion outside the limits of the Limitation Act to dispense with its provisions or to relieve a suitor from the operation of the Act on the ground of hardship or mistake. The provisions of sec. 3 of the Act are peremptory and impose a duty upon the Court to dismiss a suit or an application, as the case may be, which is out of time unless the delay can be condoned under sec. 5 of the Act, or under any other provision of law for the time being in force—Tejumal Bhagwandas v. Murad, A.I.R. 1936 Sind. 169, 30 S.L.R. 242, 165 I.C. 91; (Maqbal Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85, 57 All. 242, followed). Section 3 of the Act is peremptory, and it is the duty of the Court to notice the Act, and give effect to it, even though it is not referred to in the pleadings—Maqbal Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85 (88), 57 All. 242, 62 I.A. 80, 39 C.W.N. 640, 61 C.L.J. 267, 68 M.L.J. 665, 1935 A.L.J. 578, 37 Bom.L.R 533, 1935 M.W.N. 438, 41 L.W. 629, 155 I.C. 205, 37 P.L.R. 395. The provisions of section 3 are mandatory—Md. Yunis v. Tilokchand, A.I.R. 1935 All. 323 (326), 1935 A.L.J. 201, 4 A.W.R. 1352, 153 I.C. 1058. Courts are bound to apply the law of limitation in suits whether it is pleaded or not and to dismiss a suit which is apparently beyond time—Udeypal Singh v. Lakshmichand, A.I.R. 1935 All. 946 (948-49), 1935 A.L.J. 1029, 1935 A.W.R. 155, 159 I.C. 387 (F.B.). The section is mandatory and leaves no room for equitable consideration—Banwari v. Ramhari, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 335, 197 I.C. 217. This section casts a duty on the Court to dismiss the suit if it is instituted after the period of limitation, even though not pleaded in defence—Shambhoo v. Firm Dindayal, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 228, I.L.R. (1950) Nag, 454, 1950 N.L.J. 150.

Unless sufficient cause is shown by an appellant for the admission of appeal which has not been filed within time, it is the duty of the Court to dismiss it although the respondent has not taken up such a plea—Sudama Rai v. Bisheshar, A.I.R. 1935 All. 92 (93), 4 A.W.R. 1460, 152 I.C. 939. In view of the provisions of sec. 3, Limitation Act, it is not permissible to claim any exemption apart from what is contained in the Limitation Act—Jitendra v. Rebatimohan, A.I.R. 1953 Cal. 335.

The obligation to dismiss a time-barred suit or appeal rests upon the Court before which the suit is instituted or appeal is preferred, but is not laid on each successive Court whenever the objection comes to view. That is, an Appellate Court is bound to consider whether the appeal before it is time-barred, but not whether the suit as instituted before the Court of first instance was time-barred or not. Similarly, a Second Appellate Court (High Court) is bound to consider whether the second appeal before it is time-barred, but not whether the suit in the Court of first instance was barred, or whether the appeal before the lower Appellate Court was so barred—Dattu v. Kasai, 8 Bom. 535 (537); Ahmad Ali v. Waris, 15 All. 123 (126).

The effect of this section is to bring about the automatic dismissal of suits, appeals and applications founded upon debts or causes of action which according to their various periods of limitation are time barred. It is only the remedy that is destroyed, but the debt remains. So such a debt can be set off by a liquidator in winding up proceedings against debts by the company to the debtor—Thakur Prasad v. Official Liquidator, I.L.R. (1941) All. 415, A.I.R. 1941 All. 278; Eastern Mercantile Bank Ltd. v. Krishna Menon, A.I.R. 1957 Kerala 100. Limitation bars the remedy; it does not destroy the right unless a case is of the description provided for by sec. 28. Hence, the right of a reversioner to challenge an alienation by a Hindu widow is not destroyed but continues to exist even after the period of limitation for a suit to challenge it has expired—Bal Jit v. Chand Kiran, I.L.R. (1950) All. 564, A.I.R. 1950 All. 7. The same High Court in the Full Bench case of Rameshwar Bux v. Ganga Bux, 1950 A.L.J. 632, A.I.R. 1950 All. 598 has held that it is no doubt true that the Limitation Act bars the remedy and not the right, the right remains; but it cannot be enforced by judicial process. Thus in the Courts a time-barred mortgagee has no legal status and no rights; he cannot sue and his presence as a defendant cannot enlarge or in any way affect proceedings which without him are defective and must fail. There is no place for him in the proceedings before the Court for his capacity to activate them is dead. But apart from this, the vital section, sec. 3, upon which the whole Limitation Act depends for its efficacy, in term says that he shall not be there, for the section not only requires that every suit instituted after the period of limitation shall be dismissed, but also, that every application made after such period shall meet a similar fate. But see Varaha v. Ummer, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 17 where it has been held that the mortgagee can plead in defence time-barred claims due to him in a suit for redemption.

Time-barred appeal presented before wrong Court:—Where an appeal is filed in the wrong Court and is out of time, the Court is entitled to dismiss it, and not to return it for presentation to the proper Court in order that the latter may consider the question as to whether the time can be extended under sec. 5—Charandas v. Amirkhan, 48 Cal. 110 (117, 118) (P.C.), 25 C.W.N. 289, 57 I.C. 606.

25A. Admitting time-barred appeal subject to objections:—The practice of admitting a time-barred appeal "subject to objections at the hearing" has been condemned by the Privy Council in Krishnasami v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 412, and should therefore cease. See also Talendrajit v. Gunendrajit, 31 C.L.J. 1, 50 I.C. 374; Abdul Kassem v. Chaturbhuj, 6 P.L.J. 444, 3 P.L.T. 110, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 47; Chaturbhuj v. Muhammad Habib, 54 IC. 36 (38) (Pat.). In the above Privy Council case as well as in Sundarbai v. Collector, 43 Bom. 376 (P.C.) their Lordships of the Judicial Committee impressed on the Courts in India the urgent expediency of adopting a procedure which should secure at the stage of admission the final determination (after due notice to all parties) of any question of limitation affecting the competency of an appeal. See also Note 70 under section 5.

26. Limitation not pleaded as defence:—In a matter which is governed by an Act which in some limited respects gives the Court a statutory discretion, there cannot be implied in the Court, outside the limits of the Act, a general discretion to dispense with its provisions. And this view is supported by the fact that sec. 3 of the Act is peremptory and that the duty of the Court is to notice the Act and give effect to it, even though it is not referred to in the pleadings—(Macbul Ahmad v. Sankar Pratap, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85 (88); Alaf Khan v. Kurban, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 245, 1947 N.L.J. 274, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 41. It is well settled that the question whether a suit is within time must be decided primarily on the basis of the plaintiff's own pleading, and not on the basis of the defence set up—Des Raj v. Lachhi Ram, 147 I.C. 57, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 404 (405). It may not be proper to draw upon facts stated by the defendant in his written statement for the purpose of determining a question of limitation—Jainarain v. G. G. of India, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 462. The provisions of this section are mandatory and a Court is bound to take notice of a question of limitation not specifically raised in the written statement, if on the facts in the plaint and those found, it patently appears that the suit is barred —Rhodes v. Padmanabha, 17 M.L.T. 18, 26 I.C. 369; Vishweswar v. Sadashiv, 27 Bom.L.R. 1456, 93 I.C. 930, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 54 (55). Quite apart from the plea of the defendant, it is the duty of the Court to see if upon the allegations in the plaint the suit is within time, and if the case is prima facie barred, it is the duty of the Court to take up this point suo motu and dismiss the claim. Even the fact that the defendant abandoned the plea of limitation in the lower Court does not relieve the Appellate Court of the duty of taking notice of the point of limitation suo motu—Nihal Devi v. Kishore Chand, 97 P.R. 1910, 8 I.C. 999 (1011). So also it is the duty of the appellate Court to take notice of the point of limitation even if the plea was not raised in the written statement or in the trial court and no issue was framed, if it appears to the appellate Court that the suit is barred by limitation—Byom Kesh v. Madhavji, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 421, 1939 P.W.N. 114. This rule is applicable only where the question of limitation is purely one of law capable of determination on the facts admitted or proved before the court and not where the question of limitation raises issues of facts not arising from the plaint—Official Trustee v. Mrs. Raeburn, 1940 Rang.L.R. 273, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 207, 193 I.C. 61. But where the suit is not on the face of it obviously barred by limitation, the Appellate Court does not exercise a wise discretion in taking up the question of limitation on its own initiative—Mg. Yan v. Mg. P. Ka, 3 Rang. 60, 89 I.C. 56, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 223. Though the question of limitation was never raised in either of the lower Courts, nor raised in the memorandum presented to the High Court in second appeal, the High Court can nevertheless dismiss the suit if it is time-barred on the face of the pleadings in accordance with the mandatory provisions of this section, provided that the other party is given adequate opportunity to be heard on the suit—Balaram v. Mangta, 34 Cal. 941 (945, 951) (S.B.), 11 C.W.N. 959, 6 C.L.J. 237.

But, in spite of the provisions of this section, it is advisable for the defendant to plead limitation, if the suit is instituted after the prescribed period. If the defence of limitation rests upon a disputed question of fact, and the defendant does not raise the plea in his written statement nor does the point of limitation arise upon the evidence, the Court may refuse to frame an issue on that point at the hearing—Venkata Narasinha v. Bhashyakarlu, 25 Mad. 367 (370, 378) (P.C.).

It is true that the plea of limitation can be urged at any stage having regard to sec. 3, Limitation Act, but when a party does take the appropriate defence but does not put before the Court materials to sustain that defence it becomes difficult for the Court sitting in appeal to give effect to the defence contention—Bejoykumar v. Satishchandra, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 282.

27. Plea of limitation, when can be taken:—In the original Court, if the plea of limitation is taken before the issues are fixed, it must, of course, be entertained and decided. If it is taken by the defendant at a later stage and can be decided on the existing issues and on the record as it stands, here again the Court is bound to take note of it and decide it. This rule holds good whether the plea has been actually taken or not, if the matter has in any way come to the notice of the Court. But if, after the issues in the case have been fixed and the case has proceeded to some length, the defendant raises the question of limitation, and the Court finds that in order to decide that question, fresh issues of fact have to be gone into and additional evidence taken, then the Court has the option of refusing to entertain the plea. When a case has passed out of the Court of first instance and is before a Court of appeal, the rule remains the same; and an Appellate Court or a second Appellate Court is generally bound to listen to a plea of limitation if it can be decided without further inquiry; but the Court has also an option in the matter. But the Appellate or second Appellate Court is justified in refusing to entertain a plea of limitation which was not taken in the first Court nor in the grounds of appeal in the Appellate Court but is urged for the first time in argument in the latter Court, where the plea for its proper decision involves further inquiry into facts—Shah Muhammad v. Piara, 84 P.R. 1911, 13 I.C. 792 (794). If the defendant deliberately abandons the plea of limitation in the Court of first instance, he cannot be allowed to raise the question in appeal, if the facts found do not enable the Appellate Court to decide it and new findings would have to be obtained—Seshachala v. Varada, 25 Mad. 55 (60); Rangayya v. Narasimha, 19 Mad. 419 (419). But if the point of limitation arises upon the facts of the case, or is obvious on the record, and does not stand in need of being developed by fresh evidence, it must be heard and determined by the Appellate Court, though it does not appear on the pleadings or in the grounds of appeal or appears for the first time in the memorandum of appeal—Deo Narain v. Webb, 28 Cal. 86; Harak Chand v. Deonath, 25 Cal. 409 (410); Bechi v. Ahsanullah, 12 All. 461 (464) (F.B.); Nadhu Mandal v.

Kartik Mandal, 9 C.W.N. 56 (58); Raghunath v. Pareshram, 9 Cal. 635; Gulabmal v. Shujawal, 25 I.C. 354 (355); Ganeshdas v. Nimbi, 8 N.L.R. 174, 17 I.C. 638; Dudo v. Md. Nathu, 27 P.L.R. 870, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 451 (452), 94 I.C. 251; Palaniappa v. Veerappa, 41 Mad. 446 (449); Maharaj Sai v. Kedar Nath, 29 N.L.R. 272, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 130 (133), 144 I.C. 948; Official Trustee v. Mrs. Raeburn, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 208; Kashi Ram v. Kundan Lal, A.I.R. 1956 All. 660. A plea of limitation can be entertained by the Appellate Court if there are materials on the record on which the plea can be disposed of, without requiring any fresh evidence on the point, even though no issue was framed in the Court of first instance on that point but the plea was merely taken in the pleading in that Court—Radha Mohan v. Ami Chand, 1933 A.L.J. 1283, A.I.R. 1934 All. 386 (387), 149 I.C. 651. Objection as to limitation can be taken at any stage of a suit or proceeding including the appellate stage—Piarey Lal v. Sukhbasi, 1949 R.D. 419. But it should be noted that if the plea of limitation is not taken in the grounds of appeal, the party urging it cannot argue it except on obtaining the permission of the Court under sec. 542, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. XLI, r. 2 of the Code of 1908)—Balaram v. Mangta, 34 Cal. 941 (945) (S.B.); Asmad Ali v. Waris, 15 All. 123 (127) (F B); and the Appellate Court should not refuse to grant the permission where the point arises on the face of the plaint and no question of fact has to be enquired into to enable the Court to dispose of it—Balaram v. Mangta, 34 Cal. 941 (945, 948) (S.B.), 11 C.W.N. 959.

Where the defendant in the Court of first instance made a general plea of limitation (viz, that the suit is barred by the 12 years' rule), the Appellate Court is not competent to dismiss the suit on the special plea, raised for the first time in the Court of Appeal, that the suit is barred under Sch. III, Art. 3 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, when no issue was raised in the original Court nor was the plaintiff allowed in that Court to adduce evidence on it, and the facts are not apparent on the face of the record in the Appellate Court—Kedar Nath v. Mohesh Chandra, 28 C.L.J. 216, 45 I.C. 787 (789). But where, although the plea of special limitation under Sch. 3, Art. 3 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was not taken in the Court of first instance, nor was taken before the District Judge in the first Appellate Court, but the District Judge in his judgment went into the question whether the suit fell under that article of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and there was no question of any prejudice to any party, the High Court in second appeal allowed the defendant-appellant to raise the question of special limitation under the Bengal Tenancy Act—Gajadhar v. Ram Charan, 9 Pat. 788 (F.B.), 11 P.L.T. 197, 125 I C. 565, A.I R. 1930 Pat 256 (260) distinguishing 28 C.L.J. 216 and 4 P.L.J. 645.

Where a respondent fails to object to the admission of a time-barred appeal by the lower Appellate Court, the High Court in second appeal is not precluded from considering the question of limitation—Chaturbhuj v. Md. Habib, 54 I.C. 36 (38) (Pat.). The Allahabad High Court holds that a second Appellate Court cannot entertain the plea that the first appeal to the lower Appellate Court was time-barred when it was presented, if the plea has not been set forth in the memorandum of second appeal—Ahmed Ali v. Waris, 15 All. 123 (128) (F.B.); Ram Kishen v. Dipa, 13 All. 580 (581). But a plea of limitation not taken in either of the Courts below cannot be entertained for the first time in second appeal where such entertainment would involve the taking of additional evidence—Atmaram v. Sardar Kuar, 1884 A.W.N. 327; Pirsab v. Gurappa, 38 Bom. 227, 16 Bom.L.R. 111, 24 I.C. 716 (719); or where the determination of the question would involve a fresh investigation of facts or would raise question of facts which were not stated in the written statement—Bhadai v. Manohar, 4 P.L.J. 645, 52 I.C. 125; Shivapa v. Dod Nagaya, 11 Bom. 114; Khub Lal v. Jugdish, 1 Pat. 23 (25, 26), 3 P.L.T. 795, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 398, 69 I.C. 185. But though the question of limitation was not raised in either of the Courts below nor set forth in the memorandum of second appeal to the High Court, that Court will allow it to be argued in second appeal if the facts necessary to determine the question of limitation are admitted or are apparent on the face of the pleadings, and the whole case is properly before the Court—Balaram v. Mangta, 34 Cal. 941 (950) (S.B.); Rangacharya v. Guru Revti Ramanacharya, 1929 A.L.J. 229, A I.R. 1928 All. 689 (695), 114 I.C. 734; or if the point of limitation is a pure point of law which does not require any fresh findings and which arises upon the materials before the Court, none of which is in dispute—Pirsab v. Gurappa, supra; Raj Narain v. Ram Sarup, 1930 A.L.J. 552, A.I.R. 1930 All. 467 (468), 123 I.C. 820. The plea can be raised for the first time in second appeal, only if it is certain that its legitimacy can be determined on the pleading and does not depend upon any question of fact regarding which the other party might have adduced evidence—Peruma v. Rama, 28 M.L.J. 115, 28 I.C. 378 (379); see also Narasingha v. Pralhadman, 46 Cal. 455 (456, 457), 22 C.W.N. 994, 47 I.C. 25. But in Dattu v. Kasai, 8 Bom. 535 (537), the second Appellate Court refused to entertain the plea of limitation raised for the first time in second appeal (even though the point appeared on the face of the plaint), on the ground that as the defendant had failed to avail himself of the opportunity of urging his objection before the Courts below, he must be considered to have waived his right to raise the objection.

A point of limitation cannot be raised for the first time in the High Court in revision, when it involves a mixed question of law and fact—Natesa v. Ramachandra, 27 M.L.J. 728, 27 I.C. 116 (118).

A plea of limitation as regards an application for execution can be taken at any time during the pendancy of the execution proceedings; thus, so long as an application for execution is pending, the judgment-debtor can at any time show that the application is barred, and the Court has no option but to dismiss it under this section. It is only when the point of limitation is concluded by proceedings in a previous execution that the judgment-debtor is not allowed to take an objection on the score of limitation in a subsequent execution of the decree—Kesho Prosad v. Harbans Lal, 2 P.L.T. 22, 53 I.C. 85 (89); Atul Krishna v. Brindaban, 9 Pat. 306, 11 P.L.T. 739, 125 I.C. 527, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 330 (331). An objection as to limitation may be taken at any stage of the execution proceedings, if the facts upon which the objection is based are patent upon the face of the record—Gunjra Koer v. Lakhan Koer, 35 I.C. 337 (339) (Patna).

A plea of limitation can be taken even though the defendants have on a previous occasion acknowledged their liability. Thus, in a suit for money, although it appeared that in a previous suit the defendants had admitted their liability with regard to certain instalments which were then time-barred and had stated that they were always ready and willing to pay, still they were not precluded on any principle of estoppel from setting up the statute of limitation in the present suit—Sitharama v. Krishnasamy, 38 Mad. 374 (380).

28. Interference by High Court:—Where the lower Court allows an application which was clearly time-barred, without at all applying its mind to the question of limitation in the case, the lower Court acts without jurisdiction and the High Court has the right to interfere in revision under sec. 115, C. P. Code—Piroj Sah v. Qarib Shah, 7 Lah. 161, 95 I.C. 124, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 379; Kaliyaparama v. Chetty Firm, 9 L.B.R. 71, 39 I.C. 154; Asanand v. Jhangi, 50 I.C. 610, 1919 P.L.R. 29; Panchu Mandal v. Isaf, 17 C.W.N. 667 (668), 18 I.C. 391.

29. Suit by a pauper:—The word "pauper" in Explanation to sec. 3 means a declared pauper and not a person whose application to sue in forma pauperis is rejected—Alopi Prashad v. Mt. Gappi, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 151; Keshav Ramchandra v.

Krishna, 20 Bom. 508; Naraini v. Makhanlal, 17 All. 526. According to the Explanation appended to this section, a pauper suit commences for the purpose of limitation on the day on which the petition to sue in forma pauperis is presented to the Court under O. 33, r. 2, C. P. Code, and not on the day when the application being granted it is numbered and registered under O. 33, r. 8—Keshavlal v. Bai Dahi, 41 Bom.L.R. 784, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 418. Therefore, if an application for leave to sue as a pauper has been presented in time, the absence of signature and verification does not prevent the petition from being properly regarded as an application under the Explanation to sec. 3 of the Limitation Act. The signature and verification can properly be made on a subsequent day—Vora v. Japan Cotton Trading Co., 32 Bom.L.R. 1343, 128 I.C. 625, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 47 (49, 50).

Where during the pendency of an application for pauperism and before it is accepted or rejected by the Court, the applicant, upon an objection by the defendant, pays into Court the necessary Court-fee, the date of the application, and not the date of such payment, is the date of institution of the suit, and limitation for the suit runs against him only up to the former date—Skinner v. Orde, 2 All. 241 (P.C.); Janakdhary v. Janaki, 28 Cal. 427 (431) (dissenting from 18 All. 206); Alayakammal v. Subraya, 28 Mad. 493; Raja Ram v. Tilok Chand, 59 P.R. 1930; Bhusanchandra v. Kamailal, 41 C.W.N. 537, 65 C.L.J. 151, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 241; Amar v. Dharichban, 27 Pat, 259, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 465. The Allahabad High Court is, however, of opinion that the latter date must be taken as the date of institution of the plaint—Abbasi Begum v. Nanhi, 18 All. 206 (209). The Explanation to sec. 3 applies when the application for leave to sue as a pauper is granted by the Court. If the application for leave to sue as a pauper is rejected, and the applicant takes time for payment of Court-fees, but makes the payment after limitation of the suit has run out, though within the time granted by the Court, the suit will be taken as instituted not on the day of the application for pauperism, but on the day of the payment of Court-fees, and therefore barred—Keshav Ram Chandra v. Krishna Rao, 20 Bom. 508 (510); Keshav Lal v. Mayabhai, 9 Bom.L.R. 204; Abhoya v. Bissesswari, 24 Cal. 889 (891); Naraini v. Makhan, 17 All. 526 (528); Mahadev v. Bhikaji, 45 Bom.L.R. 544, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 292, 208 I.C. 543; Vamanrao v. Pranlal, I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 721, 45 Bom.L.R. 1002, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 63. The principle is this: when the application for leave to sue in forma pauperis is rejected, the suit cannot be continued as of its original institution. When such an order of rejection is made, there is a bar to any further application to sue as a pauper, but the plaintiff, having first paid the costs, if any, incurred by the Government in opposing his application for leave to sue as a pauper, is allowed the liberty of instituting a suit in the ordinary manner in respect of such right as he may have (O. 33, r. 15, C. P. Code). Upon an order of rejection of an application for leave to sue as a pauper, the original proceedings come to an end, and if the applicant wishes to proceed with the vindication of his rights, he must sue in the ordinary course, and the date of the institution of that suit would not be the date of presentation of the previous application for leave to sue as a pauper, but would be the date on which the suit is actually instituted on proper Court-fee—Naraini v. Makhan, supra. The grant of time to pay Court-fees after the termination of pauper proceedings cannot revive the application which had already been disposed of—Mahadev v. Bhikaji, supra. The explanation is intended to show when limitation begins to run on a suit being instituted, and not to affirm that an application for leave to sue as pauper is tantamount to the filing of a suit—Vamanrao v. Pranlal, supra.

Appeal by pauper:—If an application for leave to appeal as a pauper is rejected, and the applicant afterwards files an appeal in the regular way, at a time when the period of limitation for filing the appeal has expired, the date of the appeal is the date of filing the regularly stamped memorandum of appeal and cannot relate back to the date of filing the application for leave to appeal. The appeal is therefore barred—Bishnath v. Jagarnath, 13 All. 305 (308). But if at the time of dismissing the petition for leave to appeal as a pauper, the Court grants time to the appellant to file a regular appeal and such time happens to be beyond the period of limitation prescribed for the appeal, it is an exercise by the Court of a discretion vested in it under section 5. Therefore the appeal filed within the time granted would not be barred by limitation—Girwar v. Lakshmi, 26 All. 329 (330); Nallavadiva v. Subramania, 40 Mad. 687 (697). See also the cases cited in Note 55 under sec. 5.

29A. Claim against a company—Claim by liquidator:—The Explanation first of all states the ordinary rule that a suit is instituted when the plaint is presented to the proper officer; but to this general rule two exceptions are prescribed: (1) in the case of a suit by a pauper, the time at which that suit is instituted is to be taken as an earlier date, viz., the date when the application for leave to sue as a pauper was made; and (2) in the case of a claim against a company, the institution of the suit is advanced also to an earlier date, viz., the date when the claim was first sent in to the official liquidator. The Explanation is not concerned with the question as to what is a suit or is to be considered a suit within sec. 3. It assumes the existence of a suit which has been instituted by the presentation of a plaint and is concerned only with the point of time at which that suit is for the purpose of sec. 3 to be treated as being instituted. It follows, therefore, that a mere claim against a company, not accompanied by a proceeding instituted by the presentation of a plaint, cannot be considered as a "suit instituted" within the meaning of the Explanation—Hansraj v. Official Liquidators, 54 All. 1067 (P.C.), 1933 A.L.J. 175, 37 C.W.N. 379 (386, 387), 142 I.C. 7, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 63. Similarly, a claim by or on behalf of a company (e.g., an application in the winding up by the official liquidators of a company to recover certain sums from the debtors to the company) cannot be treated as a suit—Hansraj v. Official Liquidators, supra. See also Maung Ba Lat v. Liquidator, K. T. Co-operative Society, 8 Rang. 581, 131 I.C. 55, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 72 (73).

30. No limitation to acts of Courts suo motu:—This section is confined only to litigants and is inapplicable to acts which the Court may or has to perform suo motu. Such acts are not subject to any rule of limitation. Thus, section 206 of the C. P. Code, 1882 (section 152 of the C. P. Code of 1908) empowers a Court of its own motion to amend its decree by correcting arithmetical errors, and the Court has power to do so at any time, irrespective of the fact that an application by the party asking the Court to exercise that power may be barred at the time—Dhan Singh v. Basant Singh, 8 All. 519 (533); Raghunath v. Rajkumar, 7 All. 276 (280).

Where Court is closed when period expires.

4. Where the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application expires on a day when the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be instituted, preferred or made on the day that the Court re-opens.

31. General principle:—Section 4 of the Limitation Act has nothing to do with computing the prescribed period and does not alter, extend or add to its length—Shanti v. Harnam, I.L.R. (1938) Lah. 193, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 234, 40 P.L.R. 533 (F.B.); Ram Manorath v. Ram Bhulawan, 21 Luck. 447. Bhiwani Cloth Mills Ltd. v. Parmeshari, I.L.R. 1946 Lah. 107, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 168. When the prescribed period expires on a day on which the Court is closed, the only effect of sec. 4 is that the application may be made or suit filed on the day the Court re-opens—Maqbul Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85, 39 C.W.N. 640. The section does not in any way extend the period of limitation, nor does it furnish any data for computation of time, it merely embodies a rule of elementary justice that if the time allowed by statute to do an act or to take a proceeding expires on a day when the Court is closed, it may be done on the next sitting of the Court. It gives expression to the general principle of law enunciated by the maxims Lex non cogit ad impossibilia and Actus curiae neminem gravabit—Raja Pande v. Sheopujan, I.L.R. (1943) All. 84, 1942 A.L.J. 592, A.I.R. 1942 All. 492 (F.B.). The general principle of law is this: when a party is prevented from doing a thing in Court on a particular day, by the act of the Court itself, as for instance, on account of the closing of the Court, and not by any act of his own, he is entitled to do it at the first subsequent opportunity—Peary Mohun v. Anunda Charan, 18 Cal. 631 (634); Shoshee Bhusan v. Govind Chunder, 18 Cal. 231 (234); Dharamsi Morarji Chemical Co v. Ochhavlal, 51 Bom. 848, 103 I.C. 540, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 480 (481); Haji Ismail v. Trustees, 23 Mad. 389 (397); Aravamudu v. Samiyappa, 21 Mad. 385 (387); Sambasiva v. Ramasami 22 Mad. 179 (182); Surendra v. Souravini, 10 C.W.N. 535 (539); Subramanian v. Krishna Iyer, 26 M.L.J. 307, 23 I.C. 23 (24); Rambir v. Prabhakar, A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 300; Waterton v. Baker, (1868) L.R. 3 Q.B. 173; Mayer v. Harding, (1867) L.R. 2 Q.B. 410. Compare section 10 of the General Clauses Act which lays down that "where any act or proceeding is directed or allowed to be done or taken in Court or office on a certain day or within a prescribed period, then, if the Court or office is closed on that day or on the last day of the prescribed period, the act or proceeding shall be considered as done taken in due time, if it is done or taken on the next day afterwards, on which the Court or office is open." The word "Court" means the proper Court in which the application ought to have been made—Maqbul Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85, 39 C.W.N. 640; Deep Chand v. Nahar Mal, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 50.

And so, where the decree in a pre-emption suit directs that the purchase money should be paid into Court within a fixed time after the decree becomes final, the decree becomes final when the period prescribed for appeal expires, and if the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal from the decree expires on a holiday, the decree becomes final on the day the Court re-opens—Ram Sahai v. Gaya, 7 All. 107 (108). An application to set aside an execution sale held by the Collector, is one in respect of which the benefit of this section can be availed of. The fact that the Court of the Collector was open when the limitation expired does not make this section inapplicable —Veerappa v. Iratappa, 40 Bom.L.R. 152, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 209. The provisions of this section applies to an application under Or. 21, r. 89, C. P. Code. Thus when the judment-debtor is prevented from making the deposit as required by the aforesaid rule on account of the closing of the Court on the last date of the period prescribed for deposit, he can deposit on the day following—Hirania v. Ram, A.I.R. 1950 All. 367, 1950 A.W.N. 164. The period of limitation for setting aside an auction sale under O. 21, r. 89, C. P. Code by depositing the amount in Court expired during the vacation, and the application together with a tender of the amount due was presented by the judgment-debtor on the reopening day, but as the tender was not signed by the Judge on that day, the actual payment could not be made on that date but was made on the next day. Held that the tender was in time, as the delay in payment was not due to any fault of the judgment-debtor—Durga Prasad v. Babu Lal, 20 A.L.J. 543, A.I.R. 1922 All. 195 (196), 67 I.C. 321. Similarly, where the applicant preferred his application for setting aside a sale under O. 21, r. 89 together with the deposit money on the last day of limitation, but he was eventually told that his application could not be received as the Judge was busy, and that the money should be deposited the next day, held, that although sec. 4 of this Act did not apply (as the Court was not closed), still the principle of this section applied, as the applicant was refused facilities to carry out his act on the day in question, and the application and deposit made on the next day was not barred—Raotmal v. Amarsingh, 9 N.L.J. 57, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 331, 96 I.C. 376. A plaintiff is entitled to wait for the reopening of the Munsiff's Court after the vacation in order to avail himself of this section, though the suit may be cognizable in the Village Court, which might be open on the day the period of limitation expired. The Court of the lowest grade in section 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure refers to the Court subject to the Code and cannot refer to a Village Court—Subba Rao v. Narsiah, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 684, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 220, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 495. But the furnishing of security or the deposit of costs is not an application under this section and failure to furnish security or the deposit within time does not entitle the party to get the benefit of this section—Lachmeshwar v. Girdhari, 19 Pat. 123, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 667, 1939 P.W.N. 807 (F.B.).

32. Application of this section to special or local laws:—This section applies although the case is governed by special or local laws. See section 29 (2) (a) by which the provisions of section 4 have been made expressly applicable "for the purpose of determining any period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law." Even before the Limitation Amendment Act, X of 1922 was passed, it was laid down in numerous cases that the general provisions of this section (as well as the next section) should apply to cases under a special or local law—Nizabutoolla v. Wazir Ali, 8 Cal. 910 (911); Hossein Ally v. Douzelle, 5 Cal. 906 (908).

Thus, if the Court be closed on or before the last of the period allowed under sec. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to set aside the sale, the judgment-debtor may pay the sum of money into Court on the first day the Court re-opens, notwithstanding the absence of express provision to that effect—Shooshee v. Gogind, 18 Cal. 231 (234). Similarly, if the last day for a suit under sec. 77 of the Registration Act expires on a holiday, a suit instituted on the next re-opening day is not time-barred—Ahad Baksh v. Bahar Ali, 16 C.W.N. 721 (723, 724), 14 I.C. 173; Matabbar v. Sasi Bhusan, 16 C.W.N. 20 (22), 12 I.C. 33. So also, an application under sec. 22 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (1907) may be made on the re-opening day, if the 21 days from the decision complained of expire on a holiday—Bhairon Prasad v. Dass, 17 A.L.J. 787, 51 I.C. 113. An application under sec. 68 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920) may be made on the re-opening day, if the period of 21 days mentioned therein expires on a holiday—Ma Than v. Bailiff, Township Court, 9 Rang. 150. 134 I.C. 223, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 209 (210). If the last day on which the debt could have been enforced is a public holiday, and on the morning of the re-opening day the debtor is adjudged an insolvent, the debt is provable in insolvency. It is not necessary for the creditor, for the purpose of keeping his debt alive, to file a suit on the re-opening day—Fatma Bi v. Nagoor Khan, 55 Mad. 630, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 287 (288), 136 I.C. 822, 62 M.L.J. 256. Similarly, where the last day for filing a suit under sec. 87 of Madras Harbour Trust Act (II of 1886) was a holiday the suit could be filed on the next opening day—Haji Ismail v Trustees of the Harbour, Madras, 23 Mad. 389 (397). If the last day for filing a suit to set aside a distraint under the Madras Rent Recovery Act, 1865, expires on a holiday, the the plaintiff is entitled to file the suit on the next re-opening day—Sambasiva v. Ramasami, 22 Mad. 179 (182). The provisions of this section are quite general and apply to an application under sec. 12 (2) of the Oudh Courts Act—Ram Dass v. Chedi Lal, 14 Luck. 138, 1938 O.W.N. 706, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 186. Where the period of limitation for an appeal under section 119A of the Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886) expired on a holiday, and the appeal was filed on the day following, held that the appeal was filed within time—Binda Parshad v. Ram Bhajan, 17 O.C. 254, 25 I.C. 703 (704). If the period of three months limited for a suit under sec. 111, clause (b) of the U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901) expires on a holiday, a suit instituted on the next Court-day is within time—Dhanpati v. Kandhaiya, 7 O.W.N. 586, 127 I.C. 28, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 371 (374).

In some cases, a distinction was drawn between an Act which is a complete Code in itself, and an Act which is not so, and it was laid down that the general provisions of the Limitation Act (secs. 4 to 25) would be applicable to proceedings under special or local laws unless the special or local law was a complete Code in itself to which the provisions of the Limitation Act could not be applied without incongruity. Thus the N. W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881) is not a complete Code in itself and is particularly incomplete as regards provisions regarding limitation; consequently there is nothing to exclude the application of sec. 4 of the Limitation Act to the N. W. P. Rent Act—Beni Prosad v. Dharaka, 23 All. 277 (279). But the Oudh Rent Act was a complete Code in itself containing rules of limitation complete in themselves and was not affected by the general provisions of the Limitation Act—Raghubar v. Sheo Charan, 4 O.C. 182. So also the Bengal Rent Act (VII of 1869) being a complete Code as regards limitation, the provisions of section 4 of the Limitation Act did not apply, and if the last day for a suit for rent under the Rent Act was a holiday, a plaint filed on the following day was barred—Purran Chaunder v. Mutty Lall, 4 Cal. 50. The Registration Act being a complete Code in itself, the provisions of the Limitation Act did not apply to a suit instituted under sec. 77 of that Act—Appa Rau v. Krishnammurthi, 20 Mad. 249; Veeramma v. Abbiah, 18 Mad. 99 (F.B.). The Letters Patent (Lahore) together with the rules framed thereunder as to limitation for filing appeals are a complete Code in themselves and therefore the general provisions of the Limitation Act did not apply to appeals filed under sec. 10 of the Letters Patent—Dial Singh v. Buddha Singh, 2 Lah. 127, 61 I.C. 327; Fateh Mahomed v. Chothu Ram, 3 Lah.L.J. 361, 60 I.C. 737. See also Deoki Lal v. Ramanand Lal, 5 P.L.R. 701, 59 I.C. 179.

This distinction will no longer hold good, by reason of the express provisions of section 29 as now amended, and section 4 will apply to all special or local laws, whether they are complete Codes or not.

33. Applicability of section to private agreements:—Section 4 applies where a certain period has been prescribed by a statute, and has no application to a case where a certain date has been fixed for payment by agreement of parties. Thus, after a sale in execution of a decree, the decree-holder agreed to have the sale set aside on receipt of the decretal amount within two months from the date of sale. The last day of the two months being a holiday, the judgment-debtor deposited the decretal amount in Court on the re-opening of the Court. Held that the decretal amount not having been paid to the decree-holder within 2 months from the date of sale, the sale could not be set aside, and the fact that the Court was closed when the two months expired would not entitle the judgment-debtor to get the benefit of section 4 and to deposit the money on the re-opening day—Adya Singh v. Nasib Singh, 1 P.L.T. 227, 56 I.C. 495 (496). But in a Nagpur case, where the last day of payment of the money under a compromise decree was a holiday, and the appellant deposited the money in Court on the day the Court re-opened, held that there was a valid compliance with the decree. The reason is that where the decree directs payment to the decree-holder, payment into Court is a valid compliance with the decree unless the Court directs that payment should be to the decree-holder and not otherwise—Dhanu v. Kesho Prasad, 19 N.L.R. 116, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 246, 72 I.C. 388.

34. Period of extension under sec. 6:—The "period of limitation prescribed for any suit" in this section is wide enough to include a period of time contained in Sch. I, computed according to the provisions of sections 6 and 8. Therefore, if the period of three years after attaining majority, which is extended in favour of an ex-minor by virtue of secs. 6 and 8, expires on a day when the Court is closed, this section enables him to institute his suit on the re-opening day—Naganna v. Krishnamurthi, 55 Mad. 286 61 M.L.J. 675, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 139 (141), 135 I.C. 587.

35. Closing of Court:—Whether a Court is or is not "closed" within the meaning of this section is in each case a question of fact and must depend on the practice which prevails in the particular Court—Gur Bux Singh v. Sohanlal, A.I.R. 1952 Cal. 542, 55 C.W.N. 127, I.L.R. (1952) 1 Cal. 88. A Court is said to be closed even though the Judge holds Court on a Gazetted holiday—Boyamma v. Balajee, 20 Mad 469 (470); Kaliyanasundrappa v. Chinnasami, 17 L.W. 413, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 489, 72 I.C. 13; or if the Court is closed in an unauthorized manner—Bishen Perkash v. Babooa Misser, 8 W.R. 73. Though the Court offices may be actually open during the vacation for other work, if there is no one lawfully required to be present for the purpose of receiving a plaint or a petition of appeal or application, the Court will be held to be closed for the purposes of this section. See Nandavallabh v. Alibhai, 6 B.H.C.R. 254, Akhtari Bibi v. Rajlakshmi Debi, 59 C.W.N. 684.

But if the offices of the Court are open during the holidays and there is also a Judge or an Officer or clerk of the Court at hand for the purpose of attending to plaints, appeals and applications, the Court cannot be said to be closed within the meaning of this section; and all plaints, appeals and applications which are about to be barred during the vacation should be presented before the period of limitation actually expires. If they are not presented till the Court fully reopens after the vacation, it cannot be pleaded that the Court was closed at the time they ought to have been presented in the ordinary course of thing—Shivram v. Bhavania, (1886) P.J. 262; British India Steam Navigation Co. v. Sharafally, 46 Mad. 938; Tata Industrial Bank v. Abdul Husein, 25 Bom.L.R. 1296 (1302), A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 144, 89 I.C. 529; Hira Lal v. Sojan Chand, 34 P.L.R. 338, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 239, 142 I.C. 307; Dharamsi Morarji Chemical Co. v. Ochhavlal, 51 Bom. 846, 103 I.C. 540, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 480 (481). Thus where the time for filing an application for review expires during holidays and the application is filed on the date when the judicial work is taken up by the Judges after the holidays and not on the date when the office of the Court re-opens, the application is barred by limitation and this section has no application—Immaniyalu, in re (1948) 1 M.L.J. 49, 1948 M.W.N. 28, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 521. In an earlier Bombay case it was said that this section would apply even if the office of the Court was working in the vacation for urgent work. Thus, though the Prothonotary's office was open for the receipt of urgent work in the vacation, a plaint could be filed on the opening day of the term, because the receipt of a plaint was not an urgent work—Ranchordas v. Pestonji, 9 Bom.L.R. 1329. But in a later case of the same High Court it has been decided that the question whether the receiving of a plaint can be regarded as urgent work must be decided with reference to the present practice of the High Court; and as in recent years plaints have, as a matter of fact, been received in the Prothonotary's office during the vacation, whether they are of an urgent nature or not, the plaintiff is not entitled to wait till the Court re-opens, if during the holidays the Prothonotary's office is open for the receipt of plaints—Dharamsi v. Ochhavlal, supra. Where the Court adjourned for two months, but opened twice a week for one hour only, for the reception of plaints, petitions, etc., the Court was not closed within the meaning of this section so as to entitle the appellant to present his appeal on the first day the Court sat after the adjournment—Nachiyappa v. Ayyasami, 5 Mad. 189 (F.B.). A Court cannot be regarded as closed on dates when arrangements are made and notified for the reception of plaints—Parvatheesam v. Bapanna, 13 Mad. 447 (at p. 451). If however, the Court office is open during the vacation and there is some one present who is entitled to receive the plaint, but there is no one who can decide that it shall be admitted and put on the files of the Court, the plaint is in time if presented on the first day on which there is such last mentioned officer present—Ganpat v. Hira, 29 P.R. 1891; K. Sinha v. Jatindra, 41 C.W.N. 492; Khirode v. Ramani, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 454; Badri v. Kalyan, A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 522.

A Court is not said to be closed, if the presiding officer is on tour. The plaint, in such cases, is to be presented to such officer in his camp—Receiver v. Surapparazu, 38 Mad. 295 (F.B.), 29 I.C. 449.

But where a Subordinate Judge of S used to sit for a week every month at L, and during his absence from S (i.e., while he was sitting at L), the plaintiff presented his plaint at S which was accepted by the Naib Sheriff of the Court (who was not authorised to receive plaints under O. 4, r. 1, C. P. Code) but no arrangements were made for the reception of plaints by a proper officer during the absence of the Sub-Judge from S, and it was found that the suit was within time when it was accepted by the Naib Sheriff but became time-barred when it was subsequently placed before the Sub-Judge on his return from L, it was held that though the presentation of the plaint to the Naib Sheriff was not a proper presentation and the suit could not be said to have been instituted on the day of such presentation, still it must be taken that the Court at S was "closed" during the Sub-Judge's absence from S, and applying sec. 4 of the Limitation Act, the suit must be held to be in time when it was placed before the Sub-Judge on his return to S. The plaintiff ought not to be made to suffer for want of proper arrangements for the reception of plaints during the Sub-Judge's absence from S—Nur Muhammad v. Ghulaman, 15 Lah. 308, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 622.

36. The Court is closed:—It has recently been held in Akhtari Bibi v. Rajlakshmi Debi, 59 C.W.N. 684 that offices of the Court are not the same thing as the Court. It would be legislating instead of interpreting if for the words "the Court is closed" are read the words "the office of the Court is closed". So an application filed on the day when the Court as a whole re-opened was held not to be barred by limitation though the office remained open earlier by an order of the Registrar.

37. Closing of wrong Court:—The period during which the Court in which a suit was wrongly instituted was closed, will not be excluded. Thus, where a suit was filed in the Munsiff's Court on the day on which the Court re-opened after the vacation, but the Munsif found he had no jurisdiction, and on the same day the suit was filed in the Small Cause Court, held, that the plaintiff could not claim the benefit of this section so as to exclude the time during which the Munsif's Court was closed, because the suit was not instituted in the Small Cause Court on the day on which the S. C. Court re-opened—Abhoya v. Gaur, 34 W.R. 26. Similarly, a suit was filed in the Sub-Judge's Court at Agra on June 2, 1913. Limitation expired on June 1, which was a holiday. The Agra Court held that it had no jurisdiction and on January 21, 1914 returned the plaint to be presented to the Court of the Sub-Judge at Aligarh. It was so presented on January 22. Held, that the suit was barred, for though the plaintiff might be entitled under sec. 14 to deduct the time during which the suit was pending in the wrong Court, he was not entitled to the exclusion of the extra-day, viz., June 1, on which the wrong Court was closed—Makund v. Ramraj, 14 A.L.J. 310, 35 I.C. 292; Maqbul v. Pateshri, 1929 A.L.J. 976, A.I.R. 1929 All. 677; Ramalinga v. Subba Iyer, 24 M.L.T. 214, 47 IC. 624; Mohideen v. Nallaperumal, 36 Mad. 131, 12 I.C. 58; Dharman v. Ganga Ram, 11 Lah. 12, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 425; Ummathu v. Pathumma, 44

Mad. 817; W. A. Patel v. Deshmukh, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 215. The contrary view expressed in Basvanappa v. Krishnadas, 45 Bom. 443, was overruled by their Lordships of the Privy Council—Maqbul Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85, 37 Bom.L.R. 533 (P.C.). See also Karim v. Abdul, I.L.R. 1953 Bom. 565, 55 Bom.L.R. 119, A.I.R. 1953 Bom. 353. See this subject discussed in Note 155 under s. 14.

37A. Application for copy on re-opening date after limitation:—This section has no application where a party applies for copy of decree on the re-opening day when the prescribed period of limitation has run out. The extension granted by this section cannot be combined with an extension under sec. 12 of the Act—Kamaraju v. Saramma, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 868, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 604; A contrary view has been taken by the Lahore High Court in Mohammad Zaman v. Hans Raj, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 707, 182 I.C. 108; Asa Singh v. Hira Singh, 40 P.L.R. 74, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 317. According to this High Court the general principle underlying this section must be given effect to, namely, that where an act or proceeding is allowed to be done on a certain day and Court is closed on that day, the act or proceeding shall be considered as done or taken in due time if it is done or taken on the next day on which the Court is opened. But the same High Court has dissented from Asa Sing v. Hira Singh, supra in Bhiwani Cloth Mills v. Parmeshari, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 168, I.L.R. 1946 Lah. 107 where it is held that the proper method is to take what is primarily the prescribed period and then add to it the period excluded by reason of section 12 of the Act. If these periods taken together happen to fall on a day when the Court is closed, the party can wait till the date when the Court re-opens. See also Sadashivrao v. Ramchandra, A.I.R. 1954 M.B. 18.

38. Acknowledgment made during holidays:—As to whether an acknowledgment given after the period of limitation but during the vacation of the Court can save limitation, see Note 176 under sec. 19.

39. Assignment of debt during holidays:—When the period prescribed for a suit to recover a debt expries during the Court vacation, and before re-opening, the debt is assigned, the suit brought by the assignee on the re-opening day is within time—Visram v. Tabaji, 15 Bom.L.R. 348, 19 I.C. 820 (821). Even if the assignment takes place on the re-opening day and the suit is filed on that very day, the section applies and the suit is within time—Thimmanna v. Adyanthayya, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 251, 1940 M.W.N. 777, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 908.

39A. Payment during holidays:—Payment made after the expiry of the period of limitation but during the holidays when the suit could not be filed, does not save limitation—Ram Manorath v. Ram Bhulawan, 21 Luck. 447, A.I.R. 1947 Oudh 3; Puran Chand v. Abdullah, I.L.R. (1938) All. 861, A.I.R. 1938 All. 606; Shyam v. Ram, A.I.R. 1939 All. 252, 181 I.C. 899; Laxman v. Yadao, 1940 N.L.R. 227, AI.R. 1940 Nag. 401, 188 I.C. 585; Prem Chand v. Ramdeo, I.L.R. 1948 Nag. 612 (payment of instalment under decree).

39B. Execution of fresh mortgage during holidays:—Execution of a fresh mortgage after the expiry of the period of limitation but during the vacation of the Court saves limitation—Adiraja v. Beeranna, A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 14.

40. Pleading:—When the period of limitation for a suit expires on a Gazetted holiday, and the plaint is presented on the day the Court re-opens, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to state explicitly in the plaint that on the day on which the period of limitation expired the Court was closed—Teckchand v. Patto, 16 N.L.R. 198, 56 I.C. 926.

Extension of period in certain cases.

5. Any appeal or application for a review of judgment or for leave to appeal or any other application to which this section may be made applicable by or under any enactment for the time being in force may be admitted after the period of limitation prescribed therefor, when the appellant or applicant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal or making the application within such period.

Explanation.—The fact that the appellant or applicant was misled by any order, practice or judgment of the High Court in ascertaining or computing the prescribed period of limitation may be sufficient cause within the meaning of this section.

Amendment:—By sec. 2 of the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act, X of 1922, the words "by or under any enactment" have been substituted for the words "by any enactment or rule." The reason has been thus stated: "We think that the words 'made applicable by any enactment or rule' are, in so far as they apply to rules, vague, inasmuch as there is no definition of the term 'rule.' The intention no doubt is to refer to a statutory rule or a rule having the force of law, e.g., rules contained in the schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure and in particular, Order 22, rule 9. We would therefore amend section 5 by substituting the words 'by or under any enactment' for the words 'by any enactment or rule"—Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, 1922, Part V, page 73). As to the effect of this amendment see the Full Bench case of Krishnamachariar v. Sirangammal, 47 Mad. 824, 47 M.L.J. 409, 80 I.C. 877, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 14.

41. Scope of section:—Under the Act of 1877, this section did not include any other application except an application for review of judgment. Thus it did not apply to an application for leave to appeal as a pauper—Parvati v. Bhola, 12 All. 79; Sarat Chandra v. Brojeswari, 30 Cal. 790; R. C. Roy v. Thakur Ram, 10 C.W.N. 149 (F.B.); nor to an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council—In the matter of Sita Ram, 15 All. 14; Moroba v. Ghanasham, 19 Bom. 301; Veerammah v. Abbiah, 18 Mad. 99 (F.B.). The present section will apply to these applications. The words "application for leave to appeal" are wide enough to include an application for leave to appeal as a pauper—Ram Charan v. Bansidhar, 26 A.L.J. 847, A.I.R. 1928 All. 499; Ram Dulari v. Allian, 17 Luck. 628, 1942 O.W.N. 106, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 204; Jusab v. State, A.I.R. 1951 Sau. 12. Therefore where the delay in filing the application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis is due to the fact that copies of judgment and decree appealed from could not be obtained in prescribed time, the delay should be excused—Ram Charan v. Shri Radha, A.I.R. 1951 All. 242. A contrary view has been taken in Ram Pheron v. Sri Ram, 15 Luck. 390 where it is held that this section has no application for leave to appeal as a pauper under Or. 44 r. 1 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Or. 22, r. 9 (3), C. P. C. specifically applies the provisions of sec. 5 to applications to set aside abatement—Budhuran v. Ali Shah, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 443.

An application for review of judgment must be made within 90 days of the passing of the judgment, and it is only when sufficient cause is shown under sec. 5 that it can be admitted beyond the period of 90 days—Bhukhan v. Piare, 1931 A.L.J. 103, 130 I.C. 839, A.I.R. 1931 All. 218 (219).

The High Court has power to frame a rule making the provisions of this section applicable to applications for setting aside exparte decrees—Krishnamachariar v. Srirangammal, supra. In Madras, this section has been made applicable by a Rule of the High Court to application to set aside an ex parte decree, whether in ordinary Courts or in Small Cause Courts; and the delay in making the payment required to be made with an application to set aside an ex parte decree, under the proviso to section 17 (1) of the Prov. Small Cause Courts Act, can be excused if there be sufficient cause for it—Sudalaimuthu v. Andi Reddiar, 45 Mad. 628, 42 M.L.J. 484, 66 I.C. 104, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 186; Koilpillai v. Sappannimithu, 44 M.L.J. 247, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 354; Ramji v. Kumarakalathi, 61 M.L.J. 710, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 142; Perumal v. Ummar, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 472. But in Bengal, Behar,, U. P., Oudh, Bombay, Punjab and Burma this section has not been made applicable to an application to set aside an ex parte decree—Tarasankar v. Basiruddi, 19 C.W.N. 970, 29 I.C. 476; Munshi Singh v. Bansropan, 14 P.L.T. 20, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 134 (135); Gadre v. Brijnandan, 45 All. 332 (334); Shavaksha v. Hogarth, 12 Bom.L.R. 886, 8 I.C. 616; Khairati v. Umar Din, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 266, 66 I.C. 270; Chowdhury Hiat v. Jaikishen, 32 P.R. 1878; Pal Singh v. Hurnam Singh, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 342, 100 I.C. 936; Ma Naw v. Somasundaram, 2 Rang. 655, 85 I.C. 324; Ram Autar v. Sheo Piarey, 12 O.L.J. 137, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 411; Sitabai v. Mata Din, 2 O.W.N. 440, A.I.R. 1945 Oudh 446; Sidh Nath v. Ganga, 1943 A.L.W. 517; Abed Ali v. Parfulla, 56 C.W.N. 97 (F.B.). Where it has been held that this section does not in terms apply to such applications as there is no enactment making this section applicable to such applications. In a Lahore case, Chevis J., has expressed the opinion that section 5 should be made applicable to all applications under Articles 163, 164, 168 and 169—Lal Devi v. Amar Nath, 57 I.C. 15 (16).

It should also be noted that this section does not apply to suits. This section applies only to those proceedings which are specifically mentioned in the section or to which the section may be made applicable by or under any enactment for the time being in force. A suit is not specifically mentioned in this section nor are the provisions of this section made applicable to it by any enactment—Ram Pher v. Ajudhia Singh, 12 O.L.J. 66, 2 O.W.N. 144, 87 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 369. The reason is, that the period of limitation allowed in most of the suits extends from three to twelve years; whereas in appeals and the applications mentioned in this section, it does not exceed six months; therefore it is necessary that some concession should be made in respect of these appeals and applications, to provide for those circumstances which hinder a person from filing his appeal or application within the short period of time allowed.

By section 231 of the Agra Tenancy Act, this section has been made applicable to suits under that Act.

This section has not been made applicable by any enactment to an application (under O. 9, r. 9, C. P. Code) to set aside a dismissal for default of appearance (Art. 163)—Mahadeo v. Lakshminarayan, 49 Bom. 839, 27 Bom.L.R. 1150, 90 I.C. 610, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 521; Ma Naw v. Somasundaram, 2 Rang. 655, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 187; Sahib Ditta v. Roda, 83 P.R. 1902; Saba v. Dayaram, 23 N.L.R. 183, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 91 (92); Samankatha v. James, (1946) 2 M.L.J. 382, 59 L.W. 683; Chinappa v. Deenadayalu, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 411, 1948 M.W.N. 400, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 480 (no inherent jurisdiction to extend the period under this section), or the Court is not entitled to extend the period by taking into consideration circumstances which appear to operate harshly against the plaintiff—Debendra v. Satyabala, 54 C.W.N. 110, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 217. So also, this section does not apply to an application to set aside an execution sale under O. 21, r. 89, C. P. Code—Ram Autar v. Sheo Peary, 12 O.L.J. 137, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 411, 87 I.C. 722; Umrao Singh v. Beni Prasad, 92 I.C. 839 or to applications by auction purchasers to set aside execution sales under the Civil Procedure Code—Amal v. Ram Swarup, I.L.R. (1939) 1 Cal. 452, 69 C.L.J. 138, 43 C.W.N. 383, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 310. This section does not apply to an application for substitution of the name of a defendant or respondent under O. XXII, r. 4, made beyond three months of his death. An application for substitution made beyond the period of limitation must therefore be rejected and the suit will abate. But it is open to the plaintiff or appellant to make an application under O. XXII, r. 9 to have the order of abatement set aside on the ground that he was prevented by sufficient cause from continuing the suit—Secretary of State v. Jowahir, 36 All. 235, 25 I.C. 48. This section has been made applicable to applications under Order XXII, rule 9 (2) of the C. P. Code. See O. XXII, r. 9 (3); Lakshmi Chand v. Behari, 54 All. 280, 135 I.C. 159, A.I.R. 1932 All. 459.

This section does not apply to applications for setting aside awards; it is not competent for the Court to receive such applications after the expiry of the period prescribed by Art. 158—Surya Narain v. Banwari, 18 C.W.N. 626 (628), 17 I.C. 7; Devi Ditta v. Babu Ram, 8 Lah. 274, 100 I.C. 955, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 273.

This section does not apply to an application for execution of a decree, in the absence of any enactment or rule which makes the section applicable to such an application—Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Deputy Commissioner, 3 P.L.J. 132, (134, 135), 44 I.C. 570; Ram Roy v. Umraji, 93 I.C. 292, A.I.R. 1926 All. 345; nor to an application under O. XXI, r. 90, C. P. Code to set aside an execution sale (falling under Art. 166)—Asa Nand v. Jhangi Ram, 29 P.L.R. 1919, 50 I.C. 610; Narotam v. Bhagwan, 1934 A.L.J. 859, A.I.R. 1934 All. 314.

This section does not apply to an application under O. 41, rule 19, C. P. Code for re-admission of an appeal dismissed for default of appearance; and if the application is not made within 30 days (Art. 168), the appeal cannot be re-admitted for any sufficient cause—Krishnaswami v. Chengalroya, 47 Mad. 171, 45 M.L.J. 813, 76 I.C. 836, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 114; Mahi v. Jiwan, 141 P.R. 1879; Syed Mahomed v. Abdul, I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 409, A.I.R. 1943 Sind. 132; Arjan v. Md. Husain, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 255; or to an application under Or. 41, r. 21, C. P. Code; Sitaramiah v. Sarvayya, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 121, 1944 M.W.N. 522, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 571.

It does not apply to an application for filing an award (Art. 178)—Ram Ugrah v. Achraj Nath, 38 All. 85 (91), 13 A.L.J. 1115.

This section has not been made applicable to an application for passing a final decree under Or. 34, r. 5, Civil Procedure Code—Ramakotayya v. Sitharamaswami, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 192, 1946 M.W.N. 207, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 381, I.L.R. (1946) Mad. 889.

In Chetanlal v. Purshettam, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 233, 175 I.C. 33, a question was raised as to whether the provisions of this section can be applied in second appeal when there was no application to that effect in the lower appellate Court. The point was not however decided.

An order under this section excusing delay is not final, and is liable to be questioned at a later stage—Krishnasami v. Ramasami, 45 I.A. 25; Dinabandhu v. Jadumoni, A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 411.

Corporate body:—A corporate body is not entitled to a greater indulgence under this section than a private individual. If a corporate body chooses to embark on a litigation, its officials and advisers must act with at least as much diligence as is expected from an ordinary litigant—District Board, Sargodha v. Shamas Din, 123 I.C. 83.

Criminal appeal:—This section applies to criminal appeals, and a criminal appellate Court has power to excuse delay and admit a time-barred appeal, if the Court is satisfied that the appellant had sufficient reason for not preferring the appeal within the prescribed period. But if the Court is not so satisfied, it cannot excuse the delay. If in such a case the appellate Court desires to help the appellant, the proper procedure would be to move the High Court to exercise its powers of revision—Janakiramyya v. Brahmayya, 48 M.L.J. 457, 88 I.C. 278, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 709. Where the delay in filing an appeal under section 476B of the Criminal Procedure Code was due to the fact that the charge under sec. 211 of the Indian Penal Code was made without giving any opportunity to the complainant to show cause and the appellant had no knowledge of the same till the expiry of the time prescribed for appeal, the delay was condoned under this section—Radha Krishna v. Emperor, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 648, 40 Cr.L.J. 449, A.I.R. 1939 Sind. 76; Bhikaji v. Sambhuram, 1938 N.L.J. 183.

But in the case of a Criminal application, the time cannot be extended, even though the delay arises in consequence of any genuine mistake—Girimlal v. Shewaram, 20 S.L.R. 90, 95 I.C. 316, A.I.R. 1926 Sind. 215.

An application for special leave to appeal from an order of acquittal has to be filed within 60 days as provided under section 417 (4), Cr. P. Code. To such an an application this section is applicable—Viswanathan Chettiar, (1957) 1 Mad.L.J. 150; P. Venkata Subbareddi v. Duvvuru Papireddi, A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 406.

42. Application of section to special or local laws:—Under section 29 (2) (b) as amended by the Limitation Amendment Act (X of 1922), the provisions of section 5 "shall not apply for the purpose of determining any period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law." Therefore the decisions in Reference under the Forest Act, 10 Mad. 210, Ram Kishen v. Umrao, 80 P.W.R. 1916, 33 I.C. 730, Waryam v. Wadhava, 89 P.R. 1918, 46 I.C. 588 (589), and Mohant Krishna Dayal v. Syad Abdul, 2 P.L.J. 402, are no longer good law in so far they hold that this section should be applied to cases under special or local laws. But where the local or special law does not prescribe any period of limitation different from that prescribed in Schedule of this Act, this section applies to appeals filed under the local or special law—Venkatramayya v. Venkata, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 271, 1946 M.W.N.. 385, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 351; Rameshwar v. Matuki, 12 B.R. 62; Moti v. Thandiram, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 52. Thus the provisions of this section will apply to an appeal under section 25A, Madras Act 4 of 1938—Venkatramayya v. Venkata, supra; or to an appeal under sec. 9 of the Delhi and Ajmer Marwara Rent Control Act, 1947, Moti v. Thandiram, supra. So also, where the local or special law is silent on the matter of limitation in respect of appeals or applications contemplated or authorised by it, this section applies—Province of Bengal v. Amulya, 54 C.W.N. 297, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 356. So this section applies to an appeal under sec. 3, Calcutta Improvement (Appeals) Act, 1911 against the decision of the Tribunal constituted under the provisions of the Calcutta Improvement Act—Province of Bengal v. Amulya, supra. But a contrary view has been expressed in State v. C. N. Raman, A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 447, 58 Bom.L.R. 295 and it has been held that this section does not apply to an appeal under sec. 23, Press (Objectionable Matter) Act, 1951 though the period for filing an appeal prescribed there is the same as under Art. 155 of the Limitation Act, following a decision reported in A.I.R. 1953 Bom. 35; 54 Bom.L.R.

661 and distinguishing the decision reported in A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 351; 1946-1 Mad.L.J. 271.

This section does not apply where the period of limitation for filing an appeal is fixed not under this Act but under the Rules of the High Court—Baijnath v. Doolarey, 50 All. 865, 26 A.L.J. 1317, A.I.R. 1928 All. 708; or by the rules by the Government—Surya v. The State of Bihar, 30 Pat. 126, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 462. Thus this section has no application to an appeal against an award in a land acquisition case made under Rule 75A, Defence of India Rules, read with sec. 19, Defence of India Act as limitation for such an appeal is prescribed by Rule 20, Bihar (War Acquisition of Property) Compensation Rules, 1943—Surya v. The State of Bihar, supra.

This section does not apply for the purpose of extending the period of limitation prescribed in the Registration Act—Mafizur v. Jamila, 42 C.W.N. 1174.

This section does not apply to proceedings under the Arbitration Act—Kawolsingh Akbar v. Baldeo Singh Akbar, A.I.R. 1957 Nag. 57.

This section did not apply to applications under section 22 of the Insolvency Act (1907)—Thakur Prosad v. Punno Lal, 35 All. 410, 20 I.C. 673. But under sec. 78 of the Prov. Insolvency Act V of 1920, section 5 (as well as sec. 12) has been specially declared to be applicable to all appeals and applications under that Act—Nur Mahomed v. Lal Chand, 26 P.L.R. 501, 90 I.C. 254, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 436 (437). Where a third person is aggrieved by an order of adjudication the appellate Court should consider whether a case had been made out for the application of section 5 of the Limitation Act—Venkataswamy v. Ganapathia, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 465. But a creditor's "petition" under sec. 9 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (1920) praying that the debtor may be adjudged insolvent is not an "application" within the meaning of sec. 78 of that Act, and sec. 5 of the Limitation Act cannot be applied to such a petition—Gangjee Premjee & Co. v. O. L. K. K. N. Firm, 55 Mad. 766, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 352 (356), 137 I.C. 740; Vaithianatha v. Baithianatha, 61 M.L.J. 544, 135 I.C. 613, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 112; Ratan Chand v. Smail, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 821 (822); Chitaman v. Ramgopal, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 523, 1948 N.L.J. 589, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 385, where it has also been held that the period of three months, prescribed under sec. 9 (1) (c) of the Provincial Insolvency Act is not a period of limitation and as such this section has no application. The reason is obvious. Section 5, Limitation Act does not give the Court any power to extend the period of limitation for the institution of suits, but it gives the power to extend the time for filing an appeal or application in litigation which has already been properly instituted by a suit. And as a petition under sec. 9 of the Insolvency Act is treated as a plaint in a suit, it is clear that sec. 5 of the Limitation Act cannot be applied to such a petition—Gangjee Premjee & Co. v. O. L. K. K. N. Firm, supra.

Section 5 of the Limitation Act has no application to proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act—Kristo Singh v. Secretary of State, 8 P.L.T. 710, 103 I.C. 295, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 333.

This section does not apply to the Bengal Tenancy Act,—Susamabala v. Profullamoyee, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 402. Thus where the appellate Court admits the appeal through mistake in spite of the fact that the appellant had not made the necessary deposit under sec. 174 (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act the appeal is incompetent and the Court has no power to condone the delay in making the deposit under this section —Susamabala v. Profullamoyee, supra. But it is applicable to appeals under sec. 112B of the Bihar Tenancy Act—Parmeshwari v. Harihar, 9 B.R. 360.

This section is not applicable to cases of revenue sales under the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act and appeals arising therefrom—Udit v. Sri Kumar, (1947) P.W.N. 23.

The provisions of this section can not be invoked in the case of a Letters Patent Appeal—Harbans v. Karam, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 299; Hari v. Hazari, A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu. 132.

This section is not applicable to the case of appeals under the Cantonments (House Accommodation) Act, 1923—Chheda v. Officer Commanding, I.L.R. (1941) All. 356, 1941 A.L.J. 267, A.I.R. 1941 All. 207.

This section is not applicable to appeals under sec. 23, Press (Objectionable Matter) Act, 1951—State v. C. N. Raman, 58 Bom.L.R. 295, 1956 Cr.L.J. 864, A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 447.

This section does not apply to an appeal under sec. 12 (1) (b) of the Madras Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, 1946—Murugesan v. Marakayar, (1956) 1 M.L.J. 238.

This section does not apply to an appeal under section 64 of the Motor Vehicles Act—Ramnath v. State Transport, A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 117.

This section is not applicable to appeals under Section 27 of the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act, 1949—Harendranath v. Daulatmani, 62 C.W.N. 143.

43. Duty of Court:—This section gives the Courts a discretion which in respect of jurisdiction is to be exercised in the way in which judicial power and discretion ought to be exercised upon principles which are well understood; and the Judge must exercise his discretion under this section with reference to the special circumstances of each case—Krishna v. Chathappan, 13 Mad. 269 (271); Fakir Chand v. Municipal Committee, 59 P.R. 1913, 18 I.C. 37; Nrisingha v. Trigunand, 17 Pat. 507, 19 Pat.L.T. 309, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 413; Gayaprasad v. Kamlakar, 1948 R.D. 420. When the time for appealing is once passed, a very valuable right is secured to the successful litigant and the Court must therefore be fully satisfied of the justice of the ground on which the appel'ant seeks to obtain an extension of time for attacking the decree and thus perhaps depriving the successful litigant of the advantages which he has obtained—Karsondas v. Bai Gungabai, 30 Bom. 329 (330); Karachi Trading Company v. Tejbhandas, 8 S.L.R. 235, 28 I.C. 82; Tarini v. Gopeswar, 7 I.C. 391, 12 C.L.J. 615 (617); Dund Bahadur v. Deo Nandan, 17 C.L.J. 596, 20 I.C. 513 (515); Fakir Chand v. Municipal Committee, supra; Sarat Chunder v. Saraswati, 34 Cal. 216 (221). The exercise by the Court of its discretion to excuse the delay would to a certain extent be detrimental to the respondent who has in the meantime acquired valuable rights, but the question has to be approached from the point of view of the applicant's conduct rather than of the advantage gained by the respondent—Kayambu v. The Court of Wards, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 873, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 170, 1941 M.W.N. 989. When a Court is asked to exercise its discretion under this section, it has to see whether the appellant is asking what is evidently unjust. If it is, he should not have it; if he is asking for what may lead to injustice, he should not have it except on terms which would prevent any injustice possibly being done—Banamali v. Padma, 16 C.L.J. 366, 16 I.C. 425. "The Court has the power to grant the special leave, and, exercising its judicial discretion, is bound to give the special leave, if justice requires that leave should be given"—per Brett M.R. in In re Manchester Economic Building Society, 24 Ch.D. 488 at p. 497. But it is not a sound exercise of judicial discretion to extend time in favour of a person who appears to have no substantial point to argue—Maqbul Ahmad v. Murla, 14 A.L.J. 212, 33 I.C. 546. The period of preferring an appeal cannot be extended simply because the appellant's case is hard and calls for sympathy, nor will the Courts extend the period of limitation merely out of benevolence to the party seeking relief. A Court granting the indulgence must be satisfied that there was diligence on the part of the appellant and that he was not guilty of any negligence whatsoever—Krishna v. Trimbak, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 409, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 156, 173 I.C. 369. Delay can be excused only for valid reasons however short the delay might be—Garasia v. Shah Leherchand, (1948) 1 Sau.L.R. 19.

The Supreme Court has recently held that where there is a conflict of decisions regarding a question the appellant aught to be given the benefit of this section—Narhari v. Shanker, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 419, 1950 S.C.R. 754.

44. Reasons to be recorded:—The reasons for admitting the appeal etc. beyond time must be recorded by the Court—Zaibulnissa v. Kulsam, 1 All. 250; Chaturbhuj v. Md. Habib, 54 I.C. 36 (38) (Pat.). When an application is made for extension of time under this section, it is desirable that the Court should record its opinion as regards that application, even when it is rejected—Adarpriya v. Rampratap, 30 C.W.N. 926, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1105, 98 I.C. 748. An order which does not state the reasons for admitting an appeal out of time cannot be said to be an order passed without jurisdiction, but still it is desirable that the order should give sufficient indication that the discretion given by the law has been judicially exercised—Jnanada Sundari v. Madhab Chandra, 59 Cal. 388 A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 482 (484), 138 I.C. 643. See also Md. Sharifuddin v. R. P. Singh, A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 235.

45. Duty of appellant:—It is the duty of a litigant to know the last date on which he can present his appeal, and if through delay on his part it becomes necessary for him to ask the Court to exercise in his favour the power contained in this section, the burden rests on him of adducing distinct proof of the sufficient cause on which he relies—Krishnaswamy v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 412 (417) (P.C.), 22 C.W.N. 481, 21 Bom.L.R. 541, 16 A.L.J. 27, 43 I.C. 493. A person bringing before the Court a time-barred appeal must satisfy the Court that he had sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal within time and must furnish a detailed affidavit explaining the cause of the delay—Choturbhuj v. Mahammad Habib, 54 I.C. 36; Bur Singh v. Firm Jodha Ram, 95 I.C. 565, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 542. An appeal or application filed out of time must show on the face of it the reason for the delay, and there must further be an express prayer for condonation of the delay under this section—Laurentius v. Dukhi, 4 Pat. 766, 7 P.L.T. 362, 92 I.C. 179, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 73. He must shew that he has not been negligent and that he has been prosecuting his case with due diligence—Habibullah v. Banarsi Das, 22 O.C. 379, 55 I.C. 837 (838); Manghoomal v. Bibi Sardar, 24 S.L.R. 415, 132 I.C. 473, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 58 (59). He is bound to give a proper explanation of every day's delay or of a major portion of the delay—Krishnaswami v. Ramaswami, 19 M.L.J. 209, 1 I.C. 73; Ramaswami v. Venkatanarasimha, (1916) 1 M.W.N. 277, 32 I.C. 1000; Kanhaya Lal v. Baldeo, 14 Lah. 656, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 681 (682), 146 I.C. 45, 34 P.L.R. 937; Ram Singh v Milkiat, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 617 (618); George Gowshala v. Balak Ram, 103 I.C. 498, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 717; Hari v. Hazari, A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu. 132. But it is only the delay of those days which are beyond the period of limitation which must be explained by the appellant in making out sufficient cause why the appeal was not presented on the last day; but no explanation is needed of the inaction during the period of limitation antecedent to the last day—Karali Charan v. Apurba, 34 C.W.N. 1119 (1126), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 298, 132 I.C. 169; Taj Mahomed v. Mukh Ram, 20 Lah.L.T. 115; Sundar v. Diwan, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 276. But this does not mean that he must conclusively establish his inability on each and every day to come to Court. It means that he must give some explanation of why he did not pursue his remedy—Raj v. Susanta, A.I.R. 1951 Simla, 209.

46. Sufficient cause:—It is difficult and undesirable to attempt to define precisely the meaning of the words 'sufficient cause' or 'sufficient reason.' To do so would be to crystallize into a rigid definition that judicial power and discretion which the Legislature has, for the best of all reasons, left undetermined and unfettered—In re Manchester Economic Building Society, 24 Ch. D. 488. What constitutes sufficient cause cannot be laid down by hard and fast rules. It is capable of a great deal of difference of opinion. It must be determined by a reference to the circumstances of each particular case—Hussaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 11 (17); Shib Dayal v. Jagannath, 44 All. 636 (640); Gobind v. Shibadas, 33 Cal. 1323; Hardhan v. Prankrishna, 10 C.L.J. 39, 2 I.C. 961; Ram Baksh v. Mt. Rajeswari, 1948 A.L.J. 114, A.I.R. 1948 All. 213; Arura v. Karam, 48 P.L.R. 325, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 76. The discretion given by sec. 5 should not be defined and crystallised so as to convert a discretionary matter into a rigid rule of law. But the discretion in each particular case should be exercised on its own facts with a view to secure furtherance of justice—Ambica v. Manikgang Loan Office, 55 Cal. 798, 32 C.W.N. 372 (374); Rakhal Chandra v. Asutosh, 17 C.W.N. 807; Mithoo Lal v. Jamma, 10 O.W.N. 1154 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 523 (525), 146 I.C. 127. "Sufficient cause" seems to mean not only those circumstances (such as the Court being closed or time spent in obtaining copies, or the party being a minor or insane) which the law expressly recognizes as extending the time, but also such circumstances as are not expressly recognized but which appear to the Court to be reasonable looking to all the facts of the case—Kichilappa v. Ramanujam, 25 Mad. 166 (171). In finding a "sufficient cause," a man's good faith would have to be kept in view but that "good faith" is more in general sense of the words as gramatically understood rather than in the sense in which it has been defined in sec. 2 (7) of the Act. According to the definition of "good faith" as given in sec. 3 (20), General Clauses Act, an act may be done honestly and in perfect good faith although it may have been done negligently. It cannot, however, be said that an act, however negligent—whether grossly or otherwise —should always be regarded as falling within the term "sufficient cause" employed in this section if it is found to have been done honestly—Arura v. Karam, supra. The words "sufficient cause" should receive a liberal construction so as to advance substantial justice where no negligence or inaction or want of bona fides is imputable to the appellant—Krishna v. Chathappam, 13 Mad. 269 (271); Shib Dayal v. Jagannath, 44 All. 636 (640); Gobinda v. Shibadas, 33 Cal. 1323; Sarat Chander v. Saraswati, 34 Cal. 216 (219); Secy. of State v. Tirath Ram, 9 Lah. 76; Kichilappa v. Ramanujam, 25 Mad. 166 (171); Dinabandhu v. Jadumani, A.I.R. 1954 S.C. 411; Ashutosh v. Jatindra, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 238; Sitaram v. Nagrashna, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 537. The Court should not apply too exacting a standard of diligence and if the delay, under the circumstances, is not one that can be considered as unreasonable, the Court should exercise the discretion under this section—Kamiruddin v. Bismupriya, 33 C.W.N. 76 (78), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 240, 119 I.C. 383. In exercising the discretion in favour of the applicant under this section, the Court must be satisfied that the applicant was not guilty of unnecessary laches—Mumtaz Ali v. Ugraj, 12 O.L.J. 94, 86 I.C. 270, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 371, 28 O.C. 378. In Brij Inder Singh v. Kanshi Ram, A.I.R. 1917 P.C. 156, 45 Cal. 94 (P.C.) (followed in Kunwar Rajendra v. Rai Rajeswar, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 276) the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council confirmed the following general rule to be observed in applying sec. 5 as enunciated by Plowden, J., in Karm Baksh v. Daulat Ram, (1888) 183 P.R. (F.B.). "All that the section requires in express terms as a condition for the exercise of the discretionary power of admission of an appeal presented after time is sufficient cause for not presenting the appeal within the prescribed period. If such can be shown, the Court may in its discretion, which is of course a judicial discretion and not an arbitrary discretion, admit the appeal. We think the true guide for a Court in the exercise of this discretion is whether the appellant has acted with reasonable diligence in prosecuting his appeal." That is the general rule, and Lord Dunedin, delivering the judgment of the Board, added: "There may be a general rule as to the exercise of discretion, but each case must, nevertheless, be examined as to its own circumstances to see whether they make it fall within or without the terms of the general rule." (See per Page, C.J. in S. M. Ally v. Maung San Nyein, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 183, 14 Rang. 155, 162 I.C. 664. If, however, he is responsible for delaying the filing of the appeal even by one day due to his negligence, he is not entitled to get the benefit of this section—Karora v. Kartar, A.I.R. 1951 Simla 170.

The law as to when and under what circumstances the delay is a bar to legal remedy is very clearly laid down by Sir Barnes Peacock in Lindsay Petroleum Co. v Hurd, (1874) L.R. P.C. 221, 239:—"Where it would be practically unjust to give a remedy, either because the party has, by his conduct, done that which might fairly be regraded as equivalent to a waiver of it, or where by his conduct and neglect he has, though perhaps not waiving that remedy, yet put the other party in a situation in which it would not be reasonable to place him if the remedy were afterwards to be asserted, in either of these cases, lapse of time and delay are most material. But in every case, if an argument against relief, which otherwise would be just, is founded upon mere delay, that delay of course not amounting to a bar by any statute of limitations, the validity of that defence must be tried upon principles substantially equitable. Two circumstances, always important in such cases, are, the length of the delay and the nature of the acts done during the interval, which might affect either party and cause a balance of justice or injustice in taking the one course or the other, so far as relates to the remedy". See also the observations of Lord Penzance in Dalton v. Angus, (1881) 6 A.C. 740, 805.

A Court should no doubt give a liberal construction to the words "sufficient cause" but the interpretation must be in accordance with judicial principles and with due regard to the respondent's side of the question. The period for preferring an appeal must not be extended simply because the appellant's case is hard and cal's for sympathy—Fakir Chand v. Municipal Committee, 59 P.R. 1913, 18 I.C. 37; Krishna v. Trimbak, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 409, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 156. Courts will not extend the period of limitation merely out of benevolence to the party seeking relief—Carter v. Stubbs, 50 L.J.C.L. 4; Krishna v. Trimbak, supra.

Where there was a delay of 44 days in filing the petition for special leave and the only ground urged in support of the application for condonation of delay was that the petitioners had to collect money from amongst a large number of petitioners who were interested in the case, the Supreme Court held that it was not a sufficient ground for for condoning the delay—Bamarasidas v. State of U. P., A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 520, (1956) S.C.J. 599.

SUFFICIENT CAUSE, WHAT IS AND WHAT IS NOT:—

47. Illness:—Illness may be sufficient cause, but it must be proved that the man was utterly disabled to attend to any duty—L. E. H. U. v. A. H. Yin, U.B.R. (1897-1901) 451. High fever, attended with delirium, by reason of which the appellant was confined to bed, in consequence of which the application was delayed by four days, was a sufficient cause for excusing the delay of those days—Gauri Shankar v. Kashi Nath, 1933 A.L.J. 1631, A.I.R. 1934 All. 367 (368), 148 I.C. 290; or where the applicant suffered from appendicites a week before the expiry of limitation for filing a revision petition and so was unable to file it till 16 days after the period of limitation, the delay should be excused—Madho v. Sham, 1942 N.L.J. 311. Illness of the pleader, and the client's ignorance of it might be a sufficient cause—Anundmoyee v. Poornoo, 9 M.I.A. 226; Rabiabai v. Md. Ismail, 21 Bom. 723. But in Bageshwar v. Rukmini, 1940 A.L.J. (Supp.) 18, 1940 R.D. 121 it has been held that it would be a dangerous precedent to allow the benefit of this section because a litigant's counsel filed an affidavit to say that the delay was due to counsel's illness. Illness in the family and consequent delay in making arrangement for the appeal is not sufficient cause—Elahi v. Biswesswar, 79 I.C. 924, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 175. Illness is sufficient cause if the appellant was ill at the time when the period of limitation for filing the appeal expired. But if the appellant had recovered from illness before the expiry of the period, he was not entitled to delay the filing of the appeal and to claim a deduction of the days of his illness like the days required for obtaining copies—Ma Thein v. Ma U Byu, 6 Rang. 271, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 165. The mere fact that the clerk into whose hands the appellant had made over the memorandum of appeal had been seriously injured in a riot case and was lying in hospital and could not apply for a copy of the decree, would not be a sufficient cause, unless there is something to show that even if the clerk was ill, the pleader could not have done what was necessary and what in fact ought to have been done. Moreover, it must be shown that the clerk was ill and whether in fact his illness put it out of his power to assist the pleader if he required his assistance in getting a copy of the decree—Abdul Kasem v. Chaturbuj, 3 P.L.T. 110, 64 I.C. 55, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 47 (49). A mere plea of sickness in itself, unless the effect of the sickness was such that in the circumstances it would afford reasonable excuse for the delay in presenting the appeal, would not justify the Court in exercising its discretion in admitting an appeal under sec. 5. "It is a matter for the Court to consider in each case whether the effect of illness as proved is such that it afforded sufficient cause for the failure to present the appeal within time." (Per Page, C.J., in S. M. Ally v. Maung San Nyein, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 183, 14 Rang. 155, 162 I.C. 664, Nazoomali v. Panchoo Bibee, (1864) 1 W.R. Misc. 23 followed).

48. Imprisonment:—Imprisonment in a criminal case may be a sufficient cause and the time spent in jail may be deducted—Maharaj Narain v. Banoji, 21 P.R. 1904; but the fact that a person imprisoned thought that he had no right of appeal and that his relative would appeal if he had a right is not a sufficient cause —Q. E. v. Bhoni Ram, 1891 A.W.N. 10.

49. Mistake:—Mistake made by the officer of the Court in not preparing correct copies of the judgment and decree is a sufficient cause, even if there was a contributory delay on the appellant's part in showing the mistake—Dalgit v. Ram Ratan, 25 I.C. 26 (Oudh). So also where an appellant is misled by a wrong copy of an order supplied to him and files an appeal after getting the right copy, the delay caused by the mistake of the office can be excused—Suraj v. Ram, 1940 R.D. 556, 1941 O.A. (Supp.) 75. The fact that the necessity for filing a second memorandum of appeal late arose out of the erroneous rejection of the first memorandum filed within time is a sufficient ground for extending time under this section—Gajadhar v. Moti, 22 Pat.L.T. 549, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 108. Where an appeal was filed by a prisoner who had been sentenced to imprisonment exceeding 4 years, but the appeal instead of being sent to the High Court under sec. 408 (b), Cr. P. Code was by mistake of the Jail authorities sent to the Sessions Court, and when the appeal ultimately came to the High Court, the period of limitation had expired, held that the appeal should be accepted by the High Court, as the prisoner ought not to suffer for the delay which was not due to any fault of his own—In re Abdulla, 2 Rang. 486 (487). A bona fide omission by the appellants to sign the Vakalatnamah is a sufficient cause for admitting the appeal after limitation after allowing the defect to be made good —Habeeb v. Naush, 11 A.L.J. 779, 21 I.C. 444 (445). Filing an appeal by a wrong person through a bona fide mistake is a sufficient cause to entitle the right person to be admitted as an appellant after the expiry of the period of limitation—Dwarka Nath v. Debendra Nath, 4 C.W.N. 58 (62). The name of a wrong person was entered as that of the respondent through a mistake which was corrected but after time; it was held that the appeal was properly admitted—Jamna v. Ibrahim, 1888 A.W.N. 58. Where the name of a respondent was omitted and the omission was due to a bona fide mistake on the part of the clerk of the counsel, the Court can allow the name of the respondent to be brought on the record after the expiry of the period—Gaya v. Chottoo, 12 A.L.J. 941, 26 I.C. 68 (69). In order to determine whether a mistake ought to be excused under this section, the test is this: if the mistake or carelessness is real and unintentional, and no damage has been done to the other side that cannot be repaired by cost or otherwise, the application for excusing the delay must be granted; if, on the other hand, the negligence is culpable, or there are mala fides on the part of the applicant or irreparable hurt would result to the other side, the application must be dismissed—Ramachandram v. Sabapathy, 54 M.L.J. 234, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 404 (406). Where the provisions of this section are invoked on the ground of bona fide mistake, the test is not merely whether the mistake was bona fide or not, but also whether in a case of bona fide mistake sufficient cause exists for condoning the negligence or other factor which might have led to that mistake—Chunni v. Daya, 1948 R.D. 433. Where an appeal is filed a day later, through oversight of the counsel's clerk, time may be extended under sec. 5. Thus, where an appeal which ought to have been filed on the 10th was actually filed on the next day, and it appeared on affidavit that the vakil gave two cases to his clerk on the 8th with instructions to put in the appeal on the 10th and the revision petition on the 11th, but by mistake the clerk entered the same wrongly in his diary, and filed the appeal on the 11th, held that under these circumstances the Court would be justified in giving an extension of time under this section—Ichhar Singh v. Natha, 27 P.L.R. 623, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 693, 98 I.C. 514.

Mistake of counsel:—'Mistaken advice given by a legal practitioner may in the circumstances of a particular case give rise to sufficient cause within the section though there is certainly no general doctrine which saves parties from the results of wrong advice.'—Kunwar Rajendra v. Rai Rajeshwar, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 278, 41 C.W.N. 1189, 1937 M.W.N. 937, 39 Bom.L.R. 1021, 1937 P.W.N. 689. It can not be laid down as a general proposition that the delay caused by counsel's mistake can never be regarded as a sufficient cause—Arura v. Kuram, 48 P.L.R. 325, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 76, 225 I.C. 291. A mistake on the part of the counsel, if made bona fide is sufficient cause—Pritchard v. Pritchard, (1884) 14 Q.B.D. 55; Johnson v. Warwick, (1856) 17 C.B. 516; Gopal v. Solomon, 11 Cal. 767; Corporation v. Anderson, 10 Cal. 445; Bishendat v. Nandan, 12 C.W.N. 25 (per Woodroffe, J.); Ahmed v. Shamsulnisa, 1918 P.L.R. 10, 45 I.C. 542; Resal Singh v. Shadi, 95 P.R. 1917, 43 I.C. 317. And a client preferring a time-barred appeal under the mistaken advice of his counsel is entitled to the benefit of this section—Anjora v. Babu, 29 All. 638; Kura Mal v. Ram Nath, 28 All. 414; Promatha v. Bhabataran, 46 C.L.J. 257, 105 I.C. 217, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 829; Azimulla v. Gokal, 32 I.C. 640, 1916 P.W.R. 37; Shib Dayal v. Jagannath, 44 All. 636, 20 A.L.J. 674, 68 I.C. 812; Chhotey v. Devi Brij Rani, 6 O.W.N. 1042, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 49, or making delay in applying for copies by the erroneous advice of the pleader—Bhansaheb v. Sanabai, I.L.R. (1946) Bom. 431, A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 437. So also, the filing of an appeal in the wrong Court under the mistaken advice of counsel is sufficient cause for filing it afterwards in the proper Court after the period of limitation, provided the appellant acted with reasonable diligence in the prosecution of the appeal—Dattatraya v. Secy. of State, 45 Bom. 607, 23 Bom.L.R. 89, 60 I.C. 744; Ambica v. Manikganj Loan Office Ld., 55 Cal. 798, 32 C.W.N. 372; Sundarbai v. Collector, 43 Bom. 376 (P.C.); Debendra v. Nagendra, 30 C.W.N. 479, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 688, 43 C.L.J. 106 [following Brij Inder v. Kanshi Ram, 45 Cal. 94 (P.C.)]; Parbhu v. Jai Mangal, A.I.R. 1928 All. 144; Kishan v. Mohammad, 43 P.L.R. 502, A.I.R. 1942 Lah. 94. Thus where connected suits with different valuations were disposed of by a common judgment and owing to a mistake in thinking that the appeals therefrom should be filed in the same Court, the appeal which ought to be filed in a District Court is not filed in time but is filed after the mistake was discovered after the expiry of limitation, there is no gross negligence on the part of the counsel and the mistake is not an unnatural one—U. P. Government v. Church Missonary, 17 Luck. 467, 1941 O.W.N. 1282, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 125. But the mistake of counsel must be of such a description that it might arise even amongst practioners of experience —S. C. Dey v. Rajwanti, 6 P.L.J. 237, 3 P.L.T. 96, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 140; Nrisingha v. Trigunand, 17 Pat. 507, 19 Pat.L.T. 309, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 413. Mistake of a junior counsel is not a sufficient cause within the meaning of this section—Gaurishanker v. Mt. Manaraji, (1947) A.W.R. (Rev.) 105. The mistake must be bona fide, i.e., made in spite of due care and attention—J. N. Surty v. Chettiar Firm, 4 Rang. 265, 98 I.C. 417, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 20; Ma Ngwe Yun v. Ma Pa, 5 Bur.L.J. 227, 101 I.C. 363. Thus where the advocate for the applicant was under the impression that since the applicant was permitted to sue as a pauper in the lower Court there was no necessity to observe the formality of personal presentation of application to file appeal as pauper in the appellate Court it was held that the applicant should not suffer for the omission of his advocate to inform him in time of the requirement of law and delay should be condoned—Jusab v. State, A.I.R. 1951 Sau. 12. A bona fide mistake on the part of the pleader may be condoned, but gross negligence on his part cannot justifiably be condoned so as to extend the time under this section. In such a case, the client has his remedy against the defaulting legal adviser—Maung Po v. Pa Tha, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 80, 131 I.C. 507. An appellant is not entitled to the benefit of this section even where he has acted in good faith on the advice of his counsel whose advice has been given negligently even though honestly—Mithoo Lal v. Jamna, 10 O.W.N. 1154 (F.B.), 146 I.C. 127, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 523 (525). The mistaken advice of counsel is not sufficient to justify extension of time under this section, unless the advice was given in good faith, that is, with due care and attention—Nazir v. Ganga, 14 Luck. 701, 1939 O.W.N. 755, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh, 245. Where the pleader made a mistake by relying upon an erroneous statement of the clerk of the Court that an application for copy would not be accepted until the decree was signed, held that the pleader ought to have known the law, and that the mistake was not made with due care and attention—Mg. Po Kyaw v. Ma Lal, 7 Rang. 18, 117 I.C. 251, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 116 (117). The question is whether the error is one which might have easily occurred even if reasonably due care and attention has been exercised by the pleader—Tin Tin Nyo v. Maung Ba Saung, 1 Rang. 584, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 148. In a Calcutta case (Surendra v. Mohendra, 59 Cal. 781, 36 C.W.N. 420, at pp. 431, 436), it has been observed that there is no authority for the view that a mistake of a legal adviser, however gross and inexcusable, if bona fide acted upon by a litigant, will entitle him to the protection of sec. 5. This case has been followed in Phani v. Nalinibala, 67 C.L.J. 107 where it has been held that the facts of each case and nature of the omission or mistake on the part of the legal adviser in each particular case will have to be examined and scrutinized in order to find out whether there has been negligence or gross want of skill in the legal adviser, or whether there was merely a bona fide mistake not through misconduct or negligence or want of reasonable skill, but such as even a skilled person might make. It is only in the latter case that the litigant would be allowed the benefit of this section. The discretion given to Courts under this section cannot be crystallized into a rigid rule of law, but the following rule expressed by Brett, M. R. in Highton v. Treherne, (1878) 48 L.J.K.B. 167, embodies a sound working formula: "In cases where a suitor has suffered from negligence or gross want of legal skill of his legal adviser, he has his remedy against that legal adviser, and meantime the suitor must suffer. But where there has been a bona fide mistake, not through misconduct or through negligence nor through want of reasonable skill, but such as a skilled person might make, I very much dislike the idea that the rights of the client should be thereby forfeited." Even though the pleader might have been guilty of great carelessness, the appellant ought not to be made to suffer where he acted implicitly relying on the advice of his pleader, as for instance in a case where the appellant being seriously ill sent all the necessary papers and costs to his pleader who was a practitioner of over 15 years' standing, and the pleader under a wrong impression filed the apeal in a wrong Court —Ambica Ranjan v. Manikganj Loan Office, 55 Cal. 798, 32 C.W.N. 372 (376, 377). But although a party relying on the mistaken advice of his legal adviser may be allowed an extension of time, still where there is no doubt as to the law regarding the forum of appeal, as for instance, where it has always been held and it is well-known to all litigants that an appeal in the particular class of suits lies to the High Court, but the appellant prefers his appeal to the District Court, he is not entitled to an extension of time on the ground of erroneous advice of his counsel—Uttam v. Vishan, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 568 (569), 144 I.C. 627.

From a review of the above authorities, it is clear that the decisions of the High Courts on this subject are not uniform, and it would serve no useful purpose to try to deduce any general principle from them, because naturally each decision is influenced by its special facts and circumstances.

The trend of decisions in English cases to disallow an extension of time on the ground of mistake of counsel, as In re Helsby, [1894] 1 Q.B. 742 (Judgment by Davey, L.J.), was sought to be applied in this country, but in Shib Dayal v. Jagannath, 44 All. 636 (639) the Judges remarked that although legal education has progressed in this country and the Courts are right in demanding increasing competence in legal practitioners, still having regard to the disadvantages of practitioners in places remote from law libraries, and to the fact that there is in the mofussil some want of knowledge of the procedure of the High Court, the principle of English decisions should not be strictly applied in this country.

By a piece of carelessness, counsel for the appellant omitted to file a copy of the decree appealed against, and instead filed a copy of a deposition. The mistake was detected after the expiry of the period of limitation. It was held that the Court should allow the copy of the decree to be filed—Harjsa v. Kahni, 85 P.R. 1913, 19 I.C. 438. Where the appellant obtained a copy of the decree to be appealed against, and gave it in time to his Vakil, but by some mistake the Vakil did not file the copy of the decree and died soon after, the High Court excused the delay and accepted the copy at the hearing of the appeal—Prosanna Kumari v. Ram Chandra, 17 C.L.J. 66, 17 I.C. 155. Where the delay in the production of the first Court's judgment was due to the mistake of the Vakil in applying for a copy of the decree instead of a judgment, the delay in the production of the same must be excused under this section—Firm of Amba Parshad v. Jwala Dat, 27 P.L.R. 239, 8 Lah. L.J. 101, 94 I.C. 629.

Where the delay is due to the wrong legal advice which though sound was wrong because of later ruling, it would be sufficient cause to excuse the delay—Rahan v. Nanak, 1949 R.D. 35.

Act XXVI of 1920 which cut down the time for leave to appeal to the Privy Council and for substitution of legal representatives from 6 months to 3 months, came into force on 1st January 1921. In respect of a judgment delivered a few days later, the party on the advice of his local pleaders applied for leave within the six months' period, but after the 3 months' period had expired. There was a delay of only 14 days. Held that as the amending Act was very recently passed, it took some time before the curtailed period of limitation came to be generally known, and the amending Act was not available in any of the books on the Indian Limitation Act that might be referred to for the purpose. Under these circumstances the local pleaders might honestly, though mistakenly, be under the belief that the period was six months, and so it was a fit case for excusing the delay under this section—Nagindas v. Nilaji, 48 Bom. 442, 26 Bom.L.R. 395, 80 I.C. 862, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 399; Vaithinatha v. Gobindaswami, 41 M.L.J. 65, 62 I.C. 795. But in a Nagpur and in an Oudh cases the delay was not excused on this ground, see Padamraj v. M. B. Kaisha, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 279, 78 I.C. 154; Municipal Board v. Kali, 1944 O.W.N. 118, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh. 135.

A bona fide mistake of calculation on the part of the appellant's pleader is a sufficient cause—Bishandat v. Nandan, 12 C.W.N. 25; Rakhal Chandra v. Ashutosh, 17 C.W.N. 807, 19 I.C. 931; Kandasami v. Arunachala, 21 L.W. 24, 86 I.C. 114, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 462; Baban v. Emp., 9 N.L.J. 180, 96 I.C. 857, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 503. But in Zaibulnissa v. Kulsan, 1 All. 250, such a mistake was not held to be a sufficient cause. But a mistake of calculation on the part of the pleader who has not acted with sufficient care and attention, coupled with an error in adding up the days, cannot be excused under this section—Ma Ngwe v. Ma Pu, 5 Bur.L.J. 227, 101 I.C. 363.

If the mistake of the legal adviser is the result of negligence, it cannot afford a ground for giving the benefit of this section—Asaram v. State, A.I.R. 1956 Madh. B. 127.

Where there is some dispute about the law or the law is in an unsettled state, a mistake by the lawyer can be accepted as a sufficient cause. But when the matter is beyond dispute, a statement that the lawyer did not know the law cannot be accepted as a sufficient cause under this section—Bijanlata v. Bhudhar, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 578.

Once a client proves that he had acted bona fide and with reasonable care in approaching a particular lawyer who gave him the wrong advice with the result that the period of limitation expired before any step was taken, he is not precluded from showing that it was owing to the reliance placed on such advice that he could not present an appeal in the proper forum within the proper time. If he proves that, it would be a sufficient cause under this section—Khetramoni v. Surendra, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 553.

Mistake of Counsel may be a sufficient cause, but a mistaken advice of a stranger is no excuse for delay. And so where the pleader's clerk, acting on the advice of the Stamp Reporter as to the last day of filing the appeal, preferred the appeal beyond time, it was held that the Satmp Reporter was not under any obligation to inform litigants of the last day of filing an appeal, and any mistake of calculation on his part would not save the appellant—Khaja Habibullah v. Abdul Karim, 57 C.L.J. 39, 145 I.C. 116, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 462.

49A. Mistake or ignorance of law:—A mistake or ignorance of law is not a sufficient cause. The maxim Ignorantia legis neminem excusat (ignorance of law is no excuse) has been so firmly settled both in England and in India that it would be the shaking of established authority to maintain that ignorance of law or mistakes of law are reasons for the excuse, and as such furnish elements for extending the period of limitation which the statute law has provided—Ramjiwan Mal v. Chand Mal, 10 All. 587 (597); Jag Lall v. Har Narain, 10 All. 524 (529); Brij Indar v. Kanshi Ram, 45 Cal. 94 (106) (P.C.); Dy. Commissioner v. Chhedi, 1942 O.W.N. 438, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 57; Bindeshari v. Tetra, 1949 R.D. 265. Therefore, if an appellant prefers an appeal from a decree for an amount exceeding Rs. 5,000, to the District Judge instead of to the High Court, and after it is returned by the former Court, files it subsequently in the latter Court at a time when the period of limitation has expired, the mistake cannot be excused under this section—Ibid. So also, an appellant filing an appeal after the expiry of the period of limitation owing to a stupid misconstruction of the lower Court's order appealed against, is not entitled to the benefit given under this section—Hasibunnissa v. Bishnath, 13 O.L.J. 172, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 206, 91 I.C. 867. The fact that the appellant was under the impression that the limitation was 90 days, was no reason for extending the period—Dial Singh v. Buddha Singh, 2 Lah. 127, 61 I.C. 327. There was not the slighest justification for counsel, in spite of the amended limitation in the matter of appeals to the Privy Council being in force for 23 years, to think or labour under any misapprehension that the old period of limitation was still in vogue—Municipal Board v. Kali 1944 O.W.N. 118, A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 135. The Bombay High Court also holds that mere ignorance of law cannot be recognised as sufficient cause for delay, for that would be a premium on ignorance—Sitaram v. Nimba, 12 Bom. 320 (per West, J.). And in a Full Bench case of the Allahabad High Court (Bechi v. Ahsanullah, 12 All. 461 at p. 482) Mahmood, J. expressed an opinion that "speaking with strict accuracy there can be no such thing as a bona fide mistake of law, for good faith implies due care and caution" and he quoted with approval the words of West, J. in 12 Bom. 320 cited above.

But it cannot be laid down as a general proposition that ignorance of law can never be considered; in very special cases it may be a sufficient cause—Gulam Shah v. Mallick Mazaffar Khan, 81 P.R. 1886 (F.B.). Assuming that ignorance of law may sometimes be an excuse, the rule of interference is subject to certain qualifications. There must be no negligence, there must be no inaction, and there must be no want of good faith. Sec. 5 was not provided to encourage negligence, procrastination, and laxity—Gangaprasad v. Mt. Bansappa, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 246, 45 Cal. 94 (P.C.), 12 N.L.R 171 followed. If the mistake be bona fide it will be considered as sufficient cause within the meaning of this section. The true rule is, whether under the special circumstances of each case the appellant acted under an honest though mistaken belief formed with due care and attention—Krishna v. Chathappan, 13 Mad. 269 (271). Before a mistake of law can be accepted as sufficient cause, it is necessary to satisfy the Court not only that the mistake was honestly made, but also that it was made despite due care and attention on the part of the appellant or his pleader—Fakir Chand v. Municipal Committee, 59 P.R. 1913, 18 I.C. 37. And so, where the appellant who as a pleader should have known the law on the subject, had the advantage of the advice of a leading pleader of the Chief Court, but for reasons best known to himself went against that advice in preferring the appeal, it was held that the appellant had no sufficient cause for not instituting the appeal within the period of limitation, as he could not possibly have made the mistake had he taken the precaution of discussing the subject with his pleader with reference to the question of limitation, and to the case-law on the point, and that his mistake, though honest, was the result of either carelessness or an erroneous assumption of knowledge which he took no care to verify—Ibid.

Where the appellant was an ignorant milkman having no experience of any previous litigation, and though he knew of the respondent's death, he did not know that the substitution of his legal representatives was necessary and he came to know of this when it was too late to apply for substitution of the deceased respondent's legal representatives, held that under the circumstances of the case the delay was bona fide, and sufficient cause was shown under this section—Krishna Mohan v. Surapati, 29 C.W.N. 472, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 684, 94 I.C. 929. See also Ramachandran v. Sabapathy, 54 M.L.J. 234, AI.R. 1928 Mad. 404 (406), where a minor made a similar mistake and the delay was excused. In Umrao v. Ruhmot, I.L.R. (1939) Lah. 433, 41 P.L.R. 843, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 439 it has been held that applications for the extension of time under this section have to be more liberally construed in favour of minors than other litigants. An appeal to the High Court under sec. 476B of the Criminal Procedure Code against an order of the Civil Court refusing or making a complaint under sec. 476, is nevertheless a criminal appeal governed by the 60 days' period of limitation prescribed by Art. 155, and not a civil appeal governed by Art. 156. Where, however, the appellants were under a bona fide mistake that it was a civil appeal govened by the 90 days' period of limitation under Article 156, and filed their appeal accordingly, held that is was a proper case for excusing the delay—Rajani Kanta v. Bistoomani, 46 C.L.J. 40, 104 I C. 456, A I.R. 1927 Cal. 718 (720); Sheo Prasad v. Sheo Bans, 24 A.L.J. 368, A.I.R. 1926 All. 211 (212), 93 I.C. 851. Where an application for leave to appeal under sec. 449, Cr. P. Code against a sentence passed by a Judge of the High Court sitting in sessions was presented after the period of 60 days prescribed by Art. 155, and it appeared that the delay was due to a mistake on the part of the jailor who was under the impression that it was a non-appealable sentence, held that there was sufficient cause for excusing the delay under sec. 5—Gallagher v. Emp., 54 Cal. 52, 101 I.C. 657, A.I R. 1927 Cal. 307. See also Notes 50 and 52 below.

Where there are conflicting views on a certain point and the delay caused in filing the appeal is caused by one of the views, even though the Court takes a contrary view, it can extend the time under this section—Shivan v. Radha, A.I.R. 1941 Pesh. 74, 196 I.C. 654.

50. Wrong proceedings taken in good faith:—Where a person bona fide thinking that it was the proper course, filed a suit instead of appealing from a decree, and soon after found out the error and preferred the appeal, it was a 'sufficient cause'—Ghulam v. Shahbaz, 162 P.R. 1888; Sitaram v. Nimba, 12 Bom. 320.

Similarly, where a person believing in good faith that a petition for revision, and not an appeal, was the proper remedy, and in pursuance of that belief presented the petition, it was a sufficient cause for subsequently preferring an appeal after the period of limitation—Balwant v. Gumani, 5 All. 591; Hardwan v. Raja Protab, 5 O.C. 183. But if he does not act in good faith, i.e., if the knows perfectly well that he ought to file an appeal but still he files an application for revision, it will not be considered a sufficient cause for afterwards filing an appeal out of time—Umed Ali v. Municipal Committee, 2 Lah. 1 (4), 56 I.C. 148.

When a remedy is provided by law, resort to the inherent jurisdiction under sec. 151, C. P. C. is not permissible. And a person wrongly prosecuting an application under sec. 151 cannot be said said to be acting in good faith, and delay due to such prosecution cannot be condoned under sec. 5—Ladha Ram v. Barkat Ali, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 67, 38 P.L.R. 868, 165 I.C. 661. The provisions of the section are not to be invoked when a person acts in ignorance of specific provisions of law and thereby misses the remedy—Ram Autar v. Qadir, 1940 A.W.R. (B.R.) 55, 1940 R.D. 159.

The time taken in applying for a review of judgment may be deducted in calculating the period of limitation for an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council—Nariman v. Hasham, 26 Bom.L.R. 1261, 49 Bom. 149, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 137, 85 I.C. 191.

So also, the preferring of an application for review will be considered as a sufficient cause for delay in filing an appeal, if the appellant can shew that the grounds for review were reasonable and proper and that these grounds could not be grounds for appeal as well—Ashanulla v. Collector of Dacca, 15 Cal. 242 (243); Goivnda v. Bhandari, 14 Mad. 81; Sudhakar v. Sadashiv, 19 C.W.N. 1113, 31 I.C. 705; Gobind v. Shiva Das, 33 Cal. 1323 (1329); Haradhan v. Prankrishna, 2 I.C. 961, 10 C.L.J. 39; Pundlik v. Achut, 18 Bom. 84; Seshagiri v. Venkatesh, 29 Bom.L.R. 344; A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 221, 101 I.C. 42; Waryam v. Wadhava, 89 P.R. 1918, 46 I.C. 589; Shah Mahamed v. Md. Roshan, 26 P.L.R. 456, 88 I.C. 327; Messadi Lal v. Badhawa, 100 P.R. 1910, 8 I.C. 1156; Maung Lun v. Maung Dun, 1 Bur. L.J. 154, 74 I.C. 39; Hanumal v. Atma Ram, 47 P.L.R. 1915, 27 I.C. 799; Parbhu v. Murlidhar, 22 A.L.J. 365, 78 I.C. 677, A.I.R. 1924 All. 867; Pridhanmal v. Laloo, 25 S.L.R. 242, 130 I.C. 545, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 3 (4). In Firm Bishan Das v. Firm Brijmohan, A.I R. 1935 Lah. 844 the appellant was held to have shown sufficient cause within the meaning of sec. 5 for not filing the appeal within time as he was prosecuting with due diligence his application for review in the lower court. But the mere fact that the appellant had applied for review is not a sufficient cause for not filing his appeal within time, and he is not always entitled to be allowed a deduction of time spent in applying for a review of judgment. If there are no reasonable grounds for making the application for review, and the grounds for the application for review are found to be all grounds of appeal and none of them are grounds for review, the presentation of the application for review is not a sufficient ground for not presenting the appeal within time—Ashanulla v. Collector, 15 Cal. 242 (244); Mahmud v. Wajid, 15 Luck. 526, 1940 O.W.N. 281, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 310. The fact that the grounds raised in the review application do not fall under any of the grounds mentioned in Or. 47, R. 1 Civil Procedure Code is no ground by itself to warrant an inference that the review application was made in bad faith to gain time —Noor v. Abdul, 1944 O.W.N. 46, A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 193. Another test is, whether the appellant has acted with reasonable diligence (on the application of the principle of section 14) in prosecuting the appeal; and he ought ordinarily to be deemed to have acted with due diligence when the whole period between the date of the decree appealed against and the date of presenting the appeal does not, after excluding the time spent in prosecuting with due diligence a proper application for review of judgment, exceed the period prescribed by law for presenting the appeal—Karam Baksh v. Daulat Ram, 183 P.R. 1888; followed by the Privy Council in Brij Indar v. Kanshi Ram, 45 Cal. 94 (105) (P.C.); Ram Charita v. Ram Narayan, 52 I.C. 959 (960) (Pat.); Kunwar Rajendra v. Rai Rajeshwar, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 276. All that the apellant has to show under this section is that he prosecuted the review application with due diligence, and that there were reasonable grounds for filing such an application for review. But it is not necessary for him to show that his application for review had a prospect of success—Ramdhani v. Khakshardas, 92 I.C. 1031, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 677. It is wrong to think that the period spent by a party in prosecuting a review application is compulsorily deducted—Gudar v. Chhajge, 1941 O.A. (Supp.) 893; Noor v. Abdul, 1944 O.W.N. 46, A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 193. If it appears that the plaintiff had not prosecuted his application for review with due diligence, he will not be entitled to get a deduction of time spent in the review proceedings. Thus, where the plaintiff's suit was dismissed on the 15th August, and on the 10th November, i.e., nearly three months after, he presented an application for review which was rejected on the 15th November, whereupon he preferred an appeal, it was held that the plaintiff-appellant was not entitled to an indulgence under this section, as the application for review was not prosecuted with reasonable diligence—Azizuddin v. Bhag Mal, 107 P.R. 1918, 46 I.C. 23; Govinda v. Bhandari, 14 Mad. 81.

Again, immediately after the termination of the wrong proceedings (whether the proceedings be in review or revision) the appeal must be preferred with due diligence in order to get the benefit of this section—Kuller v. Jeewan, 22 W.R. 79; Krishnadas v. Rahimannisa, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 457; Ganga v. Madho, 89 P.R. 1882; Sahiba v. Hira, 166 P.R. 1883; Karam Baksh v. Daulat Ram, 183 P.R. 1888; Ganda Singh v. Jawala, 140 P.L.R. 1911, 10 I.C. 129. In Bhuralal v. Shrilal, 1946 A.M.L.J. 26 time spent for taking the copy of the judgment on review was excluded under this section on the ground that it might help in the drafting of grounds of appeal.

If however, the applicant deliberately adopts a remedy which in the end proves to be futile, he is not entitled to the benefits of the section. Thus where on the dismissal of an appeal for non-prosecution, the appellant waits till the expiry of the period of limitation for filing an appeal to the Privy Council and then applies for restoration of the appeal and on its rejection applies for leave to appeal to the Privy Council and prays for excusing the delay in filing it, there is no sufficient cause for extending the time—Jagdish v. Hari, 1942 O.W.N. 206, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 362.

Where difficult questions of jurisdiction arise and a party bona fide files a revision application instead of an appeal in another Court and subsequently files the appeal in the proper Court but out of time, time can be extended under sec. 5,—it being a case of bona fide mistake—M. Zahur Hussain v. Chura Singh, A.I.R. 1936 All. 266. Where an application originally filed as an appeal, was as such, within time, but on its being decided by a Judge that it ought to be dealt with as a revision, it is found to be beyond time as revision, the reason for the delay being the conflict of decisions as to the proper remedy, it is sufficient cause for the delay being excused—Anandrao v Parwatibai, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 487, 1941 N.L.J. 519, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 308. In case of bona fide dispute as to whether an application in revision or an appeal lies, the party is entitled to get the benefit of this section—Ramdhan v. Jagdish, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 54.

51. Proceedings in wrong Court through bona fide mistake:— Where an appellant preferred an appeal to a wrong Court, believing bona fide that the appeal lay there, that is a sufficient cause, and the appellant is entitled to deduct the time during which the appeal was pending in the wrong Court—Balaram v. Sham, 23 Cal. 526; Dadabhai v. Maneksha, 21 Bom. 552; Rupa Thakurani v. Kumud Nath, 22 C.W.N. 594, 46 I.C. 116; Huro Chunder v. Surnamoyi, 13 Cal. 266; Mahabat Rai v. Bharadwaj, 37 I.C. 818, 15 A.L.J. 200; Krishna v. Chathappan, 13 Mad. 269; Indar Lal v. Deojit, 4 A.L.J. 1; Sardar Partap v. Lala Karam, 184 P.R. 1889; Mg. Sin v. Mg. Po, 4 Bur.L.T. 224, 12 I.C. 28. Although section 14 does not apply to appeals, still the circumstances mentioned in that section (viz., proceeding in a wrong Court through bona fide mistake) may be considered as a sufficient cause within the meaning of section 5 so that the time during which an appeal has been preferred and pending in a wrong Court may be excluded for the purpose of calculating time, and the Court may excuse the delay in bringing the appeal before the proper Court—Balwant v. Gumani, 5 All. 591; Kamiruddin v. Bisnupriya, 33 C.W.N. 76 (77); Kumudini v. Kamala Kanta, 35 C.L.J. 106, 68 I.C. 575; Kunkar Rajendra v. Rai Rajeshwar, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 276; Anadi Ram v. Mt. Chaduri, A.I.R. 1956 Ass. 63. In considering the question of "sufficient cause" under this section, the equities on which secs. 4 and 14 of the Act are based may be taken into account. The existence of circumstances mentioned in those sections may therefore, be regarded as a sufficient ground for excusing the delay caused by the Courts being closed or by wrong proceedings—Kayambu v. The Court of Wards, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 873, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 170. In order to have the time extended the proceeding which a party has been prosecuting with due diligence in another Court should have been a proceeding founded upon the same cause of action. Thus the pendency of the application to set aside the exparte decree cannot be treated as sufficient cause for the delay in filing the second appeal as the causes of action are quite different—Ujagar v. Duni Chand, A.I.R. 1951 Him. Pro. 68.

Thus, where the appellant acting on the mistaken advice of his counsel was reasonably led into the mistaken belief that the valuation of the suit was such that an appeal lay to the High Court and not to the District Court, held that this would constitute a sufficient cause for excusing the delay in presenting the appeal to the proper Court—Sunderabai v. Collector, 43 Bom. 376 (384) (P.C.); Tulso Kanwar v. Gajraj Singh, 25 All. 71; Huro v. Surnamoyi, 13 Cal. 266; Krishna v. Chathappan, 13 Mad. 269; Gauhar v. Khan Mahammad, 66 P.R. 1891; Kunwar Rajendra v. Rai Rajeshwar, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 276. Where a criminal appeal preferred by the appellant (who was in jail) was erroneously presented by his counsel in the High Court instead of in the Sessions Court, held that the mistake made by the counsel should be excused, and the appeal should be allowed to be presented to the proper Court though the period of limitation has expired—Surta Singh v. Emperor, 1 Lah. 508, 59 I.C. 556. Where the appellant wrongly preferred his appeal to the Commissioner, and the Commissioner himself was also under the impression that the appeal was entertainable by him, held that there was a bona fide mistake—Chob v. Daryai, A.I.R. 1924 All. 915, 82 I.C. 594. Where the appellant acting bona fide on his counsel's advice filed an appeal in a wrong Court, the counsel acting with due care and attention, there was sufficient cause—Nawab Mirza Muhammad Bakar Ali Khan v. Muhammad Bakar, 10 O.C. 291 (294).

But where the appellants being themselves pleaders and well acquainted with the facts of the case, preferred an appeal to a wrong Court, owing to a mistaken calculation as to the value of the suit, due to carelessness, it was held that they did not act in good faith but acted with gross negligence and carelessness, and were not entitled to an extension of time—Sarat Chander v. Saraswati, 34 Cal. 216 (218, 219). So also, where an appeal against a decree for an amount exceeding Rs. 5,000 was first presented to the Divisional Judge who had no pecuniary jurisdiction to hear the appeal, and who therefore returned the appeal for presentation to the Chief Court, where it was subsequently presented but after the prescribed period for limitation, held that there was no bona fide mistake but gross carelessness and oversight avoidable with due diligence on the part of the pleader, and the delay was not excusable—Sant Singh v. Qaim, 118 P.R. 1908. Where the memorandum of appeal filed in a wrong Court was returned by that Court on the 11th December, and the appeal was afterwards filed in the right Court on the 20th December, i.e, 9 days after, and no explanation was offered was to the nine days' delay, it could not be said that the appellant acted bona fide, i.e., with due care and diligence, and he was not therefore entitled to the indulgence of this section—Ramjiwan v. Chand Mal, 10 All. 587; Sarat Chunder v. Saraswati, 34 Cal. 216 (221). Where the appellant knew that the appeal lay to the High Court but still he preferred his appeal to the District Judge who returned the petition of appeal which was afterwards presented to the High Court beyond time, held that there was no sufficient cause for excusing the delay—Daudbhai v. Emnabai, 28 Bom. 235; Umrao Baksh v. Malik Md. Khan, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 612, 72 I.C. 732.

52. Amendment of decree:—Time should be taken to have run from the date of the decree as originally drawn up, and it is not every amendment which has been made in the decree that entitles a party to claim an extension of time for filing an appeal. Whether there is sufficient cause must depend upon the circumstances of each individual case. If the grounds on which the appeal is based are intimately connected with the amendment of the decree, or if the grounds are directed against the decree only in so far as it has been amended, the Court should hold that there was sufficient cause, but if the amendment has no relation to the grounds upon which the validity of the decree is sought to be challenged in appeal, such appeal should not be admitted after time—Brojo Lal v. Tara Prasanna, 3 C.L.J. 188 (192); Soudamini v. Nabalak, 35 C.W.N. 251 (253), 133 I.C. 571, A.I.R 1931 Cal. 578; Sati Kantha v. Ram Chandra, 34 I.C. 566 (Cal.); Deep Singh v. Raghunath, 7 O.W.N. 882, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 463 (465); Sheikh Golab v. Janki Koer, 5 P.L.J. 472 (478) (F.B.), 57 I.C. 236; Kedar v. Gollam, 40 C.W.N. 83, 165 I.C. 53. Article 182, clause 4 contains a special provision allowing the time for an application for execution to be computed from the date of amendment of the decree, but there is no corresponding provision in Article 156 relating to appeals. Consequently the analogy of Art. 182 should not be applied to appeals, and every amendment made in a decree does not necessarily entitle the appellant to an extension of time under this section. Where the decree was amended by merely adding an order as to costs, it was held that the order as to costs did not make any change in the appellant's position, that it did not give him a new right of appeal, that the order for costs was not a decree nor did it decide any question of a general right such as rights in relation to jurisdiction, limitation and frame of suit, and that the appellant was not entitled to any extension of time so as to enable him to compute the period of limitation of his appeal from the date of the order of costs—Sheikh Golab v. Janki Koer, 5 P.L.J. 472 (478-480) (F.B.).

The Calcutta High Court has held that on the analogy of clause (4) of Art. 182, time should run for the purposes of appeal from the date of the amendment, whether the amendment be a merely clerical one under sec. 152, C. P. Code or of any other nature. Therefore, if a decree is modified in review, even though to a slight extent, it is the modified decree which is appealable, and if the appellant files an appeal against the decree originally made, the appeal is incompetent, but the Court may, under this section, grant indulgence to the appellant in a fit case by allowing him to prefer an appeal against the amended decree beyond time—Aditya Kumar v. Abinash, 34 C.W.N. 1002 (1007), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 323 (dissenting from 5 P.L.J. 472).

In a more recent case the Calcutta High Court has gone so far as to say that even in a case in which the amendment has no relation to the grounds upon which the validity of the decree is sought to be challenged by an appeal, circumstances may appear which may justly bring the case within the meaning of the expression "sufficient cause" and entitle the appellant to an extension of time. Thus, where the plaintiff applied for an amendment of the decree in relation to a certain amount of costs, and the appeal preferred by the appellant had no relation to that amendment, the appellant was entitled to wait until the petition for amendment was disposed of before he could be called upon to prefer his appeal—Nandalal v. Dasarathi, 59 Cal. 1052, 36 C.W.N. 218 (220, 221), A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 534, 138 I.C. 754 (dissenting from 3 C.L.J. 188). But in Kedar v. Gollam, 40 C.W.N. 83, 165 I.C. 53 it has been held that the time for filing the appeal runs from the date when the original judgment was pronounced.

In a suit for arrears of revenue, a decree was passed for Rs. 125 on the 30th of May; on the 15th August, the plaintiff applied for amendment of the decree, on the ground that the arrears of revenue amounted to Rs. 374, and the Court amended the decree then and there. On the 11th September the plaintiff preferred an appeal to the District Judge complaining of disallowance of interest in the decree. Held that as question of interest could have been raised on the decree as originally passed, and the appeal did not attack the decree in so far as it was amended or raise any question connected with the amendment, the appellant was not entitled to any extension of time and his appeal was time-barred—Gajadhar Singh v. Basant Lal, 43 All. 380, 19 A.L.J. 152, 61 I.C. 69.

Where a decree which is wrongly drawn up is amended by the Court after the expiration of the time prescribed for appeal against the original decree, the party affected by the amendment can appeal against the decree as amended, and the delay will be excused under this section—Viswanathan v. Ramanathan, 24 Mad. 646 (649).

Thus, where a decree was wrong as to the name of a party which was incorrectly recorded and was also wrong as to the amount claimed and allowed, it was held that the decree was wrong in a very material particular, and the limitation for appeal should be reckoned from the date of the amended decee—Amar Chandra v. Asad Ali, 32 Cal. 908 (909). Where a mortgage decree passed on the 30th June 1914 omitted to specify the decretal amount that could be recovered from the house mortgaged, and the plaintiff applied for amendment which was granted on the 19th November 1914, and the defendant appealed on 19th February 1915, it was held that the defendants were not obliged to appeal from the decree of June 1914 at a time when the plaintiff had applied for an amendment, and that in any event an extension of time would be granted under this section; the appeal was not barred—Har Kishen v. Lahore Bank Ld., 64 P.R. 1919, 51 I.C. 712 (714).

53. Ignorance of fact:—Where an application for bringing the legal representative of the deceased respondent on record was not made within the period of limitation by reason of the appellant not being aware, till shortly before the application, of the death of the respondent who lived at a great distance from him, it was held that the appellant had sufficient cause for not making the application within time—Allah v. Thakurdas, 1908 P.L.R. 24; Sher Bahadur v. Abezar, 95 I.C. 236. Ignorance of the death of a party whose legal representatives have to be brought on record constitutes a "sufficient cause" within the meaning of this section, for excusing the delay in seeking to set aside abatement—Ramalingam v. Koteswara, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 144, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 624; Secretary of State v. Kistnamacharyulu, I L.R. (1938) Mad. 275, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 54, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 218. Where the appellant was ignorant of the death of the respondent for a long time so that not only the appeal abated but also the period for setting aside the abatement of the appeal expired, but it was not shown that the ignorance was due to any negligence or deliberate omission on the part of the appellant, it was held that there was sufficient cause for extension of the time for filing an application to set aside the abatement—Lakshmi Chand v. Behari Lal, 54 All. 280, A.I.R. 1932 All. 459 (460), 135 I.C. 159. Where an appeal is filed through bona fide mistake against a dead man, and if the time for appealing has passed before the representatives are brought on file, the time for filing appeal may be extended under sec. 5—Mubarak Shah v. Acharaj Ram, A.I R. 1936 Pesh. 192, 165 I.C. 201. Where of the two appellants, one died during the pendency of the appeal and the application for bringing the legal representatives of the deceased on the record was made after the prescribed period and the explanation of the delay was given as ignorance on the part of the applicant of the death of the other appellant, it was held that this could not be considered to be an adequate ground for extending the period of limitation under sec. 5—Pir Baksh v. Kidar Nath, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 478, 37 P.L.R. 400, 155 I.C. 610. Where a complaint had been filed against the appellant under sec. 476, Cr. P. Code, but he was not aware of the filing of the complaint till after the 30 days prescribed by Art. 154 had expired, held that it might be a sufficient cause for excusing the delay in filing the appeal—Daga Devji v. Emp., 52 Bom. 164, 30 Bom.L R. 76, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 64 (65). Where some of the legal representatives have been duly made parties and the appeal did not abate, but others were left out through honest inadvertence, the advantage of this section may be availed of to implead the remaining legal representatives even after the period of limitation—Poonam Chand v. Motilal, A.I.R. 1954 Raj. 287.

54. Judgment not pronounced in open Court:—Where it appeared that the judgment of the lower Court had not been pronounced in open Court nor had any intimation been sent to the parties of any date for its pronouncement, and the appellant or his pleader did not discover what the decision was till after the expiry of the period prescribed for appeal, it was held that there was sufficient cause for excusing the delay in presenting the appeal—Lalli v. Sain Ditta, 27 P.R. 1919, 51 I.C. 239 (240); Ma Hmwe v. Daw Win, 1941 Rang.L.R. 213, A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 194.

55. Pauper appeal—subsequent presentation of fully stamped appeal:—If an application for leave to appeal as a pauper is rejected as being presented more than 30 days after the date of decree (Art. 170), the appellant may afterwards present a properly stamped memorandum of appeal and apply for an extension of time under this section—Shahzadi v. Alak Nath, 1933 A.L.J. 585, A.I.R. 1933 All. 308 (310), 144 I.C. 79. Where an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis is rejected, but the Court grants time to file an appeal on proper stamp, and the appellant afterwards pays the full Court-fees within the time granted by the Court, though after the expiry of the period of limitation, held that the properly stamped appeal should not be rejected as barred by limitation, as the Court has granted time to the appellant, in the exercise of its discretion under this section—Bai Ful v. Desai, 22 Bom. 849; Buta v. Paramanand, 84 P.R. 1904; Girwar Lal v. Lakshmi Narain, 26 All. 329 (330, 331); Jumnabai v. Vissondas, 21 Bom. 576; Chintamani v. Ramchandra, 34 Bom. 589; Bhagwan Das v. Balwan, 36 I.C. 84, 74 P.R. 1916; Intizam Begam v. Waziran, 47 P.R. 1899. Where during the pendency of an application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, the appellant acquires some property, wrereupon he is declared not a pauper and is ordered to pay Court-fee, and he takes time from the Court to pay the stamp, and pays the stamp within the time granted, though beyond the period of limitation, his appeal will be considered as presented on the date of the application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, and therefore not barred. The case comes under this section—Durga Charan v. Dookhiram, 26 Cal. 925; Shadi Khan v. Umdan Begum, 52 P.L.R. 1912, 13 I.C. 73.

56. Inability to get stamps:—The last day of filing an appeal was 13th July, but on that day the appellant could not get a stamp. The next day was a holiday. The appeal was filed on the 15th. It was held that the delay was excusable under this section—Kesho Prosad v. Harbans, 1 P.L.J. 163, 37 I.C. 211. But in a later Patna case it has been laid down that where the party is guilty of procrastination, e.g., where the law has provided a time limit within which any particular step is to be taken, and a party waits until the last moment before beginning to take action, he is not entitled to the Court's indulgence if an unforeseen accident, (e.g., inability to get stamps) prevents the step from being taken within the time prescribed by law—Seth Jahar v. Pritchard, 4 P.L.J. 381, 52 I.C. 225. In another Patna case the judges have expressed the opinion that although appellants who are prevented from filing their appeal within time by difficulties encountered in procuring the necessary Court-fee stamps may possibly rely upon those difficulties as constituting sufficient cause within the meaning of this section for not having filed the appeal within time, still it must be remembered that such difficulties are really due to the litigant's inveterate habit of putting off the purchase of the Court-fee and the filing of the appeal to the very last day—Ram Sahay v. Kumar Lachmi Narayan, 3 P.L.J. 74, 42 I.C. 675. In a Nagpur case also it has been held that an appellant who wilfully leaves the preparation and presentation of the appeal to the last day of the period of limitation is guilty of negligence and is not entitled to an extension of time, if some unexpected or unforeseen contingency, (e g., inability to get stamps) prevents him from filing the appeal within time. This section was not provided to encourage negligence, procrastination and laxity—Kedarnath v. Zumberlal, 12 N.L.R. 171, 37 I.C. 503.

57. Other cases:—Filing an appeal as from an order, instead of as from a decree—Manorath v. Balak, 1881 A.W.N. 97; change of practice of a Court in receiving appeals and want of notice of such change to a party—Sukhdial v. Jay Singh, 101 P.R. 1890; taking proceedings by an appellant to get himself declared a major—Maharaj Narain v. Banoji, 21 P.R. 1940; accidental loss of the copy of judgment—Pir Baksh v Chaman, 28 P.L.R. 1, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 734, 100 I.C. 19; copies of judgment and decree not reaching the appellant in time, owing to unusual delay in the Post Office—Altri v. Ramkishan, 11 Lah. 111, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 216 (217), 120 I.C. 169; or delay in making applications or taking delivery of copies of judgment and decree due to the disturbed state of the whole country in 1942—Jan Muhammad v. Shital, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 417, 224 I.C. 160; these are sufficient causes. But where a person makes an application for a copy of judgment so late as within three days of the expiry of the period of limitation for filing an appeal and chooses to obtain it by post and gets it after the period of limitation the delay in the transit cannot be excused and time cannot be extended—Indradeo v. Rampat, 1942 O.W.N. (B.R.) 214, 1924 A.W.N. (Rev.) 131. Where the plaintiff's petition of objection having been dismissed by the Insolvency Court in his absence, without giving him a hearing, the plaintiff made an application to set aside the ex parte order but he was sent from Court to Court for four years, but still the matter in controversy was not decided by any Court, and then he filed an appeal, it was held that as he had been prosecuting his case in good faith with due diligence, he had sufficient cause for not filing his appeal within time—Abid Ali v. Kidar Nath, 9 O.W.N. 1165, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 83 (84), 142 I.C. 826.

If the memorandum of appeal is filed within time without copies of judgment and decree of the lower Court, but these are filed two days after the expiry of the period of limitation, it is a fit case for an extension of time under this section—Lal Bhan Partab v. Rajab, 6 O.W.N. 1035, A.I.R 1930 Oudh 184, 124 I.C. 361. Where two appeals were filed from the same order, but a copy of the order was filed in only one of the appeals, and the copy in the other appeal was filed out of time, held that it was a fit case in which the period of limitation should be extended—Domi Lal v. Bijoy, 12 Pat. 36, 13 P.L.T. 612, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 349, 141 I.C. 37.

Where an application for review was filed out of time but without any negligence on the part of the applicant and soon after the discovery of new evidence, the delay was excused under this section—Bai Nematbu v. Bai Nematullabu, 42 Bom. 295 (301). Where the rule requiring the appellant in a second appeal to file a copy of the judgment of the first Court had only been published in the Gazettee a few days before the filing of the appeal, so that there had not been sufficient time for the new rule to become well known to the litigants, and the appeal was afterwards re-filed by the appellant with the first Court's judgment within a reasonable period but after the expiry of the period of limitation, held that there was sufficient cause for excusing the delay—Muhammad Hassamuddin v. Saif Ali, 4 Lah. 122, 74 I.C. 451. Where the question whether the decision of the trial Court amounted to an order only or to a decree was a doubtful one, and therefore insufficient Court-fee was at first paid on the memorandum of appeal, but full Court-fee was made up after limitation, held that there was sufficient cause to excuse the delay—Raghubir v. Sohan Devi, 6 Lah. 233, 86 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 381. Omission to sign a memorandum of appeal through oversight, which was otherwise in order and had been duly presented, is a sufficient cause for extension of time—Firm Mathra Das v. Firm Ram Lal, 84 I.C. 518, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 402. Where the appellant could not get any information of an order passed against him by the Deputy Executive Officer of the Calcutta Corporation, in spite of repeated efforts made by him through the Ward Councillor and the Bill Collector to get information and inspite of writing repeated letters to the Chief Executive Officer, and he came to know of the order when the period of limitation for filing an appeal against it has expired, it was held that there was no want of bona fides on his part, and there was sufficient cause for filing the appeal beyond time—Corporation of Calcutta v. A. C. Pal, 58 Cal. 793, 35 C.W.N. 283 (285), 133 I.C. 332, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 506.

Where an uncertified copy of the judgment was filed with the application for review within the period of limitation but as the office required the applicant to produce a certified copy, the uncertified copy was taken back and a certified copy was filed afterwards but by that time the period of limitation for review had expired, and the applicant put in an application under sec. 5, Limitation Act, for extension of time, it was held that the applicant was entitled to the benefit of sec. 5, Limitation Act—Mahabir Sinha v. Baldeo Singh, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 386, 16 P.L.T. 595.

Where delay in presenting an appeal was due to the agreement between the parties to end litigation it was held to be sufficient cause and the delay was condoned —Hakim v. Ganga, 40 P.L.R. 399, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 836.

58. Application for copy of decree with insufficient folios:—A decree was passed on Dec. 3 and signed on the following day, and an application for a copy was made on the 10th, with insufficient folios; on the 11th, the officer in charge made a report that the folios put in were insufficient and 9 more were required, and the pleader for the appellant got the information the next day when he supplied the necessary folios; the copy was ready for delivery on the 16th, and the appeal was filed on January 8 next, that is, 36 days after the decree; it was held that the Judge should not throw out the appeal as barred, and that under the circumstances he should exercise his discretion under this section—Dulali v. Saroda, 3 C.W.N. 55. See also Kali Sankar v. Baikantha Nath, 7 C.W.N. 109. Where the period of filing the appeal expired during the vacation, but the appeal was filed seven days after the opening of the Court, and the delay was due to the fact that the Court-fee paid on the application for copy of the decree was deficient, but the appellant received no information of the deficiency, owing to the defective procedure of the Copying Department, and it appeared that as soon as he knew of this deficiency he took the necessary steps in all haste, it was held that the delay should be condoned—Rahim Bux v. Maiku, 8 O.W.N. 191, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 314 (315), 132 I.C. 777.

59. Defective vakalatnama:—Where the pleader's name is not mentioned in the vakalatnama by pure mistake, or the pleader fails to endorse his acceptance, and the mistakes are due to pure inadvertence and accident and do not proceed from any dishonest intention, there is sufficient cause for accepting a fresh vakalatnama complete in every respect after the expiry of the period of limitation for the appeal—Md. Qamar v. Md. Salamat, 1930 A.L.J. 394, 121 I.C. 546, A.I.R. 1930 All. 112; Shambhu Nath v. Badri Das, 43 All. 392, 19 A.L.J. 183, 61 I.C. 410. See also Ram Rup v. Naik Ram, A.I.R. 1926 All. 252, 91 I.C. 865; Ram Lal v. Budho Mal, 103 I.C. 537, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 618; Lokenath v. Sheo Saran, 102 I.C. 255, A.I.R. 1927 All. 816.

The Court has power to direct the personal attendance of a party to satisfy itself as to the genuineness of his signature in a vakalatnama filed in Court. The inconvenience of party to attend the Court as per its order is not a reasonable cause for extending the time under this section for filing a fresh vakalatnama after the period of limitation—Kong Hip Lon & Co. v. C.A.M.A.L. Firm, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 214, 177 I.C. 364.

60. Alteration of law:—A new statement or exposition of the law or altering the view of the law by the High Court or the Privy Council is no sufficient cause for excusing the delay. And so, where a party against whom a decision is given is apparently satisfied for the time being, but subsequently a new statement or exposition of law favourable to his case being given in a judgment in another case, he comes to prefer an appeal or an application for review, his delay will not be excused on that ground—Mowri v. Soorendra, 10 W.R. 178; Amra v. Gajan, 11 W.R. 130; Shama Churn v. Bindaban, 9 W.R. 181 (F.B.); Bimola v. Dangoo, 19 W.R. 189; Makhan v. Manchand, 5 B.H.C.R. 107; Achuta v. Mammavu, 10 Mad. 357 (360); Basdeo v. Murli, 1942 O.W.N. 439, A.I.R. 1942 Ohdh. 447. Even if an amendment in the law may be a sufficient cause for excusing the delay, it is necessary that the applicant should apply for review of judgment immediately after the Amendment Act is passed. If he makes an inordinate delay (e.g., about 2 months) in filing the application, it cannot be excused—Gyanaji v. Ningappa, 52 Bom. 434, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 308 (310), 111 I.C. 633; Secretary of State v. Tirath Ram, 9 Lah. 76, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 216 (218), 104 I.C. 281.

61. Ignorance of law:—See Note 49A under heading "Mistake of law." The fact that the appellant was a pardanashin lady and did not know that a copy of the decree was required to be filed along with the memorandum of appeal is no sufficient cause for extending the time to enable her to file a copy of the decree after the period of limitation—Masum v. Madan, 1911 P.W.R. 8, 9 I.C. 222 (223). Ignorance of the effect of the judgment is no justification for delay in filing an application for review—Golam v. Syad, 8 Bom. 260.

62. Poverty:—The poverty of the appellant in consequence of which he was not able to pay Court-fees in time and had to raise funds, is not a sufficient cause for admitting an appeal out of time—Moshaulla v. Ahmedullah, 13 Cal. 78 (79); Husaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 11 (18); Husaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 655 (659); Krishnaswamy v. Ramaswamy, 19 M.L.J. 209; Balwant v. Jagjit, 48 P.L.R. 393, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 210. The framers of this Act have not overlooked the fact that the would-be-appellant may be a pauper; and they have enacted in Art. 170 that an application for leave to file an appeal in forma pauperis must be made within 30 days. But the appellant is not entitled to any further indulgence under this section on the ground of poverty—Husaini v. Collector, 9 All. 655 (659). Even the state of poverty coupled with the fact of the appellant being a purdanashin lady is no sufficient cause—Husaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 655 (659); and 9 All. 11 (18).

63. Pardanashin lady:—The mere fact of the appellant being a pardanashin lady is not a sufficient cause—Husaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 655 (659) (F.B.); Masum v. Madan, 1911 P.W.R. 8, 9 I.C. 222 (223). It may be conceded that when the fact of the appellant being a pardanashin lady has prevented her from presenting the appeal herself or from retaining counsel to do so, it may furnish a ground for applying the discretionary power under this section; but it cannot be laid down that whenever the appellant is a pardanashin lady there should be no practical limit to the period during which her appeal must be presented—Husaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 11 (18) (per Mahmood, J.); Benodini v. Jagabandhu, 37 C.W.N. 179 (180). But where the applicant is a pardanashin lady whose legal interests are not prosecuted by her legal advisers with all the carefulness which the circumstances demand, in consequence of which delays have occurred in instituting legal proceedings, such delays ought to be excused—Bai Nematbu v. Bai Nematullabu, 42 Bom. 295 (306).

64. Negligence of pleader or his clerk:—Bona fide mistake on the part of the pleader may be excused, but want of care and attention on his part in seeing to the proper presentation of the appeal is no sufficient cause. Thus, where the counsel for the appellant had omitted to present his petition of appeal in due time, although he had been furnished with the necessary papers and the necessary costs, held that the negligence on the part of the counsel was not a sufficient cause for extension of time—Buddhu v. Dewan, 37 All. 267. Negligence of counsel is no ground for giving the benefit of this section—Chunni v. Daya Shankar, 1948 R.D. 433; and if the pleader who advises the client without due care and attention, the client who acts on such advice is not entitled to the benefit of the section—Krishna v. Trimbak, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 409, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 156. Carelessness on the part of the pleader in filing an appeal of value over Rs. 5,000 in the Divisional Judge's Court instead of in the Chief Court is not a sufficient cause for excusing the delay in the subsequent presentation of the appeal of the latter Court—Sant Singh v. Quaim, 118 P.R. 1908. So also, where the subject matter of the suit clearly showed that an appeal lay to the High Court but an appeal was filed in the District Judge's Court owing to the carelessness of the pleader, benefit under this section could not be granted —Amrit v. Phool Chund, I.L.R. (1938) Lah. 37, 40 P.L.R. 986, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 81. Negligence of the vakil in filing proper Court-fee stamps, when the deficiency of stamps in the memorandum of appeal was pointed out to him by the Court, is not a sufficient cause for excusing the delay in filing the proper stamps—Jodhon Prosad v. Nanku Prosad, 3 P.L.J. 484, 46 I.C. 509.

Filing of an appeal in a wrong Court through gross carelessness of pleader is not a sufficient cause for presenting the appeal to the proper Court after the expiry of the period of limitation—Mahammad v. Ladha Singh, 9 P.L.R. 1914, 23 I.C. 86. If the lawyer acted without due care and attention and filed the appeal in a wrong Court, the appellant cannot claim the benefit of this section—R.M.A.L. Firm v. Ko Shan, 1939 Rang.L.R. 639, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 14. Where the appellant's mukhtar omitted to file his power-of-attorney and the copy of the first Court's judgment with the appeal, and filed them long after the presentation of the appeal, and no reasons were given for the delay, the appeal was dismissed as barred by limitation—Dhanna v. Wazir, 1919 P.L.R. 94, 52 I.C. 346. So also where an appeal is filed with no Court-fee stamp owing to the wrong advice of counsel due to the negligence or gross want of legal skill, this section does not apply—Badrinarayan v. Chandanmal, A.I.R. 1950 Raj. 2. The mere fact that the counsel entrusted with the task of filing an appeal forgot all about it till after the expiry of the period of limitation is not a sufficient cause for extending time—Dilan v. Ram Bharasay, 1 O.W.N. 880, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 374, 85 I.C. 693. But where the appellant placed all the necessary papers in the hands of an Advocate at 9-30 a.m. on the last day for filing the appeal, but the Advocate could not examine the papers because of more pressing engagements till his return from Court in the afternoon when he found that the appeal had been time-barred, and thereafter the appeal was filed on the next day, held that though it may be said that there was some negligence or want of proper attention on the part of the Advocate in not looking into the papers as soon as they were handed over to him to find out which was the last day of filing the appeal, still as he was then pressed with other engagements and did not know that his client had come on the very last day, there was sufficient cause under this section—Karal Chargn v. Apurva, 34 C.W.N. 1119 (1126), A I.R. 1931 Cal. 298.

Similarly, negligence of the pleader's clerk in applying for delivery of the copy of the decree and in filing the appeal would not be a sufficient cause of delay—Allahdadshad v. Mukhlum, 24 I.C. 977, 7 S.L.R. 201. Mistake of the pleader's clerk in filing the appeal out of time is no sufficient cause—Ganesh v. Hirde Bihar, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 189, 82 I.C. 484; Gopal v. Digambar, 101 I.C. 448, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 232. But in a Punjab case, where the appellant's counsel prepared the grounds and gave them to his clerk 9 days before the expiry of the period of limitation, but the clerk finding that a copy of the judgment of the first Court was wanting directed the client's agent to get the same and kept the appeal by him till the said copy was obtained and then forgot to file the appeal in time, held that sufficient cause had been made out though the pleader was not free from blame—Bibi Putli v. Jawala, 1912 P.W.R. 126, 16 I.C. 488. Where an appeal is presented after the period of limitation on account of the wrong information given by the pleader's clerk as to the re-opening of the Court after holidays, the appellant is not entitled to the benefit of this section as the information was given recklessly and without due care and attention—Krishna v. Trimbak, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 409, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 156.

Fraud of clerk:—There is a great deal of difference between the case of the period of limitation expiring due to negligence and the case of limitation having expired due to deliberate fraud on the part of the pleader's clerk. In the latter case, sec. 5 may be used for extending the time. Where the appeal is not presented in time, owing to a deliberate fraud of the counsel's clerk, and there is no fault on the part of the client who has paid everything he had to pay for the expenses, nor any fault on the part of the counsel who trusted his clerk, there is sufficient reason for an extension of time under this section—Allah Wadhaya v. Haji Mahammad, 36 P.L.R. 284, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 986 (987).

65. Negligence of appellant:—Where an appellant obtained an uncertified copy of the decree in which the date of the decree was wrongly given, and the appellant's pleader was misled thereby, it was held that there was no sufficient cause of delay in filing an appeal from the decree—Karachi Trading Co. v. Tejbhandas, 8 S.L.R. 235, 28 I.C. 82. Where an appellant filed an appeal without a copy of the right decree and it was proved that the whole procedure on the appellant's part was slack to the utmost, it was held that this section did not apply—Gurprasad v. Ram Samajo, 13 A.L.J. 1101, 31 I.C. 876. Where a copy of the decree, which was in existence at the time of preferring the appeal, was not attached to the memorandum of appeal, held that the memorandum was bad, and as no sufficient cause was shown for extending the time under this section, the appeal was dismissed—Hem Chandra v. Jadab Chandra, 16 C.L.J. 116, 17 I.C. 99 (100). So also, the presentation of a second appeal without a copy of the first Court's judgment is not a proper presentation and time cannot be extended for filing it—Rajan v. Kuria, 4 Lah.L.J. 475, 39 P.L.R. 1922, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 95; Lakhma Das v. Mehr Chand, 73 I.C. 910, A.I.R.

1923 Lah. 144. Where the only reason for delay in filing an appeal was that certain necessary papers were given to a counsel who took no steps for filing the appeal and returned them after the period of limitation had expired, and it was not shown that the appellant took any steps to engage the services of another pleader before the expiry of the period of limitation, it was held that there was no sufficient cause for the delay—Dewan v. Buddhu, 12 A.L.J. 837, 25 I.C. 30. Where the appeal was field late on account of the delay in getting copies, and the delay was due to the fact that the appellant gave money to the pleader's clerk for getting the copies but afterwards took no steps to enquire of his pleader for the same, held that there was no sufficient cause to excuse the delay—Mahtab v. Birhma, 21 A.L.J. 817, 75 I.C. 254.

An appellant who had waited for applying to obtain the necessary copies up to the last day of limitation, when the Court happened to be closed for some holiday, and who was consequently obliged to apply for them after the period for appeal had expired, is not entitled to get either the indulgence under this section or the benefit of section 12—Guran v. Bindraban, 79 P.R. 1916, 35 I.C. 233 After the arguments in a case were concluded, but before judgment was pronounced, the defendant died. The case was decided against the defendant His sons, one of whom was an adult, and the other a minor represented by his mother as guardian, presented an appeal 50 days beyond time. It was held that there was no sufficient reason to extend the delay, in as much as the adult son (who was an educated young man) and the mother (who was well able to manage her affairs) who were concerned to prosecute the litigation in their own interests and in the interests of the infant, were grossly negligent, remiss and careless in not prosecuting the appeal in time—Babu Ganesh v. Sitaram, 41 Bom. 15 (20).

When the defendant died in 1918, and the plaintiff applied to have the name of the legal representative of the defendant placed on the record two years after, on the ground that he was ignorant of the defendant's death, held that the plaintiff had failed to show sufficient cause for the delay, for if he had shown the smallest diligence in prosecuting the suit, he must have discovered the fact of the defendant's death much earlier—Sarat Chandra v. Maihar Stone and Lime Co. Ltd, 49 Cal. 62 (at p. 66). Where the parties live in the same village and there is delay in applying to add the legal representatives on the death of one of the parties, the benefit of this section should not be extended—Ekadush v. Jamuna, 1940 A.W.R. (B.R.) 128, 1940 O.A. 779.

Where the appellant knows at the time when he files the appeal that a further sum is due on account of the Court-fees it is his business to ascertain the date fixed for depositing the deficit Court-fee and not the duty of the Court to communicate the order. The omission of the Court to communicate its order to the pleader concerned does not entitle the appellant to any indulgence under this section—Haripada v. Sailabala, 71 C.L.J. 540, A.I.R. 1940 Cal 530 Where the clear provisions of the Court Fees Act were brought to the notice of the party's counsel, and he was asked to make up the deficient Court-fees, but the counsel and the party were both grossly negligent in not paying the deficit Court-fees within the period of limitation, held that they were not entitled to any extension of time—Puran Chand v. Emp., 27 P.L.R. 91, 92 I.C. 991, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 343.

Where the appellant relied upon an unauthorised publication known as the 'Legal Diary' and being misled by it as to the duration of the Chief Court's vacation presented his appeal beyond the period of limitation, it was held that the case shown was not sufficient, as the appellant had not acted with due care and attention—Jai Dial v. Amar, 1917 P.W.R. 27, 37 I.C. 628.

Where due to the laches of the appellant an appeal has been filed without impleading all the necessary parties and an application is made after the period of limitation for impleading them as parties, this section has no application. The reason is that this section contemplates an appeal that is to be instituted and not an appeal which has already been instituted—Shangara v. Imam, 42 P.L.R. 355, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 314. See also Abdul v. Banwari, 1941 A.M.L.J. 57.

Where on the last date of limitation a person though he missed the earliest train fails to avail himself of the time available after he reached the place and presents an appeal after Court hours is not entitled to indulgence of the Court as he has not been prompt in seeking the relief—Baldeo v. Teija, 1942 O.W.N. 475, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh. 488.

A party who is negligent in complying with the orders of the Court is not entitled to get the benefit of the provisions of this section—Abdul v. Khalik, 47 P.L.R. 193, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 233.

66. Negligence of agents or servants:—Negligence of servants is not a sufficient cause. If parties choose to entrust legal affairs (e.g., filing of appeal) to their servants, they must take the consequences of any remissness or negligence which may be exhibited on the part of their servants, and they cannot come to Court after the period of limitation and claim indulgence under this section—Seth Jahar v. Pritchard, 4 P.L.J. 381, 52 I.C. 225; Jaleswar v. Ram Hari, 55 I.C. 17 (Pat.); Mg. Naw v. Somasundaram, 2 Rang. 655, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 187, 85 I.C. 324.

Where an appellant entrusted all business connected with the filing of his appeal to an unqualified man who made no attempt to take professional advice, which if taken would have avoided the delay in the presentation of the appeal, held that it was not a sufficient cause under this section—Krishnaswami v. Ramaswami, 19 M.L.J. 209, 1 I.C. 73.

Omission by typist to implead the legal representative in the memorandum of appeal is not a good ground for allowing the benefit of this section—Mazharus v. Azizuddin, 1948 R.D. 410.

67. Notice of delivery of judgment not given to parties:—An application for extension of time for appeal was made on the ground that though arguments were heard on the 15th March. judgment was not delivered until 17th April, and no notice of the delivery of judgment was given to the parties, and it was not until July that the applicant heard that judgment had been delivered. Held that in the absence of any indication to the contrary, it must be presumed that the notice required under O. 20, Rule 1, C. P. Code, was given. The application was refused—Habibullah v. Banarsi Das, 22 O.C. 379, 55 I.C. 837 (838). But in Ma Me Thin v. Maung San Lun, 8 Bur.L.T. 99, 27 I.C. 784, no such presumption was made, and the negligence of the Court in not giving notice of delivery of judgment was held to be a sufficient cause for extension of time for the appeal.

68. Other cases:—Where the appellant had prosecuted two litigations, the fact that he had preferred an appeal in one case and awaited its result does not entitle him to an extension of time for filing an appeal in the other case—Dund Bahadur v. Deonandan, 17 C.L.J. 596, 20 I.C. 513 (514); Husaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 11 (16) (per Mahmud J.). But see Tirath Ram v. Municipal Committee, Amritsar, 27 P.L.R. 841, 96 I.C. 416, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 101. Two suits were brought at the same time by the executors raising some questions of construction in respect of the same will. Similar decisions were passed in both the suits. On appeal by a defendant in one suit the decree of the Court of first instance was reversed. Thereupon the plaintiffs applied for leave to appeal in the second suit, although the time limited for appealing had expired; the Court held that no sufficient cause was shown for the plaintiff's delay; the decision in one suit would not abide by the decision of the other, as the suits were independent of each other—Thucker v. Canji, 14 Bom. 355. The plaintiff brought a suit for partition and possession of his share against his co-sharer Z as well as the vendees of the co-sharer. The first Court gave him a decree. Two appeals (Nos. 19 and 20) were filed against that decree, one (No. 20) by Z, and the other (No. 19) by the vendees. The lower Appellate Court accepted the appeals, dismissed the plaintiff's suit, and passed two connected judgments (one of which referred to the other) and two decrees. The plaintiff-appellant preferred a second appeal to the High Court, and filed copies of judgment and decree of Appeal No. 20, but did not file a copy of decree in Appeal No. 19. On preliminary objection by the respondents the appellant prayed for time for filing the copy of the decree in Appeal No. 19. Held that no sufficient cause has been shown for extending the time for filing the copy—Muhammad Din v. Zebunnissa, 3 Lah. 215, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 390, 77 IC. 541.

The fact that a person was not aware of a change of rule which had been given ample publicity is no ground for excusing delay—Gopal v. Wallabhdas, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 193, 75 I.C. 878.

Where an application to set aside an ex parte decree was dismissed on the merits, as the decree had not been passed ex parte, the period occupied in the proceeding would not be deducted in computing the period of limitation for an appeal against the decree. The petitioner having failed in his application could not be allowed to fall back upon the remedy by way of appeal, which was open to him at the time when the decree was passed, and of which he did not choose to avail himself, and that there was no sufficient cause under this section for filing the appeal out of time—Ardha Chandra v. Matangini, 23 Cal. 325 (327); Rajendra v. Kamal Krishna, 59 Cal. 1057, 36 C.W.N. 352 (353), 138 I.C. 748, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 588. See also Ko Tha Lin v. Ko Hla, 8 Rang. 168, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 41 (42), 124 I.C. 266. The fact that an appellant appealing from an ex parte decree against him took proceedings both in the trial Court and in the appellate Court to set aside the ex parte decree is not "sufficient cause" within the meaning of this section—Jotiba v. Ramappa, 40 Bom.L.R. 957, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 459 But the time taken in prosecuting an application for setting aside an ex parte order certifying an adjustment of a decree can be deducted in computing the period of limitation for appealing from the ex parte order—Ghulam Qazam v. Qutbuddin, 30 P.L.R. 512, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 113 (114), 115 I.C. 467.

If the delay be caused by the appellant's desire to file his appeal on a "lucky day," held that that would be no sufficent cause—Kichilappa v. Ramanujan, 25 Mad. 166 (177). The goodness or otherwise of a case, and a mistake in calculating the time allowed for an appeal do not in themselves constitute a sufficient cause—Gharib v Pohlo Mal, 92 P.R. 1886. The fact that the subject matter of the litigation is a property of considerable value is not at all a good reason for extension of the time for appeal—Dund Bahadur v. Deo Nandan, 17 C.L.J. 596, 20 I.C. 513 (515).

The applicant presented an application for review but the Munsarim declared that it was insufficiently stamped. Thereupon a dispute arose between the Government Pleader and the Munsarim as to whether or not the stamp was sufficient. Afterwards the deficiency in stamps was paid, but after the period limitation. Held that the dispute between the Government Pleader and the Munsarim as to the quantum of Court-fee was no sufficient cause for excusing the delay. The deficiency should have been made good as soon as the Munsarim pointed it out—Munro v. Cawnpore Municipal Board, 12 All. 57 (60).

MISCELLANEOUS:—

69. Withdrawal of appeal—Cross-objection:—The withdrawal of an appeal, by which the respondent lost opportunity under the old C. P. Code (1882) of having his cross-objection heard, afforded no sufficient reason for enlarging the time for his preferring a regular appeal as regards his cross-objection—Chudasama v. Ishwargar, 16 Bom. 249; Jafar v. Ranjit, 17 All. 518; but where it appeared that the respondents would have appealed but for the fact that an appeal by the appellant was already on the file, it was held that the respondents showed sufficient cause for not filing their appeal within time—Hargovindas v. Jadavahoo, 23 Bom. 692; Gour Hari v. Premnath, 9 Cal. 738.

But under the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, it is provided in O. XLI, r. 22 (4) that if the original appeal is withdrawn or dismissed for default, the memorandum of objections filed by the respondents may nevertheless be heard and determined after such notice to the other parties as the Court thinks fit. Even where the cross-objections filed by one party were dismissed, without going into the merits of the case, on the ground of their being filed after the dismissal of the appeal, and an appeal was filed by him on the same points as the cross-objections, it was held that this appeal was not barred—Parbhu Dayal v. Murlidhar, 22 A.L.J. 365, A.I.R. 1924 All. 867 (868), 78 I.C. 677.

70. Ex parte admission of time-barred appeal:—An ex parte order admitting a time-barred appeal is subject to reconsideration at the hearing of the appeal at the respondent's instance; because an order of admission of a time-barred appeal made in the absence of the respondent and without notice to him purports to deprive him of a valuable right and puts in peril the finality of the decision which was passed in his favour, and if he is precluded from questioning its propriety, it would amount to a denial of justice. Consequently, it is the duty of the Appellate Court to reconsider the question at the hearing of the appeal whether the appellant had sufficient cause for presenting the appeal out of time—Krishnaswami v. Ramaswami, 41 Mad. 412 (416, 417) (P.C.), affirming 23 M.L.J. 219; Moshaulla v. Ahmedulla, 13 Cal. 78 (79); Sarat v. Saraswati, 34 Cal. 216 (221); Dund Bahadur v. Deonandan, 20 I.C. 513 (514), 17 C.L.J. 596; Gati v. Rachla, 13 A.L.J. 635, 29 I.C. 1003 (1004); Saku v. Maroti, 8 N.L.R. 50. 15 I.C. 562 (563)); Malli Reddy v. Peddakka, 27 M.L.J. 147, 25 I.C. 746; Venkatrayudu, v. Nagadu, 9 Mad. 450; Ravji Keshav v. Krishna Rao, 38 Bom. 613; Mulna Amad v. Krishnaji Ganesh, 14 Bom. 594 (596); Rajamal v. C. Parthasarathi, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 600. The ex parte order may be reconsidered either by the Court which admitted the appeal or by the Court to which the appeal has been transferred—Wahid v. Hagdod, 1897 A.W.N. 15; Chunder Dass v. Boshoon Lal, 8 Cal. 251; Krishna v. Subraya, 21 Mad. 228; Mulna v. Krishnaji, 14 Bom. 594 (596); or by the successor of the Judge who admitted the time-barred appeal—Malli Reddi v. Peddakka, supra; Saku v. Maroti, supra. A Division Bench of the High Court hearing an appeal is competent to set aside an ex parte order of a single Judge of the High Court admitting an appeal beyond time—Hussaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 11 (15); Husaini Begum v. Collector, 9 All. 655 (658); Umed Ali v. Municipal Committee, 2 Lah. 1 (4); Krishnasami v. Ramasami, 41 Mad. 412 (416) (P.C.).

In the Privy Council case cited above (41 Mad. 412 at p. 417) their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, while holding that an exparte order admitting a time-barred appeal is open to reconsideration at the respondent's instance at the time of hearing of the appeal, yet observed that the question of limitation should not however be left open till such a late stage as the hearing of the appeal, although this has been hitherto the usage in India; because it may lead to a needless expenditure of money and unprofitable waste of time, and thus create elements of considerable embarrassment when the Court comes to decide on the question of delay. The Indian Courts should adopt a procedure which will secure, at the stage of admission, the final determination (after due notice to all parties) of any question of limitation affecting the competency of an appeal. This view has also been expressed in Sunderabai v. Collector, 43 Bom. 376 (383) (P.C.) where their Lordships suggested that when a memorandum of appeal is presented beyond the period of limitation, the proper order which a Judge should endorse upon it would be to the following effect: "Presented for admission on the (date when the memorandum of appeal was handed into the office of his Court). Let notice go to the respondents (date of order)"

Where an appeal which was filed out of time was admitted subject to objections, but the respondent was not made aware of the order nor had he any intimation that the appeal had been admitted out of time and no question was raised at the time of hearing as to the legality or propriety of the order, and the appeal was allowed on the merits by the lower Appellate Court, held that the admission of the appeal subject to objections by the Lower Appellate Court was irregular, and the respondent could raise the question of limitation in second appeal—Abdul Kasem v. Chaturbhuj, 3 P.L.T. 110, 64 I.C. 55, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 47 (48). If an appeal presented out of time is admitted by the Appellate Court ex parte, the respondent as soon as he is served with notice of the appeal ought to apply by motion for dismissal of the appeal on the ground of delay, and must not wait till the date of hearing. If the respondent sleeps over his right and allows the appellant to incur expenses in bringing the case for hearing, he cannot be allowed at the hearing of the appeal to raise a preliminary objection that the appeal is time-barred—Murugappa v. Thayammal, 31 M.L.T. 456, 70 I.C. 827, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 82 (83).

Where a Judge excused the delay in the filing of an appeal without notice to the respondent, and when the appeal came on for hearing, the latter did not object to the order in the course of his argument, the final decision in the appeal cannot be attacked in revision on the ground of delay in filing the appeal—Bharat v. Basant, 80 I.C. 617, A I.R. 1925 Oudh 148. Where an application for the admission of an appeal which was filed out of time by 2 days, was heard ex parte before a Division Bench of the High Court and admitted, it was held that though the order was not conclusive on the respondent and he was entitled to object to the admission of the appeal at a later stage, the order of the Divis on Bench admitting the appeal should not be discharged when no facts which were not before the Bench were urged on behalf of the respondent—Bishen Dat v. Nandan, 12 C.W.N. 25; Saku v. Maroti, 8 N.L.R. 50, 15 I.C. 562 (563); especially when the respondent's objection comes before a Judge other than the Judge who admitted the time-barred appeal—Saku v. Maroti, supra.

It was held in Jhotee v. Omesh, 5 Cal. 1, that if the District Judge, being satisfied that the appellant had sufficient cause for not being able to file an appeal within time, admitted it, a Subordinate Judge to whom the appeal had been transferred for disposal, could not cancel the order. But it has been held in later decisions that this view is not correct, because even if the District Judge upon the representation of the appellant be satisfied that there was sufficient cause, yet the other side would be at liberty at the hearing of the appeal, either before the District Judge or before the Subordinate Judge (if the appeal is transferred to the latter) to show that in fact the representation of the appellant was not true and that really there was no sufficient case for admitting the appeal beyond time—Mulna Ahmad v. Krishnaji, 14 Bom. 594 (596, 597); Bismadeo v Sitanath, 40 Cal. 259; Mamick v. Naibulla, 2 C.W.N. 461; Gaya Charan v. Jagan Nath, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 9.

An order granting leave for filing an appeal under clause 15 of the Letters Patent on an application filed after the period of limitation for filing such appeal, extending the time and allowing such an appeal to be filed and registered without notice to the respondent is irregular and should be vacated—Bal Chand v. Bejoy Chand, 46 C.W.N. 131, I.L.R. (1942) 1 Cal. 403, 75 C.L.J. 419, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 606.

71. Interference by High Court:—The High Court has power in second appeal to look into the grounds upon which the Lower Appellate Court has admitted an appeal beyond time—Chunder Dass v. Boshoon Lall, 8 Cal. 251. It is the duty of the second Appellate Court to see whether the duty cast upon the Judge of the Lower Appellate Court as regards determination of the question whether the appeal is within limitation has been properly discharged by him, and to interfere if by a wrong, improper and judicially unsound exercise of discretion under this section he has admitted an appeal which was barred by limitation—Bechi v. Ahsanullah, 12 All. 461 (483). The superior Court has power to interfere with a wrong exercise of discretion by the subordinate Courts both in its revisional or in its appellate jurisdiction—Nrisingha v. Trigunand, 17 Pat. 507, 1938 P.W.N. 818, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 413. An order rejecting an application under this section is a "case decided." An order of the appellate Court disposing an application under this section in chambers without notice to the applicant constitute both a material irregularity and a breach of a well-established provision of law—Hafiz v. Shafaat, 1951 A.L.J. 237, 1951 A.W.R. 268, A.I.R. 1951 All. 614.

Where the discretion is exercised in a capricious or arbitrary manner the High Court can interfere—Bhimrao v. Tyyappa, 31 Bom. 33; Poti Prasad v. Chuni Lal, 106 P.R. 1885; Gharib v. Pohlo, 92 P.R. 1886; Parvati v. Ganpati, 23 Bom. 513; or where discretion has not been exercised at all –Ram v. Debi, 1945 O.W.N. 1, A.I.R. 1945 Oudh 94. Thus, where the appeal to the lower Appellate Court had been presented beyond time, but of the several appellants one only applied to have the delay excused on grounds personal to himself, with the result that the lower Appellate Court admitted the appeal of all the appellants and varied the decree of the first Court, the High Court interfered and reversed the lower Appellate Court's decree, because there was no sufficient cause on which the delay of all the appellants could be excused—Vishwanath v. Vasudev, 25 Bom. 699. Where the lower Court has exercised its discretion under this section on the strength of a misleading report, and has set up a rigid law of limitation in the exercise of that discretion, the High Court will interfere—Narain Singh v. Bikram, 8 A.L.J. 793, 11 I.C. 814. Where a Judge who purports to exercise the discretion under this section does so under the view that there is no general rule when in fact there is one, he has misdirected himself as to the law to be applied to the case; he has not exercised a judicial discretion and the superior Court must either remit the case or exercise the discretion itself—Brij Indar Singh v. Kanshi Ram, 45 Cal. 94 (P.C.). Where the lower Appellate Court has failed to exercise its discretion according to this section and has not considered the question whether there was sufficient cause for extending the period, the High Court may interfere and consider the question in second appeal, and if necessary allow a time-barred appeal—Gharib v. Pohlo Mal, 92 P.R. 1886; Nand Singh v. Gulli, 77 P.R. 1917, 42 I.C. 343; Sripat v. Hubdar, 2 O.W.N. 673, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 643, 90 I.C. 115; Lal Bhan Partab v. Rajab, 6 O.W.N. 1035, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 184. If the lower Court misdirects on a point of law and refuses to extend the time upon the findings arrived at, it will be set aside by the superior Court—Nrisingha v. Trigunand, 17 Pat. 507, 1938 P.W.N. 818, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 413; Aruna v. Karam, 48 P.L.R. 325 A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 76.

But where the Lower Court after considering all the circumstances of the case has exercised its dicretion one way or the other, and has come to the conclusion that sufficient cause has or has not been established for not filing an appeal within time, the High Court in second appeal will not interfere—Debi Charan v. Mehdi, 20 C.W.N. 1303, 1 P L.J. 485 (487); Fatima v. Hansi, 9 All. 244; Bechi v. Ahsanullah, 12 All. 461 (485) (F.B.); Hardhan v. Mam Chand, 92 P.R. 1916, 36 I.C. 614; Tulsa Kunwar v. Gajraj, 25 All. 71; Hamid Ali v. Gayadin, 26 All. 327, Rama Shanker v. Janti, 1930 A.L.J. 1256, 130 I.C. 840, A.I.R. 1931 All. 28; Sripat v. Hubdar, supra; Abdul Kasim v. Chaturbhuj, 6 P.L.J. 444, 64 I.C. 55; Ram Rup v. Naik Ram, 91 I.C. 865, A.I.R. 1926 All. 252; Malak Md. Khan v. Het Ram, 28 P.L.R. 257, 103 I.C. 90; Ram v. Debi, 1945 O W.N. 1, A.I.R. 1945 Oudh 94; Gaya Prosad v. Kamlakar, 1948 R.D. 420; Sambhu v. Gobindapriya, A.I R. 1949 Assam 24.

A mere difference in view as to the mode in which the discretion ought to have been exercised under this section by the lower Appellate Court, is in itself no ground for interference by the High Court; but where facts which are material for the purpose of enabling the lower Appellate Court to exercise the discretion under this section have not been considered, the exercise of discretion is judicially unsound and the High Court can interfere—Kichilappa v. Ramanujam, 25 Mad. 166; Hardhan v. Mamchand, 92 P.R. 1916, 36 I.C. 614. Before the High Court interferes, it ought to be satisfied that the exercise of the discretion by the lower Court was judicially unsound. The test is, has the discretion been exercised after appreciation and consideration of all the facts which are material for the purpose of enabling the Judge to exercise a judicial discretion, and after the application of the right principle to these facts?—Kichilappa v. Ramanujam, 25 Mad. 166. The High Court ought not to interfere with the discretion exercised by the Court below merely because upon the material before it, it might have arrived at a different conclusion. But where the lower Appellate Court admitted a time-barred appeal subject to objections by the respondent, but no notice was afterwards given to the respondents as to the admission of the appeal out of time, the High Court would interfere—Abdul Kasem v. Chaturbhuj, 3 P.L T. 110, 64 I.C. 55, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 47 (48). Where the lower Appellate Court has in the exercise of its judicial discretion refused to excuse the delay in the presentation of an appeal, the High Court would not interfere in second appeal with the exercise of that discretion even though it might have taken another view, had it been the lower Appellate Court—Ahmad Hussain v. Fasihullah, 45 All. 432, 21 A.L.J. 319, A.I.R. 1923 All. 455, 74 I.C. 1039. In a Madras case, where the lower Appellate Court had admitted a time-barred criminal appeal and acquitted the accused, without being satisfied that the appellant had sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal in time, but there had been no gross miscarriage of justice which ought to be remedied, the High Court refused to interfere—Janakiramayya v. Brahmayya, 48 M.L.J. 457, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 709, 88 I.C. 278.

72. "Explanation":—An appellant who is misled by a practice which had hitherto been followed by the lower Courts but which had recently been held to be wrong, is entitled to an extension of time under this section—Ram Asray Singh v. Sheo Nandan, 1 P.L.J. 573 (575); Nibaran v. Martin and Co., 32 C.L.J. 127; Jotindra v. Lodna Colliery Co., 6 P.L.J. 350 (F.B.). Where the appellant has been misled by the rules of the Court followed for a long time, the provisions of this section can be invoked—Bheemasena v. Venugopal, 48 Mad. 631, 48 M L.J. 384, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 725, 88 I.C. 443. So also where the appellant was misled in not preferring an appeal within the period allowed by law by the practice of the Court in computing the period of limitation prescribed for appeals, the appellant must be regarded as having shown sufficient cause for not preferring the appeal within the period allowed by law—G. G. in Council v. Jesraj, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 83. But although the appellant may be excused on the ground that he was misled by the past practice of the Court and thus made a mistake of law, he cannot be excused if he makes an undue delay (e.g., 14 months) in filing appeal after he becomes aware of the mistake—Secy. of State v. Tirath Ram, 9 Lah. 76, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 216 (219), 104 I.C. 281. Where the applicant was misled by a Full Bench judgment into an erroneous belief, and thereby made a wrong calculation of the period of limitation for his application, held that there was sufficient cause for the delay in filing his application—Harish Chandra v. Chandpur Co. Ld., 39 Cal. 766 (773); Mukand Rao v. Ragho, 102 I.C. 123, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 247.

Legal disability.

6. (1) Where a person entitled to institute a suit or make an application for the execution of a decree is, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, a minor, or insane, or an idiot, he may institute the suit or make the application within the same period after the disability has ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time prescribed therefor in the third column of the first schedule.

(2) Where such person is, at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned, affected by two such disabilities, or where, before his disability has ceased, he is affected by another disability, he may institute the suit or make the application within the same period, after both disabilities have ceased, as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

(3) Where the disability continues up to the death of such person, his legal representative may institute the suit or make the application within the same period after the death as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed.

(4) Where such representative is at the date of the death affected by any such disability, the rules contained in sub-sections (1) and (2) shall apply.

Illustrations.

(a) The right to sue for the hire of a boat accrues to A during his minority. He attains majority four years after such accruer. He may institute his suit at any time within three years from the date of his attaining majority.

(b) A right to sue accrues to Z during his minority. After the accruer, but while Z is still a minor, he becomes insane. Time runs against Z from the date when his insanity and minority cease.

(c) A right to sue accrues to X during his minority. X dies before attaining majority, and is succeeded by Y, his minor son. Time runs against Y from the date of his attaining majority.

73. Principle:—"The rights of infants are much favoured in law, and regularly their laches shall not be prejudicial to them, upon a presumption that they understand not their right and that they are not capable of taking notice of the rules of law so as to be able to apply them to their advantage. Hence, by the common law, infants were not bound for want of claim and entry within a year and a day, nor are they bound by a fine and five years' non-claim, nor by statutes of limitation, provided they prosecute their right within the time allowed by the statute after the impediment is removed"—Bacon's Abridgment, cited in 37 Mad. 186 (at p. 190). The general principle of law is that time does not run against a minor—Moro v. Visaji, 16 Bom. 536 (537).

74. Scope of section:—Section 7 of the old Act applied to the case of a person entitled to make any application, but now this section has been limited to the case of a person entitled to make only an application for the execution of a decree.

But it was held in an earlier Calcutta case that a right preserved by the old Act would not be taken away by the new one. Thus, under the Act of 1877, the minor judgment-debtor could on attaining majority apply to set aside a sale. If such right accrued to a minor in 1903 before the Limitation Act of 1908 came into force, it could not be taken away by the present Act, that being a privilege which has been preserved by sec. 6 (c) of the General Clauses Act, and the application made in January 1909 was not barred—Fazal Karim v. Annada, 15 C.W.N. 845 (847), 11 I.C. 401. But the correctness of this ruling has been doubted in a later Calcutta case where their Lordships observed that no one has a vested right in any course of procedure, that an application made after the present Act came into force would be governed by the present Act and not by the old one that if in spite of the passing of the new Act the applicant had enough time to apply under the new Act but he did not avail himself of the opportunity and chose to wait longer under the impression that the old Act applied, the application must be held as time-barred—Khondkar Mahomed v. Chandra Kumar, 56 Cal. 1117, 33 C.W.N. 519 (524, 525), 49 C.L.J. 362 (following Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 35 All. 227 P.C.).

This section will not grant an indulgence to a minor entitled to prefer an appeal: it provides only for suits or applications for execution of decrees.

An application to file an award does not become a suit by the provisions of para. 20 (2) of Schedule II of the C. P. Code, and hence the applicant cannot claim the benefit of this section—Ma Theiru Tin v. Maung Ba Than, 1 Rang. 256, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 226, 76 I.C. 493; Panchimondal v. Genamander, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 161.

Again, this section is limited to applications for execution of decrees: it is not applicable to an application under O. XXII, r 1, C. P. Code for bringing the legal representatives of a deceased appellant on record, or to an application to set aside an order of abatement—Ma Min Thing v. Maung Po Win, 10 Bur.L.T. 27, 35 I.C. 438. It does not apply to applications for seting aside ex parte decrees—Chidambaram v. Karuppan, 35 Mad. 678, 8 I.C. 543; Manohar v. Sadiqa, 101 P.R. 1916, 37 I.C. 292 (294). Section 6 does not cover a case of an application under Or. 21, r. 90, C. P. Code to set aside a sale held in execution of a decree—Bholanath v. Mt. Sayedatunnissa, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 450, 159 I.C. 253; Govinda v. Sankaralinga, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 558, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 55, 1942 M.W.N. 660. Nor does it apply to an application for the re-admission of an appeal under Or. 41, r. 10 of the C. P. Code—Somubai v. Shivji Rao, 45 Bom. 646, 23 Bom.L.R. 110, 60 I.C. 919.

An application to obtain a final decree for sale in a mortgage-suit is not an application for execution of the preliminary decree for sale, but is a proceeding in the suit for enforcement of the mortgage. Sec. 6 does not apply to such an application —Pulin Chandra v. Muzaffar Ahmed, 37 C.W.N. 184 (185), 144 I.C. 768, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 508; Govindnaik v. Basawannewa, I.L.R. (1941) Bom. 435, 43 Bom.L.R. 329, A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 203; Vinayakrao v. Baijnath, 15 N.L.R. 36, 48 I.C. 934; Nizamuddin v. Bohra Bhimsen, 40 All. 203 (205), 16 A.L.J. 85, 48 I.C. 870. Similarly, an application for a supplementary decree under Or. 34, r. 6 is not an application for execution, and does not fall within the provisions of this section—Khondkar Mahomed v. Chandra Kumar, 56 Cal. 1117, 33 C.W.N. 519 (521), 49 C.L.J. 362.

An application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council was neither governed by sec. 7 of the Old Act (Thurai v. Jainalabdeen, 18 Mad. 484, 485), nor falls under the present section.

An application for restitution under section 144, C. P. Code, is virtually an application for execution of the appellate decree amending the decree of the first Court, and therefore falls within the purview of this section. This is an enabling section to enable persons under disability to exercise their rights within a certain time, and it should not be construed so narrowly as to exclude an application for restitution —Kurgodigouda v. Ningangouda, 41 Bom. 625 (629), 19 Bom.L R. 638; Sant Sahai v. Chhutai, 3 O.W.N 65, 92 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 199.

75. Application of section:—This section applies only to cases dealt with by the Act itself i.e., to those suits and applications for execution of decrees which are mentioned in the First Schedule. It is not applicable to cases for which a period of limitation is prescribed by other Acts—Kartick v. Bata, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 25. Thus the provisions of this section do not apply to suits instituted under the Indian Registration Act—Veeramma v. Abbiah, 18 Mad. 99 (F.B.); or Bengal Rent Act, VIII of 1869—Girija Nath v. Patani, 17 Cal. 263; nor to suits specified in Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act—Akhoy Kumar v. Bijoy Chand, 29 Cal. 813 (822). Sec. 211 of the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908) provides that sec. 6 of the Limitation Act shall not apply to suits under that Act. So also the benefit of this section cannot be claimed in a suit under the U. P. Tenancy Act—Dharam v. Qabool, 1949 R.D. 169; Mahomed Ishaq v. Chawthi, 1949 R D 400. The provisions of this section do not apply to a case where a decree is barred by section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908—Prem Nath v. Chatarpal, 37 All. 638 (639), 13 A L.J. 826; Chatarpalman v. Prem Nath, 13 A.L J. 166, 27 I.C. 865; Ramana Reddi v. Babu Reddi, 37 Mad. 186 (189), 24 M.L.J. 96, 18 I C. 586; Jhandu v. Mohan Lal, 128 P R. 1894; Zahuruddin v. Amtur, 46 P.L.R. 26, A I.R. 1944 Lah. 106; Kartik v. Batakrishna, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 373, 65 C L.J. 403, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 25; Yadoras v. Gobindrao, I L.R. (1939) Nag. 559, 1939 N.L.J. 387, A.I.R. 1939 Nag 245; Zalikhan v. Ram Prasad, 20 Pat. 1, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 45. In Lolit Mohun v. Janoky, 20 Cal. 714 (716) the Calcutta High Court d d not express any opinion on the point. But the Bombay High Court holds that though section 6 of the Limitation Act applies only to cases dealt with by the Act itself a d as such does not apply to cases under the C. P. Code, still the provisions of the C. P. Code must be deemed to be subject to the general principle of law as to the disabilities of minors, viz., that time does not run against a minor. Therefore an application for execution, though barred under sec. 48, C. P. Code, is in time if made within three years after the minor attains majority—Moro v. Visaji, 16 Bom. 536 (537).

This section applies only to cases in which a period of limitation has been prescribed by law, and not to the case of an order made by a Court for the payment of money by a certain time—Prema v. Jawahir, 31 P.R. 1884.

Person suing in representative capacity:—The benefit of this section can be availed of by a person suing in a representative capacity, e.g., a shebait of an idol, The right of suit is vested in the shebait, not in idol; therefore, if, at the time when the cause of action for a suit for recovery of possession of property dedicated to an idol accrued, the shebait was a minor, he could bring such suit within three years after attaining majority—Jagadindra v. Hemanta, 32 Cal. 129 (141) (P.C.), 8 C.W.N. 809. If a shebait is a minor he is entitled to exemption of the period of his minority under this section when he brings a suit in his own name. This principle also applies when the shebait on attaining majority brings this suit as the next friend of the deity—Gopal Jew v. Baldeo, 51 C.W.N. 383. So the possession of debuttar property under a purchase made during the minority of a shebait, cannot be adverse to the idol until the minor shebait attains majority—Amode v. Girija, 76 C.L.J. 363, A.I.R. 1944 Cal. 157. It has been held in Venkateswara v. Venkatesa, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 599, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 644, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 449 that in a suit by a succeeding manager seeking to impeach alienations by the previous manager of a Hindu Religious Institution if the succeeding manager happens to be a minor at the date of the election or appointment, he will be entitled to the benefit of this section but where his appointment is made after the period of limitation has started to run, this section will not help him.

76. Computation of period:—In computing the period of limitation for a minor, the date on which he attains majority must be excluded from calculation —Jugmohun v. Luchmeshur, 10 Cal. 748 (751). But see Batuk v. Rudra, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 206 where it has been held that the three-year period must be counted, not from the date of attainment of majority, but from the date of cessation of minority.

The minor when bringing a suit after attaining majority is also entitled to the benefit of sec. 4. Therefore, if on the last day after three years from the date when the minor attained majority, when he ought to have filed a suit, the Court is closed, he is entitled to the privilege of sec. 4 and can file his suit on the re-opening day—Naganna v. Krishnamurthy, 55 Mad. 286, 61 M.L.J. 675, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 139 (141), 135 I.C. 587.

77. Duty of litigant to plead minority:—If a litigant claims the benefit of an exceptional rule such as one laid down in this section, it is clearly his duty to do so expressly and to establish his claim. If the question of minority is not raised by him or on his behalf the Court is not bound to consider it ex proprio motu. Even the fact that the petitioner is described in the heading of the application as a minor represented by a guardian is not sufficient to entitle him to the benefit of this section, nor is it sufficient to throw upon the Court the duty of protecting his interests by raising a point of this kind on his behalf. The omission on the part of the Court to consider the question of minority of the petitioner does not amount to a failure to exercise jurisdiction so as to invoke the revisional power of the High Court under sec. 115, C. P. Code—Panchu Mandal v. Sheikh Isaf, 17 C.W.N. 667 (668), 18 I.C. 391. The point about the minority of a party for the purpose of calling in aid the provisions of this section, cannot be raised for the first time in second appeal—Sheojiram v. Gulabchand, 1940 N.L.J. 607.

78. Accrual of cause of action:—Section 6 only applies when the disability is in existence at the time when the limitation begins to run, but time is not saved where disability does not exist at the point on which limitation begins to run—Firm Dunichand v. Kuldip Singh, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 144. The section does not apply to a case of subsequent disability but applies only to a case of initial disability —Maningappa v. Syed Hyder, 52 My. H.C.R. 332. This section requires that the plaintiff must have been a minor when the cause of action first accrued, and the cause of action must have accrued to the minor himself: otherwise he cannot claim any exemption under this section. Therefore, if the cause of action accrued to the minor's father, the minor son cannot, after his father's death, wait till he attains majority—Nusheeram v. Shushee, 5 W.R. 169; Vira v. Muruga, 2 M.H.C.R. 340; Gyanwati v. Nand Behari, 1943 O.W.N. 321, 1943 A.L.W. 546. The same principle applies where the cause of action accrues not only against the minor but also against his adult brother and mother. The cause of action does not cease on account of the disability of one of the parties and the minor cannot get the benefit of the section—Fateh Chand v. Chheda Lal, 1943 A.L.W. 160. Similarly, if the cause of action had accrued before his birth, the minor cannot, on coming of age, avail himself of the benefit of this section. The minor must have been in existence at the time when the cause of action accrued—Siddhesur v. Sham Chand, 23 W.R. 285 (286); Shahamad v. Salabat, 8 Lah. 19, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 97, 97 I.C. 435; Kehr Singh v. Hazara, 173 P.W.R. 1912, 14 I.C. 60 (61); Lachman Das v. Sundar Das, 1 Lah. 558 (560), 59 I.C. 678; Rachappa v. Madivalawa, 46 Bom.L.R. 683, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 63; Bhagawat Prasad v. Debichand, 20 Pat. 727, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 99, 199 I.C. 408; Nandlal v. Deorao, 1939 N.L.J. 591, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 94. Thus, where a coparcenary property was alienated by all the adult male members living at the time, and the plaintiffs (their sons) who were born after the date of the alienation brought a suit to challenge the sale more than 12 years (Art. 126) after the date of alienation though within three years after attaining majority, held that this section could not be pleaded by a plaintiff who was not in existence when the cause of action accrued (i.e., when the alienee took possession, Art. 126). He is entitled to take advantage of an existing cause of action so long as it subsists but he does not obtain a fresh period of 21 years (18 years, and 3 years under sec. 8) from the date of his birth—Dhanraj v. Ram Naresh, A.I.R. 1924 All. 912 (914), 79 I.C. 1019; Sankat Narayan v. Ram Bharos, 79 I.C. 1010, A.I.R. 1924 All. 677 (678); Chokhey Singh v. Hardeo, 24 O.C. 330, 64 I.C. 757, A.I.R. 1921 Oudh 196 (199); Sita Ram v. Cheddi, 46 All. 882 (883), A.I.R. 1924 All. 798, 22 A.L.J. 809; Thakur Prasad v. Gulab, A.I.R. 1925 All. 563, 87 I.C. 662; Ram Krishen v. Baldeo, 86 I.C. 704, A.I.R. 1925 All. 247. (The suit must be brought within the ordinary period of limitation through a next friend—Shahamad v. Salabat, supra). This view is now fortified by the Privy Council decision in Ranodip v. Parameshwar, 47 All. 165, 29 C.W.N. 666 (670), 27 Bom.L.R. 175, 23 A.L.J. 176, 48 M.L.J. 29, 86 I.C. 249, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 33. Consequently, if there are several plaintiffs, and the suit to set aside the alienation is brought more than three years (according to sec. 8) after the first plaintiff has attained majority, but during the minority of the other plaintiffs who were born after the date of alienation, and while the ordinary period of limitation has expired, the suit is barred in respect of all the plaintiffs. It is barred in respect of the first plaintiff, because it is brought more than three years (sec. 6 read with sec. 8) after he has attained majority, and in respect of the other plaintiffs it is barred because they, not having been in existence at the date of accrual of cause of action (i.e., at the date of alienation) cannot claim the benefit of sec. 6—Ram Kishen v. Baldeo, supra; Shahamad v. Salabat, supra; Sita Ram v. Cheddi, 46 All. 882 (883); Lachman Das v. Sundar, 1 Lah. 558 (560), 59 I.C. 678; Chokkey Singh v. Hardeo, supra. If the suit is brought within three years of the attainment of majority of the first plaintiff, the suit is within time in respect of the other plaintiffs who were born after the date of alienation, even though in their case the ordinary period of limitation has run out; this is so because the younger brothers have no independent right to sue, but their right is derived from their elder brother's capacity to sue; the time within which they can sue is co-extensive with the time allowed to the elder brother—Jowala v. Sant Singh, 13 Lah.

520, 33 P.L.R. 808, 140 I.C. 375, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 605. So also where after the death of the tenant the landlord dispossessed his minor sons, a suit for possession instituted after twelve years from the date of dispossession but within one year of one of the said minors attaining majority is within time as this section applies—Hit Lal v. Ram Oudh, 1943 O.W.N. 99, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 296. If however the minor does not choose to institute a suit within three years on attaining majority and the possession has become adverse to the minor, the minor is not entitled to claim any extension of the period of limitation by virture of this section read with sec. 8 in a suit instituted after that period—Janardan v. Nilkantha, A.I.R. 1952 Orissa 31.

Child in the womb:—What section 6 lays down is that "where a person entitled to institute a suit is at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned a minor", etc. But if at the date from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned (e.g., at the date of alienation by the father) the plaintiff was not in existence at all, but had only been begotten and was in the womb, this section has no application, and he cannot get advantage of this section, but must be governed by the ordinary law of limitation. Minority is a period beginning at birth and does not begin at conception—Kehar Singh v. Hazara, 173 P.W.R. 1912, 14 I.C. 60 (61); Muhammad Khan v. Ahmad Khan, 10 Lah. 713, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 254 (255), 30 P.L.R. 737, 116 I.C. 545; Madho Ram v. Dharm Singh, 31 P.L.R. 305, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 394 (396), 127 I.C. 708; Chuni Lal v. Altaf, 42 P.L.R. 237, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 290. The Madras High Court adopted the same view in Venkatarama v. Mirthinjaya, 60 M.L.J. 521, A.I R. 1931 Mad. 456 (457), 132 I.C. 316. But this decision has recently been overruled by a Full Bench case—Ranganatha v. Ramaswami, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 839, 58 Mad. 886, 69 M.L.J. 425, 159 I.C. 1. According to this decision a child en ventre sa mere can take advantage of sec. 6. The Bombay High Court has taken the same view in Basayya v. Baslingayya, 49 Bom.L.R. 775, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 150. The same view has also been taken by the Allahabad High Court in Audesh v. Rajeshwari, A.I.R. 1951 All. 630.

Reversioners:—Unlike the Hindu widow, the nearest reversioner under the Hindu Law does not represent fully the whole estate, nor does one reversioner claim through or derive his title from another and nearer reversioner, even if the latter happens to be his father, but all the reversioners derive their title from the last full owner; and the cause of action accrues to one reversioner independently of others. Therefore, where a nearer reversioner has neglected to sue for a declaration that an alienation made by the widow is not binding on the estate, and has therefore allowed the claim to be barred, a more remote reversioner who was born after the date of the alienation, or who was a minor at the date of the alienation, is not precluded from claiming the benefit of this section; for although the cause of action to the nearer reversioner accrued from the date of alienation, still to him (the remote reversioner) it accrued when he was born or when he was a minor, and not before, and he can enforce his right within three years after he attains majority—Abinash v. Harinath, 32 Cal. 62 (71); Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (F.B.); Das Ram v. Tirtha Nath, 51 Cal. 101 (108), A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 481, 81 I.C. 522. See also, Harak Chand v. Bejoy Chand, 9 C.W.N. 795 (801). This was also the view of the Madras High Court in Govinda v. Thayammal, 28 Mad. 57; Narayana v. Rama, 38 Mad. 396; and Venkata Row v. Tulja Ram Row, 1917 M.W.N. 30 (36), 38 I.C. 270; but all these cases have been overruled by the Full Bench decision in Varamma v. Gopaladasayya, 41 Mad. 659. In this case it has been held that if the reversioners existing at the time of alienation are barred, the reversioners born thereafter are equally barred, as the cause of action is but one. Similarly, if the remote reversioner was a minor at the date of alienation, and the nearer reversioners did not bring a suit to set aside the alienation within time, the remote reversioner could not get an extension of time and his suit was likewise barred—Neelakantamier v. Chinnu, 52 M.L.J. 13, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 216, 99 I.C. 668. Thus where the limitation has started against the presumptive reversioner the fact that the reversioner next in rank is a minor or under a disability will not stop the period of limitation running or give him an extended period of limitation prescribed by this section in a suit by the minor reversioner—Thiruneelakanta v. Velayudha, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 355, 1951 M.W.N. 301, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 824. The Madras High Court has held in Srinivasalu v. Muniswami, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 157, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 378, 1943 M.W.N. 86 that though an after born reversioner cannot claim the benefit of this section in his own right, he cannot be deprived of the extended period of limitation available to the reversioner in existence at the time of alienation. The same view has also been taken by the Lahore High Court in Harnam v. Aziz, 18 Lah. 769, 40 P.L.R. 188, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 1; though the same High Court seems to draw a distinction between a remote reversioner who was a minor at the date of alienation and a remote reversioner who was born after the date of alienation. In the former case, the minor can claim an extension of time under this section and if he brings his suit within three years of his attaining majority, the suit is not barred, notwithstanding the existence of nearer reversioners, including his father, whose right to contest the alienation has become time-barred—Khushi Ram v. Nand Lal, 147 I.C. 399, A I.R. 1933 Lah. 866 (867); Wali Chand v. Punjab Singh, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 39 (40), 132 I.C. 665; Hari Ram v. Sali, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 968; Ilahi Baksh v. Umar Baksh, I.L.R. (1945) Lah. 231, 46 P.L.R. 316, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 409 (F.B.). In the Full Bench Case it has been held that though time will start running both against the major and minor reversioners they will have their own periods of limitation and in no case will the one provided for a minor reversioner be affected by that of a major reversioner whether of equal or of a different degree. But in the case of a remote reversioner who was born after the date of alienation, it has been held (following 41 Mad. 659) that the right to sue for a declaratory decree is vested in the whole body of reversioners in existence at the time of alienation jointly and severally, and time begins to run simultaneously against them all, and a reversioner born after the date of alienation does not obtain a fresh cause of action from his birth; because when the time has once begun to run, no subsequent disability stops it (sec. 9)—Chiragh Din v. Abdulla, 6 Lah. 405, 90 I.C. 1022, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 654 (656). A reversioner born after an alienation has been made, can contest its validity if the period of limitation calculated from the date of alienation had not expired before the date of his birth, and his suit is brought within the period prescribed by law. He cannot, if born after the cause of action has already accrued and time begun to run (i.e., born after the date of alienation) claim an extension of time under this section —Umra v. Ghulam, 22 P.R. 1907, 27 P.L.R. 1908; Inayat Khan v. Shabu, 108 P.L.R. 1907. A person who is a minor on the date of the alienation by a widow or is born subsequently during the life of the widow is entitled to the benefit of sec. 6, Limitation Act—Sital Raut v. Adalat Raut, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 256, 16 P.L.T. 236, 155 I.C. 244.

Bond or promote taken in the name of minor:—If a promissory note is taken in the name of the minor alone, the minor would have three years from attaining his majority within which to sue. Thus, where through the instrumentality of the guardian of a minor a bond was obtained in the name of the minor, time did not begin to run against the minor until the latter attained his majority—Yeknath v. Waman, 10 Bom. 241. Where any Court is of opinion, on the construction of the document in question, that it is taken in the name of a minor, or in the name of a minor acting by his guardian, then the minor has got three years from attaining his majority within which to bring his suit on the document. But if on the other hand, the Court is of opinion that the document is taken solely by the guardian, then that extended period would not be open for the benefit of the minor—Pandharinath v. Ajamkha, 50 Bom. 831, 28 Bom.L.R. 1431, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 61, 100 I.C. 95. Where the bond or pro-note is taken in the name of the guardian, the minor cannot on attaining majority claim the benefit of this section. Thus, a promissory note was given to the guarian of the plaintiff when the latter was a minor, in 1906. The plaintiff attained majority in 1919 and sued on the note within three years therefrom. Held that the suit was barred. The pro-note having been given to the guardian, he was the person entitled to sue on it, and not the minor, and the suit would be barred if it was not brought within the ordinary period of limitation. The minor was not entitled to institute a suit on the note—Vishnu v. Keshav, 26 Bom.L.R. 426, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 468, 80 I.C. 474; Ramanuja v. Sadagopa, 28 Mad. 205. So also, a minor heir of a deceased promisee under a promissory note cannot get the benefit of the section, the reason being that in such cases limitation begins to run from the execution of the promissory note and cannot be stopped by the death of the payee—Gan Wati v. Nand Behari, 1943 O.W.N. 321, 1943 A.L.W. 546.

79. Adopted son:—In case of an adoption by a widow after her husband's death under authority from her husband, the right of the adopted son accrues from the time when he is adopted, and does not relate back to the death of the adoptive father (although by a legal fiction the adopted son is considered to have taken his birth in the adoptive family at the time of the adoptive father's death)—Harek Chand v. Bejoy Chand Mahatab, 9 C.W.N. 795 (798); Lakhmana v. Lakshmi, 4 Mad. 160. If he is a minor at the time of adoption, he is entitled to the benefit of this section. Even where a cause of action accrued to a minor Hindu widow and then the widow adopted a son during her minority, the cause of action for the adopted son (a minor) accrued when he was adopted and not before, and in bringing a suit he is entitled to be benefit of this section—Harek Chand v. Bejoy Chand, 9 C.W.N. 795 (801). But where after the death of an adopted son after attaining majority another son is adopted who brings a suit challenging the alienations made by his adoptive mother, the suit is barred if the right of the former adopted son was barred by limitation, time having already run against him and no further right to sue in respect of the alienations can accrue to the second adopted son—Annu Bajaba v. Dadu, 43 Bom.L.R. 222, A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 197, 195 I.C. 732.

80. Minor:—'Minor' means a person who has not attained the age of majority under the Indian Majority Act. Section 3 of that Act lays down: "Every minor of whose person or property a guardian has been or shall be appointed by any Court of Justice and every minor under the jurisdiction of any Court of Wards, shall be deemed to have attained his majority when he shall have completed the age of twenty-one years and not before; every other person shall be deemed to have attained his majority when he shall have completed the age of eighteen years, and not before."

If the minor claims the benefit of this section, it is for him to establish affirmatively and clearly that he is under the age of 21 (18+3 years under sec. 8) at the time of institution of the suit; it is not enough merely to show that he is probably under that age at the time—Charanjit v. Bishen Sing, 167 P.L.R. 1914, 23 I.C. 462. See also Panchu Mandal v. Sheikh Isaf, 17 C.W.N. 667, 18 I.C. 391; Prem Das v. Sarbanand, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 41. He will have to prove that his suit is within time, if the date of attaining majority is disputed—Prahlad v. Ramsaran, 38 C.L.J. 213, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 420.

Medical evidence is not of any help to prove the age of the minor for the purpose of limitation, because it is based on conjectures only, and cannot give the exact age with precision. In cases where limitation is pleaded in defence, a difference of even a single day decides the fate of the case one way or the other, and no doctor, however competent he may be, can give the precise age of a person so as to determine the exact age of his birth—Zinda v. Roshnai, 10 Lah.L.J. 183, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 250 (252).

A person who is of full age but whose property is under the Court of Wards, cannot take the benefit of this section—Uma Kanta v. Hiralal, 20 C.W.N. 852 (854), 34 I.C. 86.

As to the application of this section to a minor who was not born but was merely in embryo at the time of the accrual of the cause of action, see the cases cited in Note 78, ante.

Idol:—The only disabilities which save the operation of the Limitation Act are those mentioned in this section, which recognizes only three classes of persons as being under legal disability, namely, a minor, an insane person and an idiot, and does not include an idol or a muth—Naurangi v. Ram Charan, 9 Pat. 885, 11 P.L.T. 403, 127 I.C. 817, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 455 (471). An idol is not a perpetual minor for the purpose of this section; and it is not correct to say that a suit by an idol to set aside an improper alienation made by the shebait would be for ever saved from the bar of limitation under the provisions of this section. Therefore where the manager of a temple alienated the property of the idol in 1905, a suit brought in 1918 to avoid the transfer was barred—Chitar Mal v. Panchu Lal, 48 All. 348, 24 A.L.J. 35, 93 I.C. 652, A.I.R. 1926 All. 392.

81. Assignee of minor:—This section gives only a personal privilege to the minor; it applies to the minor himself or his legal representatives but not to his assignees—Rudra Kant v. Nobokishore, 9 Cal. 663 (F.B.); Bhagaban v. Ishan, 22 C.W.N. 831, 46 I.C. 802; Mahadev v. Babi, 26 Bom. 730; Imamuddin v. Mumtazunnissa, 18 O.C. 34, 1 O.L.J. 247, 27 I.C. 118; Mahomed Nur Khan v. Lachmi Naran, 9 O.L.J. 88, 66 I.C. 101, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 31; Kukam v. Shahab, 1918 P.W.R. 14, 44 I.C. 890; Rangaswami v. Thangavelu, 42 Mad. 637; Sitla Bux v. Ram Newaz, 2 O.W.N. 811, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 20, 90 I C. 741; Mariyayya v. Chanvirangouda, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 420, 37 Bom.L.R. 706, 159 I.C. 272. Therefore, where a person sues to set aside a transfer effected by his father during his minority, within three years of his attaining majority and joins with him as co-plaintiff an assignee to whom he sells a portion of the property in suit, that person may be in time by making use of sec. 6, but his co-plaintiff being only an assignee is not entitled to its privilege, and is beyond time—Sitla Bux v. Ram Newaz, supra. The benefit of this section can be claimed by an assignee of a person who is entitled to that benefit in a suit where both the assignor and the assignee join in the suit as plaintiffs, so long as the assignor has a subsisting right to sue at the date when the suit is brought, although the benefit would not be available had the assignee alone brought the suit—Bandu v. Yeshwant, 40 Bom.L.R. 548, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 358.

A minor in whose favour a decree is assigned is not entitled to the benefit of this section—Zahur-uddin v. Amtur, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 106, 46 P.L.R. 26.

82. Suit or application by minor during minority:—The benefit of this section is not absolute; the plaintiff or applicant labouring under the disability is not bound to wait till the disability ceases; he has the option either to take proceedings through his guardian or next friend, or to wait until the expiration of the period of his minority. The minor can bring a suit or make an application during his minority by his next friend, and can claim the benefit of this section. That is, this section will save such suit from the bar of limitation, even though instituted after the ordinary period prescribed for the suit—Phoolbas v. Lalla Jageswar, 1 Cal. 226 (243) (P.C.); Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 All. 33 (42) (F.B.); Veerayya v. Gangamma, 36 Mad. 570 (572); Lalit Mohan v. Janoky, 20 Cal. 714 (716); Sarwan Singh v. Basanti, A.I.R. 1934 Lah 908; Padha Madho v. Ghanaya, 30 P.L.R. 398, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 661 (662). If the minor or lunatic brings a suit during the period of his disability, he is always protected under this section, in spite of the fact that the ordinary period of limitation has expired, and the mere fact that there was a guardian who could have sued earlier on his behalf would not deprive him of the protection given by this section. So long as the disability lasts, it is immaterial whether he had a guardian who could have sued earlier or not—Musi Imran v. Collector of Bijnore, 1934 A.L.J. 803, A.I.R. 1934 All. 434 (435), 148 I.C. 1166. Even if during his minority he makes applications for execution through his guardian, he is not precluded from making applications himself after attaining majority. The general principle is that time does not run against a minor, and the circumstance that he has been represented by a guardian does not affect the question—Mon Mohun v. Gunga Soondery, 9 Cal. 181; Moro v. Visaji, 16 Bom. 536 (537); Jagjivan v. Hasan, 7 Bom. 179; Zamir Hassan v. Sundar, 22 All 199 (F.B.); Guneswar v. Jagadhatri, 3 C.W.N. 24. Similarly, the fact that a guardian or next friend might have maintained a suit on behalf of a minor does not take away from the minor the privilege of the section—Jagadindra v. Hemanta, 32 Cal. 129 (142) (P.C.); Jagat Narain v. Narbada, 16 O.C. 206, 21 I.C. 365.

83. Suit by guardian:—The privilege given to a minor is not one that could be availed of by him only, after he comes of age. Any application or act made or done by his guardian on his behalf during his minority is equally exempt from the operation of limitation—Norendra v. Bhupendra, 23 Cal. 374 (388); Krishna Raju v. Byyappa Chettiar, 1955 M.W.N. 491, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 456. Therefore, while the minor's disability lasts, his guardian or next friend can bring a suit or make an application, even though the ordinary period of limitation for such suit or application has run out. In Satyendra v. Pitambar, 18 Pat.L.T. 989, 1937 P.W.N. 1012, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 92, 174 I.C. 193 it has been held that in spite of prior infructuous application by the guardian of a minor, he is entitled to the benefit of this section and his application after attaining majority is not barred by the prior infructuous application of the guardian, the reason being that this section applies to every minor, whether he has a guardian or not, and the existence of a guardian competent to sue or apply is immaterial.

Acknowledgement made to a minor:—See Note 186 under sec. 19.

84. Insanity:—A state of great mental weakness on account of serious bodily inrury caused by an inhuman assault (throwing sulphuric acid on the face resulting in loss of one eye) is not a state of insanity within the meaning of this section. To hold so would be straining the language beyond reasonable limit—Abdulla v. Abdulla, 25 Bom.L.R. 1333, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 290. When insanity is once proved to have existed, it is presumed to continue until it is proved to have ceased; and a very strict burden of proof lies on the party who alleges recovery—Pope on Lunacy, 2nd Ed., p. 408. A lucid interval is a temporary cessation of lunacy and it cannot be treated as a recovery unless it is of sufficient length of time to enable the person to do an intended rational act—Cartwright v. Cartwright, 1 Phillim, 90 (100).

85. Other disqualifications:—Under the Limitation Act, no other disqualification than those mentioned in the Act can save limitation, and the only disqualifications that sections 6, 8 and 9 of the Act recognise are minority, idiocy and lunacy. A disqualification under the Court of Wards Act is not such a legal disability as is recognised and enumerated in the Act, and the fact that the plaintiff was a disqualified proprietor, whose estate was under the charge of the Court of Wards, is not a ground for extension of the period under this section, because the disqualified proprietor is not exempted from suing during the time his property remains in the hands of the Court of Wards—Kuarmani v. Wasif Ali Mirza, 19 C.W.N. 1193, 28 I.C. 818; Rani Kuar Mani v. Nawab of Murshidabad, 46 Cal. 694 (P.C.), 23 C.W.N. 531, 50 I.C. 202; Umakanta v. Hira Lal, 20 C.W.N. 852 (854), 34 I.C. 86; Mohammad Azilm v. Mohammad Saadut Ali, 8 O.W.N. 349, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 177 (225), 135 I.C. 642.

A Court of Wards assuming the superintendence of the property of minor can apply for execution of a decree passed in favour of minor's father after the period of limitation and rely upon the provisions of sec. 6—Sainbux v. Alibux, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 84, 20 S.L.R. 30, 163 I.C. 379. A contrary view has been taken by the Patna High Court in Kamakshya v. Bhuramull, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 154, 226 I.C. 97.

So also, the insolvency of the plaintiff or applicant is not a legal disability within the meaning of this section and there is no reason to hold that the Official Assignee would have a longer time within which to apply than the insolvent himself Sirur v. Mythili Ammal, 61 M.L.J. 688, 136 I.C. 45, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 170 (171).

The fact that an adopted son on attaining his majority had to sue to establish his adoption is not a disability, and he cannot be allowed the time which was occupied in establishing his rights. Although his rights were disputed, he still could have sued in the meantime to recover property which devolved on him by virtue of his adoption—Muddon Mohan v. Nund Kishore, 5 W.R. 295.

A reversioner's disability to sue for possession while a Hindu female is the owner in possession of the estate is not treated by the Legislature on the same footing as the disability of a minor, an idiot or an insane person; and no extra period can be allowed from the time he succeeds to the estate—Sesha Naidu v. Periasami, 44 Mad. 951 (952).

85A. Sub-sec. (2):—Where several diabilities co-exist concurrently in the plaintiff, the time does not commence to run against him till all have ceased—Stuart v. Mellish, (1742) 2 Atk. 610. If the plaintiff is under one disability at the time the action accrues, and afterwards (and while the first disability continues) he comes under another disability, the time will not commence to run till the last of the disabilities has ceased—Borrows v. Ellison, (1871) L.R. 6 Ex. 128.

85B. Sub-section (3):—Under this sub-section if the disability continues upto the death of the minor, his legal representative is entitled to bring a suit within the same period after his death as would otherwise have been allowed from the time so prescribed—Subbarayadu v. Muthulakshmi, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 3, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 149. This sub-section may be explained by an illustrative case. A minor's property was alienated by his mother as guardian in 1873. The minor died in 1880 before attaining majority and was succeeded by his mother. After the mother's death which took place in 1921, the reversionary heir brought a suit to set aside the sale in 1922. It was held that the suit was barred as it was brought more than three years after the minor's death. The cause of action accrued to the minor in 1873, but when the minor died before attaining majority, sub-section (3) of this section came into play, and the period of limitation must be reckoned from the death of the minor. The fact that on his death the estate was taken by a female heir made no difference—Ramaliah v. Brahmiah, 59 M.L.J. 196, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 821 (823), 127 I.C. 801. Similarly, a lunatic's property was improperly sold in 1880. He died a lunatic, and was succeeded by his wife as heir who died in 1910. In a suit brought by the reversioners in 1917, it was held that as the lunatic died without attaining sanity, a suit to recover the property ought to have been filed by his widow within 3 years after the lunatic's death; and that as she failed to do so, the suit by the reversioners was barred—Seetaramaraju v. Subbaraju, 45 Mad. 361 (369), 42 M.L.J. 262, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 12. Following the principle enunciated in this case it has been held in Bibhuti v. Girish, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 191 that where the period of limitation expires after three years from the date on which the minor attained majority, the minor is not entitled to any extension of time under the combined effect of this section and sec. 8 of the Act. It should be noted that Ramaliat v. Brahmiah, supra, has been recently overruled by Alamelu v. Krishna, (1954) 1 M.L.J. 294, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 585.

Reading sub-section (3) of this section with section 8, the conclusion is that in a suit for possession, where a minor dies before attaining majority, his representatives would have either the total period of 12 years from the date of accrual of the cause of action, or three years from the date of the minor's death, whichever is greater. Thus, a minor died in 1910; the cause of action for a suit for possession had accrued to the minor in January 1909; the 12 years' period from this date expired in January 1921. The period between 1910 and January 1921 being more than three years, the legal representative would be entitled to sue within January 1921. If the legal representative was himself a minor, the rule in sub-section (4) would apply—Anantoo v. Ramrup, 87 I.C. 315, A.I.R. 1925 All. 692. But if the minor dies after attaining majority but before three years after attaining majority, his legal representatives will not get extension of time upto that period as this sub-section does not apply to such a case—Dadarao v. Jatanbai, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 331, 1943 N.L.J. 286, A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 284.

"Where the disability continues"—The expression refers to physical death and to nothing else and the legal representative must be a legal representative whose title depends on the death. An adopted son is not the legal representative of the adopting widow within sec. 6 (3)—Mariyayya v. Chanivirangonda, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 420, 37 Bom.L.R. 706, 159 I.C. 272.

Sub-section (4):—This sub-section contemplates a case in which an extension in favour of one person may be tacked on to an extension in favour of a second person. Such a case arises only where the first person dies while still under a disability and the second person is his legal representative who is also a minor at the time of the first person's death—Lachhman Das v. Sudar, 1 Lah. 558 (560), 59 I.C. 678.

Disability of one of several plaintiffs or applicants.

7. Where one of several persons jointly entitled to institute a suit or make an application for the execution of a decree is under any such disability, and a discharge can be given without the concurrence of such person, time will run against them all: but, where no such discharge can be given, time will not run as against any of them until one of them becomes capable of giving such discharge without the concurrence of the others or until the disability has ceased.

Illustrations.

(a) A incurs a debt to a firm of which B, C and D are partners. B is insane, and C is a minor. D can give a discharge of the debt without the concurrence of B and C. Time runs against B, C and D.

(b) A incurs a debt to a firm of which E, F and G are partners. E and F are insane, and G is a minor. Time will not run against any of them until either E or F becomes sane, or G attains majority.

This section corresponds to section 8 of the Act of 1877.

86. Sections 6 and 7:—Sections 6 and 7 are not mutually exclusive; the latter section supplements the former—Rati Ram v. Naidar, 41 All. 435 (441), 17 A.L.J. 649; Indar Pal v. Badri Das, 45 P.L.R. 345, A.I.R. 1943 Lah. 281, 209 I.C. 257 (F.B.). In other words, the right which the previous section gives to a minor (viz., to wait till he attains majority) can be availed of by him only if the circumstances mentioned in the first portion of the present section do not exist, that is, if there is nobody to give a valid discharge on his behalf without his concurrence. If however a discharge can be given without his concurrence, he cannot take advantage of his minority and wait till he becomes a major. This section is a disabiling section and in so far as it takes away the right conferred by section 6, has to be strictly construed —Kunhi v. Devaki, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 619, 1939 M.W.N. 984, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 907.

The combined effect of sections 6 and 7, in cases in which a right of suit resides jointly in a plurality of persons, is that where any one of such joint creditors or claimants is under a disability and a full discharge can be given without his concurrence by all or any of the others, the suit on the claim will be governed by the ordinary law of limitation, and time will run against all; but where no such discharge can be given, time will not run against any of them until all have ceased to be under disability. In the result, such a suit cannot be barred in part in respect of some of the joint claimants, and not-barred in part at the same time in respect of the others—Ahinsa Bibi v. Abdul Kader, 25 Mad. 26 (38).

The point of time at which the existence of disability is to be recognised is clearly defined in section 6 as "the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned", so the joint right of suit dealt with in this section (sec. 7) will also have to exist at the time specified in sec. 6. So this section does not apply to the case of an after-born reversioner non-existent at the time specified in sec. 6—Indar Pal v. Badri Das, 45 P.L.R. 345, A.I.R. 1943 Lah. 281 (F.B.).

Section 6 contemplates cases where there is only one minor decree-holder or where all the decree-holders are minors.

The second part of section 7 extends the period of limitation to some cases where there is a joint decree in favour of persons some of whom are minors.

Section 7 contemplates a legal capacity to give discharge without the concurrence of the person under disability. The section requires that the co-decreeholder in addition to his capacity as a co-decreeholder must have such a legal capacity as would empower him alone to realize the decretal debt and give a discharge without putting the decree into execution, even if his minor co-decreeholder had been under no disability and had the capacity to give his assent. In other words, the legal capacity must enable him alone to give a discharge, the consent of the other decreeholders not being necessary at all in the exercise of that legal capacity. The law must clothe him with rights to give a discharge for the whole debt irrespective of the consent of the other decreeholders. Familiar instances of such legal capacities are those of a partner and the karta of a joint Hindu family. Their legal capacity to give discharge is derived from the substantive law. They have the power to realize the whole decretal debt amicably and are not required by law to take the consent of the other decreeholders, or the permission of the Court under procedural law before giving a discharge. The legal capacity of a certificated guardian to realize moneys payable to a minor decreeholder under a decree of the Court does not fulfil the test. It is not independent of the rights of a minor decreeholder—See Abed Hossain v. Abdul Rahman, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 631, 158 I.C. 567.

Sections 6 and 7 do not give a fresh period of limitation—Bhagawat Prasad v. Debichand, 20 Pat. 727, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 99, 199 I.C. 408.

87. Joint right:—This section speaks of a "joint" right, and has no application where the plaintiffs are severally entitled to the right. Where several persons belonging to a Dayabhaga family and jointly entitled to a certain property are dispossessed and a suit is brought for the recovery of possession, this section had no application to the case, as each individual plaintiff, according to the Dayabhaga law, is entitled to bring the suit for possession of his individual share—Rakhal Chandra v. Mohendra, 51 I.C. 797 (Cal.). The right to recover the dower of a Mahomedan lady descends to her heirs, but the position of the sons as regards their right to the dower-debt is not that of joint tenants but of tenants-in-common, especially where the right to recover the dower debt is inherited in part by the debtor himself (the lady's husband). This section does not apply to the case—Md. Zahur v. Maimuna, 1929 A.L.J. 284, A.I.R. 1929 All. 142 (144). Moreover, this section contemplates that the joint claimants or creditors are persons whose substantive right is joint, i.e., where more than one individual possesses the same identical substantive right. Persons whose rights are distinct and different but who are permitted to enforce such separate rights by one judicial process to which all are parties, or by a process instituted by one on behalf of all (e.g., persons entitled to compensation under the Fatal Accidents Act) are not comprehended by this section—Johnson v. The Madras Ry. Co., 28 Mad. 479 (485); see also Harihar v. Bholi, 6 C.L.J. 383. Thus, the mere fact that a person suing for himself and praying for one particular remedy (setting aside a sale-deed) could have joined in the same suit another cause of action (claim for possession) vested in another person for whom the former could have acted as next friend, would not bring such a suit within the ambit of section 7, which contemplates the existence of a joint cause of action in support of a single suit—Kandasami v. Irusappa, 41 Mad. 102 (107), 33 M.L.J. 309, 40 I.C. 664.

When a father (of a Mitakshara family) alienates property, every one of the sons has a right to impeach the transfer, if it is not binding on the family. It is an individual right and is enjoined severally by each of the joint members of the family. A suit by one of the several sons would be maintainable without the other sons joining in the suit. Section 7 does not apply as it cannot be said that the right to sue is claimed "jointly" by the several sons, within the meaning of this section. Therefore, one of the sons can bring a suit (under Art. 44) within three years of his attaining majority, to set aside the alienation made by the father although his elder brother had attained majority long ago—Sheonandan v. Tahiran, 52 All. 768, 1930 A.L.J. 852, 130 I.C. 691, A.I.R. 1930 All. 661.

88. Discharge:—This section applies only to cases where the joint debt or claim is of such a character that a discharge can be given by one creditor or claimant without the concurrence of others. This section does not apply where the debt or claim, though joint, is of such a character that a single creditor or claimant cannot give a discharge so as to bind the others. The test to be applied is, whether it is the intention of the parties that each of the persons in whose favour the obligation is created is a creditor for the whole; if so, a payment to one liberates the debtor against all the creditors; if not, each is a creditor for his own share and cannot give a discharge for the whole obligation—Harihar v. Bholi, 6 C.L.J. 383.

Discharge in respect of immoveable property:—There is no authority for the proposition that this section applies only to cases where there is a question of discharge of debts and not to cases involving immoveable property. The word "discharge" is wide enough to include any form of quittance, where the rights and liabilities between two parties are put an end to, and therefore this section applies to cases involving immoveable property—Lal Chand v. Gian Chand, 34 P.L.R. 384, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 479 (480), 142 I.C. 295, following Keval v. Madhu Kala, 46 Bom. 535; Karan Singh v. Mt. Tetar Kuer, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 435 (F.B.); it includes release of rights in respect of immoveable properties and even the right to institute a suit; Ramchandran v. Narayanan, A.I.R. 1950 Tra.-Co. 57 (F.B.). See also Doraisami v. Nondisami, 38 Mad. 118 and Bapu Tatya v. Bala Ravji, 45 Bom. 446, which relate to cases involving immoveable property. But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that the use of the words "a discharge can be given without his concurrence" indicates that this section is intended to apply to cases relating to a debt or claims of a similar kind where the question of discharge may arise. Where an alienation of the family property is made by the father, and after his death a suit is brought to set aside the alienation by one of the sons within 3 years after attaining majority (Art. 44), the suit is within time; it is not barred by reason of the fact that his elder brother (who could have given a discharge) had attained majority more than three years before the suit. Here there is no question of "discharge" and this section has no application —Sheonandan v. Tahiran, 52 All. 768, 1930 A.L.J. 852, 130 I.C. 691, A.I.R. 1930 All. 661.

89. Co-heirs:—In a Muhammadan family, the heirs are entitled to definite shares as tenants in common; and the cause of action of such heirs cannot be said to be a joint one for the purpose of limitation. One co-heir cannot give a valid discharge to bind other co-heirs—Alla Pichai v. Pappathiammal, 36 M.L.J. 184, 51 I.C. 748; Ahinsa Bibi v. Abdul Kader, 25 Mad. 26 (39). Similarly, in a Hindu family, one co-heir cannot give a valid discharge in respect of a debt due to the ancestor without the concurrence of the other co-heirs—Umakant v. Martand, 35 Bom.L.R. 388, 145 I.C. 164, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 245 (247).

Co-partners:—The two illustrations show that one of several co-partners can give a valid discharge without the concurrence of others.

Reversioners:—Section 7 does not apply to the case of reversioners. The whole body of reversioners cannot give a discharge, or, in other words, cannot declare (e.g.), that an alienation is valid. No doubt if they join in or agree to the alienation, it may be evidence of the alienation being for purposes which could bind the reversion, but they as a body cannot declare that an alienation is valid—Neelakantamier v. Chinnu Ammal, 52 M.L.J. 13, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 216, 99 I.C. 668. The nearer reversioner and the remote reversioner cannot be said to have a joint right to sue to set aside an alienation, but they have a right to sue independently of each other, and a discharge cannot be given by the nearer reversioner which would bind the remote reversioner. It is true that a suit by one reversioner is for the benefit of the entire body of reversioners, and it may also be said that a decision in such a suit would bind the entire body; but the converse proposition is not true, i.e., it cannot be said that omission by the nearer reversioner to sue would deprive the right of the remote reversioner to attack the alienation. In such a case, the remote reversioner, if a minor, would get the privilege of sec. 6 and be entitled to bring his suit within three years of his attaining majority—Wali Chand v. Punjab Singh, 132 I.C. 665, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 39 (40).

90. Co-obligees:—In the case of co-obligees of a money-bond, in the absence of anything to the contrary, the presumption of law is that they are entitled to the debt in equal shares as tenants-in-common and the major co-obligee cannot give a discharge on behalf of the minor. Hence, where one of two co-obligees is a minor, limitation will run against the other co-obligee who is not a minor in respect of that portion of the debt to which he is entitled, and this section does not affect the case—Manzur v. Mahmudunnissa, 25 All. 155, following Steeds v. Steeds, (1889) 22 Q.B.D. 537.

91. Co-trustees:—One of several co-trustees can give a valid discharge without the concurrence of others. Therefore, where an adult joint trustee takes no steps to protect the trust and his right to take steps becomes barred, the rights of the other joint trustees, even though minors, become time-barred—Thiyagaraja v. Ratnasabapathi, 34 Mad. 284 (287), 20 M.L.J. 421, 6 I.C. 992. A deed of gift executed by the Karnavan of a Malabar tarward on his own behalf and as guardian of the minor member and by the senior anandivaram, who subsequently became the Karnavan of the tarward cannot be challenged after 12 years from the date of the gift by the minor after attaining majority if the senior anandivaram fails to challenge the same when he becomes the Karnavan, the reason being as Karnavan he is in a position to give a discharge of behalf of the tarward—Devaki v. Kannan, 1941 M.W.N. 632, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 678, 197 I.C. 245.

92. Co-mortgagors:—The right to redeem is an indivisible right, and one mortgagor cannot give a valid discharge without the concurrence of the other co-mortgagors. In 1895, the plaintiff's father mortgaged his property to the defendants. After his death his widow sold the equity of redemption to the mortgagees in 1901. At that time the mortgagor's eldest daughter (plaintiff no. 3) had attained majority, and his son (plaintiff no. 1) did so in 1908. The youngest daughter (plaintiff no 2) attained majority in 1913. These three plaintiffs sued in 1914 to redeem the mortgage and recover possession of the property from the defendants; the lower Court held that the suit was barred as regards plaintiffs nos. 1 and 3 under Art. 144 read with sec. 6. The High Court held that the right to redeem was an indivisible right, and neither of the plaintiffs who attained majority more than three years before the date of the suit was qualified to discharge or redeem the mortgage, and the suit having been brought within three years from the date when the youngest plaintiff attained majority was within time under this section—Gulam Goss v. Shriram Pandurang, 43 Bom. 487 (491), 21 Bom.L.R. 353, 51 I.C. 79; Bai Keval v. Modhu Kala, 46 Bom. 536, 23 Bom.L.R. 1191, 64 I.C. 972, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 319.

Co-mortgagees:—Ordinarily one mortgagee cannot enforce the mortgage for his share of the debt only, except in cases where there has been a severance of the mortgagees' interests effected with the mortgagor's consent (see sec. 67, Transfer of Property Act). Similarly, the discharge by one mortgagee alone is valid only as regards his share of the debt, and does not operate as a discharge as to all—Satish Chandra v. Jiwan Lal, 37 C.W.N. 838 (840), A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 1, 149 I.C. 1062; Rai Satindra Nath v. Rai Jatindra Nath, 31 C.W.N. 374.

93. Managing member of joint family:—The managing member of a joint Hindu Mitakshara family has an implied authority to bind all the members by a discharge given by him without their concurrence, even though they be minors, and therefore time will run against them all—Naurang v. Sheoraja, 30 I.C. 75; Harihar v. Bholi, 6 C.L.J. 383; Huchrao v. Bhimrao, 42 Bom. 277, 20 Bom.L.R. 161; Supdu v. Bhikaram, 52 Bom. 441, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 13; Vigneswara v. Bapayya, 16 Mad. 436; Mahableshwar v. Rama Chandra, 38 Bom. 94, 21 I.C. 350; Duraisami v. Venkatrama, 21 M.L.J. 1088, 12 I.C. 503; Surju Prasad v. Khawahish, 4 All. 512; Doraisami v. Nondisami, 38 Mad. 118 (131); Kuppuswami v. Kamalammal, 43 Mad. 842, 39 M.L.J. 375, 59 I.C. 662; Narasimha v. Krishnachandra, 37 M.L.J. 256, 52 I.C. 725; Anna Pillai, In re, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 914, 165 I.C. 656; Karan Singh v. Mt. Tetar Kuer, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 435 (F.B.). This is so even if the minor is joined as a co-plaintiff in a suit brought by the father as the manager of the joint family to recover a debt due to the joint family. In such a case this section does not apply—Topamal v. Gordhandas, I.L.R. (1941) Kar. 72, A.I.R. 1941 Sind. 166. In some cases it has been held that if a joint Hindu Mitakshara family consists of brothers alone, the elder brother cannot give a valid discharge without the concurrence of the others unless he acts as the manager, i.e., unless he takes active steps in the management of the affairs of the family—Ganga Dayal v. Mani Ram, 31 All. 156, 6 A.L.J. 62, 1 I.C. 824; Rajagopala v. Srinivasa, 51 Mad. 627, 109 I.C. 572, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1055 (1056); Lal Chand v. Gain Chand, 34 P.L.R. 384, 142 I.C. 295, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 479 (480); Shampuri v. Ramchandra, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 385, 88 I.C. 268. Consequently this section has no application to such a case—Suresh v. Bai Ishwari, 40 Bom.L.R. 127, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 206; Shantaya v. Mallappa, 40 Bom.L.R. 1029, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 500, 179 I.C. 33. In such a case though the right to sue becomes barred so far as the elder brother is concerned, it is not so as regards the minor; Bhikarchand v. Lachmandas, 40 Bom.L.R. 521, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 392, 177 I.C. 286. In the case of brothers, who are daughter's sons of the last male Hindu owner the time for a suit on behalf of the daughter's sons to set aside an alienation by the limited owner does not begin to run until all the brothers entitled to sue become majors, it being a case of several persons jointly entitled to institute a suit—Ramayya v. Veerabhadrachari, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 177, 1944 M.W.N. 516, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 512. And this view has been approved of by the Privy Council in Jawahir Singh v. Udai Parkash, 48 All. 152 (P.C.), 30 C.W.N. 698, 24 A.L.J. 97, A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 16, 93 I.C. 216, though the Judicial Committee did not discuss the question of limitation. But several other cases have adopted the view that in a Hindu family consisting of brothers, the elder brother must be deemed to be the managing member of the family, and can give a discharge on behalf of the minor brothers—Doraisami v. Nondisami, 38 Mad. 118 (133), 25 M.L.J. 405, 21 I.C. 410; Anna Pillai, In re, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 914, 165 I.C. 656; Karan Singh v. Mt. Tetar Kuer, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 435 (F.B.); Venkatarama v. Bheema, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 103, 148 I.C. 54; Mahableswar v. Ramachandra, 38 Bom. 94, 15 Bom.L.R. 882, 21 I.C. 350; Bapu Tatya v. Bala Ravji, 45 Bom. 446, 22 Bom.L.R. 1383, (dissenting from 31 All. 156); Kuppusami v. Kamalammal, 43 Mad. 842; Narayya v. Subbamma, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 42, 53 M.L.J. 677; Jagdish Narain v. Bishun, 1941 O.W.N. 1237, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh. 165, 191 I.C. 825; Varada v. Venkatanarasimha, I.L.R. 1940 Mad. 752, 1940 M.W.N. 582, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 530, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 195 where it has been held that it is incumbent on the person to prove facts rebutting the ordinary presumption that the eldest brother has acted as manager and this view seems to have been adopted by

by the Allahabad High Court also in the cases of Rati Ram v. Noidar, 41 All. 435; and Shiamlal v. Moolchand, 87 I.C. 177, A.I.R. 1925 All. 672. The Madras High Court has held in Subba Rao v. Pattabhiramayya, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 200, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 498, 1945 M.W.N. 152 that this section will not operate as a bar if the elder brother does not act as manager during the relevant period.

In a joint Dayabhaga Hindu family of brothers, the eldest brother cannot give a valid discharge to bind his minor younger brothers—Nabin Chandra v. Chandra Madhab, 44 Cal. 1 (9) (P.C.); Jugal Kishori v. Butto Kristo, 55 Cal. 608, 32 C.W.N. 192 (195).

Where, however, the minor is represented by a guardian appointed under the Guardian and Wards Act it cannot be said that the adult member is in a position to act as a managing member and as such he can not give valid discharge under this section—Gourhari v. Sm. Anardia, 67 C.L.J. 88.

Where the father or the managing member of a joint Hindu family is also appointed as the guardian ad litem of the minor members, the powers of the father are controlled by the provisions of O. 32, r. 6, C. P. Code, and he cannot, without leave of the Court, do any act in his capacity as father or managing member of the joint family which he is debarred from doing as guardian ad litem. He, therefore, cannot give a valid discharge on behalf of the minor members of the family without the leave of the Court—Ganesh Ram v. Tulja Ram Row, 26 Mad. 295 (303) (P.C.). Ordinarily, the manager of a joint Hindu family is competent to give a valid discharge by himself without the concurrence of the rest of the family including the minors. If, however, he happens to be the guardian ad litem or the next friend of the minor member of his family, it has been held that he would not be competent to give a valid discharge in respect of the subject matter of the suit or decree wherein he occupies such a position without obtaining the permission of the Court under Or. 32, r. 6, C. P. Code, in respect of such interest—Ganesh Row v. Tuljaram Row, 35 Mad. 295, 19 I.C. 515, 40 I.A. 132 (P.C.). This principle applies even though a decree is obtained by manager in a suit brought in the name of the joint family firm on behalf of himself and as next friend of the minor—Ram Prakash v. Jodh Singh, 44 P.L.R. 368, A.I.R. 1942 Lah. 208, 203 I.C. 295. The same principle was applied to execution petitions in Latchmana v. Subbiah, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 78, 47 Mad. 920; Krishna v. Jayarama, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 595, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 736, 1943 M.W.N. 81; Parameshwari v. Ranjit, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 33, 177 I.C. 713 where it was assumed that the minor was represented by a next friend in the suit; Satyaranjan v. Kalyani, 80 C.L.J. 198, 49 C.W.N. 558, A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 387. But as the provisions of Or. 32, rr. 6 and 7 do not restrict in any way the powers of a father or a manager in a joint Hindu family to receive the amount of a decree and to give a valid discharge so as to bind a minor member of his family also, who is a party to the suit without obtaining the leave of the Court, in cases where such father or managing member is not the next friend of the said minor, and as there is no provision statutory or otherwise, imposing such a restriction, those powers of his are not in any way affected by the mere fact that another person is the next friend of the minor—Administrator-General, Madras v. Radhakrishna, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 434, 70 M.L.J. 700, 161 I.C. 969. This right is derived from the substantive law and is not affected in any way by any of the formalities which may have to be gone through in enforcing it.

Where one of the decree-holders is a minor and the other decree-holders are in a position to give a valid discharge without the concurrence of the minor, the right of all the decree-holders to apply for execution is barred by reason of the provisions of sec. 7. In such a case the fact that another person is appointed as next friend of the minor does preclude the manager of the family to which the minor belongs from giving a valid discharge. Where of five joint-decreeholders one is a minor, and is represented by a co-decreeholder who is a certified guardian, and the application for execution of the decree is filed after three years had expired from the date of the decree, the execution is not barred under the second part of section 7. In such a case the certified guardian cannot receive the decretal money amicably and out of Court and give a discharge which would bind the other decree-holders—Abed Hossain v. Abdur Rahaman, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 631, 158 I.C. 567. And in Gangadeo Singh v. Ramprasad Singh, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 155, relying on Ganga Dayal v. Mani Ram, 31 All. 156 (approved in 48 All. 152 P.C.), it was held that the mere coming of age of one of the brothers in a joint Hindu family does not raise any presumption that he is the manager of the family in the absence of any evidence.

94. Guardian:—The natural or lawful guardian can give a valid discharge on behalf of his ward. Thus, where a rent decree was obtained by an adult plaintiff and three minors who were described in the plaint as suing through the adult plaintiff as their guardian, it was held that the adult plaintiff being entitled to obtain the decretal amount and give a valid discharge, the matter came direcly under this section, and the minor plaintiffs are not protected by the provisions of section 6 and cannot wait till majority—Bholanand v. Padmanand, 6 C.W.N. 348 (351). But a contrary view has been taken by the Patna High Court in Kamaleshwari v. Shivachandra, 26 Pat. 744, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 212 where it has been held that in such cases the natural guardian not being a co-decree-holder cannot give discharge.

But a de facto guardian (e.g., a mother according to the Mahomedan law), is not the lawful guardian of the property of the minor, and cannot therefore give a valid discharge—Amina Bibi v. Bama Shankar, 41 All. 473.

95. Decree-holders:—Section 8 of the Act of 1877 (corresponding to the present section) used the words "joint creditors and claimants" and did not apply at all to joint decree-holders. The reason was, that this section was held to be applicable only to those cases where the act of the joint owner was per se a valid discharge, and since the discharge of a judgment-debtor's liability was always given by the order of the Court and never by the mere act of the decree-holder, this section was not applicable to decree-holders. See Sesha v. Rajagopala, 13 Mad. 236; Narayanan v. Damodaram, 17 Mad. 189; Govindram v. Tatia, 20 Bom. 383; Zamir Hasan v. Sundar, 22 All. 199 (F.B.); Surya Kumar v. Arun Chunder, 28 Cal. 465; Periasami v. Krishna Ayyan, 25 Mad. 431.

Now, by reason of the express words "application for the execution of a decree" the provisions of the present section apply to joint decree-holders, wherever one of them can act in the matter on his own authority without the concurrence of the others. As to the cases when one of the joint decree-holders can give valid discharge See Note. 93.

Where a suit for possession of land was instituted by the widow of a deceased brother and a minor brother, held that the plaintiffs' interests were distinct and separate, although a joint decree was passed, and that the widow was not entitled to give a valid discharge on behalf of the minor, and that limitation did not begin to run against the minor until he attained majority—Chiranji v. Ram Sarup, 1929 A.L.J. 72, A.I.R. 1929 All. 267, 118 I.C. 229.

During the pendency of a suit, the plaintiff (a Mahomedan) died. Succesession certificate was applied for, and was granted to five persons, viz., the widow and four sons of the original plaintiff; of these sons one H was a major and the other three were described as minors represented by their adult brother H as guardian. A bond was taken from H, to secure the interests of the minors. These five persons were brought on the record and a decree was passed in 1913 in their names. Held, that the adult decree-holder H was competent, by reason of this certificate, to give a valid discharge to the judgment-debtors. An application for execution made in 1920 was therefore barred, and limitation was not saved by the fact that some of the decree-holders were still minors—Bilwar Bibi v. Habibar, 51 Cal. 566, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 710, 84 I.C. 204.

Under the Mahomedan law, the uncle is not legal or natural guardian of the property of a minor, and so if a joint decree is passed in favour of an adult uncle and his two minor nephews, the adult decree-holder is not competent to give a valid discharge so as to bind the interests of the minor decree-holders—Court of Wards v. Abrar Ali, 78 I.C. 285, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 681.

96. Receiver:—A receiver was appointed to collect the debts due to a firm, in which some of the partners were minors. One of the assets of the firm was a decree. An application for execution of the decree made more than three years after the appointment of the receiver was held as barred, inasmuch as the receiver was competent to give a valid discharge. When the debts had vested in the receiver, the minority of any of the members would cease to have any importance, for the rights of the minors and the rights of the majors were all absorbed by the receiver—Girija v. Kanhiya, 18 C.W.N. 138 (140), 20 I.C. 701.

97. Tort:—As a general rule, where a joint right to sue arises out of a tort, one or some of the holders of such right cannot give a discharge without the concurrence of the others, unless they are all partners or executors or members of a joint Hindu family, the manager of which has implied authority to bind all the members by his discharge—Harihar v. Bholi, 6 C.L.J. 383. But this rule is not an inflexible one, and where two persons have been damnified by the same tortious act, one is entitled to enforce his claim for damages so far as he has been injuriously affected by the tort, although the claim of the other is barred by limitation—Ibid.

98. Pleading:—If one of several plaintiffs is a minor, and if the provisions of this section apply, it would not be necessary in the plaint to expressly claim exemption from the law of limitation. The fact is patent on the record—Gangadhar v. Khaja Abdul, 11 C.L.J. 34, 14 C.W.N. 128, 2 I.C. 77.

Special exceptions.

8. Nothing in section 6 or in section 7 applies to suits to enforce rights of pre-emption, or shall be deemed to extend, for more than three years from the cessation of the disability or the death of the person affected thereby, the period within which any suit must be instituted or application made.

Illustrations.

(a) A, to whom a right to sue for a ligacy has accrued during his minority, attains majority eleven years after such accruer. A has, under the ordinary law, only one year remaining within which to sue. But under section 6 and this section an extension of two years will be allowed him, making in all a period of three years from the date of his attaining majority, within which he may bring his suit.

(b) A right to sue for an hereditary office accrues to A who at the time is insane. Six years after the accruer A recovers his reason. A has six years, under the ordinary law, from the date when his insanity ceased within which to institute a suit. No extension of time will be given him under section 6 read with this section.

(c) A right to sue as landlord to recover possession from a tenant accrues to A, who is an idiot. A dies three years after the accruer, his idiocy continuing up to the date of his death. A's representative in interest has, under the ordinary law, nine years from the date of A's death within which to bring a suit. Section 6 read with this section does not extend that time, except where the representative is himself under disability when the representation devolves upon him.

Scope of section:—This section is ancillary to and restrictive of the concession granted in sec. 6 and 7, and does not confer any substantial privilege—Rangaswami v. Thangavelu, 42 Mad. 637 (640). This section is in the nature of a proviso to secs. 6 and 7—Janardan v. Nilkantha, A.I.R. 1952 Orissa 31.

Before the Act of 1877 was passed, sec. 7 applied to suits for pre-emption. See Raja Ram v. Bansi, 1 All. 207. This is no longer the law.

99. Extension:—This section must be read together with each article in Schedule I, and when the period prescribed by the latter is three years or more, and expires within three years from the date of attainment of majority, the intention is that the late minor should have the full term of three years; but when the prescribed period is less than three years and the minor gets that period (according to sec. 6) from the date of the majority, the prescribed period is not to be enlarged to three years—Subramanya v. Siva Subramanya, 17 Mad. 316 (323).

The effect of section 6 is that a person under disability may sue after the cessation of the disability within the same period as he would otherwise have been allowed under the Schedule; and the present section adds a proviso that in no case can the period be extended to anything beyond three years from the cessation of the disability—Vasudeva v. Magumi, 24 Mad. 387 (395) (P.C.).

The combined effect of sections 6 and 8 may be stated os follows:—

(1) If the period of limitation prescribed for the suit or application is three years or less, and it expires before the minor attains majority, the minor will get the same period from the date of attaining majority. See Illustration (a) to sec. 6. In such a case there is no occasion for section 8 to apply.

(2) If the period of limitation is more than three years (e.g., if the suit is one for possession, for which the prescribed period is 12 years), and it expires before the minor attains majority, the minor will get only three years from the date of attaining majority, under sec. 8.

(3) If the period of limitation is three years or less, and it expires at some date after the minor attains majority (e.g., if the suit is one falling under Art. 36, the period prescribed for which is two years, and the minor attains majority 1½ years after the accrual of the cause of action) the minor will get the full period prescribed for the suit (i.e., 2 years) from the date of attaining majority.

(4) If the period of limitation prescribed for the suit is more than 3 years, and it ordinarily expires within three years (or less) after the minor attains majority, he will get 3 years from the date of majority. See Illustration (a) to sec. 8.

(5) If the period of limitation prescribed for the suit is more than three years (e.g., 12 years), and the period ordinarily expires on a date which is more than three years from the date of attainment of majority (e.g., if the right to sue accrues in 1900, and the minor attains majority in 1907, so that ordinarily the period will expire 5 years after the attainment of majority by the minor), the minor will get the remaining period (i.e., 5 years) from the date of majority, but no further extension of time (viz., 12 years from the date of majority) will be allowed under sec. 6.

because in ordinary course he is getting more than three years. Cf. Illustration (b) to sec. 8.

Under this section the period can be extended upto an extent of three years if under the ordinary law out of the period of limitation prescribed, there remains a period of less than three years for bringing the suit. But if the period remaining is more than three years, no extension can be gronted—Lok Nath v. Rohlu, A.I.R. 1951 J. and K. 25.

Where the period prescribed for a suit expires three years after the majority of the minor, he is not entitled to any extension of time under the combined effect of sec. 6 and this section—Bibhuti v. Girish, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 191. But where the period prescribed by Schedule 1 expires more than three years after the termination of the disability, then upon the date on which the limitation prescribed by that Schedule expires, there is no question of any extension of time. This section has no application to such a case as this section is not intended to curtail the period of limitation—Chebedilal v. Gopinath, A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 351.

The extended period of three years after attaining majority can only be claimed by a person entitled to institute the suit at the time from which the period of limitation is to be reckoned. A person who was not in existence at that time does not come within this description and therefore is not entitled to the three years' extension. Thus, in a suit brought to contest an alienation of joint family property, it is from the date of alienation that the period of limitation is to be reckoned, and a coparcener born after the date of alienation cannot claim to bring a suit within three years after mojority; as he was not in existence at the date of alienation, he cannot claim the benefit of this section—Ranodip v. Parameshwar, 47 All. 165 (P.C.), 29 C.W.N. 666, A.I.R. 1925 P.C. 33, 86 I.C. 240. This subject has been more fully discussed in Note 78 under section 6, ante. But a son in mother's womb is entitled to the benefit of this section as for the purposes of this section he is regarded as a "person"—Basayya v. Baslingayya, 49 Bom.L.R. 175, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 150. The law nowhere provides that the period spent by a child in womb is not to be regarded as a period of minority. So a child in womb can take advantage of the provisions of sec. 6 and this section—Audesh v. Rajeshwari, A.I.R. 1951 All. 630.

According to this section a minor can not have more than three years after attaining majority for filing a suit for possession in cases where the period of limitation has already expired during his minority. The combined effect of secs. 6 and 8 is that the plaintiff is not entitled to claim any period longer than twelve years after the possession of the defendant becomes adverse—Janardan v. Nilkantha, A.I.R. 1952 Orissa. 31.

If a minor acquired a cause of action to sue for possession of property (Art. 142), and after attaining majority died within the three years allowed by this section, his legal representative can institute a suit at any time within the 3 years' period which had already commenced within the lifetime of the deceased, although more than twelve years have elapsed from the accrual of the cause of action—Arjun v. Ramabai, 40 Bom. 564 (567), 18 Bom.L.R. 579, 37 I.C. 221. Cf. Sub-section (3) of section 6, which provides for an extension of time in favour of the legal representative of a person having a cause of action dying under disability.

Computation of three years:—The three-year period mentioned in this section must be counted, not from the date of attainment of majority, but from the date of the cessation of minority—Batuk v. Rudra, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 206.

9. Where once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability to sue stops it:

Continuous running of time.

Provided that, where letters of administration to the estate of a creditor have been granted to his debtor, the running of the time prescribed for a suit to recover the debt shall be suspended while the administration continues.

100. Principle:—The rule of this section has been taken from the English Law. "Time when once it has commenced to run in any case will not cease to do so by reason of any subsequent event. Generally when any of the statutes of limitation have begun to run, no subsequent disability will stop this running"—Banning on Limitation (3rd Edn.) pp. 7-8. " When the time has once begun to run, it will continue to do so even should subsequent events occur which render it an impossibility that an action should be brought."—Darby and Bosanquet on Limitation (2nd Edn.), page 25.

Parties to a contract may agree to postpone the accrual of any rights under it, but they cannot postpone the period of limitation in case a suit should have to be filed for its breach; since under section 9, it is clear that when once limitation begins to run, it cannot be stopped by anything that happens subsequently. Therefore, where the period had commenced to run, a reference to arbitration would not prevent the operation of the law of limitation, and the period between the date of agreement to refer to arbitration and the date when the arbitration proceeding terminated should not be excluded from computation—Ramamurthi v. Gopayya, 40 Mad. 701 (705), 31 M.L.J. 231, 35 I.C. 575; Sheikh Abdur Rahim v. Barira, 2 P.L.T. 556, 61 I.C. 807, 6 P.L.J. 273 (283). On the principle of this section it has been held that limitation having once commenced to run in the lifetime of a full owner cannot be taken to be suspended if he dies and is succeeded by a limited owner—Batisa Kuer v. Raja Ram, 5 Pat. 441, 7 P.L.T. 393, 92 I.C. 177, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 192. When the time has once commenced to run against the absolute owner, no subsequent alteration in the title will postpone the bar—Lilabati v. Bishun, 6 C.L.J. 621.

Scope of section:—The section applies not only to suits but to applications as well. The words 'to sue' should be taken as including within it 'to apply in execution'—Muthu Korakki v. Madar Ammal, 43 Mad. 185 (207), 38 M.L.J. 1 (F.B.).

Section 9 contemplates cases where the cause of action continues to exist. It cannot apply to cases where the cause of action is cancelled by reason of subsequent events—Jateendra Chandra v. Rebateemohan, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 333 (335), 62 Cal. 66, 158 I.C. 567; Prabhakar v. Chandra Kant, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 422, 1943 N.L.J. 159, A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 178. The principle laid down in this section is subject to certain exceptions. Even where time has begun to run, it can be stopped provided the cause of action which has given the right to sue is discharged or in any way disappears—Sri Niwas v. Baleswar, A.I.R. 1950 All. 526. The period of limitation can be extended in three classes of cases viz., (1) where injustice has been caused by an act of Court, (2) where the cause of action was satisfied and (3) where the cause of action was cancelled —Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Naba Kumar, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 298.

100A. When time runs:—Time runs when the cause of action accrues, and the cause of action accrues when there is in existence a person who can sue and another who can be sued, and when all the facts have happened which are material to be proved to entitle the plaintiff to succeed—Coburn v. Colledge, [1897] 1 Q.B. 702; Gelmani v. Morriggia, [1913] 2 K.B. 549. The cause of action arises when and only when the aggrieved party has the right to apply to the proper tribunals for relief—Whalley v. Whalley, (1816) 1 M.R. 436. It is only when the cause of action is complete that the bar of time begins to run; for example, if a previous demand is required before the complete right to sue arises, the time will only run as from the date of demand—Tidd v. Overrell, [1893] 3 Ch. 184. (Compare Arts. 60, 88, 89). Therefore, if the plaintiff commences his action before his right of action is complete, he must inevitably fail in the action, even though he should be able to acquire and actually acquire the oustanding right during the currency of the action—Godfrey v. Tucker, (1863) 33 Beav. 280. For example, a remainderman, unless he first gets in the prior subsisting life-estate, will lose his action for a partition, although he should have got in the life-estate during the currency of the action —Evans v. Bagshaw, (1870) L.R. 8 Eq. 469; L.R. 5 Ch. App. 240. The Statute of limitation does not attach to a claim for which there is as yet no right of action and does not run against a right for which there is no corresponding remedy or for which judgment cannot be obtained. Consequently the true test to determine when a cause of action has accrued is to ascertain the time when the plaintiff could have first maintained his action to a successful result—Angell on Limitations, sec. 42; Story's Equity Jurisprudence, sec. 1521-a. Whenever proceedings are being conducted between the parties bona fide in order to have their mutual rights and obligations in respect of a matter finally settled, the cause of action for an application or for a suit, the relief claimable wherein follows naturally on the result of such proceedings, should be held to arise only on the date when those proceedings finally settle such rights and liabilities—per Sadasiva Ayyar J. in Muthu Korakki v. Madar Ammal, 43 Mad. 185 (F.B.). An useful analogy is furnished by cases where it has been ruled that time cannot be held to run against a person who is not in a position to sue, for such a person has no enforceable cause of action which is extinguished by lapse of time; thus, adverse possession against a tenant does not operate against the landlord during the continuance of the tenancy—Note 613 under Article 144; so also, adverse possession against a mortgagor does not operate against a simple mrtgagee who is not entitled to immediate possession—Pryyasakhi v. Manbodh, 44 Cal. 425; see Note 616 under Article 144.

In a case of the Calcutta High Court, M. N. Mukherji, J., has remarked that the statement that the cause of action accrues only when the plaintiff could have mainained his action to a successful result, should be accepted with caution. His Lordship observes: "A careful study of the third column of the schedule reveals an outstanding fact which cannot be ignored, namely that the starting point of limitation does not always synchronise with the cause of action; in many cases it does, but in others it dates from some specified events which are either anterior or posterior to the accrual of the cause of action.....In the case of such of the articles of the Limitation Act in which the starting point of time synchronises with the cause of action, I am prepared to hold that the test is to ascertain the time when the plaintiff could have mainained his action to a successful issue. If, in such a case, at the time when the cause of action arises, there is no person capable of suing upon it, the statute does not run. Similarly, it is necessary that there shall be a person to be sued, and it is also necessary that the cause of action should be completed, that is, all the facts must have happened which are material to be proved in order to entitle the plaintiff to succeed.'—Sarat Kamini v. Nagendra, 29 C.W.N. 973, 43 C.L.J. 155, 89 I.C. 1000, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 65.

101. Disability, Inability:—Disability is want of legal qualification to act; inability is want of physical power to act—Purno v. Sassoon, 25 Cal. 496 (504) (F.B.);

Deutsch Asiatische Bank v. Hira Lal, 47 I.C. 122 (123). For the purpose of limitation, a disability is the state of being a minor, insane or an idiot; whereas illness, poverty etc., are instances of inability.

The disability or inability contemplated by sec. 9 is confined to such cases as are mentioned in the Act itself, and new exemptions cannot be recognised—Sarat Kamini v. Nagendra, 29 C.W.N. 973, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 65 (67), 89 I.C. 1000.

The Legislature has caused some confusion in introducing the word 'inability' into this section, there being no 'inability' mentioned in any portion of the Act. Consequently the inability referred to here must be held to be a personal inability affecting the plaintiff himself and having reference to his condition, state or position, and not to the circumstances of the person against whom he is suing. The fact that the plaintiff was unable to sue the defendant owing to the latter's absence from British India would not constitute an 'inability' under this section so as make the period of limitation run continuously. In such a case the rule of section 13 will apply and the period of defendant's absence from British India will be excluded from computation. This section does not in any way qualify section 13—Hanmatram v. Bowles, 8 Bom. 561 (dissenting from Narronji v. Mugniram, 6 Bom. 103); Beake v. Davis, 4 All. 530. The defendant's absence from British India does not amount to inability to sue—Jivraj v. Babaji, 29 Bom. 68 (70).

In cases where the plaintiff is unable to sue because of the non-appointment of a personal representative to a deceased debtor in whose life-time the period has commenced to run but who has died subsequently, the statute will continue to run—Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 M. & W. 42; Boatwright v. Boatwright, L.R. 17 Eq. 71.

This section contemplates a case of subsequent and not of initial disability, that is, it contemplates those cases where the disability occurred after the accrual of the cause of action; whereas cases of initial disability have been provided for by section 6. Thus, a decree-holder after making various applications for execution of a decree, each of which was within time, died. His son, a minor, made an application for execution of the decree within three years after his father's death but more than three years after the date of the deceased father's last application. It was held that this section applied and not section 6, and the minor's application for execution was time-barred, it being a case not of initial but of subsequent disability—Jivraj v. Babaji, 29 Bom. 68; Kalka Bakhsh v. Ram Charan, 40 All. 630 (F.B.), 16 A.L.J. 633, 46 I.C. 584. Where the father of a joint Hindu family alienated the family property, time began to run from the date of the alienation or from the date of the alienee's taking possession (Art. 126), and a son who was born after the date of alienation could not get an extension of time under sec. 6. Section 9 applied, and the subsequent birth and minority of the after-born son could not stop the running of time—Shahamad v Salabat, 8 Lah. 19, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 97, 97 I.C. 435. See also Dhanraj v. Ram Naresh, A.I.R. 1924 All. 912; Sankat Narayan v. Ram Bharos, A.I.R. 1924 All. 677 and other cases cited in Note 78 under sec. 6. Where a decree-holder died, leaving a minor son who, on attaining his majority nine years after the date of the decree, applied for execution, it was held that the application was barred, as time had begun to run in the original decree-holder's life-time—Bhagat v. Ramnath, 27 All. 704; Bhagwant Ramchandra v. Kaji Mahamad, 36 Bom. 498; Nusheeram v. Shushee, 5 W.R. 169; Vira v. Muruga, 2 M.H.C.R. 340.

But where the original decree-holder who obtained a decree in May 1886, died in June 1888, leaving three minor sons, and on 30th April 1889 the sons, still minors, made an application for execution, but no further proceedings were taken till 1st October 1904 when another application was made, held that the present application was within time on the ground that although limitation had commenced to run against the father from May 1886, the application made by the minors on the 30th of April 1889 was a step-in-aid of execution, and time began to run anew from that date and then minority suspended it—Sri Ram v. Het Ram, 29 All. 279. Cf. Lalit Mohun v. Janoky, 20 Cal. 714 (716). Similarly, where an acknowledgment of liability of a mortgage was made by the mortgagor at a time when the original mortgagee was dead and his son was a minor, a new period of limitation came into existence from the date of acknowledgement, under sec. 19. Section 9 could not apply because "the time which has once begun to run" had come to an end. The minor got a new period of limitation from the date of acknowledgment, and by virtue of sec. 6 time ran from the date of his attainment of majority—Chandrabhan v. Rajkumar, 54 All. 1019, 1932 A.L.J. 1012, A.I.R. 1933 All. 100 (101), 142 I.C. 794; Venkataramayyar v. Kothandaramayyar, 13 Mad. 135; Gangadhar v. Dolgovinda, A.I.R 1956 Orissa 193.

The insanity of the decree-holder, which began after the passing of the decree, did not save limitation which had already commenced to run from the date of the decree —Aya Singh v. Gurdyal, 72 P.L.R. 1906. So also where a judgment debtor is adjudicated an insolvent after passing of the decree the time for applying for execution is not suspended—Nowbab v. Fateh, 41 P.L.R. 799, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 270.

An unregistered instalment bond was executed in favour of a Hindu widow. It contained a stipulation that the whole amount would be recoverable in default of payment of two consecutive instalments. Default was made in payment of two instalments in 1899. Shortly after the default, the widow adopted the plaintiff, who was then a minor. In 1908 within three years of attaining majority but nine years after default he sued on the bond but expressly relinquished the amount due in respect of the first two instalments which had fallen due prior to his adoption, on the ground that he had waived payment of the same. On this footing he alleged that the cause of action had arisen during his minority and that therefore the claim for the remaining instalments was not barred. It was held that mere abstinence from suing did not amount to waiver; that limitation had begun to run from the default in 1899, and no subsequent disability, viz., the minority of the plaintiff, could prevent if from running. The suit was barred by the three years' rule under Article 75—Girindra Mohan v. Khir Narayan, 36 Cal. 394. A suit by a shebait in 1913 to recover possession of a debuttor property held by the defendant under a mokurari lease granted by a previous shebait in 1876 is barred by Article 134, as brought more than 12 years after the date of the lease. The representation of an idol by shebaits is a continuing representation, and limitation runs against the idol continuously and not against each shebait individually if and when he succeeds to the shebaitship. Consequently the fact that the succeeding shebait was a minor would not stop the running of time, by virtue of the provisions of this section—Mammatha v. Annada, 27 C.L.J. 201, 44 I.C. 567. (See Art. 134).

The principle of this section applies to a suit by the reversioners of an adopted son for recovery of possession of properties alienated by the adoptive mother during the minority of the adopted son, who on attaining majority gave a receipt to the adoptive mother indicating his consent to the alienation. The reason is that time began to run against the adopted son in his life-time and his title expired by reason of adverse possession—Gopal Das v. Sri Thakurji, I.L.R. (1943) Kar. (P.C.) 69, 47 C.W.N. 607, 1943 A.L.J. 292, 46 Bom.L.R. 220, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 51, A.I.R. 1943 P.C. 83.

The plaintiffs, a German Bank, were the endorsees of certain promissory notes drawn by the defendants, dated June 1914. On the 4th August, 1914, war was declared with Germany, and the plaintiffs were debarred from bringing any action to enforce their claim. On 1st November, 1915, the plaintiffs obtained licence from Government to bring an action, and on 9th May 1918 the present suit was filed. The plaintiffs claimed that the period between the 4th August 1914 and 1st November 1915 should be deducted from computation, and they urged that their suit was within time. It was held that the suit was barred. Under this section, once time has begun to run, no subsequent disability or inability in the shape of suspension of right to sue stops it, and the plaintiffs are not entitled to exclude the period of such suspension—Deutsch Asiatische Bank v. Hira Lal, 47 I.C. 122 (123); on appeal, 46 Cal. 526, 23 C.W.N. 157, 47 I.C. 398. And so in a case that occurred during the time of the English Civil War, the plaintiff in answer to a plea of limitation replied that a Civil War had broken out and the Government was usurped by certain traitors and rebels which hindered the course of justice and by which the Courts were shut up, and that within six years after the war ended he commenced his action and yet his replication was held to be ill —Prideaux v. Webber, (1661) 1 Lev. 31: 83 E.R. 282. In the above Calcutta case, the plaintiffs showed utter want of diligence, as they had ample time to sue within the period of limitation after they obtained permission to sue. Their suit was therefore, rightly dismissed.

Voluntary and involuntary disabilities:—There is no distinction between voluntary and involuntary (e.g., caused by minority) disabilities—Khanjan v. Bhikan, 18 I.C. 306 (Oudh). As the rule stands, it appears to apply strictly to every case of subsequent disability or inability excepting those cases that may be specially exempted from the operation of this rule. Even circumstances beyond the control of the plaintiff have been held not to relax the rigour of the rule in favour of the plaintiff —Ibid. In Doe d Duroure v. Jones, (1791) 4 T.R. 300, 2 R.R. 390, Lord Kenyon observed that it was mischievous to make any refined distinction between voluntary and involuntary disabilities.

102. Suspension and revival of cause of action:—Ordinarily, time begins to run from the earliest time at which an action can be brought; and if the right has been suspended, there may be a revival of the right to sue when a previous satisfaction of the claim is nullified with the result that the right to sue which had been suspended is re-animated—Dwijendra v. Jogesh Chandra, 39 C.L.J. 40, 79 I.C. 520, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 600. Thus, certain disputes between a principal and an agent were referred to arbitration, and under the award thereon certain moneys were paid by the agent in satisfaction of the claim. The agent afterwards sued to set aside the proceedings on the ground that they were brought about by coercion, and succeeded in getting back the amount paid. The principal subsequently sued the agent to enforce the original liability to account. The defendant pleaded inter alia that the suit was barred. Held that the setting aside of the satisfaction in the former proceedings gave rise to a fresh cause of action and that the suit was therefore in time—Muthuveerappa v. Adaikeppa, 43 Mad. 845, 39 M.L.J. 312, 59 I.C. 472. Plaintiff raised the money due to him from the defendant on an award which had merged in a decree of Court. Subsequently the award was set aside and the plaintiff was directed to refund the money realised by him. In a suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the amount it was held that when the plaintiff's original claim was satisfied in execution, limitation ceased running against him. On the annulment of that satisfaction a fresh cause of action arose and the suit was within time—Kartar Singh v. Bhagat Singh, 2 Lah. 320, 64 I.C. 454. A sale under the Patni Regulation having been set aside and the partnidars restored to possession, the Zemindar sued them to recover the arrears of rent which had accrued before and during the time they were out of possession; the tenants contended that the claim was barred because the suit had not been brought within three years from the date when each instalment of rent fell due; but the Judicial Committee overruled the contention and held that the cause of action accrued upon the reversal of the auction sale and the consequent revival of the obligation to pay the rent—Surnomoyee v. Shooshee Mookhee, (1868) 12 M.I.A. 244 (P.C.). A debtor agreed to convey certain property to his creditor and to set off the debt against part of the consideration for the conveyance. A sale-deed was executed but a dispute arose as to whether it had been executed in accordance with the contract. Litigation was commenced by the debtor to enforce the agreement, but he was unsuccessful. The creditor then sued to recover the debt and was met with the plea of limitation. The Judicial Committee held that the time began to run only when the agreement became wholly ineffectual and that from that date a fresh obligation was imposed upon the debtor to pay his debt—Bassu Koer v. Dhum Singh, 11 All. 47 (P.C.). See also Nrityamani v. Lakhan Chandra, 43 Cal. 660 (P.C.), cited in Note 156 under sec. 14; and Prannath v. Rookea Begum, 7 M.I.A. 323 (P.C.); Hem Chandra v. Kali Prasanna, 30 Cal. 1033 (P.C.).

But in the following cases the Judicial Committee and the Indian High Courts have strictly applied the principle of sec. 9 that when once time has begun to run, no subsequent liability to sue stops it—Huro Pershad v. Gopal Das, 9 Cal. 255 (P.C.); Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 35 All. 227 (P.C.); Juscurn v. Pirthi Chand, 46 Cal. 670 (P.C.); Hukum Chand v. Shahab Din, 4 Lah. 90, 71 I.C. 495. Thus, when limitation for a suit for redemption once began to run it would not be suspended for the period during which a fusion of the interests of the mortgagor and the mortgagee took place—Soni Ram v. Kanhaya Lal, 35 All. 227 (237) (P.C.). So also, where a mortgagee is entitled to possession immediately, time begins to run from the date of the mortgage (Art. 135) and the mere fact that the possession of the mortgaged property was subsequently taken by a prior mortgagee does not prevent limitation from running—Hukum Chand v. Shahad Din, supra.

The Indian Limitation Act is undoubtedly an exhaustive Code governing the law of limtaton in India. The cases in which the running of limitation can be suspended are contained in the sections of the Act. It would be dangerous to lay down generally that there is some principle outside the Limitation Act under which limitation can be suspended. We are therefore unable to accept any universal principle of suspension of limitation outside the Limitation Act—Ram Charan v. Goga, 49 All. 565, 102 I.C. 96, A.I.R. 1927 All. 446. There can be no suspension of time which has once begun to run except under the heads of deduction specifically recognised and provided for by the statute—Ramakrishna v. Srinivasalu, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 552. There is nothing in the Limitation Act which would jdstify the Court in holding that once the period of limitation had begun to run it could be suspended. If the Courts were to hold that by some reason the period of limitation was suspended they would be deciding contrary to the express enactment of sec. 9—Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 35 All. 227 (P.C.), 19 I.C. 291. The Judicial Committee have laid down that there can be no saving of limitation apart from the provisions of the Limitation Act. The Judicial Committee have drawn attention to secs. 9 and 14 and have held that exemptions not covered by these and other sections should not be imported by Courts to relieve a party from the bar of limitation—Muthu Korakki v. Madar Ammal, 43 Mad. 185 (F.B.) (per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.). In applying the principles of limitation, the Indian Courts are not permitted to travel beyond the provisions embodied in the Limitation Act, and apart from the provisions of that Act there is no principle which can legitimately be invoked to add to or supplement its provisions—Sarat Kamini v. Nagendra, 29 C.W.N. 973, 89 I.C. 1000, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 65; Satyanarayana v. Seethayya, 50 Mad. 417, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 597, 100 I.C. 766. And so, in computing the period of limitation for a suit against a Ruling Chief (e.g., the Gaekwar of Baroda) the plaintiff is not entitled to a deduction of the time spent by him in obtaining the Government of India's consent under sec. 86, C. P. Code, as secs. 4 to 25 contain no statutory provision enabling the plaintiff to deduct that time—Sayaji Rao, Gaekwar of Baroda v. Madhavrao, 53 Bom. 12, 30 Bom.L.R. 1463, 115 I.C. 369, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 14 (19, 23).

For a full discussion on this subject, see the judgments of Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, J. in Dwijendra Narain v. Jogesh Chandra, 39 C.L.J. 40, 79 I.C. 520, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 600. and of M. N. Mukherji, J. in Sarat Kamini v. Nagendra Nath, 29 C.W.N. 973, 43 C.L.J. 155, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 65.

103. Proviso:—The principle of the proviso is this: "When after the Statute has commenced to run, the right to sue and the right to be sued meet by act of law (and unite) in the same person, the further running of the Statute will be suspended during the period of the union of the two rights"—Seagram v. Knight, (1867) 36 L.J. Ch. 918; Burdick v. Garrick, (1871) L.R. 5 Ch. App. 233. "Where the hand to pay and receive is practically the same a constructive payment is presumed." See Topham v. Booth, 25 Ch. D. 607; In re Dixon, 2 Ch. 561. The general rule that when time has once begun to run, nothing happening subsequently will prevent it from continuing to run, is inapplicable where the debtor takes out administration to the estate of the creditor, for in such a case there is a suspension of the remedy—Seagram v. Knight, supra. Where the person liable for the payment of a legacy and the person entitled to receive it are the same, no question of limitation under the Statute can arise—Binns v. Nichols (1866) L.R. 2 Eq. 256; Narrondas v. Narrondas, 31 Bom. 418 (429). Thus, where a debtor was appointed one of several executors but he did not prove the will until his debt was barred by time, and then he subsequently proved the will, the debt was held to be thereby revived and the debtor-executor was ordered to account for the debt with interest—Ingle v. Richards, (1860) 20 Beav. 366.

This proviso applies only to an administrator under the grant of letters, where he is a detbtor of the deceased—Damodar v. Dayal, 11 Bom.L.R. 1187, 4 I.C. 283. It cannot be extended to a case where the rights of the mortgagor and the mortgagee vest in the same person. In such a case, limitation would not be suspended. Thus, a usufructuary mortgage was executed in 1842 in favour of K. The mortgagee died in 1898, but between 1883 and 1898 one M had by assignment acquired the rights of the mortgagor as also the mortgagee's rights and was in possession of the estate. In 1904 the heirs of K sued for and obtained possession of the estate from M (treating him as a trespasser) and in 1907, M's son S sued to redeem the property from the heirs of K. Held that the suit was barred by Article 148. Limitation for the suit for redemption had begun to run from 1842, and it was not suspended between 1883 and 1898 owing to the fusion of the mortgagor's and mortgagee's interests in M during that period. The proviso to section 9 did not apply to the case—Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 35 All. 227 (237) (P.C.), 19 I.C. 291, 17 C.W.N. 605.

Suits against express trustees and their representatives.

10. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, no suit against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for any specific purpose, or against his legal representatives or assigns (not being assigns for valuable consideration), for the purpose of following in his or their hands such property, or the proceeds thereof, or for an account of such property or proceeds, shall be barred by any length of time.

For the purposes of this section any property comprised in a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment shall be deemed to be property vested in trust for a specific purpose, and the manager of any such property shall be deemed to be the trustee thereof.

The 2nd paragraph is new and was inserted by sec. 2 of the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act, 1929 (1 of 1929).

103A. The rule of this section follows the English law. Section 25 (2) of the English Judicature Act, 1873 (36 and 37 Vict., C. 66) lays down:—"No claim of a cestui que trust against his trustee for any property held on an express trust, or in respect of any breach of such trust, shall be held to be barred by any Statute of Limitation." It is well settled, both as regards real estate and personal estate that time does not in equity bar the remedy of the beneficiary against the trustee—Wederburn v. Wederburn, (1838) 4 My. & Cr. 41; Bridgman v. Gill, (1857) 24 Beav. 302. If there is created in express terms, whether written or verbal, a trust, and a person is in terms nominated to be the trustee of that trust, a Court of equity, upon proof of such facts, will not allow him to vouch a Statute of Limitation against a breach of that trust—Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q.B. 390.

The words of this section mean that when a trust has been created expressly for some specific purpose or object, and property has become vested in a trustee upon such trust, the person who is beneficially interested in that trust may bring a suit against such trustee to enforce that trust at any distance of time without being barred by the law of limitation—Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal. 455 (465). As a result of this section, an apparently fradulent trustee who has put trust-money into his own pocket cannot escape by reason of lapse of time—Chintaman v. Khanderao, 52 Bom. 184, 30 Bom.L.R. 45, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 58.

104. Who is not a trustee:—All persons holding a fiduciary relation are not necessarily trustees within the meaning of this section. Thus, the position of agents, managers, factors and benamidars may be and generally is a fiduciary one, but none of them are necessarily trustees—Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal. 455 (469); Kishen Dei v. Ram Chand, 26 P.L.R. 288, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 773.

A mortgagee in possession after the mortgage has been satisfied is not a trustee for the mortgagor—Babu Lal Dass v. Jamal, 9 W.R. 187. See sec. 2 (11). A suit against such mortgagee is governed by Art 105.

The position of the sons who manage the estate of a deceased Mahomedan is not, by reason of such management, that of trustees as regards the daughters—Mahomed Abdul v. Amtal Karim, 16 Cal. 161 (169) (P.C.).

A Mahomedan husband is not a trustee for his wife in respect of her dower—Mir Mohar v. Anani, 2 B.L.R., A.C. 306.

A person with whom money is kept in deposit is not a trustee—Mukhta v. Gajraj, 1 A.L.J. 422; Dalipa v. Ladhu, 47 I.C. 592, 1919 P.R. 4; Kalyan Mal v. Kishen Chand, 41 All. 643 (645). A mere deposit of moveables or money by A with B would not make B the trustee of A on an express trust, so as to attract the provisions of this section. A fortiori, where the person depositing the money received back out of his deposit sums of money whenever required by him for his own purposes, held that there was no trust of any specific sum for any specific purpose, but it was only the ordinary case of a customer who deposited property with a banker and was drawing whatever he wanted for his use from time to time—Rajammal v. Lakshmammal, 1914

M.W.N. 606, 22 I.C. 936 (939). A banker and customer do not stand in the relation of trustee and cestui que trust but only for depositee and depositor. Article 60 expressly provides for the case—Ishur Chunder v. Jibun, 16 Cal. 25 (31).

A depository, or banker, or agent, or a debtor to whom a loan is made and who promises to return the loan, is not an express trustee within the meaning of this section —Rajammal v. Lakshmammal, 1914 M.W.N. 606, 22 I.C. 936 (939). An agent is not a trustee in relation to his principal, and a suit by a principal against an agent for accounts falls under Art. 89 and not under this section—Bhaiyalal v. Rai Beharilal, 81 I.C. 505, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 115 (117).

A benamidar is not a trustee—Wooma v. Dwarkanath, 11 W.R. 72; Krishna Pattar v. Lakshmi, 45 Mad. 415; see sec. 2 (11).

A surviving partner is not a trustee for the representative of the deceased partner —Knox v. Gye, L.R. 5 H.L. 656 (676).

The directors of a company are not trustees; see Note 108 below.

A company does not, by reason of the mere declaration of the dividend become a a trustee of the dividend for the share-holders. Banning, p. 35.

Where a mortgagee in contravention of the terms of O. 34, rule 14 of the C. P. Code has attached the mortgaged property and brought it up to sale and purchased it himself, he does not become a trustee for the mortgagor in respect of the latter's equity of redemption so as to enable the latter to bring a suit for redemption at any length of time—Uttam Chandra v. Raj Krishna, 47 Cal. 377 (414) (F.B.), 24 C.W.N. 299.

Person merely asked to manage and control minor's business is not a trustee—Khem Chand v. Girdhari, I.L.R. (1947) Kar. 109, A.I.R. 1947 Sind 187; Kamiruddin v. Badrunnissa, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 90, 186 I.C. 859. (Case of transferee to manage with power of sale with consent of owner). So also a mere custodian or manager of property handed over by the legal or de facto manager is not a 'manager' within the meaning of the section—Mahadeoji v. Baldeo, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 92, 1941 N.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 181.

If one heir of a deceased person recovers the debt due to the deceased on behalf of all the other heirs, he does not thereby become a trustee for the others. A suit brought against him by the other heirs for their share of money is governed by Art. 62 and not by this section—Amina v. Najmunnissa, 37 All. 233 (240), 13 A.L.J. 255, 27 I.C. 712. Similarly, if after the partition of the family, one of the members collects any money beloging to all the members, he is not a trustee for the others in respect of the money, and a suit brought by the other members for their share of the money falls under Art. 62—Banoo v. Doona, 24 Cal. 309 (315); Arunachala v. Ramasamya, 6 Mad. 402 (403). So also receipt of sale proceeds of a property for distribution to the heirs of the owner does not constitute an express trust—Hussain v. Baquir, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 422, 1945 M.W.N. 671, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 116.

105. Who is a trustee:—The mohant of a mutt is a trustee of the mutt properties—Deivasikamani v. Valliammal, 37 M.L.J. 231, 52 I.C. 914; Ram Perkash v. Anand, 43 Cal. 707 (P.C.); Basudeo v. Mohant Jugal Kishore, 22 C.W.N. 841 (P.C.); Baluswami v. Venkataswami, 40 Mad. 745. A Dharmakarata or manager of a temple is a trustee—Sethu v. Subramanya, 11 Mad. 274 (277). But a contrary view has been taken by the same High Court in Chidambara v. Chidambaram, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 284, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 339, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 691 where it has been held that this section at it stood before the amendment in 1929 did not apply to heads of mutts and temple. In Baidyanathji v. Urmila, 21 Pat. 95, I.L.R. (1941) Kar. (P.C.) 176, 46 C.W.N. 377, 44 Bom.L.R. 183, 1942 A.L.J. 53, A.I.R. 1941 P.C. 130, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 8 (P.C.) their Lordships of the Judicial Committe have held that although as a general rule the high priest of a temple or a person in like position is only manager and custodian of the idol or the institution and not a trustee as the property is not conveyed to or vested in him, yet if he is appointed under a decree of Court under sec. 539 of the C. P. Code, 1882 (sec. 92 of the present Code) as a "trustee for all the properties moveable and immovable devoted to the service" of the temple God, this section will apply. Their Lordships overruled the judgment of the High Court—Urmilla v. Baidyanathji, 19 Pat.L.T. 367, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 273. See the new second para, and the cases cited under heading "Religious Endowment" in Note 108A below.

A suit for the recovery of balance of money advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant who was his servant for the purpose of erecting buildings, the money having been entrusted to the defendant to be accounted for by him, will not be barred by limitation, for the matter was of the nature of a trust—Narain Dass v. Maharaja Mahtab Chunder, 10 W.R. 174. So also this section applies where money is entrusted for the specific purpose of investment—Kalipada v. Kalikumar, 42 C.W.N. 381 (entrustment by verbal agreement). Where property is vested in a person partly for charitable purpose and partly for the benefit of others, and he is bound to use it for such purposes and not for his own advantage, he is a trustee—Syud Shah Alleh v. Bibee Nuseebun, 21 W.R. 415 (416). Where immoveable property was given possession of to the defendant to sell the crops, to pay the Government dues and to account for the profits to the plaintiff on his claiming them, held that the defendant was not a depository but a trustee of the property—Vital v. Ram Chandra; 7 B.H.C.R., A.C., 149. Where A handed to the defendant the key of his place of business and requested him to take charge of his goods and outstandings, to pay certain specified debts out of them and to apply the residue for the benefit of A's family, a good trust was created at any rate as far as the debts were concerned—Suddasook v. Ram Chunder, 17 Cal. 620 (628). Where certain jewels were in the possession of the defendant and he agreed under a written instrument that the plaintiff should enjoy the jewels for her life and that after her death they should be divided among the defendant and the other parties to the instrument, held that the defendant was an express trustee of the jewels of the plaintiff and that a suit by her for the jewels or their value fell under this section—Kishtappa Chetty v. Lakshmi Ammal, 44 M.L.J. 431, 72 I.C. 842, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 578. Where a person sentenced to transportation for life makes over his properties to be managed by his brother or other near relatives, and requests the Revenue authorities to have those properties transferred in the name of the latter, such transfer is in the nature of a trust—Hait Ram v. Durga Prasad, 5 All. 608 (612).

Under section 69 of the Transfer of Property Act the money received by a mortgagee arising from sale of the mortgaged property in pursuance of a power of sale should be deemed as held by him in trust to be applied in the manner directed in that section. See also Haji Abdul Rahman v. Noor Mahomed, 16 Bom. 141 (144). In England also, where the mortgagee has exercised the power of sale in good faith and without collusion, he is only a trustee for the mortgagor in respect of the balance of the sale-proceeds—Warner v. Jacob, 20 Ch. 220.

A trustee de son tort is in the same position as an express trustee, and a suit for accounts in respect of trust property in his hands comes under this section—Dhanpat v. Mohesh Nath, 24 C.W.N. 752 (755), 57 I.C. 805; Kalipada v. Haridasi, I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal. 652, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 671, 181 I.C. 190 where it has been held that the existence of trust must be first established before this section may be applied against them. But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that section 10 does not apply to a suit for account against a trustee de son tort: such a suit is governed by Article 120—Behari Lal v. Shiv Narain, 47 All. 17, 22 A.L.J. 866, A.I.R. 1924 All. 884 (dissenting from 24 C.W.N. 752); Dharam v. Suraj, I.L.R. (1940) All. 815, A.I.R. 1941 All. 1, 1940 A.L.J. 705. The Allahabad view has been followed in Chandrika Baksh v. Bholasingh, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 375; and in Robson v. Administrator General, 30 P.L.R. 503, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 753, 757.

106. Government:—The Government and the Secretary of State cannot be trustees—Kinloch v. Secretary of State, L.R. 15 Ch. D. 1, at p. 9. The fact that the Government took possession of a property (a khoti village) originally with the intention of keeping it only until the rival claimants to it established their claim in the Civil Court, cannot imply that the Government agreed to hold the property in trust for an indefinite time on behalf of the rightful owner. This section cannot apply to the case, and a suit brought to recover the property which was for fifty years in the possession of the Government was barred—Secretary of State v. Sakharam, 24 Bom. 23. The Government by directing the Court of Wards to take charge of an estate during the minority of the next claimant does not constitute itself a trustee for rightful owner —Palkonda Zemindar v. Secretary of State, 5 Mad. 91 (F.B.) affirmed on appeal in Viziaramarazu v. Secretary of State, 8 Mad. 525 (P.C.).

This section will not apply to a suit against the Secretary of State to recover the surplus proceeds of a sale for arrears of revenue. The Government is not a trustee in respect of such money—Secretary of State v. Fazal Ali, 18 Cal. 234; Secretary of State v. Guru Proshad, 20 Cal. 51 (F.B.). See also Chandra Kali v. E. P. Chapman, 32 Cal. 799 (at p. 813), where it was held that the Government was not a trustee in respect of certain G. P. notes which were paid into Court under a consent decree and subsequently lost. But under certain exceptional circumstances the Government can be a trustee within the meaning of the section. Thus, it was held in Secretary of State v. Bapuji Mohadev, 39 Bom. 572, 31 I.C. 277, that money lying in deposit in the Government Treasury as surplus sale-proceeds was money vested in Government in trust for a specific purpose, and a suit to recover the money was not barred by any length of time (following Walsh v. Secretary of State for India, (1863) 10 H.L.C. 367). The same view has been taken by the Madras High Court in Secretary of State v. Radhika Prasad Bapuji, 46 Mad. 259, 44 M.L.J. 685, 74 I.C. 785, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 677.

107. Executor, Administrator:—This section will apply to an executor only if he is a trustee for a specific purpose; the mere appointment of a person as an executor does not make him a trustee—Damodar v. Dayal, 4 I.C. 283, 11 Bom.L.R. 1187; Gajanan v. Waman, 12 Bom.L.R. 881, 8 I.C. 189 (190); Nagarathnammal v. Namasivaya, 5 I.C. 832; Baroda v. Gajendra, 13 C.W.N. 557; Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal. 455 (468); Hemangini v. Anil, 17 Pat. 350, 1938 P.W.N. 186, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 600. There is no authority for converting an executor into a trustee by anything like a performance of his duties qua executor—Jamnadas v. Damodardas, 29 Bom.L.R. 418, 103 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 424. Whether an executor is a trustee for a specific purpose depends upon the facts of each case—Damodar v. Dayal, 11 Bom.L.R. 1187; Gopaldas v. Haman, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 392, A.I.R. 1942 Sind. 145, 208 I.C. 230. This section will apply if an express trust is created by the will itself—Satya v. Murlidhar, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 817, 1944 N.L.J. 458, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 377. So where the executors in a will were expressly called trustees, and were entrusted with the testator's property for certain definite purpose, held that this section applied—Dhunjishaw v. Sorabji, (1869) P.J.

572. Where certain property was by will vested in executors to pay legacies and the residue to the testator's widow who sued for administration of her share and for a declaration that certain lease granted by the executors to themselves was void against her, it was held that the suit was within this section as the property was vested in the executors in trust for a specific purpose, viz., to pay legacies, etc.—Nistarini v. Nundolal, 30 Cal. 369. Where a will gave no directions as to the disposition of the residue, the executors were not trustees of the residue for a specific purpose—Nanalal v. Harlochand, 14 Bom. 476.

In England also, the executor is not an express trustee even for a legatee—Evans v. Moore, [1891] 3 Ch. 119. An executor is in general a constructive trustee only, although popularly described as a trustee, and while and so long as he is but a constructive trustee, the lapse of time will operate to bar the legacy—Evans v. Moore, supra; In re Mackay, [1906] 1 Ch. 25. That is to say, only an express trust, and not a mere constructive trust, will suffice to prevent the bar of time running against a legatee. An executor is always a trustee, in a sense, for creditors and legatees because he holds the personal estate for their benefit and not for his own benefit, but such a trust is not an express trust, and does exclude the application of the bar of time—Evans v. Moore, supra. The ordinary direction in a will to the executors (whether or not being also trustees of the will) to pay the debts and the legacies, creates no trust for their payment; and the mere use of the word 'trust' in the bequest to the executors ('upon trust to pay the debts and the legacies') will not, without more, create a trust either for the creditors or for the legatees; in either case the lapse of time will be a bar to the legacy—Cadbury v. Smith, (1869) L.R. 9 Eq. 37. Neither an executor nor an administrator becomes an express trustee for a legatee merely because his duties as such are performed and he retains moneys on behalf of those claiming the estate. He does not become a trustee by the performance of his duties qua executor. In other words, when the debts and funeral expenses are paid, he does not become a trustee for the residue—In re Mackay, [1906] 1 Ch. 25 (30).

An administrator in whom no special trust is vested for a specific purpose is not a trustee—Janardhan v. Jankibai, 2 P.L.J. 642 (649), 40 I.C. 860.

108. "Vested":—The words "vested in trust" are equivalent to the words "conveyed or bequeathed in trust" in Article 134. Merely placing the property in the possession or control of a person does not amount to the vesting of property in him; on the other hand, it cannot be that the word "vesting" is to imply ownership, because a trustee cannot be the owner of the trust property. While a transfer of proprietary rights is not intended, mere transference of management or control is not enough to satisfy the requirements of "vesting". A right to call for a transfer and to possess the property for the purposes of the trust and also a power to dispose of it according to the terms of the trust without reference to the owner are the essentials that constitute the vesting—Bidhu Bhusan v. Anadi, 61 Cal. 119, 58 C.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 87 (89), 150 I.C. 398. Vesting implies that some one has an estate in the subject matter of the alleged trust, not merely that he has power to charge it or direct how it should be disposed of—Dickenson v. Teasdale, (1862) 1 DeG. & S. 52; Coverdale v. Charlton, 42 Q.B.D. 120. Therefore, the directors of a company are not trustees, because they are not persons in whom the property of the company may be said to have been vested under this section—Kathiawar Trading Co. v. Virchand, 18 Bom. 119; Daulat Ram v. Bharat National Bank, 5 Lah. 27 (31); Narasimha v. Official Assignee, 54 Mad. 153, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 58 (59), 128 I.C. 477; Bank of Multon Ld. v. Hukum Chand, 71 I.C. 899, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 58. But see New Fleming S. & W. Co. v. Kessowji, 9 Bom. 373 (393, 394). Where the properties of the company did not come into the hands of the directors they could not be said to be trustees—9 Bom. 373 (399). So also, the liquidator of a company is not strictly speaking a trustee for the creditors but is merely an agent of the company—Knowles v. Scott, [1891] 1 Ch. 717. The karta of a joint Hindu family is not a trustee, because the property cannot be said to have vested in him—Biswambhar v. Giribala, 25 C.W.N. 356, 32 C.L.J. 25, 57 I.C. 877, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 571; Benoy v. Amarendra, I.L.R. (1940) 1 Cal. 183, 70 C.L.J. 572, 44 C.W.N. 93, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 51. The word 'vest' is not an appropriate term to describe the position of a Hindu executor; the mere appointment of a person as executor to a Hindu does not cause any property to vest in him at all; if as executor he is entitled to hold the property, he holds it only as manager—Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal. 455 (468). See Note 107 above. A guardian appointed under the Guardian and Wards Act is not a person in whom the property is vested for a specific purpose; Mirabai v. Kausholyabai, I.L.R. 1948 Nag. 794, 1949 N.L.J. 154, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 235. A minor girl inherited property from her maternal grandfather. The father of the minor took charge of the property and managed it. More than six years after attaining majority, the daughter sued her father to recover moneys not accounted for, and claimed that the suit was not barred, as section 10 applied to the case. Held that the father simply managed the property, and there was in fact no trust in this case, but by his acts he had only incurred obligations similar to those of a trustee. The property did not 'vest' in him as trustee; the word 'vest' implies that the property becomes in law the property of the trustee—Ma Thein v. U. Po, 3 Rang. 206, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 289, 86 I.C. 297. In two cases, the Madras High Court expressed the opinion that the word 'vesting' simply means "properly having control of the property"—Kishtappa v. Lakshmi, 44 M.L.J. 431, 72 I.C. 842, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 578 (579); Pachaiyappa v. Sivakami, 49 M.L.J. 468, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 109 (110), 91 I.C. 671. But this view has been disapproved of in a more recent case, Narasimha v. Official Assignee, 54 Mad. 153, 60 M.L.J. 280, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 58 (59), 128 I.C. 477 where it has been held that directors of companies are not trustees for specific purpose. The words 'vested in trust', if they do not necessarily imply a transfer of ownership in the strict sense, do not at any rate imply something more than mere possession and temporary control of property. So the duty of collecting the money of the rightful owner and paying the same to him does not make the money collected 'vested' on the collector in trust within the meaning of the section—Malojirao v. Keshav, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 154, 41 Bom L.R. 215, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 126.

D executed a trust deed which contained this provision: "In order to prepare a list of my debts, the trustees shall ascertain the same by looking into my books of accounts and they shall not admit any debt without rokur, hat-chitta or hundi bearing the signature of myself or my gomastas, or without decree." It was held that in the absence of evidence that this deed was communicated to the creditors, it did not create a trust in favour of the creditors, but enured only for the benefit of the executant; that therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to rank as a beneficiary under it; and that it did not create a trust in his favour so as to take out of the operation of the Limitation Act a claim that otherwise fell within it—Fink v. Moharaj Bahadur, 25 Cal. 642.

It is open to a person to create a trust empowering another to go to a certain place for the purpose of acquiring land for him, and the land so acquired would become vested in the trustee from the moment of its acquisition, and the trust would fasten to that land exactly as if it had been vested in the trustee at the moment of the creation of the trust. The absence of the property at the date of creation of the trust does not affect the applicability of section 10—Harihar Prasad v. Kesho Prasad, 5 P.L.T. Supp. 1, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 66.

108A. Religious endowment:—See the second paragraph, recently added by the Indian Limitation Amendment Act 1929 (Act I of 1929). Prior to this enactment it was pronounced by the Judicial Committee that in case of a religious endowment, whether under the Hindu or the Muhammadan law, the dedicated property could not be said to have been "vested" in the shebait or mutwalli; whatever property he held for the idol or the institution, he held merely as manager with certain beneficial interests regulated by custom or usage. Under the Mahomedan law, the moment a waqf was created, all rights of property vested in God Almighty—Vidya Varuthi v. Balusami, 44 Mad. 831 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 123, 65 I.C. 161. Neither the sajjadanashim nor the mutwalli had any right in the property belonging to the wakf; the property was not vested in him, and he was not a trustee in the technical sense —Abdor Rahim v. Narain Das, 50 Cal. 329 (P.C.), 29 C.W.N. 121, 25 Bom.L.R. 670, 44 M.L.J. 624, A.I.R. 1923 P.C. 44, 71 I C. 646. These decisions were followed in Ganga Prasad v. Kuladananda, 30 C.W.N. 415, 94 I C. 235, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 568; Jaishth Madho v. Thakur Gat Ashdam, 50 All. 265, 25 A.L.J. 1047, A.I.R. 1928 All. 134; Rukeya v. Nazira, 55 Cal. 448, 32 C.W.N. 248 (256), and several other cases. The Privy Council rulings, however, did not find favour in India, as they were opposed to the view generally prevalent in the Courts. The Civil Justice Committee thought it necessary to counteract the effect of these rulings, and recommended that "in view of certain recent decisions the alienation of property vested in the head of a religious institution raises special problems for limitation purposes and should be specifically provided for." (Civil Justice Committee Report, p. 496). Accordingly a Bill was prepared in 1927 (Council of State Bill No. 8 of 1927), to make the necessary amendments in the Limitation Act, and this Bill passed into law as Act I of 1929. The Statement of Objects and Reasons runs as follows:

"The (Civil Justice) Committee's recommendation refers, it is understood, to the decisions of the Privy Council in Vidyavaruthi v Balusami, (44 Mad. 831) and Abdur Rahim v. Narain (50 Cal. 329), which lay down that a Dharmakarta, Mohant or manager of a Hindu religious property or the Mutwalli or Sajjadanashin in whom the management of Muhammadan religious endowments is vested are not trustees within the meaning of the word as used in sec. 10 of the Limitation Act, for the reason that the property does not vest in them. The result is that when a suit is brought against a person, not being an assign for valuable consideration, endowments of this nature are not protected. The Committee's recommendation is that section 10 of the Act should be amended so as to put Hindu and Muhammadan religious endowments on the same footing as other trust funds which definitely vest in a trustee. After consulting the Local Government, the Government of India have come to the conclusion that Hindu, Muhammadan and Buddhist religious as well as charitable endowments should be included within the scope of section 10 of the Act. The Bill gives effect to this conclusion" (Gazette of India 1927, Part V, p. 223).

Effect of amendment:—This Amendment Act (I of 1929) came into force from 1*st January*, 1929, and does not apply to suits brought before that date. Such suits are to be decided according to the unamended provisions of this section and the Privy Council decision in Vidya Varuthi's case. See Allah Rakhi v. Shah Mohammed, 56 All. 111 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 400, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 77 (78), 147 I.C. 887. In a recent Oudh case (Chinkan v. Durga Bharthi, 9 Lah. 384, 11 O.W.N. 39, A.I R. 1934 Oudh 96, 147 I.C. 607), this amendment of section 10 was not noticed and the suit, though brought after the 1st January, 1929, was decided according to section 10 as it stood before the amendment.

In a suit for a declaration that the property in the possession of the mutawalli is wakf property the Supreme Court has recently held that no question of limitation can arise if it be found that the property is comprised in the wakf estate—Md. Shah v. Fasiluddin, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 713.

The right of the plaintiff which has become barred by limitation before the amending Act of 1929 is passed cannot be held to have revived by the mere institution of the suit after 1929—Biseshwar v. Sashinath, 22 Pat. 133, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 289, 208 I.C. 129.

109. Specific purpose:—The phrase "trust for a specific purpose" in this section is merely a more extended mode of expressing the same idea as that conveyed by the expression "express trust" in English law—Vundravandas v. Cursondas, 21 Bom. 646 (665); Mathuradas v. Vandrawandas, 31 Bom. 222 (231); Kistappa Chetty v. Lakshmi, 44 M.L.J. 431, 72 I.C. 842, A I.R. 1923 Mad. 578; Ramacharya v. Srinivasacharya, 20 Bom.L.R. 441, 46 I.C. 19 (20); Palaniappa v. Nachiappa, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 558, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 841, 200 I.C. 357. It is used in contradistinction to trusts arising by implication of law, trusts resulting or trusts by operation of law—Dickinson v. Teasdale, (1862) 1 D.J. & S. 52 (59) (per Lord Westbury); Mathuradas v. Vandrawandas, 31 Bom. 222 (235); Bhurabhai v. Bai Ruxmani, 32 Bom. 394 (399). See also Moosabhai v. Yacoobhai, 29 Bom. 267.

The words "in trust for a specific purpose" are intended to apply to trusts created for some defined or particular purpose or object as distinguished from trusts of a general nature such as the law imposes upon executors and others who hold recognised fiduciary positions. They are used in a restrictive sense and limit the character and nature of the trust attaching to the property which is sought to be followed—Greender v. Mackintosh, 4 Cal. 897. To create an express trust within the meaning of this section, it must appear either from express words or clearly from the facts that the rightful owner of property has entrusted the property to the person alleged to be a trustee for the discharge of a particular obligation—Barkat v. Daulat, 4 All 187. It is not necessary that an express declaration should be proved. In England inferences drawn from the conduct of the parties have been held sufficient to establish an express trust, and the same principle should apply to trust for a specific purpose within the meaning of sec. 10 of the Limitation Act—Harihar Prasad v. Kesho Prasad, 5 P.L.T. Supp. 1, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 68. A specific purpose is a purpose that is either actually and specifically defined in the terms of the deed by which the trust is created or a purpose which from the specified terms can be certainly affirmed—Annamalai v. Muthukaruppan, 8 Rang. 645 (P.C.), 35 C.W.N. 145 (151), 130 I.C. 609, A.I R. 1931 P.C. 9; Mahomedsa v. Khadirsa, 29 Bom L.R. 241, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 398, 103 I.C. 418; Secretary of State v. Radhika Prasad Bapuli, 46 Mad. 259 (290), 44 M.L.J. 685, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 667; Khaw Sim Tek v. Chuah Hooi, 49 I A. 37 (43), 26 C.W.N. 495, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 212, 102 I C. 832; Soonderdas v. Bai Laxmibai, A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 131; Chidambara v. Chidambaram, I.L.R (1944) Mad. 284, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 339, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 691. One useful test for determining whether any particular trust is for specific purpose or not is to see if a suit for the purpose of following the trust property in the hands of the trustee would be to restore it to the trust—Kali Pada v. Haridasi, I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal. 652, A I.R. 1938 Cal. 673, 181 I.C. 190. A suit for a declaration and possession of certain properties instituted by the plaintiff against his father whom his maternal grandfather had appointed trustee for the benefit of the plaintiff and his mother, alleging that the defendant had traded with the property and misappropriated it, comes under this section as the property was entrusted to the defendant for a specific purpose, viz., for the benefit of the plaintiff and his mother—Sethu v. Krishna, 14 Mad. 61. So also entrustment of money for investment is for specific purpose—Kali Pada v. Kali Kumar, 42 C.W.N. 381, I.L.R. (1938) 2 Cal. 81, 66 C.L.J. 541, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 336.

Where a testator by his will dedicated two of his properties to his family deity and at the same time appointed his two wives and his adopted son as shebaits, executrices and executor, they were clearly persons in whom the estate became vested in trust for a specific purpose within the meaning of this section—Charu Chandra v. Nahush Chandra, 36 C.L.J. 35, 50 Cal. 49 (66), 74 I.C. 630, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 1. So also where properties have been conveyed to trustees upon express trust for a diety and the trustees fraudulently put an end to the trust and divide the properties amongst themselves this section applies as the property vested in trust for a specific purpose—Gopal Jew v. Baldeo, 51 C.W.N. 383. Two trusts were imposed upon the defendant; he was first of all under a trust to utilise part of the proceeds of a property for the expenses of a darga, and there was a second trust to pay a certain share of the surplus proceeds. Held that the second trust was an express trust under this section, as the property was vested in trust in the defendant for a specified purpose, viz., the purpose of division of surplus profits—Mahomedsa v. Khadirsa, 29 Bom.L.R. 241, 103 I.C. 418, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 398. Where a widow handed over a certain sum of money to her brother for the benefit and education of her two sons, and the brother applied part of the money for that purpose, but put the balance into his pocket, held that the money was vested for a specific purpose, and a suit for account and refund of the balance fell under this section and was not barred by any length of time—Chintaman v. Khanderao, 52 Bom. 184, 30 Bom.L.R. 45, 107 I.C. 705, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 58. Where certain G. P. Notes belonging to a joint family stood in the name of G, who was the head of the family, and these Notes were deposited with Raj estate in order to serve as security for G's service in that estate, held that the G. P. Notes could be said to have been vested in G, for the specific purpose of serving as security deposit for his service—Bidhu Bhusan v. Anadi, 61 Cal. 119, 58 C.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 87 (90), 150 I.C. 398.

A person who is appointed trustee of a temple is also a trustee of the temple property including the money of the temple, i.e., he is a trustee for the specific purpose of applying the money to the use of the temple, for the disposal of it to various purposes to which the property of the temple is usually applied—Sethu v. Subramanya, 11 Mad. 274 (278); followed in Jagamba v. Ram Chandra, 31 Cal. 314 (317). The conducting of pujas and ceremonies, and the upkeep of the temple is sufficiently specific to satisfy the requirements of this section—Chidambara v. Chidambaram, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 284, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 339, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 691.

Where a testator made a will bequeathing all his properties to his adopted son A and also entered into an agreement with A's father not a revoke the same, but later he executed a second will by which he revoked the first and bequeathed all his properties to his wife R, who was appointed executrix, and it was contended that by virtue of the agreement there was a trust created in favour of A, it was held that the case did not fall under section 10, as it was impossible to hold that the properties which vested in the executrix under the second will were so vested for the specific purpose of making them over to A—Rani Chhatra Kumari v. Mohan Bikram, 10 Pat. 851 (P.C.), 35 C.W.N. 953 (962), 133 I.C. 705, A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 196. A sum of money was handed over by the bridegroom's father to the keeping of the birde's father as a fund constituting her palla or dowry on the occasion of her marriage in accordance with the usual practice prevailing in the caste. The fund was misappropriated by the lady's father and an action was brought to recover the same. Held that the property was vested in him for a specific purpose, viz., as a provision for dowry—Bhurabhai

v. Bai Ruxmani, 32 Bom. 394 (399), 10 Bom.L.R. 540; Palaniappa v. Nachiappa, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 558, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 841 (specific purpose being earning interest and the augmentation of the total fund for the benefit of the children). P, who carried on a money-lending business, entrusted the business to his brother-in-law S, and directed S to hold his property for the benefit of his (P's) wife and daughter. S dealt with the property of P until P's death and even after that date remained in possession of all his property, and it also appeared in evidence that when S died in 1912 he informed P's wife and daughter that his (S's) son would continue to hold the property on their behalf. P's daughter brought the present suit in 1921 against S's son for an account. The contention was that the suit was barred by limitation. Held that the property had been legally vested in P in trust, and the specific purpose of the trust was to carry on the money-lending business and to increase the estate by addition of profits by way of interest and to hand over the property when called on to P. Section 10 therefore applied and the suit was not barred—Pachaiyappa v. Sivakami, 49 M.L.J. 468, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 109 (110), 91 I.C. 671. L was a partner in the firm of R, and as such was entitled to 35 shares of the Hongkong Mill and to a certain share of the commission earned by the firm as agents of the Mill. L retired from partnership and afterwards died, whereupon the prehent suit was brought by his executors against R to recover the share of L in the agency commission earned by the firm of R as agents of the Hongkong Mill. Held that L's share of the commission had become vested in trust for a specific purpose in the hands of R within the meaning of this section, and therefore the plaintiff's suit was not barred by limitation—Narrondas v. Narrondas, 31 Bom. 418 (427). (The Rangoon High Court in 3 Rang. 206 doubts the correctness of this decision and says that it is clearly a case of constructive trust). A partition-deed entered into between two brothers recited that their deceased elder brother had entrusted a sum of money to them, and one of the two brothers undertook to pay the amount to the son of the deceased brother on his attaining majority, together with interest. Held, that there was an express trust created in favour of the deceased brother's son, and a suit brought by him more than three years after attaining majority was not barred—Md. Mathar v. Kara Rowther, 20 L.W. 546, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 920, 85 I.C. 508.

An executor who by the will is made an express trustee for certain purposes as regards some of the properties, cannot be regarded as "trustee for a specific purpose" as to the residue of the properties for which no direction was given to the executor and no trust was declared—Nandlal v. Harlochand, 14 Bom. 476. But where the whole of the testator's property had been vested in the trustees, and after carrying out all the trusts under the will there was left with the trustees a residue undisposed of, in respect of which no trust was declared, it was held that as the whole of the testator's property had been vested in the trustees for a specific purpose, it was not necessary that the trust of the residue should be specified in words in the will, and therefore the residue should be treated as vested in the trustee. A suit by the heir to recover the residue would not be barred at all—Mojilal v. Gaurishankar, 35 Bom. 49. Where a will vested the whole of the testator's property in executors for certain purposes which eventually could not be carried out, it was held that the executors were not trustees for any specific purpose within the meaning of this section—Vundravandas v. Cursondas, 21 Bom. 646. Where a property is bequeathed to trustees for certain purposes some of which failed or are invalid, the heirs of the testator may be barred by the ordinary law of limitation from recovering the portion undisposed of, though they might still bring a suit against the trustees to compel them to properly administer the trusts that had not failed—Hemangini v. Nobin, 8 Cal. 788.

Where by a family arrangement certain hundi was vested in a defendant for payment of debts of plaintiff's husband, and any balance that might remain after payment of his creditors was to be paid to the latter, it was held that this arrangement constituted a trust for specific purpose within the meaning of section 10 and the plaintiff's husband was entitled to call upon the defendant to account for proceeds of the hundi—C. Vairavan v. Chettichi, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 876. Assuming that such a case does not fall under section 10, the suit for accounts must fall under Art. 89, if not under Art. 120. And in both cases time will run from the date at which the defendant had denied such third person's claim, or in any other manner infringed or threatened to infringe his right—C. Vairavan v. Chettichi Achi, A I.R. 1936 Mad. 876.

110. Resulting trust:—This section does not apply where the object of the original trust being uncertain or undiscoverable, a resulting trust arises by operation of secs. 81 and 83 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882—Mathuradas v. Vandrawandas, 31 Bom. 222 (231). A resulting trust is not an express trust or trust for a specific purpose under this section—Hemangini v. Nobin, 8 Cal. 788; Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal. 455 (470); Mahammad Habibulla v. Sajdar Hussein, 7 All. 25; Casamally v. Currimbhoy, 36 Bom. 214 (234); Vundravandas v. Cursonas, 21 Bom. 646; Churcher v. Martin, (1889) 42 Ch. D. 312 (318); and a person claiming under a resulting trust may be barred by the ordinary law of limitation (Arts. 142, 144)—Mahammad Habibulla v. Sajdar Hussein, 7 All. 25; Mohammad Ibrahim v. Abdul, 37 Bom. 447 (460); Casamally v. Currimbhoy, 36 Bom. 214.

Where the specific purpose for which the defendant became a trustee fails or is invalid, a resulting trust arises by operation of law in favour of the settlor or his heirs, and a suit by them to enforce such resulting trust is not within the scope of this section, because the plaintiffs are seeking not to enforce the original trust, but to defeat that trust. They are suing for the purpose of invalidating the disposition in furtherance of which the trust was created—Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal. 455 (465); Hemangini v. Nobin, 8 Cal. 788; Couasji v. R. D. Setna, 20 Bom. 511; Mathuradas v. Vandrawandas, 31 Bom. 222 (232); Gulzari Mal v. Kishan Chand, 132 P.R. 1907; Mahomed Ibrahim v. Abdul Latif, 37 Bom. 447.

Whether the resulting trust flows from the invalidity of the declared trust or from the impossibility of ascertaining the declared trust, it is equally a substituted trust, that is, a trust which is created by the law faut de mieux, that is, as the best arrangement which the law regards as possible in difficult circumstances. But where there is a trust covering the whole estate, and the bequests do not exhaust the estate, the trustees are express trustees of the residue for the heir of the testator—Mathuradas v. Vandrawandas, 31 Bom. 222 (234, 235).

111. Implied trust:—This section in terms applies to trust "for a specific purpose", i.e., it is confined to express trusts, and has no application to implied trusts, i.e., such trusts as the law implies merely from the existence of particular facts or fiduciary relations—Robson v. Administrator-General, 30 P.L.R. 503, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 753 (757); Behari Lal v. Shiv Narain, 47 All. 17, A.I.R. 1924 All. 884, 22 A.L.J. 866; Kherodemoney v. Doorgamoney, 4 Cal. 455 (465); Lakhraj v. Assamal, 27 I.C. 332, 8 S.L.R. 132; Hemangini v. Nobin, 8 Cal. 788; Mathuradas v. Vandrawandas, 31 Bom. 222 (232).

112. Constructive trust:—Section 10 applies to cases of what in English law are called express trusts, and not to constructive trusts—Kesavalu v. Perumal, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 820, 1939 M.W.N. 437, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 722. The doctrine of the well known case of Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q.B. 390, viz., that the rule of limitation will not be applied to certain kinds of constructive trusts, has no applicability to India —Raja of Ramnad v. Pannusami, 44 Mad. 277 (281), 40 M.L.J. 52, 1921 M.W.N. 37; Ma Thein v. U Po, 3 Rang. 206, 86 I.C. 297, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 289; Krishna Pattar v. Lakshmi Ammal, 45 Mad. 415, 42 M.L.J. 119. Thus, where a person directs another to acquire property for him (the person directing) and furnishes some money for the purpose, but after some time he withdraws from the venture completely, but the person directed continues his exertions and entirely as the result of those exertions acquires the property, there is only a constructive trust, and section 10 does not apply—Harihar Prosad v. Kesho Prosad, (Dumraon Case) 5 P.L.T. Supp. 1, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 68. Similarly where a vendor of immoveable property leaves a portion of the sale consideration in the hands of the vendee directing him to pay the same to his minor son on his attaining majority and the vendee undertakes to pay interest, there is no trust which will attract the operation of the section—Kesavalu v. Perumal, supra. In one Allahabad case, however, which was really a hard case, the principle of this section was applied to a constructive trust. In that case, B and D, father and son, were jointly entitled to a moiety of certain property; B's brother E, and E's son K were jointly entitled to the other moiety. B and D were transported for life. Thirty years after (B having in the meantime died), D returned from transportation, and aserted his right to a moiety against a person deriving his title from E and K, who had taken possession of the whole. It was held, looking to all the circumstances of the case, that E and K had taken possession subject to a constructive trust in favour of B and D, and that accordingly D was entitled to assert his right, and no limitation could affect it—Durga Prasad v. Ast Ram, 2 All. 361. This case should not be treated as laying down any general principle to be applied to all cases of constructive trusts; and Straight J. who gave judgment in this case admitted in a subsequent case (5 All. 608 at p. 614) that his remarks in the previous case should be taken as confined to the particular circumstances of that case—Vithalrao v. Baswant, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 433.

In England also, the bar of time runs in favour of a trustee where he is only a trustee constructively—Hovenden v. Lord Annesley, (1806) 2 Sch. & Left. 633. So also, the bar of time runs in favour of a trustee who is only a trustee by implication of law upon some doubtful equity—Townshend v. Townshend, (1783) 1 Br. C.C. 550. Where the trust is not an express trust but is only a constructive trust, or the alleged express trust is in fact the point in dispute, the time runs in favour of the trustee—Attorney-General v. Fishmongers' Co., (1841) 5 My. & Cr. 16; Beckford v. Wade, (1811) 17 Ves. 87; Townshend v. Townshend, supra.

113. Trustee not validly appointed:—This section applies to a suit against a trustee whether the trustee's right to the office is legally valid or otherwise; and the defendant cannot plead the bar of limitation—Subramania v. Subba Naidu, 25 M.L.J. 452, 21 I.C. 421 (423).

113A. Possession under void or voidable Trust:—Where a trustee has been in possession, for upwards of 12 years, of property under a trust which is void under the law, this section has no application as the property in respect of which the direction in the will is void has not become 'vested in trust for a specific purpose'—Hem Chandra v. Peary Lal, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. (P.C.) 166, 45 Bom.L.R. 275, 76 C.L.J. 451, 47 C.W.N. 46, 1942 A.L.J. 718, 45 P.L.R. 36, A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 64, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 11 (P.C.). This sertion has no application to a trust declared invalid ab initio —Daw Ein v. Daw Chan, 1940 Rang.L.R. 136. A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 365, 186 I.C. 210. So also, this section does not apply to a case where property is in the possession of a donee under a voidable transaction of gift—Ram Chandra v. Laxman, 72 I.A. 21, I L.R. (1945) Bom. 440, 49 C.W.N. 303, A.I.R. 1945 P.C. 54, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 253 (P.C.).

114. Legal representatives:—A new trustee succeeding to the office of a former trustee does not succeed to him personally and cannot be said to be his legal representative within the meaning of this section—Manikkam v. Thanikachalam, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 87, 34 I.C. 945.

If the trustee is dead, a suit brought against his legal representative for following the trust property or for accounts is not barred by any length of time. It should be noted that if the suit against the legal representative is to recover the specific trust property, sec. 10 applies and exempts the suit from the bar of limitation—Amiya v. Debendra, 46 C.W.N. 865; it is not necessary that the property followed should be identical property in respect of which a breach of trust has been committed. It can be any thing into which the original property has been converted, whatever form the conversion may have taken, provided of course the one can be clearly and definitely connected with the other—Sahaudra v. Deo Radha, I L.R. (1940) Nag. 94, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 30; but if the suit is not to recover any specific property but for compensation for loss of the property (the trust property having been sold by the trustee, or having disappeared and not being traceable), Art. 98 applies and the suit must be brought within 3 years. See Notes under Article 98. See also Chintaman v. Khanderao, 52 Bom. 184, 30 Bom L.R. 45, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 58.

115. Assigns for valuable consideration:—Section 10 of the Limitation Act applies to a suit against a transferee of the trustee, if the transfer was without consideration, i.e., a gift. See Jagamba Goswamini v. Ram Chandra, 31 Cal. 314 (316). But this section does not apply to a suit against those who assert their right under a bona fide purchase for value—Maniklal v. Manchershi, 1 Bom. 269; Hait Ram v. Durga Prosad, 5 All. 608. The period of limitation for a suit to recover trust property from the hands of assigns for valuable consideration is prescribed by Art. 48A in case of moveables, and by Art. 134, in the case of immoveable property. If the property is comprised in a religious or charitable endowment, a suit to recover possession from a transferee for valuable consideration is governed by Article 134B in the case of immoveable property, and by Art. 134C in the case of moveables.

Transfers for consideration are expressly excluded from the operation of section 10 —Dwarkadas v. Rikhiram, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 784.

The meaning of this section is to declare that as a general rule trust properties shall not be subject to any law of limitation; that no length of time shall bar an action to recover such property; but that when trust property finds its way into the hands of an assignee for valuable consideration, the ordinary law of limitation shall apply; the assignee shall have the same benefit as an ordinary purchaser of property, not trust property, would have—Chintamoni v. Sarup Se, 15 Cal. 703 (705).

The words "assigns for valuable consideration" include lessees and mortgagees as well as purchasers—Behari v. Muhammad, 20 All. 482 (485) (F.B.); Sri Kissen v. Tarachand, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 228, 190 I.C. 405 (lessee). The word "assign" in this section is sufficiently wide to cover lessee as well; but the benefit of the section cannot he had where the lease was for valuable consideration. The expression "valuable consideration" is not synonymous with "adequate consideration"—Sri Jagadguru v. Dakshina, 1953 S.C.J. 730, (1953) 2 M.L.J. 819, A.I.R. 1952 S.C. 514. The assigneee need not be a direct assignee of the trustee, but also includes assigns from the transferee or assignee from the express trustee—Biseswar v. Sashinath, 22 Pat. 133, A.I.R.

1943 Pat. 289, 208 I.C. 129. The term also includes auction-purchasers. A suit against an auction-purchaser acquiring trust property for valuable consideration at a sale in execution of a decree is subject to the ordinary rule of limitation—Chintamoni v. Sarup Se, 15 Cal 703 (706); Subbaya v. Mahammad Mustapha, 32 M.L.J. 85, 40 I.C. 50 (52) affirmed by the Privy Council in 46 Mad. 751.

A gratuitous transferee is not an assignee for valuable consideration, and a suit for following the property in his hands is not barred by any length of time—Venkatachala v. Sriranga Ammal, 38 Mad. 1064. The object of inserting the words "valuable consideration" is to distinguish the case of a transferee who is a mere volunteer and in whose favour no equity can be brought to play and to hit only those transferees who are in possession of the trust property without having paid any consideration for it—Biseshwar v Sashinath, supra.

A suit by one of two co-trustees to recover the land from the purchaser of the right to manage the affairs of the temple and enjoy certain land of the temple sold by the other trustee is barred by Art. 134 when such a purchaser holds possession for more than twelve years as he is assign for valuable consideration—Kannan v. Nilkandan, 7 Mad. 337. Where the managers of a temple, made a gift of a portion of the temple property to the defendants in consideration of the latter performing certain religious services at the temple, it was held that the latter were assigns for valuable consideration —Ramacharya v. Srinivasacharya, 20 Bom L R. 441, 46 I.C. 19.

To be an assign for valuable consideration for the purposes of this section or of Art. 134, good faith is not necessary. Therefore, an assign for valuable consideration is none the less an assign for valuable consideration although he knows that he is purchasing trust properties in which his alienor (trustee) had only a limited interest —Subbaya Pandaram v. Mahammad Mustapha, 32 M.L J. 85, 40 I.C. 50 (52); Ram Kanai v. Sri Sri Hari Narayan, 2 C.L.J. 546. The words 'good faith' which occured in section 10 in the Act of 1871 have been omitted in the Acts of 1877 and 1908. See this subject fully discussed in Note 564 under Article 134.

117. "Following in his hands such property":—The words "for the purpose of following in his or their hands suh property" mean "for the purpose of recovering the property for the benefit of the trust in respect of which it had been given," that is, when property is used for some purpose other than the proper purpose of the trusts in question, it may be recovered, without any bar of time, from the hands of the persons indicated in the section—Balwant Rao v. Puran Mal, 6 All. 1 (9) (P.C); Mahomedsa v Khadirsa, 29 Bom L.R 241, A I.R. 1927 Bom. 398, 103 I.C. 418.

Therefore, this section has no application to a suit brought on failure of the object of a trust, to recover the money remaining in the hands of the trustee, for the plaintiff's own benefit and not with the object of having such money applied towards the original purposes of the trust—Jasoda v. Parmanand, 16 All. 256 (258). A suit brought to vindicate the rights of the plaintiffs as co-trustees with the defendants and to protect their own interests, and not, except indirectly, the interests of the temple, cannot be regarded as falling within this section—Ranga v. Baba, 20 Mad. 398.

A suit to remove the trustees of certain debuttur property, to establish the plaintiff's claim to be appointed trustee, and to recover property improperly dealt with by the defendant in breach of the trust, is one for "the purpose of following the property in the hands of trustees" and therefore limitation does not run—Sreenath v. Radha Nath, 12 C.L.R. 370. A suit to prevent a specific endowment from being diverted from its legitimate object and to re-attach it to that object, e g., a suit asking the Court to prevent the misappropriation of the endowed property, and to see that the income of the endowment is applied to its legitimate purposes, as well as to remove the defendant from the management of the endowment on the ground that he has no personal right to administer it, falls under this section and is never barred. The fact that there is an additional prayer for removal of the defendant from his position as trustee does not take the case out of this section. It is a part of the relief claimed in the plaint and is only claimed as necessary to ensure due appropriation of the endowment to its original trusts—Sathappayyar v. Periasami, 14 Mad. 1 (8). Where a testator by his will directed that some of his properties should be applied for certain charitable objects, but after his death his widow executed a trust-deed by which she conveyed the properties to trustees on trusts which were not strictly in accordance with the testator's will, and a suit was brought by certain members of the community to which the testator belonged, against the widow and the trustees, praying that the charitable objects of the testator's will should be carried out, and seeking for an account, it was held that the suit was one for the purpose of following the trust properties in the hands of the testator's widow and the trustees, and for an account, and therefore fell under this section. It was not a suit for rectification of the trust-deed executed by the widow, or merely a suit for account falling under Art. 120—Advocate-General v. Bai Punjabai, 18 Bom. 551 (562).

A suit by the present manager of a Hindu temple against the former manager for recovering the money which was mis-appropriated by the latter while in office falls under this section—Sethu v. Subramanya, 11 Mad. 274 (280). The present manager of a Mutt is entitled to sue the assigns of his predecessor in office on the ground that the assignment was in violation of his trust, and such a suit falls within this section—Sathinama v. Saravanabaji, 18 Mad. 266; Mahomed v. Ganapati, 13 Mad. 277; Jamal v. Murgaya, 10 Bom. 34.

A suit under sec. 42, Specific Relief Act, for a declaration that certain properties are public, religious, trust properties, is not a suit for the purpose of following trust property and this section does not apply to such a suit—Shamdas v. Gurmukh, I.L.R. (1945) Kar. 40, A.I.R. 1945 Sind 57.

A suit by the dwaries of a temple for recovery of certain dues claimed by them as payable as remuneration in respect of their services in connection with the temple is not a suit covered by this section. The plaintiffs are no doubt entitled, out of the proceeds of the property belonging to the temple, to certain payments in the nature of wages and remuneration, but they cannot be said to be bringing the suit for the purpose of following the trust property in the hands of the trustee—Sri Sri Baidyanath v. Har Datt, 5 Pat. 249, 7 P L.T. 465, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 205, 94 I.C. 826.

The words "following in his hands such property" do not necessarily mean following the property in specie in the hands of the trustee. The trust property may be followed into any other form in which after conversion it may be traceable—Sahaudra v. Deo Radha, I.L R. (1940) Nag. 94, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 30; Hariharbrahman v. Janikiramiah, A.I.R. 1955 Andhra 18. Therefore, it cannot be said that a money fund which has been dissipated by a trustee cannot be followed. Otherwise every improper use of trust money in trade or speculation would be beyond the application of the section—Bhurabhai v. Bai Ruxmani, 32 Bom. 394 (400); Thackersay v. Hurbhum, 8 Bom. 432 (469). See also Sethu v. Subramanya, 11 Mad. 274 (279), where the Court disallowed the objection that money could not be followed in specie. But a suit for recovery of a sum of money from an estate, of which the defendants are executors and trustees under a will, is not a suit for the purpose of following, in the hands of the defendants, trust property or the proceeds thereof—Gopaldas v. Hemandas, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. 392, A.I.R. 1942 Sind. 145. If the trustee who dissipated the trust money died, his legal representative would be liable to the extent of the estate of the late trustee descended to the legal representative—Bhurabhai v. Bai Luxmani, supra.

The suit contemplated by this section is not necessarily a suit brought by a cestui que trust or a beneficiary against the trustee. A suit by the present trustee against the previous trustee for rectvery of money alleged to have been misappropriated by the latter falls under this section—Sethu v. Subramanya, 11 Mad. 274 (276). See also Jagamba v. Ram Chandra, 31 Cal. 314 (316); Vinasami v. Subba, 6 Mad. 54; Subramania v. Subba Naidu, 25 M.L.J. 452, 21 I.C. 421 (423).

"Or the proceeds thereof":—It is not necessary that the suit should be to follow the original trust property only; for if the trust property has been tortiously disposed of by the trustee, the cestui que trust may attach and follow the property that has been substituted in the place of the trust property so long as the metamorphosis can be traced—Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 574; Sahaudra v. Deo Radha, I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 94, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 30.

117A. Suit for account:—Sec 10 of the old Act did not apply to a suit for account. Where the object of a suit by a cestui que trust was not to follow trust property in the hands of the trustee, but only to have an account of the property or the proceeds, section 10 of the old Act did not apply and such a suit was governed by Art 120—Saroda Pershad v. Brojo Nauth, 5 Cal. 910. A similar view was adopted in Advocate-General v Bai Punjabai, 18 Bom. 551 (566, 567). But in Hurro v. Tarini, 8 Cal. 766, Wilson J. directed an account and in a manner doubted the correctness of the ruling in 5 Cal. 910; and in Nistarini v Nundolal, 30 Cal. 369 (384), a trustee was directed to render accounts irrespective of any question of limitation. In a Madras case, it was held that a suit for an account of the trust property was the same thing as a suit for following the trust property in the hands of the trustee—Sethu v. Subramanya, 11 Mad. 274 (279). The present Act expressly extends the application of this section to suits for accounts—Dhanpat v. Mohesh, 24 C.W.N. 752 (755). In England also, actions against express trustees claiming an account of the trust property cannot be barred by the Statute of Limitation—Rochefoucauld v. Bowstead, [1897] 1 Ch. 196 (208); North America Co. v. Watkins, [1904] 1 Ch. 242.

It should be noted that this section presupposes a breach of the trust, i.e., a use of the trust property for some purposes other than the proper purpose of the trust. Where the plaintiff does not allege any beach of trust on the part of the trustee, but the suit is primarily to ascertain whether any trust remained to be administered after the testator's debts and funeral expenses had been liquidated and he claims an account for the administration of the testator's estate, such a claim does not come within section 10—Shapurji v. Bhikaji, 10 Bom. 242 (246).

This section applies only to a suit for an account of the property which actually came into the hands of the trustee. But where it is sought to render a trustee liable for property which but for his wilful default or negligence would have come into his hands, the ordinary law of limitation applies, and it is not saved by this section—Tholasingum v. Vedachelayya, 41 Mad. 319; Official Trustee v. Mrs. Racburn, 1940 Rang.L.R. 273, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 207, the reason being such a property never became vested in him.

This section prevents the period of limitation running, not only where the defendant had actually received money as trustee for which he had not accounted, but also where he held money in another capacity which he ought to have held as trustee. In such a case he cannot be heard to say that he held it in the other capacity and not in the capacity of a trustee; and therefore in such a case section 10 will apply and prevent him from relying upon the bar of limitation. But a suit based on the failure of a trustee to reduce trust property into possession is not exempted from the bar of limitation. Such a suit does not fall under sec. 10. A trustee is not liable for the acts or defaults of his predecessors. Trustees are relieved from indefinite liability, except in cases of fraud or fraudulent breach of trust or cases in respect of trust property or the proceeds thereof still retained by trustees or previously received by them and converted to their own use—Doraivela v. Adikesavelu, 1922 M.W.N. 620, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 409, 70 I.C. 87.

118. Suits not within this section:—Where there is no claim for following the property in the hands of the trustee, i.e., for the recovery of the property for the purposes of the trust, nor is there any question as to whether the property is being applied or not to the purposes of the trust, but the claim is merely to vindicate the personal right of the plaintiff (a trustee) to the possession or management of an immoveable property against another person (defendant) claiming such right in the same character, the suit is not governed by this section—Balwant v. Puran Mal, 6 All. 1 (9) (P.C.); Karmsha v Nattan, 7 Mad. 417; Giyana Sambandha v. Kandasami, 10 Mad. 375; Nilakandan v. Padmanabha, 14 Mad. 153 (162); Sankaran v. Krishna, 16 Mad. 456; Nathe Pujari v. Radha Binode, 3 P.L.J. 327; Ambalavana Pandara v. Minakshy, 28 M.L.J. 217, 26 I.C. 841. Thus, a suit for a declaration that the plaintiff has the exclusive right of managing the affairs of a temple and that the defendant has no joint right of management, does not fall under this section when there is no claim for recovering any property for the purposes of the trust—Nilakandan v. Padmanabha, supra. So also a suit for declaration against the defendants not as trustees but as rival beneficiaries does not fall under this section—Mohammed Ata v. Husain, 19 Luck. 515, 1944 O.W.N. 37, A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 139.

Where a testator bequeathed all his properties to his trustees directing them to convey the properties to certain beneficiaries, and on the death of the last beneficiary, a grand-daughter of the testator brought a suit against the trustees, claiming as the heiress of the testator and not under the will, held that the defendants were trustees only under the will but as the plaintiff did not claim under the will it was not a suit against the defendants as trustees; and further as she did not claim the properties for the purposes of the trust, but for her own purposes, claiming a personal right to the properties, the suit did not fall under this section—Ayeshabai v. Ebrahim, 32 Bom. 364 (373).

A suit by the present trustee of a temple against the defendant who was the previous trustee (now removed) to recover from him certain moneys which the defendant had taken from temple funds to meet the expenses of a litigation to remove him from the trusteeship does not fall under this section, nor under Article 61 or 62, but is governed by Article 120—Krishna Kudva v. Venkataramana Temple, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 542 (543).

Certain G. P. Notes belonging to two brothers of a joint family, G and D, stood in the name of G who was the head of the family, and were deposited in a Raj estate as security for the service of G in that estate. After his retirement from service the G. P. Notes were returned to G, and soon after he died. In a suit by the heirs of one of the brothers against the heirs of the other brother for recovery of their share in the G. P. Notes standing in the name of the latter as head of the family and deposited as security for service of the said brother and returned to him after retirement, it was held that after the service of the elder brother was over, the trust (viz., the vesting of the Notes in him for the purpose of serving as a security for his service) came to an end, and consequently the suit could not be said to be a suit for the purpose of restoring the Notes to that trust which had been completed and was no longer capable of administration, and the suit therefore fell outside the scope of section 10, but was governed by Article 145—Bidhu Bhusan v. Anadi, 61 Cal. 119, 58 C.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 87 (90), 150 I.C. 398.

Where trust property was sold as the personal property of the trustee at an execution-sale, and the auction-purchaser was in possession for more than 12 years, a suit by the successor of the original trustee against the purchaser for recovery of the property does not fall under this section but is barred by the 12 years' rule—Subbaya Pandaram v. Mahammad Mustapha, 32 M.L.J. 85, 40 I.C. 50 (55) affirmed by the Privy Council in 46 Mad. 751.

A suit by a legatee who has received a portion of the legacy, against the executor, to be put in possession of the remaining portion of the legacy, is not a suit falling under this section but is governed by Article 120—Gajanan v. Waman, 12 Bom.L.R. 881, 8 I.C. 189 (190).

Section 10 does not apply to the case of an ordinary bailment—K. R. Kumaraswami Chettiar v. Krishnaswami Chetti, (1955) 2 M.L.J. 266, 1955 M.W.N. 644 A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 96.

The ratio decidendi is that section 10 benefits those who sue to enforce express trusts and not those who claim not under express trusts but adversely to them—Shirinbai Dinshaw v. Navroji Pestonji, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 34. Thus a person claiming adversely to the trust and on the footing that the trust deed itself is bad cannot contend that the property is held by the trustees for any person and invoke the aid of this section—Fidahussein v. Tyabally, 43 Bom.L.R. 622, A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 307, 196 I.C. 821.

A claim for damages on the footing of wilful default is not one to follow trust funds, and is not saved by section 10, Limitation Act—Shirinbai v. Navroji Pestonji, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 34.

"This (section 10) does not in terms apply to suits for damages on the footing of wilful default, when ex hypothesi the money claimed has not come into the hands of the trustees; and the reference to an account does not extend it to such claims. The section read as a whole justifies a decree for any trust funds shown, on an account being taken, to be in the hands of the trustees."—Per Barlee, J., in Shirinbai Dinshaw v. Navorji Pestonji, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 34.

And consequently any claim to damages for alleged breach of trust in the management of the trust property is governed by Art. 120. Time runs from the breach and not from the date of the consequent loss—Shirinbai Dinshaw v. Navorji Pestonji, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 34.

Suits on foreign contracts.

11. (1) Suits instituted in India on contracts entered into in a foreign country are subject to the rules of limitation contained in this Act.

(2) No foreign rule of limitation shall be a defence to a suit instituted in India on a contract entered into in a foreign country, unless the rule has extinguished the contract and the parties were domiciled in such country during the period prescribed by such rule.

The word "India" was substituted for the words "the States" by Act 3 of 1951.

119. Principle:—Sub-section (1) is a legislative enactment of the rule of international jurisprudence that "all suits must be brought within the period prescribed by the local law of the country where the suit is brought, otherwise the suit will be barred"—Story's Conflict of Law, sec. 577, cited in Lalloobhoy v. Ruckmaboye, 5 M.I.A. 234 (at p. 267). "It is a rule of universal (or almost universal) application that remedies as distinguished from rights are to be pursued according to the law of the place were the action is instituted, which law is commonly called the lex fori. And the reason of the rule is, because Courts of law being instituted by every nation for its own convenience, the nature of the remedies available therein and the times and modes of the proceedings therein are regulated by that nation's own views of what is just and proper or expedient; and it is not obliged, out of any comity to other countries, to depart (in a matter of procedure) from its own notions of what is just or proper or expedient. And, therefore, where an action is brought in one country upon a contract made in another, a plea of the statute existing in the place of the contract is not a good bar in the general case"—Banning, 3rd Edn., p. 11; Huber v. Steiner, (1835) 2 Bing. N.C. 202; Pardo v. Bingham, (1870) L.R. 4 Ch. App. 735; Harris v. Quine, (1870) L.R. 4 Q.B. 653; Alliance Bank of Simla v. Carey, (1880) 5 C.P.D. 429.

"The rule which applies to the case of contracts made in one country and put in suit in the Courts of another country appears to be this, that the interpretation of the contract must be governed by the law of the country where the contract was made, but the mode of suing and the time within which the action is to be brought must be governed by the law of the country where the action is brought"—Trimbey v. Vignier, 1 Bing.N.S. 151. While the Courts of almost all civilized countries entertain causes of action which have originated in a foreign country and adjudicate upon them according to the law of the country in which they arose, yet such Courts respectively proceed according to the prescription of the country in which they exercise jurisdiction—Lalloobhoy v. Ruckmaboye, 5 M.I.A. 234 (at p. 266). In matters of procedure all mankind are bound by the law of the forum—Lopez v. Burslem, 4 Moo.P.C. 300.

Although this section speaks of suits on contract only, yet the principle of this section applies to all suits and proceedings. Thus, the execution of decrees of Courts of Native States transferred to a Court of British India for execution is subject to the law of limitation which prevails in the latter Court—Hukum v. Gyanendar, 14 Cal. 570.

120. Sub-section (2):—This sub-section also follows the English law, according to which a foreign law of limitation is preferred to the lex fori on two conditions; (1) that the foreign law extinguishes the right or the obligation itself, and (2) that both the parties have resided in the country where such law prevails for the whole of the prescribed time. See Story's Conflict of Laws, sec. 582.

It is immaterial whether the foreign law allows a longer or a shorter period. Provided that the foreign law does not extinguish the right under the contract, no effect can be given to such law—Huber v. Steiner, 2 Bing.N.S. 202. Where the remedy only is barred by the foreign law, but the right is not extinguished, a suit may be instituted in the Court of India if it is not then barred according to the Indian law of limitation —Nallatambi v. Ponnusami, 2 Mad. 400 (406); R. A. Dickie v. Municipal Board, A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 216.

Where the parties to a promissory note executed in Sind migrated to Kutch long before the limitation in respect of that note had expired and the suit for recovery of money due under it is filed in Kutch, the suit is governed by the law of limitation in Kutch—Dhanji v. Ramji, A.I.R. 1950 Kutch. 58.

PART III.

COMPUTATION OF PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

Exclusion of time in legal proceedings.

12. (1) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application, the day from which such period is to be reckoned shall be excluded.

(2) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal, an application for leave to appeal and an application for a review of judgment, the day on which the judgment complained of was pronounced, and the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, sentence or order appealed from or sought to be reviewed, shall be excluded.

(3) Where a decree is appealled from or sought to be reviewed, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment on which it is founded shall also be excluded.

(4) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application to set aside an award, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the award shall be excluded.

Exclusion of time:—This section may be analysed as follows:—

(1) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit, the day on which the time begins to run shall be excluded.

(2) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal, the following periods shall be excluded:—(a) the day on which the period begins to run; (b) the day on which the judgment was pronounced; (c) the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, sentence or order; (d) the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment.

(3) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application for review, the following periods shall be excluded:—(a) the day on which the period begins to run; (b) the day on which the judgment was pronounced; (c) the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree; (d) the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment.

(4) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application for leave to appeal, the following periods shall be excluded:—(a) the day on which the time begins to run; (b) the day on which the judgment was pronounced; (c) the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment (but not a copy of the decree).

(5) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an application to set aside an award, the following periods shall be excluded:—(a) the day on which the time begins to run; (b) the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the award.

(6) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any other application, only the day on which the time begins to run shall be excluded.

It should be noted that in cases (2), (3) and (4), the day on which the time begins to run and the day on which the judgment was pronounced are identical.

The rules as to computation of period of limitation laid down in Part III of the Act are not intended by the legislature to apply only to periods of limitation prescribed by the Schedule but apply also to periods of limitation provided for by other enactments —Durag v. Pancham, I.L.R. (1939) All 647, 1939 A.L.J. 522, A.I.R. 1939 All. 403 (F.B.).

121. Sub-section (1):—The meaning of the first paragraph is that the date of accrual of the causes of action should be excluded—Chinna v. Ramaswamy, 4 M.H.C.R. 409, Ganapati v. Sitharama, 10 Mad. 292. "The reason of the rule appears to be this, namely, the law does not as a rule regard the fraction of a day, so much so that the date of the execution of a deed does not mean the hour or the minute or the day when the deed was delivered, but means the whole day; and similarly the day of the death of a testator is the day of the death; and if it is necessary to reckon six months after the death, those six months will commence with the day next following the death"—Banning, 3rd Edn., p. 20; Lester v. Garland, (1808) 15 Ves. 248; Webb v. Fairmaner, (1838) 3 M. & W. 473; Chambers v. Smith, (1843) 12 M. & W. 2; In re Railway Sleepers Co., (1883) 29 Ch. D. 204.

In computing a calendar month or year, it is sufficient to go from one month or year to the corresponding day in the next, and to exclude from computation the day from which the month or the year is calculated, so that two days of the same number are not included—Deb Narain v. Ishan, 13 C.L.R. 153. In a suit on a bond where a day is specified for payment, the period of limitation is to be computed from and exclusive of the day so specified, as being the day on which the right to sue accrued —Ram Churn v. Ina, 24 W.R. 463. In case of a pro-note, the date on which the pro-note is executed will be excluded—Munshi Abdul v. Tarachand, 6 B L.R. 292.

When a debt is acknowledged in writing, a new period of limitation runs under sec. 19 from the date of the acknowledgment, and the day on which the acknowledgment was signed must be excluded in computing the new period of limitation, under sub-section (1) of section 12—Jainarayan v. Vithoba, 6 N.L J. 281, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 143, 71 I.C. 556.

The day on which a minor attains his majority must be excluded under this section —Jugmohan v. Luchmesur, 10 Cal. 748 (751). The Patna High Court has held that the date of the cessation of minority and not the date of attainment of majority is to be excluded under this section—Batuk Prasad v. Rudra Das, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 206.

In calculating the period of limitation for appeals and applications, the day on which the judgment was pronounced or order was made should be excluded—Debicharan v. Mehbi Hussain, 20 C.W.N. 1303, 1 P.L.J. 485 (489); Gujar v. Barve, 2 Bom. 673. See sub-section (2).

Sub-section (2):—This sub-section does not apply to an application for restoration of a suit dismissed for default. The language of the section is clear—Mohan Lal v. Sher Muhammad, 93 I.C. 1023, A.I.R. 1926 Jour. 195.

122. "Time requisite for copy":—The 'time requisite for obtaining a copy' does not mean the time requisite by reason of the carelessness or negligence of the applicant. That is, the delay caused by the carelessness or negligence of the party in applying for a copy or in paying the money required for making the copy cannot be excluded from computation—Parvati v. Bhola, 12 All. 79 (82). The word 'requisite' is a strong word; it may be regarded as meaning something more than the word 'required.' It means 'properly required,' and it throws upon the counsel or pleader for the appellant the necessity of showing that no part of the delay beyond the prescribed period is due to his default—J. N. Surty v. Chettair, 6 Rang. 302 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 103, 32 C.W.N. 845 (849); Ramaseshayya v. Venkatarathnam, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 283, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 823; Bhausaheb v. Sonabai, I.L.R. (1946) Bom. 431, 48 Bom.L.R. 97, A.I.R. 1946 Bom. 437; Abdul v. Abdul, 56 C.W.N. 4 D.R. 25. The words "requisite" and "obtaining" mean that some definite step should be taken by the appellant or the applicant himself towards the attainment of the copy—Keshav Sugar Works v. R. C. Sharma, A I.R. 1951 All. 122, 1950 A L.J. 946. Thus, where according to the rules of the High Court (original side) it is incumbent upon the appellant to make a requisition for the drawing up of the order appealed against, and the party who wanted to prefer an appeal applied for a copy of the order, but made no requisition for the order being drawn up, and it was the respondent who requisitioned for the drawing up of the order, held that the appellant did not take reasonable and proper steps to obtain a copy of the order, and he was not entitled to a deduction of the period from the date of the application for a copy of the order up to the date of obtaining the copy—Kamruddin v. M. N. Mitter, 52 Cal. 342, 89 I.C. 277, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 735; Charity Commissioner v. Padmavati, A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 86. In determining what is the 'time requisite,' the conduct of the appellant must be considered, and no period can be regarded as requisite which need not have elapsed if the appellant (from an order of the Original Side) had taken reasonable and proper steps in making a requisition to obtain the order—Pramatha v. Lee, 49 Cal. 999 (P.C.), 27 C.W.N. 156, 37 C.L.J. 86; Nemichand v. Chateerbhuy, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 64; M. C. Mya v. Mrs. Whittam, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 201; Abdul v. Abdul, supra. Any failure in reasonable diligence which produces unnecessary delay at one or more of the several stages in obtaining a copy of the decree, order or judgment, will disentitle the appellant to claim the whole of the time actually spent in obtaining the copy of the order. The time unnecessarily occupied is not time 'requisite' within the meaning of this section—Sarat Chandra v. Upendra Nath, 54 Cal. 481, 103 I.C. 235, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 623; Lachmibai v. Doulatram, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 53. But a party is not to lose his right of appeal by reason of the neglect or delay of the officials who issue copies or who are required to give notice when such copies are ready—Sheogobind v. Ablakhi, 12 All. 105.

In cases where the period of limitation for filing the appeal is a very short one (e.g, 20 days under Art. 151), the appellant ought to be diligent in applying for copies of the judgment and decree. Where the appellant allowed five days to expire after the decree was signed before applying for a copy, and did not file his appeal, after so obtaining a copy, at the earliest opportunity possible but two days after, when the period of limitation had expired, such a delay, being entirely unaccounted for, was not held to be "time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree"—Ramey v. Broughton, 10 Cal. 652 (660).

This section does not authorise the deduction of time occupied in getting a translation of the decree. Thus, where the decree of the first Court was drawn up in English, but the appellant wanted and obtained a vernacular copy of the decree, and filed it along with the memorandum of appeal in the lower Appellate Court, it was held that the time spent in obtaining the vernacular copy could not be excluded in computing the period of limitation for the presentation of an appeal, in as much as the practice of the lower Appellate Court required an English copy of the decree to be filed with the memorandum and not a translation thereof—Muhammad Amin v. Chiragh, 124 P.L.R. 1917, 39 I.C. 617. But if there has been extreme delay in the office in furnishing the translation, such delay may be a ground for extending the time—Dya Kour v. Amrao Kour, 145 P.R. 1883.

In calculating the period of limitation for filing an appeal, time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment of the appeal and a copy of the decree must be excluded—Mohammad zaman v. Hans Raj, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 707, 182 I.C. 108.

An appellant is entitled to deduct the time spent in obtaining a copy of the first judgment of the trial Court as well as of the judgment passed on review. Where the judgment passed on review does not give all the facts of the case but is merely supplementary to the first judgment, inasmuch as it modifies a portion of the first, it is necessary for the appellant to file copies of both the judgments, as the two must be regarded as one judgment, and the time spent in obtaining both the copies must be deducted—Jagiri v. Doulat, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 755 (756), 112 I.C. 46.

"Time requisite for obtaining copy" means the time beyond the appellant's control occupied by the copyist department after an application for copy has been duly made, and not an ideally shorter period within which it could be shown that the copyist department could prepare a copy. And so, if within the period of limitation, the appellant applies for a copy a few days before the long vacation, so that it takes 82 days to obtain the copy owing to the intervention of the vacation, that period must be excluded, and the respondent cannot object that the appellant ought to have applied earlier to avoid the vacation and that if he had so applied he could have obtaintd the copy within a much shorter time. The Court will not hear such objection, because the only concern of the Court is the time which was actually occupied by the copyist department. The Court is not concerned with the ideally minimum time within which the copyist department could most expeditiously produce a copy—Thirumala v. Anavemareddi, 57 Mad. 560 (F.B.), 66 M.L.J. 687, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. (307), 149 I.C. 172. See this case cited under the next heading.

The time taken in the preparation of a copy anywhere except in the copying department cannot be treated as a time requisite for obtaining a copy of decree, even though it is certified to be a true copy by the office of the copying department —State v. Kashi, A.I.R. 1950 All. 486.

In applying for leave for appeal to the Supreme Court the applicant is not entitled to get any time expended in obtaining a copy of the judgment deducted in computing the period of limitation—Tej Krishen v. Delhi Cloth & General Mills Co., A.I.R. 1950 E P. 195; Dharwar Bank v. Deshpande, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 525.

Two applications for the same copy:—The appellant at first applied for a copy of the decree, and obtained it after 34 days, and then, before the expiry of the period of limitation, applied again for another copy of the decree, for some reason or other which it is unnecessary to ascertain, but on account of the long vacation, the time occupied by the department for this copy was 82 days. He filed the appeal with the second copy. It appeared that if the time occupied in obtaining the first copy (i.e., 34 days) was deducted, the appeal was out of time, but if the time occupied by the second copy (i.e., 82 days) was deducted, the appeal would be in time. The respondent objected that as the appellant had demonstrated in getting the first copy that the time requisite was only 34 days, he could be allowed to deduct 34 days, but not 82 days. But the Full Bench was of opinion that the second application being a reasonable and proper one, as it was made within the period of limitation, the appellant was entitled to deduct the time taken by the copying department in preparing a copy of the decree upon such application. The time requisite for obtaining a copy means the time requisite for obtaining the copy actually accompanying the memorandum of appeal and not some other copy which the appellant might have got earlier—Thirumala v. Anavemareddi, 57 Mad. 560 (F.B.), 66 M.L.J. 687, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 306 (309), 149 I.C. 172; State v. Kashi, A.IR. 1950 All. 486. The Lahore High Court has taken a contrary view in Mathela v. Sher Mohammad, 17 Lah. 621; A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 682, where it has been held that the words "time requisite" have nothing to do with the amount of time spent by the appellant in obtaining the copy which he chooses to file with the memorandum of appeal. The words mean the shortest time during which a copy could have been obtained by the appellant.

123. Computation of time requisite for obtaining copies:—The question as to when the period requisite for taking copies should begin, that is, whether on the day the application for copy is made or on the day on which the folios and fees for the copy are deposited, is matter to be determined by the practice of the Court —Nobin v. Brojendra, 12 C.L.R. 541. The general practice in Bengal is to count the period requisite for copy from the date of the application for the copy and not from the date of deposit of the folios, if there has not been an unreasonable delay in filing folios. Thus, where a party applied for a copy of the decree on the 15th October and the information as to the number of folios required was supplied on the 18th, November, and on the same day the party put in the folios, held that the time requisite for obtaining the copy of the decree was to be counted from the 15th October—Kali Sanker v. Baikanta, 7 C.W.N. 109. But delay in paying the fees after the estimate of the cost of copying has been communicated to the applicant counts against him. In such a case the "time requisite" will be counted from the date of deposit of the fees—Parbati v. Bhola, 12 All. 79 (82); Deoki Lal v. Ramanand Lal, 5 P.L.J. 701 (705), 59 I.C. 179; Topandas v. Manager, 5 S.L.R. 47, 10 I.C. 210. Where requisite stamps and folios as notified are filed on the next day of the application and second requisition for extra stamps is notified before the date given for the delivery of the copy according to the rules made by the High Court but without notifying the same to the applicant or his pleader directly and the applicant comes to know of the second requisition on the date given for the delivery of the copy and supplies the additional stamps and folios on the next Court day, he is entitled to get deduction of the whole period from the date of the application to the date when the copy is ready for delivery —Jamadar v. Naiyab, I.L.R. (1941) 1 Cal. 536, 74 C. L. J. 121, 45 C.W.N. 498, A.I.R, 1941 Cal. 378. When it was notified by the Court to the appellant as to the number of stamps and folios necessary for preparing copies of judgment and decree, and the appellant supplied them in time, but the Court subsequently asked for more folios which were not necessary, and which the appellant supplied after great delay, held that this delay in supplying the additional and unnecessary folios should not count against the appellant—Adarpriya v. Ramprotap, 30 C.W.N. 926, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1105, 98 I.C. 748. According to the practice prevailing in Behar, the applicant for copy should deposit the required number of folios the very next day after that on which the number of folios is notified to him, and if he fails to furnish the folios on that day, he is not entitled to deduct the days during which the preparation of the copy was delayed by such neglect—Ram Asray v Sheo Nandan, 1 P.L.J. 573 (575), 35 I.C. 868. According to the practice of the Oudh Chief Court, it is for the appellant to make the necessary calculation as to the fees necessary for the copy of the judgment, and to deposit the fees accordingly; it is not the duty of the office to make the calculation for the appellant, but only to check the calculation made by the appellant. Consequently, any delay caused by the error of the appellant in making the computation will not be included in the time requisite for obtaining the copy—Gudar Pal v. Nagishar, 2 Luck. 447 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 129, 101 I.C. 136. According to the practice of the Nagpur Court, if the application for a copy of the judgment and decree contains wrong information so that the copying department cannot comply with such application, the time requisite for copy should be counted from the date on which correct information is supplied—Mohammad Khan v. Fatma Bai, 26 N.L.R. 149, 121 I.C. 647, A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 129. According to the same Court in calculating the time requisite for obtaining a copy the applicant is entitled to exclude the date on which he pays the necessary funds—Sitaram v. Wamanrao, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 323, 1947 N.L.J. 206, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 50; (dissenting from the view taken in Ramkrishna v. Shrawn, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 725, 1944 N.L.J. 313, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 356 where it was held the applicant is entitled to exclude only the day on which he was informed about the insufficiency of funds, but not the day of supply of deficit stamp; Mt. Thanwarin v. Darbarilal, 1951 N.L.J. 591, A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 9.

The parties cannot, by unnecessary delay in putting in the requisite number of sheets of stamped paper for the copies extend the period prescribed for appeal. But it would be grossly unfair to disallow the application if the requisite papers were not procurable, or if a mistake were made in calculating the number of sheets required—Gungodass v. Ramjoy, 12 Cal. 30. Sometimes delay might be caused in the receipt by the office of the estimated charges owing to the stamps not being procurable, or to the office not being open to receive payment of those charges when the estimate should have been complied with. Such period of delay, as well as delays arising from similar causes beyond the control of the appellant, and not being the result of any laches on his part, should be allowed in computing the time requisite. Sometimes owing to pressure of work in the copying department, a copy of a decree or judgment cannot be made for some days after the charges for making the copy have been paid. The period of such delay would also be allowed for in computing the time requisite for obtaining the copy—Bechi v. Ashanullah, 12 All. 461 (478, 491) (F.B.).

In case of an appeal from the original side, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the order appealed against begins from a date earlier than that on which the application for copy is made; the time begins from the date on which the appellant has made a requisition that the order should be drawn up and filed—In the goods of Pashupati, 59 Cal. 1215 (F.B.), 36 C.W.N. 469 (477), 137 I.C. 526, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 331, overruling Nibaran Chandra v. Martin and Co., 32 C.L.J. 127, 58 I.C. 408 (409), and approving Bani Madhub v. Matangini, 13 Cal. 104 (F.B.); Jayashankar v. Mayabhai, I.L.R. (1952) Bom. 514, 54 Bom.L.R. 11, A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 122 (F.B.).

Under sub-section (2) the day on which the judgment is pronounced and the time requisite for obtaining copies are excluded from computation. But where an application for copies is made on the same day the judgment is pronounced, that day cannot be excluded twice, once as the day on which the judgment was pronounced, and the second time as one of the days requisite for obtaining copies. In such a case, the day on which the judgment is pronounced is excluded first and then the time requisite for obtaining copies has to be excluded—Ata Muhammad v. Pir Khan. 75 I.C. 1055, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 599; Salam Singh v. Hira, 13 N.L.R. 89, 40 I.C. 425. But in Balkrishna v. Baijnath, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 185, 1939 N.L.J. 173, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 150, it has been held that in such a case, an exceptional one, one day happens to be excluded twice on the ground that the day on which the judgment is pronounced and the days requisite for obtaining copy are distinct and separate in their purpose.

According to the practice of the Patna High Court, when several suits are disposed of in one judgment, in the appeal to the High Court only one copy of the judgment is required to be filed; but the time taken for obtaining a copy of the judgment will be deducted in computing the period of limitation for each of the several analogous appeals —Bibi Umatul v. Ram Charan, 1 P.L.T. 562, 58 I.C. 991.

The time requisite for obtaining a copy ends on the date when the copy is ready for delivery and not when the applicant chooses to apply for its delivery or actually takes delivery—Gopal v. Brojo Behary, 9 C.L.R. 293; Parbati v. Bhola, 12 All. 79 (82, 83); Kali Sankar v. Baikanta, 7 C.W.N. 109; Tolaram v. Jafferkhan, 38 I.C. 464, 10 S.L.R. 165; Ramaseshayya v. Venkatarathnam, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 283, 1938 M.W.N. 847; A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 823; Raichand v. Rahinava, 40 Bom.L.R. 1211, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 46, 179 I.C. 645. The important date is not the date on which the appellant takes delivery but the date on which the copy is ready for delivery, provided he had notice that the copy would be ready on that date—Parbati v. Bhola, supra; Bechi v. Ashanullah, 12 All. 461 (476) (F.B.); and if an appellant fails to inform himself of the date when the copy would be ready, and in consequence he does not obtain it when it is ready for delivery, the period of such delay is not to be included in the time requisite —Bechi v. Ashanullah, 12 All. 461 (491) (F.B.). What has to be regarded is not the time actually spent in securing the copies, but the time 'requisite' for that purpose, therefore the appellant was not entitled to reckon out the days during which the copy of the judgment lay undelivered—Nur Muhammad v. Ram Das, 1919 P.L.R. 4, 50 I.C. 760. Where the appellant was instructed to attend Court on a particular day to ascertain whether the copies were ready or whether any further advance of copying fees was required, and the appellant did not so attend, and did not on that day take any particular steps towards obtaining the copy, it was held that that day could not be deducted from the limitation period as "time requisite for obtaining the copy"—Luchman v. Kalya, 12 N.L.R. 66, 34 I.C. 458. But where no date was fixed by the officers of the Court either as to the date when the copy would be ready or as to the date on which it would be delivered, the "time requisite for obtaining copy" would extend up to the date when the copy was actually delivered—Sheogobind v. Ablakhi, 12 All. 105 (109) (distinguished in 12 All. 461). So also, where the delay in obtaining copy is due to the negligence and carelessness of the copying department in preparing the copy and to the omission to inform the applicant as to the date when he should come to take delivery of the copy, the entire period from the date of the application for copy to the date when delivery of the copy is taken, is to be excluded as the time requisite for obtaining the copy—Pritam v. Khushi, A.I.R. 1951 H.P. 87; (Fouda v. Ganpat, A.I.R. 1920 Pat. 278; Sarkhara v. Nawab, 13 I.C. 850 relied on).

No hard and fast rule can be laid down to meet all cases that occur under this section and each case must be decided on its own merits. But it is possible to lay down as a general rule or principle that the "time requisite" means only the interval between the time when the copy is applied for and the time when it is ready for delivery; that during the interval due diligence on the part of the litigant is required by the law; and that no delay, unless such as was caused by circumstances over which the litigant had no control and which he could not by due diligence have avoided, can form part of the time requisite for obtaining a copy—Bechi v. Ashanullah, 12 All. 461 (478, 479) (F.B.). (1) A 'copying agent' in dealing with an application presented in accordance with the rules, does not act as a private agent of the applicant, but as an official of the copying department, which is entrusted with the duty of preparing and certifying copies. (2) An application for a copy, whether made in person or by post, which bears the necessary Court fees-stamp and is addressed to the proper officer is a valid application, even if it is not accompanied by the full cost of preparing and certifying the copy. (3) Under the rules for the supply of copies referred to above, the time necessary for ascertaining the cost of preparing a copy is time requisite for obtaining the copy within the meaning of sec. 12, Limitation Act, and an applicant is entitled to exclude from the prescribed period of limitation the period between the date of presentation of the application and the date on or by which the full cost of preparing the required copy is deposited, provided he deposits with reasonable diligence the aforesaid amount as and when required by the copying department and provided further that in the case of an application made by post, he remits Rs. 5 with the application (as required by rules).

"The application is complete when it has been presented to the proper authority duly stamped, and if the applicant complies, with all reasonable diligence, with the requirements of the copying department, he is entitled to the benefit of section 12, Limitation Act, with respect to the whole period which elapses between the time of presentation of his application and the time of receipt of his copies; if delay is occasioned by his conduct between these two points of time, he cannot obtain any benefit in respect of the period of delay...."—Kishore Chand v. Bahadur, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 771, 17 Lah. 429, 38 P.L.R. 493 (F.B.) (A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 625, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 889, overruled). A litigant cannot be made to suffer for the laches and any inaction of any department connected with the administration of justice, and there is no reason why a party should lose his right of appeal for the dilatory methods of copying department. The copying department is not the agent of the applicant for copies but of the particular department of the Government which is in charge of the Deputy Commissioner—Piare Lal v. Karta Ram, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 550, 38 P.L.R. 220, 163 I.C. 223, a case from the Punjab—Rura Mal v. Ram Chand, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 200. When there has been no mistake of counsel, no negligence nor inaction nor want of bona fides imputable to the applicant but the delay in giving a copy is due to the slipshod and negligent procedure of the copying department, the time which the department itself notes as having elapsed between the application and the completion of the copy is to be regarded as the "time requisite" within the meaning of sec. 12 (2)—Labhu Ram v. Bansi Dhar, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 120.

Defective application for copy:—A defective application for copy does not entitle the applicant to a deduction of time under this section. Thus, an application for a copy of a decree was returned as the date of judgment or other particulars were not given. A subsequent application was put in. Held that the time that could be deducted was not the whole period of time from the putting in of the first application, but only the period during which the second application was pending—Babu Lal v. Rampher, 91 I.C. 425 (Oudh). See also B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co. v. Firm Ram Sarup, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 59, 98 I.C. 942. But if the defect is not discovered and brought to the notice of the applicant immediately, the days between the date of the presentation of the application and the late on which the defect is shown to the applicant at a later stage can be excluded as days requisite for obtaining copies—Hudas v. Banwarilal, I.L.R. 1948 Nag. 167, 1947 N.L.J. 552, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 395. The same view has been taken in Hira v. Indrabahadar, I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 312, 1938 N.L.J. 159, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 287 where it has been held that though a party gives a wrong suit number, if the office takes time to find out the mistake, the party should not suffer for such delay. Where an application for copies of judgment and decree was struck off for non-deposit of stamp papers and a subsequent application for restoration of the previous application was granted, the subsequent application was a continuation of the former one—Ramanuja v. Narayana, 18 Mad. 374.

124. Court closed when copy ready:—If the copying department of the Court is working during the vacation to make up arrears, under the special order of the District Judge, and the copy of the decree is ready for delivery on one of these days and notice is posted on the notice-board that the copy is ready, the appellant is not bound to take cognizance of this notice or to take delivery of the copy until the Court re-opens after the vacation; he is entitled to deduct the time up to the date of re-opening of the Court—Khub Chand v. Harmukh, 34 All. 41, 8 A.L.J. 1905, 12 I.C. 183.

But where in accordance with the High Court's Rules, a notification had been published that arrangements would be made for granting copies during the vacation, held that all steps for obtaining copies must be taken during the vacation, and the period between the date on which the copies were ready for delivery during the vacation and the day of re-opening of the Court will not be deducted as time requisite for obtaining copies—Appalaswami v. Narayanaswami, 36 M.L.J. 62, 49 I.C. 626. Where printing charges for copies were called for on the last Court day before the vacation, and they were paid only on the re-opening of the Court, but there was a notification that arrangements would be made for granting copies during the vacation, held that the period of the vacation could not be deemed as part of the period requisite for obtaining the copies—Kadir Mohideen v. Syed Abubakkar, 36 M.L.J. 122, 50 I.C. 518 (519).

125. Copy sent by post:—Where a copy of the judgment and decree is applied for and sent by post in accordance with the rules for the supply of copies through the post, the period intervening between the completion and the despatch of the copies should be included in the time requisite for obtaining the copies. That is, the time to be allowed for granting copies should be calculated from the date of application up to the date when the copies are despatched, and not up to the date when the copies are ready for delivery—Allah Baksh v. Municipal Committee, 27 P.L.R. 18, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 223, 92 I.C. 966; Ghulla Singh v. Sohan, 3 Lah. 280, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 219, 69 I.C. 818; Iqbal Jeehan v. Mathura, 6 O.L.J. 660, 54 I.C. 831 (Oudh); Krishna v. Balia, 8 N.L.R. 11, 14 I.C. 403; Paga v. Sadasheo, 8 N.L.R. 172, 17 I.C. 624; Raghu v. Mandgia, 10 N.L.R. 139, 26 I.C. 819. Even though the applicant could have got his copies several days earlier by presenting himself at the Court, he does not forfeit his claim to indulgence because he arranged to have the copies sent by post. These days cannot be excluded from computation under section 12, but they may be excluded in considering the question of indulgence under sec. 5—Sripat v. Hubdar, 2 O.W.N. 678, 90 I.C. 115, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 643. See also Madan v. Puran, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 84, 26 P.L.R. 738, 91 I.C. 6. The applicant for copy of the decree was not told when the copy would be ready; and after the copy was ready, it was kept in the office for 15 days, and afterwards sent by post to the applicant, who filed the appeal on the very day he received the copy. Held that the appeal ought to be accepted—Madan v. Puran, supra.

126. Separate applications for copies of judgment and decree:—Where a party applies for copies of judgment and of decree at different times, the aggregate of the periods may be deducted under sub-sections (2) and (3)—Selamban v. Ramanadhan, 33 Mad. 256; Vellaiyammal v. Koolayanna, 41 M.L.J. 273; Narasimhulu v. Secy. of State, 1912 M.W.N. 1001, 17 I.C. 393; Raman Chetty v. Kadirvelu, 8 M.L.J. 148; Rajani Kanta v. Kali Mohan, 21 C.W.N. 217, 38 I.C. 66; Macmillen and Co., Ld. v. Cooper, 48 Bom. 292, 25 Bom.L.R. 1309, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 185; Timappa v. Manjaya, 48 Bom. 433, 26 Bom.L.R. 362, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 425; Jadunandan v. Hanuman, 4 P.L.T. 619, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 113, 77 I.C. 701; Gul Rahman v. Mt. Zar Jan, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 179, 164 I.C. 1069; Girish v. Narayan, 65 C.L.J. 415. The Punjab Chief Court once held that the mere fact that a party applied for copies of judgment and decree at different times, did not entitle him to a deduction of both the periods. An appellant could deduct only the time actually requisite for obtaining the copies. The question whether, when it was open to a party to apply for both copies of judgment and decree at once, he could apply first for one and then for the other, and claim to exclude the two periods as both requisite, was held to be a question of fact to be decided on the circumstances of the case, and not a question of law—Sher Singh v. Prem Raj, 100 P.R. 1918, 48 I.C. 31. But in more recent cases, the Lahore High Court has held that the appellant is not bound to ask for both copies in the same application; and he is entitled to apply for copies of the judgment and the decree at two different periods, and to deduct the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree as well as the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment under sub-sections (2) and (3), respectively—Ali Muhammad v. Nathu, 163 P.R. 1919, 54 I.C. 879, 1 Lah.L.J. 106; Kanshi Ram v. Karam Narain, 3 Lah.L.J. 166, 60 I C. 259, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 124.

Where some portions of these two periods overlap each other, the time overlapped should be excluded only once—Rajani Kanta v. Kali Mohan, 21 C.W.N. 217, 38 I.C. 66; Ramzan v. Md. Ishaq, 47 All. 509, A.I.R. 1925 All. 436, 23 A.L.J. 342; Raman Chetti v. Kadirvelu, 8 M.L J. 148; Macmillan and Co., Ld. v. Cooper, 48 Bom. 292, 25 Bom.L.R. 1309, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 185; Sunder Nag v. Raghunath, 12 I.C. 677; Badshah Miyan v. Pandurang, 26 N.L.R. 66 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 113 (116); Gul Rahman v. Mt. Zar Jan, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 179; Kanji v. Velji, 52 Bom L.R. 405, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 360; Manoorai v. Keshwarrai, 26 Pat. 295, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 260.

Applications for copies of the judgment and the decree must be made before the expiry of the time for filing an appeal. Now, it is settled by authorities that the applications made at different times entitle the appellant to take advantage of the time occupied in obtaining the copies of both judgment and decree. Hence, if the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment extends the time of limitation, then the application made for obtaining a copy of the decree after the time fixed by the law of limitation for filing an appeal but before the extension of time allowed by reason of time required for obtaining the copy of the judgment expires, will entitle the appellant to further extension of time for obtaining the copy of the decree—Jadunandan v. Hanuman, 4 P.L.T. 619, 77 I.C. 701, A.I R. 1924 Pat. 113; Ramzan v. Md. Ishaq, 47 All. 509, 23 A.L.J. 342, 87 I C. 484, A.I.R. 1925 All. 436; Rajani Kanta v. Kali Mohan, 21 C.W.N. 217; Selamban Chetty v. Ramanandhan, 33 Mad. 256, 21 M L J. 152, 4 I.C. 301; Raja Ram v. Nanhe Mal, 95 I.C. 302, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 529; Harjimal v. Dhanpatmal, 15 S.L.R. 16, 62 I.C. 537; Din Dayal v. Rameshwar, 18 O.C. 74, 2 O.L.J. 159, 28 I.C. 366; Badshah Miyan v. Pandurang, 26 N.L R. 66 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 113 (116) (overruling Parasram v. Likhan, 7 N.L.R. 67, 10 I.C. 866); Mathura v. Ram, 1938 R.D. 270. See also Pannalal v. Khemchand, 40 Bom. L R. 389, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 288; Ram Babu v. Shyam, 1938 R.D. 78. The law does not require that the copies of both judgment and decree must be applied for simultaneously; it is a well recognised practice for an unsuccessful litigant to obtain a copy of the judgment first so that he may consider whether he will appeal or not; and then he may apply for a copy of the decree. In such a case, the aggregate period taken in obtaining copies of judgment and decree will be excluded—Ramachandra v Mayaram, 106 I.C. 57, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 131 (132).

127. Non-signing of decree:—Where the intending appellant having applied for certified copies of the judgment and decree, the copy of the judgment was delivered to him, and at the same time an unused folio and the Court fee filed for the copy of the decree were also returned because the decree had not been signed, and the applicant had to make a fresh application for a copy of the decree after it had been signed, held that the first application for a copy of the decree should be treated as pending all the time, so that the applicant would be entitled to the deduction of the time between the signing of the decree and the date when the copy of the decree was ready for delivery—Tarabati v. Lala Jagdeo, 15 C.W.N. 787, 10 I.C. 542.

The date of the decree is for the purposes of this Act the date of the judgment. But if the decree appealed against is signed on a date subsequent to the date of delivery of judgment, the period between the date of the judgment and the date of signing the decree shall not be excluded, unless the appellant has applied for a copy of the decree before it is signed and and has been delayed by reason of the decree not having been signed—Parbati v. Bhola, 12 All. 79 (81, 82); Maung Po v. Ma Lay, 7 Rang. 18, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 116; Topandas v. Manager, 5 S.L.R. 47, 10 I.C. 210; Khudadad v. Moriokhan, 9 S.L.R. 193, 34 I.C. 867. The principle is that the "time requisite for copy" does not begin until an application for a copy has been made, and the period during which the decree remained unsigned (i.e., the period between the date of judgment and the date of signing the decree) cannot be excluded unless the application for a copy of the decree has been made before it is signed; therefore, where the appellant has made no application for copies of judgment and decree before the decree has been signed, the non-signature of the decree can have no effect at all upon him, and he is not entitled to ask the Court to deduct the period between the date ot the judgment and the date of signing the decree, because in such a case it cannot be said that he was prevented from filing his application for copy by reason of the decree not being signed—Bechi v. Ahsanullah, 12 All. 461 (F.B.); Jyotindra v. Lodna Colliery Co., Ld., 6 P.L.J. 350 (F.B.), 2 P.L.T. 361, 62 I.C. 649; Yamaji v. Antaji, 23 Bom. 442 (445); Harish Chandra v. Chandpur Co., Ld., 39 Cal. 766 (772), 15 I.C. 59; Dindayal v. Anopi, 22 N.L.R. 60, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 349, 97 I.C. 307; Umda v Rupchandra, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 1, 98 I.C. 1057; Maung Baw v. Maung Yan, 1939 Rang.L.R. 686; Shivan v. Radha, 196 I.C. 654, A.I.R. 1941 Pesh. 74; Jiwan v. Rakhmat, A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 212, 43 P.L.R. 88, 195 I.C. 157; Governor General in Council v. Jesraj, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 83. "It appears to me upon general principles that it would be defeating the object of limitation to allow the would-be appellant to sleep over his right of appeal for more than the limitation period, and then, by the accidental or unavoidable delay in the decree being prepared, to claim extension of the period of limitation for appealing from a decree, for obtaining a copy of which he had not taken even the first step by filing an application therefor. The words 'requisite' and 'obtaining' as they occur in the context seem to assume that some definite step ancillary to the obtaining is not only intended to be taken but has already been taken. If at the time when the applicaion for copy is made, the decree is not ready, he will of course be entitled to the allowance of the time during which the decree remained unsigned, the reason being obvious that the act of obtaining has already commenced and the delay in such a case could not be referred to any omission or neglect on his part. But when he has made no application to obtain a copy, and the decree remains unsigned for a portion of or the whole period of limitation, he cannot claim the benefit of a matter which in no sense and to no extent frustrated or retarded any endeavour on his part to obtain a copy of the decree, the endeavour itself not having yet commenced."—Bechi v. Ahsanullah, 12 All. 461 (471) (F.B.). This case has been followed in a recent Full Bench case—Keshar Sugar Works v. R. C. Sharma, 1950 A.L.J. 39, A.I.R. 1951 All. 122. See also Raja Mahommed v. Lal Bahadur, 12 O.L.J. 144, 2 O.W.N. 420, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 600, 89 I.C. 479. Where an application for copy of the decree was presented before the signing of the decree, but ubon a wrong statement of the clerk of the Court that the application for copy would not be accepted unless the decree was drawn up, the application was withdrawn, held that this was not an active application for a copy of the decree, and the time between the date of judgment and the date of signing the decree could not be deducted —Maung Po v. Ma Lay, 7 Rang. 18, 117 I.C. 251, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 116. On the other hand, it has been held that the right of appeal does not come into existence until a proper decree comes into existence, and until a decree has been drawn up there can be no appeal. There can be no legal obligation on a litigant to apply for a copy of the decree which is non-existent: the existence of a decree is a necessary condition precedent to the accrual of even the right or obligation to apply for a copy. Where a decree is not drawn up within the period of limitation prescribed for preferring an appeal against the decree the suit must be deemed to be pending up to the date on which the decree is actually drawn up, and limitation for preferring an appeal will commence to run only from that date. Where a suitor is unable to obtain a copy of a decree from which he desires to appeal, by reason of the decree being unsigned, he is entitled under sec. 12, Limitation Act, to deduct the time between the delivery of the judgment and that of the signing of the decree in computing the time taken in presenting the appeal—Bani Madhab v. Matungini, (1886) 15 Cal. 104 (F.B.); Sarat v. Rati, 43 C.W.N. 1139, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 711; Yusuf v. Mahomed Kazim, 15 Luck. 376, 1940 O.W.N. 158, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 173 (failure to apply before the decree is signed is immaterial); Jadubir v. Sheo Naresh, 19 Luck. 456, 1943 O.W.N. 408; A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 154. A Full Bench decision of the Patna High Court in Ram Asray Singh v. Sheonandan, (1916) Pat. 267, 1 P.L.J. 573, 35 I.C. 686 lays down that in appeals the period of limitation should be calculated from the date on which the decree was actually signed. The Full Bench decision in Ram Asray's case (1 P.L.J. 573) was held not to express the law correctly by a Full Court in Jyotindra v. Lodna Colliery Co., Ld., 6 P.L.J. 350, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 175, 62 I.C. 640, but the latter case was again overruled (so far as it decided that the period between the date of judgment and the application for the copy of the decree can in no case be excluded) by a Full Court of the same High Court in the case of Gabriel Christian v. Chandramohan, 15 Pat. 284, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 45, 16 P.L.T. 849, 160 I.C. 447; Kameshwar v. Kuseshwar, 1938 P.W.N. 781, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 135, 20 Pat.L.T. 316. The same view was adopted in Pandu v. Rajeshwor, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 271, 20 N.L.R. 131, 78 I.C. 996; and also in Khan Chand v. Gurdit Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 976. It is true that under Or. 20, r. 7, Civil Procedure Code, the date of the decree is the date of the judgment, but it is equally true that decrees in many cases are actually prepared and signed long after the date on which the judgments are pronounced and signed. Under these circumstances there is no principle on which a litigant can be penalized when he has done all that lay in his power in the way of making an application promptly and depositing the copying fee on the date on which the decree sheet had been drawn up—Khan Chand v. Gurdit Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 976 (13 Cal. 104 (F.B.), 1 P.L.J. 573 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 271 followed). In order to secure the benefit of the time that elapsed until the date when the decree is signed, it is not necessary for an appellant to apply for a copy of the decree before the expiry of the period of limitation for the appeal if the application is made even a day before the decree is signed—Tulsidas v. Parsram, I.L.R. (1947) Kar. 76, A.I.R. 1948 Sind. 18. The Full Bench case of Gabriel Christian v. Chandramohan, supra, has recently been approved of by the Bombay High Court in a Full Bench case—Muralidhar Shrinivas v. Motilal Ramcoomar, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 162, 39 Bom.L.R. 32, 168 I.C. 77—an Original Side Appeal. The decision in Yamji v. Antaji, 23 Bom. 442, and N. P. G. B. Co. v. Jivabhai, 15 Bom.L.R. 681, 20 I.C. 537 holding that the time required for obtaining copy of the decree cannot be excluded when no application for such copy was made till after the expiration of the time limited for appeal, were overruled; Balappa v. Dyamappa, 42 Bom.L.R. 872, A.I.R. 1940 Bom 415. And in the recent case of Sudhansubhusan Pandey v. Majho Bibi, 41 C.W.N. 72, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 732, Biswas J., has held that in respect of appeal to District Courts the appellant is entitled to a deduction of the period between the signing of the judgment and the signing of the decree; his appeal is within time, it is immaterial that he did not apply for the copy of the judgment within 30 days from when it was available.

The words "time requisite for obtaining copy of the decree appealed from" in section 12 mean "the time which would have been necessary in any case." And no period which may be under the control of the appellant between the date upon which judgment is pronounced (which is the date of the decree under the Civil Procedure Code) and the date on which the appeal was filed can be considered as the time requisite within the meaning of section 12. In most cases the decree of the trial Court follows upon the judgment without the parties being required to do anything in the interval; and in such cases the appellant will be entitled to the exclusion of the time between the judgment and the decree. In exceptional cases, such (for instance) as cases of partition and mesne profits, the drawing up of the final decree may depend upon the filing of the necessary stamp paper or Court fees; in such cases the exclusion of time in favour of the party who is to file the Court-fees will depend upon the circumstances, but other parties to whom no responsibility attaches for the delay will be entitled to exclude the time; Gabriel Christian v. Chandra Mohan Missir. 15 Pat. 284, 160 I.C. 447, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 45 (F.B.). So where the Court does not direct as provided in sec. 29 (g) of the Stamp Act the proportion of stamp to be borne by each party in a suit for partition and in consequence whereof a party has to postpone furnishing the full amount of the stamp paper required, there is no delay on the part of the party in furnishing the stamps and in computing limitation for filing an appeal against the decree the time taken in obtaining the copies of the decree and judgment must be excluded—Nallendra v. Venkatachala, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 413, (1947) 2 M L J. 201, 1947 M.W N. 501. But where under order of the Court no decree can be drawn up until stamp duty is paid by the parties or any one of them, and there is delay in such payment the rule of exclusion of time between the date of judgment and the signing of the decree has no application—Abdul v. Abdul, 47 P.L.R. 193. A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 233. The time occupied in an attempt to obtain a variation of the order as to costs and in an attempt by application to the Registrar to get the order dated as of a particular date is time requisite for obtaining a copy of the order within the meaning of section 12, Limitation Act, although the variation made may have been different from that asked for and the application about the date of the order may have been foredoomed to failure and may have failed—H. Hodge v. Shahebzada Md. Kamgar Shah, 41 C.W.N. 650, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 702, 65 C.L.J. 289, 1937 P.W.N. 312, A.I.R. 1937 (P.C.) 107, 1937 A.L.J. 440 (P.C.).

128. Time taken in preparation of decree or order:—According to the practice prevailing in the Original Side of the High Court, a decree or order is not drawn up unless one or other of the parties applies for the drawing up of the same, and the appellant is as of right entitled to the exclusion of the time properly required for the drawing up of the decree or order (i.e., the period from the date of the judgment to the date when the decree is drawn up) provided that no part of the delay is due to his default or laches; as for instance, where he makes a requisition for drawing up of the order immediately after the order is passed—In the goods of Pasupati, 59 Cal. 1215 (F B.), 36 C.W.N. 469 (477), 137 I.C. 526, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 331 (overruling Nibaran Chandra v. Martin & Co., 32 C.L.J. 127); Bani Madhab v. Matangini, 13 Cal. 104 (F B.); Arun Chandra v. Md. Majib, A.I.R. 1955 Assam 129; Jayashankar v. Mayabhai, I L.R (1952) Bom. 514, 54 Bom.L.R. 11, A.I.R. 1952 Bom. 122 (F.B.); Mohan Singh v. Murarilal, 1957 Mad-B. 188. If the appellant had made no requisition for the drawing up of the order until after the period of 20 days for the filing of the appeal (Art. 151) had expired, there was an unreasonable delay on his part, and the period intervening between the date when the judgment was pronounced and the date when the order was drawn up could not be deducted—Pramatha v. Lee, 23 C.W.N. 553; on appeal, 49 Cal. 999 (P.C.), 27 C.W.N. 156, 37 C.L.J. 86. See also Kamruddin v. M. N. Mitter, 52 Cal. 342, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 735, 89 I.C. 277. In Sarat Chandra v. Upendra, 54 Cal. 481 (483), 103 I.C. 235, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 623, it was broadly stated that an application for a copy of the order must be made within 20 days of the date of pronouncement of the order. But this is no longer correct in view of the Full Bench decision in 59 Cal. 1215 cited above; in this case the appellant filed a requisition for drawing up of the order within 20 days from the date of passing the order, but the order was drawn up more than two months after is was pronounced, and the appellant had applied for a copy of the order before it was drawn up though more than 20 days after it was pronounced ,and it was held that the appellant was not guilty of any laches, and that he was entitled to an exclusion of the whole of the time between the date of pronouncement of the order and the date on which the copy of the order was delivered to him (though this time occupied nearly 3 months). (See also Sudhansubhusan v. Majhobibi, 42 C.W.N. 75 where the difference between the practice of the Original Side of the High Court and that of Courts in the Mofussil in this respect is pointed out.)

Where the appellants made the requisition for the drawing up of a decree in due time, but the decree could not be drawn up because certain amendments in the plaint regarding the addition of some parties were not made and could not be carried out in the cause-title, because of such amendments not having been properly verified during the hearing of the suit owing to neglect on the part of the appellants (plaintiffs) themselves, it was held that this delay in the preparation of the decree could not be excluded—Brijlal v. Girindra Sekhar Bose, 61 Cal. 306, 38 C.W.N. 702 (706), 151 I.C. 809, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 543.

129. Closing of Court after delivery of judgment:—Where the Court was closed for the vacation on and from the day following that on which the judgment was pronounced, and the appellant applied for a copy of the judgment on the next re-opening day, held that in the circumstances of the case, the time during which the Court was closed should be excluded as it must be taken to be a part of the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment—Saminatha v. Venkatasubba. 27 Mad. 21; Sri Chandan v. Haroo Sheikh, 13 C.L.J. 544, 11 I.C. 387; Abdul Ghaffar v. Rasulunnissa, 25 O.C. 71, 68 I.C. 250, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 39; Uma Shankar v. Abdul Karim, 17 Luck. 314, 1941 O.W.N. 1223. There is a difference of opinion as to whether the appellant is entitled to deduct the period of vacation if the application for copy is made not on the re-opening day but a few days later. According to the Madras and Patna High Courts the period is to be deducted on the ground that the date on which the application for copy is made has no bearing on the question whether or not the period of the vacation should be deducted—Saminatha v. Venkatasubba, 27 Mad. 21; Subramaniyam v. Narasimham, 43 Mad. 640, 38 M.L.J. 465; Debi Charan v. Mehdi, 1 P.L.J. 485 (490), 20 C.W.N. 1303, 35 I.C. 888; Munshi v. Lachman. 10 P.L.T. 545, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 615. But according to the Allahabad High Court the period of limitation cannot be extended if the application for copy is not filed on the re-opening day—Puttu Lal v. Bhagwan, I.L.R. (1938) All. 209, 1337 A.L.J. 1279, A.I.R. 1938 All. 106.

Even where a judgment is delivered on the day preceding the last working day before the Court's vacation for a month, and an application for a copy is made on the very day on which the Court re-opens after the vacation, the appellant is entitled to the indulgence of having his application for copy being accepted as equivalent to an application made a month earlier. He acts with due diligence and is entitled to have the time extended under the provisions of section 5. The principle is that it is unreasonable to cut down to 24 hours the time for a party to read and consider a judgment delivered against him, to come to a decision whether he would or would not appeal and file an application for copies of the judgment and decree. If the law is strictly applied, the appellant would have to make his decision all in one day. But it is unreasonable to expect him to get so much down in the time—Sripat v. Hubdar, 2 O.W.N. 678, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 643, 90 I.C. 115.

Closing of Court after notifying number of folios required:—If there be any holiday or holidays immediately following the day on which the requisite number of folios and stamps was notified to the appellant, the holiday or holidays must always be excluded in computing the period of limitation, irrespective of the fact whether the stamps and folios are supplied on the re-opening day or on a later day—Ismail Chowdhury v. Kali Charan, 58 Cal. 939, 35 C.W.N. 451 (452), 134 I.C. 895, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 731. Judgment was delivered on 30th May. Vacation began on 3rd June, and ended on 2nd July. Appeal was filed on 3rd July, but being not accompanied by copies of judgment and decree, was returned for proper presentation by an order on 7th July. Copies were applied for on 3rd July. They were ready on 12th July, and delivery of same was taken on 13th July. The appeal was again presented on 13th July and was admitted on 17th July. There was a deficiency of Court fee which was on 17th July ordered to be made good within a week. This was done. The appeal was held to be filed within time—Sukhandan v. Raja Ahmad, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 26. In Gondaji v. Kisan, A.I.R. 1921 Nag. 141, 61 I.C. 889, it was held that where the original advance is insufficient and the deficiency is supplied on a day immediately following a holiday credit may be given for the period during which the deficiency could not be supplied. And in B. Rai v. Thunmansingh, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 289, the same principle was applied to "supplying correct information."

130. Application for copy made after re-opening while right of appeal subsists:—Provided that copies of judgment and decree have not been obtained previously, if the period for the presentation of an appeal expires on a day on which the Court is closed, and if the appellant applies for copies of the decree and judgment on the date of the re-opening of the Court, whilst his right of appeal is still alive (by virtue of sec. 4) he is entitled to the benefit of this section, and if his appeal be presented on the day he gets the copies (or even on the next day) it is not barred by limitation—Siyadatun-nissa v. Muhammad Mahmud, 19 All. 342 (347); Megh Baran v. Ram Das, 89 I.C. 956, A.I.R. 1926 All. 111; Pandharinath v. Sankar, 25 Bom. 586 (588); Tukaram v. Pandurang, 25 Bom. 584 (585); Attri v. Ramkishan, 11 Lah. 111, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 216, 120 I.C. 169; Naman v. Gurditta, 89 I.C. 437, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 121; Ma Dan v. Tan Chong, 6 Rang. 743, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 96; Kashibai v. Kannoo, 11 N.L.R. 104, 29 I.C. 833; Asa v. Hira, 40 P.L.R. 74, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 317. And the result is the same if the application is made during the vacation, after the period of limitation, while the right of appeal still subsists owing to the closing of the Court—Ram Chand v. Ram Rattan, 10 Lah.L.J. 257, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 655 (656). In other words, copies can be applied for at any time when the right of appeal is still subsisting, even though the application is made after the expiry of the period of limitation—Ram Chand v. Ram Ratan, supra (dissenting from Guran v. Bindraban, 79 P.R. 1916, 125 P.L.R. 1916, 35 I.C. 233).

But if the copies were obtained before the commencement of the vacation, and the time requisite for obtaining the copies and the period of limitation prescribed by the 1st schedule added together expired on a day on which the Court was closed, section 4 would enable the appellant to present his appeal only on the day of the re-opening of the Court and not on a later date, and the appeal would not be in time unless presented on the date that the Court re-opened—Siyadatunnissa v. Muhammad Mahmud, 19 All. 342 (347).

If the judgment was delivered nearly 3 months before the closing of the District Court for vacation and the application for copy was made on the re-opening day when the right of appeal did not subsist, the appellant was not entitled to a deduction of the holidays because he had sufficient time within which he could have made the application before the Court closed—Venkata Row v. Venkata Chella, 28 Mad. 452 (453); Sundaram v. Andi, 1911 M.W.N. 364, 11 I.C. 339.

131. Copy taken by another party:—This section does not require that the application for copy must be made by the party himself—Rudra v. Raghuraj, 23 I.C. 209. When it appeared that the appellant applied within the prescribed period for a copy of the decree appealed from but allowed the application to be dismissed for non-payment of the copying charges, and subsequently filed the appeal together with a copy of the decree which had been obtained by another party, it was held that the appellant was entitled to a deduction of the time taken in obtaining this latter copy. There are no grounds for importing into the section the restriction that the copy of the decree must have been obtained on the application of the appellant himself—Aminuddin v. Pyari, 43 Mad. 633, 38 M.L.J. 340, 56 I.C. 73 (dissenting from Ramamurthi v. Subramania, 12 M.L.J. 385). The language of section 12 is very general. It does not say by whom the copy is to be obtained. The time requisite for obtaining copies of decree and judgment should be excluded from computation of the period of limitation, and it is not necessary that the application for the copies should be made by the appellant or some duly authorised agent, nor it is necessary to show for what purpose the copies were obtained—Ram Kishan v. Kashi Bai, 29 All. 264. In this case the copy had been applied for by the clerk of the appellant's Vakil, in his own name. The same view has been taken in Majidan v. Dalmir, A.I.R. 1951 Punj. 388; Chandu v. Mast Ram, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 135, 149 I.C. 1127.

In Nafisuddin v. Secretary of State, 9 Lah. 244, 104 I.C. 397, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 858 (859), however, where a copy of the award did not show who was the applicant for the copy or to whom the copy was delivered, the Court refused to deduct the time required for obtaining the copy of the award, under sub-section (4) of this section.

In The State v. Kaidia, A.I.R. 1952 H. P. 6 it has been held that in an appeal under sec. 417, Cr. P. Code, the Government is not entitled to the benefit of sec. 12 (2), where the copy of the judgment is applied for and taken delivery of by the father of the person alleged to have been murdered and not by the Government.

132. Criminal appeal:—In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a criminal appeal, the time taken in forwarding an application by the prisoner for a copy of the judgment and in transmitting the same from the Court to the jail must be excluded along with the time taken in the actual preparation of the copies in the office of the Court—Empress v. Lingaya, 9 Mad. 258 (259). See also Gallagher v. Emp., 54 Cal. 52, 101 I.C. 657, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 307.

But the time spent in obtaining a copy of the diary orders in the case, which were filed with the appeal, should not be excluded. There is no provision of law in the Cr. P. Code nor any rule of the Court requiring to deduct this period—U. Zagriya v. Emp. 3 Rang. 220, 4 Bur.L.J. 44, 89 I.C. 459, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 239.

132A. Miscellaneous appeal:—Where a formal decree has been drawn up in a miscellaneous case under sec. 47, C. P. Code, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of such a decree, which embodies the complete adjudication in the case, is to be deducted under section 12, Limitation Act—Mahesh Kanta v. Chowdhury Ram Prasad, 1 P.L.T. 33, 54 I.C. 630.

The plaintiff after having obtained a decree, applied under sec. 476, Cr. P. Code to prosecute the defendant for having made certain false statements in his written statement. The Munsif rejected the application on 21st May, 1924, and an appeal was filed in the Sessions Court under sec. 476B, after more than 30 days allowed by Art. 154 of the Limitation Act. But the application of the plaintiff was treated as separate miscellaneous civil case and a copy of the formal order was drawn up embodying the result of the judgment passed in the case, and the plaintiff had applied and obtained a copy of the formal order, according to the rules of the Court, before appealing to the Sessions Court. Held that the time taken for obtaining the copy of the formal order should be deducted under section 12 of the Limitation Act, and the appeal was within time—Daulat v. Kanhaiya, 47 All. 462, 23 A.L.J. 297, A.I.R. 1925 All. 419, 87 I.C. 417.

133. Application for leave to appeal to Privy Council or Federal Court or Supreme Court:—Section 12 of the Act of 1877 was restricted to an application for leave to appeal as a pauper and did not apply to an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council; see Anderson v. Periasami, 15 Mad. 169; Moroba v. Ghanasham, 19 Bom. 301; Shib Singh v. Gandharb Singh, 28 All. 391. But the general language of section 12 of the present Act does cover such an application, and the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree of the High Court will be excluded from computation under sub-section (2)—Ram Sarup v. Jaswant, 38 All. 82, 13 A.L.J. 1114, 31 I.C. 906; Abdulla v. Administrator-General, 42 Cal. 35, 18 C.W.N. 1066; Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co. v. Purna, 39 Cal. 510, 15 I.C. 497; Gulabchandji v. Gulab Singh, 24 N.L.R. 97, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 63; even if it is not necessary under the rules to file a copy of the decree along with the application for leave to appeal—Keshur Sugar Works v. R. C. Sharma, 1950 A.L.J. 946, A.I.R. 1951 All. 122 (F.B.). But he is not entitled to get any time extended in getting a copy of the decree which he did not apply for—Tej Krishen v. Delhi Cloth and General Mills, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 195 (for leave to appeal in Federal Court).

The time spent in obtaining a copy of the judgment also will be excluded under sub-section (3), because it is generally necessary that the judgment on which the decree of the High Court is based should be obtained in order that the parties may satisfy themselves by reference to it exactly what its terms are, and further because the Rules of the High Court require a copy of the judgment to be filed with the application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council—Mahabir Prasad v. Jamuna Singh, 1 Pat. 429 (431), 3 P.L.T. 289, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 255, 68 I.C. 88. The Rangoon High Court has held that the copy of the judgment should be before the Court. So under sub-section (3) the period spent for obtaining the copy is to be excluded—R. K. Banerjee v. Alagammai, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 82. Although sub-section (3) does not in terms apply to an application for leave to appeal, still the words "when a decree is appealed from" may be interpreted to mean "when a decree is sought to be appealed from," and then the words would apply to an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council; the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment may therefore be excluded—In re Collector of Changleput, 48 Mad. 939, 49 M.L.J. 418, 90 I.C. 601, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1241; Mahalakshmamma v. Thirunavukkarasu, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 229, 1944 M.W.N. 160, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 430; Hunter v. Ehsan, 16 Luck. 638; A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 247. The Sind Court and Lahore High Court have laid down that since sub-section (3) does not expressly speak of an application for leave to appeal but only of appeal and review of judgment, the time spent in obtaining a copy of the judgment cannot be deducted in an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council—Nur Mahomed v. Hassonmal, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 60; 78 I.C. 953; Ghulam v. Abdul, A.I.R. 1950 Lah. 76. Moreover the Rules of these Courts do not require a copy of the judgment in such a case.

The Allahabad High Court in its recent Full Bench decision in Baldeo Pershad

v. Dwarika, A.I.R. 1957 All. 334 overruled its previous decisions reported in A.I.R. 1935 All. 99 and 1926 All. 286 and held that in computing the period of limitation for an application for leave to appeal, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment complained of must be excluded.

Applicant for leave to the Federal Court is not entitled to get any time spent in obtaining a copy of the judgment—Tej Krishen v. Delhi Cloth and General Mills, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 195.

In applying for leave for appeal to the Supreme Court the applicant is not entitled to get any time expended in obtaining a copy of the judgment deducted in computing the period of limitation—Dharwar Bank Ltd. v. Vasudeorao, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 525; Neki v. Rup Chand, A.I.R. 1952 Punjab 367. See however Rajasthan State v. Nathmal, 1952 Raj. 180; Paokhohen v. Konsam Amujao Singh, 1956 Manipur 33.

133A. Leave to appeal in forma pauperis:—Applications for leave to appeal in forma pauperis come under sub-section (2) of this section and time taken for copy of judgment is to be excluded—Mahalakshmamma v Thirunavukkarasu, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 430, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 229.

134. Time spent in taking unnecessary copies:—In computing the period of limitation prescribed for an appeal under clause 10 of the Letters Patent from the decision of a single Judge, the time requisite for obtainng a copy of the judgment appealed from cannot be deducted, such copy not being required under the Rules framed under the Letters Patent to be presented with the memorandum of appeal—Fazl Muhammad v. Phul Kuar, 2 All. 192; Deokilal v. Ramanand, 5 P.L.J. 701 (704, 705), 59 I.C. 179; Mukund v. Niranjan, 15 P.L.T. 301, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 353 (354). This case has been overruled by Lalit v. Mahaprasad, 26 Pat. 157, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 329 where it has been held that this section is applicable to Letters Patent Appeal as the section does not make any reference to the Civil Procedure Code or to any other Act. The section is a general provision which applies to the whole of India. The word "prescribed" must be taken to apply to any Act which may be the subject of consideration in a particular case. Where it is not necessary for the applicant to file a copy of the decree with the grounds of appeal or application, section 12 has no application and the period between the delivery of the judgment and the signing of decree cannot be excluded—Hari Ram v. Prem Nath, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 341. But the same High Court has held in Punjab Co-Operative Bank v. P. C. Press Co., I.L.R. (1941), Lah. 191, 43 P.L.R. 297, A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 257 (F.B.), that this section is applicable to Letters Patent Appeal. But in cases of appeals falling under sec. 12 of the Limitation Act the positive direction of this section must not be ignored. And so, even though the practice or the rules of the Court do not require that a copy of the judgment or of the decree should be filed with the memorandum of appeal, still the appellant is entitled to deduct the period required for obtaining the copy. It is not within the power of the Court to nullify the effect of sec. 12—High Hassum v. Nur Mahomed, 28 Bom. 643 (644); Gangadhar v Shekhar Basini, 20 C.W.N. 967, 35 I.C. 348; Kirpa Ram v. Rakhi, 114 P.R. 1907. Their Lordships of the Privy Council have laid down that in reckoning the time for presenting an appeal, the time required for obtaining a copy of the decree and judgment must be excluded, even though by the rules of the Court it is not necessary to obtain such copies. The rules of the High Court eliminating the requirement to obtain copies of the documents were no doubt framed to combat the dilatoriness of Indian practitioners, but there are plain words in sec. 12 enacting it as a positive direction that the time requisite for obtaining the two documents is to be excluded from computation—Jijibhoy N. Surti v. T. S. Chettair Firm 6 Rang. 302 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 103, 32 C.W.N. 845 (847), 26 A.L.J.

657, 30 Bom.L.R. 842, 54 M.L.J. 696, 109 I.C. 1. (Judgment of the Rang. High Court reported in 4 Rang. 265, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 20 reversed). See also Imperial Bucket Co. v. Bhagawati, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 520; Jagannath v. Amarendra, A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 479; Mukandi Ram v. Executive Engineer, A.I.R. 1956 Pepsu 40; Sehat Ali v. Abdul, A.I.R. 1956 All. 273 (F.B.).

But the time occupied in taking copies which are not mentioned in this section will not be deducted. Thus, in a second appeal, the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree of the Court of first instance cannot be deducted, such copy not being required by this section to be filed along with the memorandum of second appeal —Pirathi v. Vencatramanayyan, 4 Mad. 419. So also, the time occupied in obtaining a copy of the judgment of the Court of first instance will not be deducted in computing the period of limitation for a second appeal, because it is not a judgment on which the appellate decree is founded within the meaning of sub-section (3), and a copy of it is unnecessary; even though the High Court makes a rule under which the memorandum of second appeal is required to be accompanied by copies of the judgment and decree of the Court of first instance, such a rule cannot have the effect of altering the period of limitation prescribed by this Act. Those copies may be necessary for other purposes, e.g., for the purpose of correctly ascertaining the amount of Court-fee leviable, but such a rule cannot modify any rule or mode as to computation of limitation prescribed by this Act. Therefore inspite of the existence of such a rule the appellant before the High Court will not be entitled to deduct the period requisite for obtaining a copy of the first Court's judgment—Narsingh Sahai v. Sheo Prasad, 40 All. 1 (F.B.); Chunilal v. Dahyabhai, 32 Bom. 14 (25) (F.B.); Madan Gopal v. Malawa Ram, 68 I.C. 777 (Lah.); Babu Singh v. Mangal Rai, 9 Lah.L.J. 5, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 192, 100 I.C. 154; Chuharmal v. Bira Ram, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 461, 73 I.C. 919; Jagiri v. Daulat, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 755 (756), 112 I.C. 46. This is also the view of the Rangoon High Court, but that High Court is also of opinion that in certain exceptional cases the Court may in its discretion excuse the delay caused in obtaining the judgment of the Court of first instance—Maung Po Aung v. Bya, 3 Rang. 310, 90 I.C. 910, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 344. The Lahore High Court also holds in a recent case that although an appellant preferring a second appeal is not entitled as of right to deduct the period spent in obtaining a copy of the first Court's judgment, still where the appellant had applied for such copy before the limitation for filing the second appeal had expired, the High Court may allow the deduction of the time spent in obtaining that copy—George Gowshala v. Balak Ram, 103 I.C. 498, A I.R. 1927 Lah. 717; Mt. Ghulam v. Md. Sharif, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 1007; Prithi v Hansraj, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 378 (if the copy is filed on the day it is obtained or very soon afterwards).

135. Application for review:—Although it is not necessary that an application for review of judgment should be accompanied by a copy of the decree, order or judgment, still time is allowed by this section for obtaining such copy in order that the person interested in applying for review of judgment might inform himself accurately by a perusal of the copy of the decree or order or judgment as to what its contents are, so that he may not be compelled, for fear of limitation, to hurry into an application for review without having the full opportunity of considering the terms of the decree, order or judgment—Wajil Ali v. Nawal, 17 All. 213 (216) (F.B.); Gangadhar v. Sekharbasini, 20 C.W.N. 967, 35 I.C. 348; Chokkalingam v. Lakshmanan, 38 M.L.J. 224, 55 I.C. 444. Even assuming that the filing of a copy of the decree is not necessary, an applicant for review would be entitled to the benefit of sec. 12 (2), if he has actually obtained and filed such a copy—Abdul v. Jai Ram, A.I.R. 1951 H P. 67; Gauri v. Kashi, 56 All. 591, A.I.R. 1934 All. 367.

In the case of an application for review of judgment on the Original side of the High Court, the applicant is entitled to exclude the time between the decree and the filing thereof and also the period required for obtaining a copy of the decree, the reason being under the rules the party against whom a decree or order is made cannot apply for drawing it up unless the other party fails to do so within four days from the date of the decree or order—Rayfield v. Raj Narain, 41 C.W.N. 129, 170 I.C. 653.

135A. Application to set aside award:—In respect of an application to set aside an award, the time taken for obtaining a copy of the award must be excluded from computation—Sova Chand v. Hurry Bux, 46 Cal. 721 (727); Ghulam Khan v. Mahammad Hasan, 29 Cal. 167 (183) (P.C.); Wazid Ali v. Nawal Kishore, 17 All. 213 (215).

135C. Revision:—This section is not applicable to applications for revision on the ground that there is no period of limitation prescribed in the Act for such an application—Kalu v. Municipal Board, 1942 O.W.N. 335, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 392.

136. Cases under special or local laws:—Under sub-section (2) (a) of section 29 as amended in 1922, the provisions of this section shall apply for the purpose of determining any period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law. This view was also taken in Behari Lall v. Mungolanath, 5 Cal. 110 (112). The following decisions are no longer good law:—Wall v. Howard, 18 All. 215; Kumara v. Sithala, 20 Mad. 476; Daulat Ram v. Woollen Mills Co., 95 P.R. 1908; Bhagwan v. Collector, 133 P.L.R. 1904, 79 P.R. 1904; Abu Backer v. Secy. of State, 34 Mad. 505 (F.B.); Jugal Kishore v. Gur Narain, 33 All. 738; Duraisami v. Meenakshi, 1914 M.W.N. 831, 25 I.C. 610; Sivaramayya v. Bhujanga, 39 Mad. 593; Lingayya v. Chinna Narayana, 41 Mad. 169 (F.B.). The ruling in Dropodi v. Hira, 34 All. 496 (S.B.) will now stand as correct. This section has been made applicable to all appeals and applications under the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), by sec. 78 of that Act. The rules under the Letters Patent do not amount to a special or local law. It follows that the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment appealed from, which need not be filed with memorandum of appeal, cannot be excluded —Jog Dhian v. Hussain and another, 16 Lah. 448, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 328. But this case has been overruled by the Full Bench of the same High Court in Punjab Co.-Op. Bank v. P. C. Press Co., I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 191, 43 P.L.R. 297, A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 257 where it has been held that the statutory rules framed by the High Court under clause 27, Letters Patent under the authority delegated to it by His Majesty who, in turn, was acting under the powers conferred on him by Act of Parliament are a "special law". Therefore this section will apply.

Under the present amendment of sec. 29, the provisions of sec. 12 (2) will apply to an application under a special or local law. But it should be noted that sec. 12 (2) applies only to an application for leave to appeal and an application for review of judgment, but to no other application. And therefore an application to the Collector to make a reference under sec. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act is not covered by the language of sec. 12 (2) of this Act, and consequently the applicant cannot be allowed to deduct the period requisite for obtaining a copy of the Collector's award—Kashi Parshad v. Notified Area, 54 All. 282, A.I.R. 1932 All. 598 (599);

Nafisuddin v. Secretary of State, 9 Lah. 244, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 858 (859), 104 I.C. 397. The Rangoon High Court, however, is of opinion that the application virtually amounts to an application to set aside an award and therefore falls under sub-section (4) of section 12, and the time taken in obtainin a copy of the award must be deducted—Burjoriee v. Special Collector, 5 Bur.L.J. 26, A.I.R. 1926 Rang. 135 (136), 95 I.C. 110. But it is doubtful whether an application to make a reference in respect of an award amounts to an application to set aside an award. In the Lahore case, sub-section (4) was not applied on a technical ground.

In computing the period of limitation for an appeal under sec. 3, Calcutta Improvement (Appeals) Act, 1911 the appellant is entitled to deductions under this section, which is applicable either by reason of sec. 29 (2) or otherwise—Province of Bengal v. Amulya, 54 C.W.N. 297, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 356. But the time during which the application for the certificate as to fitness for appeal asked for under sec. 3 (b) (1) of the said Act remains pending cannot be excluded under this section—Ibid.

An assessee dissatisfied with an order of assessment and applying for a reference under sec. 66 of the Income-Tax Act is entitled to a deduction of the time required for obtaining the copy of the order under sec. 31 or 32, in computing the period of one month prescribed by sec. 66 of that Act—Mohan Lal v. Commissioner, Income-Tax, 9 Pat. 172, 10 P.L.T. 769, 122 I.C. 810, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 14 (19); Muhammad Hayat v. Commissioner, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 170, 117 I.C. 881; Ramnatha v. Commissioner, 6 Rang. 175, 110 I.C. 601, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 152 (153). But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that sec. 12 of the Limitation Act has no application to a proceeding under sec. 66 (3) of the Income-Tax Act—In re Gulabchand, 53 All. 684, 1931 A.L.J. 593, 133 I.C. 621, A.I.R. 1931 All. 673. And this view appears to be the correct one, because the application by the assessee to make a reference under the Income-Tax Act does not fall under any description of the applications mentioned in sec. 12 of the Limitation Act.

In a case under the U. P. Sales Tax Act, 1948, the Allahabad High Court has recently expressed the view that there appears to be no justification for holding that S. 29 enlarges the scope of the provisions made applicable by it to computation of period of limitation prescribed under a special or local law beyond the scope plainly laid down in those provisions when they are applied for the purpose of computing the period of limitation under the Indian Limitation Act itself—Gopaldas Sarvadayal v. Commissioner of Sales Tax, U.P., I.L.R. (1956) All. 53 (F.B.), 1956 All. L.J. 26, 7 S.T.C. 360, A.I.R. 1956 All. 305.

There is no provision in the Orissa Agricultural Income-Tax Act expressly excluding sections mentioned in section 29 (2), Limitation Act. Consequently section 12 of the Limitation Act must be held to apply to the provisions of the Orissa Agricultural Income-Tax Act—Satrughan Mall v. Revenue Commissioner, Orissa, I.L.R. 1955 Cut. 258, A.I.R. 1956 Orissa 34.

But an application by the Commissioner of Income-Tax for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, under sec. 66A of the Income-Tax Act is governed by sec. 12 (2) of the Limitation Act, and the time between the date on which the judgment of the High Court was pronounced and the date on which the judgment was sent to the Commissioner must be deducted—Commissioner of Income-Tax v. Shaw Wallace & Co., 59 Cal. 251, 36 C.W.N. 127 (128, 129), 139 I.C. 236, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 587.

The Workmen's Compensation Act has not excluded the appeals from the operation of this section and hence in an appeal from an order of the Commissioner the appellant is entitled to the exclusion of the time for obtaining a certified copy of the order—General Manager, G. I. P. Ry. v. Shankar, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 201.

Sub-section (2) of this section applies to an application under sec. 73 of the Madras Village Courts Act preferred to the District Munsif against an exparte decree of a Village Panchayat Court. For the purposes of this sub-section the application is to be treated as an appeal and though it is not necessary under sec. 73 to file the certified copy of the decree along with the petition still this sub-section applies because it is applicable even to a case where the application or appeal need not be accompanied by a copy of the decree objected to—Standard Type Foundry v. Venkataramaniah, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 540, 1941 M.W.N. 349, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 589.

137. Interference by High Court:—What time is or is not requisite for obtaining a copy of the judgment, etc., is a question of fact to be determined by the Appeal Court, and whether that fact be decided rightly or wrongly, the decision cannot be interfered with in second appeal—Thana Mal v. Nihali, 6 P.R. 1894; Ram Sarup v. Zorawar, 73 I.C. 447, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 696; Sher Singh v. Prem Raj, 100 P.R. 1918, 48 I.C. 31.

Exclusion of time of defendant's absence from India and certain other territories.

13. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the defendant has been absent from India and from the territories beyond India under the administration of the Central Government shall be excluded.

[As adapted to Dominion of Pakisthan].

Exclusion of time of defendant's absence from "all the Provinces of Pakisthan" and certain other territories."

In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the defendant has been absent from all the Provinces of Pakisthan and from the territories beyond "all the Provinces of Pakisthan under the administration of the Central Government shall be excluded.

Amendments:—The word "India" was substituted for the words "the States" by Act 3 of 1951. The words "the Central Government" were substituted for the words "the Government" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937. The words "or the Crown Representative" were repealed by the Indian Independence (Adaptation of Central Acts and Ordinances) Order, 1948.

The words "all the Provinces of Pakisthan" were substituted for the words "British India," by the Pakisthan (Adaptation of Existing Pakisthan Laws Order, 1947, sec. 4 sub-sec. (2). The words "Or the Crown Representative" were omitted by Ibid, sec. 7.

This section is based on the English law, according to which, if the defendant is beyond seas at the time of the right of action accruing to the plaintiff, the time or times appointed by the statute do not begin to run until the defendant returns from beyond seas. See Banning on Limitation, 3rd Edn., p. 65.

The amendment of this section is not retrospective in effect so as to disentitle the plaintiff from excluding the time during which the defendant had resided at a place which is now a part of India but was a foreign country as understood prior to April 1, 1951.

138. Scope:—This section applies only to defendants, and in favour of plaintiff so as to prevent limitation from running against the latter, and only in respect of the institution of a suit; it is not applicable in favour of a defendant who has been absent from India and wants to set aside proceedings in execution—Ashan v. Ganga, 3 All. 185.

This section has reference only to the absence of the defendant from the realm, not to that of the plaintiff. A plaintiff out of the realm may prosecute a suit by his attorney, but when the defendant is out of the realm it is very hard to call upon the plaintiff to institute a suit which in most cases must be wholly without fruit—Domun v. Shubul, 10 W.R. 253.

The plaintiff's voluntary absence in a foreign country cannot bar the operation of limitation—Venkatasubba v. Giriammal, 2 M.H.C.R. 113. And this section is equally inapplicable even if the plaintiff's absence may be involuntary through transportation—Domun v. Shubul, 10 W.R. 253. In England also, the disability of the plaintiff arising from absence beyond seas and the disability of imprisonment have been abolished by the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vic. c. 97), sec. 10.

The provisions of this section are attracted only when the cause of action has arisen in British India—Subramaniam v. Maruthamuthu, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 440, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 437. So payment towards decree passed by a foreign court does not extend the period of suit on foreign judgment as prescribed by Art. 117 of the Act—Ibid.

139. Absent:—The word 'absent' includes a person who had never been present in India. Absence does not necessarily imply a previous presence—Maharaja v. Provincial Bank, 72 P.R. 1891; Atul Krishto v. Lyan, 14 Cal. 457; Poorna v. Sassoon, 25 Cal. 496. Even where the defendant pays occasional visits to India, this section will apply—Janki v. Manahar Lal, 26 P.R. 1897.

If the defendant actually returns to India, the plaintiff's ignorance of the fact of such return does not prevent the operation of limitation—Mahomed Museehooddeen v. Clarajene, 2 N.W.P. 173.

Strict proof of absence is necessary. Where a plaintiff says that the defendant was out of India for a certain period, and that he is entitled to deduct this period, all this should be specifically pleaded and the plaintiff would be required strictly to prove the duration of the period of the defendant's absence—Periyanna v. Arasu, 9 M.L.T. 217, 9 I.C. 568. A plaintiff seeking to take advantage of the extension of time allowed by this section must bring himself within the terms of the section. The burden is upon him to prove both that the defendant has been absent from India and from the territories under the administration of the Government of India—Ezra Sion & Co. v. Kailas, 39 Bom.L.R. 263, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 242: 169 I.C. 651.

140. Defendant:—The definition of "defendant" in sec. 2 (4) of the Act must be read into this section. So the expression "the time during which the defendant has been absent from British India" must be read as "time during which the defendant or any person from or through whom the defendant derives his liability to be sued has been absent from British India"—Akkandi v. Rethinagiri, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 275, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 315.

140A. Defendant represented by agent:—This section applies even where to the knowledge of the plaintiffs, the defendants (partners in a firm) are during the period of their absence carrying on business in India through an agent, who is empowered to institute and defend suits—Poorna Chunder v. Sassoon, 25 Cal. 496 (F.B.) (over-ruling Harrington v. Ganesh, 10 Cal. 440 where a contrary view was taken). See also Atul v. Lyon, 14 Cal. 457.

141. Several defendants—Absence of one:—Under the English law, where there are several defendants and one of them is beyond seas at the time of the right of action accruing to the plaintiff, the time does not begin to run against the absent defendant until he returns, but as against the defendants who are not beyond seas at the time of the right of action accruing to the plaintiff, the time begins to run equally as if they were the persons solely liable to be sued as defendants. See Banning on Limitation, 3rd Edition, p. 66. In India also, in a suit against partners, where one of the partners is absent from India, it has been held that the fact of his absence does not entitle the plaintiff to deduct the time against all the defendants, but against the absentee defendant only; and the fact that the plaintiff has allowed the suit to be barred against the other partners who are present in India during the absence of the absentee is not a ground for holding that the claim against the absentee is also barred by limitation—Palaniappa v. Veerappa, 41 Mad. 446 (451), 34 M.L.J. 41, 44 I.C. 466. See also Muthukanni v. Andappa, I.L.R. (1955) Mad. 116, (1954) 2 M.L.J. 731, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 96 (F.B.).

142. Absence after accrual of cause of action:—It was held in Narronji v. Mugniram, 6 Bom. 103 (105, 106), that this section must be read subject to section 9, that the absence of the defendant from British India was to be regarded as the plaintiff's 'inability to sue' within the meaning of sec. 9, and therefore if the defendant's absence took place after the accrual of the cause of action the period of limitation would not be suspended during such absence but would run continuously according to the provisions of that section. But it has been pointed out in subsequent cases that the 'inability' referred to in sec. 9 must be a personal inability affecting the plaintiff himself and having reference to his condition, state or position, and not to the circumstances of the defendant; consequently, the absence of the defendant is not an 'inability' within the meaning of sec. 9, and therefore that section would not apply to the case, but the period of limitation would be suspended during the defendant's absence. Section 9 should not control sec. 13, and the period of defendant's absence would be deducted from computation, no matter whether such absence took place before or after the accrual of the cause of action—Hanmantram v. Bowles, 8 Bom. 561; Beake v. Davis, 4 All. 530; Janki v. Manoharlal, 26 P.R. 1897. In all these cases the Judges have dissented from 6 Bom. 103. In another Bombay case also it has been held that the absence of the defendant from British India does not amount to an 'inability to sue' within the meaning of sec. 9—Jivraj v. Babaji, 29 Bom. 68 (70).

143. 'Territory under administration of Government':—A place outside British India (e.g., Basra) which is merely in military occupation by an army despatched by the Government of India is not a 'territory under the administration of the Government' of India within the meaning of this section, but is a foreign territory under military occupation, the object of which is much more restricted than that of an administration Therefore the period during which the defendant was staying in Basra should be excluded under this section, as the defendant was 'absent from British India and from the territories beyond British India under the administration of the Government'—Fakhrullah v. Ramsarup, 45 All. 18, 20 A.L.J. 786, 68 I.C. 978, A.I.R. 1923 All. 64. Secunderabad cantonment is under the administration of the Government of India within the meaning of this section. So the period during which the defendant has been living there cannot be excluded under this section—Ezra Sion & Co. v. Kailas, 39

Exclusion of time of proceeding bona fide in Court without jurisdiction.

14. (1) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding, whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal, against the defendant, shall be excluded, where the proceeding is founded upon the same cause of action and is prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it.

(2) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any application, the time during which the applicant has been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding, whether in a Court of first instance, or in a Court of appeal, against the same party for the same relief shall be excluded, where such proceeding is prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it.

Explanation I.—In excluding the time during which a former suit or application was pending, the day on which that suit or application was instituted or made, and the day on which the proceedings therein ended, shall both be counted.

Explanation II.—For the purposes of this section, a plaintiff or an applicant resisting an appeal shall be deemed to be prosecuting a proceeding.

Explanation III.—For the purposes of this section misjoinder of parties or of causes of action shall be deemed to be a cause of a like nature with defect of jurisdiction.

144. Scope:—The three essential requisites for the application of this section are (1) identity of the cause of action, (2) good faith of the plaintiff, and (3) absence of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature in the court which entertained the prior litigation—Satyanarayanamurthi v. Maharaja of Pithapur, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 329, 50 L.W. 139, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 724. The tendency has been not to restrict the operation of this section, but to follow its principle, in suitable cases even in proceedings which cannot strictly be called proceedings in a court of Law. If the conduct of the person claiming its benefits has been bona fide, that is he has established his good faith, if he has been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding, he is entitled to its benefits. If any of these elements is lacking, he cannot take advantage of it—Maqsood v. Hokshiar, I.L.R. 1945 All 394, 1945 A.L.J. 185, A.I.R. 1945 All. 377. The section must be liberally construed—Maneklal v. Shivlal, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 9, 40 Bom.L.R.

1169, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 26; The Muslim Bank v. Hasan, A.I.R. 1951 Hyder. 57. Indulgence should be granted under this section only in cases where an error was an error that might be committed by a reasonable and prudent man exercising due diligence and caution—Maya v. Udham, 40 P.L.R. 631, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 708, 181 I.C. 290. The High Court will not interfere with the discretion exercised by the lower appellate Court under this section, when such discretion has not been exercised improperly—Jagdeo v. Peary, 14 Luck. 4, 1938 O.W.N. 257, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 100 (S.B.).

This section is not controlled by Art. 182(5) of the Act. There is in fact no question of either provision being controlled by or subject to the other. The two provisions deal with quite distinct matters—Bishundeo v. Raghunath, 19 Pat. 345, 1940 P.W.N. 504, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 677. So, time spent for proceeding with successive execution petitions in the original side of the District Munsif though the decree was passed by the District Munsiff as a Small Cause Court Judge should be excluded under this section—Akkal v. Kumarasami, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 432, 1949 M.W.N. 219, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 849. Section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not controlled by this section as the period mentioned in sec. 48, C. P. Code cannot be described as a period of limitation prescribed for any proceeding—Makhan v. Firm Madan Mohan, 50 C.W.N. 12.

This section is not applicable for the purpose of computation of time for appeals—Ardha Chandra v. Matangini, 23 Cal. 325 (327); Beni Singh v. Berhamdeo, 19 C.W.N. 473 (474). But its reasonable principle may be applied, and the circumstances contemplated in this section may and ordinarily would constitute a sufficient cause within the meaning of sec. 5 for not presenting an appeal in time—Balwant v. Gumani, 5 All. 591; Ramjiwan v. Chandmal, 10 All. 587 (596); Karam Baksh v. Daulat Ram, 183 P.R. 1888; Kamiruddin v. Bismupriya, 33 C.W.N. 76 (77); Kumudini v. Kamalakant, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 247, 35 C.L.J. 106. The Privy Council have observed that although sec. 14 does not apply to appeals, it is relevant for the purpose of considering a case under sec. 5—Brij Indar v. Kanshi Ram, 45 Cal. 94 (103) (P.C.). Thus, the bona fide prosecution of a proceeding in a wrong Court has been regarded as a proper ground or a 'sufficient cause' within the meaning of section 5 for extending the time for filing the appeal—Rupa Thakurani v. Kumudnath, 22 C.W.N. 594. Where the appellant through bona fide mistake preferred his appeal in a wrong Court, but lost no time in refiling it in the proper Court after it was returned to him, held that it would not be improper to apply the provisions of sec. 14, and the appeal should be heard—Kishan Lal v. Tika, 49 All. 555, A.I.R. 1927 All. 719, 101 I.C. 750. So also, on the analogy of section 14, the time spent in a suit wrongly filed for getting an order set aside might properly be deducted in computing the period of limitation for subsequently filing an appeal from such order—Sitaram v. Nimba, 12 Bom. 320. See Notes 50 and 51 under sec. 5.

This section applies to an application for execution of a decree—Kala Singh v. Gehna Singh, 33 P.L.R. 740, 138 I.C. 646, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 531; Bishundeo v. Raghunath, 19 Pat. 354. A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 677, 191 I.C. 695; Abhoy v. Gopinath, 76 C.L.J. 183, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 460 or to an application to set aside an ex parte decree—Raghunandan v. Bhuwal, 54 All. 423, A.I.R. 1932 All. 340. But in two Allahabad cases (Gadre v. Brijnandan, 21 A.L.J. 205, 45 All. 332 and Ram Raj v. Umraji, 93 I.C. 292, A.I.R. 1926 All. 345) it has been held (without any reason being assigned for it) that this section does not apply to applications. This view, it is submitted, is incorrect, as sub-section (2) does apply to applications. See Raghunandan v. Bhuwal, 54 All. 423, A.I.R. 1932 All. 340 (342), 140 I.C. 178, 1932 A.L.J. 257. See also Bishundeo v. Raghunath, supra.

This section does not prescribe any period of limitation but provides only a method of calculation of that period when a suit has been ihstituted bonafide in a Court without jurisdiction. The effect of this section is not to render the suit after refiling in the proper court a continuation of the original suit, and consequently the period of limitation has to be determined as if it was a new suit, and the period will be that which was prescribed for the original suit, but excluding the period during which the suit was being prosecuted bonafide in a wrong court—Anil v. Promotho, 52 C.W.N. 316.

145. Same plaintiff in both suits:—A plaintiff can claim the benefit of this section only where the previous proceeding had been brought by himself or by some person through whom he derives title to sue—Barodakant v. Sookmoy, 1 W.R. 29. If the former proceeding had been instituted by a wrong plaintiff, no deduction can be made. Thus, where manager of the plaintiff brought a suit in his own name for the value of trees cut down by the defendant on the plaintiff's ground and the suit was dismissed as he had no cause of action, the plaintiff himself in bringing a subsequent suit could not deduct the time occupied in the previous suit—Rajendra v. Bulaky, 7 Cal. 367. Where the plaintiff and another person had brought the previous suit in one capacity, and the plaintiff alone brought the present suit in another capacity, no deduction of time spent in the previous suit can be made—Hossein v. Asha Bibi, 1 Rang. 402, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 123, 76 I.C. 639 (see this case fully cited in Note 150 below). Where the plaintiff in the second suit was not prosecuting the first suit and was not associated with the plaintiffs of the first suit, no deduction of time can be made—Niranka v. Atul Krishna, 28 C.W.N. 1009, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 67, 83 I.C. 110. Where the previous suit was originally filed by two of the partners of a firm, and the third partner being unwilling to join as a plaintiff was impleaded as a formal defendant, and the second suit was filed by the third partner alone and the other two partners withdrew from the suit, held that the two suits were not brought by the same parties, and this section did not apply—Nadesan v. Sankaran, 5 Rang. 600, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 21, 105 I.C. 701. Four members of a firm brought four separate suits for a debt due to the firm, each claiming a one-fourth share of the debt; the suits having been dismissed, the firm brought the present suit on the consolidated debt; Held that the plaintiff in the present suit and the plaintiffs in the previous suit were not the same, and this section could not apply—Firm Ram Lochan v. Jagat Narain, A.I.R. 1927 All. 181, 98 I.C. 1050 The Official Receiver prosecuting the proceeding under secs. 53 and 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act and a creditor, who files a suit under sec. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act for a declaration that certain alienations made by a debtor are void, are not same plaintiffs as though the Official Receiver may represent the creditor, a creditor, who is the plaintiff in the later suit under sec. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act cannot be said to be prosecuting the proceedings under the Insolvency Act—Rama v. Gangi, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 862, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 588, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 483.

A plaintiff is entitled to claim the benefit of the provision of section 14 whether he comes up on the second occasion with the original plaint or a new plaint—Brijlal v. Janendra, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 82, 183 I.C. 155.

146. 'Prosecuting a proceeding':—It is not necessary that plaintiff must have been prosecuting the previous proceeding as a plaintiff. He is entitled to a deduction of the period of pendency of a former suit in which he as defendant was urging the same claim as he afterwards prefers as plaintiff—Jugetendra v. Din Dayal, 1 W.R. 310; Madhavdas v. Jan Mahomed, I.L.R. 1941 Kar. 495, A.I.R. 1942 Sind. 37. This section no where lays down that before a plaintiff or an applicant may claim exemption under this section he should have been described as plaintiff or applicant in the previous proceedings. All that is required of him to prove is that he prosecuted the previous civil proceedings in good faith, and if he proves that he may avail himself of this section, even though he was not described as a plaintiff or as an applicant in the previous proceedings—Aildas v. Sobhomal, 32 S.L.R. 151, A.I.R. 1938 Sind. 50, 174 I.C. 172. Similarly, the plaintiff is entitled to deduct the period during which he as respondent has been opposing a previous appeal brought against him by the present defendant —Lakhan Chandra v. Madhusudan, 35 Cal. 209. (See Explanation 2). So also, a plaintiff who in a previous insolvency proceeding had been filing a proof of his debt before the official assignee will be said to have been prosecuting a proceeding, and the time spent in such proceeding will be excluded—N. K. M. M. Chetty v. Lutchman Chetty, 52 I.C. 934 (935), 12 Bur.L.T. 83. The decree-holder making an application for execution is entitled to deduct the time occupied by him in resisting a previous suit brought by the judgment-debtor for stay of execution of the decree—Navalchand v. Anichand, 18 Bom. 734. But in later cases it has been held by the Bombay High Court that merely defending a suit does not amount to prosecuting a proceeding. Explanation 2 speaks of resisting an appeal and does not speak of resisting a suit—Som Sekhar v. Shivappa, 25 Bom L.R. 863, 76 I.C. 557, A.I R. 1924 Bom. 39; Narayan v. Gurunathgouda, (I L.R) 1939 Bom. 173, 40 Bom.L.R. 1134, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 1. The Lahore High Court has held, on an application to file an award beyond the period of limitation prescribed by Article 178, that under the circumstances of the case the applicant would not be entitled to deduct the time spent by him as defendant in setting up the award in bar of a prior suit instituted by the plaintiff—Nazim Khan v. Alam Khan, 89 P.R. 1919, 52 I.C. 561. The Nagpur Court also holds that where in the prior suit the defendant was defending a money suit and nothing that he did would have entitled him to a decree in his favour and there was nothing to restrain him from filing his own suit, the defendant when bringing the later suit was not entitled to an exclusion of time under this section—Hiralal v. Kripal, 28 N.L.R. 348, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 13.

147. Civil proceeding:—In order to decide whether a proceeding should properly be termed a civil proceeding in a Court, it is necessary in each case to examine the precise nature of the proceeding and the constitution of the authority before whom such proceeding is taken—Laxman v. Keshav, 43 Bom. 201, 20 Bom.L.R. 918, 48 I.C. 467.

An Insolvency proceeding before an Official Assignee is a civil proceeding. The word 'civil proceeding' is used in this section as opposed to a criminal proceeding—N. K. M. M. Chetty v. Lutchman, 12 Bur.L.T. 83, 52 I.C. 934 (935). A proceeding under the Bengal Public Demands Recovery Act (Bengal Act III of 1913) is a civil proceeding within the meaning of this section: see sec. 57 of that Act.

A proceedng before a settlement officer for mutation of names in the revenue records is not a civil proceeding in a Court within the meaning of this section. Even if the proceeding be considered to be a civil proceeding, still as it was not before a Court but before a purely executive officer, it did not fall under this section—Muhammad Subhanullah v. Secretary of State, 26 All. 382. A civil proceeling before a Revenue Court (as distinguished from a Revenue officer) falls under this section. Thus, where a suit was brought in the Revenue Court for arrears of rent but it was dismissed as the case did not fall under the Bengal Act VIII of 1869, held that in a subsequent suit in the civil Court on the same cause of action the plaintiff was entitled to deduct the time occupied by the suit in the Revenue Court—Govindo v. Manson, 15 B.L.R. 56. (Contra—A proceeding in a Revenue Court is not a civil proceeding—Govinda v. Santa, 83 P.R. 1914, 26 I.C. 441). So also, where the plaintiff tried to get an invalid certificate granted under section 8 of the Bengal Act VII of 1880 set aside by the Revenue Court, which however had no jurisdiction to grant him relief, it was held that the time spent in the Revenue Court should be deducted in computing the time for a subsequent suit—Girijanath v. Ram Narain, 20

Cal. 264, following Ram Logan v. Bhawani, 14 Cal. 9. An application under sec. 28, 29 or 42 of the Bengal Land Registration Act is not a civil proceeding, and the Land Registration Collector is not a Court—Ramjee v. Rai Bishen Dutt, 7 P.L.T. 61, 90 I.C. 244, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 194.

An application to a Collector to take action under Sec. 11A of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act,is not a civil proceeding in a Court, and the time taken up in such proceeding cannot be excluded under this section—Laxman Ganesh v. Keshav Govind, 43 Bom. 201, 20 Bom.L.R. 918, 48 I.C. 467.

This section is in terms restricted to civil proceedings and cannot be availed of in respect of proceedings under Child Marriage Restraint Act,—Venkatanarasimham v. Satyanarayana, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 775, 49 L.W. 547, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 512 or to proceedings under Cattle Trespass Act—Padma v. Rangadhar, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 40.

The expression "another civil proceeding" indicates that there should be two proceedings. Where a plaint was filed against a person who was in fact dead at that time, and an application by way of amendment or bringing on record the legal representatives was made and granted, and then the suit was continued against the representatives who contended that the suit was now barred, it was held that the contention was right and that the plaintiff was not entitled to deduct the period between the date of filing of the plaint and the date of the Court's order allowing the legal representatives to be brought on the record, because those proceedings were absolutely void, and also because sec. 14 could not be applied, since there were not two proceedings but one, the same suit having been continued—Municipal Council v. Kunhipathumma, 37 L.W. 489, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 454 (455), 143 I.C. 596. But if the plaintiff does not continue the same suit, but brings a second suit against the legal representatives of the deceased, the period of pendency of the first suit may be deducted, as the Court had no jurisdiction to decide the first suit brought against a dead man—Mohun Chunder v. Azar, 12 W.R. 45. Several creditors had obtained decrees against a debtor. Another creditor filed an administration suit impleading the creditors who had obtained decrees as defendants. The administration suit was ultimately dismissed. The assets of the debtor had, in the meantime, been realised by the receiver who had been appointed in the suit. One of the creditors managed to keep his decree alive, while the others allowed their decrees to become barred by limitation. All the decree-holder creditors applied to attach the assets in Court and claimed rateable distribution of the assets. On the question whether the creditors whose decrees had become barred would get the benefit of this section by deducting the period of the pendency of the administration suit it was held that this section had no application as none of the creditors whose decrees were barred had filed suits, i.e., "another civil proceeding"—Chidambaram v. Mayappa, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 410, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 510, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 67. Proceedings in the insolvency Court are "civil proceedings" within the meaning of sec. 14—Lorind Chand Parma Nand & Sons v. Bahadur Khan, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 736, 156 I.C. 378. Where the plaintiff went to the Insolvency Court with a petition for adjudication of the debtor (defendant) on the mistaken advice that the conduct imputed to the defendant amounted in law to an act of insolvency, and he fought out the matter up to the High Court with due diligence and when his petition ultimately failed he filed a suit for recovery of the amount, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to a deduction of the period during which the insolvency proceedings were pending—Lorind Chand Parma Nand & Sons v. Bahadur Khan, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 736, 156 I.C. 378.

Arbitration proceedings:—The Privy Council have held that a proceeding before an arbitrator is a civil proceeding, and in computing the period of limitation, an arbitrator should exclude the time spent in prosecuting in good faith the same claim before another arbitrator who was without jurisdiction—Ram Dutt Ram Kissen v. E. D. Sassoon and Co., 54 Cal. 1048 (P.C.), 33 C.W.N. 485 (492), 49 C.L.J. 462, 115 I.C. 713, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 103. It should be noted in this case that the Judicial Committee applied sec. 14 of the Limitation Act only by analogy, and what their Lordships held was that in a subsequent application for arbitration the period taken in prosecuting a former application for arbitration could be excluded. But in a suit brought in a civil Court the time taken in previous arbitration proceedings relating to the subject matter of the suit cannot be excluded, and for three reasons—(1) because the proceedings before arbitrators were not proceedings in a Court; (2) because the proceedings before the arbitrators were not based upon the same cause of action as a civil suit, the reason being that primarily the cause of action in arbitration proceedings is the agreement of parties to refer the matter in dispute to arbitrators, whilst in a civil suit there is no such agreement, and the cause of action is upon the right or title which the plaintiff alleges in himself; (3) because when there has been a valid reference to arbitration, the arbitrators have full power to decide the matter and labour under no defect of jurisdiction—Maharaj Sai v. Kedar Nath, 29 N.L.R. 272, 144 I.C. 948, A I.R. 1933 Nag. 130 (132). But a contrary view has been taken in Behari v. Punjab Sugar Mills Co. Ltd., I.L.R. (1943) All. 467, 1942 A.L.J. 69, A.I.R. 1943 All. 162 where it was held that the proceedings before the arbitrators were proceedings in a Court and that this section would apply to a suit filed by a party to the reference to enforce his right under the contract when the arbitration was closed on the withdrawal of one of the arbitrators. The reason is that defect of jurisdiction—even if only temporary, clearly occurred when one of the arbitrators withdrew and even if the defect was curable, there was at least a "cause of like nature" to defect of jurisdiction within the meaning of this section and the requirements of this section would be equally satisfied whether such defect as to jurisdiction existed at the beginning or whether it occurred at any later stage.

Proceeding before Conciliator:—A Conciliator is not a Court; and the proceedings before a Conciliator for obtaining a certificate under the Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act is not a civil proceeding before a Court. Consequently, the time occupied in a proceeding before a Conciliator for obtaining a certificate as a condition precedent to a suit cannot be deducted. See Laxman v. Keshav, 43 Bom. 201. But in some cases, under the peculiar circumstances, the High Court granted an extension of time. Thus, the money due on a bond became payable on 31st May 1910; the plaintiff applied to the Conciliator for a certificate on the 28th March 1913; but before he could obtain it, Government abolished the conciliation system with effect from 30th May 1913. The plaintiff filed the suit on the 30th June 1913, and claimed to exclude the time between 28th March and 30th May 1913, from the period of limitation. It was held that though the plaintiff was not entitled to deduct the time claimed, he was entitled to a reasonable extension of time, on the principle that where the law creates a limitation and the party is disabled to conform to that limitation without any default on his part, and he has no remedy over, the law will ordinarily excuse him—Satyahamabai v. Govind, 38 Bom. 653, 16 Bom.L.R. 447, 25 I.C. 66. So also, where after the plaintiff obtained the certificate, and before the institution of the suit the Civil Court was closed for the vacation, during which the conciliation system was abolished and the period of limitation expired, and the plaintiff filed his suit on the re-opening day, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to deduct the period between his application to the Conciliator and the grant of the certificate, and as upon such deduction the period of limitation expired during the vacation, the suit instituted on the re-opening day was in time—Rupchand v. Mukunda, 38 Bom. 656, 25 I.C. 67 (68).

148. Court:—The 'Court' only refers to a Court in India, and does not include a foreign Court. The time spent in proceedings before such a Court cannot be deducted—Chanmalappa v. Abdul Wahab, 35 Bom. 139, 12 Bom.L.R. 977, 8 I.C. 645; Parry v. Appasami, 2 Mad. 407. Rajanna v. Narayan, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 321; Hari Singh v. Muhammad Said, 8 Lah. 54, 102 I.C. 523, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 200.

An arbitrator whom the parties have substituted for the Court of law to be the judge of the disputes between them is a Court, and the time spent in prosecuting in good faith the same claim before an arbitrator can be deducted—Ramdutt Ramkissen v. E. D. Sassoon & Co., 56 Cal. 1048 (P.C.), cited in Note 147, ante; Abdul Rahim v Ojamshee, 56 Cal. 639, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 5 (8); Fatechand v. Wasudeo, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 477, 1947 N.L.J. 417; A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 334; Behare v. Punjab Sugar Mills Co. Ltd., I.L.R. (1943) All. 467, 1943 A.L.J. 69, A.I.R. 1943 All. 162. But it is evident that what the Legislature had in mind were judicial Courts, and not Courts in the wider sense of domestic formus or tribunals—Purshottamdas v. Impex (India) Ltd., I.L.R. (1954) Bom. 602, 56 Bom.L.R. 214, A I.R. 1954 Bom. 309.

A proceeding before an Official Assignee is a proceeding in an Insolvency Court—N K. M. M. Chetty v. Lutchman, 12 Bur.L.T. 83, 52 I.C. 934 (935).

The Settlement Officer, the Commissioner and the Board of Revenue are not Courts but executive officers of Government—Muhammad Subhanullah v. Secretary of State, 26 All. 382.

Under the rules framed by the Bombay High Court, the Collector is not a Court for the purpose of setting aside a sale under section 311, C. P. Code (1882), and the period during which proceedings were pending before him cannot be deducted—Narayan v Rasulkhan, 23 Bom. 531; Tipangavaba v. Ramangavde, 44 Bom. 50 (54), 22 Bom.L.R. 35, 54 I.C. 670. Under this section time spent in a proceeding before the Collector to whom a decree is transferred for execution cannot be excluded, as the Collector is not a Court—Radha v. Uttamchand, I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 427, 1944 N.L.J. 391, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 313.

A Conciliator acting under sections 10, 11, 11B of the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act is acting purely as an administrative officer and not as a Court—Laxman Ganesh v. Keshav Govind, 43 Bom. 201 (205). A Collector appointed under the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act, RVII of 1879, is not a Court. The time occupied by proceedings before him cannot be excluded in computing the time for proceeding in the regular Court—Manohar v. Gebiapa, 6 Bom. 31. The time occupied in proceedings before a Revenue officer (and not before a Revenue Court) cannot be deducted under this section—Abbas Ali v. Yasuf Ali, 28 P.L.R. 158, 101 I.C. 254, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 186 (overruling 26 P.L.R. 27). But see Govinda v. Santa, 83 P.R. 1914, 26 I.C. 441.

In C. P., the Deputy Commissioner is not invested with power to dispose of objections under O. 21, r. 58, C. P. Code or to dispose of applications under O. 21, r. 100. He is not a Court in connection with those objections and applications, and the time spent in taking those proceedings before him cannot be deducted—Bandappa v. Shankar, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 309, 78 I.C. 580.

As to the applicability of this section to proceedings which cannot strictly be called proceedings in a Court of Law see Massood v. Hoshiar, I.L.R. (1945) All. 394, 1945 A L J. 185, A.I.R. 1945 All. 377.

"Whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal" :—The period spent in prosecuting a suit in a wrong Court and an appeal from the decision therein shall be excluded in computing the period of limitation for a subsequent suit brought in the proper Court—Hari Prassad v. Sourendra Mohan, 1 Pat. 506; Kasturchand v. Mt. Wazir Begam, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 1.

The expression "Court of appeal" shall be taken as being used in the broad sense of any Court which has the power to bring under review the decision of an inferior Court, whatever may be the extent of jurisdiction that the superior Court may possess in reviewing the decision of the inferior Court. Therefore, an application for revision in the High Court should be included in the expression "civil proceeding in a Court of appeal"—Venkatragayya v. Mutyala, 17 I.C. 593 (594) (Mad.); Seth Mulchand v. Seth Samir, 1882 A.W.N. 59; Chhuttan v. Dwarka, I.L.R. (1938) All. 192, 1937 A.L.J. 1308, A.I.R. 1938 All. 78, Meghmala v. Sadoy, 42 C.W.N. 1051, 68 C.L.J. 261, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 577; Lal Behari v. Bani, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 293, 30 P.L.T. 201 (F.B.), Perumal v. Pandaram, A.I.R. 1951 Trav-Co. 26. The Bombay High Court seems to have doubted whether the High Court in revision is a Court of appeal within the meaning of this section—Narayan v. Hari Ganesh, 32 Bom.L.R. 1186, 128 I.C. 621, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 505 (506).

Section 14, Limitation Act, is not applicable to appeals. But under sec. 5, Limitation Act, it is competent to a Court to admit an appeal after the expiry of the period of limitation if the appellant satisfies the Court that he had sufficient cause for not preferring an appeal within the prescribed time—Sudamarai v. Bisheshar, A.I.R. 1935 All. 92. See also Gopi Nath v. Bhukhan, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 301.

Although sec. 14 does not in terms apply to appeals, as it deals with suits and not appeal, yet sec. 14 is relevant in considering application under sec. 5 and may be availed of in excluding the period taken by the appellant in applying to the lower Court for review of judgment—Pevibai v. Matumal, A.I.R. 1936 Sind. 43, 30 S.L.R. 301, 162 I.C. 257.

149. "Against the defendant":—The defendant must be the same in both the proceedings. This section excludes the time taken in proceeding bona fide in a Court without jurisdiction against the particular defendant—Ram Pher v. Ajudhia, 12 O.L.J. 66, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 369, 87 I.C. 17. Where there are several defendants in the second suit, and the former suit was instituted against only one of them, no exclusion of time will be allowed—Nilmadhab v. Krishtodoss, 5 W.R. 281. But where the first suit was brought against two defendants and the second against only one of them, the case may under particular circumstances come under this section. See Seth Kahandas v. Dahibhai, 3 Bom. 182.

The plaintiff who had purchased a patni at a sale under the Patni Regulation in 1908 and had paid rent to the Zeminder in 1910, instituted a suit in 1916 against the Zeminder, after the patni sale was set aside in 1912, for recovery of the amount paid as rent, and claimed to deduct the period which was occupied by a proceeding for assessment of mesne profits as between himself and the original patnidar on the basis of the decree for cancellation of the sale. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a deduction of the period, because the proceedings for assessment of mesne profits were between himself and the original patnidar whereas the present suit was between himself and the Zeminder—Janki Nath v. Bijoy Chand Mahatab, 26 C.W.N. 271, 60 I.C. 698.

Where a plaintiff brings two suits against two different branches of the same family to recover a share of the property in the possession of each, and the suits are dismissed as improperly framed, he cannot be allowed any deduction for the time occupied in these suits when he subsequently brings a consolidated suit against both branches of the family—Jaitaram v. Bai Ganga, 8 B.H.C.R. 228.

Where the previous suit was brought against a certain person, and the second suit was brought against another who derived his liability to be sued from the defendant in the first suit, a deduction of time will be allowed, because the defendants in both suits are virtually the same, according to the definition in section 2 (4)—Hari Prasad v. Sourendra, 1 Pat. 506 (521), 3 P.L.T. 709, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 450, 65 I.C. 945. Where the previous suit was against a firm, and the subsesuent suit was against the surviving partners of the firm and the heirs of a deceased partner, held that the two suits were substantially against the same defendants—Firm of Baldeo Prasad v. Firm of Haji Ali, 1929 A.L.J. 73, 112 I.C. 715.

150. Same cause of action:—The essential point to be considered is that the previous proceeding was founded upon the same cause of action which is the foundation of the subsequent suit—Dund v. Deo Nandan, 17 C.L.J. 596, 20 I.C. 513. Where the first suit and the second were not substantially based on the same cause of action, this section would not apply—Manghu v. Kandhai, 8 All. 475. Thus, where a suit was originally brought by the landlord in the Revenue Court to eject the defendants as tenants, a subsequent suit by him in the Civil Court treating the defendants as trespassers would not be saved from limitation by the operation of this section, because the cause of action in both the suits is not the same—Dondoo v. Sheo Narain, 36 I.C. 770 (Oudh). Where the cause of action in the first suit was an alleged loan, and the cause of action in the second suit was a claim on a promissory note, held that the causes of action in the two suits were different, and this section did not apply—Nagesan v. Sankaran, 5 Rang. 600, 105 I.C. 701, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 21. Where a suit is dismissed for want of prosecution under O. 9, r. 2, the period covered by restoration proceedings cannot be excluded in computing limitation for a fresh suit brought under O. 9, r. 4, because the cause of action in the restoration proceedings is not the same as that in the subsequent suit, nor can it be said that the restoration proceedings failed for want of jurisdiction—Chintaman v. Kisan, 25 N.L.R. 99, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 219, 116 I.C. 509. Where M. on dismissal in default of his claim under O. 21, r. 58 filed an application under s. 151 for setting aside the dismissal order and on dismissal of the same, filed a regular suit under O. 21, r. 63 wherein he claimed the advantage of s. 14, Limitation Act, so as to exclude the period spent in prosecuting the application under s. 151, it was held that none of the facts which would go to establish M.'s proprietary right in the suit under O. 21, r. 63 could be necessary for the success of the application under s. 151, C. P. Code. The facts on which the reliefs in both the proceedings were claimed were not identical or even practically identical. Therefore it could not be said that the application under s. 151, C. P. Code, was founded on the same cause of action on which the suit under r. 63 was founded. Hence M. could not take the advantage of s. 14, Limitation Act—L. Behu Mal v. Murli Dhur, 1955 All.L.J. 692, A.I.R. 1956 All. 5. The defendant was a shareholder of a company. His shares were forfeited and afterwards the company was wound up. On 10th October 1924 the liquidator filed his list of contributories in which he put the name of the defendant, but the Court held on 13th October 1925 that the defendant's name had been wrongly entered in that list, and directed a suit to be filed. A suit was accordingly filed. Held that in computing limitation for this suit the period between 10th October 1924 and 13th October 1925 could not be excluded, because the liquidator's action in putting the defendant on to the list of contributories was based on the ground that he was a shareholder, whereas in the present suit the defendant was proceeded against as a debtor. The liabilities of the defendant in the two proceedings are different, based on different causes of action; and the previous proceeding failed not because the Court was unable to entertain it for defect of jurisdiction but because the proceeding was utterly wrong and misguided —Maneklal v. Suryapur Mills Co., Ltd., 52 Bom. 477, 30 Bom.L.R. 549, 110 I.C. 33, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 252 (257). The cause of action in winding up proceedings under sec. 163 (1), Companies Act is the inability of the Company to pay its debts and not, as in action for recovery of the debt. The question of recovery does not arise until the winding up order has been made and a liquidator appointed—Kashinath v. N. A. C. G. & P. Co., I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 562, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 255.

Proceedings taken by the Official Receiver to get the alienation annulled under secs. 53 and 54 of the Provincial Insolvency Act and a suit by a creditor under sec. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act for a declaration that certain alienations made by a debtor are void are based on different causes of action—Rama v. Gangi, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 862, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 588, A.I R. 1942 Mad. 483. The causes of action in a petition for insolvency and in an application for execution are not the same—Jaikishen v. Peoples Bank, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 136, 217 I.C. 65 (F.B.).

A plaintiff who wrongly sues a tenant in ejectment and loses his case cannot have the benefit of the time spent in that suit when he afterwards sues for rent which accrued due while the first suit was pending—Hurro Pershad v. Gopal Chunder, 9 Cal. 255 (P.C.). A claim for rent based on the ground of subsisting relationship between landlord and tenant and for recovery of rent on that basis can not be held to be founded on the same cause of action as a claim for mesne profits which is based essentially on trespass; where a prior suit for possession and mesne profits presented to a Civil Court is returned by it for presentation to the Revenue Court on the finding that the defendant was an occupancy raiyat not liable to ejectment and the suit is thereupon re-presented to the Revenue Court, after being amended so as to make it a suit for rent, this section does not apply as the identity of cause of action is absent—Satyanarayanamurthy v. Maharaja of Pithapur, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 329, 50 L.W. 139, A I.R. 1939 Mad. 724. So also, a proceeding under sec. 46 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for assessment of fair and equitable rent is not a suit based on the same cause of action as a suit for recovery of rent at the old rate from the raiyat—Port Canning Co. v. Achhiruddi, 43 C.L.J. 45, 92 I.C. 37, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 693. But where the plaintiff sued for land and mesne profits, and the claim for mesne profits was dismissed on the ground that a separate suit should be brought on it, held, in a second suit brought for the mesne profits, that the plaintiff would get a deduction of the time occupied in the first suit, as the cause of action in the two suits was the same—Hurro Chunder v. Shoorodhonee, 9 W.R. 402 (F.B.).

The plaintiff had originally applied to the Court to enforce an award. The Court holding that the award was too inadequate to be capable of execution remitted the award to the arbitrators for reconsidertion and they amended it accordingly; subsequently the plaintiff brought a regular suit on the amended award. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to a deduction of time under sec. 14, because the cause of action was the same in the previous and subsequent suits, as in both cases the ground on which the plaintiff came into Court was the alleged settlement of the disputes between him and the defendants by an award made by the arbitrators who were the same in both cases, and the substantive award was the same in both—Niadar Mal v. Shankar Das, 67 (P.R.) 1889. In a partition suit an order was made appointing an arbitrator to decide "all matters at issue between the parties." The arbitrator with the consent of the parties allocated several items of property to one or other of the parties in severality. Each party was treated as the purchaser of the items allocated to him and therefore liable to pay a certain price to others. The arbitrator filed an incomplete award as no agreement as to certain items of property was arrived at. The plaintiff regarded this incomplete award as binding on the parties and tried to enforce its terms in the partition suit. The defendants, on the other hand, contended that the partition proceedings formed no part of the award. The contention of the defendant was upheld by the appellate court. Thereupon the plaintiff brought a separate suit to recover moneys payable under the award, held, that the cause of action was precisely the same in the previous suit as in the later suit—Nitya Nand v. Lala Karamchand, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. (P.C.) 211, 1939 A.L.J. 738, 43 C.W.N. 648, A.I.R. 1939 P.C. 128, 50 L.W. 708 (P.C.). Where a decree-holder who had attached in 1913 a book-debt due in 1911 to his julgment-debtor, sold it in auction and purchased it himself in February 1915, and sued in March 1915 to recover it from the defendant who pleaded the bar of limitation, held that the suit was barred. The time of pendency of the attachment proceedings would not be deducted under this section, as those proceedings were not based on the same cause of action as the suit to recover the debt—Rangaswamy v. Thangavelu, 42 Mad. 637.

The time occupied by a trustee de son tort in defending a suit brought by the lawful trustee for the recovery of the trust estate cannot be deducted in favour of the trustee de son tort in a subsequent suit brought by him for the recovery of the out-of-pocket expenses incurred by him for the management of the trust estate, because the causes of action in the two suits are not the same, the trustee de son tort having made no counter-claim as regards those moneys in the previous suit—Abkan Sahib v. Soran Bibi, 38 Mad. 260.

A proceeding in a Revenue Court for mutation of names and an application for filing an award of arbitrators in respect of title of the parties are two different proceedings founded on separate causes of action, and the time spent in the former proceeding cannot be excluded in computing the period of limitation for the latter proceeding—Ram Ugrah v. Achraj Nath, 38 All. 85 (91), 13 A.L.J. 1115.

Different reliefs :—Although sub-section (1) does not contain the words "for the same relief" which occur in sub-section (2), still it must be said that for the applicability of sub-section (1) of sec. 14, not only the cause of action should be the same, but the relief sought also should be the same. Therefore, where the same cause of action entitles the plaintiff to several reliefs, and he chooses to sue only for one of them, he cannot claim the benefit of sec. 14 in respect of limitation when he brings the subsequent suit for another relief—Ramakrishna v. Jayarama, 38 L.W. 595, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 778 (779), 146 I.C. 361. A contrary view has been taken by the same High Court in Vengannan v. Ramaswami, I.L.R. (1944) Mad 104, (1943) 1 M L.J. 362, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 498 on the ground that this section does not say anything about reliefs If the causes of action in the suits are same, this section will apply though reliefs claimed are different. The plaint in a suit on an unregistered mortgage was amended by scoring out the relief to sell the mortgage property and the plaint was returned as the valuation was within the cognizance of the Court of Small Causes, where it was refiled. On the question whether the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of this section it was held that the question whether the two proceedings were based upon the same cause of action or not could not be decided on the terms of the reliefs claimed in either proceeding and that there was no justification for holding that the proceeding on the Small Cause Court side was based upon some cause of action different from that upon which the proceeding on the regular side was founded—Dal Singar v. Chandi, 1939 A.L.J. 1075, A.I.R. 1940 All. 145. An application for review of judgment of the High Court is substantially for the same relief as that prayed for in an application for leave to appeal to Supreme Court, the objertive in each case being the reversal of the judgment of the High Court—Janki v. Ramkripal, 30 Pat. 131, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 486.

422, 1938 N.L.J. 107, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 300; Phayagdas v. Mt. Indira, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 497, 1947 N.L.J. 376, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 189; Feroze v. Gopal, 38 P.L.R. 311; G. S. Pathak v. Nisal, A.I.R. 1955 Bom. 93. It is not diligence but bona fides which should be considered when judging the mistake in selecting the forum—Gobardhan v. Special Manager, Court of Wards, 1941 O.W.N. 713. The burden is on the plaintiff to prove that he acted in good faith in instituting the earlier proceedings—Kasikananda v. Saravana, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 347, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 257, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 319 (F.B.); Firm Lalchand v. Firm Balaram, A.I.R. 1957 M.P. 95. The establishment of good faith is a pre-requisite condition before the benefit of this section can be allowed. Where the good faith of the party prosecuting his remedy in a different proceeding was open to grave doubt, the benefit of this section cannot be claimed—Sahib Bux v. Deokali, A.I.R. 1941 A.W.R. (Rev.) 1041. Institution of suits in any of the Courts having jurisdiction does not constitute lack of good faith even if such choice causes inconvenience to the defendant—Kaluram v. Janistha, 20 Pat.L.T. 898, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 86. A finding as to good faith or the absence of it is a question of fact—Raghavayya v. Vasudevayya, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 375, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 47. When there is absence of charge of lack of good faith, benefit of this section is available—Mangamma v. Maharaja of Pithapuram, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 205, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 253. Ultimate result of proceeding cannot determine bonafides of a party—Janki v. Ram Kripal, 30 Pat. 131 A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 486.

It has been held in Ramjiwan v. Chand Mal, 10 All. 587 (598) that this section contemplates only those cases where the party had been misled into litigating in a wrong Court through bona fide mistake of fact as distinguished from ignorance of law. But in a later Full Bench case of the same High Court (Brij Mohun v. Mannu, 19 All. 348) it has been laid down that a bona fide mistake of law may be a sufficient foundation for the grant of indulgence under this section. The Patna High Court holds that proceedings coming under section 14 must be such as are recognised by law as legal in their initiation, though a party has carried the proceedings to the wrong Court. But a party who is proceeding in ignorance of law cannot be said to proceed with due diligence or in good faith. Thus, where the first proceeding was one which was not recognised by law, no deduction of time spent on such proceeding can be made —Sheo Dhari v. Gupteswar, 78 I.C. 482, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 716. Ignorance of or inattention to the law by persons who should be well aware of its provisions cannot be regarded as a bona fide mistake— Deputy Commissioner v. Devi Ditta, 34 P.L.R. 780, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 589, 144 I.C. 690; Birendra v. Jageshwar, 1940 O.W.N. 818, 1940 O.A. 1106.

But ignorance of law or the ill-advice of a pleader does not necessarily or prima facie establish a want of good faith. Therefore where a plaintiff instituted a suit in a wrong Court, engaged a pleader and took the usual steps which a litigant is compelled to adopt, it was held that although it was a stupid though not unaccountable blunder, still as it was made bona fide, the plaintiff was entitled to deduct the time under this section—Ram Ravji v. Pralhabdas, 20 Bom. 133. In Achal Das v. Sundaram, 1940 A.M.L.J. 120 it has been held that it would be most vicious principle to decide that for the failure of a counsel to cite an important authority, the party should be held to have not prosecuted the proceeding with due diligence. Proceeding in a wrong Court through the bona fide mistake of the counsel may be excused under this section, where the party has throughout prosecuted his case with due diligence—Kishan Lal v. Tika, 49 All. 555, A.I.R. 1927 All. 719, 101 I.C. 750 and specially where the wrong remedy adopted is considered by one of the courts to be the proper one—Birendra v. Jageshwar, 1940 O.W.N. 818, 1940 O.A. 1106. Although a party acting on the advice of his advocate may be presumed to act in good faith if the advocate himself does not act in good faith the party cannot rely upon that advice as establishing his own good faith. Whether an advocate has shown due care and attention is a question of fact to be decided on the evidence adduced in any particular case—Raghavayya v. Vasudevayya, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 375, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 47. But the fact that a litigant acted on the mistaken advice of a pleader will not entitle him to get the benefit of the provisions of this section, if the error made is so patent that it could have been avoided with the exercise of due care—Ram Sahu v. Imdad, 22 O.C. 39, 51 I.C. 590. Where the decree-holder's pleader without caring to read the recitals in the decree referred only to the heading of the decree and advised the decree-holder to file his application in a wrong court, and the court returned it for presentation to proper court, the plaintiff is not entitled to the benefit of this section as the negligent advice on the part of the pleader does not amount to good faith—Sam Narain v. Raghubans, A.I.R. 1952 Pat. 4. A litigant who takes action without going to the trouble and expense of taking legal advice cannot be said to have exercised due diligence and must take the consequences if he makes mistake. A litigant who consults a legal practitioner of inferior standing and little experience is in no better position. But when the advice is that of a pleader of the Bar, and is given after due deliberation and is followed, the Court cannot, simply because the advice was utterly wrong, hold that the litigant has not exercised due care and diligence—Fuzhur Ali v. Sahib Nur, 254 P.L.R. 1913, 20 I.C. 3.

Where the law gives no jurisdiction to a Court or officer in a certain matter, there can be no bona fide mistakes as to its or his jurisdiction in relation to that matter, and the time spent in a proceeding before such Court cannot be deducted. Thus, under the rules of the Bombay Government, a Collector executing a decree has no jurisdiction to set aside a sale made by him, and a party who makes an application to him to set aside a sale cannot be allowed to deduct the time spent in so doing in computing the period of limitation for a subsequent application to the proper Civil Court—Narayan v. Rasulkhan, 23 Bom. 531. A proceeding for execution of a decree taken erroneously but bona fide and with due diligence before a Court, which had no jurisdiction but which the decree-holder believed to have jurisdiction, is a bona fide one within the meaning of this section, and the time occupied in such proceeding will be deducted—Jahar v. Kamini, 28 Cal. 238; Hiralal v. Badridas, 2 All. 792 (P.C.). See also Pandu v. Jamna Das, 26 Bom.L.R. 470, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 113, 85 I.C. 778. But a proceeding contrary to a clearly expressed provision of law cannot be said to be prosecuted in good faith. Where the High Court in Rangoon has repeatedly said that it does not ordinarily interfere in revision with orders of removal of attachment made under O. 21, r. 60, C. P. Code, and that the party should file a suit, but the party filed a revision petition on the advice of his counsel, and after the petition was dismissed, subsequently filed a suit under O. 21, r. 63, C. P. Code held, that the time taken up during revision could not be excluded—S. R. M. M. A. Firm v. Maung Po Saung, 7 Rang. 466, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 297 (298), 120 I.C. 236; Tun U v. Chettyar Firm, 8 Bur.L.T. 93, 27 I.C. 829; Hasanar v. Kandan, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 318, 177 I.C. 923. The Madras High Court has taken a contrary view on the ground that revision petitions in such cases are entertained by that High Court; Venkata Swami v. Sura Bai, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 41, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 633; Kesavan v. Theva, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 41, 175 I.C. 767. Similarly, where a party against whom an order has been made under O. 21, r. 99, C. P. Code does not file a suit under O. 21, r. 103, but chooses to apply for revision of such order, he cannot get an exclusion of the time taken up in the revision proceedings, because it could not be said that the proceddings were taken in good faith. as the proceedings were contrary to the express provision of the law—Narayan v. Hari Ganesh, 32 Bom.L.R. 1186, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 505 (506), 128 I.C. 621. When in proceedings in execution of a decree for rateable distribution, payment was wrongly made to the defendant, and the plaintiff instead of prosecuting a suit, filed a revision petition in the High Court against the order of wrongful distribution, held that the revision petition was not prosecuted in good faith because no revision could lie while there was another remedy by way of suit; and he was not entitled, in a subsequent suit under section 73 (2) of the C. P. Code, to deduct the time taken by the revision petition—Baijnath v. Ramadoss, 39 Mad. 62 (66), 26 I.C. 219. Where a person recklessly disregards the provisions of Or. 21, r. 16 of the C. P. Code and starts to execute a decree without any authority from the Court which passed it, is not entitled to deduct the time spent in that proceeding—Brijmohandas v. Sadasiva, 41 Bom.L.R. 1190, A.I R. 1940 Bom. 5. Where a person in ignorance of the provisions of the Agriculturists Relief Act relating to the special forum prescribed by the Act, files a suit in a wrong Court and on its being returned files it in proper Court, the time thus spent can be deducted as the plaintiff should be deemed to have been prosecuting with due diligence and in good faith—Ram Shankar v. Bechan, 1940 O.W.N. 657, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 412. But where there is no clear indication in the law as to the proper procedure to be followed, the person carrying on abortive proceedings, is entitled to claim the benefit of the sec. 14—(M. C. Firm v. S. V. Chettyar, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 184, 162 I.C. 865, 7 Rang. 466 distinguished).

In execution of a decree a sum in excess was realised from the defendant. He filed a suit to recover back the amount but it was dismissed on the ground that no suit could lie, and the proper remedy was to file an application under section 47, C. P. Code. Thereupon he made an application to obtain refund of the money recovered in excess. Held that in computing the period of limitation for the application the time taken up in prosecuting the suit ought to be deducted, as the suit was brought with due diligence under a bona fide mistake—Gampatrao v. Anandrao, 44 Bom. 97.

This section has no application when bad faith is established. Where the plaintiff fraudulently obtained an ex parte decree for rent, brought the holding to sale, but the sale was set aside at the instance of the defendant, and thereupon the plaintiffs brought a second suit for rent, held that limitation should be computed from the date of the institution of the suit, and that the cause of action could not be deemed to have been in suspense during the pendency of the prior proceeding, as the plaintiff cannot take advantage of his own fraud—Narpat Singh v. Mahidhar, 8 Pat. 851, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 54 (57, 58), 122 I.C. 241.

This section has no application when the first suit has failed owing to the laches and negligence of the plaintiff or his lawyer. Thus where the plaintiff brought a suit without asking for leave to sue giving jurisdiction to the Court to hear the suit, it can not be said that he was prosecuting the suit in good faith—Ghisulal v. Gumbhirmull, 62 Cal. 510, 39 C.W.N. 606, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 377; or without giving proper notice to the official receiver, a party to the suit—Amar v. Basant, 43 P.L.R. 530, A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 256. The plaintiff filed a suit for damages for malicious prosecution against a Magistrate. The defendant pleaded want of notice under section 80, C. P. Code. The plaintiff went to trial on this issue and his suit was dismissed. Thereafter the plaintiff gave the required notice and again brought a suit and claimed to deduct the time spent in the previous suit. Held, that in view of the well known and old standing procedure requiring previous notice and the clear words of section 80, C. P. Code, the plaintiff could not be said to have acted in good faith in the previous suit, and was therefore not entitled to an exemption under this section—Manghammal v. Fernandez, 5 S.L.R. 181, 13 I.C. 260. But where a plaintiff withdraws the suit with leave of Court to sue afresh on ground that it was filed within two months of service of notice under sec. 80, C. P. Code he is entitled to exclude the period of pendency of suit in computing limitation for fresh suit—G. G. in Council v. Gouri, 28 Pat. 621, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 382.

Where a plaint was returned by the Sub-judge to be filed in the Munsiff's Court on the ground that the suit had been overvalued, and there was nothing to show want of bona fides in the plaintiff, the time spent in the Sub-Judge's Court was deducted—Obhoy v. Kritartha, 7 Cal. 284; Brij Mohan v. Mannu Bibi, 19 All. 348 (F.B.). Similarly, where a plaint was returned by the Court on the ground that the plaintiff had under-valued his claim, and there was nothing to show that the under-valuation was deliberate, reckless or mala fide, it was held that the time taken up in the wrong Court should be excluded—Ramdayal v. Saraju, 17 O.C. 210, 25 I.C. 403; Seshamma v. Shankar, 12 Mad. 1; Rahatulla v. Ibadulla, 18 I.C. 92; Bhawani v. Industrial Bank, 50 I.C. 645, 70 P.R. 1919, 31 P.L.R. 1919; Chandi v. Jankiram, 1 B.L.R.S.N. 12. Where a suit was rightly valued and was presented to the proper Court, but the Court mistakenly believing the suit to be under-valued returned the plaint, and then the plaintiff was driven from Court to Court for a period of 6 months after which he could file his suit again in the right Court, held that he should be given the benefit of this section, as there was no want of good faith or diligence on his part, and he ought not to suffer owing to the mistake of the Court —Raghubar v. Kanhaiya, 12 O.L.J. 297, 2 O.W.N. 383, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 493, 89 I.C. 443.

Where a suit on a promisory note was originally filed in the Civil Court as an ordinary money suit and not as a Small Cause Court suit within the period of limitation, but the plaint was returned after that period and on the very next day it was filed in the Small Cause Court, it was held that the suit was not barred by limitation—Gopal v. Bepin, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 353, 58 C.W.N. 1047.

A claim cannot be said to be not bona fide when two Courts concur in decreeing the claim, although the final Court of appeal holds the decree to be erroneous. Therefore the time occupied in the previous suit in which that claim was preferred, from the date of institution of the suit up to the date of the decree in second appeal, should be deducted—Dinanath v. Jadu Nath, 29 C.W.N. 202, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 456, 86 I.C. 130.

A suit was brought in the Presidency Court of Small Causes against defendants not resident within the local limits of its jurisdiction, with the leave of the Registrar of the Court, who exercised the powers of the Court. Suddenly it was ruled by the High Court that the leave of the Registrar was not the leave of the Court. The plaintiff's suit was thereupon rejected by the Small Cause Court. Subsequently, he instituted a fresh suit after obtaining the leave of the Court, and claimed to deduct the period occupied by the first suit. It was held that he was so entitled. The fact that he instituted the first suit with the leave of the Registrar instead of with the leave of the Court did not amount to any negligence or want of bona fides on his part, because up till then the Registrar had been for many years exercising the powers of the Court to grant such leave under a Rule passed by the High Court. The former suit was therefore prosecuted in good faith and with due diligence within the meaning of this section—Subbarau v. Yagana, 19 Mad. 90.

Where the decree on the face of it showed that it was passed by the Court of the Subordinate Judge, and there had been two previous execution applications both in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, and some money also had been realised, and the heading of the decree showed that it was one of the Subordinate Judge's Court, but still the decree-holder filed the next execution application in the Munsiff's Court, and subsequently re-filed it in the proper Court after the limitation period.

held that the decree-holder was not entitled to the protection of sec. 14 as such an act cannot be said to have been done with due care and attention—Fazlul v. Halaluddin, 8 P.L.T. 561, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 256, 101 I.C. 674. So also, where a decree in the nature of a foreclosure decree is passed by an Additional Subordinate Judge and the application for making it final is made to another of co-ordinate jurisdiction, the applicant is not entitled to the benefit of this section as it is a case of gross negligence; Ram Dutt v. Mahpal, 1938 O.W.N. 360, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh. 112. Where an appellant should have known that the High Court and not the District Court had jurisdiction to hear an appeal, and yet persisted in appealing to the District Court, held that there was no good faith on his part, and therefore the Court refused to excuse the delay when he afterwards filed his appeal in the High Court—Daudbhai v Emmabai, 28 Bom. 235.

A plaintiff cannot be said to have prosecuted the previous suit with due diligence when it was filed almost on the last day of limitation—Benomali v. Fakir, 46 C.L.J. 452, A I R. 1928 Cal. 46 (47); a contrary view has been taken in Sharifjan v. Vishnupriya, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 743, 1949 N.L.J. 586, A I R. 1950 Nag. 37 where it has been held that the law allows a particular period of limitation and the plaintiff is allowed to file his claim on the last day; or when owing to his own negligence the suit was so framed that the Court could not try it; as for instance, where he omitted to set out certain boundaries of the land in the plaint—Chunder v. Bissessuree, 6 W.R. 184 (F.B.); or where he neglected to register a compulsorily registrable certificate and to produce it in Court—Bai Jumna v. Bai Ichha, 10 Bom. 604.

The plaintiff brought a suit in a wrong Court on 20-5-1913, and that Court ordered the return of the plaint to the proper Court. But the plaintiff refused to take it back and in 1914 filed a revision against the order to the High Court, which was dismissed on March 16, 1915. On June 15, 1915, the plaintiff having applied for return of the plaint, it was returned to him on June 30 and he filed it on the same day in the proper Court. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a deduction of the time between May 20, 1913 and June 30, 1915, in as much as he could not be deemed to have been prosecuting the case with due diligence in view of the fact that he waited for three months after the dismissal of the revision petition before he applied for the return of the plaint—Hemeda v. Fatima, 16 A.L.J. 429, 45 I.C. 991.

A plaint was rejected on the ground of limitation as the plaintiff omitted to set out certain payments of interest by the defendants, which payments if so set out would have saved the suit from being barred by limitation. Thereupon the plaintiff brought a fresh suit setting out all those payments. It was held that the period of pendency of the first suit was not to be deducted as the omission of the plaintiff in that suit to set out the facts of payment amounted to a want of due diligence—Nobin v. Rajomoyi, 11 Cal. 264.

Where each of two plaintiffs came into Court originally to sue separately in respect of a contract which gave them a joint but not a several right, and this error was pointed out to them and they were given every opportunity of rectifying it, but they elected to proceed with their suits as then framed, and by the time that those suits were dismissed, the period of limitation for a fresh suit had expired, it was held that in these circumstances the plaintiffs did not exhibit that degree of diligence which would entitle them to the benefit of this section—Kalu v. Mehru, 41 P.R. 1916, 32 I.C. 497.

The plaintiffs applied for execution of their decree upon which there was objection preferred by the judgment-debtor under sec. 47, C. P. C. and the execution proceedings started by the plaintiff was held to be not maintainable in view of the order passed by the Court recording full satisfaction. The order was appealed against and there was a further appeal by the plaintiffs to the High Court, and the order against the plaintiffs holding that the execution proceedings were not maintainable was affirmed. The plaintiffs then brought a suit for rectification of the petition of adjustment. The suit to which the provisions of Art. 96 was applicable was filed out of time, and was prima facie barred by limitation, unless sec. 14 could be invoked in aid of the plaintiffs. It was held that the plaintiffs were entitled to invoke the aid of the provisions of sec. 14 for saving the bar of limitation—Abdul Sattar v. Abdul Rusan, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 400, 40 C.W.N. 914, 165 I.C. 756.

152. Defect of jurisdiction:—The words "defect of jurisdiction" mean a defect of jurisdiction peculiar to the Court in which the proceedings were taken, and do not cover such mistakes as the presentation and prosecution of an appeal which did not lie in any Court—Moti Singh v. Maghan, 22 P.R. 1912, 244 P.L.R. 1911, 11 I.C. 880; Govinda v. Krishna, A.I.R. 1955 Trav. Co. 51. The benefit of this section can be availed of only where there is initial want of jurisdiction—Hariprasad v. Babulal, A.I.R. 1948 Cal. 226. The Allahabad High Court has taken a contrary view and has held that want of jurisdiction may arise at any stage of the suit and there is nothing in this section that the defect of jurisdiction must be in existence at the very institution of the suit—Dal Singar v. Chandi, 1939 A.L.J. 1075, A.I.R. 1940 All. 145. In order to get benefit under this section the applicant need not show that the Court in which the proceeding was taken has actually refused to give relief on the ground of want of jurisdiction. If the Court in fact has no jurisdiction but assumes jurisliction —either acting from a wrong view or without applying its mind at all to the question— this section applies—Prasanna v. Kamrup Co-operative Land Mortgage Bank Ltd., 48 C.W.N. 821. It is not necessary that there should be a formal order of the Court in which the proceedings were prosecuted dismissing the same on the ground that it had no jurisdiction. This section does not require any order of the Court which had no jurisdiction recognising the fact. All it requires is that the Court which has to decide the question of limitation must find that the other Court was unable to entertain the proceeding because it had no jurisdiction—Vaithilinga v. Narayanaswami, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 323, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 457. This section does not apply when there is no want of jurisdiction and when the competent tribunal refuses to interfere with the order of a lower Court—Sheo Rajdhari v. Kameshwar, 23 Pat.L.T. 263, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 378, 200 I.C. 409 or when the Court has got to go into the merits before a case can be dismissed, the defect cannot be said to be defect of jurisdiction—Bhai Jaikishen v. Peoples Bank, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 186, 217 I.C. 65 (F.B.); Shanti v. Daulat, 50 P.L.R. 185, A.I.R. 1948 E.P. 68; Rajabapayya v. Basavayya, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 515, 1942 M.W.N. 820, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 713; Sri Madan Mohan v. Bejoyabati, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 202. It has been held in Janki v. Ram Kripal, 30 Pat. 131, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 486 that where an application for leave to appeal to Supreme Court is rejected on the merits on the ground that the petitioner had failed to satisfy the conditions precedent for granting of such leave, it can be said that the Court was unable to entertain it from a defect of jurisdiction.

An application to the Court which passed the decree, for the transfer of the decree to another Court for execution was dismissed on the ground of limitation besides other grounds. It was held that in computing the period of limitation for a subsequent application to the same Court for attachment of the judgment-debtor's property, the time between the filing of the previous application and its dismissal could not be deducted under this section, because the previous application was dismissed on grounds other than defect of jurisdiction, and also because the relief sought in the second application was not the same as that sought in the first—Theerthaswamigal v. Venkata- rama, 33 M.L.J. 682, 45 I.C. 460. Where a person misconceived his remedy and instead of proceeding by way of an application to set aside an execution sale, brought a suit which was eventually dismissed, the time taken in prosecuting the suit (and an appeal therefrom) cannot be deducted under this section in computing the period of limitation for an application, because the failure of the applicant in the prosecution of his claim by suit cannot be attributed to anything connected with the jurisdiction of the Court—Ganapathi v. Krishnamachari, 43 M.L.J. 184, 70 I.C. 743, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 417; Murugesa v. Jataram, 23 Mad. 621 or where a person instead of filing a suit under Or. 21 r. 103 of the C. P. Code files a petition for revision in High Court, the time spent in the unsuccessful revision petition cannot be excluded as the refusal of the High Court to interfere is not due to want of jurisdiction—Radha v. Sriniwas, 23 Pat. 14, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 225. Where a Court rejects a proceeding not because it is unable to entertain it on account of defect of jurisdiction but because the proceeding is utterly wrong and misguided as to the liability of the defendant, this section does not apply—Maneklal v. Suryapur Mills Co., Ld., 52 Bom. 477, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 252 (257). So also, where the relief asked for is found by the Court to have been misconceived either because it is not warranted by the facts mentioned by them or because the facts stated in the plaint or petition do not disclose a good and complete cause of action and the plaint or petition is consequently dismissed or rejected, the provisions of this section cannot be applied—Bhai Jaikishen v. Peoples Bank, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 186, 217 I.C. 65 (F.B.).

Where the Court in which the wrong proceeding was instituted had jurisdiction, but erroneously held that it had no jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed, the time spent in the Court may be deducted under this section—Abdulla v. Kalumpurath, 33 M.L.J. 463, 43 I.C. 6. Where a Court has jurisdiction to try a suit, but wrongly holds that it has no jurisdiction to try the suit and returns the plaint for presentation to 'proper Court,' the decision that it has no jurisdiction though right or wrong, is binding on the parties if it is not set aside in appeal or revision. The plaintiff who files the suit in the 'proper Court' on such return of plaint is entitled under sec. 14 to deduct the period spent in prosecuting the suit in the Court in which it was first presented—Firm Motilal Madanlal v. Firm Musa Md. Adenwala, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 69. The same principle will apply also in execution proceedings and if the Court erroneously decides its inability to entertain the question, this section will apply. In such a case it is not open to the second Court to say that there was no want of jurisdiction in the first Court—Abhoy v. Gopi, 76 C.L.J. 183, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 460. Where the plaintiff chooses to withdraw his suit under Or. 23, r. 1, C. P. C., he is not entitled to the benefit of sec. 14, Limitation Act, in a subsequent suit founded upon the same cause of action, because it cannot be considered that the previous suit failed on account of a defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature—Ram Manohar v. Baboo Singh, A.I.R. 1937 All. 124. But where the Court in which the previous suit was rightly instituted declined to entertain the suit not because it had no jurisdiction, but because that Court (Union Court) thought that it was desirable that the suit should be conducted in a Civil Court in which the question of law would be properly decided, held that this section did not apply—Bonomali v. Fakir Chand, 46 C.L.J. 452, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 46, 106 I.C. 324.

Where a suit which was triable by the ordinary Court was instituted in a Small Cause Court, but that Court rejected it for want of jurisdiction, the plaintiff was entitled to a deduction of the time during which the suit was pending in the Small Cause Court—Kullayappa v. Lakshmipathi, 12 Mad. 467 (471). Conversely, where the plaintiff filed a suit in the District Munsiff's Court, but the suit was dismissed as being cognizable by the Court of Small Causes, it was held that the period of pendency of the first suit in the District Munsiff's Court should be deducted under this section—Saminadha v. Samban, 16 Mad. 274. If a suit which is triable by the Revenue Court is brought in a Civil Court, and the latter returns the plaint for presentation to the proper (Revenue) Court, this section applies—Ram Pati v. Phool Singh, 1932 A.L.J. 421, A.I.R. 1932 All. 377 (378), 138 I.C. 108. Where a suit was instituted in the Presidency Small Cause Court against defendants not resident within the jurisdiction, with the leave of the Registrar, and it was subsequently ruled that the Court and not the Registrar was empowered to give such leave, and the suit having been dismissed, a similar suit was then instituted, the leave of the Judge having been first obtained, it was held that this section applied and the plaintiff was entitled to deduct the time during which the first suit was pending, as the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain that suit until its leave was obtained for proceeding against defendants not resident within the Court's jurisdiction—Subbarau v. Yagana, 19 Mad. 90. So also, a plaint was filed in the High Court with leave under clause 12 of the Charter, such leave having been obtained from the Registrar. Subsequently in another case it was decided that the leave of the Registrar was bad in law. Thereupon the Court rejected the plaint and ordered it to be returned to the plaintiff, who afterwards brought a fresh suit on the same cause of action. Held that section 14 should be applied in calculating the period for the second suit—Ramdeo v. Ganesh, 35 Cal. 924. An application was made before a Sub-Judge's Court for execution of a decree passed by itself, but that Court after executing the decree in part transferred it to the Presidency Small Cause Court which proceeded to execute it. Afterwards it was discovered that the transfer of the decree was a mistake as the amount exceeded Rs. 2,000, and the decree was returned to the Sub-Judge's Court. A fresh application for execution was thereafter made. Held that the time during which the decree was in the Presidency Small Cause Court should be deducted in computing the period of limitation for the second application—Barrow v. Javerchand, 19 Mad. 67. S obtained a mortgage decree against P in March 1887, in the Hajipore Munsiff's Court. On the 9th September he applied for execution and on 7th November 1887 the mortgaged property was sold by the Hajipore Court. On appeal the High Court set aside the sale on the 2nd September 1890 on the ground that the Hajipore Court had no jurisdiction. On the 6th September 1890 S applied to the Hajipore Court to transfer the decree to the Muzaffarpur Court, and on the 19th December 1890, S applied for execution to the Mazaffarpur Court. Held that the decree-holder was entitled to a deduction of all the time occupied in executing the decree in the Hajipore Court, from 9th September 1887 to the 2nd September 1890, if not to the 6th September 1890—Rajbullubh v. Joy Kishen, 20 Cal. 29. Where, however, the plaintiff deliberately undervalues his suit and the plaint is refiled in the proper Court after amendment, the plaintiff is not entitled to get the benefit of this section; Chandrayya v. Seethanna, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 590, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 689; Ramchandra v. Mt. Khodaijatul, 24 Pat. 462, 26 Pat. L.T. 245, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 369. Where a defendant is found after the issue of summons in a suit to have been dead before the filing of the plaint, the Court has no jurisdiction to decide the suit against him, and the plaintiff may have a deduction of the time occupied in that suit when he subsequently sues the defendant's representatives—Mohun Chunder v. Azam Gazee, 12 W.R. 45.

Where a plaintiff, relying upon the defendant's representation as to the latter's place of residence, brought his suit in a Court which had no jurisdiction, the time of the pendency of the suit in such Court could be properly excluded—Banee Madhab v. Bipro Dass, 15 W.R. 69. Where a plaintiff files a suit on a promissory note in a Court within the jurisdiction of which the defendant was employed, and where the money was borrowed and the suit note was actually executed and the plaintiff had no reason to think that the defendant had his residence elsewhere, but it is found as a fact that he lived elsewhere at the time of filing the suit and that the Court in which a suit was filed had no jurisdiction, the plaintiff would be entitled to exclude the time taken in prosecuting the suit in the wrong Court—Abdulla v. Tribhuan, 16 Luck. 402, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 161, 1940 O.W.N. 1212.

The plaintiff was allowed under this section to deduct the period during which he was bona fide seeking redress from the Revenue Court which had no jurisdiction to deal with the question raised by him—Girijanath v. Ram Narain, 20 Cal. 264.

A suit for recovery of price of bricks was brought in the Munsiff's Court which passed an ex parte decree; the ex parte decree was set aside and the suit was reheard. The Court then being of opinion that the suit was cognizable by the Small Cause Court, returned the plaint for re-presentation to that Court. It was held that the plainiff was entitled to the benefit of this section—Ford v. Meyer, 15 A.L.J. 573, 40 I.C. 447.

153. Other cause of a like nature:—The expression "defect of a like nature" means and connotes something which is quite distinct from defect of jurisdiction. What is a 'defect of a like nature' depends upon the facts of each case—Maneklal v. Shivlal, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 9, 40 Bom.L.R. 1169, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 26. Misjoinder of causes of action was held to be a cause of a like nature with want of jurisdiction—Deo Prasad v. Pertab, 10 Cal. 86, followed in Mullick Kefait v. Sheo Pershad, 23 Cal. 821; Mathura Singh v. Bhawani, 22 All. 248 (F.B.); Venkiti v. Murugappa, 20 Mad. 48 (F.B.); Assan v. Pathumma, 22 Mad. 494 (500); Venkataratnam v. Ramaraju, 24 Mad. 361; Narasimma v. Muttayan, 13 Mad. 451. The contrary rulings in Ram Sabhag v. Bobin, 2 All. 622, India Publishers v. Aldridge, 35 Cal. 728 and Tirtha Sami v. Sheshagiri, 17 Mad. 299 are no longer good law in view of Explanation III added to this section. The words "or other cause of a like nature" should be liberally construed. They must be construed ejusdem generis with defect of jurisdiction, that is to say, the defect must be of such a character as to make it impossible for the Court to entertain the suit or application and to decide it on merits—Janki v. Ram Kripal, 30 Pat. 131, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 486.

Misjoinder of parties must also be deemed to be a cause of like nature with defect of jurisdiction. See Explanation III, and Mathura Singh v. Bhawani, 22 All. 248 (F.B.). The cases of Jema v. Ahmed, 12 All. 207, India Publishers v. Aldrige, 35 Cal. 728, Krishnaji v. Vithal, 12 Bom. 625, in which the contrary view was held, must be deemed as overruled by Explanation III.

The word 'misjoinder' in Explanation III includes 'non-joinder'. For the purposes of this section there is no distinction between misjoinder and non-joinder. They are only variations of the same defect. Therefore, where one of several decree-holders applied to execute the decree without impleading the other decree-holders as parties, and the application was dismissed, whereupon a subsequent application for execution was properly presented, held that the time occupied in prosecuting the earlier application in good faith should be deducted under this section—Seth Ibrahim v. Firm of Ghulam Husain, 15 S.L.R. 11, 62 I.C. 507.

A misconception of the plaintiff as to the Court in which he ought to sue, coupled with the action of the Court in which he instituted the suit on such misconception, in admitting the suit, was held, under the special circumstances of the case, to be a cause similar to defect of jurisdiction—Seth Kahandas v. Dahiabhai, 3 Bom. 182. See this case cited in Note 149, ante.

The words "or other cause" refer to cases where the action of the Court is prevented by some unavoidable circumstance over which no one has any control, or something incidental to the Court itself and not due to any negligence of the plaintiff —Chunder Madhub v. Bissessuree, 6 W.R. 184; Raja of Faridkote v. Sardar Gurdayal, 34 P.R. 1898. Therefore, this section does not apply where the previous suit was dismissed for plaintiff's default or negligence in prosecuting it—Chintaman v. Kisan, 25 N.L.R. 99, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 219, 116 I.C. 509 or for misconception of remedy—Ramanand v. Gaya, 27 Pat. 137; Chettiar v. Mudaliar, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 414, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 288. The plaintiff was not entitled to deduct the time during which she was engaged in prosecuting the first suit which was dismissed owing to the non-production of a certificate due to her own laches—Bai Jumna v. Bai Ichha, 10 Bom. 604; nor can the plaintiff claim exemption when his first suit was dismissed on account of failure to give notice under sec. 80, C. P. Code—Manghanmal v. Fernandez, 5 S.L.R. 181, 13 I.C. 260. The Patna High Court has held that where good faith and due diligence are given a cause is not prevented from being of a like nature to defect of jurisdiction, merely because it was in the plaintiff's own power to avoid or resulted from his own act or from a bonafide mistake of law or procedure which prevented the Court in limini from entertaining the suit—Lal Bihari v. Bani, 30 Pat.L.T. 201, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 293 (F.B.).

Where a suit was dismissed as premature on the ground that the cause of action had not accrued, the section will apply as it was a "defect of like nature"—Maneklal v. Shivlal, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 9, 40 Bom.L.R. 1169, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 26. So also, where the jurisdiction of a Court to entertain a suit depends upon leave being granted by that Court, and leave is so granted, the subsequent recalling of the leave brings the case within the words "other cause of a like nature"—Kaluram v. Janistha, 20 Pat.L.T. 893, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 86, 182 I.C. 632. The expression "for other cause of a like nature" includes dismissal of a suit by partners in firm name on account of non-registration of firm; Rochaldas v. Uttamchand, I.L.R. (1945) Kar. 293, A.I.R. 1946 Sind 14. In Fatechand v. Wasudeo, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 477, 1947 N.L.J. 417 it has been held that even if the failure of arbitration proceedings may not be due to defect of jurisdiction nevertheless the section would apply on the ground that there was a 'cause of like nature' to a defect of jurisdiction.

This section applied where the Court in which the previous proceeding was instituted was unable to entertain it on account of the Court's defect of jurisdiction or some cause of like nature, that is, on some such technical ground, and therefore rejected it. This section does not apply where the previous proceeding was dismissed after adjudication on its merits, and not because the Court was unable to entertain it—Issureenund v. Parbutty, 3 W.R. 13; Ardha Chandra v. Matangini, 23 Cal. 325 (327); Abbas Ali v. Yusuf Ali, 28 P.L.R. 158, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 186; Sat Bhirai v. Ahmed, 28 P.L.R. 403, 104 I.C. 726, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 786; Rajani Bandhu v. Kali Prasanna, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 419, 74 I.C. 279; Bhai Jaikishen v. Peoples Bank, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 186, 217 I.C. 65 (F.B.), Shanti v. Daulat, 50 P.L.R. 185, A.I.R. 1948 E.P. 68; Rajabapayya v. Basavayya, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 515, 1942 M.W.N. 820, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 713. This section will entitle a plaintiff to claim exclusion of time when his previous suit was dismissed without any trial and simply on the case set up in the plaint. Where the previous suit was dismissed on the findings arrived at by the Court, it cannot be said that the suit was dismissed without trial, and consequently this section cannot apply—Narayanan v. Kannammal, 28 Mad. 338 (341, 342). Therefore, in calculating the period of limitation prescribed for a suit brought by the adopted son to set aside an alienation made by his adoptive mother, the period of pendency of suits brought by or against him to prove or disprove the validity of his adoption will not be deducted, because such suits were properly brought and adjudged on their merits—Kishen v. Muddun, 5 W.R. 32.

Where the previous suit was dismissed not on any technical ground of misjoinder of parties or of causes of action but on the ground that having regard to the frame of the suit no cause of action had been established against the defendants, held that this section would not apply and the time taken up by the previous suit would not be deducted—Commercial Bank v. Allavoodeen, 23 Mad. 583 (590).

Where a previous application for execution of a decree was dismissed on the ground that it was superseded by the decree in appeal it cannot be contended that the execution failed on account of a defect of jurisdiction of the Court or of some cause of a like nature—Anis v. Daughter of Jamunabai, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 117.

Where an application for revision of an order passed under O. 21, r. 99, C. P. Code was dismissed by the High Court on the ground that the proper remedy was not by way of revision petition but by way of a suit under O. 21, r. 103, it could not be said that the High Court was unable to entertain the application through defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature—Narayan v. Hari Ganesh, 32 Bom.L.R. 1186, A.I.R 1930 Bom. 505 (506), 128 I.C. 621; Radha v. Srinath, 23 Pat. 13, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 225.

Plaintiff at first instituted a suit in 1893 for possession and mesne profits from 1889 to 1893 (the date of the suit) as well as from 1893 to the date of recovery of possession. The suit was decreed in January 1895 but the mesne profits were awarded only up to 1893 (the date of suit), the decree being silent as to the mesne profits from 1893 to 1895. Plaintiff thereupon instituted in April 1898 a second suit for mesne profits from 1893 to January 1895. Held that the suit was barred; the time of pendency of the previous suit would not be deducted, because it could not be said that the former Court was unable to entertain the former suit from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of like nature. In fact, the Court did entertain the former suit and there was no defect of jurisdiction which prevented the Court from awarding the mesne profits claimed, but it did not decree the mesne profits either through inadvertence or because the claim was not specially pressed—Hays v. Padamanand, 32 Cal. 118.

Plaintiff's suing by mistake on a foreign judgment, which was a nullity, cannot be held to be a cause of like nature with defect of jurisdiction—Raja of Faridkote v. Sardar Gurdayal, 34 P.R. 1898.

Where, relying upon a decision of the High Court, a decree-holder instituted proceedings in the Insolvency Court, and then by a subsequent Full Bench Decision of the High Court it was declared that those proceedings must be taken in the Revenue Court and not in the Insolvency Court, whereupon the decree-holder applied to the Revenue Court, held that the time during which the proceedings were pending in the Insolvency Court would be deducted—Parbati v Raja Rikh, 44 All. 296 (300), 20 A.L.J. 147, 66 I.C. 214.

Res judicata does not constitute a "cause of like nature." Thus, a decree-holder made an application for execution of his decree on 6th December 1915 which was dismissed for default. Thereupon the judgment-debtor who also held a decree against the decree-holder applied for execution of his decree against him, and the decree-holder made an application on 15th November 1916 for being allowed to set off his decree against the decree of the judgment-debtor, but the decree-holder's application was disallowed on 23rd May 1918 on the ground of res judicata. Subsequently the decree-holder made an application for execution of his decree and claimed to deduct the time between 15th November 1916 and 23rd May 1918. Held that he was not entitled to get the deduction—Braja Gopal v. Tara Chand, 6 P.L.J. 593, 63 I.C 593, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 225.

Where a prior suit for declaration of title was dismissed as not maintainable because it contained no prayer for possession, the time taken in prosecuting that suit can be deducted as the defect was of a nature similar to a defect of jurisdiction—Venkamma v. Parthasarathi, 51 M.L.J. 391, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1081, 98 I.C. 14. An application for execution of a decree was dismissed because the relief asked for was not in conformity with the decree, the legitimate prayer for the execution of the decree being joined with a prayer which the Court was not competent to grant. Held that the time occupied in this application should be deducted in calculating the period for a subsequent application, as the former application was dismissed for a cause of a nature similar to defect of jurisdiction—Keshore Mal v. Jagdish Narain, 3 Pat. 42, 75 I C. 312, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 471.

154. Withdrawal of previous suit:—This section applies only to cases where the previous suit was dismissed by the Court itself where it was unable to entertain it; it does not apply where the previous suit was voluntarily abandoned or withdrawn by the plaintiff, and then he brings a fresh suit after the expiry of the period of limitation. When the previous suit had been terminated not by any action of the Court but by the act of the plaintiff, he cannot claim the benefit of this section—Arunachalam v. Lakshman, 39 Mad. 936; Imperial Bank v. Veerappa, 67 M.L.J. 189, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 593 (595); Varajlal v. Shomeswar, 29 Bom. 219; Upendra v. Surya Kanta, 20 I.C. 205; Krishnaji v. Vithal, 12 Bom. 625; Bai Jumna v. Bai Ichha, 10 Bom. 604; Pirjade v. Pirjade, 6 Bom. 681; Sadayatan v. Ram Chandra, 1934 A.L.J. 535 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1934 All. 688 (691); Achut v Parshram, I.L.R. (1938) Bom. 327, 40 Bom.L.R. 377, A.I.R 1938 Bom. 281; Mohanlal v. Tabizuddin, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 316, 43 C.W.N. 1074, 69 C.L.J. 540, A.I.R 1939 Cal. 625; Pankala v. Venkatasubbayya, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 337, 1947 M.W.N. 616. If a suit is withdrawn by the plaintiff under O. 23, r. 1 with permission to bring another suit, and a fresh suit is instituted, the plaintiff is bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted (O. 23, r. 2)—Varajlal v. Someshwar, supra; Rahim Ali v. Yehia, A.I.R. 1928 All. 402; Rampati v. Phool Singh, 1932 A.L.J. 421, 138 I.C. 108, A.I.R. 1932 All. 377 (378), Ram Manohar v. Baboo Singh. A.I.R. 1937 All. 124. This is so even if the Court granting permission to withdraw the suit expresses an opinion that sec. 14 of the Limitation Act will apply and the plaintiff will not be prejudiced on the question of limitation—Virupakshappa v. Veerabhadra, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 442, 1942 M.W.N. 622, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 80. But if the Court was not competent to entertain the suit, and the suit was withdrawn with the leave of the Court, the order of withdrawal might be treated as an order returning the plaint, and the provisions of sec. 14 would apply to the suit when re-instituted—Ramdas v. Ganesh Narain, 35 Cal. 924, 12 C.W.N. 921.

O. 23, r. 2, C. P. Code which lays down that in any fresh suit instituted by the plaintiff with the permission of the Court, after withdrawing the previous suit, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted, appears to be in conflict with sec. 14 of the Limitation Act, which gives a privilege to the plaintiff by deducting the time spent in the previous suit. But there is no real conflict in the two provisions. O. 23, r. 2 deals with a case in which the suit is terminated by the voluntary act of the plaintiff; whereas sec. 14 refers to a case where the Court itself terminates the suit owing to defect of jurisdiction. The two provisions deal with entirely different cases—Sadayatan

v. Ram Chandra, 1934 A.L.J. 535 (F.B.), 150 I.C. 135, A.I.R. 1934 All. 688 (691); Kaliandas v. Mahomed, I.L.R. (1940) Kar. 225, A.I.R. 1940 Sind. 125.

155. Deduction of time:—Where there is ground for excluding certain periods under sec. 14, in order to ascertain what is the date of the expiration of the prescribed period, the days excluded have to be added to what is primarily the prescribed period—Maqbul Ahmad v. Pratap Narain, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85; 39 C.W.N. 640. Where a plaint which had been presented to the wrong Court on the last day of the period of limitation, was subsequently returned by the Court for presentation "within a week" to the proper Court, and then the plaint was filed in the proper Court within a week, it was held that the suit when so presented was barred by limitation, as only the time during which the suit was pending in the wrong Court should be excluded; and the fact that the Court had given a week's time should not be taken into account—Haridas v. Sarat, 17 C.W.N. 515, 18 I.C. 121. The principle is that a Court in returning a plaint to a plaintiff in a suit in which it had no jurisdiction had no authority to fix a time within which the plaint was to be presented to a Court having jurisdiction, and if it does so, that fact will not in any way affect the time to be allowed to the plaintiff—Gauri Nangiah v. Piadatala Venkatappa, 5 M.H.C.R. 407.

Delay in subsequently filing suit in proper Court :—So also, where a plaint was returned to be re-presented to another Court, and no steps were taken for several days or months thereafter, by which time the suit was barred, held that the delay could not be excused—Fateh Mahammad v. Raja, 26 P.L.R. 342; Madho Ram v. Dharm Singh, 31 P.L.R. 305, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 394 (396), 127 I.C. 708; Narayan v. Hari Gonesh, 32 BomL.R. 1186, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 505 (506), 128 I.C. 621; Sheo Narain v. Ram Prasad, 8 N.L.J. 76, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 241, 74 I.C. 317.

Closing of wrong Court:—The last day for filing a suit was 14th June 1908. But as the Court in which the suit was sought to be filed was closed from 14th June to 5th July, the suit was filed on 6th July 1908. On 17th February 1909, the Court found that it had no jurisdiction and returned the plaint to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper Court. The plaintiff presented it to the proper Court on the next Court day, i.e., 19th February 1909. It was held that under sec. 14 the plaintiff was entitled to the deduction of time between 6th July 1908 and 17th February 1909, i.e., the time during which the suit was actually prosecuted in the wrong Court, but not to a deduction of the period between 14th June and 5th July 1908, during which the wrong Court was closed; held further, that the plaintiff could not invoke the aid of section 4 for deducting the latter period, as the word 'Court' in that section does not include a wrong Court—Mira Mohideen v. Nallaperumal, 36 Mad. 131; Ummathu v. Pathuamma, 44 Mad. 817 (823); Seshagiri v. Vajra Velayudam, 36 Mad. 482; Govindasami v. Sami Padayachi, 43 M.L.J. 579, 69 I.C. 724; Makund v. Ramraj, 14 A.L.J. 310, 35 I.C. 292 (293); Bano Mal v. Bano Mal, 55 I.C. 55 (Lah.); Maqbul v. Pateshri, 1929 A.L.J. 976, A.I.R. 1929 All. 677, 118 I.C. 670; Dharma v. Ganga Ram, 11 Lah. 12, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 425, 116 I.C. 314, 31 P.L.R. 396; W. A. Patil v. U. T. Deshmukh, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 215. The contrary view expressed in Basvanappa v. Krishnadas. 45 Bom. 443, was overruled by their Lordships of the Privy Council—Maqbul Ahmad v. Onkar Pratap, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 85, 37 Bom.L.R. 533 (P.C.). See also Karim v. Abdul, I.L.R. 1953 Bom. 565, 55 Bom.L.R. 119, A.I.R. 1953 Bom. 353.

The time taken in obtaining certified copies of the judgment or order of the first Court for the mistaken institution of the appeal which ultimately proved infructuous, should also be deducted from calculation, because the plaintiff could be said to have been prosecuting a civil proceeding during the period he was taking the preparatory steps for the filing of the appeal by way of applying for copies of judgment and decree—Lakshmiram v. Sonatan, 15 C.L.J. 160, 7 I.C. 775. But the plaintiff is not entitled to deduct the time in obtaining a certified copy of the order of rejection of the plaint passed by the Court in which the suit had been wrongly filed—Bonomali v. Fakir Chand, 46 C.L.J. 452, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 46, 106 I.C. 324.

Closing of proper Court:—Where a plaint presented within time in a wrong Court was returned to the plaintiff on a date after limitation had expired, and the next three days being holidays, it was presented before the proper Court on the fourth day, held that in the circumstances the suit was not barred by limitation, as the plaintiff could not present the plaint to the proper Court before the date on which he did, owing to the holidays of that Court—Bejoy Kumar v. Kusum Kumari, 33 C.W.N. 221 (225); Harkubai v. Shankerbhai, 45 Bom.L.R. 1014, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 37, 215 I.C. 12. Section 4 of the Act can be tacked on to the time excluded under this section—Chudamsao v. Seth Ram Kuwar, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 375, 1947 N.L.J. 209, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 15. In computing the period of limitation the proper method is to take what is primarily the prescribed period and then add to it the period excluded by reason of this section. If these periods all taken together happen to expire on the date on which the court is closed, the party can wait and file the appeal on the date when the court reopens—Bhiwani Cloth Mills Ltd. v. Parmeshari, I.L.R. (1946) Lah. 107, A.I.R. 1947 Lah. 168. A contrary view has been taken in Anil v. Dhirendra, 41 C.W.N. 956 where it has been held that the plaintiff is not entitled to add the holidays to the prescribed period. The reason is that sec. 4 of the Act contemplates that the suit should be instituted in the proper court, that is, the court which has jurisdiction to entertain it.

156. Suspension of right of action:—Two out of three brothers were dispossessed of their shares in certain properties by the third brother. One of the brothers who were dispossessed brought a suit for the recovery of his share as against the other two brothers as defendants. One of the defendants supported the plaintiff and set up his own right to one-third share in the property. An issue was raised between the co-defendants as to whether the defendant who supported the plaintiff was entitled to a certain share. The Court passed a decree not only in favour of the plaintiff but also declared that that defendant had one-third share. On appeal the decree of the trial Court was set aside so far as the defendant was concerned. He then filed a suit for the recovery of his share. It was held that he was entitled to deduct the period from the date of the decree of the first Court to the date when that decree was set aside on appeal, i.e., the period during which there was the judgment of the lower Court in his favour in the previous suit; that a Court should relieve parties against injustice occasioned by its acts and oversights; that where the plaintiff could not have sued for some relief which had been decreed to him by mistake, his right of action should be considered as suspended; and that the time during which his right was suspended should be deducted, although it was doubtful whether this section covered the case or not—Lakhan Chandra v. Madhu Sudhan, 35 Cal. 209, affirmed by the Privy Council in Nrityamoni v. Lakhan, 43 Cal. 660 (663), 20 C.W.N. 522, 33 I.C. 452, where their Lordships laid it down as a general principle that limitation would remain in suspense whilst the plaintiffs were bona fide litigating for their rights in a Court of Justice. And so, where the plaintiff obtained a decree for rent which was reversed on appeal on the ground that the provisions of sec. 12 of the Rangoon Rent Act had not been satisfied, and thereafter the plaintiff again sued for rent, held that as long as the previous decree was in existence, i.e., until it was set aside by the Appellate Court, the plaintiff could not file another suit for rent, and therefore in the second suit the plaintiff was entitled to deduct the whole of the period during which he had been litigating his claim in the previous suit, viz., the period from the date of institution of that suit (and not from the date of the decree) up to the date of the appellate decree—Bhandari v. Nihalchand, 6 Rang. 691, 117 I.C. 52, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 55 (57). So also where an award was made under the Arbitration Act in favour of the plaintiff and the arbitrator filed the award in the Court and upon that Court holding that it had no jurisdiction to entertain the award the plaintiff presented the award in another Court, limitation was "in suspense" as no proceeding could be taken in any other Court for the purpose of enforcing the award; Aildas v. Sobhomal, 32 S.L.R. 151, A.I.R. 1938 Sind. 50.

In computing the period of limitation for a suit against a Ruling Chief (e.g., the Gaekwar of Baroda) the plaintiff is not entitled to deduct the time spent by him in obtaining the Government of India's consent under sec. 86, C. P. Code. Secs. 4 to 25 contain no statutory provision enabling the plaintiff to deduct that time—Sayaji Rao, Gaikwar of Baroda v. Madhavrao, 53 Bom. 12, 30 Bom.L.R. 1463, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 14 (19, 23), 115 I.C. 369.

The plaintiff purchased a patni at a sale under the Patni Regulation in May 1908. The patnidar instituted a suit for cancellation of the sale which was decreed in May 1912. In the interval, on the 14th October 1910 the plaintiff had paid rent to the defendant to prevent further sale under the Regulation. The plaintiff now brought a suit in 1916 for recovery of the money paid by him to the Zeminder as rent, and claimed to deduct the time which was occupied by a proceeding for assessment of mesne profits as between himself and the original patnidar on the basis of the decree for cancellation of the sale. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a deduction of the period. There was not since the 14th October 1910 any period or time during which the right of the plaintiff to institute the present suit was suspended by reason of circumstances over which he had no control, so as to entitle him to invoke the aid of the rule recognised by the Judicial Committee in 7 M.I.A. 323 (Prannath v. Rookia Begum), 12 M.I.A. 244 (Surnomoyee v. Shooshee), and 43 Cal. 660 (Nrityamoni v. Lakhan), and to deduct the period—Janaki Nath v. Bejoy Chand Mahotab, 26 C.W.N. 271, 60 I.C. 698, 33 C.L.J. 366. For other cases, in which the principle of the suspension of cause of action has been discussed, see Niranka v. Atulkrishna, 28 C.W.N. 1009, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 67, 83 I.C. 110; Dina Nath v. Jadu Nath, 29 C.W.N. 202, 86 I.C. 130, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 456; Abdul Rahim v. Ojamshee, 56 Cal. 639, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 5 (9, 10); and the cases cited in Note 102 under sec. 9.

156A. Sub-section (2):—An application to set aside an ex parte decree passed by a Small Cause Court was originally presented on 29th March before a Munsiff where it remained pending for some days. The Munsiff returned the application for being filed in the Court which passed the decree, whereupon it was filed in the Court of the second Munsiff by whom the decree had been passed, but by mistake the application was registered as an ordinary application to set aside an ex parte decree in an ordinary money suit, and the mistake was discovered on 7th August, i.e., several months afterwards. Held that in computing the period of limitation for the application under Art. 164, the judgment-debtor was entitled to a deduction of the time from 29th March to 8th August, during which he has been wrongly but diligently prosecuting his application—Basiruddin v. Sonaulla, 15 C.W.N. 102 (106).

Under the Act of 1877, in computing the period of limitation for an application, the time during which the applicant had been prosecuting an application in a wrong Court could be deducted; but no time was deducted where the applicant had been prosecuting a suit in a wrong Court. See Sheoji Ram v. Sheo Chand, 63 P.R. 1886. But this is no longer good law, because under sub-section (2) of the present section, the time during which the applicant had been prosecuting another civil proceeding (which includes a suit) will be deducted. See Ganapathi v. Krishnamachari, 43 M.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 417, 70 I.C. 743.

"For the same relief" :—The words "the same relief" have reference to the precise relief sought and cannot be construed in a liberal sense so as to look to the ultimate object with which that relief is sought—Moiden v. Chidambaram, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 338, 57 L.W. 582, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 86. In computing the period of limitation for an application for a final decree for sale upon a mortgage, the applicant is not entitled to deduct the period during which he had been prosecuting a previous application for execution of the preliminary decree (treating it as a simple money-decree by a mistake caused by the Court in the form in which the decree was prepared), because the relief claimed in the two proceedings was not the same. In the former proceeding the relief claimed was execution and realisation of the decretal amount by attachment and sale of the property; while in the present application the prayer is not for execution but preparation of the final decree—Maqbul Ahmad v. Pateshri, 1929 A.L.J. 976, A.I.R. 1929 All. 677 (679), 118 I.C. 670. An application for a final decree in a mortgage suit and an application for execution of a decree are not applications for the same relief. Hence a prior application for a final decree though made bona fide can be of no avail to save limitation in respect of the subsequent application for execution—Awappa v. Datta, 49 Bom.L.R. 846, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 185.

There can be no exclusion under this section of time occupied by the insolvency proceedings against the judgment debtor, in computing the period of limitation for a decree against him, as the proceedings are not for obtaining the same relief—Yeshwant v. Walchand, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 16; (on appeal from Walchand v. Yeshwant, 51 Bom.L.R. 608, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 379); Jaikishen v. Peoples Bank, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 136, 217 I.C. 65 (F.B.); Magandas v. Bhalchandra, I.L.R. (1954) Bom. 840, 56 Bom.L.R. 414, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 436. The contrary view taken in Vaithilinga v. Narayanaswami, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 323, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 457 is superseded by the Supreme Court decision.

An application under sec. 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and the resistance to the proceedings under sec. 174 (3) of the Act are not for the same reliefs—Chunnu v. Amluk, 46 C.W.N. 706.

157. Explanation 1:—Termination of proceedings—Where a plaint is ordered to be returned for presentation to the proper Court but is actually returned several days later, the suit in the wrong Court is said to terminate on the day on which the plaint is actually returned and not on the day on which it is ordered to be returned. The reason is that a party cannot always get back his plaint on the same day on which it is ordered to be returned; and as long as the plaintiff has exercised ordinary diligence in pursuing his claim, there is no reason why the period up to the day when he gets back his plaint should not be deducted. A litigant party cannot suffer on account of the laches or delay of the Court or its officers—Mahomed Din v. Gurbaksh, 34 P.L.R. 634, 144 I.C. 5, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 611; Nagindas v. Maganlal, 46 Bom. 211, 64 I.C. 160, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 160; Basvanappa v. Krishnadas, 45 Bom. 443; Mohendra v. Nanda, 17 C.W.N. 1043, 20 I.C. 183; Neerendrabhushan v. Berhampur Oil Mills, 60 Cal. 1122, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 914; Ishwar v. Badri, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 203; Zafaruddin v. Debi, I.L.R. (1939) All. 709, 1939 A.L.J. 460, A.I.R. 1939 All. 590; Gurdit v. Mata, 41 P.L.R. 371, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 47; Muslim Bank v. Hasan, A.I.R. 1951 Hyder. 57. The Madras High Court has held in Subbu v. Varadarajulu, I.L.R. (1947) Mad. 694, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 90 that the plaintiff is not entitled to any deduction after the date of the endorsement on the plaint required by r. 10(2) of Or. 7, C. P. Code except perhaps where he can show that the Court delayed the return of the plaint in spite of his endeavour to take it back. The period between the pronouncement in court of the want of jurisdiction and the return of plaint to the plaintiff or his pleader would be allowable if during that period the plaintiff was prosecuting his suit with due diligence—Bubanna v. Channappa, 48 Bom.L.R. 788, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 140, 231 I.C. 282; Harkubai v. Shankerbai, 45 Bom.L.R. 1014, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 37, 215 I.C. 12.

A suit was filed in the Munsiff's Court which he dismissed as being beyond his jurisdiction, and this order or dismissal was upheld on second appeal by the High Court which directed the lower Appellate Court (District Judge) to ascertain the value of the land in dispute and pass a fresh order. After that inquiry was held the Judge passed an order (on 30th October 1883) confirming the original order of the Munsiff. The plaintiff thereupon filed a second suit. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to be allowed the whole of the time occupied in the first suit up to the date of the final order of the District Judge (30th October 1883); that the order of the High Court did not terminate the prior suit; and that the suit terminated only when the District Judge passed an order after holding the inquiry—Sankaran v. Parvathi, 12 Mad. 434; Gurdit v. Mota, 41 P.L.R. 371, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 47. So also, the plaintiff is entitled to deduct the time spent in moving a revision petition in High Court against the appellate order of return of plaint—Perumal v. Pandaram, A.I.R. 1951 Trav-Co. 26.

Where a plaint was returned on the 27th June with a permission to refile it in the proper Court, and with a direction to the plaintiffs to pay costs, and an order fixing the amount of costs was recorded on the 30th June, it was held that the return of plaint on June 27 terminated the connection of the Court with the suit, and though the costs were calculated later, the plaintiffs could not be said to have been prosecuting their suit in that Court after the plaint had been returned—Ganga Charan v. Okhil Chandra, 24 C.L.J. 355, 35 I.C. 595.

Where an application for execution is returned for filing in proper court and the same is filed on the next day to the proper court, no question of limitation arises—Debi v. Indra, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 791, 179 I.C. 160.

158. Application of section to special or local laws:—According to section 29 as now amended by the Indian Limitation Amendment Act (1922), this section applies although the case is governed by a special or local law of limitation, unless it is expressly excluded by the special or local law. Thus, it applies to a suit under the Bengal Tenancy Act. Section 185 of that Act which excludes certain sections of the Limstation Act, does not mention sec. 14—Raja Sati Prosad v. Gobinda, 33 C.W.N. 227 (229), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 325. The section is applicable to cases governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act—Fatima v. Chota, 53 C.W.N. 159. See also Chunnu v. Amluk, 46 C.W.N. 706. So also this section would apply to a suit under the Agra Tenancy Act (1926), because sec. 231 of that Act neither expressly nor impliedly excludes sec. 14—Ananti v. Chhonnu, 52 All. 501 (F.B.), 1930 A.L.J. 256, A.I.R. 1930 All. 193 (200, 205), 124 I.C. 540 (per Boys and King, JJ.) So also this section applies to suits under C. P. Tenancy Act—Sharifjan v. Vishnupriya, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 743, 1949 N.L.J. 586, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 37. Even before the Amendment, this section was applied to a suit or application under a special or local law, e.g., to a suit under sec. 78 of the Madras Rent Recovery Act (VIII of 1865)—Kullayappa v.

Lakshmipathi, 12 Mad. 467 (471); or to a suit under the Madras Boundary Act (XXVII of 1860)—Seshamma v. Sankara, 12 Mad. 1; or to a suit under sec. 86 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873)—Guracharya v. President, 8 Bom. 529; or to a proceeding u der the Provincial Insolvency Act—Dropadi v. Hira, 34 All. 496 (F.B.).

Section 5, Limitation Act, has not been extended to local and special laws by sec. 29 of that Act as amended in 1922.

Section 14, however, has been made applicable to local and special laws by sec. 29. But sec. 14 will apply only when it is shown that the previous proceedings were prosecuted in good faith—Jhanda Ram v. Allah Yar, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 857.

The following cases in which this section was held inapplicable to suits or applications under special or local laws on the ground that those laws were complete codes in themselves, are no longer good law in view of recent amendment of section 29:—Nagendra v. Mathura, 18 Cal. 368 (suit under Oct X of 1859); Abdul Hakim v. Latifunnessa, 30 Cal. 532; Kalimuddin v. Sahibuddin, 47 Cal. 300 (F.B.); Khagendra v. Ramani, 24 C.W.N. 29 (cases under sec. 77, Registration Act); Trasi Deva v. Parameshwaraya, 39 Mad. 74 (case under Provincial Insolvency Act); Chowdhury Kesri v. Giani Ray, 29 Cal. 626 (application to set aside sale under sec. 310A, C. P. Code, 1882); Lakshman v. Keshav, 6 N.L.J. 205, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 306 (suit under C. P. Land Revenue Act).

In Fatelal v. Siti, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 126 (decided in 1923), this change in the law has been overlooked.

Section 14 does not apply where the special Act provides a special rule of limitation which derogates from the provisions of the general rule embodied in sec. 14—Ram Lochan v. Jagat Narain, A.I.R. 1927 All. 181, 98 I.C. 1050.

Exclusion of time during which proceedings are suspended.

15. (1) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit or application for the execution of a decree, the institution or execution of which has been stayed by injunction or order, the time of the continuance of the injunction or order, the day on which it was issued or made, and the day on which it was withdrawn, shall be excluded.

(2) In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit of which notice has been given in accordance with the requirements of any enactment for the time being in force, the period of such notice shall be excluded.

159. Scope:—The words "or application for the execution of a decree" have been added in the Act of 1908. Sub-section (2) is new.

Under the Act of 1877 this section applied only to suits; and therefore where the execution of a decree was stayed by an injunction, it was held that the time during which the injunction was in force was not to be excluded in computing the period of limitation—Rajarathnam v. Shevalayammal, 11 Mad. 103 (105); Kalayanbhai v. Ghanashamlal, 5 Bom. 29; Lachmi Chand v. Ballam, 17 All. 425 (427); Lutful v. Sambhudin, 8 Cal. 248; Amulya v. Preo, 7 I.C. 886.

But the Court in many cases relieved the decree-holder from this "monstrous injustice" by treating the application for execution made after the withdrawal of an injunction as an application to revive or continue the previous application (Article 181). See Kalyanbhai v. Ghanashamlal, 5 Bom. 29; Basant Lal v. Batal Bibi, 6 All. 23; Sakina v. Ganesh, 3 P.L.J. 103, 44 I.C. 560; Narayan v. Sono, 24 Bom. 345; Chintaman v. Balshastri, 16 Bom. 294; Issur v. Abdul, 4 Cal. 877; Oshrafuddin v. Bepin Behari, 30 Cal. 407; Gurudeo v. Amrit, 33 Cal. 689; Lakshmi v. Ballam, 17 All. 425; Rungiah v. Nanjappa, 26 Mad. 780. See these cases in Note 694 under Article 181.

But now, under the present section as amended by the Act of 1908, the time during which the execution is stayed by an injunction or order shall be excluded. See Bai Ujam v. Bai Rukhmani, 38 Bom. 153, 21 I.C. 713; Ghulam v. Hardeo, 34 All. 436. Section 15 refers to a suit or an application for execution of a decree. An application for delivery of possession by the auction purchasers may be treated as an application in an execution proceeding, but it cannot be treated as an application for execution—Jateendrachandra v. Rebateemohan, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 333.

But the law as amended by the Act of 1908 does not prohibit either expressly or by necessary implication the making of an application for revival which the Courts both before and after the commencement of the Act of 1908 have treated as competent. It is not correct to say that the amendment of sec. 15 was intended to sweep away and replace the old doctrine of revival. The principle of allowing a right of revival of the previous application is different and distinct from that permitting exclusion of time during which execution was stayed by an injunction. The two principles are not co-extensive or identical. In cases where there has been no previous application for execution, but proceedings in execution have been stayed, sec. 15 may be of help, whereas the doctrine of revival would have no application. Similarly there may be cases where after the removal of the bar a previous application has been properly and finally disposed of. In such cases also, no question of revival can arise, but the decree-holder will be entitled to deduct the period of suspension in consequence of the stay order or injunction. On the other hand, there may be cases to which sec. 15 cannot apply, and yet the doctrine of revival may be of utility. For instance, execution proceedings may be postponed by an agreement between the parties under some arrangement for payment during a definite period after which the decree-holder may request the Court to revive it. There is an essential difference between a fresh application for execution of a decree after a previous execution has been stayed by an injunction, and an application to a Court asking it simply to revive a previous application made for the execution of a decree. Section 15 would apply to the application of the former class; while an application of the latter class would be governed by Article 181. Suppose the decree-holder seeks the execution of a money-decree by the arrest of the judgment-debtor. The judgment-debtor institutes a suit to obtain a declaration that the decree was obtained by fraud, and he obtains an injunction staying the execution of the decree. If, after the dismissal of the suit, the decree-holder does not ask the executing Court to proceed with his application for the arrest of the judgment-debtor but makes an application to it to attach the property of the judgment-debtor, and to execute the decree in that way, this application would be a fresh application and would be governed by Art. 182 read with sec. 15. If, on the other hand, the decree-holder should apply to the executing Court to proceed with the arrest of the judgment-debtor, he would be simply asking for a revival of the proceedings which were still pending, and his application would not be governed by the rule contained in sec. 15—Chattar Singh v. Kamal Singh, 49 All. 276 (F.B.), 25 A.L.J. 201, 100 I.C. 692, A.I.R. 1927 All. 16. See also Sundaramma v. Abdul Khadir, 56 Mad. 490 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 418 (422, 423), 64 M.L.J. 664, 143 I.C. 1.

160. Application of section to special laws:—Before sec. 29 was amended by Act X of 1922, it was held that the provisions of section 15 could not be applied to a special period of limitation prescribed by the Bengal Tenancy Act; and therefore sub-section (2) could not apply to a suit instituted under the term of section 104H of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Such a suit was to be brought within six months as specified in that section, and the plaintiff was not entitled to exclude the period of notice to the Secretary of State (under sec. 80, C. P. Code) whom he had made or joined as a defendant—Secretary of State v. Gangadhar, 45 Cal. 934; Gangadhar v. Janakimani, 22 C.W.N. 817, 47 I.C. 524; Secretary of State v. Shib Narain, 46 Cal. 199, 22 C.W.N. 802. See also Jurawan v. Mahabir, 40 All. 198 (203), 16 A.L.J. 71, where it was held that the word 'prescribed' in this section referred to a period 'prescribed by the Limitation Act.' These rulings are no longer good law in view of the present amendment of sec. 29. See Srinivasa v. Secretary of State, 38 Mad. 92, where sub-section (2) of this section was applied to a suit under sec. 59 of the Madras Revenue Recovery Act (II of 1864). So also in Jaydeo v. Babulal, 1941 P.W.N. 183, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 499 this section was applied to Bihar Tenancy Act.

161. Section 48, C. P. Code:—There is a difference of opinion as to whether this section controls sec. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It has been held in some cases that the general provisions of this section are intended to periods of limitation prescribed by the Civil Procedure Code and are not confined in their operation to periods prescribed by the Limitation Act or by Schedule I thereof. Section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure does prescribe a period of limitation. So section 48 of the Code is not uncontrolled by the provisions of this section. In other words, section 48 of the Code does not impose a complete bar to the execution of a decree after the expiry of the period of 12 years irrespective of the provisions of this section—Kandaswami Pillai v. Kannappa Chetty, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 186 (F.B.), overruling earlier contrary decision, in A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 268, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 70; Durag v. Pancham, I.L.R. (1939) All. 647, 1939 A.L.J. 522, A.I.R. 1939 All. 403 (F.B.); Sitaram v. Chunnilalsa, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 250, 1944 N.L.J. 127, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 155; Bisimilla v. Jagannath, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 25, 1947 N.L.J. 33, A.I.R. 1947 Nag. 101; Amarendra v. Manindra, 59 C.W.N. 695, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 269, Sinnaru v. Nachiappa, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 51, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 67; Krishna Chandra v. Paravatamma, A.I.R. 1953 Orissa 13. The point was raised in Rango v. Gopal, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 87, 40 Bom.L.R. 1278, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 75 but was not decided. But in Ramgopal v. Sidram, 45 Bom.L.R. 234, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 164 it has been held that it is not correct to say that sec. 48 of the Code does not provide a "period of limitation" within the meaning of this section and the words "period of limitation" in this section cannot be confined to periods given in the Schedule to the Limitation Act. On the other hand it has been decided in Gomeshi Lal v. Imtiaz Ali, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 351, 1932 I.C. 257 that the Civil Procedure Code is not a special law and it can not be argued that s. 15 of the Limitation Act applies to s. 48, C. P. Code by force of s. 29 of this Act.

162. Injunction or order:—In computing the period of limitation for execution of a decree the period during which the execution has been stayed or suspended will have to be excluded though no execution proceedings were pending at the time when the order of stay was made, for the Court can suspend the execution of a decree in anticipation of an application for execution—Govindarajulu v. Ranga Row, 40 M.L.J. 124, 62 I.C. 255 (256). But it is doubtful whether this proposition can stand as correct in view of the Privy Council decision in 12 Pat. 195.

The execution must have been stayed by an express injunction or order; Akkayya

v. Appayya, I.L.R. (1947) Mad. 661, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 4, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 238; Ramaiya v. Suryanarain, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 314, 1948 M.W.N. 631 and not by an implied order or a collateral litigation. Thus, where during the pendency of an execution application by the mortgagee decree-holder for sale of the mortgaged property a suit by a third party is filed impleading the mortgagee decree-holder as a party for a declaration that the mortgaged property belongs to a religious endowment and is inalienable and the mortgage-decree is unenforceable and the said suit is dismissed on appeal this section does not apply, as no express injunction or order staying the execution of the mortgage-decree was passed in the collateral suit, and it cannot be said that the execution was stayed by implication, and therefore the time during which the decree in that suit was in force cannot be deducted—Sundaramma v. Abdul Khadir, 56 Mad. 490 (F.B.), 64 M.L.J. 664, 143 I.C. 1, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 418 (424). So also, a decree declaring that the plaintiff is in possession of lands as sole owner and ordering defendant not to deprive plaintiff of his possession or to obstruct plaintiff from enjoying the crops etc., does not amount to a stay of suit for possession by the defendant or as an injunction restraining him from filing a suit for possession, especially when the plaintiff in the previous suit does not ask for injunction—Narayan v. Gurunathgonda, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 173, 40 Bom.L.R. 1134, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 1; Murlidhar v. Ram Saran, I.L.R. (1946) All. 633, 1947 A.L.J. 170, A.I.R. 1947 All. 256. A temporary injunction subsequently embodied in the decree passed in a suit restraining the defendant from interfering with the possession of the plaintiff does not prevent him from instituting a suit for possession even though the title of the contending parties is involved in the suit. Therefore, in computing the period of limitation he is not entitled to deduct the whole period from the date of the temporary injunction to the date of dissolution of the permanent injunction by the Privy Council under this section; Narayan v. Puttabai, I.L.R. (1945) Kar. (P.C.) 43, 49 C.W.N. 6, A.I.R. 1945 P.C. 5, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 358 (P.C.); Ramaiya v. Suryanarayana, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 279. This section does not contemplate the case of one decree being rendered impossible of execution by a subsequent decree inconsistent therewith passed in another suit—Lakhmi v. Kalsumannissa, I.L.R. (1939) All. 207, 1939 A.L.J. 29, A.I.R. 1939 All. 82. Preliminary decrree in an administration suit can not be regarded as amounting to an injunction order—Chidambaram v. Mayyapa, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 410, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 67.

An adjournment of the hearing does not amount to an injunction or order staying execution of the decree—Thakamani v. Nadiar, 36 I.C. 939 (Cal.). An order merely giving time to the judgment-debtor for payment is not an order staying execution or an injunction, and sec. 15 does not apply—Amin Chand v. Khiali, 28 P.L.R. 93, 100 I.C. 475, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 106; Jurawan v. Mahabir, 40 All. 198 (203). But an order of the executing Court granting time to the judgment debtor to pay the decretal amount by certain date operates as an order for stay within sub-section (1) of this section—Bismillah v. Jagannath, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 25. Again where upon an application for execution by the decree-holder, the judgment-debtor paid a portion of the decretal amount and asked for time to pay the balance, whereupon the Court granted him a certain time, it was held that as the decree-holder was not entitled to execute the decree during the time granted by the Court, the order granting time was an order staying execution, and the time could be deducted under sec. 15—Ganga Singh v. Sheo Prasad, 7 Pat. 829. A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 36 (37), 119 I.C. 890. Where the stay of the execution-sale of the attached property is due entirely to the decree-holder, the order staying the sale cannot be said to be a legal stoppage of the execution proceedings, and the decree-holder is not entitled to any deduction of time under this section—Kesho Prasad v. Harbans, 2 P.L.T. 22, 53 I.C. 85 (89). Where on an application by the decree-holders seeking leave to proceed against property in the hands of Receiver, the Court passed an order that the decree-holders were to wait for some time for payment, and this order was made at a time where there was no application for execution pending at all, the order did not amount to a stay of the execution by an injunction or order—Kirtyanand v. Prithi Chand, 12 Pat. 195 (P.C.), 37 C.W.N. 548 (553), 141 I.C. 760, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 52, 64 M.L.J. 599, 1933 A.L.J. 359, 35 Bom.L.R. 526.

In an appeal to the Privy Council, the appellant whose suit has been dismissed by the High Court offered as security for costs a rent decree in another suit obtained by him against the respondent. It was held that the acceptance of the rent decree as security did not involve any order staying its execution so as to enable the appellant to deduct the time that elapsed between the acceptance and his subsequent application for execution of the rent-decree—Midnapore Zamindari Co. v. Deputy Commissioner, 3 P.L.J. 132, 44 I.C. 570. This is so even if the judgment debtor who gives a decree in his favour as security not to accept the decretal amount of his decree directly and the judgment-debtor of that decree is directed to deposit the decretal amount in Court —Shankar v. Hazarimal, I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 627, 1939 N.L.J. 40, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 81.

An order of adjudication adjudging the defendant as an insolvent is not an order staying suit against the defendant, because its effect is not to stay proceedings against the defendant insolvent, but merely to impose on the plaintiff the necessity of obtaining leave from the Court to sue under section 16 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act. Therefore, the period during which the insolvency proceedings were pending could not be executed—Ramaswami v. Gobindaswami, 42 Mad. 319, 36 M.L.J. 104, 49 I.C. 625; Sidhraj v. Alli Haji, 47 Bom. 244, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 33, 67 I.C. 757; Nandlal v. Ramdatta, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 306, 1942 N.L.J. 294, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 60; it is only when the leave is refused that it can be said that there is an injunction or order staying the institution of the suit—Sidhraj v. Ali Haji, supra; Nandlal v. Ramdatta, supra. (In Parameswaran v. Seshan, 51 Mad. 583, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 627, the question was raised but not decided). An order staying execution of decree on application of one of the judgment debtors, who has applied for insolvency does not stop running of time against the other judgment-debtors as against them the order does not impose any bar—Nathuni v. Radha, 21 Pat.L.T. 618, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 149; Ram v. Nageshwar, 19 Pat.L.T. 831, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 395, 176 I.C. 876. But where a person was adjudged an insolvent and the Judge passed an order directing the Nazir to take possession of the property, and then the insolvent died childless, after which a lengthy litigation followed as to the succession to his estate, and this and other litigations between various parties continued for 17 years, after which the Court restored the property to one of the parties, and then the creditors brought a suit for possession of the property, it was held that sec. 15 applied because during the whole period of 17 years the plaintiffs could not have instituted any suit—Umrao v. Ram Kishen, 13 Lah. 70, 137 I.C. 820, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 281 (288). An order striking off an execution petition on the ground that the judgment-debtor had been adjudicated an insolvent and the decretal amount had been entered in the schedule of debts, amounts to an injunction within the meaning of this section—Firm of Tara Chand v. Jugal Kishore, 1919 P.W.R. 17, 51 I.C. 64. An application for execution by a secured creditor against the judgment-debtor who has been declared insolvent prior to the passing of the decree, must nevertheless be presented within the same period of limitation as against an ordinary judgment-debtor. Sec. 28 (6) of the Provincial Insolvency Act does not affect the right of a secured creditor. The execution of the decree cannot be considered to have been stopped by reason of the judgment-debtor being declared insolvent. An application for execution by a secured creditor made more than three years after the date of the decree is barred—Sri Ram v. Prasad, 4 Luck. 241, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 71 (72), 113 I.C. 86, 5 O.W.N. 1134. Where a decree is passed against the judgment-debtor before the order of adjudication of the judgment-debtor as an insolvent the decree-holder can apply to the Insolvency Court for permission to sue. If he does not avail of this remedy this section does not apply—Nawab v. Fateh, 41 P.L.R. 799, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 270, 184 I.C. 573.

The proceedings under the Agriculturists 'Debtors' Relief Act do not extend time for the purpose of limitation and when no stay order is passed under sec. 10 of the Act this section has no application; Jawahar v. Md. Rafiq, 212 I.C. 628, A.I.R. 1944 Pesh. 17; a letter by the Chief Court requesting the District Judge to stay all execution proceedings in Civil Court decrees passed against agriculturists cannot extend the period of limitation under this section—Gurdin v. Ghhedi, 1940 O.W.N. 1202, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 93. But if the prodeedings in execution are stayed on receipt of an intimation from a Debt Relief Court against all the judgment debtors on the application of one of them to that Court, the decree holder is entitled to claim the benefit of this section. The question of validity or propriety of the order for stay against all judgment-debtors is immaterial and so long as it is not set aside. it is binding on the parties; Sitaram v. Chunnilalsa, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 250, 1944 N.L.J. 127, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 155.

Where the tenants instituted a suit against the landlord to set aside the Collector's order passed under sec. 70 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and obtained an injunction restraining the landlord from executing the Collector's order pending the disposal of the suit, and upon that suit being finally dismissed the landlord applied for execution of the Collector's order, held that limitation for execution did not run for the period during which the injunction subsisted—Balukchand v. Nathuni, 2 P.L.J. 24 (29).

In computing the period of limitation for execution of a decree the decree-holder is entitled to deduct the period during which the execution is stayed by an injunction, and the fact that the injunction related only to a part of the decree is immaterial—Bai Ujam v. Bai Rukhmani, 38 Bom. 153 (156). But this case has been distinguished in Virchand v. Marualappa, 46 Bom.L.R. 666, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 303 on the ground that the execution of the whole decree was stayed and not any part of the decree. In Virchand v. Marualappa, it has been held that if execution is not completely and absolutely stayed, this section does not come into play. Where it is open to the decree-holder to apply for execution against the portion of the property which was not affected by the stay order, this section cannot apply. The same view has been taken by the Lahore High Court in Kundo Mal v. Firm Daulat Ram, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 75. But where there are several joint judgment-debtors, and there is a stay order as against only one of them the period should be excluded from computation as against that judgment-debtor only but not as against the others—Parameswaran v. Seshan, 51 Mad. 583, 55 M.L.J. 156, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 627 (630), 110 I.C. 518, dissenting from Vellayyan v. Muthayya, 1921 M.W.N. 188, 61 I.C. 901, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 116.

S. 15(1) applies also to cases of a partial stay, but only so as to allow exclusion of the period of the stay in the computation of time for a further execution against the person or the property as against whom or which execution was previously stayed and not so as to allow exclusion of that period for the purposes of a future execution against persons or properties not affected by the stay order.—Baijnath v. Nursingdas, A.I.R. 1958 Cal. 1.

As to applicability of this section to an application for execution of instalment rent decree see Kedar v. Parsidh, 24 Pat. 222, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 398.

The 'order' mentioned in this section refers to an order of a Civil Court, and not to an order of Government or Royal Proclamation by which the plaintiffs (a German Bank) were debarred from bringing a suit owing to declaration of war with Germany—Deutsche Asiatische Bank v. Hira Lal, 47 I.C. 122 (125); on appeal, 46 Cal. 526 (533), 23 C.W.N. 157, 47 I.C. 398.

This section is not confined to cases of direct stay or injunction, but can be extended to orders which indirectly but very approximately and effectually cause a delay. Thus, where pending an appeal to the Privy Council by the judgment-debtor the High Court made an order allowing the decree-holder to execute the decree on his furnishing security for the amount of the decree, but the decree-holder being unable to find the required security, his application for execution was dismissed, held, that the order of the High Court, whatever be the form of it, did in fact stay the execution of the decree; as the condition of furnishing security could not be performed, the effect was to stay execution altogether, and under this section the time during which the order was in force should be deducted in reckoning the period of limitation for filing a second execution-petition—Pandey Satdeo Narain v. Radha Kuar, 5 P.L.J. 39 (43, 44), 53 I.C. 9. So also an order passed under sec. 6 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act is such an order as contemplated under this section having an effect of staying all suits in Civil Courts against the debtor and a creditor is entitled to have the time between the date of an order under sec. 6 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act and the date of the rejection of the debtor's application excluded for purposes of computing the period of limitation for his suit against the debtor—Radhey Shyam v. Syed Ibne, A.I.R. 1947 Oudh 147. An order under sec. 6 of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act is tantamount to an order staying the filing of a suit and this section is applicable; Hulas v. Dataram, I.L.R. (1943) All. 569, 1943 A.L.J. 258, A.I.R. 1943 All. 291. The rule contained in this section applies to suits and applications for execution stayed under the U. P. Encumbered Estate Act—Umrao v. Behari, I.L.R. (1946) All. 709, 1946 A.L.J. 394, A.I.R. 1947 All. 187. See also Deep Narain v. Bhagauti, A.I.R. 1952 All. 116.

Although this section does not apply to an application for restitution, the principle on which the section is based can be extended to such an application. Therefore, the time during which a party is prevented from making an application under the order of the Court has to be excluded in computing the period of limitation; Ram v. Dhayan, 47 P.L.R. 201, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 227 (F.B.). So also though this section does not apply in terms to a suit stayed under Or. 32, r. 10, of the Code of Civil Procedure by reason of death of next friend of the minor plaintiff, the principle of the section ought to be applied and the period during which the suit stands stayed ought to be excluded in computing the period of limitation—Govindnaik v. Basawannewa, I.L.R. (1941) Bom. 435, 197 I.C. 30, 43 Bom.L.R. 329, A.I.R. 1941 Bom. 203.

Under this section, the decree-holder is entitled to exclude not only the period during which he was restrained by an injunction from executing the decree, but also the period during which the decree was not in existence, owing to an order of the Court declaring the decree to be null and void—Ram Gulam v. Raj Kumar, 6 Pat. 635, 102 I.C. 327, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 86. But where tht decree is declared void as against some of the judgment-debtors and as against some of the properties this section does not apply; Chanda v. Nathu, I.L.R. (1944) All. 197, 1944 A.L.J. 98, A.I.R. 1944 All. 88.

Where pending an appeal from a preliminary decree for foreclosure, a Receiver is appointed for the management of the mortgaged properties with a direction to pay interest, then so long as the order appointing the Receiver stands, the defendants are entitled to pay off the decretal amount and consequently the order of appointment of the Receiver operates as a stay of the plaintiff's right to apply for a final decree or for possession; therefore the period between the making of the order and the date on which the Receiver is discharged must be excluded in computing the period of limitation for an application for a final decree for foreclosure—Chhotey Narain v. Kedar Nath, 1 Pat. 435 (442), 3 P.L.T. 565, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 201, 66 I.C. 97. In a suit brought by the widow of a deceased partner to wind up the partnership, the surviving partner was prohibited by the Court, at the instance of the plaintiff, from collecting debts due to the firm. Subsequently a Receiver was appointed to get in the assets of the firm. It was held that in a subsequest suit by the Receiver against a debtor, the time between the date of the injunction and the appointment of the Receiver must be deducted from the period of limitation—Shunmugan v. Moidin, 8 Mad. 229.

An order staying execution of the decree must be a clear one, but it is not necessary that the order should be in writing—Vishvanath v. Narsu, 23 Bom.L.R. 107, 60 I.C. 916.

An order under sec. 2 of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act bringing the estate under protection is a vesting order staying all proceedings, and if the estate is restored to the owner under the circumstances mentioned in clause (2) of sec. 12, all proceedings are revived, and in calculating the period of limitation for such revived proceedings, the provisions of sec. 15 of the Limitation Act will apply and the perod during which the estate was under protection will be excluded—Mathura Prasad v. Jageshwar Prasad, 5 Pat. 404, 9 P.L.T. 247, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 260 (262), 94 I.C. 624; Tikait Mahabir Prasad v. Chota Nagpur Banking Association, 8 P.L.T. 189, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 105. But if the estate is restored to the owner not under the circumstances mentioned in clause (2) of sec. 12 of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act, there is no revival of proceedings; the injunction or stay of proceedings is still in force, and the consideration of sec. 15 of the Limitation Act does not arise —Khairullah v. Panday Lachmi Ram, 7 Pat. 109, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 179 (182), 105 I.C. 643, 9 P.L.T. 252.

Attachment:—An order of attachment of a debt under sec. 268 of the C. P. Code (1882) is not an injunction or order staying a suit on the debt within the meaning of this section, because the order does not prevent the creditor from bringing a suit on the debt, but only from receiving from the debtor the amount thereof; if therefore the creditor does not bring a suit on the debt within the prescribed period, it will be barred—Shib Singh v. Sita Ram, 13 All. 76; Beti Maharani v. Collector of Etawah, 17 All. 198 (P.C.); Rangasami v. Thangavelu, 42 Mad. 637, 50 I.C. 380. And the result is the same whether the attachment of the debt be before or after judgment—Beti Maharani v. Collector of Etawah, 17 All. 189 (P.C.). See also Kuruvilla Kuruvilla v. Ouseph Joseph, A.I.R. 1957 T.C. 40.

An attachment before judgment of a decree and a consequent order issued by the Court attaching the decree amounts to an absolute prohibition of the execution of the decree by anybody; it amounts to an injunction and the period of the pendency is excluded under this section in computing the period for executing a decree—Rajitagiripatty v. Bhavani Shankaran, 47 Mad. 641, 47 M.L.J. 4, 80 I.C. 103, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 673.

According to the Calcutta High Court, an attachment of a decree under O. 21, r. 53, C. P. Code, has the effect of staying the execution of the decree, and the period occupied by the pendency of such attachment will be excluded in calculating the period of limitation for execution of that decree—Kiranshashi v. Chandrika, 30 I.C. 587 (Cal.). But the Bombay High Court holds that sec. 15 only applies to an absolute stay, and not to a limited stay as would be ordered under O. 21, r. 53. The stay does not prevent the holder of the decree sought to be executed, or his judgment-debtor, from seeking to execute the original decree, and that being the case, time must be taken as running against them—Chanbasappa v. Holibasappa, 48 Bom. 485 (491), 26 Bom.L.R. 317, 80 I.C. 239, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 383.

163. Deduction of time:—Under this section, the decree-holder is entitled to deduct the period between the day on which the injunction is issued and the day on which it comes to an end. Limitation will commence to run as soon as the order granting the injunction is withdrawn. If the injunction comes to an end by the order of the Court of first instance, limitation will run from the date of the order of that Court, and the fact that there has been an appeal from that order will not entitle the decree-holder to deduct the time of the pendency of the appeal. Thus, an application for execution of a decree was made on the 18th April 1914, and while this application was pending a suit was instituted for a declaration that the decree had been obtained by fraud, and on 9th December 1914 a temporary injunction was obtained in this suit restraining the decree-holder from executing the decree. On the 26th April 1915 that suit was dismissed and with that dismissal the bar of injunction came to an end. An appeal was filed and it was dismissed on the 19th April 1917. Thereafter the decree-holder again applied for execution on 11th June, 1918. Held that the application was barred, because limitation ran from the time when the injunction came to an end by the order of the first Court on 26th April 1915, and not from 19th April 1917—Balwant v. Budh Singh, 42 All. 564 (566), 18 A.L.J. 642, 56 I.C. 1006. During the execution of a decree, a stranger claimed the property attached, and applied for an injunction restraining the execution sale. He also brought a suit for a declaration that the property was not liable to sale. The execution Court granted a temporary injunction, pending the final decision of the suit. The suit was eventually dismissed on 25th November 1913, but an appeal was filed therefrom, which appeal was likewise dismissed on 2nd May 1917. Held that the injunction came to an end on the 25th November 1913, the date on which the first Court dismissed the suit, and not on the 2nd May 1917 when the appeal was dismissed—Madho Prasad v. Draupadi, 43 All. 383 (386). If the injunction comes to an end by the order of the lower Appellate Court, limitation will run from the date of the order of that Court, and the fact that there was an appeal to the High Court will not entitle the decree-holder to calculate the period of limitation from the date of the order of the High Court—Ruddar v. Dhanpat, 26 All. 156 (159).

Where a stay is ordered subject to giving security, and the security is furnished subsequently, the stay order should be held to commence from the date of the original order, and in deducting the period under this section the period from the date of the order and not from the date of furnishing the security should be taken into consideration—Thayyamuthu v. Odayapan, 25 L.W. 108, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 391, 99 I.C. 632.

164. Sub-section (2)—Notice:—Where a plaintiff, in a suit against the Government, is required to give notice to the Government under Section 80, Civil Procedure Code, he is entitled under sub-section (2) to exclude the period of notice (i.e., two months) in computing the period of limitation prescribed for the suit—N. W. Ry. v. Ramdhan, 52 P.R. 1917, 38 I.C. 600; Shri Bhagwan v. Secy. of State, I L.R. (1939) All. 392, 1939 A.L.J. 154, A.I.R. 1939 All. 277; Laxmi Chand v. Dominion of India, A.I.R. 1955 Nag. 265. In a suit falling under Article 16, the plaintiff is entitled to deduct the period of two months' notice which he has to give to the Government before bringing the suit—Secretary of State v. Venkataratnam, 46 Mad. 488. A person suing a Municipality, after giving notice under sec. 167 of the Bombay District Municipal Act is entitled to the benefit of sec. 15 (2), Limitation Act, as regards the time of such notice—Municipality of Tatta v. Assammal, 8 S.L.R. 294; 29 I.C. 597. So also, in computing the period of limitation prescribed under sec. 320 (2) of the Assam Municipal Act, the plaintiff is entitled to exclude the period of one month's notice prescribed in that section—Tinsakia Municipal Board v. Bankim, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 101, the reason being that as the operation of this section is not excluded by anything contained in that Act, sec. 29 (2) of this Act comes into operation. Where the plaintiff brings a suit against a State Railway, he is entitled to deduct the period of two months' notice given to the Secretary of State—B. & N. W. Ry. v. Ram Sarup, 3 P.L.T. 643, 70 I.C. 109, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 549. If in a single suit against several defendants jointly, the plaintiff is required to give notice under sec. 80, C. P. Code to one of the defendants, he is entitled to a deduction of time not only as against the defendant to whom notice is given, but is entitled to a deduction against all the defendants—Muhammad Sharif v. Nasir Ali, 1930 A.L.J. 1443, A.I.R. 1930 All. 742 (744); B. & N. W. Ry. v. Ram Sarup, supra; Khanderao v. Chanmallappa, 26 Bom.L.R. 364, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 364, 81 I.C. 750; E. I. Ry. v. Rahimullah, 9 Lah. 519, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 349 (350), 111 I.C. 749.

But where no notice under sec. 80 of the C. P. Code is necessary to be given, the fact that it has been given will not entitle the plaintiff to exclude the period of such notice—Weston v. Peary Mohan, 40 Cal. 898 (949). Thus as no notice under sec. 49 of the Madras Court of Wards is necessary in the case of a suit in respect of properties of an institution of which the Ward of the Court of Wards is only a dharmakarta or manager or trustee the period of notice cannot be deducted under subsection (2) of this section in computing the period of limitation for the suit—Sevagan v. Zamindar of Sivaganga, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 763, 1938 M.W.N. 435, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 612, 178 I.C. 880. And so, if a plaintiff, under a mistake of law or fact, conceives that he has a cause of action against the Secretary of State or a public body in addition to his cause of action against a private person, and joins without reason the Secretary of State or the public body, he shall not be entitled to invoke the assistance of this section and to extend the period by two months—Ladli Prasad v. Nizamuddin, 22 O.C. 342, 54 I.C. 535.

The plaintiff is entitled to exclude the period of two months' notice required to be served under section 31 of the Bombay Court of Wards Act on defendants who were Government wards at the time when the cause of action arose, and the extension cannot be refused on the ground that they ceased to be wards before the suit came on for hearing—Khanderao v. Chanmallappa, supra. But a notification of a claim under sec. 17 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act is merely an information to the Collector of the particulars of the claim. It is not necessarily a notice of a suit on the basis of the claim, because the proviso to sec. 20 of that Act indicates that when there is a good or sufficient cause a suit may be filed even without the claim being notified under sec. 17. Section 15 (2) of the Limitation Act does not apply to the notifying of the claim, and the period intervening between the date of notifying the claim and the date on which the claim was disallowed connot be deducted —Borada Kant v. Court of Wards, 1931 A.L.J. 949, A.I.R. 1931 All. 752 (754), 133 I.C. 537.

Sub-section (2) must not be read into the provisions of sections 6 and 8. This sub-section has nothing to do with the extension of time allowed to persons under disability under sections 6 and 8. Thus, section 49 of the Court of Wards Act requires two months' notice to be given before the institution of a suit under that Act; but this period of two months shall not be added to the extension of time allowed to persons under disability under secs. 6 and 8—Narasimha v. Krishna Chandra, 37 M.L.J. 256, 52 I.C. 725.

Where a suit is brought in Delhi against a ward on giving two months' notice to the Collector as required by sec. 54, U. P. Court of Wards Act and the suit is brought after the prescribed period of limitation and the question arose whether the plaintiff was entitled to take advantage of sec. 15 (2), Limitation Act, it was held that sec. 15 (2) had no application and the case was barred by limitation. The words of section 15 (2) exclude cases where notice is not required by any enactment for the time being in force. There is no enactment in force in the Province of Delhi which requires giving of notice to the Collector or other persons in charge of a ward under the United Provinces Court of Wards Act—Hargulal Mal v. Md. Ata Elahi Khan, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 41. Per Coldstream and Monroe, JJ.—Contra, Jai Lal, J.

Exclusion of time during which proceedings to set aside execution-sale are pending.

16. In computing the period of limitation prescribed for a suit for possession by a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree, the time during which a proceeding to set aside the sale has been prosecuted shall be excluded.

165. The period of limitation for a suit for possession by an auction-purchaser referred to in this section is prescribed by Articles 137 and 138.

The word "proceeding" in this section is not restricted to a proceeding other than a suit, i.e., to an application to set aside a sale, but is comprehensive enough to include a suit as well as an application; the obvious intention of the Legislature is to allow an exclusion of the period during which the validity of the sale is in controversy, whether the sale is impeached by a suit or by an application—Promotho v. Kishore, 21 C.W.N. 304 (309), 38 I.C. 547; Shripat v. Dattatraya, A.I.R. 1957 Nag. 24. "If Art. 144 applies, the plaintiff is not entitled to any deduction of time under sec. 16 of the Limitation Act"—Brojendra v. Ashutosh, 26 C.W.N. 367.

This section does not apply so as to entitle an auction-purchaser obtaining symbolical possession to deduct the period taken in proceedings for setting aside the sale. The section can only be helpful to a plaintiff where he has not gone to the executing Court to obtain possession—Balgobind v. Lila Kuar, 24 Pat. 717, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 202; Bireswar v. Sadhiram, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 50.

Effect of death before right to sue accrues.

17. (1) Where a person, who would, if he were living, have a right to institute a suit or make an application, dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a legal representative of the deceased capable of instituting or making such suit or application.

(2) Where a person against whom, if he were living, a right to institute a suit or make an application would have accrued, dies before the right accrues, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when there is a legal representative of the deceased against whom the plaintiff may institute or make such suit or application.

(3) Nothing in sub-sections (1) and (2) applies to suits to enforce rights of pre-emption or to suits for the possession of immoveable property or of an hereditary office.

166. Principle:—This section adopts the general rule that a complete cause of action cannot accrue unless there be a person in existence capable of suing another person in existence capable of being sued. It clearly assumes the existence of the general law that the legal representative holds the property in the right of the deceased, and that it is the duty to sue in respect of a cause of action that has accrued after the death of the testator, and it further provides that the time shall not begin to run until the question as to who is the legal representative of the deceased has been solved—Kesho Prasad v. Madho Prasad, 3 Pat. 880 (907), 83 I.C. 812, A.I.R. 1914 Pat. 721. The principle of this section is that in order that a right of suit or cause of action may exist, there must be in existence a person capable of suing and another capable of being sued. Until both these persons exist, there cannot be a perfect cause of action—Darby and Bosanquet on Limitation, 2nd Edn., pp. 49, 50. There can be no limitation until there is a person in existence competent to sue—Seeti Kutti v. Kunhi Pathumma, 40 Mad. 1040 (1064); Manikkam v. Thanikachellam, 4 L.W. 369, 34 I.C. 945; Palaniandi v. Vadamalai, 2 L.W. 723, 28 I.C. 956. Therefore where no trustee was appointed for a temple by the committee for 24 years from 1883 to 1907, and the defendant had been in adverse possession of the office of trustee before 1907, the adverse possession by the defendant commenced only from 1907, the year in which the plaintiff was appointed to the office of trustee—Palaniappa v. Vadamalai, 18 I.C. 373. On the same principle, so long as there was no Receiver appointed for the management of a temple, there was none competent to sue on behalf of the temple, and the right to sue accrued to the temple from the time when the plaintiff was was appointed Receiver—Annamalai v. Gobinda Rao, 46 Mad. 579. In a suit by a legal representative of the principal against the agent, time would not run until there was a legal representative of the principal constituted—Murray v. East India Co., (1821) 5 B. & A. 204.

The intention of sec. 17 is to limit the time during which an action may be brought and not to take away the rights of a person who is a possible defendant to an action, and it was not intended to accelerate any right of action against such a person—Murugesam Pillai v. Minakshisundaram Ammal, A.I.R. 1936 P.C. 309, 63 I.A. 429, 41 C.W.N. 22, 71 M.L.J. 831, 38 Bom.L.R. 1233, 17 P.L.T. 914, 164 I.C. 337.

167. 'Before the right accrues':—To bring this section into operation, the death must occur before the right to sue or make an application accrues. If the right accrues in the life-time of the deceased, the period of limitation begins to run from the date of accrual, and it matters not, as far as limitation is concerned in that case, whether by a will proved or by any other means a legal representative comes into existence or not—Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 M. & W. 42; Boatwright v. Boatwright, L.R. 17 Eq. 71. See section 9.

168. Capable of suing:—The expression 'capable of suing' is the equivalent of 'not being under legal disability to sue.' It cannot refer to incapacity arising from want of means or absence or other physical causes. What legal disabilities incapacitate from suing are pointed out in section 6, among which infancy is the foremost—Rivett Carnac v. Goculdas, 20 Bom. 15 (at p. 44); Jamnabai v. Jethmal, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 318.

Section 6 of the Limitation Act must be read in conjunction with this section; and the operation of the earlier section must be regarded as qualified by and subject to the rule prescribed in the latter section. Thus, where a partner died in 1896 leaving a widow and infant sons, and the widow took out letters of administration to the deceased's estate in June 1896, limited during the minority of the sons, and the eldest of the minors who attained majority in 1903 instituted the present suit in 1904 against the surviving partner, on behalf of himself and his infant brothers, for an account and share of the profits of the dissolved partnership, held that their infancy did not save limitation because the effect of the grant of the letters of administration to the widow was that the entire estate of the deceased vested in her, and she represented in every respect the estate of her husband; and therefore time began to run from the date on which the plaintiff's mother obtained letters of administration—Mohit v. Raj Narain, 9 C.W.N. 537. All that this section contemplates is that if there is no legal representative who is capable of suing, the statute of limitation would not run. The heir-at-law may be a minor on which case limitation would not run by virtue of sec. 6, but as soon as an administrator of the estate is constituted, limitation would begin to run against him, and the fact that there is an heir-at-law who is a minor would not prevent the operation of the law of limitation. The section does not have the effect of preventing the estate from vesting in the heir-at-law where the executor leaves a will, though the executor under the will declines to accept office; Sivasankara v. Amaravathi, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 533, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 157, (1938) 1 M L.J. 146, 174 I.C. 638.

169. Legal representative:—For definition, see C. P. Code, sec. 2 (11).

An executor or administrator of a deceased person is his legal representative for all purposes.—Sec. 211, Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925). The executor is a legal representative within the meaning of this section even though he has not yet taken probate, for the taking of probate is not a condition precedent to the filing of suits but is only necessary before getting a decree. Time therefore begins to run against the executor from the date of the testator's death—Balakrishnudu v. Narayanasawmy, 37 Mad. 175, 24 I.C. 852.

The executor of a will is a legal representative capable of instituting a suit from the date of the testator's death and not from the date when he obtains probate. The title and authority of the executor are derived from the will and not from the probate. An administrator on the other hand derives his title solely under his grant, and cannot sue before he gets the letters of administration—Meyappa Chetty v. Subramania Chetty, 20 C.W.N. 833 (P.C.) 35 I.C. 323; Nagaranjan v. Hotz, A.I.R. 1954 Punj. 278. A certificate of administration under Bombay Reg. VIII of 1827 only confers a right of management and does not constitute the holder of such certificate the representative of the estate for the purpose of distributing it among the co-sharers; consequently he is not a person against whom a sharer can institute a suit for his share—Keshav v. Narayan, 14 Bom. 236. The person in possession of the estate of a deceased Hindu must, till some other claimant (e.g., under a will of which no probate has been granted) comes forward, be treated for some purposes as his representative —Prosunno v. Krishto, 4 Cal. 342. Where, after the death of one of the partners in a partnership business, the Administrator-General obtained letters of administration and instituted a suit on behalf of the infant heir of the deceased partner for partnership-accounts and recovery of assets, it was held that the Administrator-General must be treated as the legal representative, and the period of limitation as regards the suit would run from the date of the issue of the letters of administration and not before—Bhagwandas v. Rivett-Carnac, 23 Bom. 544 (P.C.), affirming 20 Bom. 15. In a suit for an account brought by the employer, on the death of his manager, against the manager's representatives, limitation will not commence to run until administration has been taken out to such manager's estate—Lawless v. Calcutta Landing and Shipping Co., 7 Cal. 627.

Legal representative includes an heir—Sivasankara v. Amaravathi, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 533; A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 157, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 146, 174 I.C. 638.

Sub-sec. (3):—The third sub-section provides that the rule of this section shall not apply to suits to enforce rights of pre-emption or to suits for the possession of immoveable property or of an hereditary office, because the application of the rule to such cases would tend to create insecurity of title—Kesho Prasad v. Madho Prasad, 3 Pat. 880, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 721, 83 I C. 812.

Effect of fraud.

18. Where any person having a right to institute a suit or make an application has, by means of fraud, been kept from the knowledge of such right or of the title on which it is founded, or where any document necessary to establish such right has been fraudulently concealed from him, the time limited for instituting a suit or making an application—

(a) against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, or

(b) against any person claiming through him otherwise than in good faith and for a valuable consideration, shall be computed from the time when the fraud first became known to the person injuriously affected thereby, or, in the case of the concealed document, when he first had the means of producing it or compelling its production.

The principle is that the right of a party defrauded cannot be affected by lapse of time or by anything else done or omitted to be done by him, so long as he remains, without any fault of his own, in ignorance of the fraud which has been committed—Rolfe v. Gregory, 4 DeG. J. & S. 576 (579); Darby and Bosanquet, 2nd Edn., pp. 261, 262.

169A. Scope:—This section does not apply to criminal cases; a complaint of a criminal offence is not a 'suit' or an 'application'; and therefore a complaint of an offence under sec. 11 Salt Act (1882), which must be made within six months, cannot be admitted after that time on the ground that by means of fraud the prosecution was kept in ignorance of the offence—Emp. v. Nageshappa, 20 Bom. 543 (547). So also, this section does not apply to a person having a right of appeal under sec. 25 of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act, the reason being that this section applies only to a person having the right to institute a suit or make an application—Sabdeo v. Nathuni, 8 B.R. 397; Azizur v. Girwardhari, 10 B.R. 89.

The rule of equity based on general principle of jurisprudence that fraud stops or suspends the running of time can have no application where there are definite statutory provisions specifying the grounds on the basis of which alone the stoppage or suspension of running of time can arise. While the courts necessarily are astute in checkmating or fighting fraud, it should be equally borne in mind that statutes of limitation are statutes of repose—Yesh Want v. Walchand, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 16.

170. Fraud:—In order to constitute fraud, it is not sufficient that there should be merely a tortious act unknown to the injured party, or enjoyment of property without title while the rightful owner is ignorant of his claims; there must be some abuse of a confidential position, some intentional imposition or some deliberate concealment of facts—Dean v. Thwaite, (1855) 21 Beav. 621; Darby and Bosanquet, p. 193; Swarnamoyee v. Probodh, 36 C.W.N. 758 (765). Mere non-disclosure of a transaction does not amount to 'fraud.' This term means active deceit in defrauding or endeavouring to defraud a person of his rights by artful device or concealment of fact —Ghulam Raza v. Sardar Khan, 4 P.L.R. 1903, 86 P.R. 1902; Gauhri Mal v. Jainti Mal, 73 P.R. 1885; Ghiba v. Hayat, 120 P.R. 1883.

If the defendant, by reason of the relation in which he stands to the plaintiff or otherwise, is bound to give him certain information, the withholding of such information, though not an active concealment, may amount to fradulent concealment. Brown, 505, 506. A co-sharer coming into exclusive possession of property belonging to himself and his co-sharer will be presumed to have done so not only for himself but for his co-sharer as well, until there is ouster. If the plaintiff was unaware of the fact that the defendant (his co-sharer) had the property, there is a duty on the defendant to speak, and if he remained silent, it amounts to concealed fraud on his part on which the plaintiff can justly rely to get over the bar of limitation—Swarnamoyee v. Probodh, 36 C.W.N. 758 (766). See also 52 Cal. 63 cited under Note 171 below.

This section applies only to such fraud as amounts to concealment and is intended to keep from the injured party the knowledge of the wrong or its remedy. This section therefore can have no application where the fraud alleged by the party applying to set aside an execution sale is mere under-statement of the value of the properties in the sale proclamation—Rai Kishori v, Mukunda, 15 C.W.N. 965 (969), 11 I.C. 295; Narayan v. Damodar, 16 C.W.N. 894, 16 I.C. 464; Sarat v. Abdul, 49 C.W.N. 731; Sobhan v. Gangadhar, 211 I.C. 533, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 40; Abdul v. Ambica, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 163, 43 C.W.N. 862, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 663; Baswali v. Matangi, 61 C.W.N. 468. A mere misstatement of the value of the property in the sale proclamation is not necessarily a fradulent act. But a wilful mis-statement by a decree-holder in the sale proclamation of the value of the property may be sufficient evidence, in particular cases, to justify an inference of fraud—Ramdhari v. Deonandan, 2 Pat. 65, 77 I.C. 957, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 507. So also, where the disparity between the value of the property as stated in the proclamation for sale and real value of the property is so great as to shock the conscience, fraud in the service of processes may be presumed—Sobhan v.Gangadhar, supra. Where the defendant wrongfully collected the money due to the plaintiff, and not only did he not inform the plaintiff of it but even brought a false suit to cover his tricks, held that there was fradulent concealment which brought this section into operation, and in a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover the moneys, time did not run until he was aware of those collections—Sahib Ram v. Govindi, 43 All. 440.

The fraud contemplated in this section is the fraud committed by the party against whom a right is sought to be enforced, i.e., the fraud of the defendant or some person through whom he derives his title; it does not mean the fraud of a third person—Ramdoyal v. Ajoodhia, 2 Cal. 1; McCallum v. McCallum, [1901] 1 Ch. 143. If it is alleged that the fraud was committed by the servant or agent of the defendant, it must be shown that it was committed for the general or special benefit of the principal and not for the private purposes of the servant or agent—British Mutual Banking Co. v. Charnwood Forest Ry. Co., 18 Q.B.D. 714,

"Kept from the knowledge of such right":—This section applies only when the plaintiff has been kept from the knowledge of his right to do a certain thing by fraud of the other party, and not where he is to kept from exercising his right—Golam Muzafar v. Goloke, 25 I.C. 884. Unless the knowledge of his right was fraudulently concealed from him, this section has no application—Ramdhari v. Deonandan, 2 Pat. 65, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 507. By the enactment of this section the Legislature has distinctly contemplated that for the Limitation Act the starting point is changed on the ground of fraud only when the knowledge of the right to make the application is prevented by the fraud of the judgment-debtor. Having the knowledge that he had the right to make the application, if the judgment-debtor prevents the decree holder from knowing the existence of certain properties against which the decree could be enforced the case is clearly not covered by the words of this section. Moreover, to read this section as referring to an application for execution to proceed against a particular property would be destructive of oneness of the decree and would lead to multiplicity of periods of limitation—Yeshwant v. Walchand, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 16. The knowledge of a right and the exercise thereof are fundamentally different things. Where a judgment-debtor paid the amount of decree out of Court but the decree-holder did not certify the payment under O. 21, rule 2, C. P. Code, and consequently the judgment-debtor was kept from the exercise of his right to make an application under O. 21, rule 2 (2), this section did not apply, because it could not be said that the judgment debtor was kept from the knowledge of his right to make the application—Biroo v. Jaimurat, 16 C.W.N. 923 (927), 16 C.L.J. 174, 13 I.C. 63. Where it was alleged that the decree holders had fradulently kept the judgment-debtor from exercising his right to apply to the Court to certify an adjustment under O. 21, r. 2, by giving him assurances, no extension of time was granted—Chetty Firm v. Lon Pow, 1 Bur.L.J. 226, 68 I.C. 924, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 103.

The mere act of fraud is immaterial. In order to avail himself of the benefit of this section, the plaintiff or applicant must show that he has by means of the fraud been kept from the knowledge of his right to institute a suit or make an application —Asanand v. Jhangi, 29 P.L.R. 1919, 50 I.C. 610; Nand Ram v. Ishar, 27 P.L.R. 24, 92 I.C. 597; Jatindra v. Brojendra, 19 C.W.N. 553; Biman Chandra v. Pramotho, 49 Cal. 886 (891); Bowrammah v. Chettiar, 7 Rang. 104, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 62 (63), 117 I.C. 63; Das Narayan v. Mir Mahammad, 6 P.L.J. 319 (323), 61 I.C. 823; Payidanna v. Lakshminarasamma, 38 Mad. 1076 (1086); Ramchandra v. Hardeo, 20 N.L.R. 23, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 94. Thus, in an applicatiin to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud, the applicant will have to prove that his right to set aside the sale has been kept concealed from his knowledge by the fraud of the decree-holder or an auction-purchaser; it is not enough for him to show that the execution-proceedings were irregular and fradulent—Kailash v. Bissonath, 1 C.W.N. 67; Narayan v. Mohonth Damodar, 16 C.W.N. 894, 16 I.C. 464; Bajrang v. Sonejhari, 6 P.L.T. 567, 85 I.C. 622, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 521; Nabin Chandra v. Bipin Chandra, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 229, 87 I.C. 555.

The mere ignorance of the plaintiff as to his right to sue is no excuse under this section. It is only where such ignorance has been brought about by the fraud of the other party that this section applies—Swarnamoyee v. Probodh, 36 C.W.N. 758 (765), 55 C.L.J. 420; Lokenath v. Chintamoni, 16 I.C. 547. Thus, where an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud is made beyond the period of limitation, it is incumbent on the applicant to show that not only had he no knowledge of the sale but that he was kept from that knowledge in the manner and by the act of the person specified in this section—Purna v. Anukul, 36 Cal. 654 (657, 658).

On the other hand, if it is proved that the plaintiff was fully aware of his right, inspite of the fraud practised upon him, he is not entitled to the benefit of this section, inasmuch as he was not kept from the knowledge of his right—Jotindra v. Brojendra, 19 C.W.N. 553, 24 I.C. 249; Abdul Rahman v. Parshotam, 5 Luck. 492 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 12 (15), 128 I.C. 275.

Where the judgment-debtor had been fradulently kept from the knowledge of the sale, he was necessarily kept from the knowledge of the right to have the sale set aside, and section 18 would apply—Jotindra v. Brojendra, supra. Thus, where for the purpose of having a sale deed registered at a particular place where a very small portion of property is situate is included in the sale deed while the major portion of property is situated at a different place, and the vendee does not apply for mutation or obtains possession for more than one year after the date of the sale and the witnesses to the sale deed are neither residents of the locality where the major portion of the property is situated nor where the vendee resides, held, these are circumstances which lead to the inference that the vendee is guilty of fradulent concealment of the fact of sale from the person entitled to pre-empt and the latter can avail himself of the benefit of this section Jagdish v. Suraj, 180 I.C. 525, A.I.R. 1939 All. 113.

Where a decree-holder fradulently sells property not belonging to the judgment-debtor and realises rent from the auction purchaser for some years, and the auction purchaser brings a suit for refund of purchase money after the period of limitation on the dismissal of his suit for possession against the judgment-debtor, he is entitled to to get the benefit of this section as the acts on the part of the decree-holder amount to fraud keeping the auction purchaser out of his right to institute the suit within the proper period of limitation—Chaitanya v. Ranjit, I.L.R. (1938) I Cal. 512, 67 C.L.J. 16, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 263.

171. Evidence—Burden of proof:—Fraud must be proved as laid. When one kind of fraud has been charged, another kind of fraud cannot, on failure of proof, be substituted for it—Abdool v. Turner, 11 Bom. 620 (P.C.). If a suit is on the face of it time-barred, O. 7, r. 6, C. P. Code requires that the plaint shall show the ground on which exemption from the law of limitation is claimed. Therefore, if the plaintiff claims exemption on the ground of fraud on the part of the defendant, he must prove the fraud—Kalyan Mal v. Ahmaduddin, 1934 A.L.J 909 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 1157, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 208 (210). In such a case, it is for the plaintiff to give in the first instance clear proof of the fraud alleged by him; Abdul v. Ambica, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal 163, 43 C.W.N. 862, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 663; Sobhan v. Gangadhar, 211 I.C. 533, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 40. The Court will not presume it from the mere existence of suspicious circumstances—Bhagwan v. Ida, 1903 P.L.R. 27; Biman Chandra v. Promotha, 49 Cal. 886, 36 C.L.J. 295, 68 I.C. 94; Ramesh Chandra v. Birajasundari, 32 C.W.N. 519 (522); Bhagwana v. Shadi, 36 P.L.R. 114, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 878 (879).

Where fraud is charged against the defendant, it is an acknowledged rule of pleading that the plaintiff must set forth the particulars of the fraud which he alleges; general allegations, however strong may be the words in which they are stated, are insufficient to amount to an averment of fraud—Wallingford v Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 685 (per Lord Selbourne); Gunga v. Tiluckram, 15 Cal. 533 (P.C.); Chenvirapa v. Danava, 19 Bom. 593 (601); Krishnaji v. Wamanaji, 18 Bom. 144. The allegations must be specified in particulars and detail, and the finding of the Court ought to be precise as to the particular acts and intentions constituting the fraud—Nihal Chand v. Faujdar, 3 P.R. 1882; Ghulam Raza v. Sardar Khan, 86 P.R. 1902. It is not necessary for the Court to state in so many words that it was due to the fraud of the decree-holders that the judgment-debtors were kept out of the knowledge of the sale; if the Judge discusses the evidence and comes to the conclusion that there was a suppression of the writs of attachment and sale proclamation and other processes for execution, and that the judgment-debtor had no knowledge of the sale until there was delivery of possession to the auction-purchaser, it amounts to saying that the judgment-debtor was kept out of the knowledge of the sale by the fraud of the decree-holder—Ramesh Chandra v. Birajasundari, 32 C.W.N. 519 (521), 108 I.C. 33, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 349. Where the judgment-debtor applies to have the execution sale set aside on the ground of fraud, and seeks to take advantage of this section, the Court is bound to find when and how the fraud was committed and as to whether the judgment-debtor was kept from the knowledge of the execution-proceedings and sale. There must be a distinct allegation of fraud in the petition, and the party relying upon fraud must state seriatim and in detail the facts constituting the fraud, vague or general allegations of fraud being of no avail. He must state further as to how the fraud was practised, how he was kept out of the knowledge of the execution proceedings and the sale, and how he came to know of the sale—Das Narayan v. Mir Mahammad, 6 P.L.J. 319 (323), 2 P.L.T. 401. In order to take advantage of the extended period of limitation under this section, the petitioner will have to allege and prove that by means of fraud he has been kept from the knowledge of his right to make an application. Vague allegations of fraud, when facts alleged do not bear out the case of fraud, will not enable the petitioner to get out of the bar of limitation—Venkata v. Kanakaraju, 1950 M.W.N. 464, (1950) 2 M.L.J 290, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 801. He must also prove that the other party was himself guilty of the fraud or was an accessory thereto—Purna v. Anukul, 36 Cal. 654 (657).

This section has no application where there is no suggestion of fraud but only of a mistake—Azizur v. Girwardhari, 10 B R. 89; where the allegations in the plaint do not of themselves necessarily imply fraud on the part of the defendant, nor suggest any such imputation, sec. 18 would have no application. On the other hand, if the facts stated in the plaint necessarily suggest fraud on the part of the defendant, the mere omission in the plaint to expressly stigmatise the defendant's conduct as fradulent would be no bar to the plaintiff's relying on the provisions of this section—Radha Kishen v. Delhi Cloth Mills, 32 P.R. 1913, 16 I C. 804.

When once the fraud has been established by the plaintiff, or where the circumstances are such that fraud may be presumed, the burden is on the defendant (who sets up limitation) to show that the plaintiff had clear knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud at a time which is too remote to allow him to bring the suit—Rahimbhoy v. Turner, 17 Bom. 341 (P.C.); Arjun v. Gunendra, 18 C.W.N. 1266; Ramesh Chandra v. Birajsundari, 32 C.W N. 519 (522), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 349; Ram Kinkar v. Sthiti Ram, 27 C.L.J. 528; Bhushan Moni v. Profulla, 48 Cal. 119 (123); Vithappa v. Basgowda, 14 Bom.L.R. 771, 17 I.C. 10; Gordhan Das v. Ahmed, 34 P.R. 1904; Bhagwana v. Shadi, 36 P.L.R. 114, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 878 (879); Biman Chandra v. Promotha, 49 Cal. 886, 36 C.L.J. 295, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 157; Ram Chandra v. Hardeo, 20 N.L.R. 23. A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 94; Krishna v. Daserathu, A.I.R. 1951 Orissa 149; Mst. Phula v. Kashmiri, A.I.R. 1956 Pepsu 17. The terms of section 18 are materially different from sec. 26, Real Property Limitation Act (3 & 4 Will. IV, C. 27) and that when a plaintiff has established that by fraud of the defendant he had been kept from the knowledge of his right to sue the burden is shifted on the defendant to show that the plaintiff had knowledge of the transaction impeached beyond the period of limitation—Jadunath v. Kasiswar, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 779. This burden is not discharged by the defendant by proof of the fact that some hints and clues had reached the plaintiff which might have led to such knowledge—Rahimbhoy v. Turner, supra; Sridhar v. Hara Prasad, 209 I.C. 521, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 377 or by showing that the plaintiff had means available to him for coming to know of the fact—Swarnamoyee v. Probodh, 34 C.W.N.

758 (766). In an application to set aside a sale, if it is obvious that a fraud has been perpetrated on the judgment-debtor, it is for the decree-holder to establish at what precise point of time the judgment-debor had clear and definite knowledge of those facts which would entitle him to apply for setting aside the sale—Babu Lal v. Parem Kumari, 10 P.L.T. 231, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 228 (229), 117 I C. 46. So also, where an applicant for pre-emption has been kept from the knowledge of the sale by the fraud of the vendee, it is of the latter to establish that the influence of his fraud has ceased to operate at some time beyond the period of limitation. If he does not discharge the onus, the benefit of the fraud will continue to be available to the applicants for pre-emption—Masior v. Samsammessa, A.I.R. 1949 Cal. 307. Where the plaintiff alleges fraud and states that he acquired knowledge on a particular date, in ordinary cases the initial burden would be on him to lead evidence establishing the date of his knowledge; but if notwithstanding the fact that the plaintiff did in most specific terms allege in his suit the date and the circumstances in which he acquired knowledge for the first time, the defendant's pleadings are evasive and do not raise specifically an issue as to the date of the plaintiff's acquisition of knowledge, the burden of proving the date is not on the plaintiff—Sri Kishan v. Ghanand, 1929 A.L.J. 1153, A.I.R. 1929 All. 721 (723). Where the father of a minor obtained a decree, and died before execution, and then the judgment-debtor got himself appointed as guardian of the minor's property, held that the judgment-debtor who got himself appointed as guardian was under the obligation of enforcing against himself the decree which had been obtained against him, and the burden lay heavily upon him to show that he had made a full disclosure to the Court of his indebtedness to the estate; otherwise the Court would assume that no such disclosure was made and that he perpetrated a fraud both on the Court and on the minor by not making the disclosure—Gobinda Lal v. Nalini Kanta, 52 Cal. 63,, 88 I.C. 61, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 584.

If the facts proved and found as established are sufficient to make a case of fraud within the meaning of this section, the objection that the plea under this section was not taken in the lower courts or in the grounds of appeal is not serious, as the question of the applicability of the section will be only a question of law and such a question can be raised at any stage of the case and also in the final court of appeal—Yeshwant v. Walchand, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 16.

172. Application to set aside sale:—In the case of an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud, under O. 21, r. 90, C. P. Code, limitation runs not from the date when the applicant has some hearsay knowledge of the factum of sale, but when he has a clear and definite knowledge of the facts which constitute the fraud—Bhusan Moni v. Profulla, 48 Cal. 119 (122). Where irregularities affecting the validity of a sale have, by the fraud of the judgment-creditor or other parties to the sale, been kept concealed from the judgment-debtor, he is entitled to make an application under section 311, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. XXI, r. 90); limitation (Art. 166) will be counted from the time when the fraud first became known to the applicant, and it is immaterial that the sale was confirmed. The confirmation of the sale ought not to be used as a shield for the fraud by which the Court has been induced to make the sale itself—Mahendra v. Gopal, 17 Cal. 769 (F.B.) (overruling Gobindo v. Umacharan, 14 Cal. 679); Golam Ahmed v. Judhistir, 30 Cal. 142 (153); Sheo Ram v. Ikramunnissa, 45 All. 316, 21 A.L.J. 176, 71 I.C. 631, A.I.R. 1923 All. 282. Where the auction purchaser, against whom the application for setting aside the sale under sec. 173, Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, is directed, along with some of the judgment-debtors, is guilty of fraud, the applicants can avail themselves of the provisions contained in section 18, Limitation Act—Parthasarathi v. Ahindranath, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 89.

Where execution-proceedings having been started against a judgment-debtor, who had died long ago, writs of attachment and proclamation of sale were issued in his name and returns were filed that the processes were duly served upon the judgment-debtor, and thereafter the sale took place, it was held that the application to set aside the sale (Art. 166) was within time if instituted within one month from the date of the applicant"s knowledge of the fraud—Arjun v. Gunendra, 18 C.W.N. 1266 (1270), 20 C.L.J. 341, 27 I.C. 294. Where every process issued by the Court to apprise the judgment-debtors or their representatives that execution was to proceed against them, had been fradulently suppressed, held that this section applied to the case—Ram Kinkar v. Sthiti Ram, 27 C.L.J. 528, 46 I.C. 221; Jatindra v. Brojendra, 19 C.W.N. 553, 24 I.C. 249.

But there is all the difference in the world between a failure to serve the notices and a deliberate contrivance on the part of a party to suppress the notices. The one is due to negligence, carelessness or various other circumstances; the other is the result of a deliberate contrivance on the part of a party for his own advantage. Mere negligence or carelessness on the part of the process-server or the identifier is insufficient as a basis for a finding of fraud—Behari Lal v. Tanuk Lal, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 397, 8 P.L.T. 28, 97 I.C. 798.

This section applies where the application by a judgment-debtor to set aside an auction-sale is made against an auction-purchaser, and is not restricted to an application against the decree-holder. The words of this section are clear, viz., that any person whose fraud has kept from another person the knowledge of his right to institute a suit or make an application is within the provisions of this section. Therefore, this section governs an application by a judgment-debtor against an auction-purchaser to set aside the confirmation of an execution sale on the ground that the auction-purchase was benami—Pullo Reddi v. Pattabhirama, 56 Mad. 734, 143 I.C. 388, 65 M.L.J. 139, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 626 (627).

There is a difference of opinion as to the question whether in an application to set aside a sale it is sufficient to prove the fraud of the decree-holder only or whether it is necessary to prove the fraud of the auction purchaser also either as principal or as accessory. In Mahipati v. Atul, 53 C.W.N. 587, A.I.R. 1949 Cal. 212; Sailendra v. Sudhanyo, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 166; Karuppanna v. Ponnuthayee, A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 198, (1956) 1 M.L.J. 190, I.L.R. (1956) Mad. 927; the former proposition has been laid down. The reason for the said proposition is that fraud proved against an auction purchaser is a fraud subsequent to the sale which under this section need not be proved. On the other hand in Sailabala v. Atul, 82 C.L.J. 9; Ghulam v. Negapatinam, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 432, 1950 M W.N. 240, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 460; Mihirlal v. Panch Kari, 54 C.W.N. 637, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 520; Susamabala v. Profullamoyee, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 420; Majibar Rahman v. Rahu Bux, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 604; the latter proposition has been laid down. The reason for the proposition is that the auction purchaser is not a person claiming through the decree-holder and the decree-holder's fraud will not be available as against him.

Fraud antecedent and subsequent to sale:—It is not necessary to prove fraud subsequent to the sale—Jatindra v. Brojendra, 19 C.W.N. 553, 24 I.C. 249. It is not necessary to prove that after the sale, when the right to apply for setting aside the sale accrued, there was some fraud practised by the decree-holder which kept his right to apply concealed from him. It is sufficient if fraud antecedent to the sale is proved. Therefore, if owing to the fradulent suppression of the processes by the decree-holder, all knowledge of the execution proceedings up to the date of the sale was withheld from the petitioner, then so long as he did not come to know of the sale, the effect of the fraud continued, and the conclusion is that he was kept from the knowledge of the sale in consequence of the initial fraud practised by the decree-holder—Sarvi Begam v. Ramchandra, 47 All. 850, 23 A.L.J. 760, A.I.R. 1925 All. 778, 88 I.C. 500; Bhusan Mani v. Profulla, 48 Cal. 119 (122); Nabin Chandra v. Bipin Chandra, 87 I.C. 555, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 229. In two cases the Calcutta High Court has held that this section does not apply where the fraud is antecedent to the accrual of the right—Raikishori v. Mukunda, 15 C.W.N. 965 (970); Purna Chandro v. Anukul, 36 Cal. 654 (657). But in later cases it has been held that, fraud antecedent to the sale cannot be excluded from consideration. It is a saying of an old Chancellor that "frost and fraud end in foul," and in this lies the truth of the matter. Fraud is a continuing influence and until that influence ends, it retains its power of mischief —per Jenkins, C.J. in Narayan v. Mohanth Narayan 16 C.W.N. 894, 16 I.C. 464 (dissenting from Purna Chandra v. Anukul, 36 Cal. 654 (657); Bajrang v. Sonejhari, 6 P.L.T. 567, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 521). The question of fraud should be considered as a whole. The proof of fraud antecedent to the sale may have an important bearing on the determination of the question whether there was fraud subsequent to the sale, although it cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that proof of fraud antecedent to the sale necessarily indicates continuance of that fraud up to a period subsequent to the sale—Tookoomani v. Dwarka, 17 C.W.N. 478, 17 I.C. 972.

173. Necessary document:—In one sense every document may be said to be necessary, but a limit should be placed on the meaning of the term, and a document which is merely useful in evidence cannot be considered a necessary document—Lakshminarasa v. Ankinid, 7 M.H.C.R. 22 (24).

Concealment of document:—The fact that a document which is alleged to have been fradulently concealed has been registered would seem to displace the allegation of concealment—Venkateswara v. Shekhari Varma, 3 Mad. 384 (398) (P.C.). So too does the production of the document before a public officer or in a Court in support of a claim—Ibid (at p. 399); Ghiba v. Hayat, 120 P.R. 1883.

174. Starting point of limitation:—"When the fraud became known":— In case of a suit or application, limitation runs from the date when the fraud becomes known to the plaintiff or applicant. (In Englond, however, statute runs not from the date of discovery of the fraud but from the date when the plaintiff would have discovered it, if he had used due diligence. Lightwood, p. 297).

To bring his case within this section, plaintiff must allege when the fraud pleaded came to his knowledge—Rai Radha Krishna v. Bisheswor. 1 Pat. 733 (P.C.)., 67 I.C. 914, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 336; Kalyan Mal v. Ahmaduddin, 1934 A.L.J. 909 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 1157, 151 I.C. 45, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 208 (210). When the true nature of his rights was not discovered by the plaintiff earlier than the time at which his demand for possession was resisted, limitation began to run from the date of resistance—Harnath v. Indar Bahadur, 26 O.C. 223 (P.C.), 27 C.W.N. 949, 71 I.C. 629, A.I.R. 1922 P.C. 403.

The knowledge required by this section is not mere suspicion. It must be knowledge of such a character as will enable the person defrauded to seek his remedy in Court—Natha v. Jodha, 6 All. 406; Samsudeen v. Lokshmi, A.I.R. 1951 Tra-Co. 107. Hearsay knowledge is not the kind of knowledge contemplated by this section—Bhusan Moni v. Profulla, 48 Cal. 119 (123). Such knowledge must be a clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the particular fraud. The mere fact that some hints and clues reached the injured party which perhaps, if vigorously and acutely followed up, might have led to a complete knowledge of the fraud, is not enough to constitute clear and definite knowledge of it—Rahimbhoy v. Turner, 17 Bom. 341 (P.C.); Biman Chandra v. Promotha, 49 Cal. 886 (F.B.), 36 C.L.J. 295; Ramchandra v. Hardeo, 20 N.L.R 23, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 94; Sridhar v. Hara Prosad, 209 I.C. 520, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 377; Giribala v. Ushangini, A.I.R. 1955 Assam 177.

In suits for money misappropriated by an agent employed for the collection of rents, where fraudulent accounts have been rendered by the agent, the Court having regard to the nature of the fraud, the facility with which it may be known, and the likelihood of the attention being called to it, may infer such knowledge and may infer the time when the means of knowledge first came within the plaintiff's reach, or in other words, may hold the plaintiff fixed with constructive knowledge of the fraud—Nilmoni v. Nilu Nath, 20 Cal. 425.

174A. Protection of bona fide purchaser:—See clause (b). Under sec. 18 the extended time can be claimed only against a person guilty of the fraud and against a person accessory thereto and against a person who claims through the person who committed the fraud. From this it would appear that it cannot be claimed against an innocent third party against whom ordinary limitation would apply—Majaharali v. Mafijaddi, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 706. Before a person can obtain the benefit of this section he must show (1) that he is a purchaser according to the proper meaning of the term; (2) that he is a purchaser bona fide and (3) that he is a purchaser for valuable consideration—Radhanath v. Gisborne, 15 W.R. 24 (27) (P.C). The property of which the plaintiff has been deprived by fraud can hardly be said to have been purchased in good faith from the person guilty of fraud, if the circumstances of the case are such as should put an ordinary careful man upon an inquiry and consideration as to the infirmity of the vendor's title or such as should call attention of the purchaser to such infirmity of title—Ibid (at p. 29).

175. Application of section to special or local laws:—Under sec. 29 (2) as now amended, this section will be applied in computing the period of limitation prescribed by any special or local law. Thus, it applies to an application under sec. 174 (4), Bengal Tenancy Act, to set aside a sale held in execution of a rent decree. Sec. 185 of that Act does not stand in the way, as an application under sec. 174 is not specified in Sch. III of that Act—Midnapore Zamindary Co., Ld. v. Priya Bala, 60 Cal. 970, 37 C.W.N. 927 (929), A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 782. The decision in Radha Shyam v. Dinabandhu, 18 C.W.N. 31 (32) to the effect that sec. 18, Limitation Act, cannot apply to an application under sec. 174, Bengal Tenancy Act, is no longer good law. But sec. 18 will not apply to suits, appeals and applications which are specifically mentioned in Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act. See sec. 185 of that Act. So also this section applies to proceedings under the United Provinces Encumbered Estates Act—Kazim v. Mubarak, 14 Luck. 694, 1939 O.W.N. 719, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 227; Chuni v. Chandan, 1939 A.L.J. 447, A.I.R. 1939 All. 542; Mumtaz-un-nissa v. Abu, I.L.R. (1944) All. 703, 1944 A.L.J. 504, A.I.R. 1945 All. 35. This section also applies to an application for restoration of a holding under Bihar Restoration of Bakasht Lands and Reduction of Arrears of Rent Act as there is nothing in sec. 11 of that Act which excludes this section—Narsingh v. Silnath, 7 B.R. 1003.

Effect of acknowledgment in writing.

19. (1) Where, before the expiration of the period prescribed for a suit or application in respect of any property or right, an acknowledgment of liability in respect of such property or right has been made in writing signed by the party against whom such property or right is claimed, or by some person through whom he derives title or liability, a fresh period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the acknowledgment was so signed.

(2) Where the writing containing the acknowledgment is undated, oral evidence may be given of the time when it was signed; but, subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 (I of 1872), oral evidence of its contents shall not be received.

Explanation I.—For the purposes of this section an acknowledgment may be sufficient though it omits to specify the exact nature of the property or right, or avers that the time for payment, delivery, performance or enjoyment has not yet come, or is accompanied by a refusal to pay, deliver, perform or permit to enjoy, or is coupled with a claim to a set-off, or is addressed to a person other than the person entitled to the property or right.

Explanation II.—For the purposes of this section, "signed" means signed either personally or by an agent duly authorized in this behalf.

Explanation III.—For the purposes of this section an application for the execution of a decree or order is an application in respect of a right.

176. Applicability to Local or Special Acts:—The section is applicable to cases under the Orissa Tenancy Act; Ramendra v. Brajamohan, 23 Pat. 437, 1944 P.W.N. 413, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 410; to cases under the Bihar Tenancy Act; Jajdeo v. Babulal, A.I R. 1941 Pat. 499; to the cases under the Bengal Tenancy Act; Hasan Imam v Brahmdeo, 9 Pat. 747, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 301; but not to a suit under sec. 72 of the Dekkhan Agriculturist's Relief Act—Janardan v. Ganesh, I.L.R. (1945) Bom. 167, 47 Bom.L.R. 27, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 200 (F.B.).

176A. Before expiration of period:—The very opening words of sec. 19 indicate that an acknowledgment to be valid must relate to the time when the right was still enforceable—Sher Md. v. Karamchand, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 515, 37 P.L.R. 392, 155 I.C. 576. The acknowledgment must be made before the expiration of the period. An acknowledgment given after the expiry of the usual period of limitation is insufficient to keep the debt alive—Raj Narain v. Ram Sarup, 1930 A.L.J. 552, A.I.R. 1930 All. 467 (468), 123 I.C. 820; Lalji v. Ghasi Ram, 7 O.W.N. 420, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 287 (289), 128 I.C. 276; Indurai v. Shivlal, 27 Bom.L.R. 467, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 339, 87 I.C. 699. If a claim is barred the fact that there was an acknowledgment of liability later on will not resuscitate a barred claim because under the law an acknowledgment can be only of a subsisting liability—Rajah of Vizianagaram v. Official Liquidator, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 535, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 136. Thus an admission of liability by the judgment debtor made more than three years after dismissal of last execution petition does not amount to an acknowledgment within the meaning of the section and cannot avail to revive a debt that has become barred—Unichira v. Ramu, (1951)

1 M.L.J. 51, 1951 M.W.N. 187, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 674. Where a series of acknowledgments have been made, each within the new period arising from the previous acknowledgment and the first is within three years of the date of the debt, the debt is kept alive —Mohesh Lal v. Busunta Kumaree, 6 Cal. 340. In order that a written acknowledgment may be of avail to a plaintiff under sec. 19, Limitation Act, it is necessary that such acknowledgment must have been made before the expiration of the period prescribed for the suit. It is equally necessary that it must be a clear and unambiguous acknowledgment specifically admitting liability in respect of the debt sued upon and it must be signed by the party or by his authorised agent. If an admission amounts to such an acknowledgment, then, if it is made before the expiry of the period, it is helpful and the suit can be maintained for the recovery of the earlier debt, the time being extended by the acknowledgment.

On the other hand, if the acknowledgment is made after the period of limitation has expired, then the acknowledgment is of no utility and cannot save limitation. In order that a promise to say a time-barred debt should fall within the purview of sec 25 (3), Indian Contract Act, it is necessary that there should be a promise in writing to pay the time-barred debt. It follows, that the promise to pay should be express, and that an implied promise to pay will not fulfil the requirements of sec. 25—Ghulam Murtaza v. Mt. Fasiunnisa, A.I.R. 1935 All. 129; Shanti Parkash v. Harnamdass, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 642.

The onus lies on the creditor to prove that the acknowledgment was made within time; it would be contrary to the provisions of secs. 101-104 of the Evidence Act to say that the burden lies on the defendant who acknowledged the liability—Abdul Rafiq, v. Bhajan, 53 All. 963, 1932 A.L.J. 77, A.I.R. 1932 All. 199, 137 I.C. 243; Gur Saran v. Shib Singh, I.L.R. (1944) All. 76, 1943 A.L.J. 548, A.I.R. 1943 All. 393 (F.B.); Bharat v. Des Raj, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 157.

There has been some conflict of opinion as to the meaning of the words "prescribed period" in sections 19, 20 and other sections of the Act. The correct interpretation, according to the Allahabad High Court is that the acknowledgment or payment should have been made before the claim had become timt-barred and that is the prescribed period—Firm Kamta Prasad v. Gulzari Lal, 1954 All. L.J. 712, A.I.R. 1955 All 41 (F.B.). But in Sant Lal v. Kamla Prasad, A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 477, the Supreme Court held that it is the payment, and not the acknowledgment, that should be made within the period of limitation.

But where the mortgagor brought a suit for redemption of a very old mortgage of which there was an acknowledgment in the settlement records, but there was no evidence from which the date of the mortgage could be inferred with any certainty, it was held that no substantial inference could be drawn from the acknowledgment that the mortgage was at the date of the acknowledgment a subsisting mortgage not barred by limitation, and it was on the plaintiff (mortgagor) relying on the acknowledgment to show that it was made before the period of limitation had expired —Anup Singh v. Fateh Chand, 42 All. 575 (590, 592) (F.B), 56 I.C. 986; Gur Saran v. Shib Singh, I.L.R. (1944) All. 76, 1943 A.L.J. 548, A.I.R. 1943 All. 939 (F.B.); Bharat v. Des Raj, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 157.

Acknowledgment made during holidays:—An acknowltdgment made during holidays but after the expiry of the period of limitation prescribed for the suit will not give a new period under this section, as this section requires that the acknowledgment should be given before the expiry of the prescribed period; and the fact that the right to sue was subsisting under sec. 4 on the date of the acknowledgment owing to the intervention of the vacation would be of no avail. The word 'prescribed' means prescribed by the schedule and not prescribed by the operation of sec. 4—Bai Hemkore v. Masamali, 26 Bom. 782 (784); Anisuddin v. Kalipada, 58 Cal. 1148, 35 C.W.N. 370 (372), 134 I.C. 1132, A I.R. 1931 Cal. 785; Nandram v. Ranchhodas, 19 N.L.R. 135, 5 N.L.J. 178, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 250; Debendra v. Kartick, 55 Cal. 1210, 32 C.W.N. 359, 47 C.L.J. 12, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 68; Shanti Prakash v. Harnamdas, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 642; Chidambaram v. Venkatasubba, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 467; Sheojiram v. Gulabchand, 1940 N.L.J. 607; Adiraja Ariga v. Beerana Rai, (1956) 2 Mad. L.J. 218. But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that there is no reason to limit the sense of the expression 'period prescribed' to the period prescribed in the schedule alone, but that the expression means the period prescribed by law, that is, the period prescribed by the whole body of the Limitation Act; in other words, the period prescribed by the schedule read with section 4. Therefore, an acknowledgment made after the expiry of the period of limitation but during the hlidays is a good acknowledgment—Abdul Ghani v. Chiranji Lal, 49 All. 726, 102 I.C. 111, A.I.R. 1927 All. 577 (dissenting from 26 Bom. 782). The same view has been expressed (by way of obiter) in Visram v. Tabaji, 15 Bom L.R. 348, 19 I.C. 820 (821) (disapproving 26 Bom. 782). Recently the Nagpur Court also dissents from the Bombay case and holds that an acknowledgment made during the holidays is valid—Jhanaklal v. Gulabchand, 11 N.L.J. 87, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 192.

The same view has been adopted in the case of Kishan Singh v. Sardar Ali, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 162. Tekchand, J., after considering the relevant decisions on the point holds that the "period prescribed for the suit" referred to in sec. 19 is not necessarily limited to the period prescribed in the Schedule to the Limitation Act, but means the period within which a suit could be instituted. A contrary view, however, has been taken recently in Shantiparkash v. Harnamdas, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 642.

Acknowledgment made within period of grace:—A mortgage is kept alive by an acknowledgment of liability made by the mortgagor within the period of grace allowed by section 31 though after the expiry of 12 years prescribed by Art. 132—Sheo Partab v. Tajammal, 49 All. 67, A.I R. 1927 All. 114, 98 I.C. 1005; Moti Begam v. Har Prasad, 11 A.L.J. 570, 19 I.C. 658; Seshayya v. Subbadu, 59 M.L.J. 881, 128 I.C. 867, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 991 (994). Sec. 31 has now been repealed.

Similarly, an acknowledgment made before the expiry of the period of grace allowed by sec. 5 of the Punjab Loans Limitation Repealing Act, III of 1923, is an acknowledgment made "before the expiration of the period prescribed" within the meaning of this section. The word "prescribed" is not limited to the period prescribed by the Schedule to this Act but extends to the period within which a suit may be instituted, including the period of grace allowed by any law—Buta Singh v. Bhan Singh, 129 I.C. 125, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 978 (979); Nagarur v. Nagarur, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 19, 46 M.L.W. 559.

Acknowledgment during extended period under sec. 6 :—The Bombay High Court held in some cases that the "period prescribed" means the period prescribed in the third column of the schedule, and not the period extended to a minor by operation of sec. 6. Therefore, the acknowledgment must be given before the expiration of the period prescribed in the schedule, and not before the expiration of the extended period within which a minor may bring a suit after his disability has ceased—Maganlal v. Amichand, 52 Bom. 521, 30 Bom.L.R. 733, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 319 (320), 112 I.C. 24 (following 26 Bom. 782). Where the plaintiff is a minor at the date of the acknowledgment he can under the combined operation of this section and sec. 6 of the Act, institute a suit within the prescribed period of limitation after his disability as minor has ceased; Shantaram v. Chintamanrao, 44 Bom.L.R. 522, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 248, I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 574. These cases have been dissented from in Udhanji v. Bapudas, 51 Bom.L.R. 830, A.I.R.

1950 Bom. 94, where it has been held that the scheme of the limitation Act is to determine the period of limitation not merely by looking at the first schedule but by looking at the schedule in conjunction with secs. 4 to 25 of the Act. Reading the first schedule along with sec. 6 of the Act, the period of limitation prescribed for a suit by a minor is not the period mentioned in the first schedule, but a special period as mentioned in sec. 6 of the Act. Therefore, an acknowledgment of liability passed not within the period prescribed by the first schedule but within the extended period allowed by sec. 6 constitutes an acknowledgment within the meaning of this section. The same view has been taken by the Madras High Court in Subbarayadu v. Muthulakshmi, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 3, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 149.

Acknowledgment made within period excluded by local or special Act:—This section does not apply to an acknowledgment made after expiry of period of limitation but during the period excluded by sec. 52 of the U. P. Court of Wards Act, and so such an acknowledgment cannot extend time; Shanker Lal v. Ram Lal, I.L.R. (1938) All. 363, 1938 A.L.J. 252, A.I.R. 1938 All. 217 (F.B.). So also, an acknowledgment made after the period of limitation but during the period excluded under sec. 9 (5) of the U. P. Encumbered Estates Act, is not an acknowledgment within the meaning of this section. The words "before the expiration of the period prescribed" means the period prescribed by the Act in which this section occurs, i.e., the Limitation Act read by itself and without reference, to any other enactment; Sheo Shanker v. Motilal, I.L.R. (1946) All. 532, A.I.R. 1947 All. 199. The Madras High Court has taken a contrary view in Sambayya v. Subbayya, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 439, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 19 where it has been held that in computing the period prescribed the period which a party is entitled to exclude under any law for the time being in force, should be taken into account, for example, where limitation is suspended by insolvency. See also, Kuppuswami v. Lakshmi, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 285, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 552.

176B. Acknowledgment of barred debt—Promise to pay:—An acknowledgment does not create any new right of action but only enlarges the time and has the effect of making a new period run from the date of acknowledgment. It does not operate as a new contract but only helps to keep alive the original cause of action. It must therefore be distinguished from a novation of contract (sec. 62, Contract Act)—Janaka v. Sheo Charan, 7 Luck. 313, 8 O.W.N. 1210, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 49 (50), 135 I.C. 390; Hasti Mal v. Shanker, A.I.R. 1952 Raj. 7 (F.B.). In other words, an acknowledgment gives a fresh period of limitation in respect of such debts as are not already barred at the time when the acknowledgment is made. An acknowledgment of a barred debt cannot give a fresh period of limitation in favour of the creditors—Deoraj v. Indrasan, 8 Pat. 706, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 258 (260), 123 I.C. 470, 10 P.L.T. 169; Suraj Prasad v. Bourcke, 5 P.L.J. 371, 1 P.L.T. 190, 56 I.C. 379; Mutssaddi v. B. B. & C. I. Ry., 42 All. 390; Bindal v. Chota, 16 C.W.N. 636, 14 I.C. 133. A time-barred debt cannot be revived by an acknowledgment; it can be revived only by a new contract under sec. 25 (3) of the Contract Act, in which there must be an express promise to pay; a mere acknowledgment of a time-barred debt or a mere willingness to renew the debt is insufficient to create a contract—Ram Bahadur v. Damodar, 6 P.L.J. 121, 60 I.C. 514, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 29; Maganlal v. Amichand, 52 Bom. 521, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 319 (322); Gobind v. Sarju, 30 All. 268; Satya Ketu v. Ramesh Chandra, 60 Cal. 714, 37 C.W.N. 326; Guljar v. Sariman, 36 C.L.J. 228, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 71; Md. Abid Hussain v. Bhagavan Das, 5 I.C. 418 (All.); Vasudev v. Ramakrishna, 26 Bom. 394; Mali v. Baikanath, 18 C.L.J. 269; Bhowani v. Peari, 18 C.L.J. 329. This subject has been elaborately discussed in Abdul Rafiq v. Bhajan, 53 All. 963, 1932 A.L.J. 77, 137 I.C. 243, A.I.R. 1932 All. 199; Raj Narain v. Ram Sarup, 1930 A.L.J. 552, A.I.R. 1930 All. 467 (469), 123 I.C. 820; Ghulam Murtaza v. Mt. Fassiunnissa, A.I.R.

1935 All. 129; similarly, if the original debt cannot be proved, or if there is no evidence to show whether the original debt was subsisting at the time when the acknowledgment was made, the acknowledgment would be of no avail, in the absence of an express promise to pay—Janaka v. Sheo Charan, supra.

Under the English law, an acknowledgment of a debt implies a promise to pay even a barred debt. The English law makes no distinction between an acknowledgment or promise which is sufficient to extend the time in the case of a debt which is not barred, and an acknowledgment or promise which is sufficient to create a new contract where the debt has already become barred by lapse of time. But in India, an acknowledgment in which there is no express promise implying a new contract to pay, must be made before the debt is barred by time, and in this respect an acknowledgment under sec. 19, Limitation Act differs from a promise to pay a barred debt under sec. 25 (3) Contract Act—Ram Bahadur v. Damadar, 6 P.L.J. 121, 2 P.L.T. 308, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 29; Deoraj v. Indrasan, supra; Lalji v. Ghasi Ram, 7 O.W.N. 420, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 287 (289), 128 I.C. 276; Nand Lal v. Partab, 3 Lah. 326. Where, however, the acknowledgment is not merely an admission of an existing debt, but there are words from which a clear promise to pay is made out, such as fixing the date of payment and so on, such an acknowledgment would come under sec. 25 (3) Contract Act and not only under sec. 19 Limitation Act—Deoraj v. Indrasan, 8 Pat. 706, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 258 (261), 120 I.C. 470.

177. Acknowledgment:—Each case relating to the question of an acknowledgment saving limitation must be treated on its own merits; and from the language used and the circumstances under which the acknowledgment is made it must be decided whether it amounts to an acknowledgment or an implied acknowledgment of the particular liability under consideration—Baij Nath v. Sheo Dularey, 8 O.W.N. 1117, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 154 (155), 134 I.C. 1022. The Court cannot go beyond the words used for the purposes of this section. The endorsement itself must contain the acknowledgment either express or implied; Ishri v. Chandrabhan, I.L.R. (1939) All. 200, 1938 A.L.J. 1233, A.I.R. 1939 All. 177. It is not for the Court to overstrain the meaning of the words used, there is no warrant for holding that unless the words amount to a total repudiation of liability they should be read as an acknowledgment—Official Assignee v. Natesa, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 460, 1941 M.W.N. 827, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 892. But the document said to constitute an acknowledgment has to be construed in the context in which it is given and where its language is not clear in itself, the context may be examined to see what it is to which the words refer. That is not to say that any equivocation in an acknowledgment can be cured by ascertaining what the probable intention of the acknowledgment was. That is quite a different thing. But where after examining in the light of the context what it was that the person giving the acknowledgment was actually referring to, the conclusion follows that it is an unequivocal acknowledgment of a right, then that acknowledgment is sufficient to satisfy the requirements of this section—Munshi Lal v. Hiralal, I.L.R. (1947) All. 11, 1947 A.L.J. 129, A.I.R. 1947 All 74 (F.B.). Acknowledgment means a definite admission of liability; it is not necessary that there should be a promise to pay; the simple admission of a debt is sufficient—Binode Behari v. Raj Narain, 30 Cal. 699; Subramania v. Veerabhadra, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 464, 41 M.L.J. 217; Peri Ramasami v. Chandra Kalayya, 48 Mad. 603, 47 M.L.J. 840; Ibrahim v. Lalit Mohan, 50 Cal. 974 (975), 28 C.W.N. 322; Nand Lal v. Partab Singh, 3 Lah. 326, 69 I.C. 502, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 425; Kamal Devi v. Dr. Khudadad, A.I.R. 1936 All. 522, 1936 A.L.J. 625, 163 I.C. 872; Magham v. Vangala, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 939; Ramprabha v. Bishunath, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 139; Udhavji v. Bapudas, 51 Bom.L.R. 830, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 94; Tulsiram v. Zaboo, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 639, 1949 N.L.J. 138, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 229. In this respect the Indian law differs from the English law. In England, an acknowledgment of a claim can keep it alive if the acknowledgment amounts to a promise to pay—Tanner v. Smat, (1827) 6 B. & C. 603; Lightwood, p. 339; so that the requirements of English law are more stringent than those of Indian law. See Maniram v. Seth Rupchand, 33 Cal. 1047 (1060) (P.C.). And so, the English authorities cannot afford any guidance in determining the question relating to an acknowledgment under the Indian law, which must be decided on the proper construction of the provisions of this Act—Amir Mirza v. Lachmi Narain, 7 Luck. 270, 138 I.C. 800, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 1 (4). According to Indian law, where the right claimed is a debt, it is necessary that an unequivocal and unqualified admission of the debt or of the subsisting relationship of debtor and creditor should be established, but a promise to pay need not be made out—Binode v. Rajnarain, 30 Cal. 699; Amir Mirza v. Lachhmi Narain, supra. A promise to pay is required in case of a barred debt only. See preceding note.

Under this section, an acknowledgment is not limited in respect of a debt only, it may be in respect of "any property or right" which is the subject-matter of the suit (e.g., the taking of accounts of a dissolved partnership)—Hukumat v. Nenumal, 22 S.L.R. 117, A.I R. 1928 Sind 45.

A document in which the mortgagee merely acknowledged having received possession of the mortgaged land would not constitute an acknowledgment of liability, in respect of the mortgagor's right to redeem the land, which would give him a fresh period for bringing a suit for redemption; for there cannot really be an acknowledgment without knowledge that the party is admitting anything. Sec. 19 intends a distinct acknowledgment of an existing liability—Dharma v. Govind, 8 Bom. 99 (102). A document containing a mere description of the property without any admission of a liability does not amount to an acknowledgment—Khiali Ram v. Taik Ram, 38 All. 540 (550). Similarly, where the plaintiff consigned some bags to be delivered to the consignee but they were not delivered, and the Railway Company wrote a letter to the plaintiff informing him that the bags were lying at a certain place and that the plaintiff might take delivedy if he liked, held that the letter did not amount to an acknowledgment of liability in respect of those bags—Mutsaddi Lal v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co., 42 All. 390 (393).

The acknowledgment must be an acknowledgment of a liability. An admission by the defendant in a previous suit (not between these parties) that he had previously executed a promissory note in favour of the plaintiff is merely an admission of the fact of the execution of the note and does not amount to an acknowledgment of liability under the note—Lallu Mal v. Reati Ram, 45 All. 679, 21 A.L.J. 669, 74 I.C. 353, A.I.R. 1924 All. 70.

Under the Indian statute there need not be a promise to pay but the document must on a fair reading amount to an admission of liability, absolute or conditional, and in the latter case the condition must be fulfilled. But where the document relied upon expressly states that there is no liability and the liability is in fact denied and repudiated there is no principle on which limitation can be said to be extended under sec. 19—Debji Chelabhai v. R. D. Metha & Co., A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 255, 39 C.W.N. 139, 60 C.L.J. 396, 155 I.C. 721; Lakshmi v. Bhagat, 50 P.L.R. 85, A.I.R. 1948 E.P. 36. The same principle applies to cases of admission of liability with a plea of discharge—Karamadai v. Raju, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 454, 1948 M.W.N. 743, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 401.

There is no rule of law that an admission of a past liability unaccompanied by an allegation of discharge should in all cases be interpreted as an admission of a subsisting liability. The question in each case is, is it a proper inference to draw from the facts and circumstances, that the debtor intended to make an admission that on the date it was made, the debt was existing—Appasami v. Morangam, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 371, 68 M.L.J. 73, 157 I.C. 259. There must be a definite or unequivocal acknowledgment of the debt—Maung Po v. B. Banerjee, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 152, 8 R. R. 48, 156 I.C. 783. So also an admission of post liability, though unaccompanied by an allegation of discharge cannot in all cases be interpreted as an admission of a subsisting liability. Each case must be treated on its own merits, and from the language used and the cidcumstances in which the acknowledgment is made it must be decided whether it amounts to an implied acknowledgment of a subsisting liability—Kandasami v. Suppammal, 45 Mad. 443 (447), 42 M.L.J. 268, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 104, 70 I.C. 576; Official Assignee v. Subramania Aiyar, 46 M.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 286, 77 I.C. 740.

A writing which owing to some defect does not fulfil the requirements of sec. 20, it may nevertheless, as an acknowledgment of liability, operate to save the claim from being barred under sec. 19—Krishnaswami v. Thiruvengada, A.I R. 1935 Mad. 245, 68 M.L.J. 63, 1935 M.W.N. 122, 157 I.C. 272, 41 L.W. 721, 1935 M.W.N. 122. There must be a conscious acknowledgment that the party concerned is liable to pay under the document on which reliance is placed—P. Muthu Chettiar v. Venkatachalam, A.I R. 1935 Mad. 287, 159 IC. 486. It must also be made with the conscious intention of acknowledging the liability—Nanak v. Suraj, 1943 O.W.N. 302, A.I.R 1943 Oudh 425. The question whether an apparent acknowledgment contained in a document is a conscious acknowledgment of liability or not is of some difficulty, unless it is clearly and expressly acknowledged that the liability still exists. Where in reply to an application under Or. 34, r. 6, C. P. Code, a statement is made that the application is premature as all the mortgaged properties are not sold it does not amount to an acknowledgment in as much as the plea could be coupled consistently with the plea that the application was time barred—Durga v. Kunj Behari, 19 Luck. 279 ,1943 O.W.N. 352, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 453. But where in answer to an application by the decree-holder for making a final decree in a mortgage suit, the judgment-debtor applies for instalments admitting his liability, a fresh period will start from that date—Bajya v. Tarachand, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 683, 1947 N.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 308.

The acknowledgment must be an acknowledgment of an existing liability—Ram Khelwan v. Nanhoo, 6 C.L.J. 544; Rangasami v. Thangavelu, 42 Mad. 637; Kandasami v. Suppammal, 45 Mad. 443; Onkarlal v. Raj Mohamud, 17 N.L.R. 209, A.I.R. 1921 Nag. 1; Kasturchand v. Manekchand, 45 Bom.L.R. 837, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 447; Fakirchand v. Narmadabai, 49 Bom.L.R. 770, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 125. It must be an acknowledgment of the debt as such and must involve an admission of a subsisting relationship of debtor and creditor; and an intention to continue it until it is lawfully determined must also be evident—Venkata v. Parthasaradhi, 16 Mad. 220; Hukumat v Nenumal, 22 S.L.R. 117, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 45. In the absence of anything to the contrary when a debtor makes an acknowledgment of his liability to pay a debt it would ordinarily mean that he was admitting a subsisting liability to pay—Tulsi v. Nek Ram, I.L.R. (1945) All. 120, 1945 A.L.J. 58, A.I.R. 1945 All. 224.

Mere endorsement of payment without more does not amount to an acknowledgment of subsisting liability to pay. Such endorsement proves only the fact of payment and not an acknowledgment of liability to pay the unpaid balance—Harkubai v. Shankerbhai, 45 Bom.L.R. 1014, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 37; Ram Chandra v. Shitu, 24 Pat. 96, 26 P.L.T. 173, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 271; Narasinga v. Rangayya, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 610, 1942 M.W.N. 685, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 133; Dial Singh v. Mahomad Ali, 45 P.L.R. 407, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 88; Shyam v. Dolgobind, 24 Pat.L.T. 21, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 395; Durga v. Kishuni. 18 Luck. 241, 1942 O.W.N. 582, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 508; Ishri v. Chandrabhan, I.L.R. (1939) All. 200, 1938 A.L.J. 1233, A.I.R. 1939 All. 177; Ram Prasad v. Binask, 55 All. 632, A.I.R. 1933 All. 453. A contrary view has been taken in U Tun Maung v. L. Ah Choy, 1938 Rang.L.R. 594, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 401; Kasiviswanathan v. Lakshmanan, 175 I.C. 550, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 84; Siraj v. Umar, A.I.R. 1941 Lah. 23, 192 I.C. 118, Ganesh v. Dattatraya, 47 Bom. 632, 25 Bom.L.R. 144. The reason given is that there is an implied acknowledgment by such endorsement. Though a mere endorsement of payment by a debtor does not constitute an acknowledgment, yet if the endorsement is so worded that an acknowledgment of debt can be read into it, either expressly or impliedly such endorsement may amount to an acknowledgment —Thakur Das v. Sant Ram, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 219. Where however the debtor at the time of making the endorsement writes in his own hand that the payment will be adjusted on the promissory note account, such endorsement is an acknowledgment— Bur Singh v. Sikri Bros., 42 P.L.R. 103, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 106. So also the endorsement on a promissory note "out of the amount due under the promissory note Rs. 1,000 was paid this day" (signature of debtor) amounts to an acknowledgment of liability—Chandukutti v. Moosan Kunthi, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 616, 163 I.C. 803, Ajodhya v. Gobind, 27 P.L.T. 464, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 401; Ramayya v. Anjayya, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 405, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 848, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 146. Venkatachelamiah v. Annapoornamma, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 590, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 469, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 353 (F.B.). The reason is such payment "towards" promissory notes implies that some thing more remains to be paid i.e., the payment is made on account of a larger sum due under the instrument—Kesarmal v. Narayan, I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 512, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 218. See also Vira Raghavayya v. Sita Ramayya, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 456, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 57. The same principle applies to such an endorsement even though no payment is made—Abdul v. Livesay, I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 745, 1945 N.L.J. 213, A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 181. An acknowledgment of an unsettled or outstanding account without more amounts to an acknowledgment of liability to pay whatever may be found due by either party on account being taken, and that therefore there is an acknowledgment of liability within the meaning of sec. 19—Amritsar Municipality v. Ralla Ram, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 638, 17 Lah. 737, 165 I.C. 723, (33 Cal. 1047 (P.C.), followed). So also an admission of the existence of an unsettled account coupled with an expression of willingness to have it settled and a query whether anything would be due implies an admission of liability for the amount that may be due upon the settlement—Subbaramaya v. Verri Iragram, 49 L.W. 106, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 300; or where the debtor admits that a definite amount is due from him according to his accounts— Diwani Widyawati v. Ramji, 41 P.L.R. 557, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 216. It is not necessary that the actual amount due should be mentioned so long as there is an acknowledgment of liability in writing signed by the debtor—Shanti Lal v. Lyallpur Bank Ltd. (in liquidation), Lahore, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 276. The admissin of the execution of a promissory note is prima facie no more than admission of liability as at the date of the note—Sagoremal Gopalka v. A. Banerjee & Co., A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 721, 40 C.W.N. 132, 159 I.C. 618.

In a suit to recover a definite sum of money the plaintiff relied upon a letter written by the defendant to this effect:—"I wish to look to your accounts; in my own account I do not see any amount due to you. Please therefore send the account." It was held that there was no acknowledgment, as there was no admission of the existence of a debt. Under section 19, when it is sought to use an acknowledgment for starting a fresh period of limitation, the right acknowledged must be of the same description as the right which is the subject of the suit. Thus, in a suit for the balance due upon taking accounts, an admission that accounts must be taken and settled would be a pertinent acknowledgment, but it would be otherwise in a suit brought to recover a definite sum of money. The asking for an account in response to a creditor's demand for a definite sum of money would not amount to an acknowledgment; it would have amounted to an acknowledgment if the creditor had based his right upon accounts—

Andiappa v. Alasinga Naidu, 36 Mad. 68 (70). Similarly, where a tradesman sent a bill for a certain sum with the words "to account rendered", to which the customer replied: "Please send me a detailed bill," such words meant that the customer wanted to see and examine the accounts, and would not amount to an admission of liability in respect of a definite sum—Ibid. Where the suit, though framed as a suit for a definite sum of money, is really a suit for an amount due on accounts, an admission that accounts must be taken and settled is a good acknowledgment—Kumaraswamy v. Narayan Rao, 46 M.L.J. 468, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 619, 80 I C. 355. Where the creditor demanded a definite sum but the debtor replied: "I do not owe as many rupees as you have written. Send an extract of the account and then whatever mistake has crept in will appear. Your dues have remained unpaid for many days," this did not amount to an acknowledgment; but when after receiving the account sent by the creditor, the debtor wrote to the creditor admitting the correctness of the account and asking for time to enable him to pay the amount, it was held that this was a valid acknowledgment—Velchand v. Bhagvandas, 32 Bom.L.R. 1390, 128 I.C. 911, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 74 (75); following Pandurang v. Maruj, 30 Bom.L.R. 688. A letter from the debtor containing a definite statement that the creditor has no claim and that his claim if any should be established in a Civil Court is not an acknowledgment of liability—Purnendu v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1956 Cal. 66. But if the debtor admitted that a definite sum was due from him that would amount to acknowledgment—Diwanni Widgwati v. Ramji, 41 P.L.R. 557, A.I.R. 1339 Lah. 216. A writing by the debtor containing the details of account of the creditor, stating that a specific amount is due to the creditor on the date of the writing and signed by the debtor is unquestionably an acknowledgment even though it is recited that the debtor has handed over certain documents in favour of the creditor the value of which is equivalent to the debt without any formal assignment, and the word "bhuktan," is used (meaning satisfied in full)—Ramdin v. Ram Parichhan, 22 Pat.L.T. 1057, A.I.R. 1042 Pat. 170. So also, where in course of several letters written by the debtor to the creditor asking him to send accounts or further particulars he makes a request to "write the amount of money due to you," it amounts to an acknowledgment—Baldev v. Harbans, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 65, 215 I.C. 30.

Where the admission was in the following terms: "I am ashamed that the account has stood so long," it was held to be a good acknowledgment—Cornford v. Smithard, (1859) 5 H. & N. 13; Holmes v. Mackrell, (1858) 3 C.B. (N.S.) 789. Where the defendant (i.e., the debtor) himself first wrote to the plaintiff requesting him to send in his account made up to Christmas last, and not having received any reply to his first note, he wrote the plaintiff again requesting him to send in his account, it was held that there was a sufficient admission of a debt—Quincey v. Sharpe, (1875) 1 Ex. D. 72. Where by a letter the writer definitely asked the plaintiff to send a copy of the account showing what amount was due by him to the plaintiff, held that it was clearly an acknowledgment—Kirpa Ram v. Devi Dayal, 28 P.L.R. 169, 101 I.C. 544, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 832. Where the defendant admitted the existence of a running account between the partits and went on to say that his representatives would compare accounts and pay what was found to be due, held that the words were a clear admission of liability—Sant Lal v. Beni Prasad, 23 A.L.J. 248, 87 I C. 985, A.I.R. 1925 All. 340; Joharmal v. Hiralal, 7 Pat. 238, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 221. There is a distinction between an acknowledgment of a right to an account and an acknowledgment of a debt. For an acknowledgment of a right to an account there need not be an acknowledgment that a debt or even a specified amount thereof is actually due. Where the parties in effect state that: "There is a right to a pending account between us and each has got a claim to recover the balance which may be found due upon the taking of the accounts and each agrees to pay the other the balance so found due,"—the statement amounts to an unconditional admission of liability. It is not essential that there should be an express statement that the balance would be paid. Even the words "settle the accounts" would indicate that the parties agreed to pay whatever was found to be due on the accounts being looked into—Janakirama v. Narasimha, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 38 distinguishing Narayanaswamy v. Gangadhar, A.I.R. 1919 Mad. 838, and B. Ramamurthy v. Thammana Gopaya, A.I.R. 1917 Mad. 892.

A writing in a sarkat or the book of the creditor by the debtor to the effect "for making your account of the sarkat I will come on 22nd November 1936 to your place and will make payments" amounts to an acknowledgment of liability to pay the amount found due on taking accounts—Pachkodi v. Krishnaji, I.L.R. 1946 Nag. 796, 1946 N.L.J. 622, A.I.R. 1947 Nag. 145. Payments made 'alal hishab' that is, on account amount to an acknowledgment—Deputy Commissioner v. Brijendra, 15 Luck. 537, 1940 O.W.N. 425, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 305.

An admission of liability coupled with a declaration as to the arrangement proposed for its satisfaction is an acknowledgment of liability—Ramaswami v. Velayutham, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 450, A.I.R. 1938 Mad 486; or with a prayer to grant time for payment; Ramchandar v. Krishnan, 1939 A.L.J. 2, A.I.R 1939 All. 179; in such a case limitation will be saved only upto the date of the letter of acknowledgment and not upto the time mentioned in the letter—Kunji v. Dwarka, I.L.R. (1945) All. 35, 1944 A.L.J. 447.

But a mere reference to arbitration with an agreement to pay whatever the arbitrators decide would be a conditional acknowledgment, and if the arbitrators fail and the plaintiff brings a case the agreement to refer to arbitration would not prevent the plaintiff's claim being barred by limitation. The defendant wrote a letter to the effect that if certain arbitrators should decide that he should pay any amount, he would immediately pay. The arbitrators failed. It was held that the letter would not operate as an acknowledgment—Ramamurthy v. Gopayya, 40 Mad. 701 (704); Narayanasami v. Gangadhara, 48 I.C. 89, 37 M.L.J. 353. (Contra—Hukumat v. Nenumal, 22 S.L.R. 117, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 45 (48). A mere reference to arbitration which is prima facie only a mode of settling disputes, and not an admission of any liability by the parties, does not import any subsisting jural relationship of debtor and creditor, and therefore does not amount to an acknowledgment—Ramamurthy v. Gopayya, 40 Mad. 701 (704). A mere submission to arbitration containing a promise to pay whatever the arbitrators decide, is not available as an acknowledgment if the arbitration proves abortive, unless the submission contains an unqualified acknowledgment of the debt—Halsbury, Vol. 19, p. 66; Banning, p. 45. But where there was a reference to arbitration and the arbitrators gave an award, the agreement to refer the matter in dispute to arbitration and the award thereon would amount to an acknowledgment of the debt—Phul Singh v Bhojraj, 49 All. 801, 102 I.C. 181, A.I.R. 1927 All. 488; and the fact that the award was subsequently set aside by the District Judge and by the High Court did not nullify the acknowledgment—See Sitayya v. Rangareadi, 10 Mad. 259. But recitals in a reference to arbitration admitting liability to pay a debt amount to sufficient acknowledgment of liability in respect of the debt so as to extend the period of limitation, even though reference may prove infructuous —Tikamdas v. Kalianji, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 693, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 113. But if such an admission is subject to a condition that the defendants would be liable only if the liability is ascertained by the arbitrators, this section does not apply—Fatechand v. Wasudeo, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 477, 1947 N.L.J. 417, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 334.

An allegation that a debt has been discharged is not an acknowledgment because it is tantamount to a denial of the debt—Rangasami v. Thangavelu, 42 Mad. 637, 10 L.W. 533, 50 I.C. 380. See also, Karamadai v. Raju, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 454, 1948

M.W.N. 743, A I.R. 1949 Mad. 401. Where the defendant writes to the plaintiff: "Out of the 2,000 pieces of sleepers supplied by you, 800 pieces are bad and are lying rejected; please arrange to remove them; and thereafter adjusting the account, let me hear about your dues, if any," the first part of the letter amounts to a denial of liability for the price of the 800 rejected sleepers; and the last part of the letter amounts to an acknowledgment of liability in respect of the price of the 1,200 sleepers accepted—Debji Ghelabhai v. R. D. Mehta & Co., 39 C.W.N. 139 (141), A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 255, 60 C.L.J. 396, 155 I C. 721. Where there was an acknowledgment that there was a mortgage, and there was no express statement that it was discharged, but there was a statement that in order to pay off the debt a sale was effected and that since the date of sale the vendees had been in possession of the property, the statement was not an acknowledgment of liability regarding the mortgage, but it rather suggested that the mortgage no longer existed—Chhaterdhari v. Nasib, 5 P.L.T. 551, 78 I.C. 919, A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 806 (807). A letter written by a railway company to the plaintiff informing the latter that the goods have been rightly delivered to a third person under an indemnity bond, and that the plaintiff's claim cannot be entertained is not an acknowledgment of liability, but on the contrary amounts to a denial of liability—Ludhomal v. Secretary of State, 13 S.L.R. 1, 51 I.C. 570. But where the defendant denied that any balance would be due to the plaintiff but admitted that accounts should be taken and that he would be liable if any balance were found due to the plaintiff, it was held that the defendant had made an acknowledgment of the debt—Sitayya v. Rangareddi, 10 Mad. 259 (265).

Where a person admitted in a previous case that he had received Rs. 1,000 as earnest money, but stated that the sum had been more than repaid by delivery of cotton of the value of Rs. 3,000, such statement cannot be construed as an admission of a subsisting liability in respect of Rs. 1,000—Kalu v. Mehru, 41 P.R. 1916, 32 I.C. 497. But where a debtor wrote a letter to the creditor enclosing a memorandum of account which showed that out of the amount of Rs. 1,654 due to the creditor, the debtor had deducted the sum of Rs. 1,489 being a sum due to the debtor from a firm of which the creditor was the manager, and remitted to the creditor Rs. 165 being the balance due, held that the mere fact that the debtor stated in the account that he had on that day appropriated a part of the amount due to the creditor in satisfaction of a claim due from a third party did not alter the fact that on the date of the letter the sum of Rs. 1654 was due from the debtor to the creditor before the alleged appropriation was made; there was therefore an acknowledgment of the whole sum of Rs. 1,654—Curlender v. Abdul Hamid, 43 All. 216 (219), 59 I.C. 941.

An oral agreement to pay damages for breach of contract does not amount to an acknowledgment—Kamal v. Bani, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 332, 75 I.C. 440; Kesri Mal v. Ganesh, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 59.

177A. Conditional and unconditional acknowledgment:—The acknowledgment of liability must be an absolutely unconditional one. If the plaintiff, a contractor, sends a bill to the defendant demanding the price of work done, and the defendant replies: "I think the bill is incorrect; there are many errors in it. I will examine the work done, and then see what, if anything, is due," such a letter is not an acknowledgment sufficient to give a fresh start—Jogeshwar v. Rajnarain, 31 Cal. 195 (200). A letter saying that the writer will sign after looking into the accounts is no acknowledgment—Bhairo v. Gajadhar, 19 C.W.N. 170, 23 I.C. 587.

Where the parties to an abichalnama acknowledged that accounts remained unadjusted which the arbitrators had to adjust, and each party agreed that he would pay such amount as might be found due from him on adjustment of accounts, it was held that there was a sufficient acknowledgment—Janardan v. Radhaballabh, 23 C.W.N. 921, 53 I.C. 898.

Where a guardian files a list of debt due by the estate of the minor in guardianship court with a note that it is difficult for him to admit the amounts due under the documents and of the correctness of the documents unless seen by him, it is not an unconditional acknowledgment of the debts mentioned therein—Sri Chand v. Lajjia, 41 P.L.R. 356, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 31.

Even if the acknowledgment be a conditional one, the condition must be fulfilled in order that such acknowledgment should save limitation—Maniram v. Seth Rup Chand, 33 Cal. 1047 (1058) (P.C.); Arunochella v. Rangiah Appa, 29 Mad. 519; Ramamurthi v. Gopayya, 40 Mad. 701 (704); Debji Ghelabhai v. R. D. Mehta & Co., 39 C.W.N. 139 (141); Sheocharan v. Chhakowri, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 616.

An acknowledgment of liability need not be express; it may be by implication—Arur Sing v. Partab, 131 P.R. 1919, 53 I.C. 425; Subba Rao v. Parasurama, 34 M.L.J. 551, 46 I.C. 973; Bhagwan v. Madhav, 46 Bom. 1000, 24 Bom.L.R. 713; but the implication must be a necessary implication, so that the acknowledgment is clear and unequivocal—Bibi Saheb v. Sayad Mir Mahamad, 9 S.L.R. 143; Filip & Co., v. Mahomedalli, 13 S.L.R. 183, 55 I.C. 822; Ralliram v. Budhuram, 17 S.L.R. 324, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 181; Hukumat v. Nenumal, 22 S.L.R. 117, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 45; Sarangdhar Singh v. Lakshmi Narayan, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 320. Where a judgment-debtor in an execution proceeding objected to his being arrested because he was a poor man and asked that the warrant of arrest should not be executed until his objection had been decided, held that there was no acknowledgment of a debt within the meaning of this section but a mere objection to the execution of the decree in the manner sought by the decree-holder. An acknowledgment must be a clear one and not be left to sheer inference—Luchman Das v. Ahmad Hassan, 39 All. 357. But a petition by the arrested judgment-debtor praying for release and for an order to pay the balance of the decretal amount is an acknowledgment of the judgmtnt-debt—Vithal v. Gopal, 5 N.L.R. 8, 1 I.C. 240. An acknowledgment must be something positive. Mere silence on the part of a party would not be enough. So that a mere omission to deny assertion of a claim cannot of itself amount to an acknowledgment sufficient for the purposes of this section—Jainabbibi v. Shankar, I.L.R. (1951) Bom. 57, 52 Bom.L.R. 858, A.I.R. 1951 Bom. 255.

In order to make a binding acknowledgment it is not necessary that the exact sum due should be stated in the acknowledgment, it being sufficient if some debt be acknowledged due—Colledge v. Horn, (1825) 3 Bing. 119; Lechmere v. Flecher, (1833) 1 Cr. & M. 623. Where the principal sum advanced on a mortgage bond was Rs. 5,700, and on payment of Rs. 1,750 by the mortgagor an endorsement was made by him on the back of the bond in the following terms: "Paid on account of principal as per separate accounts, Rs 1,750 only," held that the endorsement was a sufficient acknowledgment under this section. Although it did not specify the principal sum due at the time of the endorsement, still the expression 'the principal' must be taken to refer to the principal mentioned in the bond on the back whereof the endorsement was made—Prasanna v. Niranjan, 48 Cal. 1046, 26 C.W.N. 213, 64 I.C. 988.

177B. An acknowledgment of liability would be good, even if it is accompanied with a demand of evidence of title. Thus, the tenants wrote to the landlord's attorney: "As we have informed your client, we are quite willing to pay him the rent due under our mourasi pattah if he can shew a title to give us a good receipt for it that will satisfy our lawyers. If he is unable to produce a perfect title, we are still willing to pay him the rent on his giving us a substantial indemnity." It was held to be a sufficient acknowledgment of the tenants' liability to pay rent—Rungo Lall v. Wilson, 26 Cal. 204.

The acknowledgment must distinctly and definitely relate to the liability in respect of the right claimed—Benimadhub v. Birbal, 21 O.C. 151, 46 I.C. 813; it must be a necessary implication from the words used that the person acknowledging was referring to the distinct liability in dispute, and not any liability—Hingu v. Heramba, 13 C.L.J. 139, 8 I.C. 81; Fillip & Co. v. Mahomedalli, 13 S.L.R. 183, 55 I.C. 822; Gopal Rao v. Harilal, 9 Bom.L.R. 715; Bhagwan v. Madhav, 46 Bom. 1000, 24 Bom.L.R. 713, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 356; Official Assignee v. Natesa, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 460, 1941 M.W.N. 827, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 892. There is no necessity of a specific and direct acknowledgment of the particular liability which is sought to be enforced in the suit—Jainarain v. G. G. in Council, 4 D.L.R. (Cal.) 225. A letter sent by the defendant to the plaintiff was as follows:—"I was bound to send Rs. 30 according to my vaida (fixed time) but on account of the death of my father I have not been able to fulfil my promise. But now, on his obsequies being over, I will positively pay Rs. 30. As to whatever debts may be due by my old man, I am bound to pay the same so long as there is life in me." It was held that the letter merely contained the personal promise of the writer to pay Rs. 30 and a general admission that he was liable to pay his father's debt, but it did not acknowledge the existence of any particular debt due to the plaintiff from the defendant's deceased father—Madhavrao v. Gulabhai, 23 Bom. 177. Thus a letter written by a guardian of a succeeding shebait promising to pay any debt incurred for legal necessity by the previous shebait, does not constitute an acknowledgment of any debt as there is no acknowledgment of the right of any particular creditor and of any debt really but a qualified promise to pay off only those debts which would fulfil the requirements specified in the letter—Himanshu v. Radha, 43 C.W.N. 943. If more than one debt be due to the creditor at the time, the acknowledgment must be such as to identify the particular debt sued on, for oral evidence will not be admissible to establish the identity of the debt—Beti Maharani v. Collector, 17 All. 198 (P.C.). Evidence is admissible to show how the language used is related to the existing facts: the true meaning of the language used may be gathered from the surrounding circumstances—Durga Prosad v. Galstaun, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 194.

It is not necessary that the creditor should openly assent to an amount acknowledged by his debtor to be due to him; it is sufficient if he relies upon it in the suit he brings, and if between the date of acknowledgment and the time of bringing the suit, the creditor has allowed the acknowledgment to remain uncontradicted and unexplained by his debtor—Lalji v. Raghoonundun, 6 Cal. 447 (452).

Where a person admits the genuineness of a document he admits his liability under it. So where a prior mortgagee admits the mortgage deed in favour of a subsequent mortgagee he admits the latter to be the subsequent mortgagee and that amounts to an acknowledgment of liability—Sheo Prasad v. Parkash, 18 Luck. 601, 1942 O.W.N. 766, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 164.

It is not required that an acknowledgment should specify every legal consequence of the thing acknowledged. A simple acknowledgment by one of two joint-debtors that the original debt was a joint debt is sufficient to keep alive the right of the other to claim contribution—Sakhamoni v. Ishan Chunder, 25 Cal. 844 (851) (P.C.). So, where in a suit for the making of accunts of a dissolved partnership the plaintiff relies on an acknowledgment, all that he is required to prove is that the defendant has admitted from time to time existence of the partnership accounts between the parties and his obligation to settle such accounts. It is not necessary, for the acknowledgment to be operative, that he shuld go further and state that he was bound to pay any particular sum or such sum as may be found due by him—Hukumat v. Nenumal, 22 S.L.R. 117, A I.R. 1928 Sind 45. The plaintiff shipped 200 cases of oil on the defendant's steamship from Bombay to Jeddha. On the arrival of the steamship at Jeddah, 35 of the cases were missing and the agents of the defendant company at Jeddah granted a certificate that the 35 cases had been short delivered. Held that the certificate contained a clear acknowledgment that the 35 cases which ought to have been delivered had not been delivered; and from that followed the legal incident of the defendant's position to pay compensation in respect of non-delivery—Haji Ajam v. Bombay & Persia S. N. Co., 26 Bom. 562 (569).

178. Acknowledgment, to whom to be made:—It is not necessary that the acknowledgment of liability must be made to the person who is entitled to the right in respect of which the liability arises, or to any one through whom he claims. An acknowledgment, to whomsoever made, is a valid acknowledgment if it points with reasonable certainty to the liability under dispute—Guru Charan v. Surendra, 19 C.W.N. 263, 22 I.C. 650; Shamsud Ali v. Miriam Elias, 30 C.W.N. 968, 97 I.C. 710; Bhagwan v. Madhav, 24 Bom L.R. 713, 46 Bom. 1000; Venkata Krishniah v Subbarayadu, 40 Mad. 698; Abdul v. Von Goldstein, 43 P.R. 1910, 14 P.L.R. 1909, 4 I.C. 902; Tanner v. Smart, (1827) 6 B. & Co. 603; Halliday v. Ward, (1811) 3 Camp. 32; Moodie v. Bannister, (1859) 4 Drew. 432; Bhalchandra v. Chanbasappa, 41 Bom.L.R. 391, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 237. Thus an admission of liability in respect of a decree amounts to an acknowledgment although the admission is not made to the decree holder—Sree Narain v. Bhagwan, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 523, 44 C.W.N. 322, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 210. So also, an acknowledgment, although addressed to a dead person, operates as a valid acknowledgment of a debt—Amrit v. Baijnath, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 180, 174 I.C. 779. Similarly, a letter written by the debtor to a third person, in which he agrees to give him a lien over certain properties "now with the creditor-mortgagee as collateral security" is an acknowledgment of the existence of the equitable mortgage—Ramanatham v. Shri Dowlat, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 534, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 865. See Explanation 1.

It was held in a Calcutta case that an acknowledgment to be operative must be made to the creditor or to a person through whom he claimed or at least must be addressed to some person, though not necessarily the person entitled to the right. Therefore the recital of a debt in a conveyance, which was not addressed to any person nor was communicated to the creditors or any body on their behalf, was not a sufficient acknowledgment—Imam Ali v. Baij Nath, 33 Cal. 613, following Mylapore v. Yeo Kay, 14 Cal. 801 (P.C.). Similarly it was held in a Bombay case that an entry in the debtor's book of account was not an acknowledgment because it was not communicated or addressed to the creditor or some person—Mahalakshmi Bai v. Nageswar, 10 Bom. 71. But the authority of these rulings has been shaken by the Privy Council decision in Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand, 33 Cal. 1047 (P.C.) in which the acknowledgment was not addressed to the creditor or to any person but was contained in a petition for probate, and by another decision of the same high tribunal in Hiralal v. Narsilal, 37 Bom. 326 (P.C.) (cited below) in which the acknowledgment was contained in a certain book of the Government Agent. See Pranjivandas v. Bai Mani, 45 Bom. 934 (943), 61 I.C. 406, A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 291. "But there is a clear distinction between addressing the acknowledgment of liability to a person and acknowledging liability to a person. In order to bring his case within limitation the person who attempts to enforce his right must show that the acknowledgment of liability was in his favour though it need not have been addressed to him, as acknowledgment of liability to the person who is claiming relief may be addressed to another person. That is the effect of 14 Cal.

801 (P.C.), read with the Explanation to sec. 19, Limitation Act—Ishan Singh v. Sadhu Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 659, 38 P.L.R. 855, 165 I.C. 74.

When an acknowledgment of liability is made in favour of only one of the obligees having equal shares, the others are not entitled to the benefit of sec. 19. And in such a case (where the several obligees have equal shares in the amount) the obligee having the benefit of sec. 19 is entitled to recover his share only and not the whole amount—Ishar Singh v. Sadhu Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 659, 38 P.L.R. 855, 165 I.C. 74. It will be evident from the undernoted cases that an acknowledgment is not required to be addressed to any person, much less to the creditor or some person through whom he claims.

Thus, a deposition given and signed by a party as a witness in a suit is a sufficient acknowledgment in writing under sec. 19—Venkata v. Parthasaradhi, 16 Mad. 220; Peria Venkan v. Subramanian, 20 Mad. 239, Meghraj v. Mathura, 35 All. 437; Subramania v. Veerabhadra, 41 M.L.J. 217, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 464; so also, a written statement in a former suit and containing a distinct acknowledgment of a mortgage or debt or right will give a fresh starting point of limitation—Balmokand v. Ramji Lal, 20 P.R. 1887; Jeba v. Chaman, 16 P.R. 1891; Sriniwas v. Narhar, 32 Bom. 296; Venkataratnam v. Ramaraja, 24 Mad. 361; Kadiri Pakirappa v. Manki Husan, 19 M.L.J. 650, 3 I.C. 19; Official Assignee v. Subramania, 46 M.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 286; Indar Pal v. Mewa Singh, 36 All. 264; Ganga Sahai v. Khazan Chand, 1 Lah. 357; Balbhaddar v. Sheo Peorey, 6 O.W.N. 943, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 67 (68); Ram Autar v. Beni Singh, 25 O.C. 89, 10 O.L.J. 7, 68 I.C. 96, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 135. But where the written statement in the previous suit merely called upon the plaintiff to produce the promissory note adverted to in the plaint in that case, it was held that the written statement was insufficient to establish an acknowledgment of liability in respect of the promissory note which was the foundation of the present claim—Kapur v. Narinjan, 34 P.R. 1918, 45 I.C. 99. Where in a written statement an admission was made that the document under which the liability arose, to enforce which the suit was brought, was executed by the defendant and this was followed by a denial of liability on the ground that the claim had become barred by limitation, but subsequently the defendant stated that should the court arrive at the conclusion that the suit was maintainable proper provision should be made for compensating him, it was held that the last portion of the written statement could be construed as amounting to an acknowledgment—Lakshmi v. Abraham, A.I.R. 1951 Tra.-Co. 93. A statement contained in a plaint in a case filed by the grand-father of the mortgagee, to the effect that the property is mortgaged to him is an acknowledgment of liability in respect of the mortgagor's right to redeem—Hari Chand v. Phiraya, 180 P.L.R. 1911, 11 I.C. 377. So also, where in a suit for redemption of a mortgage the plaintiff, who was the purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property, stated in his plaint that there were other persons interested in the redemption of the property who had not joined in the suit, and that therefore he was seeking to redeem the entire mortgage making the other persons as pro forma defendants, held that this statement amounted to an acknowledgment of the right of the other co-mortgagors to redeem—Baleshar v. Ram Deo, 36 All. 408. Where a debt due on a promissory note executed by the deceased was included in the form of valuation filed with the petition for the grant of letters of administration to the estate of the deceased, held that the inclusion of the debt amounted to an acknowledgment of liability—Raja Rama v. Fakruddin, 53 Mad. 480, 58 M.L.J. 210, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 218, 122 I.C. 504.

An admission of liability contained in a deed of gift executed by the debtor in favour of his son is a valid acknowledgment—Aijaz Husain v. Ram Sarup, 7 O.W.N. 1195, 130 I.C. 347, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 54 (56). A statement contained in a Kobala that a certain mortgage on some of the properties comprised in the Kobala is still subsisting has the effect of an acknowledgment so as to create a new period of limitation —Azizur v. Ram Chandra, 91 I.C. 461, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 693 or the recital that the property is conveyed as part payment towards the principal amount due to the vendee on an earlier mortgage and the executant admits the execution of the same before the Registrar amounts to an acknowledgment of the mortgage—Balasubramania v. Manicka, 1938 M W.N. 113, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 429. An entry in the wajib-ul-arz in which the mortgagee stated the amount of the mortgage, the names of the parties, the property mortgaged and the terms of redemption of the mortgage, is an acknowledgment in respect of the mortgagor's right to redeem—Kamala Devi v. Gurdayal, 17 A.L.J. 330, 51 I.C. 283 (284); Anup Singh v. Fateh Chand, 42 All. 575 (580) (F.B.); Sheo Prasad v. Rama Kant, 1948 O W.N. 87, A.I.R. 1918 Oudh 257. A statement mentioning the mortgage in a pedigree of the co-sharers of the village which was the subject of the mortgage, signed by the mortgagees, and an entry in the village wajib-ul-arz signed by them and duly verified before a Settlement Officer, are valid acknowledgments so as to give a fresh period of limitation in respect of the mortgagor's suit for redemption —Suraj Baksh v. Ganga Baksh, 4 O.W.N. 882, 105 I.C. 93, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 457. But see Gur Saran v. Shib Singh, I L.R. (1944) All 76, 1943 A.L.J. 548, A.I.R. 1943 All. 393 (F.B.), where it has been held that entries in the khewat did not amount to acknowledgment at all as there was no conscious acknowledgment in the sense that it was present to the mind of the mortgagees or their representatives that they were acknowledging a subsisting and enforceable liability against themselves. The onus of proving that the acknowledgment was made within sixty years of the mortgage is on the mortgagee —Gur Saran v. Shib Singh, supra; Bharat v. Des Raj, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 157. An attestation in the settlement records signed by the agent of the mortgagee in which the name of the mortgagee and the property mortgaged are mentioned, is an acknowledgment of the mortgagor's right to redeem—Bhagwan Das v Said Muhammad, 14 Lah. 587, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 345 (346). Where a certain desaigiri dastur having been mortgaged on 4th November 1793, the mortgagees procured the entry of their names in the Collector's books as mortgagees, and on 8th June 1843, an entry of payment to the mortgagees of their respective shares of the allowance was made in the books of the Government Agent entrusted with the payment thereof, and the mortgagees signed their names against it acknowledging receipt of their shares, held that a new period of limitation started from the date of the acknowledgment and a suit for redemption brought in 1901 was in time—Hiralal v. Narsilal, 37 Bom. 326 (P.C.). Certain lands were mortgaged with possession in 1826. Government issued sanads to the holders of the lands in 1865 and 1876. These sanads were entered in a register where the mortgagee was described as holding the lands as mortgagee, and the entries were signed by the mortgagee. On the death of the mortgagee a similar sanad was granted to his widow in 1882, and was similarly entered in the register and signed by the widow. The mortgagor having sued for redemption in 1917, held that the registers having the signatures of the mortgagee and his widow were acknowledgments of the mortgagee's liability to be redeemed by the mortgagor and consequently the suit was not barred—Pranjivan Das v. Bai Mani, 45 Bom. 934 (dissenting from Imam Ali v. Baijnath, 33 Cal 613).

An acknowledgment contained in the will of the deceased mortgagee who thereby devised to his son certain lands therein described as held by him on kanom, although the mortgagor's name was not mentioned nor the date of the kanom, nor was there any further description of the lands, was held to constitute a sufficient acknowledgment—Uppi v. Mammavan, 16 Mad. 366. Where the defendants attested as correct the record of rights prepared at a settlement with them of an estate in which they were described as mortgagees, but which did not mention the name of the mortgagor, it was held that there was an acknowledgment of the mortgagor's right to redeem —Daia Chand v. Sarfraz, 1 All. 117 (F.B.). Where a mortgagee sold his right in the mortgaged property, and in the deed he stated that he was holding the property as a mortgagee under a mortgage-deed dated 11th June 1849, held that the statement in the sale-deed was an acknowledgment which extended the time for the purpose of redemption—Har Narayan v. Sheo Prasad, 11 A.L.J. 86, 18 I.C. 95.

If the insolvent writes down a debt in his schedule as owing the debt to a named person and signs the schedule, it would operate as an acknowledgment under this section —Shrigopal v. Dhanalal, 35 Bom. 383; Chettyar Firm v. Munnee, 6 Rang. 533, A.I.R. 1928 Rang. 326 (327), 117 I.C. 570; Rampal v. Nand Lal, 16 C.W.N. 346, 13 I.C. 603; Sakala Rattam v. Musalayya, 38 L.W. 204, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 565, 143 I.C. 681, Velayudha v. Annamalai, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 298, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 215. So also, the mention of a decree-debt in a statement made by the insolvent in an examination for ascertaining his assets and liabilities, without any further mention of any payment towards its discharge amounts to an implied admission that the liability under the decree is then subsisting—Sakala Rattam v. Musalayya, supra.

An acknowledgment of the debt in an application before a Debt Conciliation Board, if made before the period of limitation expires, will extend the period of limitation for a suit in respect of the debt—Jawanmal v. Akaji, I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 761, 1940 N.L.J. 217, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 214; Ghansiam v. Girija, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 244, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 247; Bhalchandra v. Britilal, I.L.R. 1946 Nag. 493, 1946 N.L.J. 368, A.I.R. 1946 Nag 344. But an entry in a "list of reliance," viz., a list of documents filed in a suit which the party relies on, is not an acknowledgment; Tapi v. Shankertal, 1939 N.L.J. 109, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 113; I.L.R. (1941) Nag. 222.

Under the English law, an acknowledgment to a stranger is inoperative—Stamford v. Smith, [1892] 1 Q.B. 765; Rogers v. Quinn, 26 L.R. Ir. 136.

179. Other instances of acknowledgment:—Where before a debt became barred by limitation the creditor granted an extension of time on the written application of the debtor praying for extension, the written application amounted to an acknowledgment—Sugappa v Gobindappa, 12 M.L.J. 351. A mortgagor subsequent to his mortgage executed two promissory notes in favour of the mortgagee; in one of these notes he referred to the mortgage-debt thus: "the amount due under the mortgage-deed is set apart;" in another he wrote "besides this, the mortgage-debt is distinct." These notes would constitute sufficient acknowledgment of the mortgage Dinkar v. Chhaganlal, 38 Bom. 177. An acknowledgment which is valid in other respects cannot be inoperative simply because it contains a wrong date in respect of the debt, e.g., where it refers to a mortgage of 1842, although it is found that the mortgage was that of a date earlier than 1842 -Dip Singh v. Girand, 26 All. 313. See also Har Narain v. Sheo Prosad, 11 A.L.J. 86, 18 I.C. 95. In a suit upon a joint and several bond brought against the defendant as a principal debtor, an acknowledgment of liability made by him as surety only is sufficient to save limitation—Uncovenanted Service Bank v. Grant, 10 All. 93.

A hatchitta is an acknowledgment within the meaning of this section—Mahendra Nath v. Lalit Mohan, 46 Cal. 746. A muzukhata (i.e., account stated, being the totalling up of the items of an account adding interest and acknowledging their correctness) signed by the debtor and made within the period of limitation is an acknowledgment—Chunilal v. Laxman, 46 Bom. 24 (26), A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 183, 23 Bom.L.R. 606.

Where a document says "the money was received from you, and I have purchased shares for you but I have handed over to another person," in spite of the words

"without prejudice" it is an acknowledgment of liability—Commercial Enterprises v. Madan, A.I.R. 1951 Hyder. 47.

When a person borrows a sum of money and executes a promissory note, he executes it for the consideration received by him, and when it is executed in respect of a consideration already passed, it is an acknowledgment of the liability to pay the amount mentioned in the note. Even though the promissory note cannot be enforced for some cause (e.g., as offending against sec. 26 of the Paper Currency Act) it can nevertheless be used as evidence of an acknowledgment of liability—Kesavaramayya v. Venkataratnam, 50 M.L.J. 36, 92 I.C. 626, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 452; Nachimutha v. Audiappa, 1917 M.W.N. 778, 42 I.C. 706, 6 L.W. 630.

Renewed promissory notes operate as acknowledgment of liability in respect of the loan—Sridhar v. Jahor, 49 C.W.N. 37, A.I.R. 1945 Cal 268; where in renewal of an old debt a promissory note and a receipt are executed and the promissory note is found to be inadmissible owing to insufficiency of stamp the receipt can be relied upon as an acknowledgment of liability—Sunder v. Nanhu, 18 Luck. 191, 1942 O.W.N. 343, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh. 388. So also where a receipt acknowledges not only the consideration of the promissory note of even date but further acknowledges that an earlier promissory note in respect of the liability under which the new pronote is executed, it must be taken to have the effect of acknowledging the liability under the earlier loan —Pirdin v. Ramcharan, 1943 O.W.N. 483, 211 I.C. 146. The endorsement of cancellation of a prior promissory note at the time of execution of fresh promissory note for the amount due under the earlier one amounts to an acknowledgment—Kondamma v. Venkatarayudu, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 846, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 34.

Admission of liability under earlier mortgage in later mortgage replacing earlier one amounts to acknowledgment; Ram Narain v. Nawab, I.L.R. (1946) All. 375, 1946 A.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1947 All. 214.

A sub-mortgage made by the mortgagee is an acknowledgment of liability, i.e., it is an acknowledgment that the property at the date of the sub-mortgage is still held by him as mortgagee, and gives the mortgagor an extended period in respect of his right of redemption—Motilal v. Samal, 54 Bom. 625, 32 Bom.L.R. 1096, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 466 (474); Bachu v. Jang Bahadur, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 427, 180 I.C 795; Arjon v. Gurdial, A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu 52.

180. Acknowledgment when not valid:—An acknowledgment made by a person under legal disability is not valid, e.g., an acknowledgment given by a minor—Aniz-ul-Reman v. Beni Ram, 59 P.R. 1901.

An acknowledgment not coming directly from the debtor himself but merely deduced as an inference from the tenor of a series of letters is not a proper acknowledgment. There must be some principal writing of a particular date (from which the new period of limitation is to run) which can be relied on by itself. A series of letters in none of which there is a definite acknowledgment of the debt is not sufficient —Rogers v. Montriou, 6 B.L.R. 550. An acknowledgment of a different kind of liability is not sufficient to save limitation. Thus, an admission made by a tenant that he held the land as a mulgaini (permanent) tenant at a lighter rent is not an acknowledgment entitling the landlord to recover rent from the defendant as a chalgaini tenant (tenant from year to year)—Venkataramana v. Srinivasa, 6 Mad. 182. The acceptance of a sale-certificate by the purchaser of a mortgagee's interest in land, sold in satisfaction of a decree against him, is not an acknowledgment by the purchaser of the title of the mortgagor, so as to give him a fresh starting point for a new period within which he can redeem—Raman v. Krishna, 6 Mad. 325 (327). Where the defendants in the present partition suit had made in a written statement filed by them in a previous suit the following statement, viz., "proper parties have not been joined in this suit, since A and S left a sister B who died after them. It is necessary to join her heirs in the suit;" it was held that the above words were not an admission that B's heirs had a share in the estate—Bibi Saheb v. Syed Mir Mahmmad, 9 S.L.R. 143, 32 I.C. 548.

An acknowledgment of liability contained in a communication made to a public officer in official confidence cannot be relied upon, since that communication is inadmissible in evidence under the provisions of sec. 124, Evidence Act. Thus, in a suit on a mortgage bond, the mortgagee cannot rely upon a letter written by the mortgagor to the Collector, in which the mortgagor had mentioned the mortgage and had stated that he was financially embarrassed and desired the Court of Wards to take charge of his estate. Such a statement is made soley with the purpose of giving information to the Court of Wards on the strength of which the Court of Wards may decide whether or not the estate should be taken over; such a communication made to the Collector in official confidence cannot be made public property and cannot be relied upon by the creditor as an acknowledgment of liability—Collector v. Jamna Prasad, 44 All. 360 (366), 20 A.L.J. 140.

The delivery of a hundi and a cheque which are dishonoured on presentation does not amount to an acknowledgment—Padma Lochan v. Girish Chandra, 46 Cal. 168 (170). But where the hundi (which was given and dishonoured) was accompanied by a letter of the defendant acknowledging his liability on the hundi, there was a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt—Raman v. Vairavan, 7 Mad. 392.

An oral acknowledgment of a debt is not valid. This section requires the acknowledgment to be in writing—Ghasita v. Sultan, 93 P.R. 1911, 11 I.C. 445.

181. Signing:—An acknowledgment without signature is no acknowledgment —Jaggi v. Sri Ram, 34 All. 464. Thus an acknowledgment of a debt by adjustment of accounts by the manager of a Hindu joint family without signature does not save limitation; Nagarmal v. Bajranglal, A.I.R. 1950 P.C. 15. An admission of a debt in a draft will written by the testator in the first line of which his name appeared but which was not signed by him, did not constitute an acknowledgment under this section —Ramasami v. Muttusami, 15 Mad. 380. Entries in the debtor's account books not signed cannot be treated as an acknowledgment—Palaniappa v. Veerappa, 41 Mad. 446, 34 M.L.J. 41. A deposition made by the defendant in another suit but neither signed by him nor by his authorised agent does not amount to a proper acknowledgment—Kapur v. Narinjan, 1918 P.R. 34, 45 I.C. 99.

Signature need not necessarily be by writing one's name. Making his mark by an illiterate debtor is sufficient—Bheemangowada v. Eeranah, 7 M.H.C.R. 358; Jamna v. Jaga, 28 Bom. 262. Under section 3 (52) of the General Clauses Act, "Sign should, with reference to a person who is unable to write his name, include his mark."

Signature by initials is not valid, and an acknowledgment merely bearing initials instead of full signature is not proper—Lakshmanachayulu v. Venkataramamuja, 51 M.L.J. 414, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 827, 96 I.C. 700, a case of doubtful authority. Initials are equivalent to signature—Langoju v. Venkataratnam, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 555, 68 M.L.J. 623, 1935 M.W.N. 490, 41 L.W. 744, 156 I.C. 449, 59 Mad. 72; Raja of Tarla v. Ramarao, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 927, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 242, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 680; Menakshi v. Subramanian, A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 8.

It does not matter in what part of the document—at the top or at the bottom—the signature is placed, provided the signature is introduced into the document with a view to authenticate it—Mahalakshmibai v. Nageswar, 10 Bom. 71; Mathura v.

Babu, 1 All. 683 (686); Mohesh Lal v. Busunt, 6 Cal. 340; Onkarlal v. Raj Mohamud, 17 N.L.R. 209, A.I.R. 1921 Nag. 1. If there is a particular custom of signing among the class or community to which the defendant belongs, and if the defendant signs according to that custom, that would be a sufficient signature. For instance, where a certain letter contained certain specified words in the handwriting of the defendant at the top and the bottom, and the evidence showed that among the community to which the defendant belonged, this was the usual custom of signing letters and informal documents, it was held that the writing of the specified words amounted to "signing" —Gangadhar v. Shidramapa, 18 Bom. 586. So also, according to the custom and practice of Natukottai Chetties, who do not sign their letters at the foot but begin by saying that the letters is from such and such a firm, the name so written is a sufficient signature—Muthia v. Kuttayan, 1918 M.W.N. 42, 44 I.C. 20. Where in a hatchita, which represented the account between the defendant and the plaintiff, the defendant's name was entered at the top of the entries on the debit side which were admittedly written by the defendant, and he wrote the words likhitang khode (written by itself) at the bottom of the entries, it was held that this was the mode adopted by the debtor of "signing" the hatchita—Sadasook v. Baikanta, 31 Cal. 1043. But where in a suit to recover money based on a khata entry made by the defendant himself in course of his employment as Munim there was nothing in the entry to indicate that it was authenticated by the defendant or that it was made by him with a view to admit his liability and the entry was not signed by him, it was held that the entry could not be treated as an acknowledgment within the meaning of this section—Rajmal v. Phulchand, A.I.R. 1957 M.P. 237. The name of a firm in the heading of a letter written in the course of business is a sufficient signature—Uma Shankar v. Gobind, 46 All. 892, 22 A.L.J. 807, A.I.R. 1924 All. 855; Het Ram v. Subhag, 16 Luck. 727, 1941 O.W.N. 527, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 376. Hence where a partner makes an acknowledgment in the name of the firm but does not sign it, it is a valid acknowledgment on behalf of the firm—Het Ram v. Subhag, supra.

Where an agent duly authorised in that behalf writes an acknowledgment and then affixes thereto the name of the principal by impressing it with a rubber stamp, such affixation of the name of the principal amounts to signing within the meaning of sec. 19—Vellayappa v. Somasundaram, 13 Rang. 322; A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 160; 156 I.C. 589 If the debtor's name is introduced into the document of acknowledgment in such a way as to show that the acknowledgment was intended to be his own, the name, whether written or printed would constitute his signature under this section. It is not necessary that the debtor's name should be written by himself. It is sufficient if it is written by a person acting with authority to write his name and to acknowledge the debt in question—Ramjan v. Khawja Meer Ahme, 18 Pat. 715, 20 Pat.L.T. 927, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 6.

Rajahs, Maharajas and great Zemindars often sign without any name. They simply put down the words "Sree" or "Maharaja" or the name of the place (e.g., Burdwan, Nuddia); such a signature is sufficient. See Gunee Biswas v. Sreegopal, 8 W.R 395.

Where an illiterate defendant merely touched a pen and asked another person to write his name, this was held to be a sufficient signature—Krishnachar v. Vadichi, 6 M.L.J. 209; Rajani v. Digindra, 36 C.W.N. 188 (189), 137 I.C. 788, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 440. A balance of account was written by a person at the request of an illiterate debtor in the debtor's name and signed by the writer in his own name; it was held to be a sufficient acknowledgment—Hem Chand v. Vohora, 7 Bom. 515. Where S, a debtor, while making payment, touched a pen and passed it on to scribe who wrote that "S paid Re. 1," adding his signature as scribe, which was followed by the signature of an attestor, it was held that the endorsement in question was not signed by the person making the payment within the meaning of sec. 20—Karuppayya Thevar v. Subbayya Thevar, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 1047, 1935 M.W.N. 1082, 42 L.W. 644, 159 I.C. 158 (A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 440, dist.).

Where the whole of an account stated (khata) was written by the debtor himself with the introduction of his name at the top of the entry, the khata was held to be sufficiently signed within the meaning of this section—Jekisan v. Bhowsar, 5 Bom. 89; Holmes v. Mackrell, (1858) 3 C.B. (N.S.) 789.

182. Signing by agent:—See Explanation II. For the purposes of this section, the writing containing the acknowledgment need not be signed by the debtor himself; it would be sufficient if the signature is that of an authorised agent—Muthiah v. Kuttayan, 1918 M.W.N. 42, 43 I.C. 20. The person authorised to give the acknowledgment may sign his name or that of his principal—Onkarlal v. Mohamud, 17 N.L.R. 209, A.I.R. 1921 Nag. 1. Where the name of the mortgagor appeared in a document in the handwriting of another person, and there was nothing to show that that person was authorised to sign the name of the mortgagor, the document was held not to be validly 'signed'—Gokul v. Saheb, 15 A.L.J. 121, 38 I.C. 162.

As to who is an agent duly authorised, see Note No. 190 infra.

183. Acknowledgment by person having no interest in the property: —The acknowledgment must be made by a person who has personal liability to pay—Madan v. Damodar, 2 D.L.R. 796. According to the Allahabad High Court, section 19 does not require that the person making the acknowledgment of liability in respect of any property should have an interest in the property at the time when the acknowledgment is given. It is sufficient if the acknowledgment has been made by the person against whom the right is claimed—Jugul Kishori v. Fakhruddin, 29 All. 90. In this case the plaintiff brought a suit in 1903 for possession of a house which he purchased at an execution sale in 1890, and in order to save limitation he relied on an admission made by the defendant in a suit for pre-emption brought by the latter against the plaintiff in 1892. In that suit the defendant admitted that the plaintiff purchased the house at an execution sale. The lower Court held that the admission was insufficient to save limitation, because the defendant when he made the admission had no interest in the property, his father being then alive. The High Court held that under section 19 the question does not arise as to whether the defendant had any interest in the house when he made the admission; all that this section requires is that an admission was made by the person against whom the right is claimed; and that is sufficient to save limitation. The same view has been taken in Fakir v. Narmada, I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 701, 45 Bom.L.R. 831, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 461. The Calcutta and Madras High Courts support this view by holding that an acknowledgment made by a mortgagor after he has assigned one of the mortgaged properties is sufficient to keep alive the mortgage-debt against the assignee and against the property assigned—Krishna Chandra v. Bhairab Chandra, 32 Cal. 1077 (1080); Muthu v. Muthuswami, 55 Mad. 758, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 516 (518); Umesh Chandra v. Hemanga, 36 C.W.N. 1138 (1141). The same view has been adopted in Skinner v. Bank of Upper India Ltd., A.I.R 1937 Lah. 507. The Madras High Court has held in Pavaji v. Panalivela, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 872, 1940 M.W.N. 448, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 470, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 766 (F.B.) that payment of a small amount after assignment of equity of redemption and loss of personal remedy against the mortgagor does not save limitation. An acknowledgment by the mortgagor in the subsequent mortgage of the previous mortgage does not extend the period of limitation as the acknowledgment is not made by the person against whom the liability is sought to be enforced, viz., the mortgagee—

Mohammad Khan v Salim, 1951 A.L.J. 174, A.I.R. 1951 All. 392. In England, however, an acknowledgment signed by the mortgagor after the assignment of the mortgaged property will not give the mortgagee a fresh period against the assignee—Newbould v. Smith, (1886) 43 Ch. D. 127. This rule of English law has not been followed in Krishna Chandra v Bhairab Chandra, supra,and Domilal v. Roshan, 33 Cal. 1278. The case of Surjiram v. Berhamdeo, 1 C.L.J. 337 was distinguished or dissented from in the above cases. The Oudh Chief Court is of opinion that an acknowledgment of liability or right presupposes an acknowledgment by a person possessed of some interest which can be bound by the acknowledgment. If the person acknowledging has no interest whatsoever, then such acknowledgment would not have the legal quality of an acknowledgment and can therefore be of no consequence. Therefore, a mortgagor cannot extend limitation against a puisne mortgagee by making an acknowledgment of a prior mortgage after he has parted with the equity of redemption—Amir Mirza v. Lachhmi Narain, 7 Luck. 270, 8 O.W.N. 1160, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 1 (5), 138 I.C. 800. The difference of opinion has been set at rest by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Bank of Upper India Ltd. v. Skinner, I.L.R. (1942) Lah. 686, 76 C.L.J. 447, I.L.R. (1942) All. 660, 47 C.W.N. 43, 1942 A.L.J. 648, 1942 O.W.N. 604, A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 67, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 559 (P.C.) and in Skinner v. Bank of Upper India Ltd., A.I.R. (1942) Lah. 684, 47 C.W.N. 46, where it has been held that an acknowledgment made by a mortgagor after he had parted with all his interest in the mortgaged property to a purchaser does not bind the latter. Following these cases the Madras High Court has held that an acknowledgment of liability by the mortgagor will not bind the assignee, who has prior to such acknowledgment, acquired an interest in the property mortgaged although the mortgagor is, at the time of making the acknowledgment, possessed of some interest or other in the property mortgaged—Naranappa v. Ramalingam, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 13, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 553. See also Kunchi Pillai v. Sunny Rebella, A.I.R. 1953 T.C. 196 (F.B.) and Chacko v. Thuppan, A.I.R. 1954 T.C. 311.

"Through whom he derives title or liability" :—This section allows an acknowledgment to be made not only by the person against whom the right is claimed, but also by "some person through whom he derives title or liability." This derivation of title is a matter quite independent of the making of an acknowledgment. A subsequent mortgagee derives title or liability from the mortgagor, irrespective of the fact whether the second mortgage was made before or after the acknowledgment. Therefore, an acknowledgment by the mortgagor can be used against a subsequent mortgagee as giving a fresh period of limitation in favour of the prior mortgagee—Amir Mirza v. Lachhmi Narain, 7 Luck. 370, 8 O.W.N. 1160 A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 1 (5), 138 I.C. 800; Ramlagam v. Ram Bilochan, 1941 P.W.N. 667, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 166, where it has been held that to confine the word "acknowledgment" to an acknowledgment made prior to transfer or mortgage would be to add to or alter the language of the section. A contrary view has been taken in Radhakisan v. Babu Hazari, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 383, 1944 N.L.J. 229, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 163 (F.B.); Ram Narain v. Nawab Singh, I.L.R. (1946) All. 375, 1946 A.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1947 All. 214 where it has been held that a subsequent mortgagee is not bound by such an acknowledgment. This principle applies even where the mortgagor giving the acknowledgment has retained some scintilla of interest in the form of an equity of redemption—Munshilal v. Hiralal, I.L.R. 1947 All. 11, 1947 A.L.J. 129, A.I.R. 1947 All. 74 (F.B.). An acknowledgment made by the mortgagor after he had assigned one of the mortgaged properties, is sufficient to keep alive the mortgage-debt against the assignee and against the property assigned, because the acknowledgment, was made by a person through whom the assignee derived his title or liability within the meaning of this section—Krishna Chandra v. Bhairab, 32 Cal. 1077 (1080), Muthu v. Muthuswami, supra; Skinner v. Bank of Upper India Ltd., A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 507; Madhugiri v. Nandigam, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 899; Ram Sarup

v. Bhagwati, A.I.R. 1936 All. 636; Halsnad v. Mahabala, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 826. These cases are no longer good in view of the decision of the Judicial Committee in Bank of Upper India Ltd. v. Skinner, supra.

184. Unstamped or insufficiently stamped acknowledgement:— An unstamped acknowledgment (within Article 1, Schedule I, Stamp Act) cannot be given in evidence for any purpose including the purpose of saving limitation—Mulji v. Lingu, 21 Bom. 201 (F.B.) (overruling Fatechand v. Kishan, 18 Bom. 614); Galstaun v. Hutchinson, 39 Cal. 789, 16 C.W.N. 945; Nagappa v. V. A. A. R. Firm, 49 M.L.J. 306, A.I R. 1925 Mad. 1215, 91 I.C. 494; Jogendra v. Sachindra, 63 Cal. 813, 40 C.W.N. 399; Penatapati v. Narayamurthi, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 75, 46 M.L.W. 692.

But an acknowledgment which is merely intended to acknowledge the correctness of an account is not one requiring to be stamped under the Stamp Act—Magham v. Vangala Narasimha, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 939. A document containing an admission of liability, such as a letter reciting a settlement of accounts will save limitation under this section, though not stamped—Tilak Chand v. Ram Kisan, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 695, 20 N.L.J. 276, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 51. There is no law requiring an acknowledgment of liability for the purpose of saving limitation to be stamped. The reason is that such a signature is not evidence of debt of which there is already evidence in the account book or in any other writing—Sambasiva v. Venkata, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 543, 1949 M.W N. 680. For an acknowledgment to come under Art. 1, Stamp Act, it is necessary that it should have been made in order to supply evidence of the debt—Satgurnath v. Brahmadatt, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 391; Tilak Chand v. Ram Kisan, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 695, 20 N.L.J. 276, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 51. An unconditional acknowledgment, implying a promise to pay, if unstamped is admissible in evidence on payment of penalty—Munnalal v. Damodar, A.I R. 1951 M.B. 78.

If the original debt cannot be proved, and a subsequently executed pro-note which contains an acknowledgment of the debt is insufficiently stamped, neither the original debt nor the acknowledgment can be enforced. The acknowledgment cannot be enforced by reason of the pro-note being insufficiently stamped, and the creditor cannot fall back upon the original debt because there is no evidence in proof of it—Janaka v. Sheo Charan, 7 Luck. 313, 8 O.W.N. 1210, 135 I.C. 390, A.I R. 1932 Oudh 49 (50); Jogendra v. Sachindra, 63 Cal. 813, 40 C.W.N. 399; Penatapati v. Narayamurthi, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 75, 46 M.L.W. 622. But where in respect of a liability under an earlier pro-note a fresh pro-note was executed which was insufficiently stamped, but there was an endorsement on the earlier note to the effect that in lieu of the earlier note a second pro-note was executed and the former thereby became void, and the later note being insufficiently stamped and unenforceable the plaintiff consequently sued on the earlier note, it was held that the endorsement on the earlier note was a valid acknowledgment so as to save limitation—Saling Ram v. Radhay Shiam, 1931 A.L.J. 522, 134 I.C. 254, A.I.R. 1931 All. 560 (562). See Ambika v. Jagdeo, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 387. Where an insufficiently stamped promissory note contains an admission of liability, its admission is not precluded by sec. 35 of the Stamp Act, if it is merely intended to prove that the debtor made an admission of liability to pay on that date. If the creditor derives his right to recover the money not from the document itself but from the Limitation Act in consequence of the admission of liability simpliciter contained in the document, sec. 35 of the Stamp Act has no application. Such a document can be used for the purpose of extending limitation under this section—Sudamsa v. Kisanrao, 1938 N.L.J. 145, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 294.

185. Unregistered acknowledgment:—Though a compulsorily registrable but unregistered document relating to land is inadmissible in evidence in respect of any question as to the land covered by it, it would nevertheless be good evidence between the parties for any other purpose, e.g., as an acknowledgment of a debt recited in it, so as to give a fresh starting point of limitation—Nundo v. Ramsookhee, 5 Cal. 215; Mugniram v. Gurmukh, 26 Cal. 334; Chuhar v. Wazira, 17 P.R. 1881; Syad Muhammad v. Jaisukh, 88 P.R. 1880; Khushal v. Behari, 3 All. 523; Kubra v. Lalji. 20 O.C. 13, 38 I.C. 582. Thus an unregistered mortgage-deed may be accepted as an acknowledgment of the simple debt, though it cannot be received as evidence of a transaction affecting the real property—Syad Muhammad v. Jaisukh, 88 P.R. 1880; Chuhar v. Wazira, 17 P.R. 1881.

An unregistered document, registration of which is compulsory, can be used for the collateral purpose of proving acknowledgment of liability for the purpose of extending time under sec. 19, Limitation Act, and also in order to establish part-payment of the amount due—Shanti Lal v. Lyallpur Bank Ld. (in liquidation), Lahore, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 276.

In a Bombay case, where a document executed by the defendant spoke of the plaintiff as the proprietor of certain lands above Rs. 100 in value, and mentioned the fact of his (defendant's) having come into possession, it was held that this document when used as an acknowledgment of the plaintiff's title to the lands was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration, as it declared a title to the property and was therefore compulsorily registrable (under sec. 17 of the Registration Act)—Faki v. Khotu, 4 Bom. 590. But this decision has been overruled by the Privy Council in Bageshwari v. Jagarnath, 11 Pat. 272 (P.C.), 36 C.W.N. 250 (257), 136 I.C. 798, A.I.R. 1932 P.C. 55, where their Lordships pointed out that a document which merely acknowledges a title is a mere recital of a fact of title and does not 'declare' or 'create' a title within the meaning of sec. 17 (1) (b) of the Registration Act, and does not require registration. An acknowledgment of liability in respect of a charge under sec. 55 (4) (b) of the Transfer of Property Act does not of itself create any title or right in the owner which would attract the provisions of sec. 17 (1) of the Registration Act, but is a mere statement, an admission of an existing fact and as such no registration is necessary—Parasram v. Punamchand, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 541, 1942 N.L.J. 412, A.I.R. 1942 Nag. 102.

186. Effect of acknowledgment:—The acknowledgment of a debt does not alter the quality of the debt and does not create a new debt—Kamal v. Krishna, 10 C.L.J. 517, 3 I.C. 34. Thus, the acknowledgment does not entitle the creditor to claim interest at a higher rate than that which was prevailing up to the date of acknowledgment—Tanjore Ramchandra v. Vellyanandan, 14 Mad. 258 (P.C.).

An acknowledgment of a mortgage-debt is good not only as against the person acknowledging, but also as against those deriving title under him even prior to the date of acknowledgment and subsequent to the debt acknowledged—Velayudu v. Narasimha, 32 M.L.J. 263 38 I.C. 240. But an acknowledgment of liability made by one of the heirs of the debtor can be used only against the person acknowledging but not against all the heirs of the debtor—Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamna Prasad, 44 All. 360 (367), 20 A.L.J. 140, 66 I.C. 171; Raja Rama v. Fakruddin, 53 Mad. 480, 58 M.L.J. 210, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 218, 122 I.C. 504; Hakim Sayid Fida v. Bhuneshwari, 20 Pat. 770, 23 Pat.L.T. 431, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 73.

If a person admits a right, it is a necessary implication that he also admits the legal consequences of that right. Therefore, where a person admits that the land of which he is in possession belongs to another, he admits that he is liable to restore the land to that other—Guru Charan v. Surendra, 19 C.W.N. 263. 22 I.C. 650. An acknowledgment of a current account implies an acknowledgment to have accounts settled and implies a promise to pay, should the balance turn out to be against the person making it—Bengal National Bank v. Jatindra, 56 Cal 556, 33 C.W.N. 412 (415). Where the defendant stated that for the last five years he had open and current account with the plaintiff's predecessor, the legal consequence would be that either of the parties had a right against the other to an account; it followed equally that whoever on the account should be shown to be the debtor to the other was bound to pay his debt to the other, and the inevitable deduction from the admission is that the defendant acknowledged his liability to pay his debt to the plaintiff, if the balance should be ascertained to be against him—Maniram Seth v. Seth Rup Chand, 33 Cal. 1047 (1057) (P.C.). Where a mortgagor describes his mortgagee as such and the latter admits in writings over his signature the correctness of the description, it is a necessary implication from the admission that the mortgagee acknowledges all the legal consequences of his position, one of which is his liability to be redeemed—Sheikh Mahomed v. Jamaluddin, 10 Bom.L.R. 385; Ahmad Haji v Mayan, 57 M.L.J. 789, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 65. An acknowledgment by a mortgagor of his liability under the mortgage carries with it an admission of all the remedies to which the mortgagee might be entitled under it—Thakur Basant Singh v. Thakur Rampal, 6 O.L.J. 248, 51 I.C. 985; Ram Ahtar v. Beni Singh, 25 O.C. 89, 68 I.C. 196.

An acknowledgment of the sub-mortgage, made by the sub-mortgagee does not involve an acknowledgment of the original mortgage and therefore it will not operate to extend the period of limitation for a suit for redemption brought by the original mortgagor against the original mortgagee—Bhagwan Ganpati v. Madhav Shankar, 46 Bom. 1000, 24 Bom.L.R. 713, 70 I.C. 906. But where the sub-mortgagee in submitting a list of the properties to be sold in execution of a decree obtained by him against his mortgagor (the original mortgagee) had described the property as subject to the original mortgage, held that the description amounted to an acknowledgment and saved limitation as against him in a suit brought by the original mortgagor to redeem the original mortgage—Sanwal Das v. Sayid, A.I.R. 1925 All. 174, 85 I.C. 330. The admission of liability to pay interest under the mortgage amounts to an acknowledgment of liability under the mortgage, including liability to give possession to the mortgagee under the terms of the mortgage—Anant Ram v. Inayat Ali, 2 Lah.L.J. 549 But an acknowledgment of liability in respect of the amount due as principal does not involve the admission to pay interest—Fillip & Co. v. Mahomedalli, 55 I.C. 822. An admission that a certain person has purchased the property is not an admission that that party has acquired a good title in the property, for it is quite consistent with an assertion that the purchase was bad in law, and did not operate to confer any title on the alleged purchaser—Imbad Ali v. Nandkumar, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 473, 88 I.C 478. An admission that a certain person has recovered judgment in an action of ejectment is not an admission of title, for it is quite consistent with an assertion that the judgment in ejectment was wrong and that the person had no title at all—Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 19, p. 132.

An unconditional acknowledgment has always been held to imply a promise to pay, because that is the natural inference, if nothing is said to the contrary. It is what every honest man would mean to do—Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand, 33 Cal. 1047 (P.C.), 33 I.A. 165; Hiralal v. Badkulal, 1953 S.C.R. 758, 1953 S.C.J. 315, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 225.

Where the vendee of immovable property executes a promissory note to the vendor for the balance of the sale price due to the vendor, acknowledgment of liability evidenced by endorsement made on the promissory note cannot be treated as acknowledgment of liability in respect of the vendor's lien for the portion of the purchase money which is due so as to save limitation to file a suit to enforce claim on the lien as against the immoveable property. The reason is that the remedies, though flowing out of the same transaction, are distinct and separate in their scope and in their essential features. So anything done or said to save one of the remedies from the bar of limitation cannot operate by itself to save the other also—Abdul v. Usman Khan, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 939, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 167.

As regards the question whether an acknowledgment itself can be the basis of a suit, it has been held in some cases that since an unconditional acknowledgment implies an unconditional promise to pay, if it is made before the limitation period expires, it can itself be the foundation of an action—Govind Singh v. Bijay Bahadur, 1929 A.L.J. 1279, A.I.R. 1929 All. 980 (982); Abdul Rafiq v. Bhajan, 53 All. 963, 1932 A.L.J. 77 (87), 137 I.C. 243, A.I.R. 1932 All. 199; Fateh Mahomed v. Ganga Singh, 10 Lah. 748, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 264, 115 I.C. 853; Chunilal v. Laxman, 46 Bom. 24 (28), A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 183; Punjab Zamindar's Bank v. Shaffi, 40 P.L.R. 801, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 505; Hiralal v. Badkulal, 1953 S.C.R. 758, 1953 S.C.J. 315, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 225. Where acknowledgment implies a promise to pay, a suit can be brought on the basis of such acknowledgment considered as an agreement provided consideration is proved. In such a case even if the acknowledgment is made after the period of limitation, the suit is not barred—Shanti v. Harnam, I.L.R. (1938) Lah. 193. 40 P.L.R. 533, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 234 (F.B); Bai Shanta v. Trikamlal, 45 Bom.L.R. 957, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 19. But in some other cases of the same High Courts the above view has been dissented from. Thus a recent Allahabad case gives expression to the opinion that an acknowledgment cannot be made the basis of a suit. The acknowledgment merely confirms the debt, and thereupon if anything has to be recovered, it is on the debt which is being acknowledged. An acknowledgment of a debt does not supersede the old debt and give rise to a new one. If a plaintiff brings his suit on an acknowledgment of a pro-note debt, he should be allowed to amend his plaint by basing his claim on the promissory note—Bal Krishna v. Deb Singh, 56 All. 281, 1933 A.L.J. 1530, 149 I.C 571, A.I.R. 1934 All. 76 (77) (dissenting from 1929 A.L.J. 1279); Shankar v. Mukta, 22 Bom. 514 (518). A mere acknowledgment of liability cannot be made the basis of a suit so as to constitute a fresh cause of action, but in a suit based on the original consideration the acknowledment can be relied upon as a piece of evidence in proof of the debt—Reoti Ram v. Lachman, 23 A.L.J. 900, 89 I.C. 402, A.I.R. 1926 All. 155 (156) (following Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal, 23 All. 502); Ramprasad v. Brindawan, I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 441, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 180; Bhawani v. Ganga, A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 244. See also Kalappa v. Krishna, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 521, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 225, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 10.

Acknowledgment of part of debt:—An acknowledgment of a part of a debt will keep it alive only to that extent—Chandra v. Ramdin, 16 C.W.N. 493.

Acknowledgment in favour of minor:—If an acknowledgment is made in favour of a minor, the new period of limitation is to be computed from the date when the plaintiff attains majority—Ramji v. Manya, 1919 P.L.R. 37, 52 I.C. 115; Venkataramayyar v. Kothandaramayyar, 13 Mad. 135. This section speaks of a new period of limitation, not an extension of the old period. Thus, time began to run against the plaintiff's father, and, after his death, against the plaintiff who then a minor; subsequent to the death of the father, an acknowledgment of liability was made by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff during his minority. Under this section the effect would be that the period already running is not simply extended but terminates, and an entirely new period of limitation is to be reckoned from the date of acknowledgment, and as the minor falls under the strict wording of section 6 which uses the words "at the time when the period of limitation is to be reckoned, a minor," limitation would run from the date of his attaining majority—Venkataramayyan v. Kothandara- mayyar, 13 Mad. 135; Chandrabhan v. Rajkumar, 54 All. 1019, A.I.R. 1933 All. 100 (101) 142 I.C. 794, 1932 A.L.J. 1012; Gangadhar v. Dolgobinda, A.I.R. 1956 Orissa 193.

187. New period of limitation:—"The expression 'fresh period' presupposes the previous running of another period of limitation. Hence the new period is to be calculated from the date of acknowledgment only when that date is subsequent to the date from which the period would otherwise be computed. Thus a written acknowledgment of a liability made before the debt has fallen due, i.e., before time has commenced to run, is of no effect so far as the shortening or extending of the time for the institution of suits in concerned"—Banning, 2nd Ed., p. 127.

In computing the period of limitation, the date on which the acknowledgment was signed (i.e., the date from which the new period of limitation runs) must be excluded under sub-section (1) of section 12—Jai Narain v. Vithoba, 6 N.L.J. 281, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 143, 71 I.C. 556.

When the defendant acknowledges the liability while he is absent from India, the period already elapsed is cancelled and a new period begins to run; and if the defendant continues to remain abroad, time will not run until he returns, by virtue of sec. 13.

188. Oral evidence:—See sub-section (2). Oral evidence of the contents of a document cannot be received. Therefore, where the acknowledgment of a debt was signed by the debtor each year, and on the signing of a fresh acknowledgment, the old one was given back to the debtor, no oral evidence of these old acknowledgments could be given so as to show that they had been given while the debt was still unbarred—Zulnissa v. Motidev, 12 Bom. 268. But this section must be read with sections 65 and 91 of the Evidence Act and does not exclude secondary evidence in cases in which the same would be admissible under section 65 of that Act—Chathu v. Virarayan, 15 Mad. 491. For instance, where the original document has been lost or destroyed, it is open to the plaintiff to give secondary evidence of the contents of the said document—Shambhu v. Ram Chandra, 12 Cal. 267; Wajiban v. Kadir, 13 Cal. 292.

Where the date originally borne by a written acknowledgment (ruzukhata) has been altered, no oral evidence can be received as to the date on which it was given —Sayad Gulamali v. Miyabai, 26 Bom. 128 (distinguishing Atmaram v. Umedram, 25 Bom. 616, in which no question was raised as to the effect of alteration of the date of a written acknowledgment). Where there are more debts than one, oral evidence will not be received to identify the debt acknowledged with the debt sued on, for that would involve a question of the intention of the debtor as to what debt he meant; and no parol evidence of the intention of the party can be admitted for the purpose of identifying the debt acknowledged—Beti Maharani v. Collector, 17 All. 198 (P.C.). The law is well settled that to prove an acknowledgment of liability oral evidence of the intention of the party said to have made the acknowledgment is not admissible for construing the writing given—Haiderali v. Brojendra, 45 C.W.N. 208. But where there is only one debt, and the acknowledgment omits to mention the name of the mortgagor or the date of the mortgage or the amount of the debt, parol evidence is admissible to prove the name, the date or the amount—Uppi v. Mammavan, 16 Mad. 366; Narayana v. Venkataramana, 25 Mad. 220 (F.B.). In England also, the date of the bond may be supplied by parol evidence, as also the name of the creditor to whom the debt is owing—Hartley v. Wharton, (1840) 11 A. & E. 934; Edmunds v. Downes, (1834) 2 Cr. & M. 459. Parol evidence may also be received to prove the exact amount due—Dickinson v. Hatfield, (1881) 1 Mec. & R. 141; Colledge v. Horn, (1825) 3 Bing. 119; Cheslyn v. Dalby, (1840) 4 Y. & C. 238. Where the plaintiff relies on post cards as containing acknowledgment, but there is nothing on the face of the post cards that they necessarily referred to the suit debt, oral evidence is admissible to prove that the post cards relate to the suit debt as there is nothing in this section or in the Evidence Act which precludes the letting in of oral evidence to explain what debts the post cards necessarily refer to—Athmaramayya v. Seshappa, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 173, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 409.

189. Explanation:—"Exact nature of property or right":—An acknowledgment is sufficient even though it omits to specify the exact nature of the property or right; that is, an acknowledgment need not necessarily be in respect of the particular relief prayed for in the suit or application. It is sufficient acknowledgment if it is of a right or property which is the subjtct matter of the suit or application—Jageshar v. Bir Ram, 23 O.C. 176, 60 I.C. 189. It is not necessary that there should be a specific or direct acknowledgment of the particular liability which is sought to be enforced, and if there is an admission of facts of which the liability in question is a necessary consequence, there would be an acknowledgment within the meaning of this section—Jainarain v. G. G. of India, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 462.

Claim to a set-off:—Section 19 applies where the acknowledgment is coupled with a claim to a set-off. Under the English law also, a claim to a set-off does not negative a promise to pay—Leland v. Murphy, (1865) 16 Ir. Ch. R. 500. But where a plea in the written statement sets forth that the money is not owing and if it is, it must be set off against an amount, such a plea is not an acknowledgment of liability; it is a denial of liability with a claim to a set-off in the alternative—Shaik Meera v. Shaik Nainar, 25 M.L.J. 259, 21 I.C. 30.

Refusal to pay:—An acknowledgment is sufficient, even if it is accompanied by a refusal to pay—Janardan v. Radhaballabh, 23 C.W.N. 921, 53 I.C. 898. Under sec. 19, Limitation Act, the words relied on, in order to constitute a valid acknowledgment, must be such as to show an existing jural relationship of debtor and creditor. An admission of a debt coupled with a refusal to pay because the parties have arranged for payment elsewhere, amounts to an acknowledgment—Kuppuswami v. Sabapathy Pathan, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 943, 44 L.W. 362. According to English law, however, such an acknowledgment is insufficient, a promise to pay being the essential requisite of every acknowledgment. See Lee v. Wilmot, (1865) L.R. 1 Ex. 364.

Addressed to a person not entitled to the right:—See Note 178, ante under heading "Acknowledgment to whom to be made."

190. Agent duly authorised:—The test for determining the effect of acknowledgment by a third person will in each case be whether the person who keeps alive the debt had express or implied authority to act on behalf of those against whom limitation is sought to be asserted—Kothandaraman v. Shanmugam, 32 I C. 608 (Mad.). The authorization need not be in writing—Badri v. Gopi, A.I.R. 1950 Ajmer. 4. But it must be to acknowledge the liability in question and not merely to sign the document. The kind of authorization contemplated by this section implies the conferral of powers on a person who does not already possess them—Yazardhar v. Udaychand, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 182, 1940 N.L.J. 445, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 354. So a judge signing the deposition of a party or of a witness is in no sense an agent of him. Ibid.

A manager, who has got general authority to purchase and pay for all things required for the use of his principal, can, without any special authority, give a note promising payment of the price of goods to the supplier of the goods; and the note is a sufficient acknowledgment of liability made by 'an agent duly authorised' within the meaning of this section—Raja Braja Sunder Deb v. Bhola Nath, 24 C.W.N. 153 (P.C.), 55 I.C. 543, A.I.R. 1919 P.C. 120. But a Mukhtar-am has no power to acknowledge a liability under this section unless he has been given special authority to make the acknowledgment of the liability—Narain Rao v. Manni Kunwar, 44 All. 546, 20 A.L.J. 359, 66 I.C. 394. The mere fact that the defendant used to write letters on behalf of the principal is not sufficient in law to enable the Court to infer that he was an authorised agent for the purpose of making an acknowledgment of liability—Uma Shankar v. Govind, 46 All. 892, 22 A.L.J. 807, A.I.R. 1924 All. 855, 80 I.C. 6.

The manager of a Hindu joint family has the power to acknowledge debt which is binding on the coparceners. Such an acknowledgment even made after adjudication of the manager as an insolvent is binding on them—Vyagreswarudu v. Bhadranma, I.L.R. (1943) Mad. 53, (1942) 2 M L.J. 233, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 721.

Guardian:—A guardian appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, is an "agent duly authorised" and competent to make an acknowledgment, provided it be shewn that the guardian's act was for the benefit of the ward—Annapagauda v. Sangadigyapa, 26 Bom. 221 (F.B.); Sobhandari v. Sriramulu, 17 Mad. 221. Similarly, an acknowledgment by a natural guardian will give a fresh start for limitation, if it be shewn that the acknowledgment was for the benefit of the minor—Bhulli v. Nanalal, 8 Bom.L.R. 812; Ram Charan v. Gaya, 30 All. 422 (F.B.); Kailasa v. Pennu Kannu, 18 Mad. 456. An acknowledgment of liability by a guardian ad litem of a minor, who is also a lawful guardian under the personal law of the minor, is effective against the minor, whether or not such acknowledgment is for his benefit—Gumti v. Jugal, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 33, 43 C.W.N. 604, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 399. But a defacto guardian has no power to acknowledge a debt—Tukaram v. Madhaorao, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 710, 1947 N.L.J. 405, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 293.

Where the wife of a lunatic applied to get herself appointed as guardian of her husband and in her petition she included certain debts due by her husband, but pending that petition her husband died and she was never in fact appointed as guardian, it was held that the wife was not an "agent duly authorised" and the acknowledgment of her husband's debts in the petition could not save limitation—Gomathi Ammal v. Avu Ammal, 56 Mad. 964, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 686, 146 I.C. 49.

In some cases decided before the enactment of sec. 21 (1) it was held that no guardian (whether certificated or natural) could acknowledge a debt on behalf of the minor—Wajibun v. Kadir, 13 Cal. 292; Chhato v. Bilto, 26 Cal. 51; Narendra v. Rai Charan, 29 Cal. 647. But these cases are no longer good law.

As to who is or is not a lawful guardian, see Note 206 under sec. 21.

Court of Wards:—The Court of Wards has power to make acknowledgment of a debt due by the ward which would bind the ward and give a fresh starting point for limitation—Rashbehary v. Anand, 43 Cal. 211. The Collector in charge of the Court of Wards is the duly authorised agent of the wards for the purpose of making an acknowledgment under this section—Shanker Lal v. Ram Lal, I.L.R. (1938) All. 363, 1938 A.L.J. 252, A.I.R. 1938 All. 217 (F.B.). Thus, an acknowledgment by the Collector and Deputy Collector as agents of the Court of Wards is equally binding on the minor—Kannamodalu v. Alluri Sarvaryudu, 34 Mad. 221. An order by the Court of Wards deciding to allow a debt of a creditor is an acknowledgment of the debt—Kanraj v. Vijai, A.I.R. 1951 Raj. 74. So also a report made by the Collector admitting a claim on a mortgage is an acknowledgment—Bhalchandra v. Chanbasappa, 41 Bom.L.R. 391, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 237.

Sarbarakar:—The sarbarakar of a disqualified person not being a guardian and having nothing to do with the person or property of the proprietor, but appointed only to manage the lands owing to the incompetency of the proprietor, cannot be regarded as a person authorised to admit the personal debt of the proprietor for the purpose of this section—Beti Maharani v. Collector, 17 All. 198 (P.C.). It cannot be assumed that a Mukhtarian or general agent has power to acknowledge liability within the meaning of sec. 19, Limitation Act, and that such a liability can only be fastened upon the principal by a person duly authorised in this behalf, that is to say, who has been given authority to make such an acknowledgment of liability—Deputy Commissioner, Kheri v. Jagdamba Prasad, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 332; Beti Maharani v. Collector of Etawah, 17 All. 198.

Co-mortgagees:—Where the mortgage is joint and incapable of being redeemed piecemeal, one mortgagee is not an agent for the other joint-mortgagees; and an acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title made and signed by one mortgagee only cannot avail against the other mortgagees for the purpose of saving limitation in respect of the mortgagor's suit for redemption—Dharma v. Balmakund, 18 All. 458 (460); Jwala v. Achchey, 34 All. 371 (374); Bhogilal v. Amritlal, 18 Bom. 173 (181); Mah Bibi v. Motan Lal, 61 P.R. 1877. So too is an acknowledgment made by one of several heirs of the original mortgagee without effect—Bhogilal v. Amritlal, supra.

But where after the creation of the mortgage, which was a mortgage with possession, the two branches of the family of the original mortgagee had effected a partition of the property and each branch has been in possession of the mortgaged property allotted to each, an acknowledgment made by the persons of one branch is a good acknowledgment so as to save the mortgagor's right of redemption being barred in respect of the property in possession of that branch—Motilal v. Samal, 54 Bom. 625 (F.B.), 32 Bom.L.R. 1096, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 466 (475), 128 I.C. 417 (distinguishing Bhogilal v. Amritlal, 17 Bom. 173); see also Janardhanan v. Mariam, A.I.R. 1957 T.C. 186, Kuttan v. Bhagyodayam Co. Ltd., A.I.R. 1957 T.C. 253.

Co-mortgagor:—An acknowledgment of liability by one of several mortgagors will ordinarily give a fresh start of limitation against the mortgagor who acknowledge the same. It is only when he makes the acknowledgment on behalf of the others also under circumstances which would make him an agent of the other co-mortgagors under sec 21 of the Limitation Act, that limitation would be saved against the others as well—Rameshwar v. Ram Dass, 18 Pat. 434, 20 Pat.L.T. 619, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 451. Such an acknowledgment is insufficient to provide a fresh period of limitation for a suit by other mortgagor for redemption of his share as against the redeeming co-mortgagor—Mukhnarain v. Ramlochan, 19 Pat. 938, 21 Pat.L.T. 702, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 147.

Joint debtors:—The same principle applies to joint debtors. So, payment made by one of the debtors does not extend the period of limitation—Kunjandi v. Chinnavava, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 326, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 110.

Receiver:—A receiver of a partnership firm appointed for collecting its outstandings and doing all things necessary for the realisation and preservation of its assets, may be a person authorised to make an acknowledgment binding on the firm, if the acknowledgment was necessary for the preservation of the partnership assets—Lakshumanan Chetty v. Sadayappa Chetty, 35 M.L.J. 571, 48 I.C. 179. A receiver of an insolvent's estate appointed under the C. P. Code can give a valid acknowledgment inasmuch as the ownership vests in him and he can deal with it as owner—Paramasivan v. Aristotle, 5 L.W. 222, 38 I.C. 160; Ramagopal Naicker v. Muthukrishna Ayyar, (1956) 2 Mad. L.J. 421.

Partners:—Cf. sec. 18 of the Partnership Act: "A partner is the agent of the firm for the purpose of the business of the firm." See also Note 207 under sec. 21.

Legal Practitioner:—An acknowledgment by a legal practitioner will be a valid acknowledgment to bind his clients. An admission made by a pleader on behalf of his client in a memorandum of appeal in a case not inter partes that a certain decree was a subsisting decree and capable of execution, will amount to an acknowledgment so as to give a fresh starting point of limitation for execution of such decree—Hingon v. Mansa, 18 All. 384. A letter from defendants' attorney to the plaintiffs' attorney to the effect that the defendants were willing to pay the rent in question in case the plaintiffs could show a good title, was held to be a sufficient acknowledgment—Rungo Lall v. Wilson, 26 Cal. 204 A letter written by a mukhtear at the request of the debtor acknowledging the liability and pleading present inability to pay is a valid acknowledgment—Deputy Commissioner v. Ram Kumar, 16 Luck. 701, 1941 O.W.N. 108, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 254.

Ex-Agent:—Acknowledgment signed by defendant's ex-agent whose agency has terminated long before the giving of acknowledgment cannot bind the defendant or prevent the operation of limitation—Jogeshwar v. Raj Narain, 31 Cal. 195 (202). But if the termination of agency (by death of the master) had been unknown to the plaintiff, the acknowledgment made by the gomosta after the death of the master would be valid and would save limitation—Ebrahim v. Chunilal, 35 Bom. 302, 10 I.C. 888, 13 Bom.L.R. 264.

Director:—An acknowledgment made by one of the directors of the company who does the ordinary acts necessary in the conduct of the business on behalf of the company is a sufficient acknowledgment—Amulya v. Coral Engineering Works Ltd., 33 C.W.N. 833 (834), 115 I.C. 177, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 155. The mere signing of a balance sheet by a director of a company does not amount to an acknowledgment. He is under a duty where he is bound to set out, among other things, the claims made on the company and not with the intention of acknowledging liability—Kashinath v. The New Akot Cotton Ginning and Pressing Company Ltd., I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 562, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 255. But where the debt due to certain creditor is included in the item relating to sundry creditors as contained in the balance-sheet of the company, the balance-sheet contains an acknowledgment to the particular creditor—Rajah of Vizianagram v. Official Liquidator, (1951) 2 M.L.J. 535, A.I.R. 1952 Mad. 136.

Official Assignee:—The Official Assignee is not the agent of the insolvent, and an acknowledgment made by him does not save limitation—Currimbhai v. Ahmedali, 35 Bom.L.R. 12, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 91, 143 I.C. 698.

An appointee of insolvent's property under the Insolvency Act cannot be treated as an agent duly authorised within the meaning of sec. 19—Maung Po v. B. Banerjee, A.I.R. 1945 Rang. 152, 156 I.C. 783.

Official Receiver:—The Official Receiver is not an agent of the insolvent. Since, however, under Section 28 (2), Provincial Insolvency Act, all the properties of the insolvent rest in the Official Receiver he is the party against whom such property or right can be claimed, and, under Section 19 of the Limitation Act, an acknowledgment of liability by the Official Receiver will furnish a fresh starting point for limitation—Ramgopal v. Muthukrishna, A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 1. The Official Receiver and the insolvent stand to each other in the relation of predecessor in title and successor-in-title. The phrase "by some person through whom he derives his title or liability" is equally apt to cover such relationship—Patro v. Raju, A.I.R. 1952 Orissa 62.

191. Execution-proceedings:—Explanation III has been added to set at rest the conflict of decisions which existed as to the question whether this section under the old Act applied or not to execution-proceedings. The Madras High Court was of opinion that this section was not applicable to applications for execution, while the other High Courts held the contrary view. See Sreenivasachariar v. Ponnusami, 28 Mad. 40; Rama v. Venkatesa, 5 Mad. 171 (F.B.); Brojo v. Gaya, 6 C.L.J. 141;

Kally v. Heera Lal, 2 Cal. 468; Ramhit v. Satgur, 3 All. 247 (F.B.); Trimbak v. Kashi Nath, 22 Bom. 722.

The following are instances of acknowledgment:—An application in writing by a judgment-debtor asking the decree-holder to postpone the sale and allow him to make some arrangement for paying off the debt—Ramhit v. Satgur, 3 All. 247 (F.B.); Toree v. Mahomed, 9 Cal. 730; Norendra v. Bhupendra, 23 Cal. 374 (387); Subbalakshmi v. Ramanujam, 42 Mad. 52; Venkatrav v. Bijesingh, 10 Bom. 108; a joint application by the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor stating on the one hand, that the former received a certain sum in part payment of the decretal amount, and on the other, that there was a certain balance due from the judgment-debtor under the decree—Mahammad v. Prayag, 16 All. 228; the payment of part of the judgment-debt by the judgment-debtor, with an acknowledgment of liability by his pleader—Trimbuk v. Kashinath, 22 Bom. 722; a petition by the judgment-debtor for the enlargement of time for the payment of the decretal amount—Ram Coomar v. Jakur, 8 Cal. 716; an application by the decree-holder for certifying certain payment in satisfaction of a redemption-decree—Bacharai v. Babaji, 38 Bom. 47; Eusuffseman v. Sanchia, 43 Cal. 207, 34 I.C. 606; or other decree Satrughana v. Kofini, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 280; a statement by the decree-holder in his execution application that he had received a sum from the judgment-debtor—Eusuffzeman v. Sanchia, 43 Cal. 207, 20 C.W.N. 272, 34 I.C. 606; an agreement made between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder in course of the execution-proceedings—Fateh v. Gopal, 7 All. 424; an endorsement of part payment of the decretal amount made on the decree by the judgment-debtor—Janki v. Ghulam, 5 All. 201. A compromise to have the rest of the decree executed at a future time amounts to an admission on the part of the judgment-debtor and entitles the decree-holder to a fresh period from the date of the compromise—Bindeswari v. Awadh Behari, 6 I.C. 366. Even if such compromise deals with the properties not the subject matter of the suit, it can be regarded as an acknowledgment of the title of the person bringing a suit for possession of those properties—Supdu v. Soniram, 46 Bom.L.R. 931, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 143. If in a petition of insolvency filed by the judgment-debtor the judgment-debt is specified, that would amount to an acknowledgment—Rampal v. Nand Lal, 16 C.W.N. 346, 13 I.C. 603. Where the judgment-debtor expressly admitted that there was an instalment decree in favour of the decree-holder, that several instalments had already been paid, that the instalment for Poush remained unpaid but as it had not become due, the decree-holder was not entitled to proceed with the execution, held that this was a sufficient acknowledgment—Paresh Nath v. Ismail, 26 C.W.N. 486, 34 C.L.J. 195, 64 I.C. 993. A statement by the judgment-debtor as to existence of mortgage decree in reply to an application by the decree-holder for injunction restraining the judgment debtor from disposing of the mortgaged property is an acknowledgment to save the decree-holder's application for execution—Risal v. Lal, I.L.R. (1939) All. 728, 1939 A.L.J. 746, A.I.R. 1939 All. 483. An acknowledgment by the judgment-debtor may save limitation against the auction-purchaser, but such acknowledgment, if made after attachment, cannot prevail against the auction-purchaser who is entitled to have the property purchased by him in the condition in which it was at the time of the attachment—Rajeswari v. Binode, 22 C.W.N. 278, 44 I.C. 533. A contrary view has been taken by the Allahabad High Court in Tulshi v. Mek Ram, I.L.R. (1945) All. 120, 1945 A.L.J. 58, A.I.R. 1945 All. 224, where it has been held that an auction purchaser derives his title through the judgment-debtor as such would be bound by the acknowledgment of the latter made after the attachment of his properties but before the actual auction sale.

An acknowledgment of liability in writing by some of the judgment-debtors within three years from the date of the last application for execution would save limitation as against the persons making the acknowledgment—Ban Behary v. Jnanendra, 22 I.C. 709; Chandra v. Ramdin, 16 C.W.N. 493, 13 I.C. 702. An application for payment by one of the several judgment-debtors amounts to an acknowledgment—Lachmi v. Brahmdeo, 22 Pat.L.T. 416. Where the judgment-debtor sent a part of the decretal amount with a letter to the decree-holder asking further time to pay the balance and the decree-holder endorsed the receipt on the letter and returned it, it was held that there was a valid acknowledgment—Satgur v. Brahmadutt, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 391.

An admission by a decree-holder purchaser made in course of execution of his decree that the property sought to be sold is subject to a mortgage is not an acknowledgment of liability in respect of the mortgage in as much as the admission was made at a time when he had no interest in the mortgaged property—Jiwanlal v. Ramrao, 1951 N.L.J. 26, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 240.

This section does not apply to section 48, C. P. Code, because the term of 12 years prescribed by that section is not strictly speaking a "period of limitation," and therefore an acknowledgment cannot give the decree-holder a fresh period of 12 years for the execution of his decree—Mohant Krishna Dayal v. Sakina, 1 P.L.J. 214, 34 I C. 27; Narendra v. Oudh Commercial Bank, 11 O.W.N. 1103, 151 I.C. 541, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 465 (471).

192. Acknowledgment under previous Act—Suit under present Act:—The law to be applied is the law in force at the time when the plaintiff's suit is brought and not the law in force at the time when the acknowledgment was made. An acknowledgent of a mortgage was made by an agent in 1868 while the Act of 1859 was in force and the suit on the mortgage was brought in 1909, under the present Act. It was held that although under the Act of 1859 an acknowledgment by an agent was not a valid one, still that Act would not apply, but the Act in force at the time when the suit was instituted; that is, the Act of 1908 would be applicable and the acknowledgment by an agent being a valid acknowledgment under this Act would save limitation—Zaibunnissa v. Maharaja of Benares, 34 All. 109; see also Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 35 All. 227 (234) (P.C.), 19 I.C. 291.

But where the right of action was barred before the new Act came into force, it could not be revived by the new Act. Thus, where a claim was barred before 1871 because an acknowledgment by an agent could not keep the claim alive, it cannot be revived by the Acts of 1871 and 1877 by reason of the fact that those Acts make an acknowledgment by an agent valid. Therefore a suit brought on the claim in 1880 is barred—Dharma v. Govind, 8 Bom. 99 (103); Narayan v. Govind, 29 Bom.L R. 1563, A.I.R. 1928 Bom.L.R. 1287, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 55 (56).

Effect of payment on account of debt or of interest on legacy.

20. (1) Where payment on account of a debt or of interest on a legacy is made before the expiration of the prescribed period, by the person liable to pay the debt or legacy, or by his duly authorised agent, a fresh period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the payment was made:

Provided that, save in the case of a payment of interest made before the 1st day of January, 1928, an acknowledgment of the payment appears in the handwriting of, or in a writing signed by, the person making the payment.

(2) Where mortgaged land is in the possession of the mortgagee, the receipt of the rent or pdoduce of such land shall be deemed to be a payment for the purpose of sub-section (1).

Effect of receipt of produce of mortgaged land.

Explanation.—Debt includes money payable under a decree or order of Court.

Change:—The words in sub-section (1) were substituted by sec. 2 of the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act 1942, (16 of 1942) and the proviso to sub-section (1) were substituted, by the Indian Limitation Amendment Act, 1927 (Act I of 1927), in place of the old sub-section (1) and the proviso which stood as follows:—

(1) Where interest on a debt or legacy is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid as such by the person liable to pay the debt or legacy, or his agent duly authorised in this behalf,

Effect of payment of interest as such or of part-payment of principal.

or where part of the principal of a debt is, before the expiration of the prescribed period, paid by the debtor or by his agent duly authorized in this behalf, a fresh period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the payment was made.

"Provided that, in the case of part payment of the principal of a debt, the fact of the payment appears in the handwriting of the person making the same."

In other words, while under the old law. the handwriting of the payer was necessary in case of part payment of the principal alone, under the new law, the handwriting of. or a writing signed by, the payer shall be necessary in the case of payment of interest also, if made on or after the 1st January, 1928.

The following is an extract from the Report of the Select Committee regarding amendment of words in sub-section (1)—

"The mere omission of the words "as such" from section 20 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, would not abolish the distinction between payment of interest and part payment of principal. So long as the distinction remained it would be necessary for the creditor to appropriate an open payment either to interest or principal, if he wished to save limitation. It is also necessary to distinguish part payments of legacies from part payments of other debts, and to secure that it is only a payment of interest on a legacy that starts a fresh period of limitation.

We have decided against giving to this alteration of the law any retrospective effect.....".

The amendment of the proviso has been made in pursuance of the following recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee: "With regard to section 20, we think that the provisions of clause (1) as they stand lead to a number of frivolous suits long after the period of limitation prescribed. It is easy in the first place for the plaintiff to say that within the time fixed the defendant paid him one rupee and two rupees as interest. He attempts to prove such payment by adducing oral evidence which takes up much valuable time, but ultimately the suit is, in most cases, dismissed. There is no reason why the payment of interest should stand on a different footing from the part payment of the principal of a debt. In the latter case the proviso to clause (1) enacts that the fact of payment should appear in the handwriting of the person making the same. It seems to us that the payment of interest should also be subject to the same conditions as the part-payment of principal. There does not seem to be any reason for providing for payment of interest as such, so long as any portion of the sum paid can be appropriated for that interest. Moreover, having in view our recommendation that the payment of interest should be also in writing, the words 'as such' would lose much of their importance"—Civil Justice Committee Report, p. 489.

193. Retrospection of amendment:—The amendment of this section by Act XVI of 1942 has no operation to a suit already instituted before that Act came into force—Sarabdeva v. Dwarka, 1945 P.W.N. 178, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 59; Durga v. Kishuni, 18 Luck. 241, 1942 O.W.N. 582, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 508; Avudayyammal v. Ambasankar, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 347, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 398; Venkatappayya v. Venkatappayya, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 405, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 72; Prabhakar v. Chandrakant, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 422, 1943 N.L.J. 159, A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 178; Kashiram v. Malkhan, 1943 A.L.W. 401. There is a difference of opinion as to whether the section as amended in 1942 will apply to suits instituted after the amendment. The Patna and the Orissa High Courts have held that the amended section will apply—Jagdish v. Saligram, 24 Pat. 391, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 60; Baleswar v. Latafat, 24 Pat. 249, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 368; Pitambar v. Lakshmidhar, A.I.R. 1949 Orissa 64. The reason given is that the law of limitation which governs an action is the law which prevails on the date of the institution of the suit and that though the remedy is barred under the old law the right is not barred and no question of reviving a right arises. But the Allahabad and the Madras High Courts have taken a contrary view—Pearey Lal v. Solugir, I.L.R (1945) All. 896, A.I.R. 1946 All. 58; Mangapathi v. Krishnaswami, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 107, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 762; Ramanathan v. Kandappa, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 624, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 314.

193A. Sections 19 and 20:—Section 20 does not prevent the operation of section 19, and the two sections are not mutually exclusive. These sections cannot be treated as one general and the other special. Therefore, a payment though it may be ineffectual as a payment under sec. 20 may nevertheless be treated as an acknowledgment under section 19, if it fulfils the requirements of that section. Moreover, section 19 only operates against the person who makes the acknowledgment, but sec. 20 makes the part-payment good in favour of any suit on that liability. Further, an acknowledgment under section 19 need not be addressed to the person entitled, but a part-payment under sec. 20 must be made only to the person entitled to payment—Venkatakrishniah v. Subbarayudu, 40 Mad. 698 (699, 700). There is a fundamental difference between secs. 19 and 20. Under sec. 20 all that is necessary is that an acknowledgment of payment should appear in the handwriting of, or be signed by the person making it. But this is not enough under section 19—Gazadhar v. Udiachand, 1940 N.L.J. 445, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 354. Sections 19 and 20 are independant of each other. There may be an acknowledgment of liability unaccompanied by part payment under sec. 19 or accompanied by part payment fulfilling the requirements of sec. 20, in which case the debt is saved from limitation both under sec. 19 and sec. 20; but if there is part payment which does not comply with the terms of sec. 20, that can not prevent the endorsement from operating as an acknowledgment within sec. 19—Tayerali v. Garabad, 41 Bom.L.R. 455, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 252. An acknowledgment mustbe made by the person against whom the right is claimed, but in the case of a payment of interest or principal all that is required is that it should be made by a person liable to pay the debt. Further, the principle on which payment towards a debt is differentiated from mere acknowledgment is that such payment enures to the benefit of all who are liable to pay, which cannot be said of a mere acknowledgment made by one of the persons liable to pay—Narasimha v. Ibrahim, 56 M.L.J. 630, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 419 (420, 421), 118 I.C. 302; Azizur v. Upendra, 66 C.L.J. 104, 42 C.W.N. 18, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 129.

Sec. 20 and Art. 75:—Section 20 has no concern with a suit governed by Art. 75. That Article contemplates a suit on an instalment bond which provides that in default in the payment of two or three successive instalments the whole amount would become due. The terminus a quo under Art. 75 is not the date of payment but the date of non-payment (i.e., not the date on which an instalment was last paid, but the date on which the next instalment has become due and has not been paid); and therefore sec. 20 which provides that the period of limitation is to be freshly reckoned from the date of payment of interest or part of principal, has no application to a suit covered by Art. 75, and the payment of the last previous instalment need not be endorsed on the back of the bond in the handwriting of the debtor—Probhat Chandra v. Mohesh Chandra, 58 Cal. 615, 52 C.L.J. 591, 130 I.C. 571 A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 157 (158); Nand Lal v. Akki, 6 Lah. 163, 89 I.C. 294, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 394 (dissenting from Jawand Lal v. Sharf Din, 35 P.R. 1913, 16 I.C. 961); Gaya Din v. Kiyali Ram, 11 O.W.N. 1191, 151 I.C. 852, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 455 (457). The Allahabad High Court has taken a contrary view and has held that this section is applicable to cases falling under Art. 75; Rup Narain v. Tirbeni, I.L.R. (1943) All. 210, 1943 A.L.J. 28, A.I.R. 1943 All. 172; Chedda v. Baldeo, 1949 A.L.J. 291, A.I.R. 1949 All. 764.

194. Prescribed period:—The word "prescribed" means the period prescribed in the first schedule, and not the period within which the plaintiff may bring his suit. Therefore, if interest is paid after the expiry of the period of limitation, though before the plaintiff can bring a suit owing to the intervention of the vacation, it is of no avail —Debendra v. Kartic, 55 Cal. 1210, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 68, 114 I.C. 483; Pattabhiramayya v. Krishna, 1938 M.W.N. 513, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 683; Laxman v. Yadao, 1940 N.L.J. 227, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 401; Shyam v. Ram Autar, A.I.R. 1939 All. 252, 181 I.C. 899; Puran v. Abdullah, I.L.R. (1938) All. 861, 1938 A.L.J. 1183, A.I.R. 1938 All. 606. Compare the cases cited in Note 176 to sec. 19, under heading "Acknowledgment made during holidays." The expression "prescribed period" means not the period prescribed for the repayment of the loan, but the period prescribed for the limitation of the suit, because in ordinary cases no debtor would make a payment before the time fixed for repayment of the loan—Ramsebuk v. Ramlal, 6 Cal. 815. It means that the interest must be paid before the debt is barred—Venkataratnam v. Kamayya, 11 Mad. 218. Any payment of interest made beyond the period of limitation cannot operate to extend the period of limitation—Percy Fisher v. Ardeshir, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 213 ,37 Bom.L.R. 165, 156 I.C. 531. See also Firm Kamta Prasad v. Gulzari Lal, 1954 All.L.J. 712, A.I.R. 1955 All. 41 (F.B.).

195. Payment:—This section does not specify any particular mode or form of payment, and there are many modes in which payment may be made. Where the common agent of the joint debtors paid interest on the joint debt out of joint funds under express instructions contained in the instrument of his appointment, and this payment was relied upon by the plaintiff (one of the joint debtors) in a suit for contribution against the defendant (another joint debtor), it was held that this payment was clearly a payment in exoneration pro tanto of the liability of the plaintiff and such as is contemplated by this section—Sukhamoni v. Ishan, 25 Cal. 844 (852) (P.C.). All that is required by the plain words of the Indian statutes is that there should be a payment of a part of the debt due. All that has to be shown is that the payment was made towards this existing debt whose amount exceeded the amount paid, and once this is done, then by the words of the statute time is extended. In Amritsar Municipality v. Ralia Ram, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 636, 17 Lah. 737, 165 I.C. 723, Dalip Singh, J., remarked: "it appears to me that no words such as "without prejudice" can override the words of the Statute, which lay down that a part payment shall extend limitation, if it is in the handwriting of, or signed by the person making the payment."

A payment may be made not only in the current coin of the realm but in any other medium that the creditor may choose to accept. Thus, where goods are delivered by the debtor and taken by the creditor in payment either of principal or interest, such delivery would be a good payment of principal or interest, as the case may be, so as to extend the period of limitation under this section—Ragho v. Hari, 24 Bom. 619 (621); Hooper v. Stephens, (1835) 4 A. & E. 71. See also Contract Act, sec. 50, Illustration (c). It is not necessary that the payment of a debt should be actually made in money. The payment may be in goods or even by a settlement of accounts between the parties, provided that the payment must be of such a nature that it would be a sufficient answer to a suit. The test to be applied is, whether the payment that has been made is of such a nature that it would be a complete answer to a suit brought by the creditor to recover the amount—Kariappa v. Rachapa, 24 Bom. 493 (496); Mylan v. Annavi, 29 Mad. 234 (235); Kollipara v. Maddula, 19 Mad. 340 (342); Narsoomal v. Athmal, 9 S.L.R. 27, 30 I.C. 51. Thus, a payment made in goods will be sufficient if that is the intention and agreement—Hart v. Nash, (1835) 2 Cr. M. & R. 337; Hooper v. Stephens, (1836) 4 A. & E. 71. There may be a part payment by a mere settlement of accounts—Amos v. Smith, (1862) 31 L.J. Ex. 423; Maber v. Maber, (1867) L.R. Ex. 153; Ramprabha v. Bishunath, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 139, 174 I.C. 585. Where a debtor consents that money due from him for interest should be credited to the account of the principal, and the interest-balance reduced by that amount, such a consent is really tantamount to a payment of interest; it is as if the debtor makes the payment and the creditor advances it again. Where both parties agree to such a settlement, and the accounts are so adjusted, the adjustment operates as a payment of interest under this section—Kariappa v. Rachapa, 24 Bom. 493 (501). If by agreement money is paid by the debtor on behalf of the creditor to a third person, that may be a sufficient payment as between the debtor and the creditor—Worthington v. Grimsditch, (1845) 7 Q.B. 479. Thus, a payment made by the mortgagors by means of a sale by the mortgagors to the mortgagees of a certain property other than that covered by the mortgage in suit is a good payment within the meaning of this section—Raushan v. Kanhaiya, 41 All. 111 (112), 47 I.C. 845. The payment may be made in the shape of a new bond passed for interest—Doming v. Antone, 1889 P.J. 39; Kandaswami v. Thevammal, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 1090, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 620, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 601. Payment under sec. 20 may be made in any form and a pro-note can be given by way of payment. The writing of the pro-note need not specify that the payment was made towards interest or principal. It can be proved by evidence—Kandasami v. Thevammal, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 848. So also, the receipt of produce of land was held to be a payment of interest where the payee of a promissory note had been put into possession under an agreement that the produce of land should be taken as interest—Mylan v. Annavi, 29 Mad. 234 (235). But a plaintiff cannot rely on an entry made by the defendant in his own books crediting a sum to the plaintiff's account, because such an unilateral act does not amount to 'payment'; the credit of a sum by the defendant in his books to the plaintiff's account is not such a payment to the plaintiff as would be an answer in a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover the money—Kollipara Pullamma v. Maddulu, 19 Mad. 340 (342); Palaniappa v. Veerappa, 41 Mad. 446 (448), 34 M.L.J. 41; Muinuddin v. Mahammad, 1916 P.L.R. 68, 31 I.C. 782; Nagappa v. Ramanathan, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 264, 29 I.C. 422; Raj Narain v. Ram Sarup, 1930

A.L.J. 552, A.I.R. 1930 All. 467 (468), 123 I.C. 820; Kariyappa v. Rachapa, 24 Bom. 493 (499); Satappa v. Annappa, 47 Bom. 128 (131). An entry of interest in the defendant's books even if made in the presence of the plaintiff does not amount to a payment of interest within the meaning of this section—Ichha v. Natha, 13 Bom. 338 (343). Similarly, where subsequent to the adjustment of accounts by the defendant, he had been credited with the amounts of surplus proceeds of goods sold and with the proceeds of a hundi, such amounts were not 'payments' within the meaning of this section—Narronji v. Mugniram, 6 Bom. 103 (106).

Where both parties agree to wipe out the previous balance and add the amount of interest to the principal so as to make it a new debt, it may be conceded that such an act may amount to payment of interest within the meaning of this section. But such addition of interest to the principal must be the result of an agreement between the parties on the date of such payment. That is, the addition of interest must be with mutual consent given at the time. If either the creditor or the debtor by himself goes on adding interest to the principal in his own books, even though the same may be in pursuance of an agreement originally made between the parties, this would not amount to a fresh payment to the creditor so as to extend the period of limitation under this section—Raj Narain v. Ram Sarup, 1930 A.L.J. 552, 123 I.C. 820, A.I.R. 1930 All. 467 (468, 469).

Where there are debts due on both sides, and the accounts are gone through by the parties and a balance struck, this in effect constitutes a payment to the amount of the smaller debt—Ashby v. James, (1843) 11 M. & W. 542, 63 R.R. 676; Re Hawkins, (1879) 28 W.R. (Eng.) 240. But it is the striking of the balance that constitutes the payment, and not the mere existence or even a statement in writing of cross demands—Williams v. Griffiths, (1835) 2 Cr. M. & R. 45, 41 R.R. 685; Scholey v. Walton, (1844) 12 M. & W. 510, 67 R.R. 414. Hence, an agreed statement of accounts where all the items are on one side only, if the statement is not signed by the party liable and is inoperative as an acknowledgment, will not be allowed to support an action on an account stated in respect of items which are statute-barred—Jones v. Ryder, (1838) 4 M. & W. 32; Nash v. Hill, 1 F. & F. 198, 115 R.R. 897; Guljar v. Sariman, 36 C.L.J. 228, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 71, 72 I.C. 692. See Notes under Art. 64.

Moneys realised in execution sale cannot be regarded as amounting to payment, because a payment relied on must be a voluntary acknowledgment by the person making the payment, of his liability and an admission of the title of the person to whom the payment is made—Ram Chandra v. Devba, 6 Bom. 626; Raghunath v. Shiromonee, 24 W.R. 20; Bemul v. Ikbal, 25 W.R. 249.

Under this section, a payment is not a good payment unless it is made to the person entitled—Venkata Krishniah v. Subbarayudu, 40 Mad. 698 (699). It must be made to the creditor or some one who is his agent. Payment to a stranger is inoperative —Stamford Banking Co. v. Smith, [1892] 1 Q.B. 765. Payment made to a person who is acting as the creditor's administrator, although his title is defective, is sufficient —Clark v. Hooper, 10 Bing. 480.

Where a customer overdraws account on different occasions each payment made by the customer over his signature goes to extend limitation in regard to the particular overdraft which it goes to repay and which would be the earliest item outstanding on the debit side. The payment would therefore be of no avail to save limitation in respect of the general balance of account. The fact that part of the floating balance is secured will not make a difference in this respect—Basanta v. Chota Nagpur Banking Association Ltd., 26 Pat. 231, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 18.

If there are two debts, and a payment is made by the debtor without specification of the debt towards which the payment is made, the creditor can appropriate the money towards any debt he likes. See section 60, Contract Act. But so far as the question of limitation is concerned, such appropriation by the creditor does not keep the debts alive. Under section 20, the payment is viewed from the standpoint of the debtor and hence the determining factor is the intention of the debtor in making the payment and not that of the creditor in appropriating it. Where, therefore, the debtor makes payment to his creditor, to whom he owes two debts, the mere appropriation of the payment by the creditor to one of the debts, cannot in the absence of evidence to show the debtor's intention, save limitation in respect of that debt —Parma Lal v. Ram Singh, 10 Lah. 750, 116 I.C. 549, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 288 (289). 30 P.L.R. 223. It must be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the payment was actually made. The mere statement of the creditor that he received or appropriated certain sum is not sufficient—Ammalu v. Narayanan, 51 Mad. 549, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 509 (512), 111 I.C. 210.

Where a payment is made by a person who fills two different capacities, the capacity in which he pays is a question of fact. No presumption arises that such payment is made in both capacities. On the other hand, in the absence of any evidence to show that the payment is made in both capacities, there is a presumption that the payment is made in the personal capacity of the person making it, in discharge of his own liability—Azizur v. Upendra, 66 C.L.J. 104, 42 C.W.N. 18, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 129.

Who can make payment:—A payment saves limitation under this section if it is made by a person liable to pay it. A purchaser of the equity of redemption is a person liable to pay the mortgage-debt within the meaning of this section; therefore, if under a mortgage decree for sale of the mortgaged property, to which he is a party though exempted from personal liability, he pays interest as such, such payment gives a fresh period of limitation for execution of the decree—Askaram v. Venkataswami, 44 Mad. 544; Bhuban Mohan v. Ram Gobinda, 54 Cal. 179, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1218, 98 I.C. 214; Naayana v. Venkatesa, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 135, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 395. A second mortgagee is a person liable to pay the first mortgagee on the ground that he can only get the property by redeeming the first mortgage—Bolding v. Lane, (1863) 1 DeG. J. & Sm. 122; Chinnery v. Evans, (1864) 11 H. L. Cas. 115 (135); Narayana v. Venkatasa, supra. Therefore where a purchaser of the mortgaged property at a sale by the Official Receiver in the insolvency of the mortgagor makes a payment to the first mortgagee towards interest and endorses the same on the mortgage deed, such payment starts a new period of limitation which affects a second mortgagee whose charge was created before payment—Narayana v. Venkatasa, supra. In respect of a pro-note executed by a deceased Mahomedan, one co-heir can make payment of interest to save limitation against the other co-heirs, as the co-heir is a person liable to pay the interest. It is immaterial that the co-heirs took the property of the deceased as tenants-in-common or that their interests are several—Narasimha v. Ibrahim, 56 M.L.J. 630, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 419 (420). See Note 210.

196. Interest:—It means interest or any part of the interest due—Abdul v. Mahtab, 35 All. 378, 11 A.L.J. 477, 20 I.C. 258.

Where there are several debts, and payment of interest has been made by the debtor without specification, the payment may reasonably be attributed to all the debts which are thus saved from limitation—Hingu v. Heramba, 13 C.L.J. 139, 8 I.C. 81; Sankaram v. Thiraviya, 51 I.C. 240 (following 13 C.L.J. 139).

197. Interest as such:—It must be interest paid as interest and stated to be so at the time of payment or there must be evidence from which it can be inferred that the debtor intended that the amount should be appropriated towards interest—

Kariyappa v. Rachapa, 24 Bom. 493 (499); Bitari Ram v. Kunji Singh, 19 C.W.N. 237, 20 I.C. 857. If the debtor makes a payment of a certain sum, but does not specify how that amount is to be appropriated, i.e., whether it is to be appropriated towards principal or towards interest, and there is nothing to show that he has made the payment towards interest as such, the mere appropriation by the creditor of the payment towards interest is not an indication that the debtor intended that the money should be applied towards interest. The Limitation Act says that the debtor must make the payment of interest as such, and it is the act of the debtor which gives a fresh starting point. The creditor cannot, by his own act and without any act of volition on the part of the debtor, make a fresh starting point of limitation—U Ba Gyi v. U Than, 7 Rang. 522, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 339 (340), 120 I.C. 897; Chanderpal v. Dunia, 19 I.C. 825; Muhammad Abdulla v. Bank Instalment Co., 31 All. 495 (496); Jago v. Mahadeo, 59 I.C. 709; Lalji v. Ghosi Ram, 7 O.W.N. 420, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 287 (288), 128 I.C. 276; Narain v. Chandrawati, 6 O.W.N. 776, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 479 (480); Havabu v. Emp., 40 Bom.L.R. 968, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 467; Harkabai v. Shankerbai, 45 Bom.L.R 1014, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 37; Dail v. Mahomed, I.L.R. (1944) Lah. 528, 45 P.L.R. 407, A.I.R. 1944 Lah. 88; Avudayyammal v. Ambassankar, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 347, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 398; Khan Sahib v. Uchil, 1938 Rang.L.R. 591, A.I.R. 1938 Rang 280; Kesar v. Bulagi, 42 P.L.R. 635, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 513. In other words, where payment is not expressed to be made on account of interest or on account of principal and interest, but is simply made on account of the debt, it cannot be said that there is a payment on account of interest as such, and limitation will not be saved on that footing. The word 'as such' means that there must be at the time of payment some mention that the payment is wholly or partly for interest—Hormasji v. Hajrat Yarkhan, 28 Bom.L.R. 569, 96 I.C. 311, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 423; Ammalu v. Narayanam, 51 Mad. 549, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 509 (512), 111 I.C. 210; Ram Prasad v. Binaek, 55 All. 632, 1933 A.L.J. 930, A I.R. 1933 All. 453 (455), 144 I.C. 899; Kripa v. Balak, A.I.R. 1935 All 47, 1933 A.L.J. 23; Rambohar v. Chaturghun, A.I.R. 1935 All. 58, 1935 A.L.J. 304 (Dist.); and even though the fact of payment appears in the handwriting of the debtor, limitation cannot be saved on the assumption that a part of the principal has been paid—Ram Prasad v. Binaek, supra. Thus, the defendant at different times made payments to the plaintiff, who was his creditor, in reduction of the general balance of account against him, but without intimating that any of such payments was to be appropriated in satisfaction of the interest due on his debt, and without making any memorandum. It was held that there had been no payment of interest "as such," nor any payment of principal as there was no memorandum by the payer—Hanmantmal v. Ramba Bai, 3 Bom. 198; Damodar v. Janki Rai, 5 Bom.L.R. 350; Maheswar v. Baidyanath, 7 I.C. 7; Muinuddin v. Muhammad, 1916 P.L.R 68, 31 I.C. 782; Narain v. Chandrawati, 6 O.W.N. 776, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 479 (480); Shyam v. Dolgobind, 24 Pat L.T. 21, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 395; Girdhari v. Kishore, 1940 A.L.J. 332, A.I.R. 1940 All. 338. The Rangoon High Court has taken a contrary view and has held that in such a case the payment must be regarded as payment towards principal. The reason given is when a debtor pays he must intend to pay either towards interest or towards principal; he must have one or other of these two intentions; Khan Sahib v. Uchil Ahmed, 1938 Rang.L.R. 591, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 280. The plaintiff must establish not only that there was payment within time but also that there was either an express limitation by the debtor or circumstances exist which make the conclusion inevitable that the payment was made on account of the interest of the particular debt sued on —Muinuddin v. Muhammad, 1916 P.L.R. 68, 31 I.C. 782. If the debtor is shown to have consented to such appropriation or to have been aware of it, it may be treated as a payment of interest as such—Havabu v. Isup, 40 Bom.L.R. 968, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 467. It is not essential that the debtor should on every occasion of payment state explicitly that the payment is made on account of interest as such; it is sufficient if circumstances exist which lead to the inevitable conclusion that the payment must have been made on account of interest—Charu Chandra v. Karam Bux, 27 C.L.J. 141, 43 I.C. 812; Idan Sadagar v. Premsukdas, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 583. The question whether a payment was made on account of interest as such must be determined on the facts of each case. Where the amount paid was less than the amount due on account of interest, it could be presumed that the payment was made towards interest—Janaki Ammal v. Srinivasa, 66 M.L.J. 40, 148 I.C. 126, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 45 (46). An endorsement otherwise fulfilling the requirements of sec. 20 need not necessarily show on the face of it that the payment was towards interest. Sections 91 and 92, Evidence Act do not preclude evidence being given to show that at the time when the payment was made the debtor expressly stated that it should be appropriated towards interest—Peveylal v. Md. Yusuf, A.I.R. 1937 All. 640. It can be established by external evidence—Bichitrananda v. Mir Mahabub, 12 Cut.L.T. 80, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 275; Govindram v. Gulabrao, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 478, 1949 N.L.J. 189, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 394; Rajarejeswari v. Sankaranarayana, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 93, I L.R. (1948) Mad. 351, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 155 (endorsement of interest by mistake in another bond); Ram Shah v. Lalchand, 67 I.A. 160. There is no rule of law which says that the fact of a payment having been made towards interest due should be proved only by documentary evidence; Kandaswami Thevammal, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 1090, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 620, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 601. It is not necessary that the character of the payment as intended to go towards interest or towards principal must appear by the writing—Jujisthe v. Magata, 9 Cut.L.T. 14. No question of admissibility of oral evidence can arise—Jagdish v. Gazadhar, 20 Luck. 43, 1944 O.W.N. 154. It is not competent for a creditor to establish it by evidence 'aliunde'—Khat v. Surajpal, 1940 O.W.N. 807, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 56. Where the amount paid was the whole amount that was due, both principal and interest, it is impossible to draw any other inference than that a part of this amount was paid as interest—Bandhu v. Kayastha Corporation, 93 I.C. 295, A.I.R. 1926 All. 329.

Where a certain sum was paid "towards principal and interest," or expressed to be made on account of principal and interest, but it was not specified how much was paid for principal and how much for interest, it was held that there was nevertheless a payment of interest as such—Rai Mohan v. Lakshu, 6 I.C. 16 (Cal.); Subraya v. Pakaya, 4 Bom.L.R. 231. In other words, if there is in fact a payment of interest expressed to be such, it is immaterial if such payment of interest is mixed up with a part-payment of principal—Subraya v. Pakaya, 4 Bom.L.R. 231. The Madras High Court has taken a contrary view in Avudayyammal v. Ambasankar, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 347, A I.R. 1944 Mad. 498 where it has been held that the mere fact that a payment is made towards principal and interest where both are due and the sum paid does not exceed the one or the other, cannot involve the implication that any part of the payment was intended by the debtor to go towards interest. Such a payment is a payment generally on account or an open payment and cannot be regarded as a payment towards interest as such.

Where there was an express provision in the bond that any money paid was to be applied first towards payment of interest and next towards payment of principal, and money, was paid by the debtor from time to time, it was held that it might be safely assumed that the payment was for interest as such—Gopi Nath v. Hardeo, 31 All. 285. It is not necessary to repeat the formula each time the payment is made—Govindram v. Gulabrao, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 478, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 394, 1949 N.L.J. 189.

If the payment by a debtor is not payment of interest as such within sec. 20, it cannot be said that the payment must of necessity be payment of principal and so fall under the second branch of the section. For, if the payment have been actually appropriated to interest, then in fact there has been no part payment of principal—U. Sin v. U. Tun Si, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 473. If therefore, until after the expiry of the prescribed period the creditor has treated the sum as paid on account of interest or has not done anything to treat it as paid on account of principal, then under the amended section part payment of principal has not been established—Ram Shah v. Lalchand, 67 I.A. 160, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 63; Ram Chandra v. Shitu, 24 Pat. 96, 1945 P.W.N. 264, A.I.R 1945 Pat. 271; Kesar v. Bulaqui, 42 P.L.R. 635, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 513; nor can the creditor be allowed to appropriate it towards principal during the course of the suit when he has in fact appropriated and notified the defendant that he has appropriated to interest—Harkubai v. Shankerbai, 45 Bom.L.R. 1014, A.I.R. 1944 Bom. 37.

Under sec. 20 no payment of interest can be made to avail unless it is a payment of interest as such. Hence some acknowledgment must be given by the payer at the time of the payment that the money paid is intended by him to be a payment of interest or there must be sufficient evidence from which it can be inferred that the debtor intended that the amount should be appropriated towards interest—U. Sin v. U. Tin Si, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 473. There is nothing in law which requires that the payment of interest as such must necessarily appear in the hand-writing of or under the signature of the party making the payments though it is necessary that it must be clearly mentioned at the time of the payment that it was made on account of interest—Bachchu v. Bhagwati, 15 Luck. 524, 1940 O.W.N. 289, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh. 179. A contrary view has been taken in Zaman v. Ram, 14 Luck. 588, 1939 O.W.N. 203, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 141 where it has been held that there must be acknowledgment in writing of payment of interest as such.

When there is no other loan except that evidenced by a promissory note, payments of interest made by the borrower and endorsed on the back of the note are sufficient to save limitation for a suit on the original loan under sub-section (1) of this section—Sridhar v. Jahar, 49 C.W.N. 87, A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 268; or when the amount paid is more than the amount due as interest, a part of it will be presumed to have been made towards principal—Kesar v. Balaqi, 42 P.L.R. 635, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 513.

Where the payment is evidenced by writing which is signed by the person making the payment, it makes no difference whether the payment is held to be for interest or for principal or for both—Lakshmi Naidu v. Gunnamma, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 101, 58 Mad. 418, 1935 M.W.N. 17, 67 M.L.J. 470, 41 L.W. 94, 154 I.C. 1035. In Nageshar v Batukakumari, A.I.R. 1935 All. 605 the point was raised but was not decided. On the facts of the case it was found that the payments referred to in the endorsements were not payments made towards interest as such, but were payments of principal.

The Calcutta High Court in a case proceeded to the length of saying that where payments were made towards a debt, but there is nothing to show whether they had been made in respect of principal or interest, the Court is entitled to find out on the evidence for what purpose the payments were made—Hem Chandra v. Purna Chandra, 44 Cal. 567 (571); Arjan Mal v. Amar Singh, 3 Lah.L.J. 250, A.I.R. 1921 Jour. 33. A payment of interest on a mortgage-bond, not expressly made as such, can nevertheless be taken as payment towards principal, if the fact of the payment appears from a document in the hand-writing of the debtor making the same—Hemchandra v. Purna Chandra, 44 Cal. 567 (571). The Bombay High Court did not decide the point though raised—Tayerali v. Garabad, 41 Bom.L.R. 455, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 252. Where interest was paid on an unregistered mortgage-bond and the payment was entered in the bond, it was held that as the bond, not being registered, was not admissible in evidence, there was no payment of interest as such—Venkaji v. Shiramapa, 19 Bom. 663. So also payments made towards a void mortgage does not save limitation—Panchoo v. Ram Sunder, I.L.R. (1943) All. 604, 1943 A.L.J. 250, A.I.R. 1943 All. 294.

The point was recently fully considered by a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court. The Full Bench held that where money is paid by a debtor without specifying whether the payment is towards interest or towards principal, leaving it to the option of the creditor to appropriate it as he likes, and the creditor appropriates it towards interest, there is neither a payment of interest as such nor a part payment of the principal within the meaning of sec. 20—(Per Sulaiman, C. J., and Niamatullah and Rachhpal Singh, JJ., Contra, Thom and Bajpai, JJ.—Udeypal v. Lakshmichand, 58 All. 261 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1935 All. 946, 1935 A.L.J. 1029, 159 I.C. 387. This case was followed in Lalchand v. Raman, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 820, 39 P.L.R. 622.

A mere payment of interest is useless to save limitation unless the interest has been paid: (a) before the expiration of the period; (b) paid as such, and (c) by the person liable to pay the debt or by his duly authorised agent. The words 'paid as such' necessarily imply that the interest must have been paid 'as interest,' which in its turn implies that it must have been paid as interest at the time of its payment. It should be payment of interest professedly as interest which means that at the time of making the payment, the debtor should distinctly appropriate it towards interest and inform the creditor that he is doing so, so that the creditor thereafter may not have the option of appropriating it towards the principal.

Where a debtor makes a general payment without specifying whether he is making it towards interest or principal, it is the absolute right of the creditor to make an appropriation. All that this means is that it is open to him to accept the payment either towards part payment of interest or towards part payment of principal But that has nothing to do with the question of limitation. By crediting the payment towards the part payment of interest the creditor would not be entitled to claim a fresh period of limitation because the payment had not been made towards interest as such within sec. 20—Udeypal v. Lakshmi, supra, (per Sulaiman C. J.). The conflict of decisions has been set at rest by the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Rama Shah v. Lalchand, 67 I.A. 160, I.L.R. (1940) Lah. 470, 44 C.W.N. 625, 71 C.L.J. 444, 42 Bom.L.R. 640, 1940 A.L.J. 639. (1940) 1 M.L.J. 895, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 63, 1940 P.W.N. 935 where their Lordships approved the decision in Udeylal v. Lakshmi, supra and held that so far as payment of interest is concerned it is necessary even under the amended section that it should be paid "as such," that is to say, the intention of the debtor must be shown to have been that the payment should go towards interest. Consequently, although the creditor may appropriate an open payment towards interest as well, such appropriation will not give a fresh start to limitation, even when the requirement as to writing is satisfied, in as much as there will be no payment of interest "as such" by the debtor.

But this question does not arise where there is option of the parties to appropriate and under the provisions of law, e.g., sec. 13 (f) of the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act, the payment must be appropriated towards interest first and the residure, if any, towards principal—Lachhia v. Nagindas, 45 Bom.L.R. 178, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 115. As to the applicability of this section to suit under the Dekkhan Agriculturists Relief Act, see Keshab v. Bhagwan, 44 Bom.L.R. 138, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 131.

From the 1st day of January 1928, a payment of interest and a part-payment of principal stand on the same footing, for it appears from the amendment of the proviso that all payments of interest made from that date must be endorsed, like a part-payment of principal, in the handwriting of, or in a writing signed by the person making the same. The words, "as such" have no more any special significance and should be omitted. As to payments made before 1st January 1928, the words "as such" have some significance. As to payments made after that date they are now placed on an equality. Therefore, the words "as such" are material when the Court has to consider the payment made before 1st January 1928, but they have no significance after the date mentioned—Bankanidhi v. Godipatna, 16 Pat. 294, 18 Pat.L.T. 563, A.I.R. 1938 Pat 183. The words "as such" are redundant since the amendment of the section in 1927—Santa v. Hari Kishore, 18 Pat. 253, 20 Pat.L.T. 175, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 389. After the 1st of January, 1928, it is a matter of complete indifference whether the payment is of interest or prinripal or both so long as it is a payment relating to the debt—Narayan v. Rama, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 235, 1939 N.L.J. 205, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 156. After the deletion of the words "as such" the sub-section applies to any part payment by the debtor, although the debtor has not made clear whether the payment was made towards the interest or towards the principal as such—Ambalal v. Jani, A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 347, 58 Bom.L.R. 399. See Notes under "Change," ante.

Labour in lieu of interest:—Where the plaintiff proves that he received interest through the labour of the defendants till within three years before suit, his claim is not barred by limitation—Swaminatha v. Mandaiyan, 3 L.W. 552, 35 I.C. 480; see also Muthukrishna v. Pakkiri, 33 I.C. 134 (Mad.).

198. Part payment of principal:—Where part of the principal is paid, the fact of its being a part-payment need not be stated in so many words; it may be inferred from the writing itself or from other evidence regarding the state of accounts between the parties—Bharat National Bank v. Bishan Lal, 13 Lah. 448, 33 P.L.R. 42, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 212 (213), 135 I.C. 673; Ranchordas v. Pestonji, 9 Bom.L.R. 1329, Thus, if it appears that no interest was due at the time when the payment was made, it may be inferred that the payment could only have been made in part-payment of the principal—Curlender v. Abdul Hamid, 43 All. 216 (219), A.I.R. 1921 All. 335. Where a decree does not bear any interest, any payment made by the judgment-debtor must be taken to have been made in part-payment of the principal—Harendra v. Gyan Chandra, 22 C.W.N. 325 (328). So also, where the debt due does not bear interest, the payment must be in part payment of principal, Kesar v. Wazir, 42 P.L.R. 638, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 442; Kesar v. Bulaqi, 42 P.L.R. 635, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 513. The words, 'as such' should not be read into the second para of sub-section (1); the law does not require that the part-payment of principal should be made as such; i.e., it is not necessary that the words 'part payment of the principal' should appear in the entry; it is the fact of payment which should appear in the writing of the person making the same. Therefore, where a sum of money in part-payment of the principal was sent by the debtor to the creditor along with a letter in the handwriting of the debtor, but it was not expressly stated that the amount was paid "in part-payment of principal" held that the payment was a good payment and saved limitation—Curlender v. Abdul Hamid, 43 All. 216 (219). The endorsement need not specify that the payment was made towards the principal; all that is required is that the fact of payment should appear in the handwriting of the person making the same—Jada Ankamma v. Nadimpalle Rama, 6 Mad. 281; Sakharam v. Keval, 44 Bom. 392 (397); Jawahir v. Ghulam, 40 P.L.R. 124, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 347; Bur Singh v. Sirki Bros., 42 P.L.R. 103, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 106; Ram Shah v. Lal Chand, supra. The proviso requires not that the part-payment of the principal as such should appear in the handwriting of the person making the payment, but that the fact of payment should so appear—In re Ambrose Summers, 23 Cal. 592. If the legislature had desired that there must further be recorded in handwriting of the debtor the fact that the payment is made towards the principal, it would have inserted the words, "as such" after the words "fact of payment" (in the old proviso)—M. B. Singh & Co. v. Sircar & Co., 1930 A.L.J. 590, A.I.R. 1930 All. 392 (395). By the Amendment Act I of 1927, the words "fact of payment" have been changed into the words "acknowledgment of payment."

When a payment is made without specifying whether it is for interest or for principal and the creditor also makes no appropriation at the time of the payment the payment in order to be available under this section, to the creditor as payment on account of principal must be made within the time for filling a suit and further the creditor must be proved to have, in the exercise of his right of appropriation, done within the prescribed period something which treats the payment as made on account of principal—Rishi v. Krishna, 15 Luck. 573, 1940 O.W.N. 647, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 340 (F.B.); Sarab v. Dwarka, 1945 P.W.N. 178, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 59; Ajodhya v. Gobind, 1946 P.W.N. 349, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 404; Ram Shah v. Lal Chand, 67 I.A. 160. The fact that the appropriation has been made towards principal within the period of limitation can appear from the creditor's books of account—Sitaram v. Sitaram, I.L.R. (1941) All. 291, 1941 A.L.J. 50, A.I.R. 1941 All. 132; Muslim Bank v. Mahomed, I.L.R. (1943) All. 598, 1943 A.L.J. 255, A.I.R. 1943 All. 289; Ram Shah v. Lal Chand, supra.

If the part-payment is made within the period of limitation, the mere fact that the writing evidencing the payment was made after the period of limitation had expired would not render such handwriting useless for the purpose of saving a claim from the limitation bar. This section requires that the payment must be made within the period of limitation, it does not require that the writing should be made before the expiration of the period. It only requires a writing as the mode of proving the fact of payment—Venkatasubba v. Appusundaram, 17 Mad. 92; Lal Singh v. Gulab, 55 All. 280. 146 I.C. 510; A.I.R. 1933 All. 363; Vishwanath v. Mahadeo, 57 Bom. 453, 144 I.C. 990, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 252 (253); Ramprasad v. Bansilal, 19 N.L.R. 6, 71 I.C. 17, A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 117; Md. Moizuddin v. Nalinibala, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 284 (287-288); U. Po Nyum v. Mah Ah Ma, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 118, 181 I.C. 765; Kesar v. Bulaqi, 42 P.L.R. 635, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 513; Mahabali v. Ram Dass, 1940 O.W.N. 156, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 177 (the words "before the expiration of the prescribed period" do not appear in the proviso and if the intention of the legislature had been that the acknowledgment should also be within the period of limitation they would have clearly said so in the proviso—Shyam v. Dolgobind, 24 Pat.L.T. 21, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 395; Ram Shah v. Lal Chand, 67 I.A. 160. See also Sant Lal v. Kamla Prasad, (1951) S.C.J. 768 A.I.R. 1951 S.C. 477; P. Kempegowda v. Channaveeriah, A.I.R. 1958 Mys. 43.

198A. Part payment in full discharge:—If a debtor makes a part-payment unaccompanied by an express denial or repudiation, an admission of a right in the payee for the balance of the debt may be inferred. But where, without there being a naked payment, the debtor expressly states in a letter that the payment is in full discharge, though as a matter of fact something more is found due, far from it being an admission of right, there is an unequivocal denial of it. Such a payment does not save limitation—Appasami Pillai v. Morangam, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 371, 1935 M.W.N. 783, 68 M.L.J. 73, 157 I.C. 259.

199. Actual payment not necessary at the time of endorsement:—Where an endorsement of payment on a bond is sought to save the bond from limitation, it is not necessary that there should be an actual payment of money at the time of the endorsement—Thesiger v. Srinivisa, 10 M.L.J. 25; Lakshmi v. Ramaswamy, 26 I.C. 754; Ramakrishna v. Venkatasubba, 28 I.C. 15; Sheoji v. Motilal, A.I.R. 1950 Ajmer 11. But the period is to be reckoned from the date of the payment and not from the date of endorsement of such payment—Lakhminarasimham v. Bharata, 9 M.L.T. 216, 8 I.C. 349.

200. Handwriting of the person making the same:—The fact of part-payment of the principal of a debt (and, under the present law, of interest also) must appear in the hand-writing of, or in a writing signed by (under the present law) the person making the payment and not in that of any other person, even though the latter may have been expressly authorised to endorse the fact of payment—Manindra v. Kanhai, 4 P.L.J. 365, 48 I.C. 728; Bishen Parkash v. Siddique, 1 P.L.J. 474, 35 I.C. 375; Mukhi Haji Rahmuttulla v. Coverji, 23 Cal. 546 (F.B.); Joshi Bhaishankar v. Bai Parvati, 26 Bom. 246, 3 Bom.L.R. 834. Thus where payments are made by the daughters of the debtor not as messengers of their father but as independant persons, actually making the payments either on their own behalf or on behalf of their father, in order to save limitation the endorsement must each be written or signed by that one of them which made such payment—U Po Nyun v. Mah Ah Ma, A.I.R 1939 Rang. 118, 181 I.C. 765. The actual payment by the debtor is not necessary provided that the acknowledgment required by this section is in the handwriting of the person making the payment. But the acknowledgment must appear on its face to be on account of the debt—Gobind v. Chuni, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 47, 196 I.C. 392. A letter written and signed by the debtor along with a part-payment of principal would save limitation—Viswanath v. Sri Ramchandra, 17 M.L.T. 78, 27 I.C. 744; Sakharam v. Keval, 44 Bom. 392.

If at the time when the debtor made a payment (which was within time), there was no writing in the hand of or signed by the defendant, the fact that the defendant recited the payment in his written statement which was signed by him would not satisfy the requirements of this section and would not save limitation if the suit was brought out of time—Debji Ghelabhai v. R. D. Metha & Co., 39 C.W.N. 139 (141), A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 255 (256).

Where the endorsement of part-payment of principal was in the handwriting of a person other than the debtor, but it was signed by the debtor, it was held (prior to the Amendment of 1927) that this was not a sufficient compliance with the proviso. Where part-payment of the principal of a debt was made by a person who could write, it was held that the whole of the endorsement recording the payment (and not the signature only) should be written by the person who made the payment—Lodd Gobindoss v. Rukmani, 38 Mad. 438; Venkatakrishniah v. Subbarayudu, 40 Mad. 698 (700); Nivaj Khan v. Dadabhai, 41 Bom. 166; Santishwar v. Lakhikanta, 35 Cal. 813 (814), Bisheshwar v. Madho Rao, 17 N.L.R. 40. 62 I.C 297. But in such circumstances it was also held that although the payment was not good as part-payment of the principal within the meaning of this section, still the endorsement would amount to an acknowledgment of liability under section 19 so as to save limitation. The meaning of the endorsement was that the debtor made a part-payment of the amount due on the bond, which was certainly an acknowledgment that more money was due—Venkatakrishniah v. Subbarayudu, 40 Mad. 698 (700), following Jaganadha v. Rama Sahu, 17 M.L.T. 80, 27 I.C. 747. Where the fact of payment appears in the handwriting of the debtor there is no reason why the said writing should not be taken as an acknowledgment of payment also. There is nothing in this section which precludes the same document as being treated as evidence of fact of payment as well as an acknowledgment of payment—Profulla v. Jatindra, I.L.R. (1938) 2 Cal. 320, 42 C.W.N. 548, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 538. But under the present proviso as amended by the Amendment Act I of 1927, the addition of the words "or in a writing signed by" shows that it is no longer necessary (in case of a payment made on or after 1st January 1928) that the whole of the endorsement must be written by the person making the payment; it will be sufficient if it is merely signed by him, although it is written by another person This change in the law, however, has not been noticed in Maung Tun v. U. Aung, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 64 (65), 126 I.C. 540; U Paw Tint v. U Than, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 112, 181 I.C. 393.

In case of an illiterate man, sec. 3 (52) of the General Clauses Act provides that the word "sign" includes his mark. And so, where the payment is made by a person who does not know how to write, the endorsement may be made in the handwriting of a third party and the payer may subscribe his mark to the endorsement—Ellappa v Annamalai, 7 Mad. 76; Sesha Charlu v. Seshaya, 7 Mad. 55; Baleram v. Sobha Sheikh, 28 C.L.J. 222, 23 C.W.N. 930 (931), 44 I.C. 516; Jamna v. Jaga Bhana, 28 Bom. 262; Hari Govind v. Gangubai, 52 Bom. 356, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 417 (418), 109 I.C. 702; Faizur v. Feroz, A.I.R. 1943 Pesh. 36. And the fact that the description of the mark is written by another person who did not write the endorsement is immaterial, because the mark is complete even without the description—Hari Govind v. Gangubai, supra. Where no such mark is affixed, the provision of law has not been complied with —Baloram v. Sobha Sheikh, (supra); Joshi v. Bai Parvati, 26 Bom. 246; Banga Ram v. Nikka, 29 P.L.R. 438, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 157. The Patna High Court however holds that, if the person making the payment is illiterate, it is sufficient if the endorsement is made by another person on his behalf, and it is not necessary for the payer to make any mark or thumb-impression under the endorsement—Sri Ram v. Kashi Mollah, 2 P.L.T. 355, 62 I.C. 644 (645), A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 476. The Calcutta High Court has followed the Patna view even in respect of a payment of interest made after the 1st January 1928, and has held that if an endorsement of payment of interest was made by a scribe on behalf of an illiterate debtor, and was also signed by him on behalf of the debtor, but the debtor himself merely touched the pen but made no mark beneath the endorsement, this was a sufficient signature, as it was the prevailing custom of signing by illiterate persons in Bengal—Rajani v. Digindra, 36 C.W.N. 188 (189), 137 I.C. 788, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 440.

Payment through messenger or by money order:—Where an agent sent money through a mohurrir or servant and then followed it up by an entry of such payment with his own hand in his account book, the payment should be treated as made by the agent and not by the mohurrir. The writing by the agent in his account book complied with the requirements of this section. Writing by the mohurrir is not necessary, as he is a mere messenger—Sarajubala v. Sarada, 23 C.W.N. 336, (340), 50 I.C. 862. The words "person making the same (payment)" do not necessarily mean the person who physically hands over the money. So, if part-payment of principal is made by an agent of the debtor, but the money is sent through a peon with a slip signed by the agent, it is the agent who makes the payment, and since the fact of the payment appears in the handwriting of the agent (in the slip) it is sufficient to save limitation. It is not necessary that the fact of payment should appear in the handwriting of the peon who physically hands over the money. Similarly, if an agent of the debtor sends a cheque or notes by post, the person actually making the payment and physically handing over the notes or cheque is the postman. But certainly the postman is not the person who "makes the payment" within the meaning of this section, and his handwriting is not required. The postman or the peon is merely a conduit pipe through which the money passes to the creditor, the duly authorised agent who sent the cheque or notes being regarded as the person who made the payment—Ramkumar v. Nanuram, 53 Cal. 163, 94 I.C. 657, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 510 (511). A money-order coupon written by the debtor, requesting the credit of the sum sent towards the debt, satisfies the requirements of this section— Ram Sarup v. Md. Ubaidulla, A.I.R. 1930 All. 123 (124), 124 I.C. 22.

Payment by two debtors:—Where two persons are liable on a debt embodied in a Khata, and they make payments towards satisfaction of the debt, it is not necessary that both persons should make the entries in the creditor's books. It is enough if the writing is made by the debtor paying the debt, and is signed by both the debtors, because under this section it is sufficient if the fact of payment appears in the handwriting of the person making the same—Devchand v. Jamshedji, 25 Bom.L.R. 354, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 309, 74 I.C. 302.

Signature made before writing:—Where at the time of making payment the debtors simply signed their names on the back of the promissory note but did not write anything and then afterwards another person, without any authorisation of the debtors, wrote the endorsement above the signatures of the debtors, held that as the signatures were made before the writing, the writing was not an "acknowledgment of payment in a writing signed by the debtors" within the meaning of this section, nor did the bare signatures of the debtors amount to an acknowledgment under sec. 19—Talok v. M. S. V. Seugan, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 287 (288).

201. Payment by cheque:—Where a debtor paid a certain sum of money by a cheque, held that as it was a mere order for payment and not a payment itself and did not show on its face that it was given as a part-payment of the principal, it was not sufficient to keep alive the creditor's claim under this section—Sardar Bachittar Singh v. Jagan Nath, 1 P.R. 1897. Where the only evidence in the handwriting of the debtor of the part-payment of the principal of a debt was the endorsement of a cheque to the creditor, such endorsement did not satisfy the conditions of this section—Mackenzie v. Tiruvengadathan, 9 Mad. 271; Ram Chandra v. Chandi Prasad, 19 All. 307. These are old decisions given at a time when payment by cheque was not so prevalent as in the present day. In later cases it has been held, in consonance with the practice observed in the business world of modern times, that where a cheque is signed by the debtor and addressed to the creditor in part-payment of the principal, and is received by the creditor as such, and the cheque is honoured, the proviso is sufficiently complied with. The giving or handing of the cheque is considered as payment, and the payment is to be considered to be in the handwriting of the debtor appearing in the cheque or in its endorsement. If the cheque is dishonoured, the original debt revives—Kedar Nath v. Dinobandhu, 42 Cal. 1043, 19 C.W.N. 724; Jagtu Mal v. Charanji, 14 Lah. 530, 141 I.C. 611, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 341; M. B. Singh & Co. v. Sircar & Co., 52 All. 459, 1930 A L.J. 590, 127 I.C. 581, A.I.R. 1930 All. 392 (394); Cholirmal v. Rupchand, 25 S L.R. 360, A.I R. 1931 Sind 28 (29); Prafulla v. Jatindra, I.L.R. (1938) 2 Cal. 320, 42 C.W N. 548, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 538; Krishnaswami v. Ramaswami, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 202, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 515; Fatima v. Official Trustee, A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 344, 198 I.C. 564; Chintaman v. Sadguru, A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 553; Subrahmanyam v. Venkataratnam, A.I.R. 1956 Andhra 105; Mangat Ram v. Mange Lal, I.L.R. 1953 Punj. 439, A.I R. 1954 Punj. 162. If a cheque is given in part-payment of a debt, the fresh period of limitation under this section should be computed from the actual giving of the cheque, and not from the date when the Bank pays cash for it. But if a cheque is handed over to the creditor on the 5th January after banking hours, the Court will presume that the payment was made on the 6th January—Maurice v. Morley, 29 C.W.N. 496, 89 I.C. 508, A.I R. 1925 Cal. 937. In England also, payment by cheque has been held to be a good payment when the cheque is honoured. See Currie v. Misa, (1875) L.R. 10 Ex. 153 (164) and Turney v. Dodwell, (1854) E. & B. 136, cited in 42 Cal. 1043 at p. 1046. See also Garden v. Bruce, 37 L.J.C.P. 112, 3 C.P. 300. Where the debtor had addressed a letter to his creditor enclosing a cheque for a certain sum and requesting that it should be placed to the credit of the loan account, it was held to be sufficient—In re Ambrose Summers, 23 Cal. 592.

202. Effect of payment:—Payment of part of the mortgage-debt made by one of the mortgagors will give a fresh start of limitation to the mortgagee not only against the mortgagor making the payment but also against all the mortgagors—Achola-

sundari v. Doman, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 150, 90 I.C. 774; Ghasi Khan v. Thakur, 1929 A.L.J. 446, A.I.R. 1929 All. 380 (381); Baijnath v. Sati Lal, 19 Pat.L.T. 240, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 383. Payment of interest made by one heir of the original debtor is effectual under this section to save limitation against the other co-heirs also—Narasimha v. Ibrahim, 56 M.L.J. 630, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 419 (420), 118 I.C. 302. Payment of debt by one debtor would give the creditor a fresh period of limitation not only against the payer, but would make the debt enforceable against anyone liable for it—Velayudam v. Vaithilingam, 24 M.L.J. 66, 17 I.C. 619; Amir Mirza v. Lachhmi Narain, 7 Luck. 270, 138 I.C. 800, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 1; Banchhanidhi v. Udakar, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 214, 14 Cut.L.T. 51. A payment by one joint promisor liable to pay the debt is for the purpose of sec. 20 sufficient to operate against all the joint debtors, for a fresh period of limitation begins to run not merely in respect of the liability of the one who pays but in respect of the liability upon the whole debt—U Sin v. N Tun Si, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 473. But when the question is a matter not of the liability on the mortgage but on the personal covenant, a payment made by a co-mortgagor can not be deemed to be a payment of the other or others under this section. This section quite clearly implies apart from sec. 21 of the Limitation Act that one contractor is not the agent of the other or others so as to save limitation as against the other—Baijnath v. Satilal, supra. So also payment by one of the mortgagors after the death of the other mortgagor does not save limitation as against the heirs of the deceased mortgagor even though he is one of the heirs—Azizur v. Upendra, 66 C.L.J. 104, 42 C.W.N. 18, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 129. In this case the payment was made by the person who was one of the co-mortgagors and also an heir of the deceased co-mortgagor. Their Lordships held that in the absence of evidence to the contrary it must be presumed that the payment was made towards the discharge of his own liability as one of the original debtors.

A part-payment can avail not merely against the person making the payment or those deriving title under him subsequent to such payment but even against other persons liable in respect of the same debt—Lakshmi Naidu v. Gunnamma, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 101, 58 Mad. 418, 68 M.L.J. 470, 1935 M.W.N. 17, 47 L.W. 94, 154 I.C. 1053. The word "debtor" in paragraph 2 of sub-section (1) of this section connotes not only the person who contracted the debt but also his legal representatives—Laxminarayan v. Ashkar, A.I.R. 1951 Raj. 50. So after the death of a Hindu father if any payment is made towards the promissory note executed by him is made by any of his sons, the said payment will save limitation not only against the said person but also the other sons even though they have changed their religion—Soma Sundara v. Narasimha, I.L.R. (1939) Mad. 140, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 68, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 69. Contra—Arjun v. Rohina, 14 I.C. 128 (Cal).

The joint liability of the members of a Hindu Joint family for a family debt is not a debt within the meaning of this section, so that one member by making a part payment can keep the debt alive against all the others—Pangudaya v. Uthandiya, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 968, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 33, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 774.

In a mortgage without possession a portion of the produce was agreed to be paid as interest. The mortgagee sub-mortgaged half his rights. The sub-mortgagee continued to receive from the mortgagor his share of the produce up to a period within six years of the present suit which was brought by the sub-mortgagee against the original mortgagee. The question arose as to whether limitation was saved as against the original mortgagee by the payment of produce to the sub-mortgagee by the mortgagor within 6 years of the suit. Held that where a debt is kept alive by section 20 (1) by payment made by a person liable to pay it, its effect is to save limitation not only against the person who makes the payment, but also to make the debt enforceable against any one liable for it, and that in this case the debt was kept alive against the original mortgagee—Ram Chand v. Mewa, 3 P.R. 1918, 44 I.C. 213.

So long as the mortgagor has not parted with his interest in the mortgaged property and is liable under the mortgage he can make a payment which will serve under this section to start a fresh period of limitation—Kempamma v. Racha, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 153, A.I.R. 1947 Mad. 329.

A payment made by the mortgagor after he has assigned one of the mortgaged properties is sufficient to keep alive the mortgage-debt against the assignee—Krishna Chandra v. Bhairab, 32 Cal. 1077 (1080); Umesh Chandra v. Hemanga, 36 C.W.N. 1138 (1141). As the mortgagor is the debtor within the meaning of the 2nd para. of this section, the payment of part of the principal by him even after his equity of redemption has been purchased by a third person in execution of a money-decree against the mortgagor, gives the mortgagee a fresh period of limitation not only against the mortgagor but also against the purchaser of the equity of redemption—Domilal v. Roshan, 33 Cal. 1278 (1281), following Krishna Chandra v. Bhairab, supra, and dissenting from Newbould v. Smith, (1886) 33 Ch. D. 127; Thayyanayaki v. Sundarappa, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 308, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 913, A I.R. 1942 Mad. 200. A contrary view has been taken by the Assam High Court in Pitram v. Lalit, A.I.R. 1951 Assam 68, and also by the Patna High Court in Ramswarup v. Harihar, 21 Pat. 330, 23 Pat.L.T. 328, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 363 (the personal liability of the mortgagor was barred at the time of payment).

203. Agent duly authorised:—See Note 190 under sec. 19. Part-payment by an agent of the debtor within the lawful scope of his agency is sufficient—Jones v. Hughes, (1850) 5 Ex. 104; Newbould v. Smith, (1885) 29 Ch. D. 882. The agent who can give the creditor the benefit of sec. 20 has to act within the terms of his authority. If he exceeds his authority or does something which is not actually covered by his authority, he cannot bind the principal so as to give the creditor the benefit of this section—Balaguruswami v. Guruswami, 48 M.L.J. 506, 87 I.C. 989, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 703.

The agent authorised to make a payment may make the payment himself, or through a servant or friend. and in the latter case the payment is as good as a payment made by the agent himself—Duraiswami v. Krishnier, 10 L.W. 466, 50 I.C. 318 (320). See also Sarajubala v. Saroda, 23 C.W.N. 336 (339), 50 I.C. 862; Ram Kumar v. Nanuram, 53 Cal. 163 A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 510 (511), 94 I.C. 657.

When an agent is authorised to pay an amount towards the total amount of the bond, the authority extends to his paying an amount towards the interest due on the bond, and is not confined to paying only towards the principal, for the 'total amount' of the bond includes principal and interest; but where the authoirty is specific, that is to say, where the agent is authorised only to pay towards the principal, the agent will not be justified in paying towards interest—Karuppan v. Muruthanayagam, 51 M.L.J. 472, 98 I.C. 162, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1176. The authority referred to in this section is an authority to make the payment. It is not necessary under this section that the agent who makes the payment must also be expressly authorised to make the endorsement or get the same done by another. This section assumes that the authority to make the payment carries with it the authority to make the endorsement —Venkateswarulu v. Suryaprakasam, 53 M.L.J. 555, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 959, 105 I.C. 475.

The guardian of a minor appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act is an agent authorised to make a part-payment of the principal of a debt due by the ward, if it is shown that the guardian's act is for the protection and benefit of the ward's property—Annappagauda v. Sangadigyapa, 26 Bom. 221 (F.B.) (overruling Rammalsingji v. Vadilal, 20 Bom. 61); such a guardian is also an agent duly authorised to pay interest—Narendra v. Rai Charan, 29 Cal. 647. A testamentary guardian who continues to be the lawful guardian of property in spite of the marriage of the minor legatee is an "agent duly authorised to make payment"—Raja Rajeswari v. Sankaranara, I.L.R. (1948) Mad. 351, (1947) 2 M.L.J. 93, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 155. A natural guardian is also an agent duly authorised to pay principal and interest on behalf of the ward. See section 21, which generally authorises all lawful guardians to make payments and acknowledgments. The case of Tilak Singh v. Ghutta Singh, 26 All. 598 (where it was held that a natural guardian was not competent to pay interest so as to save the bar of limitation) was decided under the Act of 1877, and is no longer good law in view of sec. 21 of the Act of 1908. As to payment by defacto guardian, see Madhava v Subramaniya, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 556, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 152.

It is not necessary that the agent should be authorised in writing to make a payment, nor that he should be expressly authorised; it is sufficient that the authority is implied—Birjmohan v. Rudra Perkash, 17 Cal. 951; Ram Parshad v. Mool Chand, 1941 A.M.L.J. 63; Sukumari v. Dhirendra, 73 C.L.J. 356, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 643. It is to be inferred from the conduct of the parties as to whether there was any authority to make payment—Sukhdeo v. Sahdeo, A.I.R. 1947 Oudh 173, 229 I.C. 265. Thus, where it is agreed between a third person and the promisor that the former would discharge the latter's debt evidenced by a promissory note to the promisee in respect of principal and interest, and it is clear from the promisor's evidence that he left it to the third person to do so, an implied authority from the promisor to the third person to pay the interest on his behalf as it becomes due is established and any payment made by the third person saves limitation against the promisor. Moreover, as the third person was under a direct obligation to satisfy the debt, the payment was made by a "person liable to pay it"—National Bank of Upper India v. Bansidhar, 57 I.A. 1, 6 O.W.N. 1136, 34 C.W.N. 145 (149), A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 297. The words "duly authorised" include authority given by law, as well as authority given by act of parties. Thus, where the Karta of a joint Hindu family purporting to act for himself and his minor brother made part-payment of interest due on a debt contracted by himself and his father for joint family purposes, it was held that in making the payment the Karta acted both for himself and is minor brother, and was an agent duly authorised to make the payment—Chandra Kanta v. Behari Lal, 31 C.L.J. 7, 52 I.C. 436. The Karta of a joint family is the agent of the entire family duly authorised to make part-payments on behalf of the family—Bajrangi Prasad v. Kesho Singh, 6 Pat. 811, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 156 (158). A payment made by the manager of a joint Hindu family would save limitation as against all the other members who are liable to pay the debt—Annadacharan v. Jhatucharan, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 648, 158 I.C. 512. A payment towards principal and interest made by the manager, and an endorsement on the pro-note (executed by the manager for an amount borrowed for the expenses of the family) in his handwriting and over his signature have the effect of extending the period of limitation as against the junior members also, though the payment and endorsement do not purport to have been made and signed by him as manager—Thankammal v. Kunhamma, 53 I.C. 878 37 M.L.J. 369. Under the new sub-section (3) (b) of sec. 21, the manager of a joint family is expressedly authorised to make payment on behalf of the family, and such payment will save limitation. This principle applies so long as the family remains joint and not after the partition of the family as after partition there is no manager. So a payment made after partition by a member does not extend the period of limitation in respect of family debt so as to affect the erstwhile members—Pangudaya v. Uthandia, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 968, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 33, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 774; Rangaswami v. Sivaprakasam, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 251, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 883, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 925 (F.B.). So also the mere fact that the father is the manager is not sufficient to save limitation when there is no prooof that the loan was contracted for the benefit of the family—Juro Kanto v. Adikanta, 22 Pat.L.T. 1054, A.I.R. 1941 Pat 208. In the absence of other facts from which an authority can be implied there can be no saving of limitation by payment by father on a promissory note executed by the son—Kannayya v. Appala, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 369, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 954. A Burmese Budhist husband is not necessarily the agent of his wife. Though formal authorisation is not required under this section but it must be shown that there was at least implied authority—Maung v. Thom, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 287, 184 I.C. 622.

A vendee of the mortgaged property authorised to pay the mortgage debt is "an agent duly authorised" of the mortgagor—Parthasarathy v. Ekambara, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 624, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 579. So also where a subsequent mortgagee is authorised to pay off the dues of the first mortgagee the payment made by the subsequent mortgagee is payment by "an agent duly authorised" of the mortgagor—Ramlagan v. Ram Bilochan, 1941 P.W.N. 667, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 166.

A mortgagee who is required under his mortgage document to pay a portion of the consideration to a creditor of the mortgagor in discharge of the amount due to the creditor for principal and interest on a bond, cannot, by making payment of interest only to the creditor, keep the debt alive, his authority being to pay off both principal and interest—Alagappa v. Subramania, 26 M.L.J. 509, 23 I.C. 810. So also where the vendee is directed to pay off a mortgage debt in full, he cannot keep it alive by making part payment of the debt—Thinnappa v. Krishna, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 726; A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 6. Where a mortgagee undertakes as a part of consideration for the mortgage to discharge a debt due by the mortgagor, he cannot be deemed to have authority to make a part payment of the principal or a payment of interest, for purposes of this section. Whether there is authority to make part payment is a question of fact. If the person who is to make the payment is left with a discretion in the matter, his principal will have to suffer the consequences of a payment to account if the conditions of this section are complied with—Rama Chandra v. Shanta, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 191, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 77, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 67 (F.B.). A person who acts as solicitor to the mortgagor and mortgagee can make payment of interest to the mortgagee on behalf of the mortgagor, and such payment keeps alive the mortgage —Bradshaw v. Widdington, [1902] 2 Ch. 430. Where a firm owes a debt, and on one of the partners retiring, the remaining partners undertake to pay it, the payment of interest by the remaining partners to the creditor keeps alive the debt against the retiring partners, whether the creditor was aware of the agreement or not, provided there has been no novation of contract—Tucker v. Tucker, [1894] 1 Ch. 724.

Where a common manager appointed under sec. 95 of the Bengal Tenancy Act incurs a debt and it is agreed between him and the proprietors that he should pay off the debt out of the assets of the estate under his management, an authority is implied from the proprietors to the common manager to pay the interest on their behalf as it falls due, and this is sufficient to make the payments of interest by him effective under this section so as to save limitation against the proprietors. Mere entry of these payments in the common manager's books that the payments have been made on requisition of some of the proprietors will not affect the position in the absence of evidence that while making the payments the common manager did so with any such reservation—Sukumari v. Dhirendra, 73 C.L.J. 356, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 643.

The payment of part of a debt by a receiver appointed to the estate of the debtor will keep the debt alive, since the receiver is to be deemed as an agent of the debtor —Chinnery v. Evans, (1864) 11 H.L. Cas. 115; In re Hale, Lilley v. Food, [1899] 2 Ch. 107. See also Venku v. Subbaya, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 437.

Part payment by one judgment debtor independently of the other does not bring this section to save limitation. Sec. 21 (2) is explanatory and does not lay down any exceptions to the general principle embodied in this section—Ram Kumar v. Hira Lal, I.L.R. (1939) All. 258, 1939 A.L.J. 66, A.I.R. 1939 All. 230; Naziruddin v. Ramanand, 23 Luck. 114, 1947 O.W.N. 623, A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 193.

Court as 'Agent':—When a Court in discharge of its duty pays out money belonging to the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder, it is a duly authorised agent of the judgment-debtor to make the payment on his behalf, the fact of payment appearing in the paper written and signed by the Judge—Govindasami v. Dasai Goundan, 44 Mad. 971, 41 M.L.J. 423. In 1912, a final decree for sale was passed in a mortgage suit for Rs. 3,500 and odd. Two of the mortgaged properties were afterwards acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and the compensation money of Rs. 3,400 was deposited in Court and paid out to the decree-holder on 11th August, 1914. At the time of payment the Judge signed a paper showing that the amount was paid to the decree-holder in his presence and through the Court. On 10th August 1917 (that is, within three years from the payment but more than three years after the decree) the decree-holder filed an execution application for the balance due. Held that the application was not barred as the payment made by the Court in 1914 gave a fresh start for limitation—Ibid. If a debtor's assets are so placed either by his own act or by operation of law that if some other than he alone can release them for the purpose of making payments due from him, then the act of that other in operating upon the debtor's assets must be treated as the act of the debtor himself, the volition of the debtor in such a case being neither requisite nor relevant—Govindasami v. Dasai, supra. But where a certain amount was deposited in Court to the credit of a certain person V, and this sum being attached by one S who was suing V's son on a pro-note executed by V, it was paid over to him by the Court, held that this payment by the Court could not be construed as one made by the duly authorised agent of V's son. The mere fact that a Court holds moneys belonging to a debtor's father cannot constitute that Court the agent of the debtor himself. There must be communication with the son—Venkatasubbaya v. Seshayya, 51 M.L.J. 610, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 80, 98 I.C. 571. See also Tevar v. Tevar, A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 238.

A warrant officer cannot be regarded as an agent of the judgment debtor duly authorised to make payment. So payment made by him by attachment and sale of judgment debtor's property under a warrant issued by Court does not attract the operation of the section—Braja v. Ramendra, 1946 P.W.N. 116, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 31.

Principal debtor and surety:—Payment by the principal debtor does not give a fresh starting point against the surety, even in the absence of prohibition by the surety against the payment of interest by the debtor on his account—Gopal Daji v. Gopal Somu, 28 Bom. 248; Sami Aiyangar v. Luxmi, 21 M.L.J. 455, 9 I.C. 8; Jainarain v. Parmeshar, 8 O.W.N. 544, 132 I.C. 198, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 310; Seth Abde Ali v. Askaran, 20 N.L.R. 140, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 411. See Note 210 under sec. 21. Even though the interest was paid with the knowledge and consent of the surety and at his request, it does not keep alive the remedy against the surety unless there is evidence that such payment was made on behalf of the surety. The period of limitation as against the surety therefore runs from the date of the promissory note—Brojendra Kishore v. Hindusthan Co-operative Insurance Ld., 44 Cal. 978, 21 C.W.N. 482, 25 C.L.J. 238, 39 I.C. 705. The liability of the principal debtor and the liability of the surety are distinct and separate, although arising out of the same transaction; a payment by one person cannot therefore keep alive the remedy against the other—Ibid. Consequently, even if a suit is barred by limitation as against the prinhipal debtor, if the surety has made certain payments and endorsements on the bond on which the suit is based, thus preventing limitation running against him, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree against the surety (though not against the principal debtor)—U Ba Pe v. Ma Lay, 10 Rang. 321, 139 I.C. 738, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 88. The Calcutta High Court has taken a contrary view in Ranjit v. Kishori, I.L.R. (1940) 2 Cal. 362, 44 C.W.N. 985, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 401, where it has been held that in cases of principal and surety, there are two distinct contracts in respect of one debt common to both. It follows that payments of principal or interest and acknowledgments in accordance with the provisions of this section by either principal or surety create a fresh period of limitation in respect of the common debt as against either or both the principal and the surety. Where the form of guarantee is such that the surety agrees that the guarantee shall remain in force until the debt due is fully and finally adjusted, and that it will not be affected by forbearance or arrangement for giving time to or other facilities to the principal debtor there is by implication an authority to the principal to make payments and acknowledgments in accordance with the terms of this section. The case reported in Brojendra v. Hindusthan Co-operative Insurance Ltd., supra was distinguished on the ground that there the promissory note bore an endorsement signed by the surety "repayment guadanteed by me." But this view has been criticised in a recent Punjab case—Federal Bank of India v. Som Dev, I.L.R. 1955 Punj. 1263, A.I.R. 1956 Punj. 21. A surety who claims that he has been discharged must prove it affirmatively. Mere granting of time to the judgment debtor in the sense of staying his hands without placing himself under any binding obligation to do so, does not discharge the surety—Het Ram v. Aya Ram, 42 C.W.N. 509 (P.C.). In England, however, the law is otherwise, and there it is held that the payment of the interest or payment of the principal by the principal debtor will keep alive the debt as against the surety. The principal debtor making the payment is in effect the agent of the surety to make the payments which he made—Lindsell v. Phillips. (1885) 30 Ch. D. 291; Lewin v. Wilson, (1886) 11 App. Cas. 639.

204. Sub-section (2)—Scope:—The proviso to sub-section (1) of the section, inserted by the Amending Act of 1929 does not apply to this sub-section—Mathura v. Palakdhari, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 512, 187 I.C. 484. This sub-section has no application to charges—Gurdin v. Raj Kunwar, 18 Luck. 637, 1943 O.W.N. 85, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 211. Sub-section (2) is meant to extend the time for a suit by the mortgagee to recover a debt secured by the usufructury mortgage, and does not apply to a suit for redemption by the mortgagor—Md. Akbar v. Mt. Motai, 74 I.A. 285, I.L.R. (1947) Lah. 727, 50 Bom.L.R. 539, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 130, A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 36, 52 C.W.N. 142 (P.C.); Bhart v. Des Raj, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 157. The period provided for a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage can be extended by an acknowledgment of liability made in writing under sec. 19, but it is not intended that it should be extended indefinitely by payments in the shape of receipt of rent or produce by the mortgagee—Kallu v. Halki, 18 All. 295; Anwar v. Lalmir, 26 All. 167 (169); Khilanda v. Jhinda, 37 P.R. 1883; Piroze Khan v. Kanhaiya Ram, 6 Lah.L.J. 194, 78 I.C. 617, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 484; Bhagwan v. Madhav, 46 Bom. 1000, 24 Bom. L.R. 713. Receipts by a mortgagee in possession of the usufruct of the mortgaged property after a mortgage-decree is passed are treated as payments to the mortgagee under this section for the purpose of limitation, but such receipts cannot be held to come under the category of payment of 'money payable under the decree' within O. 21, r. 2, C. P. Code—Vaidhinadasamy v. Somasundaram, 28 Mad. 473 (478).

Receipt of rent or produce:—If the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged land and receives the produce of the land in lieu of interest, such receipt of produce must be deemed to be payment of interest within the meaning of this section, and limitation would begin to run from the date of the last of such payments—Vithoba v. Balkrishna, 45 Bom. 1206; Indrajit v. Gajadhar, 35 All. 270, 19 I.C. 238. Where the mortgagor is left in possession of part of the mortgaged property as tenant of the mortgagee, the receipt of rent and profit by the mortgagee should be considered as payments of interest as such within the meaning of sub-sec. (1) of this section—Ram Kumar v. Mahapal, I.L.R. (1938) All. 218, 1938 A.L.J. 18, A.I.R. 1938 All. 188. Where a property was usufructuarily mortgaged, and then the mortgagee executed a lease of the property in favour of the mortgagor, under which the mortgagor was to pay the Government revenue out of the rent, and to pay the balance of the rent to the mortgagee, held that the payment of Government revenue by the mortgagor amounted to a receipt of rent by the mortgagee, within the meaning of sub-section (2) —Eressa Menon v. Abdul Rahiman, 51 M.L.J. 378, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1061, 97 I.C. 941. Where a simple mortgage was executed in favour of a mortgagee, and subsequently a usufructuary mortgage was executed in favour of the same person but by the terms of the usufructuary mortgage the usufruct of the mortgaged property was given only to satisfy the interest due on the usufructuary mortgage and not the interest due on the simple mortgage, the enjoyment of usufruct could not be said to amount to payment of interest under the simple mortgage—Anpurna v. Ram Padarath, 49 All. 430, A.I.R. 1927 All. 417, 100 I.C. 670.

This sub-section does not refer expressly to the intention of the party who receives the rent or produce, and can be construed to apply wherever the mortgaged land is in the possession of the mortgagee. In such event the receipt of the rents and produce may be deemed a payment for the purpose of sub-section (1)—Bama Charan v. Nimai, 35 C.L.J. 58, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 114. This case was distinguished in Md. Yusuf v. N. Pillai, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 642, where it was pointed out that for the applicability of sec. 20 (cl. 2) the perception of rents and profits must be by a person in the capacity of a mortgagee. Where a person is also the owner of the property, the perception of rents and profits by him cannot be said to have been only in the capacity of a mortgagee. Thus where a person is in possession as a vendee of the mortgaged property, the receipt of rents and profits by him cannot be said to be only in the capacity of a mortgagee, even though he claims to be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee by payment of the mortgage—Girdharilal v. Ranoo, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 764, 1943 N.L.J. 611, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 37. But the position will be different when a mortgagee enters into possession of the mortgaged property under an invalid contract of sale. The fact that his sale is proved to be invalid cannot vitiate his title as mortgagee and the rents and profits received by him must be deemed to have been received by him as the mortgagee—Doraisami v. Periakaruppan, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 739, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 388, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 475 (reversing Peria-karuppan v. Doraisami, (1940) 1 M.L.J. 134, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 461); Sooryanarayana v. Saruf, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 373; A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 105. It has been held that receipt of profits by a usufructuary mortgagee even after the final decree in a mortgage suit amounts to receipt by way of interest to give fresh start of limitation—Ramaswami v. Kesavan, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 963, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 248, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 737 (reversing Kesavan v. Ramaswami, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 116, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 406). Receipt of the produce of land under a deed of mortgage required to be, but not, registered, cannot be deemed to be a payment for the purpose of this section because the deed is not admissible to prove that the rents were received as interest—Pichandi v. Kandasami, 7 Mad. 539; Balaprasad v. Bholanath, 9 N.L.R. 140, 21 I.C. 281; Venkaji v. Shidhramapa, 19 Bom. 663. Certain Vatan lands were mortgaged with possession. On the death of the mortgagor in 1901, the mortgage became void under sec. 5 of the Hereditary Officer's Act, 1874. The mortgagee, however, remained in possession till 1914 when the mortgagor's son took possession. The mortgagee thereupon sued in the same year to recover the mortgage amount. It was held that in as much as the mortgage became void in 1901, the possession of the mortgagee thereafter was only the possession of a trespasser, and the receipt of produce by him would not save limitation, as the lands were no longer 'mortgaged lands' within the meaning of sub-section (2) of this section. The suit was therefore barred—Krishnaji v. Kashim, 44 Bom. 500, 57 I.C. 76. So also the enjoyment of the usufruct of the property by a person in possession under a void mortgage is not that of a mortgagee but as a trespasser, and such enjoyment does not give a fresh start of limitation—Maksudam v. Niranjan, 19 Pat. 507, 21 Pat.L.T. 219, A.I.R 1940 Pat. 494; Ram Sukh v. Ram Pher, 1946 O.W.N. 341, A.I.R. 1947 Oudh 91.

205. Judgment-debt:—There was a conflict of decisions as to whether this section under the old Act applied to judgment-debts. The Calcutta and Madras High Courts held that the word 'debt' did not include judgment-debts—Kally Prosonna v. Heera Lal, 2 Cal. 468; Mungal v. Shama, 4 Cal. 708; Kader Buksh v. Gour, 6 C.W.N. 766; Periasami v. Krishna, 25 Mad. 431; Kuppusami v. Rangasami, 27 Mad. 608; the Allahabad and Bombay High Courts held that it applied to judgment-debts —Roshan v. Matadin, 26 All. 36; Parmanandas v. Vallabdas, 11 Bom. 506. This conflict has now been removed by the Explanation added to this section.

The Explanation lays down that the word 'debt' includes money payable under a decree. A decree means not only a final decree capable of execution but also a preliminary decree for sale, and such a preliminary decree constitutes a debt payable by the judgment-debtor within this Explanation. The time may be extended for an application for a final decree either under sec. 19 or sec. 20 in a fit case. But the payment in order to extend time must satisfy the requirements of sec. 20, i.e., it must be attested by some writing by the hand of the person making the payment—Baldeo Sahai v. Jafar, 49 All. 147, A.I.R. 1927 All. 159, 98 I.C. 818.

Payments made under a decree directing payment by instalments will be treated as part payment of the whole debt even though there was no default clause in the decree that on failure of any instalment the whole amount would become payable. The reason is that the decree created one single judgment debt payable by instalments and the claim to instalments arose on a single cause of action for a single debt—Kantilal v. Amratlal, 45 Bom.L.R. 497, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 260.

Some of the High Courts have in some cases expressed the view that an uncertified payment or adjustment towards a decree (i.e., a payment which has not been certified at the time of payment, but which is certified when the application for execution is made) will not operate to prolong the period of limitation provided for an application for execution of the decree—Bireswar v. Ambika, 45 Cal. 630 (633); Kutabulla v. Durga Charan, 16 C.W.N. 396 (397); Baij Nath v. Panna Lal, 46 All. 635 (636); Gokul Chand v. Bhika, 12 A.L.J. 387, 23 I.C. 753; Bhajan v. Chheda Lal, 12 A.L.J. 825, 24 I.C. 215; Chattar Singh v. Amir, 38 All. 204 (209). But in some other cases of the Calcutta High Court it has been held that if a payment towards the decree has been made within the period of limitation, the fact that it has not been certified is immaterial. The practice in this country is that the decree-holder certifies the part-payments in the application for execution and thereupon the Court, having recorded the whole of the petition, directs execution to issue for the balance. This is the usual mode of proceeding, and it is not usual that a separate petition is filed merely certifying the part satisfaction of the decree. There is no period of limitation fixed within which the decree-holder must certify, and therefore the decree-holder can certify the part-payments at any time; and if the part-payments be within time to prevent the decree from being barred, then execution can issue for the balance —Lakhi Narain v. Felamani, 20 C.L.J. 131, 27 I.C. 11; Eusuffzeman v. Sanchia, 43 Cal. 207; Jalim Chand v. Yusufali, 54 Cal. 143, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1012. This is also assumed in Jatindra Kumar v. Gagan Chandra, 46 Cal. 22, 45 I.C. 903. The same view is taken by the other High Courts—Masilamoni v. Sethusami, 41 Mad. 251, 254 (following 20 C.L.J. 131); Rajam Aiyar v. Anantharatham, 29 M L.J. 669, 31 I.C. 318; Narayana v. Kunhi Raman, 20 L.W. 190, 82 I.C. 743, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 131; Pandurang v. Jagyya, 45 Bom. 91 (94); Amar Singh v. Ram Dei, 47 All. 873, A.I.R. 1925 All. 802; Badri Narayan v. Kunj Behari, 35 All. 178, 18 I.C. 731 (732); Kishen Singh v. Aman Singh, 17 All. 42; Roshan Singh v. Mata Din, 26 All. 36. An uncertified payment towards the decree must satisfy the requirements of sec. 20 (e.g., the payment must be endorsed on the back of a certified copy of the decree); otherwise the decree cannot be saved—Narayana v. Kunhi Raman, supra. The payment must be made within three years of the decree or of the last starting point of limitation, in order to be effectual under sec. 20; but it may be certified at any subsequent time by the decree-holder—Amar Krishna v. Jagat Bandhu, 35 C.W.N. 1192 (1201) (F.B.), A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 719, 134 I.C. 922. If the payment is ineffectual under sec. 20, e.g., if it is made at a time when execution of the decree has become barred by limitation, or if it is made within time but is not endorsed by the hand-writing of the judgment-debtor, the mere certification is of no effect—Amar Krishna v. Jagat Bandhu, supra. In Jatindra Kumar v. Gagan Chandra, 46 Cal. 22 (24), 45 I.C. 903, the Calcutta High Court laid down that if a part-payment was made in satisfaction on the decree within three years of the decree, (even though the payment was not endorsed by the judgment-debtor). and then an application for execution of the decree together with an application for certifying the payment was made within three years from the date of the payment, the payment would give a fresh starting point for limitation, being a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of Article 182 (5), and consequently the application for execution would be within time. This case has been followed in Madan Mohan v. Harulal, 26 C.W.N. 534 (535, 536). The decision in Jatindra v. Gagan, 46 Cal. 22 has been overruled by the Full Bench in Amar Krishna v. Jagat Bandhu, 35 C.W.N. 1192 (F.B.), on the ground that as the payment, not being duly endorsed under sec. 20, is ineffectual to keep the decree in force, the certification cannot afford a fresh starting point under Art. 182, clause (5). The Rangoon High Court in Maung Law v. Maung Po, 2 Rang. 393 (395) has followed 46 Cal. 22. But the Madras High Court disapproves of this view on two grounds viz., that the part-payment in satisfaction of the decree not being endorsed upon the decree by the judgment-debtor did not satisfy the requirements of sec. 20, and consequently it could not save limitation, and secondly, the payment could not be regarded as a step-in-aid of execution, for Article 182 (5) clearly lays down that it is the application for certifying the payment and not the payment itself that can be considered as a step-in-aid of execution; consequently, the application for certifying the payment being made more than three years after the date of the decree, the execution was barred—Narayana v. Kunhi Raman, supra. Where in execution of a compromise decree providing for payment of the decretal amount by instalments a compromise is effected, such a compromise does not affect the liability under the original decree but affects the conditions of payment; if it is treated as an adjustment under Or. 21, r. 2 Civil Procedure Code, the Court may recognise it in executing the decree and if it is not, the Court may see what it is and take into account the payments made under it in executing the decree; Het Ram v. Aya Ram, 42 C.W.N. 509 (P.C.) 1938 A.L.J. 150, 1938 M.W.N. 662 (P.C.).

Agent of person under disability.

21. (1) The expression "agent duly authorized in this behalf," in sections 19 and 20, shall, in the case of a person under disability, include his lawful guardian, committee or manager, or an agent duly authorized by such guardian, committee or manager to sign the acknowledgment or make the payment.

Acknowledgment or payment by one of several joint contractors, etc.

(2) Nothing in the said sections renders one of several joint contractors, partners, executors or mortgagees chargeable by reason only of a written acknowledgment signed or of a payment made by, or by the agent of, any other or others of them.

(3) For the purposes of the said sections—

(a) An acknowledgment signed, or a payment made, in respect of any liability, by, or by the duly authorized agent of, any widow or other limited owner of property who is governed by the Hindu law, shall be a valid acknowledgment or payment, as the case may be, as against a reversioner succeeding to such liability; and

(b) Where a liability has been incurred by, or on behalf of, a Hindu undivided family as such, an acknowledgment or payment made by, or by the duly authorized agent of, the manager of the family for the time being shall be deemed to have been made on behalf of the whole family.

Change:—Sub-section (3) has been newly added by sec. 3, The Indian Limitation Amendment Act I of 1927, in pursuance of the following recommendations of the Civil Justice Committee: "It will save considerable unnecessary litigation and prevent vexatious pleas if limited owners under the Hindu law, and also the karta or manager of a joint Hindh family are enabled to make acknowledgments and payments so as to attract the provisions of sections 19 and 20. Conflicting views are held with reference to the power of a widow to make an acknowledgment binding any interest excepting her own. A limited owner like a Hindu widow fully represents the estate for many purposes; a judgment properly obtained against her will constitute the subject matter of the suit res judicata in a suit by the ultimate reversioner. There appears to be no reason why in the normal course of her administration of the estate of the last male owner she shall not have authority to acknowledge a debt"—Civil Justice Committee Report, p. 489. See Notes 210A and 210B below.

This sub-section came into effect from 1st January, 1928.

206. Scope:—This section shows that for the purposes of this section the payment made by a guardian must be held to be a payment by an agent duly authorised on his behalf. The legislature does not enact that for the purposes of the Limitation Act, the guardian shall be treated as an agent of his ward—Mani Devi v. Anpurna, 22 Pat. 144, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 218.

This section is explanatory of secs. 19 and 20 of the Act and does not constitute an exception in the case of either of these sections—Naziruddin v. Ramanand, 23 Luck. 114, A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 193, 1947 O.W.N. 623 (F.B.).

206A. Lawful guardian:—An admission amounting to an acknowledgment under sec. 19 and by the guardian of a minor appointed by the Court is binding on the minor—Bageshwari v. Bindeshwari, 13 P.L.T. 509, A I.R. 1932 Pat. 337 (339). The expression "lawful guardian" is not limited to a guardian appointed by the Court. It means any person who is entitled to act as guardian under the personal law of the minor. Thus, under the Hindu Law, on the death of the father, the mother is not only the natural guardian but also the legal guardian, and as such she can acknowledge a debt on behalf of the minor—Bechu v. Baldeo, 10 O.W.N. 188, 145 I.C. 180, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 132. A single Bench of the Madras High Court has held that any person who is lawfully acting as guardian though not legally appointed as such, is a lawful guardian under this section, if he is acting for the benefit of the minor. And so, where the guardian appointed by the will of the minor's adoptive father, and all his relations appear to have been unwilling to act as guardian, the natural mother of the minor is the proper person to be entrusted with his interests, and if she makes a payment for the benefit of the minor, it will save the bar of limitation under sec. 20—Tirapayya v. Ramaswamy, 24 M L.J. 428, 19 I.C. 362. But this case has been disapproved of in a later case where it is held that a de facto guardian is not a 'lawful guardian' within the meaning of this section and has no authority to acknowledge a debt—Ramasamy v. Kasinath, 1927 M.W.N. 356, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 226 (231); Subbakka v. Venkata, 1932 M.W.N. 1193; Dashrath v. Gayanam, I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 486, 45 Bom.L.R. 740, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 381 (paternal aunt); Chennappa v. Onkaramma, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 358, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 884, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 33 (F.B.) (paternal grand-mother); Saradambal v Kuppuswami, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 281, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 663 (mother as guardian of person); Tukaram v. Madhaorao, 1947 N.L.J. 405; Ahammu v. Kunhu, (1938) 2 M L.J. 251, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 836; Nagayya v. Narasayya, I.L.R. (1939) Mad. 65, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 501, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 853. Under the Hindu Law, in the absence of the father, the mother is entitled to be the guardian of her infant sons, in preference to their brother; and a payment made by the brother of an infant judgment-debtor towards the decree, while their mother is alive, cannot be said to have been made by a lawful guardian—Bireswar v. Ambika, 45 Cal. 630. Under the Mahomedan Law, a father's brother is a guardian of the person (and not of the property) of the minor nephews and nieces, and a payment made by him of interest on a debt due by his deceased brother (the minors' father) cannot save limitation so as to keep the debt alive against the minor daughters of the deceased brother—Yagappa v. Mahomed, 9 L.B.R. 78, 40 I.C. 858. So also, a mother, not being a guardian of the property of her minor son, under the Muhammadan Law, is not a lawful guardian, and cannot sign an acknowledgment on behalf of the minor—Chanan v. Wadhu Ram, 1917 P.L.R. 61, 42 I.C. 17.

207. Partners:—The proper interpretation to put on sec. 21 is that if at the time when the acknowledgment is made or the payment is made there are more than one person in existence who stand in relationship to each other as joint contractors, partners, executors or mortgagors, then the acknowledgment or payment made by one would save limitation as against that person and would be of no avail against the others —Md. Taqi v. Raja Ram, A.I.R. 1936 All. 820 (F.B.), (41 All. 111, A.I.R. 1927 All. 209 overruled). This section does not mean that no payment or acknowledgment by a co-partner will be deemed as an acknowledgment or payment made on behalf of the other partners and binding on them. The word "only" in sub-section (2) is not to be treated as a surplusage. The meaning of this word is that the mere writing or signing of an acknowledgment by one partner does not necessarily of itself bind his co-partners; but it must also be shown that he had authority, express or implied, to make the acknowledgment on behalf of himself and his co-partners; and if it is shown, then of course the acknowledgment will be binding on them all—Gordhandas v. Bhulabhai, 34 Bom.L.R. 623, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 426, 138 I.C. 805; Gadu Bibi v. Purisotom, 10 All. 418; Premji v. Dossa Doongersay, 10 Bom. 358. The use of the word "only" shows that while a partner cannot make another partner liable merely by his acknowledgment, there is nothing to prevent such liability falling on partners, if they are shown to have all joined in the settlement made by one of them —Kariyappa v. Rachapa, 24 Bom. 493 (502). The mere fact that persons are partners does not make one partner liable under an acknowledgment by another; but if the acknowledgment is done in the course of partnership business, it is binding on the others—Debi Dayal v. Baldeo, 26 A.L.J. 1036, A.I.R. 1928 All. 491 (492), 111 I.C. 143. Cf. Sec. 23 of the Partnership Act (IX of 1932) which runs as follows: "An admission or representation made by a partner concerning the affairs of the firm is evidence against the firm, if it is made in the ordinary course of business." Where a Hindu joint family carries on a business, the members of the family are in the position of partners in regard to persons dealing with that business, and an acknowledgment of liability made by a member in the usual course of the partnership business, is binding on the other members of the family as partners and extends the period of limitation —Debi Dayal v. Baldeo, supra. It is not necessary, that a co-partner shall be specially empowered to make an acknowledgment or payment on behalf of his other co-partners, in order to bind them. In the absence of direct evidence that a co-contractor or partner was authorised to make an acknowledgment or payment on behalf of the others, such authority can be inferred from other surrounding circumstances such as the position of the other co-contractors or partners in the business, though it cannot be laid down which circumstances should be deemed sufficient to warrant the inference —Veeranna v. Veerabhadraswami, 41 Mad. 427 (F.B.), 34 M.L.J. 373 (overruling Sheikh Mohideen v. Official Assignee, 35 Mad. 142, K. R. V. Firm v. Seetharamaswami, 37 Mad. 146, and Valasubramania v. Ramanathan, 33 Mad. 421); Rala Singh v. Bhagwan Singh, 2 Rang. 367, 84 I.C. 391; Mahadeva v. Ramakrishna, 50 M.L.J. 67, 92 I.C. 653, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 114. The question whether an acknowledgment made by one partner was impliedly authorised by others, depends upon whether it was an act necessary for or usually done in carrying on the business—Bengal National Bank v. Jatindra, 56 Cal. 556, 33 C.W.N. 412 (415). The authority of a partner to acknowledge liability or to make payments so as to save limitation as against his co-partners may be inferred from surrounding circumstances. And where the endorsement is made and signed by one of the partners in the ordinary course of business the endorsement is binding against his co-partners—Dayal & Co. v. Radha, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 559: 158 I.C. 260. In a going mercantile concern such agency is to be presumed as an ordinary rule—Premji v. Dossa, 10 Bom. 358; Mahadeva v. Ramakrishna, 50 M.L.J. 67, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 114; Kuljas v. Wishan Singh, 33 P.L.R. 584, 137 I.C. 771, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 456; Gulsaran v. Brij Mohan, 41 P.L.R. 90, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 397, 184 I.C. 734. But this presumption can be rebutted, and if it can be shewn that the acknowledgment of liability by one of the partners was not an act necessary for or usually done in carrying on the business of the partnership, the case will fall under the general rule contained in sub-section (2)—Dalsukhram v. Kalidas, 26 Bom. 42.

If the partnership had been dissolved at the date of the acknowledgment, and the creditor had had notice of such dissolution, the acknowledgment by one partner will be of no avail as against the firm—Dalsukhram v. Kalidas, 26 Bom. 42; Gandi Singh v. Bhag Singh, 7 Lah. 403, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 616, 99 I.C. 563. In the absence of express evidence of authority, an acknowledgment of a partnership-debt by an ex-partner, after the dissolution of the partnership, is not binding on any other ex-partner. Where, however, an ex-partner is authorised to collect the outstandings and pay all debts of the partnership, such authority includes the lesser power of acknowledging debts—Muthuswami v. Shankara Lingam, 1915 M.W.N. 722, 30 I.C. 675, 2 L.W. 823.

According to English law also, so long as the partnership exists, each partner, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is presumed to be the agent of the others to make payments on account of debts due by the firm, because payments by any one partner are payments by the firm; but as soon as the partnership is dissolved, such agency ceases unless specially reserved, and payments by one can then only be held to be payments by all on proof that such payments were actually authorised by all—Watson v. Woodman, L.R 20 Eq. 721 (730); Wood v. Braddick, (1808) 1 Taunt. 104; Pritchard v. Draper, (1831) 1 Russ. & Myl. 191; Goodwin v. Parton, 41 I.T.N.S. 91; Bistow v. Miller, 11 Ir. L.R. 461; Lightwood's Time Limit on Actions, page 383. After the partnership has determined or has been discontinued, a partner cannot validly acknowledge a partnership debt—Thomson v. Waithman, (1856) 3 Drew. 628; Kilgour v. Finlyson, (1789) 1 H.B. 155; Watson v. Woodman, supra. But where the partnership has been discontinued or determined upon the condition that A only shall go out of it, and that it shall continue as between B and C, and there are also special arrangements by which A is to ostensibly remain a partner, and is to be entitled also to resume (in a certain event) his old position of a partner, in such a case B and C or either of them may validly acknowledge a debt of the old partnership (by payment of interest or part-payment of the principal) so as to keep that old debt alive as against A—Tucker v. Tucker, [1894] 3 Ch. 429: 63 L.J. Ch. 737.

If the partnership had been dissolved by the death of one of the partners, an acknowledgment made by the surviving partners, unless they are specially authorised to do so, cannot bind the representatives of the deceased partner—Rajagopala v. Krishnaswami, 8 M.L.J. 261.

208. Co-executors:—An acknowledgment by one executor only keeps alive the debt against the assets of the testator but is not sufficient by itself to make the other executors personally chargeable—Dick v. Fraser, [1897] 2 Ch. 181; Fordham v. Wallis, (1853) 17 Jur. 228; Astbury v. Astbury, [1898] 2 Ch. 111.

209. Co-mortgagees:—An acknowledgment of the title of the mortgagor made by one only of two mortgagees would not avail to save the mortgagor's right of redemption from being barred by limitation, where the mortgage was a joint mortgage and not capable of being redeemed piecemeal—Jwala Prasad v. Achhey, 34 All. 371 (374); Dharma v. Balmakund, 18 All. 458 (460); Bhogilal v. Amritalal, 17 Bom. 173; Richardson v. Younge, L.R. 6 Ch. 478.

'Chargeable":—The word 'chargeable' means every kind of chargeability and includes liability as to property; it is not limited to personal liability only—Thayammal v. Muthukumaraswami, 57 M.L.J. 588, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 881 (884).

210. Co-contractors:—Purchasers of different portions of mortgaged properties from the original co-mortgagors, who take over the original contract made by the original mortgagors with the mortgagee are joint contractors within the meaning of sub-section (2) of this section—Nagayya v. Duraiswami, 175 I.C. 426, 1937 M.W.N. 194, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 111. One of several co-contractors (co-debtors, co-mortgagors, etc.) cannot make an acknowledgment or payment on behalf of the others. In case of co-contractors, jointly and severally liable, an acknowledgment of liability or a payment by one of them does not deprive the other of the benefit of limitation, unless the payer is authorised to make the payment by the other as an agent on his behalf—Oudh Commercial Bank v. Bishambhar, 2 Luck. 180, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 601, 96 I.C. 353; Jogesh v. Manindra, 59 Cal. 1128, 36 C.W.N. 487 (488), A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 620, 138 I.C. 740; Arjan Ram v. Rohima, 14 I C. 128 (Cal.); Jnan v. Monoranjan, I.L.R. (1941) 2 Cal. 576, 74 C.L.J. 327, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 251; Federal Bank v. Som Dev, I.L.R. 1955 Punj. 1263, A.I.R 1956 Punj. 21. Where a part payment by one of the joint debtors is made, the mere presence of the other debtors at the place of payment will not save limitation, unless it is proved that they also made the payment, or that the person making the payment was authorised by the others to do so—Annadacharan v. Jhatucharan, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 648, 158 I.C. 512. Payment by one of the judgment debtors does not interupt the running of limitation as against the other—Ram Kumar v. Hira Lal, I.L R. (1939) All. 258, 1939 A.L.J. 66, A.I.R. 1939 All. 230. In England also, it has been laid down by the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, sec. 14, that where there are two or more co-contractors or co-debtors (where bound jointly only or jointly and severally) no such co-contractors or co-debtors shall lose the benefit of the bar of time by reason only of any part-payment by any other or others of the co-contractors or co-debtors. And so one co-debtor cannot make payment or acknowledgment to bind the others—Jackson v. Woolley, (1860) 8 El. & Bl. 778.

Co-mortgagors:—Co-mortgagors stand in the position of joint contractors—Nagayya v. Duraiswami, 175 I.C. 426, 1937 M.W.N. 194, A I.R. 1938 Mad. 111; U. So Maung v. Thom, 184 I.C. 622, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 287; Dashrath v. Gayanan, I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 486, 45 Bom.L.R. 740; A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 381. A co-mortgagor cannot make payment or acknowledgment on behalf of another co-mortgagor, when there is nothing to warrant the inference that the former acted as an agent duly authorised by the latter in making the payment or acknowledgment—Thayammal v. Muthukumaraswami, 57 M.L.J. 588, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 881 (884); Narayana v. Venkataramana, 25 Mad. 220, 233 (F.B.); Baijnath v. Satilal, 174 I.C. 156, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 383, 19 Pat.L.T. 240; Dashrath v. Gayanan, supra; U. So Maung v. Thom, supra. An acknowledgment of liability by some only of the heirs of a mortgagor against whom a decree for sale on the basis of a mortgage has been passed, does not operate to save limitation as against the other heirs of the mortgagor—Md. Taqi v. Raja Ram, A.I.R. 1936 All. 820, 1936 A.L.J. 1140, 166 I.C. 106 (F.B.) overruling 41 All. 111 and A.I.R. 1927 All. 209. See also Hakim v. Muhammad, A.I.R. 1957 Pat. 559.

Where subsequent to the death of the mortgagor, one of his heirs makes a payment within the period of limitation, such payment saves limitation only as against the person who makes the payment, and not against all the heirs—Annadacharan v. Jhatucharan, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 648. So also, where after the death of one of the mortgagors, the other mortgagors make payments towards the mortgage, the heirs of the deceased mortgagor are entitled to the benefit of the exemption under sub-section (2) of this section—Azizur v. Upendra, 42 C.W.N. 18, 66 C.L J. 104, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 129. Where a Mahomedan brother and sister are co-mortgagors and payments are made by the brother, a payment of interest as such on behalf of the sister cannot be inferred from the mere fact of relationship—Euboof v. Niemeyer, 194 I.C. 177, A.I.R. 1941 Rang. 37. But in some other cases it has been held that since every mortgagor is liable for the entire debt secured by the mortgage, payment by one of the mortgagors is effectual to extend the period against all the co-mortgagors—Achola Sundari v. Doman, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 150, 90 I.C. 774; Ghasi v. Thakur Kishori, 1929 A.L.J. 446, A.I.R. 1929 All 380 (381); Nagayya v. Duraiswami, supra. In Badri Das v. Pasupati Banerjee, A I.R.

1933 Pat. 1: 12 Pat. 93: 14 P.L.T. 6: 140 I.C. 145 it was held that payment by one of the debtors would save limitation for a suit to realise the security, although in the hand of persons other than those making the payment. Agarwalla, J., pointed out that in the case of a debt secured by mortgage, the liability is indivisible; and no splitting up of the security avails to split up the liability unless the mortgagee consents to it, the payment of interest by one of the mortgagors will keep the mortgage alive so that the mortgagee would be entitled to enforce it against all or any part of the mortgaged property. Where the debt is a single debt and the liability is one and indivisible the case falls within sec. 20 and is not taken out of its operation by sec. 21 (2) of the Act, so that any person interested in the equity of redemption may by making payment in the manner provided by sec. 20 keep the mortgage alive in such a manner that the whole of the mortgaged property remains liable for the debt. The provisions of sub-sec. (2) sec. 21 might be applied if the suit was based on personal covenants to repay. This case was expressly followed in the same High Court in Sripati Samanta v. Lalji Sahu, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 361, 163 I.C. 808. And in the latter case James, J., remarked: "that the distinction between joint contractors and the body of persons interested in the equity of redemption is this: that whereas with joint contractors there are a number of single debts: for the persons interested in the equity of redemption there is one single indivisible debt and a single indivisible security." In Baijnath v. Sati Lal, 174 I.C. 156, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 383, 19 Pat.L.T. 240 it has been held that although the mortgage itself may be kept alive by a payment made by one of the mortgagors, when the question is a matter not of the liability on the mortgage but the liability on the personal covenant, a payment by one co-mortgagor (or joint contractor) cannot be deemed to be payment of the other.

Co-heirs:—The words "joint contractors" in sub-sec. (2) does not include the co-heirs of a deceased debtor, nor can this sub-section be extended by analogy to co-heirs—Narasimha v. Ibrahim, 56 M.L.J. 630, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 419 (420). A contrary view has been taken in Arjun Ram v. Rohima, 14 I.C. 128 (Cal.); Md. Taqi v. Raja Ram, A.I.R. 1936 All. 820; Azizur v. Upendra, 42 C.W.N. 18.

Surety:—The expression "joint-contractor" applies also to a surety—Kothandaraman v. Shanmugam, 32 I.C. 608 (Mad.). The principal debtor and the surety are often in the position of joint contractors, and under this section one joint contractor is not bound by an acknowledgment or payment made by another. A payment by the debtor does not keep alive the action against the surety, nor can a payment by the surety keep alive the debt against the principal debtor—U. N. Mitra's Limitation, 5th Edn., pp. 824, 825. Unless it appears otherwise in the terms of the surety's contract, an acknowledgment of payment by a debtor does not extend limitation against the surety—Federal Bank of India v. Som Dev, I.L.R. 1955 Punj. 1263, A.I.R. 1956 Punj. 21. In England, however, it has been held that a principal debtor and surety do not stand in the position of co-contractors or co-debtors; and so, the payment of interest or a part-payment of the principal by the principal debtor will keep alive the debts as against the surety—Lindsell v. Phillips, (1885) 30 Ch. D. 291. See Note 203 under sec. 20.

210A. Hindu woman:—It was formerly held that a Hindu woman in possession of her limited interest in the estate of her deceased husband or father, could not make an acknowledgment so as to extend the period of limitation as against the reversioners. Her acknowledgment did not bind the estate or the reversioners—Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya, 35 All. 227 (235) (P.C.) (affirming on appeal Shib Sankar v. Soni Ram, 32 All. 33); Mohini Mohan v. Sarat Sundari, 86 I.C. 353, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 862; Shafiquddin v. Lakhan, 1949 A.L.J. 423, A.I.R. 1950 All. 60. But these cases are no longer good law in view of the new sub-section (3) (a) which expressly lays down that an acknowledgment or payment made by the widow or limited owner shall be a valid acknowledgment or payment as against a reversioner. Under the Limitation Amending Act of 1927, a widow can by acknowledgment save a debt from being barred by limitation, and this acknowledgment is binding upon reversioners—Darogi Rai v. Basdeo Matho, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 40 (42); Sundarbati v. Sukhdeo, (1945) P.W.N. 225, A.I.R. 1946 Pat. 120.

210B. Manager of joint family:—Sub-section 3 (b) of this section lays down two conditions in order that the acts of a member of a joint Hindu family specified in sections 19 and 20 may extend the period of limitation against all the members. These conditions are (i) that the loan must have been incurred by or on behalf of the joint family, and (ii) that the specified acts must be the acts not of any member of the family but must be the act of the karta. It is not, however, necessary that the document evidencing the loan must on the face of it show that the loan has been incurred on behalf of the joint family. If the fact that the loan has been incurred on behalf of the family can be established on the evidence, sub-section 3 (b) of this section is attracted, if the acknowledgment or part payment of the principal and interest has been made and endorsed by the karta—Kistur v. Rajani, 70 C.L.J. 201, 44 C.W.N. 299. A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 137. The manager of a joint Hindu family has power to acknowledge the liability of the family, and in so doing he would be considered as the agent duly authorised to bind the other members; in such a case the acknowledgment need not be expressed as having been made in his capacity as Karta—Hari Mohan v. Sourendra, 41 C.L.J. 535, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1153; Sarada v. Durgaram, 37 Cal. 461; Har Prosad v. Bakshi Harihar, 19 C.W.N. 860, 31 I.C. 40; Bhaskar v. Vijalal, 17 Bom. 512; Inderpal v. Mewalal, 36 All. 264 (267); Sanwal v. Saijit, 22 A.L.J. 1018, A.I.R. 1925 All. 174; Chinnaya v. Gurunathan, 5 Mad. 169 (F.B.); Ram Autar v. Beni Singh, 25 O.C. 89, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 135; Venkatachalam v. Venkateswara, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 610, (1943) M.W.N. 680. A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 33 (Junior member of a joint family in charge of and management of property and business). See the new sub-section (3). But the acknowledgment must be such as to satisfy the conditions of section 19 of the Act. It must be in writing and must be signed. Thus where the manager consents to an adjustment of an account but does not sign the account, the debt is not by acknowledgment kept alive against all the members of the family—Nagarmal v. Bajranglal, A.I.R. 1950 P.C. 15. But where a creditor deals not merely with the managing member of a family, but with all the members as co-obligors, he cannot rely on an acknowledgment made by the manager as an acknowledgment made on behalf of all the members—Narayana v. Venkataramana, 25 Mad. 220 (F.B.). An acknowledgment made by a member of the joint Hindu family, who is not the manager of the family, binds only the person acknowledging and the persons who claim through him, but not the other members of the family—Ramkishan v. Hirde Ram, 71 I.C. 737, A I.R. 1923 Lah. 135. Where a manager and other members of a Hindu undivided family are liable to pay a debt and a payment is made by the manager, it may be possible to infer from the circumstances that the payment was made by the managing member on behalf of the other members as well on the principle of implied agency—Lakshmi Naidu v. Gunnamma, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 101: 68 M.L.J. 470: 58 Mad. 418: 1935 M.W.N. 17: 41 L.W. 94: 154 I.C. 1035. Thus, where a father makes payment, in order to stay the hands of the decree-holder in executing the decree and time is given to pay in consideration of the payment made, such payment is as manager of the joint family and saves the time against father and sons—Ragghi v. Nathulal, 1938 A.L.J. 973, A.I.R. 1938 All. 638, 179 I.C. 90. But after partition there is no undivided family and therefore, no managing member of it, and unless there is authority to acknowledge the debt or make a part-payment, the other members of the family will not be bound by the acknowledgment or part-payment of one member alone—Rama Vadhyar v. Manian Vadhyar, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 586. The payments made after partition by an ex-manager are not payments made by the "manager for the time being" within the meaning of sub-section 3 (b) of this section—Pangudaya v. Uthandiya, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 968, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 33, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 774; Kabhiram v. Bhaga, 47 Bom.L.R. 470, A.I.R. 1945 Bom. 511.

"Liability incurred by or on behalf of "the family."—The expression suggested that the family as a whole might be a party to the contract or the managing member on behalf of the family might have entered into the contract—Ambalavana v. Gowri, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 871 (875), 44 L.W. 467.

Effect of substituting or adding new plaintiff or defendant.

22. (1) Where, after the institution of a suit, a new plaintiff or defendant is substituted or added, the suit shall, as regards him, be deemed to have been instituted when he was so made a party.

(2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall apply to a case where a party is added or substituted owing to an assignment or devolution of any interest during the pendency of a suit or where a plaintiff is made a defendant or a defendant is made a plaintiff.

211. Scope of section:—Sub-section (1) does not apply to cases in which the plaintiff is added in the course of the suit in consequence of assignment of interest from the original plaintiff. but is confined to cases where the new plaintiff is added or substituted in his own right, so that he may himself be considered to be instituting a suit independently of the right of the original plaintiff—Arunachella v. Orr. 40 Mad. 722. If the plaintiff is added in consequence of assignment of right from the original plaintiff, the case will fall under sub-section (2) and not sub-section (1).

This section is confined to suits only, and does not apply to proceedings in execution—Golab Koer v. Syed Mohammad, 2 P.L.T. 619, 62 I.C. 30. See the definition of 'suit' in section 2 (10). The word 'suit' in this section includes only the stages of a suit down to its termination by the decree of the trial Court, and does not include an appellate stage or proceedings in execution of the decree made in the suit. Therefore, an application to set aside an ex parte decree cannot, as regards the added party, be deemed to have been made when the added party was brought on the record—Chandrika v. Ramkuer, 6 P.L.J. 463, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 88, 62 I.C. 536.

An application for filing an award is required by Sch. II, para. 20. C. P. Code to be registered as a suit, and the parties are to be treated as plaintiff and defendant. Therefore, on the analogy of a suit, it may be said that if in an application for filing an award one of the opposite party in whose favour also the award has been made asks to be transposed as an applicant, at a time when the period of limitation has already expired, the Court can transpose the party on the analogy of sub-section (2) of this section, and no question of limitation arises—Mangal Sen v. Prag Das, 1931 A.L.J. 863, 133 I.C. 410, A I.R. 1931 All. 725 (726).

An application under O. XXI, r. 101, C. P. Code, is not a suit; and this section does not apply—Indubhushan v. Haricharan, 58 Cal. 55, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 385 (387), 132 I.C. 631.

This section is not applicable to an application for restoration under sec. 3 of the Bihar Restoration of Bakasht Lands (IX of 1938) as this section is applicable to suits —Sheobadan v. Bihari, 1944 P.W.N. 499. The Calcutta High Court has held that this section is applicable to persons added in an application under sec. 37A of the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act, the reason being that the Bengal Act II of 1942 inserting sec. 37A in the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act is a local and special Act and under sec. 29 (2) (a) of the Limitation Act the period of limitation applicable will be governed by this section—Kunja v. Mritunjay, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 54. Their Lordships overlooked the fact that this section is applicable to suits only and not to applications.

This section applies to the case of all persons brought on record after the expiry of limitation. It is immaterial whether the Court acts suo motu or on the application of a party. Sita Ram v. Munshi Ram, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 262, 192 I.C. 105. See also Provakar v. Bibhuti, A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 177.

212. Addition of new plaintiff or defendant:—All plaintiffs who have a joint cause of action must be impleaded before the expiry of the period of limitation. If some of them institute a suit within time and the other plaintiffs are added after the period of limitation, the claim of the original plaintiffs also, who had a joint cause of action with the added plaintiffs, would be barred, as the claim could not be enforced without the additional plaintiffs—Ramsebuke v. Ram Lal, 6 Cal. 815; Girwar v. Makbunnessa, 1 P.L.J. 468, 36 I.C. 542; Dalla Ram v. Nibahumal, 1886 P.R. 8; Mir Tapurah v. Gopi Narayan, 7 C.L.J. 251; Motan Mal v. Kripa Mal, 79 P.R. 1906; Bhagela v. Abdul Rahaman, 1 P.L.J. 472, (Note). Where one of three brothers sued alone for a joint debt, and when objection was taken to the form of the suit it was too late to bring in the other brothers as co-plaintiffs, the debt having by that time become time-barred, it was held that the suit must be dismissed—Kalidas v. Nathu, 7 Bom. 217; see also Imamuddin v. Liladhur, 14 All. 524; Motan Mal v. Kripa Mal, 79 P.R. 1906. But if no objection as to the non-joinder of parties is taken by the defendants, the suit will not be barred. Where the original plaintiffs alone sued within the period of limitation, and others who had a joint cause of action were added after the expiry of the period on their own application, no objection as to the non-joinder of parties being taken by the defendants at any stage of the proceedings, the suit would not be barred—Shirekulli Timapa v. Ajjibal, 15 Bom. 297; Pateshri v. Rudra, 26 All. 528. But the provisions of sec. 22 (1) can be availed of only in cases where the plaintiff and the defendant have a joint cause of action and not when their causes of action are different—Periakaruppa Chetti v. Mottayya, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 240: 69 M.L.J. 30: 1935 M.W.N. 210: 41 L.W. 177: 156 I.C. 455.

Where the cause of action is separate, a suit wherein certain defendants were added at a time when a separate suit against them would be barred, is liable to be dismissed as against them only on the ground of limitation—Obhoy v. Kritarthamoyi, 7 Cal. 284; Bishamberdas v. Brijlal, 33 Bom.L.R. 1385, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 590 (592). But where the relief sought is not separable, the suit will be dismissed as against all the defendants—Habibulla v. Achaibar, 4 All. 145.

The question whether the joinder of parties after the institution of a suit shall necessarily involve the bar of limitation, if the prescribed period has expired, must depend upon the consideration of the question whether the joinder was necessary to enable the Court to award such relief as may be given in the suit as framed. If the fresh parties are joined merely for the purpose of safeguarding the right subsisting as between them and the others claiming generally in the same interest, the fact that the suit is barred as regards the freshly joined parties does not ordinarily affect the right of the original plaintiffs to continue the suit—Guruvayya v. Dattatraya, 28 Bom. 11

(17, 18); Gehimal v. Karmumal, 35 I.C. 551, 10 S.L.R. 38. When a party is brought on the record out of time, the question of limitation does not arise when there is no relief claimed against that party—Jadu Nath v. Amulya, 46 C.L.J. 118, 104 I.C. 576, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 794; Mahomed Ishaq v. Sk. Akramul Huq, 12 C.W.N. 84, 6 C L.J. 558.

The test to be applied is—whether the suit was properly constituted at the date of the plaint so as to enable the Court to adjudicate as between the parties impleaded. A suit is not said to be properly constituted unless all the necessary parties are impleaded in it. By necessary parties are meant those parties who ought to be joined and who are indispensable, as without them no decree at all can be made. If these parties are not joined, then the suit is bad for non-joinder, and the addition of these parties after the period of limitation will necessitate a dismissal of the suit. If, however, the necessary parties are impleaded, the non-joinder of other persons who are not necessary or indispensable but whose joinder is only desirable to safeguard their rights and the rights of others, and to prevent further litigation, does not render the suit as improperly constituted, and the joinder of those parties after limitation will not necessitate the dismissal of the suit—Shahasasheb v. Sadashiv, 43 Bom. 575 (580, 581); Coorla Spinning Mills v. Vallabhdas, 27 Bom.L.R. 1168, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 547; Hubli Panjarapole v. Saraswatevva, A.I.R. 1953 Bom. 334; Yakub v. Gulamabbas, A.I.R. 1958 Bom. 51; Ramdoyal v. Juwmenjoy, 14 Cal. 791; Imamuddin v. Liladhur, 14 All. 524; Ambika Charan v. Tarini Charan, 18 C.W.N. 464, 19 I.C. 963; Sital Prasad v. Kaifut, 26 C.W.N. 488, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 149; Labhu Ram v. Kanshi Ram, 57 P.R. 1905; Pateshri v. Rudra Narain, 26 All. 528, affrmed, 32 All. 241 (P.C.); Hazari Mal v. Bhawani, 30 All. 538; Annamalai v. Murugappa, 38 Mad. 837 (842); Virchand v. Kondu, 39 Bom. 729, 31 I.C. 180. In an application under sec. 37A of the Bengal Agricultural Debtors Act the lessees and present occupiers are not necessary parties. The addition of the lessees of the certificate holders at a date beyond the period mentioned in sec. 37A (2) of the Act does not therefore attract the bar of limitation—Kunja v. Mritunjuy, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 54. So also, where a party who is not a necessary party to the suit applies to be impleaded as a party after the period of limitation and is added as a party, he can not turn round and plead that the suit is barred by limitation—Sheo Prasad v. Mst. Parkash, 18 Luck. 601, 1942 A.L.J. 766, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 164. Contra—Mathewson v. Ram Kanai, 36 Cal. 675 (688), and Hasan Ali v. Gurudas, 34 C.W.N. 248 (249), where it is stated that sec. 22 applies where the party subsequently added is a proper party, even though he is not a necessary party, and he cannot be added after the expiry of the period of limitation.

Where a suit for sale of mortgaged property was instituted against the mortgagor's minor son, but upon information that the mortgagor (a Muhammadan) left a widow and daughters, the widow and the daughters were made defendants after the period of limitation, it was held that the suit was not barred against them; the suit as originally framed was not improperly constituted, in the sense of being instituted against only one of several parties to a contract, but it was one to enforce a mortgage lien against the property and the plaintiff could have obtained relief in the suit as originally filed in as much as the money was specifically charged upon the property—Virchand v. Kondu, 39 Bom. 729, 31 I.C. 180; Gurcharan v. Ram Bharose, 19 Luck. 133, 1943 O.W.N. 105, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 218. So also, where in the same suit first one legal representative and then another is impleaded, the estate which is the object of the suit has been represented throughout there is no change of party so as to invoke the operation of this section—Subbiah v. Unnamalai, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 580, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 609. But where a mortgagee institutes a suit against the father of the legal representatives of the deceased mortgagor and it is found that he cannot be the legal representative of the deceased, the property having been gifted to his sons by the mortgagor, the mortgagee cannot implead the legal representatives of the deceased mortgagor after the expiry of the period of limitation—Sita Ram v. Munshi Ram, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 262, 192 I.C. 105. A suit was brought against the original mortgagors, but on objection being taken, the sons were added as defendants at a time when a suit against them would have been barred by limitation. Held that the sons were sufficiently represented in the suit by their respective fathers and the unnecessary addition of the sons after the period of limitation would not justify a dismissal of the suit—Hori Lal v. Munwan Kunwar, 34 All. 549 (F.B.), 15 I.C. 126. See also Rajwanta v. Rameswar, 12 O.L.J. 235, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 440. A suit to redeem the mortgage was brought by some of the heirs of the mortgagor within the period of limitation, and subsequently the plaintiffs applied to make the remaining heirs party defendants to the suit, after the period of limitation had expired; held, that the other heirs were not necessary parties in the sense that the plaintiffs were to lose their rights to redeem by reason of omission to make those persons parties to the suit, but that they were necessary parties only for the record in order to satisfy the provisions of O. XXXIV, r. 1. Section 22 did not therefore apply and the suit was not barred—Shivabai v. Shideswar, 45 Bom. 1009, 23 Bom.L.R. 405, 61 I.C. 590.

But where a suit is defective at its inception for non-joinder of all the mortgagees, it is not cured by the addition of the other mortgagees after the expiry of the period of limitation for the suit and under sub-section (1) of this section the suit as regards the newly added mortgagees, is already barred—Adiveppa v. Rachappa, 50 Bom.LR. 30, A.I.R. 1948 Bom. 221 (F.B.); the principle of the indivisibility of the mortgage and the principle that all the joint promisees must combine to enforce the claim against the promisors being applicable one of the mortgagees is not entitled to sue either for the whole or a part of the share in the mortgaged property without impleading the other mortgagees within the period of limitation—Rameshwar v. Ganga Bux, A.I.R. 1950 All. 598 (F.B.).

A suit on a mortgage should be distinguished from a suit on a promissory note. So, where the suit was wrongly brought against the widow of the executant, but on objection by the widow that she was not the legal representative of her husband, the name of the minor son of the executant was substituted at a time when the period of limitation for the suit had expired, it was held that it could not be said that the suit was brought against the estate of the executant represented by a wrong person, but against a wrong person personally; and therefore the substitution of the name of the right person after limitation necessitated the dismissal of the suit—Northern Bank v. Ramesh Chandar, 33 P.L.R. 253, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 314 (315), 137 I.C. 89 (distinguishing 39 Bom. 729). So also, where a wrong person sues on a pronote and after the period of limitation the right person is substituted, the suit so far as the right person is concerned, shall be deemed to be instituted on the date of the substitution and if barred on that date shall be dismissed—Gowarjabai v. Ganpatsa, 1940 N.L.J. 333, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 274, 190 I.C. 430. Defendant executed a bond in favour of X and Y, who were members of a joint family, and upon partition the bond fell to the share of X, who alone then brought a suit on the bond; the defendant contended that Y should be impleaded, and Y was then made a co-plaintiff after the period of limitation. Held that as Y was not a necessary party (he having no interest in the bond), the fact that he was impleaded after the expiry of the period of limitation did not affect the maintainability of the suit—Padam v. Data Ram, 30 P.L.R. 124, 115 I.C. 74, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 505 (506).

A suit on a negotiable instrument must be instituted in the name of the person who on the face of it is entitled thereto. If it is instituted in the name of a wrong person, and the name of the right person is substituted after the period of limitation, the suit is barred—Subbaraya v. Vaithinatha, 33 Mad. 115 (117), 5 I.C. 931. Where a suit on a promissory-note which was executed in favour of the father, was brought by the son on the allegation that the father had renounced the world, but in fact the father had not renounced the world, the suit must be dismissed, and the name of the father could not be substituted at a time when the period of limitation had expired—Krishnaji v. Hanmaraddi, 58 Bom. 536, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 385 (386). Where a suit on a promissory note was brought against the widow of the executant (the executant having died before the suit), but on objection by the widow that she was not the legal representative of her husband, the name of the minor son of the executant was substituted, at a time when the period of limitation for the suit had expired, it was held that it was not a case of misdescription, because it is clear that a wrong person was impleaded and not that the right person was impleaded by a wrong name or wrong description—Northern Bank v. Ramesh Chandar, 33 P.L.R. 253, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 314 (315), 137 I.C. 89 (distinguishing 20 C.W.N. 49).

If parties are effectively represented through those whose actions bind them, so that a decree passed against them is binding on such parties, a specific mention of the name of such party subsequently made in the title of the suit cannot be regarded as the addition of a new defendant for the purpose of limitation. And so, where a suit was instituted within the period of limitation against all the adult members of a joint Hindu family, but after the expiry of that period two more minor defendants were added whose fathers were already defendants in the suit, held that it could not be said that new defendants were added, and the suit could not be dismissed against the minors—Banwari v. Sakhraj, 1931 A.L.J. 421, A.I.R. 1931 All. 585 (586), 135 I.C. 248; Chetan Singh v. Sartaz, 46 All. 709, 22 A.L.J. 702, A.I.R. 1924 All. 908, 79 I.C. 1001.

The auction-purchaser is a necessary party to a proceeding to set aside an auction-sale. Therefore, if one of the auction-purchasers is made a party after the expiry of the period, the application to set aside the sale will be barred—Ajiuddin v. Khoda Bux, 50 I.C. 5 (Cal.). In a suit for partition, it is an inflexible rule of law that all interested parties should be joined as plaintiffs or defendants. Where the plaintiff in a suit for partition did not implead some of the co-sharers, the omission was a fatal one which could not be remedied by adding the names of those persons after the period of limitation—Mahomed Ahmad v. Ansar, 23 O.C. 62, 56 I.C. 304. Where a suit was brought in time making the common manager as well as some of the proprietors parties, and the other co-proprietors were made parties after the period of limitation allowed by law, it was held that the suit against the common manager was rightly brought, and that as the suit against him was in time, it was immaterial whether several proprietors were brought on the record out of time, because the latter were not necessary parties—Chowdhury Kirtibash v. Umesh, 16 C.W.N. 96, 11 I.C. 397, 14 C.L.J. 61. The alienee from a claimant of attached property after an order has been made in his (claimant's) favour and before a suit under O. XXI, r. 63 has been instituted, is not a necessary party to the suit, and his addition after the period of limitation will not necessitate the dismissal of the suit as barred. The case also falls under sub-section (2) of this section as it is a case of assignment of interest, and the suit even so far as the assignee is concerned must be deemed to have been instituted when it was originally brought against the claimant, and not when the assignee from the claimant was added as a defendant—Krishnappa v. Abdul Kader, 38 Mad. 535, 25 I.C. 11.

In a suit for pre-emption, if the transferee from the original vendee is added as a party, the suit must be held to have been instituted against the transferee only when he was added as a party—Karam Dad v. Ali Muhammad, 61 P.L.R. 1913, 31 P.R. 1913, 18 I.C. 70 (73). A suit for pre-emption in respect of a sale was filed against the two joint vendees, but it appeared that one of them had died previously to the suit. An application to bring his legal representatives on the record was not made till after the period fixed for the institution of the suit had expired. Held that the suit being barred against the representatives of the deceased vendee was also barred against the surviving vendee—Hussain v. Hakim, 86 P.R. 1919, 52 I.C. 587. In a pre-emption suit, there were four vendees, viz., T. B. D. and J, but the plaintiff at first joined in his plaint T, D and J, but did not join B (who was the father of T) and on objection being taken, he joined B long after the period of limitation. Held that the suit must be dismissed as a whole—Jwala Das v. Gopal, 26 P.L.R. 447, 88 I.C. 555, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 343.

The addition, after the expiry of the period of limitation of a minor member of a Mitakshara family as a plaintiff to a suit on the mortgage is not fatal to the suit —Thakurmani v. Dai Rani, 33 Cal. 1079. Where two executors are jointly appointed under a will, a suit brought by one executor is defective; and the addition of the other co-executor (who is a necessary party) after the period of limitation will bar the suit—Sreerangathanni v. Voithilinga, 40 M.L.J. 532, 63 I.C. 104. When a person is adjudicated an insolvent, the whole of his property passes to the Official Assignee by virtue of the vesting order. Consequently, nothing is left vesting in the insolvent which would give him a cause of action. So, a suit by an insolvent in his own name, after his adjudication, cannot be maintained, and the substitution of the name of the Official Assignee later on is adding a new plaintiff within the meaning of this section—Sayad Daud v. Mulna Mahomed, 28 Bom.L.R. 554, 95 I.C. 538, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 366. But where during the pendency of a suit one of the defendants is adjudicated an insolvent, and the Official Receiver is added as a party defendant, held that the addition of the Official Receiver is not an addition of a new party but a continuation of the old proceedings—Kaliaperumal v. Ramachandra, 53 M.L.J. 142, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 693, 102 I.C. 444. R as owner of certain land brought a suit for damages for loss of crops. The defendant objected that R was a benamidar for his uncle. Thereupon the uncle was added as a second plaintiff at a time when a large portion of the claim had been barred. It was held that the first plaintiff as benamidar had full right to bring the suit, because he fully represented in his own person all the rights of the second plaintiff for whom he acted as agent all along. The addition of the second plaintiff's name did not make any difference in the character of the suit and would not necessitate the dismissal of the suit—Ravji v. Mahadeo, 22 Bom. 672. The impleading of the alleged beneficial owner merely as a matter of caution will not by itself let in the operation of this section, because he will not, in that view, be a new party; Subramania v. Srinivasaraghava, 1938 M.W.N. 500, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 687, 177 I.C. 381.

This section in terms applies to plaintiffs suing in their representative capacity as well as in their personal capacity. Therefore, where some of the heirs of a deceased are at first made plaintiffs in a suit to recover a debt due to the deceased, the addition of other heirs amounts to addition of new plaintiffs, and if they are added after the period of limitation, the suit as regards them is barred. A plaintiff added or substituted is none the less a new plaintiff even if he is made a party merely for the purpose of more correctly representing the title originally asserted—Fatmabai v. Pirbhai, 21 Bom. 580 (584).

213. Action in tort:—In suits upon a contract, all persons having the same cause of action must sue jointly, and if one of them is added after the period of limitation the whole suit will be barred. But this rule will not apply to actions in tort in which several persons have been damnified by the same tortious act. Therefore, where a suit for compensation for illegal distraint of crops was brought by one of two persons jointly entitled to the crops distrained, and the other person was added as a plaintiff after his claim was barred, it was held that the whole suit was not barred but the first plaintiff was entitled to compensation as far as he was injuriously affected by the illegal distraint—Jagdeo v. Padarath, 25 Cal. 285. Where the dedendants were first made defendants as sons and legal representatives of the deceased tort-feasor ,but were discharged and the estate of the deceased was made defendant, but there being no administrator to the estate of the deceased, the sons were again reinstated as defendants, held that the suit must be deemed to have been filed as on the date of the re-instatement—Haveli Shah v. Shaikh Painda Khan, 31 C.W.N. 175 (P.C.), 96 I.C. 887, A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 88.

214. Application by party—Delay of Court:—If the application for addition of parties is made within the period of limitation, but the order of the Court allowing the addition of parties is passed after the period, the date of the application will be regarded as the date of addition of the new parties, and the applicants will not suffer by reason of the delay of the Court—Ramkrishna v. Ramabai, 17 Bom. 29. It is the date of the application to add a new plaintiff or defendant which is material and not the date on which the party is brought on the record. That is the way in which the words "when he was so made a party" in the section ought to be interpreted; Praful v. Gajendra, I.L.R. 1944 Nag. 768, 1944 N.L.J. 510, A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 57.

Where an application to add a party-defendant is made, and is granted, whether by the trial Court, or by the Appellate Court in reversal of the trial Court's order rejecting the application, the suit must be deemed to have been instituted against the added party on the date on which the application to add him as a party is made. Otherwise, though an application might be made in time, by the dilatoriness of the Court or by the manœuvres of the opposite party or by a mistaken decision of the Court which had to be put right on appeal or revision, the order to which the party applying was entitled might not be made until the suit had become time-barred—South Indian Industrials Ld. v. Narasimha, 50 Mad. 372, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 468, 100 I.C. 680. See also Ramanlal v. Ramgopal, A.I.R. 1954 Raj. 135.

215. Amendment of plaint, correction of misdescription, etc:—This section is not intended to apply to a case in which the ground on which the original defendant is sought to be made liable is merely shifted, without new persons being introduced as defendants—Saminatha v. Muthayya, 15 Mad. 417. An amendment of a plaint which does not seek to bring in a new party, but only varies the ground on which the relief was originally sought or asks for a different or additional relief, without changing the cause of action, does not bring the case within sub-section (1) of this section—Seth Nandaramdas v. Zulika, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 133, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 531. Thus, where a plaint is amended without any persons being newly included as defendants, this section does not apply, and the date of the original presentation of the plaint is the date of the suit—Mohini Mohun v. Bongsi, 17 Cal. 580 (P.C.). Where in a suit on a promissory note signed by a person on his own behalf and as guardian of a minor, only relief against the assets of the minor in the hands of the guardian was asked for but subsequently an amendment claiming relief against the guardian personally was asked for, it was held that the effect of the amendment was not to add a new person as defendant but to alter the ground on which a person already a defendant was to be held liable, and sec. 22 was not applicable—Seshagiri Rao v. Sesha Giri Rao, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 95, 40 L.W. 900, 154 I.C. 747.

A suit was brought for the recovery of amounts alleged to have been spent by the plaintiff (ex-shebait) in protecting the debutter estate, and the defendant (who had been appointed receiver of the debutter essate) as well as all other possible claimants to the office of shebait were made parties. The defendant was sued both in his capacity as receiver and in his personal capacity, but the Court directed an amendment in the plaint so as to raise directly the question as to which of the claimants was at present entitled to the office of the shebait and should represent the estate, and the defendant being found to be entitled to the office of shebait was impleaded as shebait; it was held that the amendment did not alter the nature of the suit and the defendant was not brought on the record as a 'new defendant' within the meaning of this section—Peary Mohun v. Narendra, 37 Cal. 229 (P.C.), affirming, Peary Mohan v. Narendra, 32 Cal. 582. In a suit by the committee of a temple against a former trustee for recovery of trust property, if the cestui que trust is substantially on the record from the very beginning (e.g., if the suit is instituted on behalf of the temple), the rectification of the original improper representation by a proper representation (e.g., by substituting the name of the proper person to represent the temple in place of an improper person) cures all the original technical defects from the date of the institution of the suit, and the rectification cannot be treated as the addition of a new party—Subramania v. Subba Naidu, 25 M.L.J. 452, 21 I.C. 421 (423). A suit was at first brought against an idol 'under the sarvarkarship of Basdeo Prosad.' But on objection being taken by the other party, the plaint was amended by describing the defendant as 'Basdeo Prosad, Sarvarakar of the idol.' This amendment was made after the period of limitation. Held that such an amendment would not have the effect of introducing a new party into the record, and no question of limitation would arise—Bodhi Rai v. Basdeo Prasad, 33 All. 735 (F.B.). So also, where a suit by a deity is sufficiently represented by two out of three shebaits, the third shebait when added as a party is not a new plaintiff within the meaning of sub-section (1) of this section, the real plaintiff being the deity itself—Iswar Sridhar Jew v. Jahor, 49 C.W.N. 37, A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 268. In a suit by a Hindu reversioner to recover property after the widow's death, the plaintiff, in the original plaint, stated that he claimed title through his father, but subsequently amended his plaint by saying that he claimed title through his uncle. Held that it was not essential that the plaintiff should have named any intermediate reversioner through whom he claimed title, and as there was no substitution or addition of a new plaintiff, the amendment of the plaint after the period of limitation did not bring this section into operation—Bisheshar v. Hira Lal, 19 O.C. 221, 36 I.C. 941. Where a party is already on the record either as a plaintiff or as a defendant, an amendment which alters the capacity in which he has been impleaded to one of a different character does not involve an addition of parties so as to attract the provisions of this section. Consequently, an amendment of a plaint by which a suit is converted into a representative action under Or. 1, r. 8, C. P. Code, does not involve the addition of fresh parties, and when made after the period of limitation will not make the suit barred by limitation—Seth Nandaramdas v. Zulika, I.L.R. (1944) Mad. 133, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 531. Where the plaintiff in the original plaint did not say that he was suing on behalf of a Company, and on objection being taken by the defendant, he agreed that the decree should be in favour of the Company, and prayed that the plaint be amended so that the suit might proceed as being instituted on behalf of the Company, it was held that this was not a case of adding a new plaintiff, for the plaintiff was already on the record, but the amendment simply made clear the capacity in which the plaintiff instituted the suit—Muthukrishna v. Rajam Aiyanger, 30 M.L.J. 57, 33 I.C. 357; Rajam v. Muthukrishna, 16 M.L.T. 251, 25 I.C. 945. Where the plaintiff originally sued in his personal capacity, and subsequently the plaint was amended so as to show that the plaintiff sued on behalf of himself and as shebait, the amendment did not amount to an addition or substitution of a new plaintiff—Kuarmani v. Wasif, 19 C.W.N. 1193, 28 I.C. 818. The plaintiff sued within the period of limitation in his personal capacity for a certain sum of money alleged to have been realised by the defendant from the plaintiff's tenants; but after the expiration of the period he prayed to be permitted to sue also as an administrator to the estate of the deceased proprietor. Held that there was no change in the 'person' and that the suit was not barred by limitation—Naba Kumar v. Higheazany, 51 Cal. 845, 79 I.C 403, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 419.

If the amendment of the plaint as to the capacity in which the plaintiff was suing introduces a totally new case, this section will apply, and the plaintiff will be deemed to be instituting the suit when he seeks to make the amendment. Thus, where the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants, alleging that he was a partner with the defendants and asking for an account, but afterwards the plaintiff sought to amend his plaint on the footing that he was not a partner but a servant remunerated by a share of the profits, it was held that the amendment introduced a totally different, new and inconsistent case, and that if the period of limitation had run out on the date the amendment was asked for, the suit would be barred by limitation—Kalidas v. Draupadi, 22 C.W.N. 104, 43 I C. 893. So also, an amendment, the effect of which is to add a very large number of fresh parties to the suit, though by a special procedure one of their number who happens to be already on the record in his personal capacity is treated as the representative of the whole unincorporated association is essentially a case of adding fresh parties, and when it is after the period of limitation, the suit is barred under this section. Absence of objection to the amendment cannot take away any legal defence which may be open to the fresh parties brought on the record thereby—Sankara v. Kuttani, 1940 M.W.N. 446, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 639.

The essential difference between an alteration that comes under the head of mere misdescription and an alteration that comes under the head of substitution is that in the case of a misdescription there is the same person or legal entity throughout, merely the name of the person to be altered, but when person, be it a legal or other person, is to be substituted for another, then the alteration cannot fairly come under the head of misdescription. It is a case of substitution, and this section applies. Therefore an amendment of a plaint which seeks to substitute one legal entity for another after the period of limitation has passed cannot be allowed—Mangharam v. Haji, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 275, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 172.

This section only applies to new plaintiffs and defendants made parties personally and does not apply where the same legal person remains the plaintiff or defendant but that person has been sued by a wrong name or through a wrong representative. Thus,where a suit was brought against a Municipal Committee in the name of its Secretary, whereas it ought to have been sued in the name of its President, and the name of the President was substituted at a time when a new suit would have been barred, held that this amendment did not amount to an addition of a new defendant—Munni Kasundhan v. Crooke, 2 All. 296. Where a suit was brought by the manager in the name of the firm, the plaintiff being described as "the firm of K. S. by its manager S. S." and the names of the partners were afterwards substituted for the name of the firm, it was held that the case was one of misdescription and not of misjoinder, and did not fall under sec. 22—Kasturchand v. Sagarmal, 17 Bom. 413. So also where all the partners are impleaded either as plaintiffs or defendants the suit is a properly constituted one, and the addition of plaintiff firm is not necessary—Rameswarlal v. Bejonji, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 238. Where a suit was instituted in the name of the 'Chairman, District Board' as plaintiff, but in the Appellate Court the plaint was amended by describing the plaintiff as "the District Board," held that the plaintiff being all along the District Board itself, the amendment was merely in respect of the description of the plaintiff, and did not introduce a new plaintiff within the meaning of this section—Anukul Chandra v. Chairman, Dacca District Board, 32 C.W.N. 396, (399), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 485, 113 I.C. 24. Where the defendants in a suit were at first described as a firm doing business; thereafter it was discovered that the defendants were a joint Hindu family doing business under that name, and accordingly the plaint was amended by substituting the names of members of the family for the firm's name, held that this was not a case of addition of new parties but only of substitution in order to correct a misdescription, and that the amendment did not affect limitation—Ram Prasad v. Srinivas, 27 Bom.L.R. 1122, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 527, 90 I.C. 685. So also where a suit is brought by the members of Hindu joint family with word 'firm' affixed and on objection as to registration of the firm, the plaint is amended by deleting the word 'firm' after the period of limitation, the suit is not barred under this section as the deletion of the word 'firm' is no addition of parties within the meaning of this section. The original description of the plaintiffs as partners is mere misdescription—Bhagirath v. Munga, 179 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 40. And so, where a suit is originally brought against the defendants as members of a joint family, and subsequently the plaintiff amends his plaint by adding an alternative claim against them as partners, there is no change in the persona of the parties but only a change in the basis on which the same parties were sought to be held liable, and they cannot be deemed to be newly added under this section—Bishamberdas v. Brijlal, 33 Bom.L.R. 1985, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 590 (592). When a plaintiff gives a wrong description of the person whom he intends to sue, and then when he realises his mistake amends the plaint and gives a correct description of the defendant, the case is not one of substitution within the meaning of sec. 22, Limitation Act. It is one of mere misdescription, and the suit ought to be deemed to be instituted against the defendant when the suit is originally filed—Girdhari Lal v. Dharam Das, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 147, 162 I.C. 280; Amrik Singh v. Sant Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 485, 38 P.L.R. 827, 162 I.C. 734 is distinguishable as it was a case not of misdescription but of one where no defendants at all had been named in the plaint as originally put in. To such a case sec. 22 applies. Where a suit was at first brought by one S as the "authorised manager of the Rajahs," and subsequently at a time when a new suit would have been barred by limitation the Rajahs themselves were substituted as plaintiffs, it was held that the suit being the same, the change of parties did not affect the question of limitation —Subodini v. Ganoda Kant, 14 Cal. 400. In a suit against a Railway Company to recover damages for loss of goods, the defendant was described in the title as "The Agent, B. B. & C. I. Railway Company," but the amount was claimed against the Railway Company and not against the Agent. The Railway Company filed an objection that the plaintiff's suit could not lie as it was filed against the Agent. Held that there was only a misdescription in the title of the Railway Company, and that the plaintiff should be given leave to amend the title by omitting the word "Agent," even though the period of limitation had expired—Saraspur Manufacturing Co. v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co., 47 Bom. 75, 25 Bom.L.R. 513, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 452; Gopiram v. Agent, E. I. Railway, 30 C.W.N. 209, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 612, 94 I.C. 762. In these two cases the Railway Company not only knew that the various claims were made against it but also considered itself the party sued, and entered appearance. But where in a suit against the Railway Company, the plaintiff described the defendant as Agent of the Railway Company, and subsequently on objection being taken by the defendant to the frame of the suit, the plaintiff sought to amend the plaint by bringing the Company on the record, and he stated that he all along intended to sue the Company and that in substance he sued the Company, held that as the plaintiff knew that there were two persons in existence (the Company and the Agent) and he brought the suit against one of them and afterwards applied to have the other brought on the record on the ground that he all along intended to sue the other and that in substance he sued the other, it was not a case of misdescription, and that the amendment had the effect of adding a new party to the suit, and as it was prayed for after the period of limitation the suit was barred—Agent, B. N. Ry. Co. v. Behari Lal, 52 Cal. 783, 29 C.W.N. 614 (618), 90 I.C. 426, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 716 (distinguishing 47 Bom. 785). Where a suit was instituted against the "Agent, East Indian Railway Company" and a personal decree was sought against the Agent, and there was no suggestion in the plaint that it was sought to bind the Railway Company by any decree that the plaintiff might obtain against the Agent, held that the plaintiff was not entitled, after the period of limitation for the suit had expired, to amend the plaint by substituting the Railway Company for the Agent, as such amendment would have the effect of introducing a new defendant —E. I. Ry. Co. v. Ram Lakhan, 3 Pat. 230, 78 I.C. 312, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 37; Sinehi Ram Behari Lal v. Agent, E. I. Ry. Co., 2 P.L.T. 679. Where in a suit instituted within time against the Government as responsible for the administration of the railways, the plaint describes the Government as the Secretary of State, and the plaint is subsequently amended after the period of limitation altering the description to the Governor General in Council as required by sec. 79, C. P. Code, the suit is not barred by limitation as the claim being against the same Government it cannot be anything more than a matter of misdescription—Kanailal v. The Governor General in Council, 46 C.W.N. 18. In a plaint filed against two companies, the defendant companies were described as "the I. G. S. N. & Ry. Co. Ld., and the R. S. Navigation Co. Ld., by their joint Agent, A. E. Rogers." Mr. Rogers filed a written statement that the suit was not maintainable against him. Mr. Rogers then retired from the services of the two companies and left the country. At the trial of the suit the plaint was amended by expunging the name of Mr. Rogers. Held that the suit was not at first properly framed, and that it must be taken to have been instituted against the two companies on the date when the plaint was allowed to be amended—I. G. S. N. & Ry. Co. v. Lal Mohan Saha, 43 Cal. 441, 22 C.L.J. 241, 31 I.C. 35. See also Madhosingh v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 57.

Where the suit was originally brought against a 'Company' and the plaint was amended by bringing the individual partners of the Company on the record, the section was held to have no application as there was virtually no addition of new defendants but merely the correction of misdescription—Pragi v. Maxwell, 7 All. 284. In the plaint in a partnership suit two defendants were described as Joharmull Manmull, and the plaint was subsequently amended by substituting the words "Joharmull Khemka and Manmull Khemka;" held that such an amendment would not amount to a substitution of new parties, but it was an amendment merely for the purpose of more clearly describing the parties who were already before the Court. Section 22 would not apply to the case—Seodoyal v. Joharmull, 50 Cal. 549, 75 I.C. 81. In a suit to recover a debt due to a Company which had gone into liquidation, the plaintiff was at first described in the plaint as "The Official Liquidator, Himalayan Bank Limited in Liquidation." Afterwards the plaint was amended and the plaintiff was described as "The Himalayan Bank Ltd. in Liquidation, plaintiff." This amendment did not introduce a new plaintiff into the suit so as to let in the operation of this section—Muhammad v. Himalayan Bank, 18 All. 198 (F.B.) (overruling Ghulam v. Himalayan Bank, 17 All. 292). Similarly, where the defendant was wrongly described as 'Mr. P. J. Forbes, but after the period of limitation the mistake was corrected and 'Miss P. J. Forbes' was substituted, it was held that the suit was not barred by limitation since the mistake was a clerical one, and the case was merely one of misdescription—Jogendra v. Forbes, 32 I.C. 872 (Cal.). Where two sons were placed on the record as the heirs of their deceased father, and subsequently it transpired that the father did not die intestate, but left a will appointing one of such sons his executor, and the record was altered after expiration of the period by placing that son as executor instead of as heir, it was held that the change in the record was not an addition of a new defendant—Prosunno v. Mahabharat, 7 C.W.N. 575. Where a suit is filed to recover a sum of money due to him from the estate of a deceased person and his widow is made a defendant and during the pendency of the suit the plaintiff learns that the deceased has left a will and he amends the plaint by impleading the executors as defendants, there is no addition of new defendants and as such this section does not apply—Subbiah v. Umamalal, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 580, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 609. The widow of a deceased person was appointed administratrix until her eldest son should attain majority, and a suit was instituted by the widow, after the eldest son had attained majority, under a bona fide belief that she was competent to sue as administratrix; but on discovering her mistake she prayed that her three sons should be substituted as plaintiffs, and the substitution was made at a time when the suit if instituted would be barred by limitation; it was held that this was not an addition of new plaintiffs within the meaning of this section—Nistarini v. Sarat Chandra, 20 C.W.N. 49, 22 C.L.J. 279, 29 I.C. 680.

Where a suit was brought on behalf of Devasthanam in the name of a trustee who was not entitled to represent the idol, the amendment of the plaint by placing the name of the right trustee on the record does not affect the suit. The principle is that when the cestui que trust (here the idol) is substantially on the record of a suit from the beginning, the rectification of the original improper representation cures all original technical defects with effect from the date of the institution of the suit, and the rectification cannot be treated as an addition of a new party under this section—Subramania Aiyar v. Subba Naidu, 25 M.L.J. 451, 21 I.C. 421.

Where a foreign firm institutes a suit in its firm name, which it cannot do in view of O. 30, R.I., C.P.C., and the maintainability of the suit being objected to on this ground the plaint is amended by the substitution of the names of the partners, there is no addition of new plaintiffs but merely a clarification of the individuals already on record, and as such Section 22 of the Limitation Act is not attracted to the case—Mura Mohideen v. Mohomed, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 337, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 294.

In the recent case of Manilal & Sons v. Umedbhai & Co., A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 688, where an application was made for amendment of the plaint by striking out the name of the plaintiff firm (a non-resident firm not carrying on business in India) as the plaintiff and introducing in its place the names of its five partners, P. B. Mukharji, J. differed from the view taken by the Madras High Court in almost similar circumstances as reported in Mura Mohideen v. Mohomed, (1955) 1 M.L.J. 337, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 294 and dismissed the application.

216. Addition of parties by Court:—A Court in joining parties under sec. 32 of the C. P. Code, 1882 [O. 1, r. 10 (2), C. P. Code, 1908] is bound by the provisions of sec. 22, Limitation Act, and cannot disregard any question of limitation in respect of the suit itself as affected by such joi der—Imam Ali v. Baijnath, 33 Cal. 613; Ram Kinkar v. Akhil Chandra, 35 Cal. 519 (F.B.) (overruling Fakera v. Azimunnissa, 27 Cal. 540 and Grish v. Dwarka, 24 Cal. 640 and virtually overruling 12 Cal. 642 also); Imamuddin v. Liladhar, 14 All. 524; Krishnaji v. Hanmaraddi, 58 Bom. 536, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 385 (386); Subbaraya v. Vaithinatha, 33 Mad. 115 (117), 5 I.C. 931.

217. Assignment and devolution:—See sub-section (2). Where the added plaintiff or defendant derives his title from the original plaintiff or defendant by an assignment or devolution pending the suit, he will not be treated as a new plaintiff or defendant, and the case is merely one of continuation of the original suit without any change in the date of the institution—Fatteh Muhammad v. Said Ahmad, 3 P.R. 1907; Meyappa Chetty v. Subbramania, (1916) 1 M.W.N. 455, 20 C.W.N. 833, 35 I.C. 323 (P.C.); Suput Singh v. Imrit Tewari, 5 Cal. 720; Arunnachella v. Orr, 40 Mad. 722; Ganpat v. Adarji, 3 Bom. 312 (321). So, where on the death of a party during the pendency of the suit an application to bring the legal representatives of the deceased party is made by one of his heirs and the other heirs are brought on record later on after the period of limitation, the suit does not abate—Dhanji v. Manji, A.I.R. 1950 Kutch. 83.

The only sort of devolution of interest contemplated by section 22 of the Act of 1877 was devolution by death; and therefore where in a suit instituted within time, the plaintiff assigned over his interest, and the assignees were substituted on the record in place of the original plaintiff after the period of limitation had expired, the suit was held to be barred, for the assignees were considered as new plaintiffs under the section—Harak Chand v. Deonath, 25 Cal. 409; Abdul Rahaman v. Amirali, 34 Cal. 612 (F.B.). But now sub-section (2) not only contemplates cases in which devolution of interest takes place by death but it extends to all cases of devolution including cases of assignment.

218. Addition of parties in appeal:—Addition of parties in appeal is governed by O. XLI, r. 20 of the C. P. Code. When a Court takes action under this rule, no question of limitation can arise—Gajraj v. Gouri, 18 O.C. 90; Nahi Lal v. Lala, 9 A.L.J. 410, 14 I.C. 35.

This section applies only to plaintiffs and defendants, not to appellants and respondents, as there is no Act which makes the former terms include the latter. Therefore, where a party to a suit is not made a respondent to an appeal, and the Court orders him to be made a respondent, under sec. 559, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 41, rule 20, C. P. Code, 1908), he cannot object that the time for appealing against him has passed and that no relief can be granted as against him—Manickya v. Baroda Prosad, 9 Cal. 355; Sohna v. Khalak Singh, 13 All. 78. Where the liability of two defendants was joint, and the plaintiff by an over-sight appealed against the first defendant only, and the second defendant was made a respondent after the time allowed for appealing against him had expired, it was held that section 22 did not bar the appeal, even so far as it affected the second defendant. The Appellate Court can add or substitute new appellants or respondents even after the expiry of the period of limitation—Court of Wards v. Gaya Prosad, 2 All. 107. In Ranjit Singh v. Sheo Prosad, 2 All. 487 the Judges, while holding that the Appellate Court is competent to add a respondent to the appeal, have laid down that the Court is not competent to pass a decree against such added respondent if the appeal with reference to the date of the addition of such respondent is barred under section 22 of the Limitation Act.

219. Transposition of party:—A party transferred from the position of a defendant to that of the plaintiff is not a new party to whom the provisions of sec. 22 (1) will apply, and the suit cannot be deemed to be filed on the date of such transposition. The original date of filing is the material date of filing for the purpose of limitation—Dwarkanath v. Monmohan, 19 C.W.N. 1269, 30 I.C. 34; Nagendrabala v. Tarapada, 35 Cal. 1065; Husainara v. Rahmannessa, 38 Cal. 342; Jibanti v. Gokool, 19 Cal. 760; Municipal Council v. Veeraperumal, 28 M.L.J. 147, 28 I.C. 45; Khadir Maideen v. Rama, 17 Mad. 12; Moolchand v. Bhup Singh, 3 Luck. 241, 105 I.C. 473, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 484; Rajkishore Lal v. Alam, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 28, 90 I.C. 82. Birbal v. Thamansingh, A.I.R. 1955 Raj. 91. If a party already on record is transferred from the category of defendant to that of plaintiff, the provisions of section 22 (1) will not apply, sub-section (2) provides that the change of position will not affect limitation—Koman Nair v. Moolacheri Nair, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 95, 40 L.W. 900, 154 I.C. 747. A suit on a promissory note was instituted against two defendants. The second defendant was removed from the category of the defendant and made a plaintiff at a time, when the suit, if instituted at that time, would have been barred. The plaint was thereafter returned for want of jurisdiction to be filed in proper Court. The plaint was again presented to the proper Court and the same two defendants were made defendants; the second defendant was again removed from the category of the defendant and made a plaintiff, it was held that under sec. 22 (2) of the Act, the suit would be deemed to have been instituted, so far as the second defendant who was made a plaintiff is concerned, on the date when the plaint was presented to the proper Court after return—Bibhuti v. Sree Sree Tarakeswar Jew Shiva Thakur, 51 C.W.N. 907. But where defendant No. 1 executed a promissory note in favour of defendant No. 2, a benamidar for the plaintiff and the suit by the plaintiff not being maintainable independently, the defendant No. 2 was transposed to the side of the plaintiff, and joined as a co-plaintiff, at a time when the period had expired, held that the transposition amounted to bringing a new suit, and as it was made after the period of limitation, the suit must fail. See Ram Das v. Chhota Lal, 9 P.L.T. 238, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 24, 104 I.C. 526.

23. In the case of a continuing breach of contract and in the case of a continuing wrong independent of contract, a fresh period of limitation begins to run at every moment of the time during which the breach or the wrong, as the case may be, continues.

Continuing breaches and wrongs.

The object of this section is to prevent multiplicity of suits and to enable one action to be brought for all loss suffered during the whole period the breach continued. The person damnified is not obliged to bring successive suits for damages but can wait and bring an action once for all at the end of the term when there is no possibility of future performances of the breach—Secy. of State v. Venkayya, 40 Mad. 910 (920, 921).

220. Continuing breach:—A breach of a covenant for quiet possession is a continuing breach, and a suit on such breach would not be barred so long as the breach continues—Raja Balu v. Krishnarav Ramchandra, 2 Bom. 273 (293). A breach of a covenant to repair is a continuing breach, because the covenant is broken every day the premises are out of repair—Spoor v. Green, L.R. 9 Ex. 99 (111). A lessee allowing rooms to be used contrary to a covenant, when he might have prevented such user, commits a continuing breach of contract—Doe de Ambler v. Woodbridge, 9 B. & C. 376. The building of a house on his holding by a tenant contrary to the terms of his tenancy is a continuing breach. Limitation, therefore, does not run against the landlord from the moment the first operation of the building is commenced, but commences definitely when it is finally erected—Surja v. Gnanendra, 179 I.C. 482, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 149. So also erection and maintenance of huts on an occupancy holding, which is not authorised by sec. 21 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, is a misuse of that holding which is in the nature of a continuing wrong—Gaya Prasad v. Jagdish, 1940 P.W.N. 394, 188 I.C. 495. Where contrary to the terms of an agreement the defendant built his otla so as to cover up a gutter, it was held that the continuance of the otla was a continuing breach of contract—Ladakchand v. Nathu, 1892 P.J. 299.

Where the directors of a company misapplied and misappropriated the company's funds in ultra vires transactions and speculations, there was a breach of contract by the directors which continued up to the date of the annual meeting when the balance-sheet showing the loss ascertained was laid before the company, and the period of limitation for a suit against the directors ran from the date of the annual meeting—Govind v. Rangnath, 54 Bom. 226, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 572 (585), 127 I.C. 305.

By a family arrangement A agreed with B to refund to N the price of certain property sold by A to N of which a share belonging to B, and of which B was put into possession under the arrangement. A having died without having paid the money, N obtained a decree against B for possession of a part of such property. Five years after N's suit, a suit was brought by B's representatives against A's representatives for damages for breach of the agreement. Held that this suit was not barred by limitation as the breach was a continuing one and had not ceased even at the date of suit—Imdad Ali v Nijabat Ali, 6 All. 457. When one of the parties to a contract renders the performance thereof impossible, there is a continuing breach of contract throughout the whole of the contract period, and the suit may be instituted within three years from the expiry of that period—Gurmukh v. Secretary of State, 16 P.R. 1899. A suit for partition of a house was brought in 1905. The suit was compromised, the defendant agreeing to transfer his interest to the plaintiff for a consideration, and the suit was dismissed. The agreement was not carried out and a second suit was brought for partition. Held that the right to partition was a continuing right, and the breach of the agreement was a continuing wrong. The second suit was not therefore barred—T. C. Mukherji v. Afzul Beg, 37 All. 155, 27 I.C. 694.

This section refers to cases of continuing breach of contract, and not to cases of successive breaches of contract. Thus, where the purchasers of certain land agreed to pay the vendors certain fees annually in respect to such land and agreed that in default of payment the vendors should be entitled to the proprietary possession of a certain portion of the said land, a suit by the vendors for possession of such portion upon default of payment of the fees by the purchasers must be brought within 12 years (Art. 143) from the date of the first default, and this section did not apply, because the obligation created by the agreement was not of a continuing nature, but was of a recurring kind and could admit only of a series of successive breaches —Bhojraj v. Gulshan, 4 All. 493 (496). The case of successive causes of action is provided for in Article 115, and if the contract is registered, in Art. 116.

221. Continuing wrong:—The word "wrong" in this section seems to have been used in a restricted sense, and to imply something in the nature of a tort—Mohamed Ata v. Husain, 19 Luck. 515, 1944 O.W.N. 37, A.I.R. 1944 Oudh. 139. In considering whether the particular act complained of constitutes a continuing wrong within the meaning of this section for which the cause of action arises de die in diem, it is necessary to keep in mind the distinction between an "injury" and the "effects of that injury." Where the injury complained of is complete on a certain date there is no "continuing wrong" even though the damage caused by the injury may continue. In such a case the cause of action to the person injured arises once and for all, at the time when the injury is inflicted and the fact that the effects of the injury are felt by the aggrieved party on subsequent occasions intermittently or even continuously does not make the injury a "continuing wrong" so as to give him a fresh cause of action on each such occasion. If however, the act is such that the injury itself is continuous, then there is a "continuing wrong" and the case is governed by this section—Khair v. Mt. Jannet, I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 22, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 359, 191 I.C. 42 (F.B.); Thaman v. Sohna, 4 D.L.R. 168; G. D. Bhattar v. The State, A.I.R. 1957 Cal. 483; District Board of Manbhum v. Shyamapada, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 432; Kuchibotha v. Tadepalli, A.I.R. 1957 Andhra 419. To give rise to a continuing wrong there must not be a single wrongful act from which injurious consequences follow, but there must be a state of affairs every moment's continuance of which is a new tort. The test is not whether the corresponding right is a continuing right but whether the wrong is a continuing wrong. Where the act or wrong is complete, this section has no application—Radhe Krishna v. Radharamanasami, A.I.R. 1949 Orissa 1; Krishnaji v. Annaji, 54 Bom. 4, 31 Bom L.R. 1240, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 61, 63.

Disturbance of the right of worship is a continuous wrong. Thus, where the plaintiffs (Digambari Jains) had been worshipping certain charans or foot prints on the Parasnath hill, but the defendants (Swetambari Jains) removed those charans and replaced them by charans of a different type obnoxious to the plaintiffs, it was held that the action of the defendants was a continuing wrong in respect of which a fresh period of limitation began to run every moment of the day on which the wrong continued—Hukum Chand v. Maharaj Bahadur Singh, 12 Pat. 681 (P.C.), 14 P.L.T. 559, 37 C.W.N. 1021 (1028), A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 193, 144 I.C. 346.

The construction and occupation of a balakhana by the defendants over the mosque of which they were mutwallis, for the purposes of private residence is a continuing wrong so that a fresh period of limitation begins to run at every moment of the time during which the wrong continues—Muhammad Ahmad v. Muhammad Fazal, 31 P.R. 1917, 39 I.C. 116. Every fresh appropriation of the income of a property by one co sharer to the exclusion of the other co-sharers is a continuing wrong giving rise to a fresh cause of action to those co-sharers for a suit for a declaration of their rights —Harnam Singh v. Makhan Singh, 21 P.L.R. 1918, 44 I.C. 31. An infringement of a trade mark is a continuing wrong, and a fresh cause of action arises de die in diem so long as the infringement continues—Abdul Salam v. Hamidullah, 97 P.R. 1913. 15 I.C. 116.

A trespass upon immoveable property is a continuing wrong, and the owner may sue the trespasser for compensation within three years of the termination of the trespass Narasimma v. Raghupathi, 6 Mad. 176. Acts of trespass committed by the defendant over the plaintiff's land, when the defendant has not acquired an easement for passing through plaintiff's land, constitute a continuing wrong giving rise to a recurrent cause of action—Sheo Prosad v. Manager, 12 A.L.J. 1150, 25 I.C. 185. Trespass or obstruction may in some cases be continuing wrongs and in some cases they may not be. Single acts of obstruction or trespass which are not continued are not continuing wrongs. If, however, the trespass or obstruction is continued by the wrong-doer in the sense that it is not abandoned, the wrong is continuous and this section gives rise continuously to fresh periods of limitation—Bibhuti v. Guru Mahadev, 19 Pat. 208, 1940 P.W.N. 829, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 449. But there is no perpetual right of suit under this section, for if the wrong ceases to be a wrong, it cannot be said any longer to continue. The trespass may by lapse of time itself give rise to rights of easement or acquisition by adverse possession. Where the wrong amounts to dispossession of the plaintiff, then, although it may be a continuing wrong, the plaintiff cannot receive possesson after the expiry of the period prescribed therefor—Bibhuti v. Guru Mahadev, supra; Kuseshwar v. Umakant, 22 Pat.L.T. 1001, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 188, 197 I.C. 818. Once it is found that the plaintiff's right is extinguished by the operation of sec. 28 of the Act, it is quite irrelevant whether the wrong is technically continuing or not, so far as the question of recovery of possession of the land is concerned—Kuseswar v. Umakant, supra; Akhauri v. Deo Narain, 19 Pat. 852, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 181, (this section will cease to have any operation the moment when the wrong ceases to be such by virtue of the title conferred by the statute upon the wrong-doer); Masjid Shahid Ganj v. Shiromani Gurdwara, etc., 40 P.L.R. 319. A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 369, 175 I.C. 945 (F.B.) (refusal to allow the Muslims to pray on the site after acquiring title by virtue of sec. 28 of the Act is not "continuing wrong". Complete usurpation of possession and occupation and consequent dispossession of the owner is a wrong which is complete from the moment of the dispossession. It is not a continuing trespass of the character contemplated by this section—Evangelical German Mission v. Mahant Ramsahaigir, 1939 N.L.J. 153, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 145, 182 I.C. 613. In case of recurring infringement a suit can be brought at any time before the defendant acquires title by adverse possession—Srinivash v. Ramanuja, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 564, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 322, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 498.

The interference with the right of irrigation of a person is a continuing wrong within the meaning of this section—Kania v. Narain, 177 P.W.R. 1918, 50 I.C. 299. An obstruction caused by defendant to the immemorial egress of the plaintiff's rain-water over defendant's land is a continuing wrong and the plaintiff's suit for removal of the obstruction is protected from limitation by the express provisions of this section —Punja v. Bai Kuvar, 6 Bom. 20. The right of proprietors of a village to irrigate from a Kuhl is a recurring right to which sec. 23 applies—Ram Singh v. Sadhu Ram, 13 L.L.T. 22. Sec. 23 applies to cases of interference with a water course. So also, where the defendants, co-owners of a well, fix a persian wheel over the well to irrigate their lands and the other co-owners in enjoyment of the well bring a suit for the removal of the said wheel, the suit is not barred by limitation as the act complained of does not amount to a complete ouster of the plaintiff from the enjoyment of the well with the result that the injury is continuous and there is, therefore, continuing wrong—Thaman v. Sohna, 4 D.L.R. 168, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 21.

In view of the illustration to sec. 24 in respect of interference with a water course, the party injured has a continuing cause of action—Muthalagappa Chettiar v. Navaneetheswara, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 668, 69 M.L.J. 42, 1935 M.W.N. 538, 42 L.W. 183, 158 I.C. 987. Where the defendant has not acquired an easement to drain his water on the plaintiff's land or roof, the construction of a drain by the former on the latter's land or roof is a continuous wrong giving rise to a continuous cause of action—Ramphul v. Mistree, 24 W.R. 97; Nur Muhammad v. Gouri Shanker, 2 Lah. L.J. 463, 56 I.C. 1003. An obstruction to a water course is a continuous wrong as to which the cause of action is renewed from day to day so long as the obstruction continues—Rajrup v. Abdul, 6 Cal. 394 (404, 405) (P.C.). The obstruction by the defendant of a channel through which water flowed from a natural stream into the plaintiff's land is a continuing wrong, even though the stream had not a continuous flow and was dry for the greater part of the year—Mohanth Krishna Dayal v. Bhawani, 3 P.J. 51 (59), 43 I.C. 235. Where the right of a superior riparian proprietor to have the drainage water from his lands permitted to flow off in the usual course, was obstructed by the defendants (lower riparian proprietors) by blocking up the stream, it was held that their act was actionable whether special damage had or had not occurred, and so long as the obstruction continued, there was a continuous cause of action from day to day —Subramaniya v. Ramchandra, 1 Mad. 335; Kasiswar v. Annoda Prasad, 22 C.W.N. 666, 41 I.C. 863. A Calingula was constructed by the Government for the purpose of reducing the flow of water into a tank through a channel. The necessary effect of the Calingula would have been to cause the water diverted from the channel to flood the plaintiff's land. To obviate this, a small drainage channel was formed by Government to carry off the surplus water. Plaintiff contended that the drainage channel was not sufficient to carry off the water and that the water which flowed over the Calingula stagnated on his lands and made them unfit for cultivation. He prayed for a mandatory injunction directing that the Calingula be blocked up. The defendant pleaded limitation. Held that the injury was a continuing one and that the suit was not barred by limitation—Sankaravadivelu v. Secretary of State, 28 Mad. 72. The disturbance of a right of ferry is in the nature of a nuisance and a continuing wrong within the meaning of this section—Nityahari v. Dunne, 18 Cal. 652.

Infringement of a right of way is a continuous wrong giving rise to a cause of action from day to day—Soojan v. Shamed, 1 C.W.N. 96; Nirode v. Bharat, 2 I.C. 410; Nazim v. Wazidulla, 29 I.C. 385, 21 C.L.J. 640. An obstruction which prevents some one from exercising a right of way falls within the scope of the 'continuing wrong' and a fresh period of limitation begins to run under this section at every moment of the time during which the wrong continues—Masooma v. Mohammad, 1941 A.L.J. 706, A.I.R. 1942 All. 77, 198 I.C. 532. Limitation does not apply in a case of obstruction to a right of way, it being a continuous nuisance—Aptabuddin v. Joharlal, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 201, Nazeem v. Wazedulla, A.I.R. 1916 Cal. 733 followed. There is nothing in this section which will justify any distinction between a public right and a quasi-public or a private right—Bibhuti v. Guru Mahadev, 19 Pat. 208, 1940 P.W.N. 829, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 449, 22 Pat.L.T. 46. So also, there is nothing in this section upon which a distinction can be made between an encroachment upon private land and that of an encroachment upon public land. Whether the wrong is a continuing one or not depends upon the nature of the wrong and not upon the nature of the land—Kuseshwar v. Umakant, 22 Pat.L.T. 1001, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 188, 197 I.C. 818. Where the plaintiff has a right to use the land on which certain sheds have been erected as a passage, and those sheds are obstructing his passage way, there is a continuing wrong and a suit for declaration of plaintiff's right to use the land and for removal of sheds is governed by sec. 23. Section 3, Limitation Act, makes the provisions of Sch. I, Limitation Act, subject to the provisions contained in sec. 23, so that, if it can be shown that in this case there is a continuing wrong, a fresh period of limitation begins to run at every moment during which the wrong continues—Saratchandra v. Nerodechandra, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 405, 156 I.C. 390.

Following Raj Rup Koer v. Abdul Hossain, (1881) 6 Cal. 394, (a case concerned with an obstruction which interfered with the flow of water), Soojan Bibi v. Shamad Ali, (1897) 1 C.W.N. 96 (a case of obstruction of a right of way), and Nazimulla v. Wazidulla, 21 C.L.J. 640 (a case where both flow of water and obstruction of right of way were concerned) it was held in Moti Ram v. Hansraj, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 344, 162 I.C. 303 that an obstruction of light and air is analogous to the obstruction of a right of way or flow of water. An obstruction of this nature is a continuing wrong, and the cause of action arising with regard to it is renewed de die in diem so long as the obstruction causing such interference is allowed to continue.

Wrongful attachment before judgment, if the attachment continues for any length of time, will be a continuous tort, and a suit for damages for such act will be governed by this section—Surajmal v. Maneekchand, 6 Bom.L.R. 704. But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that a wrongful attachment before judgment is not a continuing wrong, as the wrong is complete as soon as the property is seized. That the intention of the Legislature is not to make section 23 applicable to such a case is indicated by comparison with Arts. 19 and 42 under which limitation runs from the date of cessation of the wrong—Ram Narain v. Umrao, 29 All. 615 (618). The same view is taken by the Madras High Court in Pannajii v. Senaji, 53 Mad. 621, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 635 (637), 126 I.C. 721.

A wrongful attachment of property by a Magistrate under section 146, Cr. P. Code is a continuing wrong during the time that the attachment continues—Brojendra v. Sarojini, 20 C.W.N. 481, 22 C.L.J. 283, 31 I.C. 242, (dissenting from Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410); Panna Lal v. Panchu, 49 Cal. 544; Jurawan v. Ram Sarekh, 12 Pat. 261, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 224 (233), 14 P.L.T. 113. So, a suit for recovery of land brought more than six years after attachment under sec sec. 146 Cr. P. Code, is not barred; Ghamande v. Jagarnath, 175 I.C. 256, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 212. In Madras, however, it has been held that such an attachment is not a continuing wrong, as the attachment is not a wrong, and the period of limitation for a suit for declaration of title runs from the date of attachment—Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410 (416). In a Nagpur case also it has been held that where it is not known whether it was the plaintiff or the defendant who was guilty of interference with possession which led to the proceeding under Ch. XII of the Cr. P. Code, all that one can say as to what led the Magistrate to take possession is that it is either his inability to decide who was in actual possession or his decision that no party was in possession, and that neither of these can be said to be a 'wrong' by the defendant; hence there was no continuing 'wrong' within the meaning of this section during the period of attachment—Yeknath v. Bahia, 20 N.L.R. 105, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 236, 85 I.C. 631.

This section applies to a suit for compensation against railway administration for injuring goods if there is a continuing cause of action right upto the date on which the plaintiff is permitted to remove the goods. The deterioration of goods being due to the continuous negligence of the defendant's servants amounts to a continuing wrong—Sitaram v. G. I. P. Railway, 1947 N.L.J. 540, A.I.R. 1947 Nag. 224, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 726.

Where the mortgagee in possession who is bound by the terms of the mortgage-deed to pay the Government revenue due on the land neglects to do so, and the mortgaged land is sold, held that there is a breach of the cevenant, and the breach is a continuing one The reason is that by the terms of Order 34, rule 7 of the C. P. Code of 1908, the mortgagor on payment of the mortgage-debt is entitled to be put in possession of the mortgaged properties, and this obligation is a continuing obligation on the mortgagee which cannot cease so long as the right of redemption is not barred; therefore the mortgagee's failure to put the mortgagor in possession of the land after redemption, by reason of the land being sold, amounts to a continuing breach of covenant—Siva Chidambara v. Kamatchi Ammal, 33 Mad. 71.

222. Suit for restitution of conjugal rights:—The refusal of a wife to return to her husband, and allow him the exercise of conjugal rights, constitutes a continuing wrong giving rise to constantly recurring causes of action—Bai Sari v. Sankla Hirachand, 16 Bom. 714; Hemchand v. Shiv, 16 Bom. 715 (Note); Binda v. Kaunsilia, 13 All. 126; Basawanewa v. Shivappa, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 289.

Arts. 34 and 35 of Act XV of 1877 required a suit for the recovery of wife or for the restitution of conjugal rights to be instituted within two years from the date of demand; but as the personal law of Hindus and Muhammadans does not require an antecedent demand in such suits, Articles 34 and 35 could not apply to those suits. The limitation applicable to those suits was held to be Article 120 read with section 23, so that those suits were practically exempt from the bar of limitation—Binda v. Kausilia, 13 All. 126. Articles 34 and 35 have been omitted from the present Act, so that those suits are now totally saved from limitation. See notes after Article 35.

But a suit for dissolution of marriage or for a declaration that a divorce had taken place between the parties is essentially different in cause of action from a suit for restitution of conjugal rights. Section 23 has no application to the former kind of suits—Md. Hamidullah v. Fakhr Jahan, 65 I.C. 425, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 109. Under Mahomedan law marriage is a civil contract and husband's impotency is a continuing breach of contract of marriage within the meaning of this section. Hence a suit by wife for dissolution of her marriage with her husband on the ground of husband's impotency continuing from the date of marriage upto the date of the suit is not capable of being barred by limitation; Mt. Sahibzadi v. Abdul, 185 I.C. 744, 41 P.L.R. 867, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 454.

223. What are not continuing breaches and wrongs:—Where a lease granted for the reclamation of certain jungle lands provided that the lessee should hold the lands rent-free for six years, and that in the beginning of the 7th year he should cause the lands to be measured and a settlement of rent made in respect of reclaimed lands, failing which the land-lord would be entitled to possession, held that the period of limitation for a suit by the lessor for ejectment on the ground of lessee's failure to comply with the above-mentioned provision ran (under Art. 143) from the lessee's failure to cause the measurement, and there was no continuing breach of contract under this section, because when the tenant failed to cause the measurement at the time prescribed by the lease, the breach was complete—Goohi Sheikh v. Mathewson, 11 C.W.N. 661 (663). Where the suit is for ejectment of the defendant from a specific field, the fact that the field has been recorded as part of a thoroughfare and shamilatti-deh does not bring the suit under sec. 23—Achar Singh v. Badhawa, 124 P.R. 1912, 15 I.C. 285 (286).

Upon failure to pay the principal and interest secured by a bond on the day appointed for such payment, a breach of the contract to pay is at once committed, but the fact that no payment is subsequently made does not constitute a continuing breach—Mansab Ali v. Gulab Chand, 10 All. 85; Bhagwant v. Daryao, 11 All. 416. Where a mortgage-deed provided that interest should be paid annually and that on failure of the payment of any year's instalment the mortgagee should be entitled to take possession, the mortgagee's cause of action accrued on the first failure to pay interest, and there was no continuing breach of contract—Achhar Mal v. Hukman, 28 P.R. 1897. A clause in a wajib-ul-arz of a village ran as follows: "If a resident of this village shall leave his residence and go to and settle in another village, he shall not be entitled to cultivation and possession." Held that though it should be treated as an agreement between the proprietors on the one hand and the tenants on the other that the abandonment by a tenant of his residence in the village and his settling elsewhere involved a forfeiture of the lease, still it was not an agreement capable of continuous breach within the meaning of this section, and the period of limitation (under Art. 143) would run from the time when the forfeiture was incurred or the condition was broken—Dhian Singh v. Mehan Singh, 180 P.R. 1883.

An illegal distress or attachment of the tenant's crops by the landlord is not a continuing worng. The wrong is complete and the cause of action arises on the date when the unlawful distress is made—Pamu Sanyasi v. Zemindar of Jayapur, 25 Mad. 540; Venkataramier v. Vaithilinga, 38 Mad. 655. But where the landlord detained the tenant's moveables even after the attachment had been set aside, the detention was held to be a continuing wrong—Yamuna Bai v. Solayya, 24 Mad. 339. The Allahabad High Court lays down the general rule that wrongful distraint is always a continuing wrong which is renewed every day that the distraint lasts and limitation runs from the date on which the distraint comes to an end—Jhabhu v. Batul, 45 All. 208, A.I.R. 1923 All. 146, 73 I.C. 299. So also, seizure of the property of a stranger by wrongful attachment in execution is not a continuing wrong within the meaning of this section as once the property is attached the judgment-creditor does nothing and has no duty, analogous to that of a bailee, towards a stranger whose property has been attached—Eng. Gim Moh v. Chinese Merited Banking Co. Ltd., A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 276 (F.B.).

An inamdar gave his permanent tenant notice to pay enhanced rent or quit the land on a certain date, and more than 12 years after the date mentioned in the notice, sued the tenant to recover the enhanced rent or to eject. It was held that the suit was barred and that this section had no application to the case—Gopalrao v. Mahadevrao, 21 Bom. 394 (396). No reason has been stated in the judgment, but it appears from the argument of counsel that the right to demand at the usual rate may be a recurring right giving rise to a continuous cause of action, but the claim to demand enhanced rent is not a recurring right.

The starting point for computing limitation in a suit for the return of the share money contributed by a person to an unregistered association of more than 20 members is the date on which the money is paid and there will be no recurring cause of action—Kumaraswami v. Chinnathambi, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 291.

A rowak or platform was erected by the defendant as an integral part of his building, and was in existence for about 50 years, but the land upon which the rowak stood belonged to the Municipality. It was held that the Municipality lost their right, under Article 146A of this Act, to that portion of the land upon which the rowak stood, and that section 23 had no application as there was no continuing wrong, the injury being complete on the erction of the rowak; and the mere fact that its effect continued could not extend the time of limitation—Ashutosh Sadhukhan v. Corporation of Calcutta, 28 C.L.J. 494, 49 I.C. 93. An encroachment on the highway is not a continuing wrong. As soon as the encroachment is made, the wrong is complete—Municipal Commissioners v. Sarangapani, 19 Mad. 154 (157). This section has no application in a suit for the removal of an encroachment made by the defendant by projecting his eaves on a part of the plaintiff's holding as the projection of the eaves amounts to an act of trespass and it is complete as soon as the projection is completed and the continuance of the projection does not amount to a continuing wrong—Ambadas v. Dattatraya, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 753, 1944 N.L.J. 467, A.I.R. 1945 Nag. 78. Plaintiffs and defendants were joint owners of a courtyard. The defendants erected certain chappars or thatched sheds in front of the plaintiff's house. Plaintiffs brought a suit for perpetual injunction directing the defendants to remove the thatched sheds and to restore the court-yard to its former condition. Held that this section was inapplicable, in as much as the moment the chappars were erected the injury complained of and sought to be removed by the injunction was complete, and there was no continuing injury under this section—Lal Singh v. Hira Singh, 3 Lah.L.J. 128, 60 I.C. 20. Where the defendant threw sulphuric acid on the face of the plaintiff, the period of limitation for a suit for damages for personal injury (Art. 22) ran from the date on which the sulphuric acid was thrown on the plaintiff, and the continuance of its effects up to a later date resulting in loss of one eye did not make the wrong a continuing wrong within the meaning of this section—Abdulla v. Abdulla, 25 Bom.L.R. 1333, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 290.

Where a surety for a judgment debtor undertakes to produce him on each date of hearing, and further stipulates that in case of default he will be liable to pay the whole amount due under the decree, the right to apply for execution against the surety accrues when the surety fails to produce the debtor on a certain date. It is not a case of continuous breach of surety bond and sec. 23 has no application—Jalan Din v. Mehanga Ram, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 174, 37 P.L.R. 72, 153 I.C. 459.

This section does not apply to a suit brought by a Union Board for the recovery of a strip of land alleged to be a part of a public road—Dhajadhari v. Union Board of Kendragoria, 45 C.W.N. 802, 73 C.L.J. 608, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 151.

Declaratory suit:—The principle of this section has no application to a declaratory suit (e.g., a suit for a declaration that properties improperly alienated are the subject of a trust), and there is no recurring cause of action for a declaratory relief—Moulvi Md. Fahimul v. Jagut Ballabh, 2 Pat. 391 (403), A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 475, 74 I.C. 403. This section applies to a continuing wrong and not to a continuing right. A declaratory suit under sec. 42, Specific Relief Act can be brought when the plaintiff's title is denied by some person, and the denial itself gives a cause of action for a declaratory relief. To such a suit, sec. 23 of the Limitation Act cannot apply—Krishnaji v. Annaji, 54 Bom. 4, 31 Bom.L.R. 1240, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 61 (63), 124 I.C. 774. It has been observed by the Calcutta High Court that suit for a declaratory relief, except in cases specifically provided for by the Limitation Act (e.g., Arts. 118, 124) cannot be held to be barred so long as the right to the property in respect of which the declaration is sought for is a subsisting and continuing right—Chukkan v. Lolit Mohan, 20 Cal. 906 (925). But this ruling has been dissented from in the Patna and Bombay cases cited above, as well as in Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410 (416).

A suit to set aside an order passed under sec. 147 Cr. P. C. directing that no organised procession of certain communities should pass along certain streets until a Civil Court had declared that there was a right to do so, is governed by Art. 120. There is no continuing wrong caused by the defendants—Punna Nadar v. Kumaru, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 967, 69 M.L.J. 739, 42 L.W. 599.

Suit for compensation for act not actionable without special damage.

24. In the case of a suit for compensation for an act which does not give rise to a cause of action unless some specific injury actually results therefrom, the period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the injury results.

Illustration.

A owns the surface of a field. B owns the subsoil. B digs coal thereout without causing any immediate apparent injury to the surface, but at last the surface subsides. The period of limitation in the case of a suit by A against B runs from the time of the subsidence.

224. Specific injury:—The section applies only to suits based on tort and does not apply to a case of negligence which constitutes a breach of contract—Annamalai v. Firm of Advocates, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 258, 176 I.C. 608. The principle of this section is this: Where the cause of action lies, not in a specific act or omission, but in the resulting damage, the statute runs from the time when the plaintiff sustains the loss—Whitehouse v. Fellows, (1861) 10 C.B.N.S. 765. Where an act is rightful in itself, i.e., unless and until damage results from it to another, the right of action is not complete and the time therefore does not run until the damage—Roberts v. Read, 16 East 215. This section should not be construed to mean that if a suit for compensation for malfeasance or misfeasance arises out of some specific injury to the plaintiff's property, the case will be taken outside Article 36, and would fall under the residuary Article 120. The effect which this section causes in the operation of the statute of limitation is not to extend or to restrict any period of limitation, but to modify the date or time from which the cause of action arises. That is to say, if a suit is for compensation for any malfeasance or misfeasance independent of contract, and not otherwise provided for, the limitation will be 2 years under Art. 36, and time will run not from the date of the malfeasance or misfeasance but from the time when the injury results—Jagannath v. Kalidas, 8 Pat. 776, 10 P.L.T. 191, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 245 (246). See also Kothari & Sons v. Krishna Rao, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 726.

But where the wrongful act of the defendant itself gives rise to a cause of action, irrespective of any specific injury, this section does not apply. Thus, where the defendant threw sulphuric acid on the face of the plaintiff, which resulted in the loss of one of his eyes, the act of the defendant was itself sufficient to give rise to a cause of action for damages for personal injury (Art. 22) as such an act was clearly punishable under the I. P. Code. Time would run from the date when the act of throwing sulphuric acid was committed, and not from the date when the specific injury (viz., loss of eye) resulted—Abdulla v. Abdulla, 25 Bom.L.R. 1333, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 290.

Where the directors of a company misapplied the company's funds in speculative transactions, a suit (application) against the directors under sec. 235 of the Indian Companies Act is a suit for compensation, and the specific injury may be said to have resulted to the company on the date of the annual meeting when the balance-sheet showing the losses to the company was placed before the meeting—Govind v. Rangnath, 54 Bom. 226, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 572 (585), 127 I.C. 305. Sec. 24, Limitation Act cannot have any control over Art. 115 or for that matter Art. 116. Sec. 24 applies not to suits based on contract, but to suits based on tort. As sec. 24 has nothing to do with Art. 115 time for the purpose of limitation must be computed from the date on which the contract was broken, that is, the date on which the cause of action arises—V. M. Gany v. Leong Chye, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 510. The breach of contract per se gives rise to a cause of action, and time begins to run from the date of the breach and not from the date of the actual loss or damage.

The word "injury" in this section includes a legal injury—Govind v. Rangnath, supra.

When a municipality caused subsidence of the plaintiff's house by carrying on certain excavations in the suboil and the plaintiff claimed damages, held that the right to sue accrued to the plaintiff not from the date of excavation or subsidence but from the happening of the damage caused by the subsidence which followed the excavations —Dwarkanath v. Corporation of Calcutta, 18 Cal. 91 (99). A second or further subsidence may give rise to a second cause of action. But as no suit lies without damage, if the second subsidence does not cause to the plaintiff fresh damage, such subsidence does not give him a fresh right to sue—Dwarka Nath v. Corporation of Calcutta, supra.

Each separate specific injury constitutes a fresh cause of action, and a separate period of limitation will run for each. Thus, if the defendant excavates in his own land and thereby causes a subsidence in the plaintiff's, the person injured ought to sue in one action for all the effects, both existing and prospective, of that subsidence. But if in consequence of the defendant not supporting the plaintiff's land, another subsidence occurs some years afterwards, in consequence of the same excavation, the plaintiff will be entitled to bring a second suit for the subsidence, and limitation will run from the date on which it occurred—Mitchell v. Darley Main Colliery Co., 14 Q.B.D. 125; on appeal, (1885) 11 App. Cas. 127.

This section applies to a suit for damages against a railway company for allowing the goods delivered for carriage to be injured by rain etc., as no suit will lie unless and until specific injury occurs to the plaintiff—Sitaram v. G. I. P. Railway, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 726, 1947 N.L.J. 540, A.I.R. 1947 Nag. 224.

The illustration to this section is based on Backhouse v. Bonomi, (1858) 9 H.L.C. 503.

Sec. 24 does not give, as the date from which time begins to run, the date on which the plaintiff becomes aware of the loss but mentions the date on which the loss actually results—Tavoy Municipality v. U. Khoo Zun, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 313, 9 R.R. 87, 164 I.C. 410.

25. All instruments shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be made with reference to the Gregorian calendar.

Computation of time mentioned in instruments.

Illustrations.

(a) A Hindu makes a promissory note bearing a Native date only, and payable four months after date. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the note runs from the expiration of four months after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

(b) A Hindu makes a bond, bearing a Native date only, for the re-payment of money within one year. The period of limitation applicable to a suit on the bond runs from the expiration of one year after date computed according to the Gregorian calendar.

225. Native date:—This section creates no presumption as to the date of document but merely provides that periods of limitation shall be worked out according to the Gregorian calendar—Achuthan v. Achuthan, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 587. Thus where a promissory note bears both the English date, 16th November, 1934 and the Malayalam date Thulam 30. 1110, corresponding to 15th November 1934 and a suit is filed on 16th November 1937, the question as to the date of the promissory note is to be decided by evidence and probabilities according to section 96 of the Evidence Act—Achuthan v. Achuthan, supra. In a simple unregistered bond, the date for repayment of money was fixed as 30th Chait 1286 (11th April 1880). The parties computed the time according to the Bengali Calendar, and 30th Chait 1289 being a holiday, the suit to recover money on the bond was instituted on the 1st Baisakh 1290 (13th April 1883). The suit was held to be barred; time must be computed according to the English Calendar and the suit ought to have been instituted within 11th April 1883 (29th Chait 1289)—Deb Narain v. Ishan, 13 C.L.R. 153. See also Dwarka v. Raja Ram, 13 A.L.J. 486, 29 I.C. 980. The plaintiff sued on a note bearing a native date, Ashad Vadya 13th, Shak 1799 (7th August 1877), and containing a stipulation for payment of the money to this effect:—"In the month of Kartic, Shak 1799,—that is to say, in four months,—we shall pay in full the principal and interest." The plaint was filed on the 6th December 1880. It was held the period of four months for repayment of the debt was to be calculated according to the Gregorian Calendar; that the mention of Kartic 1799 as the time for repayment did not affect the question; that the period of four months expired on the 7th December 1877 (although that date corresponded with Margashirsha Shudhi 3rd), and that therefore the suit was not barred—Rango v. Babaji, 6 Bom. 83. Similarly, where a registered bond dated 16th April 1924 provided for payment in six months, the date of payment being fixed as Kuar Sudhi Puran Mashi 1332 Fasli, which corresponded to 13th October 1930, it was held that the date of payment should be calculated as six months from 16th April 1924, i.e., it would fall on 16th October 1924; and therefore a suit filed on 15th October 1930 was within time. Kuar Sudhi Puran Mashi of the Fasli year was a moveable date and could not be taken as the date of payment with reference to which limitation should be calculated—Pulai Ram v. Sanchit, 8 O.W.N. 834, 134 I.C. 601, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 357 (358). Where a deed was to operate for 16 years, and the parties meant it to run for 16 Telegu years, held that notwithstanding the intention of the parties, the years must be deemed to be Gregorian Calendar years. Section 25 is absolute and there is no saving of cases in which it appears on the face of the contract that lunar months were intended by the parties—Venkatasubrahmanya v. Bhiravaswami, 53 M.L.J. 447, 105 I.C. 241, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 917. A mortgage bond was dated 8th Asar 1283 Fasli (14th June 1876) and the money was stipulated to be repaid in the "month of Jeyth 1289 Fasli, being a period of six years." The last day of Jeyth 1289 answered to the 1st June 1882. It was held that the period of six years from the date of the bond ended on the 14th June 1882, the time being calculated according to the Gregorian Calendar, and therefore a suit instituted on 12th June 1894 was in time—Latifunessa v. Dhan Kunwar, 24 Cal. 382. Where a deed provides for payment within a stipulated period of years, the year shall mean the year reckoned according to the British Calendar—Raja Ram v. Rameshwar, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 270.

If a starting point is to be calculated as so many months or so many years from a particular date, that point must be calculated according to the Gregorian Calendar. But if the starting point is otherwise fixed by the stipulation itself, as for instance where the intention was that the interest should be payable at the expiry of six months according to the Hindi Calendar, (that is to say on a particular date and not at the expiry of six months) and that the cause of action should arise on default, this section is not applicable—Roshan Lal v. Chowdhury Bashir Ahmed, 22 A.L.J. 902, 82 I.C. 330, A.I.R. 1925 All. 138.

PART IV.

ACQUISITION OF OWNERSHIP BY POSSESSION.

Acquisition of right to easements.

26. (1) Where the access and use of light or air to and for any building have been peaceably enjoyed therewith as an easement, and as of right, without interruption, and for twenty years, and where any way or watercourse, or the use of any water, or any other easement (whether affirmative or negative) has been peaceably and openly enjoyed by any person claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right without interruption, and for twenty years, the right to such access and use of light or air, way, watercourse, use of water, or other easement shall be absolute and indefeasible.

Each of the said periods of twenty years shall be taken to be a period ending within two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested.

(2) Where the property over which a right is claimed under sub-section (1) belongs to the Government, that sub-section shall be read as if for the words "twenty years" the words "sixty years" were substituted.

Explanation.—Nothing is an interruption within the meaning of this section, unless where there is an actual discontinuance of the possession or enjoyment by reason of an obstruction by the act of some person other than the claimant, and unless such obstruction is submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after the claimant has notice thereof and of the person making or authorizing the same to be made.

Illustrations.

(a) A suit is brought in 1911 for obstructing a right of way. The defendant admits the obstruction, but denies the right of way. The plaintiff proves that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him, claiming title thereto as an easement and as of right, without interruption from 1st January 1890 to 1st January 1910. The plaintiff is entitled to judgment.

(b) In a like suit the plaintiff shows that the right was peaceably and openly enjoyed by him for twenty years. The defendant proves that the plaintiff, on one occasion during the twenty years, had asked his leave to enjoy the right. The suit shall be dismissed.

The word "Government" in sub-section (2) was substituted for the word "Crown" by the A. O. 1950.

This section may be compared with sec. 15, Easements Act.

226. Scope of section:—This section is concerned only with the acquisition of the easement, and does not purport to measure the extent of the right or to indicate the remedy by which a disturbance of the right is to be vindicated; for that recourse must be had to the English law—Paul v. Robson, 39 Cal. 59 (76), 12 I.C. 60.

227. Easement defined:—Section 4 of the Indian Easements Act (V of 1882) defines an easement as "a right which the owner or occupier of certain land possesses, as such, for the beneficial enjoyment of that land, to do and continue to do something, or to prevent and continue to prevent something being done, in or upon, or in respect of, certain other land not his own. ...'Land' includes also things permanently attached to the earth: 'beneficial enjoyment' includes also possible convenience, remote advantage, and even a mere amenity; and the expression 'to do something' includes removal and appropriation by the dominant owner, for the beneficial enjoyment of the dominant heritage, of any part of the soil of the servient heritage or any thing growing or subsisting thereon." This definition of 'Easement' however will prevail only in those provinces (viz., Madras, C. P., Coorg, Bombay and U. P.) to which the Easements Act applies. The other provinces will be guided by the definition given in sec. 2 of this Act.

On the other hand, the present section and the one following as well as the definition of easement in sec. 2 will not apply to those provinces to which the Easements Act extends. See sec. 29, sub-sec. (4).

For a discussion of the characteristics of an easement as understood in the English law, see Re Ellenborough Park, 1955, 3 All. E.R. 667.

228. Profit a prendre:—In India, it has been held that the word 'easement' as defined in sec. 2 of this Act has a much more extensive meaning than the word bears in the English law and embraces what in English law is called a profit a prendre, that is to say, a right to enjoy a profit out of the land of another. A prescriptive right of fishery is therefore an easement and may be claimed by any one who can prove a 'use' of it, that is, who can prove that he has of right claimed and enjoyed it without interruption for a period of twenty years, although he does not allege and cannot prove that he is, or was, in possession and enjoyment or occupation of any dominant tenement—Chundee v. Shib, 5 Cal. 945; Loknath v. Jahania, 12 I.C. 305, 14 C.L.J. 572; Hill & Co. v. Sheoraj, 1 Pat. 674, 64 I.C. 346, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 58. So also, a right to take earth from the land of another person is a profit a prendre in gross. Nevertheless, it falls within the extended meaning given to the word 'easement' in this Act and a right of this kind can, in consequence, be acquired by prescription—Darbari v. Khatir, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 202.

229. Air and light:—The Indian law, unlike the English Prescription Act places light and air on the same footing—Delhi and London Bank v. Hem Lall, 14 Cal. 839 (855). The only amount of light for a dwelling house which can be claimed by prescription or by length of enjoyment without an actual grant, is such an amount as is reasonably necessary for the convenient and comfortable habitation of the house—Ibid (at p. 854), following Bagram v. Khettranath, 3 B.L.R.O.C. 45 (46); Modhoosoodun v. Bissonath, 15 B.L.R. 361. The amount of light enjoyed during the period of prescription should not be taken into consideration in measuring the amount of light to which the dominant owner is entitled. He does not obtain by his easement a right to all the light he has enjoyed. He obtains a right to so much of it as will suffice for the ordinary purposes of inhabitancy or business according to the ordinary notions of mankind, having regard to the locality and surroundings—Jolly v. Kine, [1907] A.C. 1; Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores, [1904] A.C. 179; followed in Paul v. Robson, 42 Cal. 46 (P.C.). Where there has been an interference with ancient lights, no action can be maintained unless the comfort and convenience of dominant premises have been affected considering their nature and locality, and the amount of light still left—Debendra v. Surendra, 31 C.W.N. 419 (425), A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 345, 102 I.C. 370. An interference with the access of light and air to plaintiff's house, by building on adjoining land, is not actionable unless the obstruction is such as to cause what is technically called a nuisance to the house, in other words, it must be such as to render the house unfit for the ordinary purposes of habitation or business; there is no such thing as a right to the uninterrupted flow of south breeze; and the only amount of light for a house which can be claimed by prescription or by length of time without an actual grant is such an amount as is reasonably necessary for the convenient and comfortable habitation of the house—Delhi and London Bank v. Hem Lal, 14 Cal. 839.

The ownership of the aperture through which the light and air have been enjoyed, or the ownership of the structure surrounding the aperture, is immaterial. It makes no difference if the wall through the aperture of which the light has come to the plaintiff's building belongs to the plaintiff or to the defendant. The question is, has the plaintiff's building enjoyed the access of light and air from the defendant's premises through a defined channel. Light and air might have come from the defendant's premises without obstruction of any kind or through an opening or aperture in the defendant's premises, but if for 20 years it has come to the plaintiff's building in a defined channel by the same access, the conditions of this section are fulfilled—Jotindra v. Probodh Kumar Dutt, 59 Cal. 260, 35 C.W.N. 963 (968), A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 249, 138 I.C. 193.

A lessee of land, who owns a building thereon, can acquire by prescription a right to light and air against another lessee under the same landlord in respect of the adjacent plot. In such cases, there is no question of unity of ownership as regards the two tenements and the principle that the possession of the tenant is really the possession of the landlord cannot really affect the situation—Nagendra v. Priya, 43 C.W.N. 636. But in the case of joint property, every co-sharer has a right to use it, consistently with the rights of other co-sharers until partition. Where therefore one of the co-owners of a joint wall erects a wall on the joint wall and keeps ventilators in the wall so erected, he does so consistently with the rights of the co-owner and hence cannot acquire a right of easement in respect of ventilators against the co-owner—Onkar v. Lala Muni Lal, 41 P.L.R. 267, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 28, 182 I.C. 498.

229A. Peaceably:—The word "peaceably" means that the plaintiff who claims to be the dominant owner has neither been obliged to resort to physical force himself at any time to exercise his right within 20 years, nor had he been prevented by the use of physical force by the defendant in his enjoyment of such right—Muthu Goundan v. Anantha, 29 M.L.J. 685, 31 I.C. 528. Whether the user has been peaceable or not is a pure question of fact—Sitakanta v. Radha Gobinda, 56 Cal. 927, 33 C.W.N. 517 (518). Repeated obstructions or interruptions by or on behalf of the servient owner show that the enjoyment has not been as of right—Eaton v. Swansea Water Works Co., 17 Q.B. 267.

230. "Openly enjoyed":—There is a difference between the mode of enjoyment of air and light on the one hand and of the other easements on the other hand. It is sufficient if the air and light have been enjoyed peaceably, but the other easement must have been enjoyed openly and peaceably. The reason of this difference is that every one can see what light and air his neighbour is enjoying by looking at the outside of his neighbour's house, but other easements such as a right of way may be used clandestinely.

The word "openly" means that the enjoyment has from the very beginning been visible and manifest, not furtive or secret—Ram Sarup v. Abdul Haq, 12 Lah. 741, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 395 (397), 135 I.C. 51.

Where a party in the course of acquiring a right of way by user, himself blocks up the passage permanently, which renders the enjoyment of the easement impossible so long as the obstruction continues, there cannot be said to be an open enjoyment of the way within the meaning, of this section—Sham Churn v. Tariney, 1 Cal. 422.

Under the English law, a right of way cannot be gained by prescription unless with the knowledge of the owner of the servient tenement. "In order that such user may confer an easement it follows that the owner of the servient tenement must have known that such an easement was being enjoyed and also have been in a position to interfere with and obstruct its exercise, had he been so disposed"—Gale on Easements; Dalton v. Angus, 6 App. Cas 828. But this rule seems to be inapplicable to India, because nothing is said in the Indian Limitation Act as to the knowledge of the servient owner being necessary for the acquisition of the right. The words "peaceably and openly" have been introduced into the Indian Act for the purpose of preventing those rights being acquired by stealth or by a constantly contested user. but actual knowledge of the user on the part of the servient owner is not necessary—Arzan v. Rakhal Chunder, 10 Cal. 214 (218). It must at least been shown that the servient owner might be expected to have known of the assertion of the right of easement on the part of the dominant owner; Murugappa v. Chettyar Firm, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 34, 180 I.C. 477.

231. "As an easement":—A right of ownership and a right of easement are incompatible. If a person claims a site as owner, he cannot claim a right of way or user of watercourse over the same as an easement—Chunilal v. Mangal Das, 16 Bom. 592. The words "as an easement" show that the acts relied upon as evidence of the existence of a right must be done by one person upon the land of another. The acts must not be done by him upon his own land or land in his possession. While unity of possession lasts, no question of easement can arise—Anderson v. Juggodumba, 6 C.L.R. 282 (284); Murugappa v. Chettyar Firm, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 34, 180 I.C. 477. A person as dominant owner cannot enjoy an easement against himself as servient owner—Modhoosoodun v. Bissonauth, 15 B.L.R. 361. On this principle, an easement is extinguished when the ownership of the dominant and the servient tenements vests in the same person.

A right of easement cannot be acquired against the landlord by the tenant in other lands of his landlord; since the landlord cannot enjoy a right of easement as against himself, so his tenant would not be able to have such a right as against him—Moni Chunder v. Baikantha, 29 Cal. 363. But a lessee can acquire a right of easement against another lessee of the same landlord—Nagendra v. Priya, 43 C.W.N. 636.

232. Enjoyment "as of right":—The term "as of right" is a well known legal expression which is not synonymous with "rightfully," but it signifies enjoyment by a person in the assertion of a right—Ram Sarup v. Abdul Haq, 12 Lah. 741, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 395 (397), 135 I.C. 51, 33 P.L.R. 139; Modhoosoodun v. Bissonauth, 15 B.L.R. 361. The expression "as of right" means more than 'rightfully' or 'without trespass and under a strict legal right," and imports a claim or assertion of right to act against the will of the servient owner—Dwarka, v. Patna City Municipality, 19 Pat.L.T. 511, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 423, 177 I.C. 315. The words "as of right" connote that the person claiming the right must have exercised it as if he had been true owner without permission or license from any one.—Sunder v. Nag. 4 P.R. 1917, 37 I.C. 788; Futteh Ali v. Asghar Ali, 17 W.R. 11; Diwan v. Jagta, 1 Lah. 206 (209), 56 I.C. 728. Enjoyment of a right by a person really means that there must be an exercise of that right by that person. So an owner of a latrine cannot claim a right of way over a passage belonging to another person even though the said passage is used by the sweepers employed by the Municipal Committee for bringing the night soil from the said latrine. Such user cannot be accounted as an enjoyment by the owner of the latrine of the right of way claimed by him as of right—Murugappa v. Chettyar Firm, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 34, 180 I.C. 477. To become an easement, the enjoyment of a right must be open, peaceable and as of right; therefore the ability of the servient owner to stop the enjoyment irrespective of the dominant owner's will is inconsistent with the idea of a real easement existing—Sunder v. Nag, supra. The expression 'enjoyment as of right' means enjoyment nec vi nec clam nec precario. It means enjoyment had, not secretly or by stealth or by tacit sufferance or by leave or favour, or by permission asked from time to time on each occasion, or even on many occasions of using it, but an enjoyment had openly, notoriously, without particular leave at the time by a person claiming to use it, without danger of being treated as a trespasser, as a matter of right—Ram Sarup v. Abdul Haq, supra. It is now settled law that in order to establish a right of easement it is enough for the plaintiff to prove that he has been exercising the right without interruption, witout express or implied permission of the owner of the dominant (? servient) tenement and without secrecy or stealth—Behari v. Asutosh, 41 C.L.J. 379, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 788, 87 I.C. 19. An open user continued without interruption for more than 20 years and not shown to be attributable to permission or sufferance on the owner's part is prima facie evidence of enjoyment as of right within the meaning of sec. 26—Bishan Das v. Beharilal, A.I R. 1935 Lah. 937, 157 I.C. 871. Where by reason of a partition of the plaintiff's and defendant's premises, the defendant had been entitled to block up the plaintiff's window in any way he liked or to obstruct the access of light and air thereto by erecting anything he liked on his own premises, but in spite of his right to do so he had allowed the access of light, and air to the plaintiff's room to continue for 20 years, the plaintiff's enjoyment of the light and air was "as of right." The 20 years' enjoyment by the plaintiff of the light and air to which he was not entitled after the partition, was enjoyment as of right—Jotindra Mohan v. Probodh Kumar, 59 Cal. 260, 35 C.W.N. 963 (966), A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 249, 138 I.C. 193.

The burden lies on the plaintiff to show that he has been enjoying the easement as of right—Baroda v. Sreenath, 18 I.C. 211; Sheikh Khoda v. Sheikh Tajuddin, 8 C.W.N. 359. Whether an enjoyment is as of right or not is a pure question of fact; and enjoyment as of right cannot be inferred as a matter of course from a finding of long user only—Siti Kanta v. Gobinda Chandra, 56 Cal. 927, 33 C.W.N. 517 (519), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 542. But the Madras High Court is of opinion that where long user is proved, the presumption is that the enjoyment is as of right until the contrary is proved—Kunjammal v. Rathinam Pillai, 45 Mad. 633 (637).

When the enjoyment of an easement is open and manifest, and when it is not had in such wise as to involve the admission of any obstructive right in the owner of the servient tenement, the enjoyment is "as of right." The phrase does not imply a right obtained by grant from owner of the servient tenement—Mathuradas v. Bai Amthi, 7 Bom. 522.

In questions regarding user of way as of right, the Court should consider the character of the ground, the space for which the right is claimed, the relation between the parties and the circumstances under which the user took place. The mere fact of frequent or constant user of the defendants' utthan (court-yard) by the plaintiff, the parties being relations and neighbours, does not amount to proof of user as of right —Meser v. Hafizuddi, 13 C.L.J. 316, 9 I.C. 965. The nature and character of the servient land, the friendship or relation between the dominant and servient owners, and the circumstances under which the user had taken place, may induce the Court to hold that the user was not as of right but permissive—Sheikh Khoda Buksh v. Sheikh Tajuddin, 8 C.W.N. 359. Where the pathway claimed by the plaintiff lay through the courtyard of the defendant's house close to their kitchen and not far from a tank used by the female members of the defendant's family, it was held that the inference might be drawn that the user was permissive and not as of right—Baroda v. Sreenath, 18 I.C 211. Plaintiffs and defendants were co-sharers of a well. To gain access to this well from the road, it was necessary for the plaintiff to go across certain fields belonging to the defendants. Plaintiffs had used this road without let or hindrance for a period of 20 years and this road was the only road they could use to gain access to the well. It was held that having regard to the habits of the people of this country, the enjoyment of the road as of right would be presumed—Diwan v. Jagta, 1 Lah. 206 (209), 56 I.C. 728.

Where the plaintiffs had been enjoying the right to work a watermill on the land of the defendants for nearly 50 years and it was found that they had been paying rupee one per annum in lieu of the privilege of working the mill, it was held that the fact of payment was fatal to the plaintiffs' case because they failed to establish their enjoyment "as of right"—Sunder v. Nag, 4 P.R. 1917, 37 I.C. 788. The payment of a fee for fishing in a beel negatives the acquisition of the right of fishery by prescription—Brojendra v. Bama Charan, 37 C.W.N. 18 (22). The defendant, who had been using the water of the plaintiff's tank for irrigation purposes for more than forty years had paid a sum of money to the plaintiff for repair of the embankment of the tank about 50 years ago; it was held that since the defendant was interested in the repair of the bundh as he had the right of irrigation, the money paid by him about 50 years ago for repair of the bundh and the arrangement entered into at that time to use the water of the tank did not make the user permissive—Ghasiram v. Asirbad, 15 C.W.N. 259 (261); 9 I.C. 69. A Kumki right in South Canara is not an easement, because it is a right to do certain things over Government waste land by permission of Government—Nagappa v. Subba, 16 Mad. 304.

Where an owner of a vacant site having full power to build a house thereon irrespective of any sources of light and air, does not build for 20 years, the enjoyment of the access and use of light and air by the openings to the adjacent house cannot be said to be as of right but simply permissive. Hence there can be no prescriptive right under sec. 26—Sher Md. v. Mt. Mahbub, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 905.

233. "Without interruption":—The term interruption means an obstruction or prevention of the user of the easement by some person acting adversely to the persons who claim it. The expression is altogether inapplicable to any voluntary discontinuance of the user by the claimant himself—Sham Churn v. Tariney Churn, 1 Cal. 422. Mere protests or verbal denials of the right claimed, not followed by any act to prevent the user, will not constitute an interruption of the right or prevent its acquisition by prescription—Angus v. Dalton, 6 App. Cas. 740. A right of easement is not interrupted by mere verbal quarrels or contentions—Muthu Goundan v. Anantha, 29 M.L.J. 685, 31 I.C. 528. An interruption to be effective must result in actual discontinuance of the enjoyment of the right of the claimant. Mere denial of the plaintiffs' right by the defendant and the latter's unsuccessful attempt to have this right negatived in a court of law does not affect the plaintiff's acquisition of easement—Ram Sarup v. Abdul Haq, 12 Lah. 741, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 395 (398), 135 I.C. 51. In case of light and air, the interruption must be such an obstruction as amounts to a nuisance, that is, it must be such as to render the house unfit for the ordinary purposes of habitation or business—Delhi and London Bank v. Hem Lall, 14 Cal. 839; Paul v. Robson, 42 Cal. 46 (P.C.); Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores, [1904] A.C. 179. The word 'interruption' in this section does not apply to the final period of cessation of enjoyment which may have lasted till the institution of the suit, but only to a period of cessation of enjoyment followed by a further period of enjoyment—Amir Haidar v. Fajja, 73 P.R. 1905.

Actual and continuous user not necessary:—There is a distinction between the enjoyment of a right and actual user. The statute only requires enjoyment and not actual or continuous user; it is sufficient if it is proved that the right has been substantially enjoyed for the requisite period whenever occasion required, although it may not be exercised every moment—Ghasiram v. Asirbad, 15 C.W.N. 259, 9 I.C. 69; Koylash v. Sonatum, 7 Cal. 132; Budhu v. Maliat, 30 Cal. 1077; Gopal v. Bankim, 26 C.W.N. 121; Mangulal v. Chandicharan, 40 C.W.N. 222. Proof of absolute continuous user is not necessary. The right can be established by proof of periodical user, so long as the full period is covered, and the user has existed openly and uninteruptedly—Bholanath v. Momena, 50 C.W.N. 682, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 444. [Illustration (b) in sec. 26 of Act XV of 1877, which spoke of actual user, has been omitted from the present section.] Mere non-user cannot deprive a man of his right to enjoy the easement unless there was an intentional abandonment by which the person can be said to have relinquished it—Vinayak v. Martand, 6 Bom.L.R. 287; Gopal v. Bankim, supra.

An enjoyment of a watercourse may be said to be continuous even though it is dry for the greater part of the year and flows only in the rainy season—Mohanth Krishna Dayal v. Bhowani, 3 P.L.T. 51 (59), 43 I.C. 235.

There may be an easement of right of passage along a certain channel over the defendant's land, although the right is exercised during the monsoon only—Ramsoonder v. Woomakant, 1 W.R. 218. A temporary cessation of a right of way during the rainy season cannot affect the right of user—Shaikh Mahomed v. Shaikh Sefatoola, 22 W.R. 340. The use of light may be said to be actually enjoyed if the owner of the building has had the amenity or advantage of using the access of light whenever he chooses to use it although there may not have been an actual continuous user, as in the case of a window with shutters capable of being opened but which were often kept closed—Cooper v. Straker, 40 Ch. D. 21. The cessation of the user of an easement of grazing cattle during a time when the claimant has no cattle to graze does not put an end to the easement—Carr v. Foster, 3 Q.B. 581; Durga v. Bhonatu, 106 P.R. 1883.

234. Within two years before suit:—Para. 1 of sub-sec. (1) is clearly controlled by para. 2, because the latter explains how the period of 20 years necessary under the first para. is to be computed. A title to easement is not complete merely upon the effluxion of the statutory period of 20 years and however long the period of actual enjoyment may be, no absolute and indefeasible right can be acquired until the right is brought in question in some suit, and until it is so brought, the right is inchoate only; and in order to establish it when brought into question, the enjoyment relied on must be an enjoyment for 20 years up to within 2 years of the institution of the suit—Siti Kanta v. Radha Gobinda, 56 Cal. 927, 23 C.W.N. 517 (518), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 542, 119 I.C. 293; Traders and Miners Union Ltd v. Dhirendra, 23 Pat. 115, A.I.R. 1944 Pat. 261. So, the right so acquired is not enforceable against a mortgagee whose mortgage is prior to the suit—Traders and Miners Union Ltd. v. Dhirendra, supra. A claim for prescriptive right would be defeated if the period of user had terminated more than two years before the filing of the suit—Maung Pwe v. Maung Chan, 7 Rang. 487, A.I.R. 1929 Rang. 300 (301). But the section does not speak of actual user. The plaintiff sued the defendant for a declaration of a right of way over a plot of land belonging to the defendant. It was alleged that in April 1892, the defendant dispossessed the plaintiffs from the dominant tenement; and that the plaintiffs sued the defendant for recovery of possession of it under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and having obtained a decree, got possession on the 19th June 1895. But they did not use the right of way. The defendant, on the 21st June 1895, obstructed the disputed way by erecting sheds. The present suit was instituted on the 25th November 1895. It was held that as there was no enjoyment of the right of way on the part of the plaintiffs within two years before the institution of the suit, the suit must fail —Jahnavi v. Bindu Basini, 26 Cal. 593.

235. Easement against Government:—See sub-section (2); and compare section 15 of the Easement Act (V of 1882) which provides: "When the property over which a right is claimed under this section belongs to Government, this section shall be read as if for the words 'twenty years' the words 'sixty years' were substituted."

Sub-section (2) did not exist in the Limitation Act of 1877, and so it was held that nobody could acquire any right of easement against the Government by any lentgh of time—Secy. of State v. Mathurbhai, 14 Bom. 213; Gangaram v. Secy. of State, 21 S.L.R. 195, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 270 (272). In Arzan v. Rakhal Chandra, 10 Cal. 214 (219), in which the Government was a party, the Judges proceeded on the assumption that 20 years' enjoyment of easement would give a prescriptive right against Government. But it should be noted that in this case Government was merely a lessee and could not claim a better position than its lessor who was a mere subject of the Crown.

However, sub-section (2) of the present Act contains an express provision for the acquisition of easement against the Government by 60 years' enjoyment. See also Secretary of State v. Debendra, 61 Cal. 262 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 285, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 23. 147 I.C. 545.

Against transferee from Government:—An easement against a transferee of the servient tenement from the Crown can be acquired by an enjoyment as of right without interruption for a period of 20 years, and to make up this period during which the land remains in the hands of the Government can be tacked on. The word 'belongs' in sub-sec. (2) of the section should be given its plain meaning and should not be interpreted by a forced construction as equivalent to 'has belonged'—Saya v. Lahore Electric Supply Co. Ltd., I.L.R. (1943) Lah. 129, 44 P.L.R. 116, A.I.R. 1942 Lah. 124. Under the Jamnagar Law, no one can acquire any right of easement against the Government. Therefore the period of ownership of State cannot be tacked on to the period of the transferee from the State—Chhotalal v. Babulal, A I.R. 1951 Sau. 5.

236. 'Explanation'—Obstruction:—The explanation only defines the interruption contemplated by the section. An interruption within the meaning of the explanation for more than a year will operate to prevent the claimant from adding the period of his previous enjoyment of the right to any period of enjoyment after such interruption so as together to make up the requisite total of 20 years, but will not, by itself, suffice to nullify any right that may have been already acquired by twenty years' uninterrupted enjoyment, for the section entitles the claimant to sue within two years—Dwarka v. Patna City Municipality, 19 Pat.L.T. 511, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 423, 177 I.C. 315. The plaintiff continued to use a water-course for a period of 19 years, 6 months and 19 days, when his enjoyment was interfered with by the defendant. Before one year from the date of interference had expired, the plaintiff instituted the present suit for an injunction restraining the defendant's interference. It was held that as the suit was brought after the expiration of 20 years from the date of the commencement of the enjoyment and within one year from the date of obstruction, and as the statutory period had expired within two years next before the institution of the suit, the plaintiff had established his right to easement. It was further held that as the obstruction in this case lasted for less than a year, the obstruction should be ignored for the purpose of calculating the period of 20 years, with the result that an easement could be acquired after an enjoyment of 19 years and a fraction, and that the requisite period of 20 years is curtailed by the Explanation to this section—Sawan v. Chattar, 48 P.R. 1918, 46 I.C. 17.

237. Acquiescence:—Acquiescence in the sense of mere submission to the interruption of the enjoyment does not destroy or impair an easement. To be effectual for that purpose, it must be attributable to an intention on the part of the owner to abandon the benefit before enjoyed—Ponnusami v. Collector of Madura, 5 M.H.C.R. 6.

238. Other easements:—The right of the owner of a high land to drain off its surplus surface-water through the adjacent lower grounds is incident to the ownership of land in this country—Abdul v. Ganesh, 12 Cal. 323. Where the defendants had erected a dam across a natural water-course which was found to interfere with the natural drainage of the surplus rain-water of the adjacent lands of the plaintiff, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to have only so much of the dam removed as interfered with his right—Ibid. A certain 'al' formed the boundary of two pieces of land belonging to the plaintiff and the defendant respectively. The plaintiff's land was on a higher level than that of the defendant, and from time immemorial the surplus water used to flow from the plaintiff's land through certain passages in the 'al' and across the defendant's land. It was held that the defendant could not do anything which would interfere with the egress of the water—Imam v. Paresh, 8 Cal. 468. A plaintiff who seeks to enforce the right to discharge surplus water or to establish the existence of an easement in respect thereof is required to prove the acquisition of the easement under this section—Maung Tha v. Ko Shwe, 10 Bur.L.T. 38, 35 I.C. 394. Where the surplus water of the plaintiff's tank used to be discharged over the land of the defendant, openly and uninterruptedly year by year, for more than twenty years, the plaintiff will be presumed to have acquired an easement—Poorno Chundur v. Shurut, 24 W.R. 228. Where a right to discharge dirty water is claimed as an easement, the onus is on the dominant owner to prove all the points which are necessary to establish his right under this section to discharge dirty water from his house on the servient owner's house—Bija Ram v. Brij Lal, 26 P.L.R. 42, 84 I.C. 676, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 297. An easement of the supply of water from a natural stream may be acquired by 20 years' user under this section—Abdul Rahman v. Muhammad Alam, 57 P.R. 1918, 104 P.L.R. 1918, 46 I.C. 441. So also, uninterrupted enjoyment of water diverted from its natural course by erection of a bund for about 40 years confers title to the plaintiff by prescription—Ramaswami v. Harriram, A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 23.

Right to discharge rain water:—A right to discharge rain water flowing from the roof of the plaintiff's house upon the roof of the defendant's house can be acquired by prescription—Mohan Lal v. Amratlal, 3 Bom. 174. Where rain water from the plaintiff's buildings used to flow on to the defendant's land from time immemorial, the plaintiff had, by long user, acquired a prescriptive right independently of the Limitation Act—Punja v. Bai Kuvar, 6 Bom. 20.

Pasturage:—A tenant may have a right of pasturage on his landlord's waste lands by immemorial user—Bholanath v. Midnapur Zemindary Co., 31 Cal. 503 (P.C.).

Fishery:—A right of fishing in another's waters falls within the description of an easement under this section—Lokenath v. Jahania Bibi, 14 C.L.J. 572, 12 I.C. 305 (306). A right of fishery can only be claimed when the same person or persons are shown to have exercised it for a particular length of time. Where the defendants alleged that they in common with all the inhabitants of a zamindari had all along exercised a right of fishing in certain bhils, it was held that their act amounted to mere trespass, and not to dispossession of the plaintiff and that no prescriptive right of fishery could be acquired by an unascertained mass of persons, such as the inhabitants of a zamindari—Lutchmeeput v. Sadaulla, 9 Cal. 698; Brojendra Kishore v. Bama Charan, 37 C.W.N. 18 (22), 146 I.C. 427, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 539. A right in the nature of a profit a prendre cannot be claimed by prescription by a large and indefinite class of persons, such as "owners and occupiers"—Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 98.

A distinction should be drawn between an exclusive right of fishery involving an ouster of the real owner and a mere right to fish not excluding the rightful owner. An exclusive right of fishery is an interest in immovable property (see Notes under Article 144) and may be acquired by 12 years' adverse possession by operation of Art. 144 read with section 28. But a mere right to fish not excluding the real owner is a profit a prendre and falls within the definition of an easement under sec. 2 (5) and may be acquired only by 20 years' possession under section 26—Hill & Co. v. Sheoraj, 1 Pat. 674, 3 P.L.T. 53, 64 I.C. 346. In order to establish an exclusive right of fishery in a tidal navigable river it is necessary to prove that the plaintiff's user was in assertion of a right other and higher than the general right of the public to fish—Abhoy Charan v. Dwarka, 39 Cal. 53; Province of Bengal v. Indra, I.L.R. (1945) 2 Cal. 581, 49 C.W.N. 539, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 12. It is doubtful whether an exclusive right of fishery in a tidal and navigable river can be acquired by proof of mere enjoyment in the manner provided by section 26; such right can only be acquired by a grant from the Crown—Ibid.; Prosunno v. Ram Coomar, 4 Cal. 53.

Ferry:—The right to maintain a ferry over the property of another is a right of easement which can only be acquired by user for 20 years—Pardip Singh v. Secretary of State, 5 P.L.J. 500, 57 I.C. 516; Lachmeswar Singh v. Manowar Hossain, 19 Cal. 253 (P.C.); Parmeshari v. Mahomed, 6 Cal. 608.

Cornice:—Where the roof of one person overhangs the land of another for more than thirty years, such enjoyment will vest in the former a proprietory right in the space covered by the overhanging roof—Mohan Lal v. Amratlal, 3 Bom. 174.

239. Acquiring easement in other ways:—The Limitation Act is remedial and is neither prohibitory nor exhaustive. It does not interfere with other modes of acquiring easements. In other words, the mode of acquiring an easement provided by this section is not the only way in which an easement may be acquired. An easement may be acquired otherwise than by 20 years' user, as for instance, by grant, express or implied; and if it is so acquired, the rule as to obstruciton for more than two years does not apply—Rajrup v. Abdul, 6 Cal. 394 (404) (P.C.); Sheikh Abdul Khani v. Harnam Singh, 7 P.L.T. 260, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 748, 90 I.C. 356; Charu v. Dokouri, 8

Cal. 956; Punja v. Bai Kuvar, 6 Bom. 20; Abdul v. Ahmed, 45 C.W.N. 486. Thus, a right to the uninterrupted flow of water along a defined channel over the lands of others may exist independently of the provisions of sec. 26, and when such a right is claimed as a customary and hereditary right and evidence is given in support of long user, such evidence may be sufficient to justify the Court in presuming a grant of the easement, and a Court is not justified in dismissing the suit on the ground that there had been no user by the plaintiff within two years prior to suit—Srinivasa v. Secretary of State, 5 Mad. 226. A person claiming a right of way based on custom need not rely on section 26 of this Act. Such a right may be established by proof of custom—Ali Mahomed v. Sheikh Kalu, 75 I.C. 263, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 200. But where a well which has been used by the people of a mohalla was constructed in living memory and property in it has been changing hands by sale, it cannot be said that qua the user of the well an ancient custom has been established for which it is necessary to trace the legal origin to a dedication—Walaiti v. Nathi, 41 P.L.R. 536, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 191, 184 I.C. 76 (reversing A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 12). Section 26 is not exhaustive and does not exclude or interfere with other modes of acquiring easements, and therefore it is open to the plaintiff to show, if he can, that he is entitled to a right which may be of the nature of an easement, although not actually within the strict meaning of the term. Thus, in Bengal, where the mode of dedication of tanks to the public for bathing and drinking purposes is well known, when one finds that a tank exists for a long time past, and the public, that is, the people of its neighbourhood, have enjoyed the use of the water of such a tank, it is open to the Court to presume that the water of such a tank was dedicated by the owner for public use. Such a dedication can be inferred from the manner and the duration of such use. It is not necessary therefore to seek the aid of sec. 26 for the acquisition of a right to the use of the water—Bhabadev v. Bhusan Chandra, 53 Cal. 1016, 91 I.C. 712, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 507. So a right of storing manure on land belonging to another, being a right which is beneficial to the enjoyment of the property of the persons enjoying that right over the land of another can be acquired in the same way as other similar right by prescription, if the user has continued for the prescribed period—Ladha v. Mahi, 224 I.C. 86.

For raising a presumption of a lost grant of an easement from proof of long user, the law does not require any absolute period although since the enactment of sec. 26 of the Limitation Act, 1871, which prescribes a period of 20 years, enjoyment alone for a lesser period will ordinarily be insufficient—Bholanath v. Momena, 50 C.W.N. 682, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 444.

240. Issues in easement suit:—In a suit to establish an easement, when limitation is pleaded, the proper issues to be framed under this section are—

(i) whether the easement in question was enjoyed peaceably, openly and as of right, by the plaintiff or those through whom he claims, within two years of the institution of the suit, and

(ii) in the event of the above issue being found in the negative, whether there is evidence of enjoyment on the part of the plaintiff or those through whom he claims, of such a character and duration as to justify the presumption of a grant or other legal origin of the plaintiff's right, independent of the provisions of this section—Achul Mahta v. Ranjun Mahta, 6 Cal. 812 (814).

Exclusion in favour of reversioner of servient tenement.

27. Where any land or water upon, over or from which any easement has been enjoyed or derived has been held under or by virtue of any interest for life or any term of years exceeding three years from the granting thereof, the time of the enjoyment of such easement during the continuance of such interest or term shall be excluded in the computation of the period of twenty years in case the claim is, within three years next after the determination of such interest or term, resisted by the person, entitled on such determination, to the said land or water.

Illustration.

A sues for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of way over B's land. A proves that he has enjoyed the right for twenty-five years; but B shows that during ten of these years C, a Hindu widow, had a life interest in the land, that on C's death B became entitled to the land, and that within two years after C's death he contested A's claim to the right. The suit must be dismissed, as A, with reference to the provisions of this section, has only proved enjoyment for fifteen years.

241. This section is similar to section 8 of the English Prescription Act, and is almost word for word the same as section 16 of the Indian Easements Act. It may also be compared with sec. 7 of the English Prescription Act which lays down that the time during which an infant, an insane person or a married woman is the owner of the servient tenement is excluded from the period during which a prescriptive right is in course of acquisition.

Extinguishment of right to property.

28. At the determination of the period hereby limited to any person for instituting a suit for possession of any property, his right to such property shall be extinguished.

Compare sec. 34 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 27).

242. Application of section:—In cases where a special period of limitation is prescribed by a special or local law, it has been held that although this section does not apply to suits under special or local laws, yet the general principle embodied in this section may be applied to such suits. Thus the Calcutta High Court applied the principle of this section to a case under Schedule III, Art. 3 of the Bengal Tenancy Act—Nanda Kumar v. Ajodhya, 16 C.W.N. 351, 11 I.C. 465. See also Dalip v. Deoki, 21 All. 204 (suit under N. W. P. Rent Act).

Section 28 does not in terms apply to cases under special and local laws, but the principle underlying it is of general application and can be applied to cases governed by local laws—Kartar Sing v. Kharkha, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 787. Failure to sue for possession within the time prescribed by Art. 6 of the Punjab Limitation Act has the effect of extinguishing the right and title of the person entitled to sue, and the person in possession becomes the absolute owner of the property—Gokal v. Haria, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 414. This section has been made expressly applicable to tenancies in the Central Provinces by sec. 104 (4) of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, the extinguishment spoken of by this section occurs at the end of the period specified in the second schedule to the Tenancy Act and not at the end of the period prescribed by the Limitation Act. As soon as the period has elapsed, the tenancy is extinguished—Punjaram v. Ramu, I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 348, 1940 N.L.J. 121, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 49 (F.B.).

Where no period of limitation is prescribed, this section does not apply. Thus, the Madras Regulation VI of 1831 does not prescribe any period of limitation for a suit under that Regulation, nor does the first Schedule to this Act prescribe any limit for suits under that Regulation. Consequently such suits are not barred by any lapse of time, and there can be no extinction of title by operation of this section, nor an acquisition of the title by prescription—Pichuvayyan v. Velakkundayan, 21 Mad. 134. A suit for possession referred to in this section is a suit for which the period of limitation is prescribed by the schedule to the Limitation Act and not by the Oudh Rent Act. Therefore this section does not apply to a suit under sec. 108 (10), Oudh Rent Act, limitation for which is provided by sec. 129 of that Act—Hit Lal v. Ram Oudh, 1943 O.W.N. 99, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh. 296, 206 I.C. 274.

In Kutch there is no limitation to title by acts of adverse possession. So title is not extinguihed by any length of adverse possession—Bhura v. Kala, A.I.R. 1950 Kutch. 69.

This section does not apply unless there is some one in adverse possession of the property. Until some one is in adverse possession, the owner of the property does not lose his right to the property merely because he happens not to be in possession of it for 12 years. Under this section his right is extinguished at the determination of the period limited by the Act to him for instituting a suit for possession of property; that period cannot be determined unless it has commenced to run, and the period will not commence to run until the owner is aware that some one else in possession is holding adversely to himself—Swamirao v. Bhimabhai, 45 Bom. 1020 (1023); Sukhdeo v. Ram Dulari, 29 O.C. 131, 92 I.C. 825, A.I R. 1926 Oudh 313; Mubinulnissa v. Ali Husain, 6 O.W.N. 652, 119 I.C. 866, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 402 (405).

This section applies only to suits and not to applications; it does not say that at the termination of the period of limitation for an application, any right shall be extinguished—Bhaiga Parida v. Gannath, 3 P.L.J. 478 (481), 46 I.C. 569; Jokhu Mal v. Sudama Mal, (1955) All.L.J. 417, A.I.R. 1955 All. 526; Tincowrie v. Srikishan, 59 C.W.N. 220, 94 C.L.J. 219,, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 369; Province of Bengal v. Probash, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 400. Section 28 does not apply to an application under sec. 95 (n) of the N. W. P. Rent Act, 1881, for the recovery of the occupancy of land of which the tenant has been dispossessed—Dalip Rai v. Deoki Rai, 21 All. 204 (206).

This section only applies to persons out of possession; to persons who are in possession and have no occasion to sue for it, this section can have no application and does not prevent them from making use of any legal defence open to them in order to maintain their possession. Thus, the plaintiffs induced the defendant by fraud and misrepresentation to execute in their favour a deed of sale of the property in dispute. They did not pay the purchase-money, nor obtained possession of the property. More than twelve years after this transaction the plaintiffs sued for possession of the property on the sale-deed; the defendant impeached the deed as fraudulent. The plaintiffs contended that as the defendant had not sued to set aside the deed on the ground of fraud, within 3 years under Article 91 or 95, or within 12 years from the date of sale, his plea of fraud was barred by limitation. Held that the plea of the defendant is not barred; this section applies only to a plaintiff instituting a suit for possession and does not apply to a defendant who relies on actual possession which has never been disturbed. The plaintiffs in this suit cannot seek to get a wider meaning put on section 28 so as to get it treated as a law of limitation applicable to the defendant; and the law of limitation cannot therefore be taken to have barred the right of the defendant to make use of any legal defence open to him (e.g., to impeach the sale on the ground of fraud)—Hargavandas v. Bajibhai, 14 Bom. 222; Orr v. Sundra, 17 Mad. 255; Krishnacharya v. Lingawa, 20 Bom. 270; Gokulchand v. Niadarmal, 1 P.R. 1916, 32 I.C. 485. Section 28 cannot apply to persons who are in possession. The section presupposes that a person has, by force of limitation, lost his remedy by a suit for possession, and it is only in regard to such person that the section declares that his right to the property is extinguished—Gopal Bhaurao v. Jagannath, A.I.R. 1935

Bom. 326, 59 Bom. 502, 37 Bom.L.R. 471, 159 I.C. 213. The institution of a suit for possession within 12 years of dispossession is sufficient to bar the operation of this section, although possession is actually obtained under the decree passed in the suit after the period of dispossession—Maharam v. Mobarak, 46 C.W.N. 551. Neither sec. 28 nor the principle thereof can be applied to a case where during the period of the alleged adverse possession no suit for possession could have been instituted in a Civil Court because of some special enactment—Ramlingam v. Veera Bhadrudu, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 914, 69 M.L.J. 890, 1935 M.W.N. 1071, 42 L.W. 558. See also Note 7 ante under heading "Suits". Although the right of a person to bring a separate suit for possession may be barred, still his right cannot be extinguished by the operation of sec. 28, if he has been made a party (defendant) to a suit instituted by some other person within the prescribed period, in which his right to the property in suit can be effectually determined—Narsingh v. Vaman, 34 Bom. 91 (99), 11 Bom.L.R. 1102, 4 I.C. 249. Thus, if out of two reversions, one reversioner brings a suit for possession under Art. 141 within 12 years after the death of the Hindu female, and the other reversioner is made a defendant in the suit, and the latter files a written statement claiming possession of his share, such a claim would not be barred by reason of the fact that the written statement has been filed more than 12 years after the death of the female—Rayegavda v. Ramlingappa, 53 Bom. 472, 31 Bom.L.R. 647, 119 I.C. 656, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 345 (346). This is also another instance of the rule that limitation does not apply to a defence.

243. Suits not under this section—Limitation bars the remedy but does not extinguish the title:—It is a well-established rule of law, that in cases which are not governed by this section, limitation merely bars the remedy but does not extinguish the title. Thus, this section is confined to suits for possession and does not apply to a suit by a mortgagee for recovery of the money due to him by sale of the mortgaged property. The mortgagee's remedy may be barred if he omits to sue within the statutory period, but his right is not extinguished—Jokhu v. Sitla, 1930 A.L.J. 750, A.I.R. 1930 All. 416 (417), 122 I.C. 411. This section contemplates that the person whose right is extinguished by lapse of time is a person entitled to institute a suit for possession of the property. Thus, if after the grant of a simple mortgage the mortgagor is dispossessed, he is the person entitled to recover possession against the trespasser, and if he does not sue within twelve years, his right (i.e., the equity of redemption) is extinguished. But it does not affect the title of the simple mortgagee, as he is not entitled to institute a suit for possession; consequently the dispossession of the mortgagor does not extinguish the title of the mortgagee by lapse of time. His right to bring the property to sale remains unaffected—Priya Sakhi v. Manbodh, 44 Cal. 425 (438, 439). Where the property of which there has been adverse possession is subject to a mortgage, the adverse possession does not affect that mortgage, if such possession has been (and usually it will be) consistent with the continuance of the mortgage—Banning, 3rd Ed., p. 85. Similarly, the fact that a Hindu widow's right to recover property has become barred does not make this section applicable so as to extinguish the right of the reversioners, because they are not entitled to institute a suit for possession during the lifetime of the widow. See Note 589 under Art. 141.

Section 28 of the Limitation Act is limited to cases in which the bar of limitation applies to suits for possession of property. Therefore, where a property was attached by the Magistrate under section 146 Cr. P. Code, such attachment did not amount to dispossession, and a suit brought by the real owner for a declaration of his right to the lands was not a suit for possession of property. And although the declaratory suit, if brought after more than six years, was barred under Art. 120, such bar only affected the remedy or the relief by way of declaration, but did not extinguish the right and title of the true owner to the property, however long the attachment continued; and the attachment did not work a forfeiture in favour of Government—Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410 (417). This section is inapplicable where the plaintiff could only have sued to set aside certain instruments or for a declaration that they were not binding on him, and not for possession, the possession remaining with the plaintiff—Chintaman v. Bhagvan, 30 Bom.L.R. 1095, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 383 (384). Thus where a person is in possession merely sues for a declaration that a sale deed executed by his certificated guardian during his minority without permission of the District Judge is void and ineffectual, and for partition, this section does not apply, and the fact that the suit is brought more than three years after he has attained majority (Art. 44) merely bars the remedy but does not extinguish his title to the property, and consequently his main relief, viz., for partition, which is based on title, is not affected in any way—Mahomed Reza v. Zahoor Ahmad, 52 All. 979, 1930 A.L.J. 1416, A.I.R. 1930 All. 858 (860), 132 I.C. 21. Similarly, the act of the Government in occupying the land of the plaintiffs and maintaining a ferry over it, when there is no intention to oust the plaintiffs from the ownership of the land, is merely an act in the exercise of a right of easement and does not constitute adverse possession so as to bring into operation the rule of 12 years' limitation; consequently the plaintiffs are not required to bring a suit for possession within 12 years, on pain of losing their property under this section; they can bring a suit for injunction against the Government within 20 years (i.e., before the Government acquires an easement)—Pardip Singh v. Secretary of State, 5 P.L.J. 500, 1 P.L.T. 395, 57 I.C. 516.

A suit contemplated under Or. 21, r. 103 C. P. Code, is not a suit for recovery of possession within the meaning of this section. So the title of the person affected by an order passed under Or. 21, r. 98 or r. 99 is not extinguished if he does not bring a suit under Or. 21, r. 103 C. P. Code within a year as provided for in Art. 11A of the Act—Gobardhan v. Sukhomoy, 83 C.L.J. 373. This section does not apply to a suit for setting aside an order rejecting a claim; and the claimant's right to the property is not extinguished by his failure to get the order set aside within one year of the date of the order by a regular suit, when the execution proceedings including the attachment come to an end subsequent to the claim order, the claimant is not precluded from suing for a declaration of his title to the property after a lapse of a year from the date of the adverse claim order—Bamapada v. Ramanath, 40 C.W.N. 146, 165 I.C. 84.

A suit for possession of the office of mutawalli is an action of a personal nature and is not a suit for possession of any property. Consequently, if the action for office is time-barred, the right to the wakf property is not necessarily extinguished—Abdul Alim v. Abdul Hamid, 129 I.C. 375, A.I.R. 1930 All. 866.

This section applies to all property for the possession of which a suit can be instituted, whether the property be moveable or immoveable—Kanharamkutti v. Uthotti, 13 Mad. 491. A contrary view has been taken by the Bombay High Court in Surat Borough Municipality v. Sarifa, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 685, 41 Bom.L.R. 1002, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 494, where it has been held that this section does not affect the right to moveable property. This section does not apply to suits for property which cannot be recovered in specie, e.g., debts whether ordinary or judgment debts—Ganda Mal v. Nanak Chand, 3 P.R. 1887. A suit for recovery of a debt is not a suit for possession of property; therefore limitation only bars the remedy, but does not extinguish the right to the debt —Nursingh v. Hurryhur, 5 Cal. 897 (899); Mohesh Lal v. Busunt Kumaree, 6 Cal. 340 (348) (overruling Nocoor v. Kally, 1 Cal. 328, Krishna v. Okhilmoni, 3 Cal. 333, and Ram v. Jagotmonomohini, 4 Cal. 283); Administrator General v. Hawkins, 1 Mad. 267; Abdul Rafiq v. Bhajan, 53 All. 963, A.I.R. 1932 All. 199 (206); Ganda Mal v. Nanak

Chand, supra. Therefore though an attorney's action for costs under Art. 84 may be barred by limitation, his right to get the costs is not extinguished; so that if he has any form of lien upon any property in respect of his bill of costs, he can enforce that lien, notwithstanding that he cannot bring a suit to recover the costs—Narendra Lal v. Tarubala, 48 Cal. 817, 25 C.W.N. 800. Though a vendor's suit to recover purchase-money may be barred, still if he retains possession, he can claim payment before giving up possession—Subramania v. Poovan, 27 Mad. 28.

A suit to recover assessment is not a suit for possession of property within the meaning of this section. A right to recover assessment is a mere right in action, and cannot be lost by failure to bring a suit for possession of such property for 12 years—Balkrishna v. Anantabaji, I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 326, 44 Bom.L.R. 288, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 174.

Although a person may fail to bring a suit for possession of property within the prescribed period, his right to such property will not be extinguished if he is entitled to enforce such right in another capacity. Thus, although a mortgagee may be barred after 12 years under Article 135 from suing for possession of the mortgaged property, that does not prevent him from suing for foreclosure, and from getting possession under the foreclosure decree. In the first case his right to possession is as mortgagee; after foreclosure he takes possession as owner—Rallia Ram v. Sundar, 88 P.R. 1883.

Where the plaintiff as the agent of the defendant (landlord) let out the land to a tenant who was in possession, and the plaintiff for more than 12 years appropriated to himself the rents collected and asserted a title in himself, and then brought a suit for possession on the ground of acquisition of title by adverse possession, held that so long as the tenant held possession under the tenancy he was the tenant of the defendant (landlord) and so long as actual possession was with the tenant, the possession must be taken to be legally with the defendant who could not (and need not) have brought a suit for possession; the defendant's title was not therefore extinguished under this section—Krishnadixit v. Baldixit, 38 Bom. 53, 21 I.C. 763. This section does not apply where there is no question of instituting a suit for possession against the party claiming title by prescription—Muhammad Mumtaz Ali v. Mohan Singh, 45 All. 419 (425) (P.C.), 74 I.C. 476, 21 A.L.J. 757. The application of sec. 28 is confined to suits for possession. It does not apply to a suit by a mortgagee for recovery of money due to him either by sale or foreclosure of the mortgaged property. Even if his remedy for the mortgage money becomes barred by his omission to sue for sale or foreclosure within the period of limitation his right as a mortgagee cannot be extinguished under sec. 28—Ram Adhar v. Shankar, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 139, 1935 O.W.N. 40, 153 I.C. 808.

244. Extinguishment of right:—The Indian Limitation Act lays down a rule of substantive law in section 28. It declares that after the lapse of the period provided by this enactment, the right itself is gone and the title ceases to exist, and not merely the remedy. Therefore, unless the plaintiff in a redemption suit gives prima facie evidence to show that his suit is brought within the time allowed by the Act, he fails to show that he has a subsisting right to the property in suit, or in other words, he fails to prove his title—Parmanand v. Sahib Ali, 11 All. 438 (F.B.). Want of possession for 12 years after the date of purchase would extinguish the purchaser's title—Lakshman v. Bisan, 15 Bom. 261. Where, in spite of an auction sale, the judgment debtor remained in possession for more than twelve years after the confirmation of sale, and thereafter the auction purchaser obtained a sale-certificate and obtained formal delivery, held that the auction-purchaser's title had become extinguished; and that the subsequent obtaining of formal delivery of possession was of no avail, as his right commenced from the date of confirmation of the sale and not from the date of the sale-certificate—Mahmudunnissa v. Syed Zahid Raza, 11 O.L.J. 466, 1 O.W.N. 139, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 20. A suit to recover the office of trustee of a temple involves a claim to the possession of the temple properties; and if such suit is barred by Art. 124, the right to the possession of the properties is lost—Govindasami v. Dakhinamurthi, 35 Mad. 92; Ram Piari v. Nand Lal, 39 All. 636; Kassim Hassan v. Hazra Begum, 32 C.L.J. 151, 60 I.C. 165.

The possession necessary to found a title by adverse possession under this section is not different in character (though it may be in duration) from the possession required to prevent limitation under Art. 142 or Art. 144. So it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove affirmatively physical possession of every bit of land. The only thing to be considered in such a case is whether the acts of possession which have been proved will legitimately show that the plaintiff had enjoyed such dominion over the property in the manner in which such dominion is normally exercised, so as to acquire title under this section—Hafiz v. Swarup, 50 Bom.L.R. 632, 52 C.W.N. 382, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 70. A.I.R. 1948 P.C. 76, 1948 A.L.J. 221 (P.C.).

Twelve years' adverse possession of land by a wrong-doer not only bars the remedy and extinguishes the title of the rightful owner but confers a good title upon the wrong-doer—Gossain Das v. Issur Chandra 3 Cal. 224 (226); Abhoy v. Kally, 5 Cal. 949; Jagrani v. Ganeshi, 3 All. 435; Daya Ram v. Badi Mal, 16 P.R. 1886; Masjid v. Shiromani, 40 P.L.R. 319, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 369, 175 I.C. 945 (F.B.); Mahomed v. Sarju, 1941 A.L.J. 676, A.I.R. 1942 All. 42, 198 I.C. 496; Fakirappa v. Ningappa, 45 Bom.L.R. 491, A I.R. 1943 Bom. 265, 209 I.C. 251. The title which is acquired by adverse possession is a new title; in strictness of law, it is not the old title which is transferred to the new owner, but only a title corresponding in quantity and quality to the old title. Therefore, if the property of which there has been adverse possession is a lease-hold subject to a rent and to covenants, the new owner is not liable as an asignee of the lessee to that rent or to those covenants, but he is liable on the ground that the lessor's right to the rent and his right also to re-enter under the proviso for re-entry are not prejudiced by the adverse possession which has only been between the lessee and the adverse possessor—Banning, 3rd Edn., pp. 84-85.

Adverse possession for more than 12 years not only extinguishes the title of the true owner and debars him from suing for its recovery, but also creates a title by negation in the occupant which he can actively assert, if the loses possession, even against the true owner—Nawab Bahadur v. Gopi Nath, 13 C.L.J. 625, 6 I.C. 392; Budesab v. Hanmanta, 21 Bom. 509. The principle is that when the title of the true owner has been extinguished by prescription, his title is not revived by re-entry. In other words, even if the lawful owner should re-acquire possession, he is not thereby remitted to his original title. He will be treated as a trespasser—Kassim Hassan v. Hazra Begum, 32 C.L.J. 151, 60 I.C. 165; Lilabati v. Bishun Chobay, 6 C.L.J. 621; Brassington v. Llewellyn, (1858) 27 L.J. Ex. 297; Mahmuddunnissa v. Zahid Reza, 11 O.L.J. 466, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 20; Salamat Ali v. Nur Muhammad, 9 Luck. 475, 11 O.W.N. 317, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 303 (307), 149 I.C. 258; Nando v. Bhupurain, 14 Pat. 424, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 164, 16 P.L.T. 183, 155 I.C. 1094; Mahomed v. Sarju, supra. "It is an accepted doctrine in our Courts that if a party who has been 12 years out of possession and whose suit is therefore barred, should again get into possession, he is not (to use an English phrase) remitted to his old title, our Court adopting the English rule that there is no remitter to a right for which the party had no remedy by action at all—per Markby, J. in Bindraban v. Tarachand, 11 B L.R. 237. So where on the expiry of the period prescribed by sec. 96 (e) of the N. W. P. Rent Act. 1881, for recovery of the occupancy of the land of which the tenant had been wrongfully dispossessed by the landlord, the tenant's right to the occupancy of the land was extinguished, but he afterwards forcibly obtained possession, such possession was not that of a tenant who could only be ejected by a Revenue Court, but that of a trespasser who might be ejected through a Civil Court —Dalip Rai v. Deoki Rai, 21 All. 204 (208).

A property acquired under this section by adverse possession by a widow who claims and holds a widow's estate enures to the estate of her deceased husband, and descends upon her death accordingly. She does not acquire the property as her stridhan but she makes it good to her husband's estate—Lajwanti v. Safachand, 5 Lah. 192 (P.C.), 28 C.W.N. 960, A.I.R. 1921 P.C. 121, 80 I.C. 788. Therefore, if a Hindu widow remains in possession of her first husband's property, even after her re-marriage, for more than twelve years, the re-marriage has the effect of making her possession adverse, but it cannot enlarge her estate, that is, it cannot make her estate absolute. She acquires title only to the widow's estate which enures to the estate of her deceased husband—Parbati v. Ram Prasad, 7 Luck. 320, 10 O.W.N. 21, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 92 (93), 141 I C. 831. See also Harisingh v. Ramchandra, A.I.R. 1957 M.P. 238.

A right to an office in a temple and to the possession of the lands attached thereto or its emoluments can be acquired by adverse possession for more than 12 years—Alagiriswami v. Sundareswara, 21 Mad. 278. Where the members of one of the two branches of a family of hereditary trustees to a temple discontinued possession of the properties as also the performance of the duties of the temple for more than twelve years, and the members of the other branch have been holding the office and endowments during the period, the rights of the former branch as a body would be wholly extinguished by operation of sec. 28—Ramanathan v. Murugappa, 27 Mad. 192. When the land in suit was alleged to have formed an endowment, it was held that the plaintiff (purchaser) by his twelve years' occupation had acquired a title, even though his vendor had not had power to alienate the property—Nursingh v. Moosharoo, 25 W.R. 282. Where the provision in a will creating a charitable trust is inoperative in law, the property is held by the executor adverse to the heir at law, the true owner and if he so holds it for the statutory period on behalf of the charity for which it was dedicated the title acquired by prescription vests in the charity and the title of the heir of the testator becomes extinguished by the operation of this section—Hemchand v. Peary, I.L.R. (1942) Kar. (P.C.) 166, 45 Bom.L.R. 275, 47 C.W.N. 46, 1942 A.L.J. 718, 45 P.L.R. 36, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 11, A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 64. Where an insolvent has been in possession of land from before the date of insolvency, and for more than 12 years after the insolvency, the official assignee not having taken possession, held that the insolvent has acquired a right by adverse possession—Suja Hossein v. Monohar Das, 24 Cal. 244. Where a suit brought by a ward after attaining majority to set aside an alienation made by his guardian and to recover the property alienated, is barred under Article 44, the right of the ward to the property is also extinguished by the operation of this section. See Note 331 under Article 44.

Where a khorposedar who is entitled under his grant only to the cultivated area in a village and to no part of jungle therein, enjoys the usufruct of the jungle and the receipts obtained by cutting and selling timber show that it was enjoyed openly as of right and to the knowledge of the grantor for over 12 years, this section is applicable and the right of the grantor in the timber of the jungle is lost to him by adverse possession —Jagadish v. Pratap, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 587, 181 I.C. 777.

A mortgagee of melwaram interest in certain land leased back that interest to the mortgagors under a lease for a term of years. The tenancy terminated, but the mortgagee as landlord did not sue within 12 years for recovery of possession but after 12 years he brought a suit for his mortgage money and for profits for 3 years prior to suit. The mortgagor leasee did not pay any rent to the mortgagee. It was held that by operation of sec. 28 read with Art. 139 all the rights of the mortgagee as landlord had become extinguished and that the suit was barred—Ambalam v. Periakaruppan, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 377; 1935 M.W.N. 257, 41 L.W. 398, 157 I.C. 569.

Government:—If the plaintiff can establish that he and his predecessors-in-title have for 60 years been in possession adverse to the Crown (Art. 149), any right of the Crown to the property is extinguished, and the plaintiff is entitled to succeed in his claim—Secretary of State v. Debendra, 61 Cal. 262 (P.C.), 38 C.W.N. 285 (289), A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 23, 147 I.C. 545.

Joint property:—The expression "right to such property" includes the right to joint possession and enjoyment. If a person entitled to joint possession fails to sue within the period of limitation, his right to joint possession is extinguished—Atchamma v. Papiah, 44 Mad. 131 (138); Jagatram v. Pitai, 26 N.L.R. 160, 122 I.C. 270, A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 142 (143). If the right to joint possession is estinguished, the right of survivorship (upon death of the other joint owner) is also lost, because such right is not separable from the right of possession and enjoyment—Atchmma v. Papiah, supra. So also, if the right to joint possession is extinguished, the right to claim damages for being out of passession is also barred, because the latter right is not independent of the right to claim possession or joint possession —Jagatram v. Pitai, supra. Similarly, if the plaintiff's right to joint possession is lost, a suit for partition and for recovery of a share in the property is also lost. He cannot evade the operation of this section by framing his suit as one for partition, because a suit for partition is another name for a suit for recovery of possession —Atab Sunarri v. Talib Husain, 51 C.L J. 461, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 612 (614), 128 I.C. 106.

PART V.

SAVINGS AND REPEALS.

Savings.

29. (1) Nothing in this Act shall affect section 25 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (IX of 1872).

(2) Where any special or local law prescribes for any suit, appeal or application a period of limitation different from the period prescribed therefor by the first schedule, the provisions of section 3 shall apply, as if such period were prescribed therefor in that schedule, and for the purpose of determining any period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law—

(a) the provisions contained in section 4, sections 9 to 18, and section 22 shall apply only in so far as, and to the extent to which, they are not expressly excluded by such special or local law; and

(b) the remaining provisions of this Act shall not apply.

(3) Nothing in this Act shall apply to suits under the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869).

(4) Sections 26 and 27 and the definition of "easement" in section 2 shall not apply to cases arising in territories to which the Indian Easements Act, 1882, (V of 1882) may for the time being extend.

245. Change in the law:—Sub-sections (1) and (2) were substituted for the original sub-section (1), the original sub-section (2) was re-numbered as (3) and the original sub-section (3) was re-numbered as (4) by sec. 3 of the Indian Limitation (Amendment) Act, 1922 (X of 1922). The original sub-section (1) ran as follows:—

"Nothing in this Act shall affect or alter any period of limitation specially prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law now or hereafter in force in British India."

The Select Committee gave the following reasons for the change:—"We have carefully considered each section in parts II and III of the Act for the purpose of deciding whether it should apply to periods of limitation prescribed by special or local laws or not. We think provision should be made that section 4, sections 9 to 18 and section 22 should apply, unless they are expressly excluded by the special or local law, and that the remaining provisions of the Act should not apply. This will, of course, not preclude amendments of special or local laws with a view to the application of such provisions"—Gazette of India, 1922, Part V, page 74.

The words "affect or alter" gave rise to good deal of misunderstanding, and consequently these words have not found a place in the amended section. The amendment was rendered necessary not because the word "prescribed" in Part III of the Act did not mean prescribed by any law for the time being in force but because certain Courts had held that the application of the general provisions of the Limitation Act laid down in Part III to special and local Acts did "affect or alter" the periods of limitation prescribed by those Acts and the Legislature disapproved of those decisions —Durga v. Pancham, I.L.R. (1939) All. 647, 1939 A.L.J. 522, A.I.R. 1939 All. 403, 182 I.C. 242 (F.B.).

The effect of this change and the cases overruled or modified thereby have been pointed out in the notes to sections 3, 4, 5, 6, 12, 14, 15 and 18.

246. "Period of limitation":—All that sec. 29 (2) lays down is that where a special or local law prescribes a period of limitation the excluded portion of the limitation Act shall not apply—Venkataramayya v. Venkatasubbayya, (1946) 1 M L.J. 271, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 351. If the Land Revenue Court decides to take action under sec. 111 of the U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901), the Court must require the party concerned to institute within three months a suit in the Civil Court for the determination of the question of title. Such period of three months is clearly a "period of limitation" prescribed by a local law within the meaning of sub-section 2 (a) of this section, and consequently, if the last day of the period of three months is a Sunday, the provisions of sec. 4 of this Act will apply, and the suit instituted on Monday will be in time—Dhanpati v. Kandhaiya, 7 O.W.N. 586, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 371 (374), 127 I.C. 28.

The period of 7 days prescribed for an appeal under sec. 39 (2) of Ordinance II of 1932 is a "period of limitation prescribed by a special law," and if the appeal is not presented within that period, it must be dismissed according to the provisions of sec. 3 read with sub-sec. (2) of this section—Nil Ratan v. Emp. 60 Cal. 571, 37 C.W.N. 195 (198), A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 124.

The Agriculturists' Relief Act which merely mentions some periods of limitation for some suits, different from those prescribed in the Limitation Act, has not prescribed any period of limitation for the suits referred to in it in the above sense. Therefore the provisions of Limitation Act, including those contained in sections 19 and 20 apply to suits under that Act except to the extent the Act indicates the Limitation Act to be read as modified—Adinaranappa v. Mallamma, A.I.R. 1950 Mys. 13.

The Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara Rent Control Act, 1947, though a special law, nowhere prescribes for an appeal a period of limitation different from the period prescribed therefor by Sch. 1 to the Limitation Act. Section 5 of the Limitation Act is therefore applicable to an appeal under sec. 9, Rent Control Act—Moti v. Thandiram. A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer, 52.

Sec. 31 (2), Alwar Pre-emption Act does not prescribe a special period of limitation for all suits for pre-emption within the meaning of sec. 29, Alwar Limitation Act which corresponds to this section—Bhonra v. Shivram, A.I.R. 1951 Rajasthan 22.

247. Special or local law:—A special law means law enacted for special cases in special circumstances as distinguished from the general law which applies generally. Thus, the Limitation Act is an example of the general law of limitation which applies to all classes of cases dealt with by the Act. While, the rules framed under the Defence of India Act containing provisions about limitation are rules made for purposes of emergency and the exigencies of the war. And such provisions do come within the purview of special law within the meaning of this section—Surya v. The State of Bihar, 30 Pat. 126, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 462; Kandaswami Pillai v. Karrappa Chetty, A I.R. 1952 Mad. 186 (F.B.). The Limitation Act is not intended to apply to applications under the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, because that Act is a complete Code on the insolvency law applicable to the areas to which it applies, and prescribes its own period of limitation. Where no period of limitation has been prescribed in the Provincial Insolvency Act for applications by creditors to be brought on the schedule of creditors, the matter is intended to be left to the discretion of the Insolvency Court, but no Article of the Limitation Act would apply to such applications—Jhan Bahadur v. Bailiff, 5 Rang. 384, 104 I.C. 816, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 263 (264); Raja v. Sheopujan, I.L.R. (1943) All. 84, 1942 A.L.J. 592, A.I.R. 1942 All. 429 (F.B.). The distinction made between special or local laws which are complete codes as regards limitation and those which are not complete codes as regards limitation in considering the applicability of the general provisions of section 29 (2) does not arise after the amendment of that section. Under this section certain sections of the Limitation Act are applicable unless excluded and other sections are not applicable unless included, whether the special or local laws provide or do not provide a separate or self-contained body of provisions with regard to limitation of suits, appeals or applications—Adinaranappa v. Mallamma, A.I.R. 1950 Mysore 13. See Bangalore Municipal Corporation v. Setty, A.I.R. 1955 Mys. 110.

But the Rules of the High Courts under the Letters Patent are not included in the expression, "special law." The Letters Patent themselves constitute neither a special nor a local law. The High Court Rules approximate closely to bye-laws. They are subordinate and domestic enactments. They must be intra vires of the Act from which they derive their power. Therefore no Rule of the High Court can prescribe a period of limitation different from that prescribed by the Limitation Act—Abdul Ganny v. Mrs. Russell, 8 Rang. 380 (F.B.), 127 I.C. 161, A I.R. 1930 Rang. 228 (235). In this case it has been held that Rule 9 (2) of the Appellate Side Rules (Rangoon High Court) is ultra vires in so far as it prescribes a period of limitation less than that prescribed in Art. 168, Limitation Act. The Rules of the High Court under the Letters Patent not being included in the term "special or local law," sec. 29 does not apply, and the provisions of the Limitation Act need not be applied in computing the period of limitation prescribed by such Rules. Therefore in computing the period of limitation for an appeal under cl. 10 of the Letters Patent, the time taken in obtaining a copy of the judgment appealed from shall not be excluded—Mukund v. Niranjan, 15 P.L.T. 301, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 353 (354), 151 I.C. 108. The Letters Patent of the Patna High Court is neither a local or special law within the meaning of this section—Lalit v. Mohaprosad, 26 Pat. 157, A.I.R. 1947 Pat. 329 (S.B.). But a contrary view has been taken by the Lahore High Court in Punjab Co-operative Bank, Ltd. v. Official Liquidators, I.L.R. (1941) Lah. 191, 43 P.L.R. 297, A.I R. 1941 Lah. 257 (F.B.), where it has been held that the statutory rules framed by the High Court under Clause 27 of the Letters Patent under the authority delegated to it by His Majesty who, in turn, was acting under the powers conferred on him by Act of Parliament are a 'special law' within the meaning of this section. The Patiala Judicature Farman and the rules framed thereunder provide a special law as to the period of limitation—Khub Ram v. Lachhman, A.I.R. 1952 Pepsu. 21.

The C. P. Code is not a special or local law—Narendra v. Oudh Commercial Bank, 11 O.W.N. 1103, 151 I.C. 541, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 465 (471); Subbarayan v. Natarajan, 45 Mad. 785.

The Code of Criminal Procedure is a general law relating to procedure and not a special or local law—P. Venkata Subbareddi v. Duvuru Papireddi, A.I.R. 1957 Andh. Pra. 406.

The Dekkan Agriculturists Relief Act is a special or local law and in view of this section, sec. 20 of the Limitation Act will not apply to a suit falling under sec. 3 (w) of the Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act—Keshav v. Bhagwan, 44 Bom.L.R. 138, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 131. So also, in a suit for ejectment of a trespasser by a sir-holder under sec. 180 (1) of the U. P. Tenancy Act, twelve years limitation under Limitation Act does not apply. The suit is to be instituted within 3 years as prescribed in that Act —Tilakdhari v. Dhondha, A.I.R. 1950 All. 439. Bengal Act II of 1942 inserting sec. 37A in the Bengal Agricultural Debtors' Act is a local and special Act and the period of limitation applicable will be governed, as regards added parties, by sec. 22, Limitation Act—Kunja v. Mritunjoy, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 54. The Delhi and Ajmer-Marwara Rent Control Act (1947) is a special Law—Moti v. Thandiram, A.I.R. 1951 Ajmer 52.

248. "Expressly excluded":—The term "expressly excluded" in clause (a) of sub-section (2) means specifically mentioned as excluded. Unless an express reference is made in the special or local law to the sections of the Limitation Act and by that reference they are expressly excluded, they would apply to the special or local law—Raja Sati Prasad v. Gobinda, 33 C.W.N. 227 (229), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 325. Thus, the Sikh Gurudwaras Act, 1925, does not expressly exclude section 4 of the Limitation Act; therefore sec. 4 would apply to a suit brought under the Sikh Gurudwaras Act, and would allow the plaintiff to institute his suit on the re-opening day of the Court, if the period of limitation prescribed for the suit expires on a Court-holiday—Jiwan Singh v. Gurudwara Tahli Saheb, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 800 (801). So also as the operation of sec. 15 (2) of the Limitation Act has not been excluded by the Assam Municipal Act the said section is applicable in a suit under sec. 320 of the Assam Municipal Act for malicious prosecution against a Municipality—Tinsukia Municipal Board v. Bankim, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 101.

Where a local or special law is silent on the matter of limitation in respect of suits, appeals or applications contemplated or authorised by it, and some Article of Schedule 1, Limitation Act covers them, the whole of section 3 will be applicable. The amendment of this section by Act X of 1922 does not affect the position. But where in cases covered by some Article of the Schedule the local or special law prescribes a period of limitation different from that prescribed in the relevant Article in Schedule 1, either by altering the period of time mentioned in column 2 of the relevant Article of Schedule 1 or by prescribing a starting point different from that indicated in column 3 thereof, the whole of section 3 is made applicable unless that section has been excluded by special or local law with the result that the aid of sections 4 to 25 of the Act can be invoked. But where none of the Articles are applicable and the local or special law itself prescribes limitation, sections 4, 9 to 18 and 22 are made applicable unless the special or local law excludes them or any of them, and the remaining sections, namely, 5 to 8, 19 to 21, 23 to 25 are not to apply unless they or any of them are made applicable by the special or local law. The very fact that a period of limitation has been prescribed by the local or special law will carry with it the power to dismiss the suit, appeal or application contemplated by the local or special law, if presented out of time prescribed, provided that the same has not been filed in circumstances attracting any of the sections 4, 9 to 18 and 22 of the Act—Province of Bengal v. Amulya, 54 C.W.N. 297, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 356.

249. The phrase "the remaining provisions of this Act shall not apply" in clause (b) of sub-section (2) can only mean that the remaining provisions of this Act shall not apply unless they are expressly made applicable by the special or local Act. To hold otherwise is to hold that it is a prohibition of the future as well as the past application of those provisions by a special or local Act, which is obviously impossible. The amendment of sec. 29 of the Limitation Act in 1922 did not restrict its scope but extended it. Under the old section 29, none of the provisions of the Limitation Act were applicable unless they were expressly included by the special or local Act. Under the new sec. 29, some of them are applicable without being expressly included, unless they are expressly excluded; the rest remain, as before, applicable only when they are expressly included—Madho Rao v. Balaji, 91 I.C. 563, A I.R. 1926 Nag. 236. The expression 'the remaining provisions of the Act shall not apply' in the amended section simply means that they are not to apply pro prio vigore that is merely by virtue of the Limitation Act itself and that if they are to apply, the grounds of applying them must be found in the special or local Act itself—Cheddalal v. Officer Commanding, I.L.R. (1941) All. 356, 1941 A.L.J. 267, A.I R. 1941 All. 207. What clause (b) means clearly is that the remaining provisions of the Limitation Act shall not apply of their own force. i.e., they shall not apply unless the Act is expressly applied by the special or local law. This Act has been made applicable expressly by sec. 185 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and consequently secs 19 and 20 of the Limitation Act must be held to apply to a case under Art. 2 (b) of the Schedule to the Bengal Tenancy Act —Hasan Imam v. Brahmdeo, 9 Pat. 747, 126 I.C. 299, A.I.R. 1930 Pat. 301 (304); Wazed Ali v. Brojendra, 36 C.W.N. 833 (836) But in Susamabala v. Profullamayee, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 402, it has been held that by reason of sec. 29, Limitation Act read with sec. 184, B. T. Act, section 5 of the Limitation Act has no application in case of delay in making deposit under sec. 174 (5), B T. Act.

Section 5 of the Limitation Act does not apply to appeals from Special Magistrates under sec. 39 (2) of Ordinance II of 1932, because the provision of sec. 5 is not expressly made applicable to appeals under the Ordinance—Nil Ratan v. Emp., 60 Cal. 571, 37 C.W.N. 195 (199), 143 I.C. 802. A.I.R 1933 Cal. 124; nor does it apply to an appeal against an award in a land acquisition case made under Rule 75A, Defence of India Rules read with sec. 19 of the Defence of India Act—Surya v. The State of Bihar, 30 Pat. 126, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 462; nor where the period of limitation has been prescribed by the rules of Patiala High Court for Letters Patent Appeal—Hari v. Hazari, A.I.R. 1951 Pepsu 132; Khub Ram v. Lachman, A.I.R. 1952 Pepsu 21. Section 29 (2) (b) can not be read as excluding the operation of sec. 5 of the Act. Section 29 (2) (b) only applies for the purpose of determining the period of limitation prescribed for a suit, appeal or application—Rameshwar v. Matuki, 12 B.R. 62.

30. [Provision for States for which the period prescribed is shorter than that prescribed by any law previously in force in a Part B State. Omitted by Adaptation of Laws (No. 2) Order, 1956 published in Gazette of India, Extraordinary, Part II Section 3 page 2277 dated 1. 11. '56.]

This section was inserted by Act 3 of 1951 and stood as follows:—

Notwithstanding anything herein contained, any suit for which the period of limitation prescribed by this Act is shorter than the period of limitation prescribed by any law corresponding to this Act in force in a Part B State which is repealed by the Part B States (Laws) Act, 1951 (III of 1951), may be instituted within the period of two years next after the coming into force of this Act in that Part B State or within the period prescribed for such suit by such corresponding law whichever period expires first.

Previous to insertion of this section 30 by Act 3 of 1951, the section 30 which provided for suits for which the period prescribed by the Indian Limitation Act of 1908 was shorter than that prescribed by the Act of 1877 was repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act, (8 of 1930), s. 3 and sch. 11 and stood as follows:—

30. Notwithstanding anything herein contained, any suit for which the period of limitation prescribed by this Act is shorter than the period of limitation prescribed by the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, may be instituted within the period of two years next after the passing of this Act, or within the period prescribed for such suit by the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, whichever period expires first.

31. [Provision for suits by certain mortgagees in territories mentioned in the second schedule. Repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act, (8 of 1930), Sec. 3 and Schedule II.]

This section stood as follows:—

31. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act or in the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, in the territories mentioned in the second schedule a suit for foreclosure or a suit for sale by a mortgagee may be instituted within two years from the date of the passing of this Act, or within sixty years from the date when the money secured by the mortgage became due, whichever period expires first; and no such suit in the said territories instituted within the said period of sixty years and pending at the date of the passing of this Act, either in a Court of first instance or of appeal, shall be dismissed on the ground that a twelve years' rule of limitation is applicable.

(2) Where in the aforesaid territories the claim of a mortgagee for foreclosure or for sale has been wholly or in part dismissed or withdrawn after the twenty-second day of July 1907 and before the passing of this Act, either in a Court of first instance or of appeal on the ground that a twelve years' rule of limitation applied to such claim, the case may be restored on an application in writing to the Court by which the claim was dismissed or in which it was withdrawn, provided the application is made within six months from the date of the passing of this Act: and on such restoration, the provisions of sub-section (1) shall apply.

Section 31 must be interpreted as prescribing a period of limitation even for the purposes of acknowledgments, part payments, and renewals under sections 19 and 20. The operation of the section cannot be limited or restricted to such acknowledgments or renewals made between 1908 and 1920. It also applies to one made before 1908. Hence a simple mortgage of 1892 renewed in 1905 is effective and has priority over one executed in 1902—Suryanaryana Rao v. Venkataraju, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 64, 58 Mad. 270, 68 M.L.J. 12, 1934 M.W.N. 1343, 40 L.W. 893, 153 I.C. 2 (F.B.).

32. [Repeals] Repealed by the Second Repealing and Amending Act, (17 of 1914), Sec. 3 and Schedule II.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

(See Section 3.)

FIRST DIVISION: SUITS.

253. The periods of limitation prescribed in this schedule are to be computed subject to the provisions contained in the body of the Act—Dhonessur v. Roy Gooder, 2 Cal. 336 (F. B.). So the period of limitation prescribed in this schedule lapses not on the expiry of the definite number of years prescribed therein but on the expiry of that number of years together with the time which is excluded from the calculation—Chheda v. Baldeo, 1949 A.L.J. 291, A.I.R. 1949 All. 764.

If a suit falls under two Articles of the Limitation Act, the one more general and the other more particular and specific, the latter Article will apply on the principle "Generalia specialibus non derogant" (the special excludes the general)—Sharoop v. Jogessur, 26 Cal. 564 (567) (F. B.); Madras Steam Navigation Co. v. Shalimar Works, 42 Cal. 85 (108); Venkatasubba v. Asiatic Steam Navigation Co., 39 Mad. 1 (12); Mangu v. Dolhin, 25 Cal. 692 (698, 699); Municipal Board v. Goodall, 26 All. 482 (487). See Note 6, ante.

In determining the particular Article of the Limitation Act applicable to a case, much depends on the nature of the plaintiff's claim. If the plaintiff is entitled to so frame his suit as to make a certain Article giving a favourable period of limitation applicable, it is not a valid objection to say that he could have framed it otherwise as to make a less favourable Article applicable—Zia Uddin v. Akbar Ali, 1932 A.L.J. 317, A.I.R. 1932 All. 358 (358, 360), 136 I.C. 829.

The Limitation Act is in a sense a purely arbitrary enactment and the various starting points for purposes of limitation laid down in this Schedule are equally arbitrary. It is not absolutely necessary that there should be a consistency or uniformity of any definite principle in fixing the various starting points. It is a mere matter of choice dependent on public policy. In some cases the starting point is fixed as the date of execution of a bond, in other cases the starting point is the date for payment. In some other cases it is the date of the first default. Each article has therefore to be interpreted according to the particular language employed in that article, and ordinarily irrespective of somewhat similar language employed in other articles—Jowahar v. Mathura, 1934 A.L.J. 1035 (F. B.), A.I.R. 1934 All. 661 (664), 151 I.C. 585.

Part I.—Thirty days.

Description of Suit.	Period of limitation.	Time from which period begins to run.
1.—To contest an award of the Board of Revenue under the Waste Lands (Claims) Act, 1863 (XXIII of 1863).	Thirty days.	When notice of the award is delivered to the plaintiff.

This Article contemplates a suit to contest an award, and not an application to set aside an award; consequently the time taken in obtaining a copy of the award cannot be deducted under sec. 12 (4). If no suit is brought within the period prescribed by this Article, the order of the Board becomes final, under sec. 5 of the Waste Land Claims Act (XXIII of 1863). The Court has no power to extend the time —Taramath v. Collector of Sylhet, 5 W.R. 1 (Waste Land Ref.).

Part II.—Ninety days.

2.—For compensation for doing or for omitting to do an act alleged to be in pursuance of any enactment in force for the time being in India.	Ninety days.	When the act or omission takes place.

The word "India" was substituted for the words "The States" by Act 3 of 1951.

This Article may be compared with the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 61), sec. 1.

254. Application of Article:—This Article applies where the defendant professes to do an act bona fide in pursuance of an enactment; it does not apply where the defendant knows that he has not, under a statute, authority to do a certain thing, and yet knowingly and intentionally does that thing in contravention of the provisions of the statute—Ranchordas v. Municipal Commissioner, 25 Bom. 387 (393); Maung Kyaw v. Maubin Municipality, 3 Rang. 268, 4 Bur.L.J. 139, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 311. No doubt this Article makes no reference whatsoever to bonafides or malafides. But the protection of the Article cannot be claimed by a defendant where it is shown and found that the act complained of was a malicious act which the defendant could not have committed in the honest belief that he was justified in doing it under any enactment—Bisheshwar v. Lachman, 1942 A.L.W. 63. When a public officer is acting bona fide in pursuance of the law and commits a tort, Art. 2 is the proper Article to apply. That Article which lays down a short period of 90 days for a suit is for the protection of public officers who have acted bona fide in the exercise of their duties. Art. 2 will not protect a public officer who has acted mala fide under colour of his office. It is when a public officer acts bona fide in the exercise of his lawful authority but heedlessly exceeds his authority then a suit will lie and the limitation prescribed by Art. 2 will apply—Jaques v. Narendra, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 653. The intention of this Article is to meet those cases where the defendant does an act injurious or possibly injurious to another, under powers conferred or honestly believed to be conferred by some Act of the Legislature. It does not apply to a case where the damages arise not from the doing of the act or from the failure to do it, but from doing it in an improper manner out of malice and carelessness. Such a case would be governed by Article 36—Waliulla v. Raj Bahadur, 16 O.C. 211, 21 I.C. 426. A suit for damages against a Municipality for malicious prosecution will be governed by this Article, if the defendant Municipality has acted in the honest belief that it was empowered to institute the prosecution by the Municipal Act; if at the time it instituted those prosecutions the defendant Municipality knew that it had no power to prosecute, then the suit would be governed by Article 23 —Maung Kyaw v. Maubin Municipality, supra. The statutory protection is intended for the benefit of persons who intend to act right but by mistake act wrong—Parton v.

Williams, (1820) 3 B. & A. 330; Hughes v. Buckland, (1846) 15 M. & W. 346 (per Pollock, C. B.); Lightwood, p. 392.

In order to enable a defendant to take advantage of the shorter period of limitation prescribed by this Article, he must allege and shew that he had reasonable grounds for justifying his action under the particular enactment relied upon by him and not that he arbitrarily asserted or thought so. He must have assumed to act in the honest exercise of a supposed statutory power—Ganeh v. Elliot, 124 P.R. 1881; Narpat Rai v.Sardar Kripal, 65 P.R. 1886; Punjab Cotton Press Co. v. Secy, of State, 4 Lah. 428, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 169, 79 I.C. 208. The reasonableness of the belief is immaterial if he honestly believed in the existence of those grounds, though it is an important element in determining the question of honesty—Ganesh v. Elliot, 160 P.R. 1883; Roberts v. Orchard, (1863) 2 H. & C. 769; Heath v. Brewer, (1864) 15 C.B.N.S. 803. A person acting under statutory powers may erroneously exceed the powers given or inadequately discharge the duties imposed by the Statute; yet if he acts bonafide in order to execute such powers or to discharge such duties, he is to be considered as acting "in pursuance" of the Act, and is to be entitled to the protection conferred upon persons whilst so acting—Smith v. Shaw, (1829) 10 B. & C. 277.

This Article is intended to afford protection to persons acting in pursuance of an enactment against stale claims. A short period of limitation is provided for such cases in order that such acts which are of public nature shall not give rise to protracted litigation—Mohamed Saadat v. Administrator, Corporation of City of Lahore, I.L.R. (1945) Lah. 523, 47 P.L.R. 302, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 324 (F.B.).

The object of the Article is the protection of public officials who, while bona fide, purporting to act in the exercise of a statutory power, have exceeded that power and have committed a tortious act. If the act complained of is within the terms of the statute, no protection is needed, for the plaintiff has suffered no legal wrong; the protection is needed when an actionable wrong has been committed and to secure the protection there must be in the first place a bona fide belief by the official that the act complained of was justified by the statute, secondly, the act must have been performed under colour of a statutory duty, and thirdly, the act must be in itself a tort in order to give rise to the cause of action. It is against such actions for tort that the statute gives protection—Per Courtney-Terrell, C.J., in Secy. of State v. Lodna Colliery Co., A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 513, 15 Pat. 510, 17 P.L.T. 279, 164 I.C. 860. Applying the principle of this decision it has been held that where it is admitted that the act was performed under the powers given by the statute and the cause of action alleged against the Secretary of State is a failure to allot the statutory compensation provided, then this Article has no application—Amar v. Secretary of State, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 583.

Under this Article, any malice on the part of the defendant is immaterial. If the defendant had acted under the bona fide belief that he had a legal right to do the act complained of, (viz., arresting and handcuffing the plaintiff who was a suspected dacoit, whom the defendant had a legal right to arrest under sec. 54, Cr. P. Code), then even though he might have cherished malice against the plaintiff, the latter's suit for damages for malicious arrest fell under Art. 2 and not under residuary Article 36 —Shariful v. Lachmi Narain, 1931 A.L.J. 858, 135 I.C. 558, A.I.R. 1932 All. 16 (18).

This Article is not intended to apply only to those cases in which the defendant at the time of doing the act, informs the other party in so many words that he is acting under such and such a provision of law. The Article being evidently intended to allow protection to persons doing acts in pursuance of some enactment in force, it is sufficient for them to show that in doing the act they were at the time under the honest belief that their act was authorised by some Statute—Richard

Watson v. Municipal Corporation of Simla, 72 P.R. 1909, 108 P.L.R. 1909, 2 I.C. 819; Amar Singh v. D. C. Gajranwalla, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 748.

This Article gives protection not only to acts done but also to acts omitted. See also Wilson v. Mayor of Halifax, (1868) L.R. 3 Ex. p. 119.

This Article is wide and general in its terms and must be read subject to the provisions of any specific Article, i.e., it should not be applied where there is a more specific Article applicable to the case. Thus, it is not applicable to a suit against a Municipal Board for compensation for illegal or excessive distress; such a suit would be more properly governed by Art. 28—Municipal Board v. Goodall, 26 All. 482 (487, 488).

Article 2 does not apply to a suit to recover money paid under protest to a Municipal Committee who has no authority to realise the amount under the law—Notified Area Committee, Chichwaatni v. Ladha Ram, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 47, 152 I.C. 680. Where a person brings a suit for damages for libel against an Inspector of Police submitting report in compliance of an order of a Magistrate acting under Ch. 16, Cr. P Code, the period of limitation for the suit is the ordinary one for a suit in tort, and not Art. 2—Raja Veni Madho v. M. Wajid Ali, A.I.R. 1937 All. 90.

255. Compensation:—For the meaning of this word, see Note 305 under Article 29. In the cases cited therein it has been pointed out that according to some High Courts, the term 'compensation' should be applied to those cases in which the plaintiff does not claim only the specific amount realised by the defendant, but a much larger sum by way of damages to be assessed by the Court; whereas according to some other Courts the word should be interpreted in a much wider sense and would cover all cases whether the plaintiff asks only for a refund of the specific sum of money realised by the defendant, or for damages to be assessed by the Court for the defendant's wrongful act. In Rajputana Malwa Railway Stores v. Ajmere Municipal Board, 32 All. 491 the word was applied in the former sense, and it was held that a suit to recover the excess amount of duty realised by the defendant-Municipality from the plaintiff (and not to recover any damages) was not a suit for 'compensation' under this Article but would fall under Article 62. This case was followed in Municipal Board v. Deokinandan, 36 All. 555, 12 A.L.J. 952, 25 I.C. 943.

256. Cases:—Where a certain Municipality asked the Magistrate to direct the removal of a hut under section 144 of the Cr. P. Code on the ground that it was dangerous and insanitary, and the Magistrate after a full inquiry on the spot passed an order for demolition, it was held that a suit for compensation for damage caused by the order of the Magistrate purporting to be under sec. 144, Cr. P. Code, fell under this Article—Hari v. Surendra, 18 I.C. 84 (Cal.). A suit for damages against a Municipality for an alleged omission to repair a road quickly, and for closing the road at both ends which injured the business of the plaintiff, is governed by this Article—Municipal Board v. Behari Lal, 24 A.L.J. 682, A.I.R. 1926 All. 538, 95 I.C. 1030. A suit to recover damages from a Municipal Committee on the ground that they had been negligent in the repairing of a drain outside the plaintiff's house and had thereby caused the fall of a wall is governed by this Article and not by Art. 36 which is a residuary Article—Baizakhan v. Municipal Committee, 31 P.L.R. 159, 122 I.C. 111. But a suit claiming compensation for damage said to have been caused by the failure of a local body to maintain its water system in proper order is outside the scope of this Article —Mahomed Saadat v. Administrator, Corporation of City of Lahore, I.L.R. (1945) Lah. 523, 47 P.L.R. 302, A I.R. 1945 Lah. 324 (F.B.). In execution of a simple money decree, certain immoveable property belonging to the plaintiff was advertised for sale. On the date fixed for sale, the amin came to sell the property. Before the sale, the plaintiff tendered the decretal amount to the amin, but the latter wrongfully refused to accept the money and went on with the sale. The sale was subsequently set aside on plaintiff's application under O. XXI, r. 89, C. P. Code. He then brought a suit for damages against the amin 19 months after the date of sale. It was held that the suit fell under Article 2 (and not 36) because the whole foundation of the plaintiff's claim was the alleged omission by the defendant to perform a duty imposed by the C. P. Code, i.e., the omission to accept the decretal amount and stop the sale. The suit was therefore barred—Mukat Lal v. Gopal Sarup, 41 All. 219, 16 A.L.J. 1017, 48 I.C. 815. A suit for damages for wrongful attachment of standing crops does not fall under this Article but under Article 36—Hari Charan v. Hari Kar, 32 Cal. 459 (461), 9 C.W.N. 376. A suit for damages against the defendant who arrested the plaintiff (a suspected dacoit) under the bona fide belief that he had the legal right to arrest the plaintiff, falls under this Article and not under the residuary Article 36—Sharifal v. Lachmi Narain, 1931 A.L.J. 858, 135 I.C. 558, A.I.R. 1932 All. 16 (18). A claim for compensation for illegal arrest falls under this Article—Rohini v. Niaz, 77 C.L.J. 93, A.I.R. 1944 Cal. 4, 212 I.C. 421.

Where bricks were wrongfully seized and used by a Municipal Committee, but not in the exercise of any powers conferred upon them by the Municipal Act, a suit to recover the value thereof need not be brought within three months—Harbhagwan v. Hassan, 79 P.R. 1884.

257. Any enactment in force:—Article 2 applies to suits for compensation only when the act or omission complained of was done in pursuance of some enactment in force for the time being in India. The defendant will have to show that what was done by him falls within the provisions of some Act of the Legislature. The expression 'in pursuance of any enactment' must be interpreted as meaning acting in conformity with an enactment and not merely pretending to act or acting under colour of such an enactment. Where a person honestly believes that he is acting under some enactment he is protected. But where a person pretends that he was so acting and knows that he should not act under that enactment, he cannot be said to be acting in pursuance of any such enactment. Where a defendant has done an act or omitted to do an act, knowing that he had no ground whatsoever for so acting or omitting to do an act, he does not come within the purview of Art. 2. It is only defendants who have acted honestly, although they might have exceeded the actual power conferred upon them by an enactment, who would be protected. Of course, where it is established that the act done was in strict accordance with an enactment, there would be an obvious protection. But even where the power was exceeded, there would be protection in cases of good faith and bona fide belief—Shiamlal v. Abdul Raof, A.I.R. 1935 All. 538, 1935 A.L.J. 459, 155 I.C. 131; Amarsingh v. G. C. Gujranwalla, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 748. Where the canal authorities (defendants) cut the bank of a canal to avoid accident to the adjoining railway, and not to the canal, and the plaintiff's adjacent mills were destroyed, held that the defendant's act did not fall under the Canal Act, and Article 2 was therefore not applicable—Punjab Cotton Press Co., Ltd. v. Secretary of State, 10 Lah. 161 (P. C.), 28 P.L.R. 453, 31 C.W.N. 835 (837), A.I.R. 1927 P.C. 72, 103 I.C. 1. It is not enough for the defendant pleading the Article in bar of a suit, to assert that he honestly believed that the Act, in pursuance of which the alleged acts were committed, was in force. He must show that the Act was actually in force at the time and place of the acts complained of—Jai Ram v. Gurmukh, 105 P.R. 1886.

This Article does not contemplate an act done in pursuance of an agreement; it relates to an act done in pursuance of an enactment; Municipal Corporation, Karachi v. Province of Sind, A.I.R. 1947 Sind. 69, 230 I.C. 311.

258. Starting point of limitation:—When the cause of action depends on the happening of special damage, it accrues when the damage happens, and not at the time of the act which causes it—Backhouse v. Bonomi, (1858) 9 H.L.C. 503; Lightwood, p. 398. See section 24. If the damage results to the plaintiff's estate not immediately but after the lapse of some months after the acts of the defendant, the accrual of the cause of action is postponed under section 24 until such time as the damage occurs; in such a case the plaintiff's suit must be brought within 90 days from the time when damage accrues to the plaintiff from the defendant's acts—Richard Watson v. Municipal Corporation, 72 P.R. 1909, 2 I.C. 819. The terminus a quo in calculating limitation is the date of the damage and not the date of construction of the work which caused the damage—Punjab Cotton Press Co. v. Secretary of State, 4 Lah. 428 (430), A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 169, 4 Lah. 432, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 192, 79 I.C. 185. Cf. Dwarka v. Corporation of Calcutta, 18 Cal. 91.

The starting point of limitation in a suit for damages for wrongful restraint or confinement purported to have been done bona fide in discharge of statutory duty is to be computed from the date of occurance and not from any subsequent date when the plaintiff might have suffered physical injury consequent on his detention—Maharani Gur Charan v. Province of Madras, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 696, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 14, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 539.

Part III.—Six months.

3.—Under the Specific Relief Act, 1877, (1 of 1877), section 9, to recover possession of immoveable property.	Six months.	When the dispossession occurs.

259. Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act contemplates summary suits to recover possession, independently of any question of title; if a question of title is raised, the suit will not fall under section 9—Ramasami v. Paraman, 25 Mad. 448; and will not be governed by this Article.

It has been said in some cases that if the plaintiff brings a suit on the basis of possession only, and is unable to make out a title, such suit must be brought under sec. 9, Specific Relief Act within six months from the date of dispossession. If the plaintiff comes in after six months, he can succeed only on proof of some title. Mere anterior possession is not enough—Debi Churan v. Issur, 9 Cal. 39; Ertaza v. Bany Mistry, 9 Cal. 130; Krishnarav v. Vasudev, 8 Bom. 371; Premraj v. Nibaran, 6 Bom. 215; Bapuji v. Bhagwant, 42 Bom. 357 (358). But in several other cases it has been held that, if the plaintiff (bringing a suit after the expiry of 6 months) shows a previous possession, and nothing more, such possession is prima facie sufficient evidence of title against a trespasser—Mohabeer v. Mohabeer, 7 Cal. 591; Hanmantrav v. Secy. of State, 25 Bom. 287; Narayana v. Dharmachar, 26 Mad. 514; Nisa v. Kantiram, 26 Cal. 579.

Where a non-occupancy raiyat has been dispossessed of his holding by a trespasser or by his landlord otherwise than in execution of a decree, then if his tenancy has not yet been determined, he has a title to the land, viz., the title of a tenant, and a suit by the raiyat to recover possession by establishment of his title is not a suit under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act; consequently Article 3 cannot apply, but either Art. 120 or 142 applies—Tamizuddin v. Ashrub Ali, 31 Cal. 647, 651, (F.B.) (overruling Bhagabati v. Luton Mandal, 7 C.W.N. 218).

A suit under sec. 9 Specific Relief Act I of 1877 to recover possession of immovable property may be brought even as against the rightful owner of the property. (See sec. 9, Specific Relief Act I of 1877).

Article 4 relating to suits under the Employers and Workmen (Disputes) Act 1860, repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1937 (20 of 1937), Sec. 3 and Schedule II.

Part IV.—One year.

5.—Under the summary procedure referred to in section 128 (2) (f) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (V of 1908) where the provision of such summary procedure does not exclude the ordinary procedure in such suits and under O. XXXVII of the said Code.	One year.	When the debt or liquidated demand becomes payable or when the property becomes recoverable.

259A. Change:—The italicised words have been added in Article 5, and the period of limitation has been extended from six months to one year, by the Indian Limitation Act XXX of 1925. The reasons have been thus stated: "Article 5 of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act 1908 (IX of 1908) provides a period of limitation of six months for a suit under the summary procedure referred to in section 128 (2) (f) from the date on which the debt or liquidated demand becomes payable or when the property becomes recoverable. As the Article stood in the Act of 1877, it referred to suits on negotiable instruments under Ch. 39 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882. In the Code of 1908 powers were given in section 128 (2) (f) to High Courts to extend the summary procedure, and a reference to that section was substituted for Chapter 39 of the Civil Procedure Code, when the Limitation Act was consolidated in 1908. The fact that the provisions of chapter 39 of the Code were also retained in Order 37 of the new Code of Civil Procedure seems to have been overlooked. Accordingly if Article 5 is strictly construed, it applies now only to suits under the summary procedure made by rules under sec. 128 (2) (f) of the Code since the Code was enacted. The Bill proposes to make the intention clear, and to make a similar consequential change in Article 159 of the same Schedule. The Bill further proposes to extend the period of limitation now fixed in Article 5 for suits to which the summary procedure applies from six months to one year, as the existing period has been represented to be too short"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, V, Page 181).

This amenment has been made as a result of the recommendation of the Civil Justice Committee. See the Civil Justice Committee Report, pp. 489-490. The case of Rabindra v. Abdul Ahad, 52 Cal. 954, 29 C.W.N. 589, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 781, 88 I.C. 400 in which it was held that suits under O. 37, C. P. Code were not governed by Article 5, is hereby overruled.

6.—Upon a Statute, Act, Regulation or Bye-law, for a penalty or forfeiture.	One year.	When the penalty or forfeiture is incurred.

260. A suit for the recovery of a fine imposed under the terms of a contract or agreement is a suit based on contract and is governed not by Article 6 but by Article 68 or 115 President of Taluk Board v. Lakshminarayana, 31 Mad. 54; see also Meri Lal v. Mukhta, 3 P.R. 1875. A suit for recovery of profession tax under the Towns Improvement Act (III of 1871) is not governed by this Article, the same not being a penalty or forfeiture—President of Municipal Commission v. Padmarazu, 3 Mad. 124. A clause in a lease from the Government entitling the lessees to certain grazing fees and authorising them to impound and levy an extra fee in the case of cattle grazed with permission, is a 'byelaw' within the meaning of this Article—Meri Lal v. Mukhta, 3 P.R. 1875.

This Article applies to a suit for penalty under a Statute, Act, etc.: a penalty in a bond does not fall under this Article. Further, it applies to pecuniary penalties and forfeitures: therefore a suit for possession of immoveable property to which the plaintiff is entitled by reason of any forfeiture or breach of contract is not governed by this Article but by Article 143.

7.—For the wages of a household servant, artisan or labourer * *	One year.	When the wages accrue due.

The words "not provided for by this schedule, article 4" were omitted by sec. 2 and Sch. of the Repealing and Amending Act, 1939 (34 of 1939).

261. Scope:—This article is applicable only to a suit for wages brought by a servant against the master, and not to a suit brought by one servant against a superior servant who has drawn the wages of the whole establishment from the master and has failed to pay therefrom the portion due to the plaintiff—Shiva Rama v. Turnbull, 4 M.H.C.R. 43; Obhoy Charan v. Haro Chandra, 13 W.R. 150, 4 B.L.R. 68. Such a suit falls under Art. 62.

262. Wages:—The term wages is confined to the earnings of labourers and artisans, and the word 'salary' is used for payment of servants of a higher class—Gordon v. Jennings, (1882) 9 Q.B.D. 45. In ordinary language the term 'wages' is usually restricted to the remuneration for mechanical or muscular labour, specially to that which is ordinarily paid at short intervals—U. N. Mitra's Limitation, 5th Edn., p. 871. A suit by a painter for the price, when there is an agreement to pay a certain price for the whole work done upon delivery and acceptance, is not a suit for wages under this article—Virasvami v. Sayambabay, 2 M.H.C.R. 6.

263. Household servant:—The word 'servant' applies to all those between whom and some one else as employer there is a contract for service in consideration of wages—Siva Rama v. Turnbull, 4 M.H.C.R. 43. This section does not apply to all servants, but only to household servants. A bisardar in Oudh is not such a servant—Ghasi Ram v. Uma Datt, 26 O.C. 327, 79 I.C. 576, A.I.R. 1924 Oudh 189. A cook is a domestic servant, although he may be an expert in cooking; and a suit for wages brought by him is governed by this Article—Kuppu Rao v. Narasier, 2 L.W. 723, 28 I.C. 956; but a cook engaged in a hotel is not a household servant. It is not the nature of the work rendered by the servant but the place of employment that is the determining factor—Kunhi v. Govindam, (1937)) 1 M.L.J. 329, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 340, 171 I.C. 72. A wet-nurse is not a domestic servant and a suit by her to recover her wages falls under Art. 102—Mohan v. Jumerat, 10 A.L.J. 395, 17 I.C. 658. A weighman employed to do work in a shop is not a household servant nor an artisan nor a labourer—Mutsaddi v. Bhagwan, 48 All. 164, 23 A.L.J. 1059 (cited below). A person whose duties are to sweep and clean a temple, provide flowers for daily worship and garlands for the idol is not a household servant or labourer—Bhavathradan v. Rama, 7 Mad. 99; Baradwaja v. Arunachala, 41 Mad. 528; nor is one so whose duty is to instruct in fencing and wrestling—Pylwan v. Jenaka, 8 M.H.C.R. 87. A person who is engaged to supervise a work is not a household servant, artisan or labourer. So this Article is not applicable to a suit by such a person for his remuneration—Anupchand v. Nimraji, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 578, 1949 N.L.J. 200, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 329. The term "household servant" must be read ejusdem generis with the words "artisan or labourer" which follow it. It cannot apply to a person who is employed for the purpose of collecting rents of houses and as a companion in his employer's journey abroad—Subhani Begam v. Imtiaz Ahmad, 8 Luck. 119, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 393, 147 I.C. 227.

Where a servant is appointed on a fixed monthly salary, limitation commences from the end of each month and not from the date of dismissal of the servant—Kali Charan v. Mahomed Saleem, 6 W.R. (Civ. Ref.) 33. A suit for wages as a domestic servant must be brought within one year after the same became due. But where the master, instead of paying the salary to the servant then and there gives credit in his account books and treats the servant as his creditor, the law of limitation applicable is not that under Art. 7 but the ordinary rule of limitation as to debtors. It is the same as if the master gave a pro-note to his servant for wages—Chinnan v. Vilathan, 27 L.W. 30, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 27, 106 I.C. 229.

264. Artisan:—According to Webster's Dictionary, an artisan is one trained to mechanical dexterity in some mechanical art or trade. A motor-car driver is an artisan, because he is required to know how to start the car, how to steer it and how to stop it, and for such purposes he must possess some skill in manipulating the different parts of the mechanism—Sewram v. Lachminarayan, 5 Rang. 477, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 279, 104 I.C. 520. A motor driver is an artisan within the meaning of Art. 7 and the suit for wages by him is governed by Art. 7—Khagendranath v. Kantibhusan, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 808, 62 C.L.J. 562; Noor Ali v. Kanpur Omnibus Service Ltd., A.I.R. 1955 All. 707. A suit by a motor driver for recovery of the arrears of his salary is governed not by Article 7 but by Article 102—Maniklal v. Ramesh Chandra, 59 C.W.N. 466, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 290. A village carpenter is an artisan within the meaning of Art. 7—Namdeo v. Ramkrishna, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 260, 152 I.C. 885. A mechanical engineer is not an artisan within the meaning of this Article. The word 'artisan' means a mechanic or a workman who has acquired some manual skill, and does not mean persons undertaking higher classes of work which involve responsibility and intellectual training. A suit by an engineer for wages would be governed by Article 102—Navalmal v. Mangaldas, 12 S.L.R. 140, 50 I.C. 37. So also this Article does not apply to a suit by a goldsmith for recovering the price of his labour in making ornaments—Lakminarayan v. Shri Ram, I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 592, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 286, 177 I.C. 345. A village barbar is not a household servant nor is he a labourer or artisan. So this section does not apply to a suit by him for recovery of wages—Tulsi v. Paikan, 1941 N.L.J. 102, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 132, 194 I.C. 580.

265. Labourer:—A workman or labourer is one who enters into a contract to employ his personal services and to receive payment for that in wages—Riley v. Ward, 2 Exch. 59. A labourer is a man who digs and does other work of that kind with his hands. But a carpenter is not a labourer because though he works with his hands, his work requires skill and training—Morgan v. London General Omnibus Co., (1884) 13 Q.B.D. 832. A labourer is a servant in husbandry or manufacture not living intra maenia, who labours in a toilsome occupation and does work that requires little skill, as distinguished from an artisan (Bouvier's Law Dictionary, Vol. 2, p. 1819). A person who is a contractor or sub-contractor and who engages to get work done but does not engage in any work himself is not a workman or labourer—Gilby v. Subbu Pillai, 7 Mad. 100; In re Bal Krishna, 10 Bom. 196; Arupchand v. Nimraji, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 578, 1949 N.L.J. 200, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 329. A man who agrees, in consideration of the use of the land and a share of the produce for the season, to provide seed and labour and carry on the cultivation of the land, is not labourer—Andi Konan v. Venkata Subbaiyan, 2 M.H.C.R. 387. A weighman employed to work at a shop cannot be treated as a mere labourer, employed to do task work, that is, to hold the scales and weigh goods in a shop for a monthly salary. He can be asked to do other work of the shop when free. He has to count and add up and calculate the price on the total quantity weighed, and his work cannot therefore be treated as purely manual labour. He may be regarded as shopkeeper's assistant, and Article 102 applies to a suit by him to receive his dues from the shopkeeper—Mutsaddi v. Bhagwan, 48 All. 164, 23 A.L.J. 1059, A.I.R. 1926 All. 172, 90 I.C. 120. A suit for wages by a person employed as a salesman is governed by Art 102, and not by Art. 7—Musa Meah Sawdagar v. Shirazulla, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 235, 8 R.R. 107, 157 I.C. 732.

8.—For the price of food or drink sold by the keeper of a hotel, tavern or lodging house.	One year.	When the food or drink is delivered.

Food and drink, the price of which would come under this Article must be meals or articles of food which are either consumed on the premises or are sent out or taken away by the consumer which are intended for, or capable of, immediate consumption in the state in which they are sent out, that is to say, without cooking. If from the restaurant is sent out, for instance, a case of beer, that would scarcely be drink in that sense of the words. It would be goods; and the same principle applies to articles in tins which do not require immediate consumption—Pershad v. The Firm of Unica, 1939 Rang.L.R. 626, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 17, 186 I.C. 582.

9.—For the price of lodging.	One year.	When the price becomes payable.
10.—To enforce a right of pre-emption, whether the right is founded on law, or general usage, or on special contract.	One year.	When the purchaser takes, under the sale sought to be impeached, physical possession of the whole of the property sold, or, where the subject of the sale does not admit of physical possession, when the instrument of sale is registered.

266. Scope:—This Article governs suits for pre-emption of all kinds without any exception, in other words, exhausts the law of limitation in respect of pre-emption suits and one would not be justified in referring to any other article for determining the period of limitation for any suit for pre-emption. It is because sec. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act does not contemplate a sale of property incapable of physical possession through an unregistered instrument of sale that the law of limitation contained in this Article while purporting to be exhaustive, does not deal with a sale of a property incapable of phpsical possession through an unregistered instrume .t of sale—Sahadeo v. Kuber, 1950 A.L.J. 467, A.I.R. 1950 All. 632; Kaluram v. Bastimal, A.I.R. 1955 Ajmer 50. In certain earlier Allahabad cases it was held that the sale referred to in this Article was a sale ab initio, i.e., an absolute sale having immediate effect and operation, either by physical possession or by a registered instrument, and that this Article did not apply to a mortgage by conditional sale which became a sale only on foreclosure. A suit for pre-emption in the latter class of sale was held to be governed by Article 120. See Nath Prosad v. Ram Paltan, 4 All 218 (F.B.); Rasik Lal v. Gajraj, 4 All. 414; Udit v. Padarath, 8 All. 54. But this view has been disapproved of in the Full Bench case of Batul v. Mansur Ali, 20 All. 315 (319). In this case the Judges have observed (at p. 319): "We cannot see how a sale is any the less an absolute one because it is not to take immediate effect and operation. There is certainly nothing in Article 10 to suggest that the sale mentioned in that article is limited to a sale which is to have immediate effect and operation. In our opinion, the other conditions being present necessary to make Article 10 applicable, Article 10 would apply to a sale which in its inception was a mortgage by conditional sale, but which either by the operation of Reg. XVII of 1806 or by the operation of Act IV of 1882 (Transfer of Property Act) had become in effect an absolute sale with the right of redemption gone. In such a case, the other conditions existing, Article 10 would apply as soon as the mortgagee had acquired the complete interest of the mortgagor." As this view has been upheld by the Privy Council in Batul v. Mansur, 24 All. 17, the earlier Allahabad rulings must be deemed as overruled. The principle underlying this Article and sec. 30, Punjab Pre-emption Act is that of the notice afforded to the pre-emptor by transfer of physical possession or by the registration of the sale-deed—Kharati v. Ram Lal, A I.R. 1951 Punjab 45. Whether a particular case, whether of sale or foreclosure, falls within this Article or not depends upon whether column 3 is applicable to it, where that column is wholly inapplicable, Art. 120 will apply—Zamu Tukaram v. Ishwardas Amerchand Shop, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 745, 1951 N.L.J. 165, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 295, See also Kharati v. Ramlal, supra; Jorawarkhan v. Mukhram, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 465, 1949 N.L.J. 422, A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 40.

Although this Article remains in its original form even after the promulgation of the U. P. Regulation of Agricultural Credit Act (14 of 1940) it must be held as a natural consequence of the provisions of this Act that the period of limitation for a suit for pre-emption must be calculated in every case of a permanent alienation of protected land only from the date on which the alienation has been sanctioned by the Assistant Commissioner. Where the permission precedes the alienation, this Article will apply in terms, but where it follows the alienation, so that what is till then only an usufructuary mortgage and becomes a permanent alienation as a result of the permission, the period must be taken to run from the date of such permission—Dhapal v. Gopichand, A.I.R. 1949 All. 471.

267. Pre-emption:—The right to pre-emption arises when the sale becomes complete, i.e., when there is an entire cessation of right on the part of the vendor—Buksha v. Tofer, 20 W.R. 216. Therefore no right of pre-emption can arise on a mere conditional sale or mortgage so long as the right of redemption remains with the mortgagor—Goordyal v. Rajah Teknarain, 2 W.R. 215.

The word 'pre-emption' in this Article refers only to those cases in which the vendor has actually purchased the property, and not to those cases where the intending purchaser has not yet completed his purchase; because the third column of this Article does not provide a starting point of limitation for a case in which the sale has not taken place. Where the intending purchaser has only intended or contracted to purchase the property, a suit for pre-emption (i.e., to enforce the plaintiff's claim to purchase) is governed by Article 120, and the right to sue accrues under that Article when the plaintiff first becomes aware that the vendor did not intend to sell the land to him—Rai v. Sidakali, 65 I.C. 959, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 14.

When a document was really a deed of sale, but was therein called a hiba-bil-ewaz, it was held to be an instrument of sale within the meaning of this Article—Abdul Rahman v. Parsotam, 5 Luck. 492 (P.C.), A I.R. 1931 P.C. 12 (15), 128 I.C. 257. The word 'possession' evidently means possession as purchaser, and not in any other capacity. A perpetual lease is not a sale; and a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption (or pre-lease) in respect of such lease does not fall under this Article but under Article 120—Muklal v. Hiranand, 19 A.L.J. 442, 62 I.C. 884; Gopal v. Lachmi, A.I.R. 1926 All. 549, 95 I.C. 138. The word 'possession' means possession as purchaser and not in some other capacity as mortgagee, lessee, etc.: therefore, where a mortgagee in possession purchases the mortgaged property, he obtains physical possession when the sale to him is actually completed (i.e., when the sale deed is registered), as then his possession which was previously that of a mortgagee, becomes that of an owner—Lachmi v. Sheoamber, 2 All. 409. Where the property, which was the subject-matter of sale, consisted of fractional shares of zemindaries situate in several different khatas, it was held that the property was not capable of physical possession—Umrao Beg v. Mukhtar, 17 A.L.J. 269, 50 I.C. 80.

The vendee of a house covenanted to give the vendor and his heirs the first option to purchase the house at a certain price, if he were to sell the house at any time. In a suit to enforce this convenant, it was held that it was not a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption, but one for specific performance (Art. 113)—Khemchand v. Mohson, 17 S.L.R. 1, A.I.R. 1921 Sind 118, 80 I.C. 962.

Effect of fraud:—Where in order to avoid pre-emption a sale was disguised in the form of a mortgage, there can be no question that the parties acted fraudulently in giving the transaction the shape of a mortgage, and the plaintiff in a suit for pre-emption would be entitled to compute the period of limitation from the time when the fraud first became known to him—Bhagwana v. Shadi, 36 P.L.R. 114, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 878.

268. Physical possession:—An undivided share of a Zemindari mahal is not capable of physical possession; the word 'physical possession' in this Article means personal and immediate possession, regard being had to the form in which the property may exist at the time of the sale—Batul v. Mansur, 28 I.A. 248, 24 All. 17 (P.C.), affirming 20 All. 315 (F.B.); the period of limitation for a suit to enforce pre-emption in respect of such share must be computed from the date of the registration of the sale-deed—Unkar v. Narain, 4 All. 24; Bholi v. Imam, 4 All. 179. Physical possession means immediate physical possession; therefore where a certain zemindary property in the possession of mortgagees is sold to the vendee subject to the mortgage, it is not capable of immediate physical possession at the time of sale; limitation for a pre-emption suit runs from the date of registration of the sale-deed, and not from the date when the vendee subsequently takes possession from the mortgagees—Narendra v. Wali Muhammad, 28 I.C. 208, 2 O.L.J. 109; Tikaya Ram v. Dharam Chand, 45 P.R. 1859; Viswanathan v. Ethirajulu, 45 M.L.J. 389, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 57, 76 I.C. 467. Where the property, at the date of sale, is in the possession of the holder of a particular or intermediate estate, e.g., where it is in the cultivating possession of a mortgagee or is in the possession of an unfructuary mortgagee or a tenant for a time, the property is not capable of immediate physical possession by the purchaser—Darabali v. Hussain, 32 P.L.R. 743, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 98, 135 I.C. 512; Jairam v. Sitaram, 16 N.L.R. 37 (F.B.), 52 I.C. 940. The constructive possession by receipt of rents from the tenants is not physical possession within the meaning of this Article—Batul v. Mansur, 20 All. 315, 320 (F.B.). And so, an undivided zemindary share which is incapable of physical possession cannot become capable of physical possession, merely because a lease of it for a fixed period has been granted and the lessee is collecting rents from the tenants separately—Ram Charan v. Mathura, 1930 A.L.J. 375, A.I.R. 1930 All. 255. A property consisting of a share in a joint estate is not capable of physical possession, for until a partition takes place no one has a definite share which he can call his own—Lahra v. Bhagat, 68 P.R. 1918, 108 P.L.R. 1918, 47 I.C. 359; Sohan v. Himmat, 61 P.R. 1885; Maluk Singh v. Muhammad, 65 P.R. 1889; Karm v. Fazl, 10 P.R. 1881; Jowala Singh v. Tekchand, 23 P.R. 1882; Sardar Ali v. Fazal, 68 I.C. 895 (Lah.). So also a sale of an undivided share of a joint holding does not admit of physical possession and the terminus-a-quo is the date of the registration. The reason for this is that the date of registration is the date on which the public must be presumed to know that the transfer has taken place—Wasakha v. Mahomed, 44 P.L.R. 99, A.I.R. 1942 Lah. 118, 200 I.C. 81. But where the sale is of a specified plot whether in actual possession of the vendor or in joint possession of himself and others, then the property is capable of physical possession, and limitation runs from the date of giving possession. The determining factor is the factum of actual physical possession, and not the whole property of which the plot sold is a part—Jhanda v. Ditt, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 705 (706), 109 I.C. 382.

Property (e.g., house, shop or agricultural land) which is in the possession of tenants is not capable of immediate and personal possession at the date of sale; and therefore limitation commences from the registration of the sale-deed—Panna Lal v. Bhagvandas, 16 P.R. 1902; Sharif Hussain v. Muhammad Yusuf, 88 P.R. 1905; Ganga Ram v. Sardara, 64 P.L.R. 1916, 35 I.C. 278; Ganwa v. Joti Prosad, 73 I.C. 903, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 302; Partab Singh v. Gulab, 26 P.L.R. 780, 105 I.C. 501, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 784. The words 'capable of physical possession' must be construed with reference to the time of sale, and has nothing to do with the question whether physical possession is easy of attainment or otherwise, or with the nature of the obstruction to the taking of such possession. Therefore property held by a tenant-at-will or a tenant by sufferance cannot be said to be in the physical possession of the vendee, although it is easy to take possession from the tenant—Ghulam Mustafa v. Sahabudain, 49 P.R. 1908 (F.B.); Panna v. Bhagvan, 15 P.L.R. 1902, 16 P.R. 1902. And hence, when the subject of sale is in the possession of tenants, it must be held to be property which is not capable of physical possession at the date of sale, and it is immaterial that the property afterwards became capable of physical possession—Ganwa v. Joti Prasad, supra.

The above rule (viz., that the words 'physical possession' must be construed with reference to the date of the sale) must be applied only to property such as an undivided share in a mahal which is by its nature not capable of physical possession; but this rule cannot be applied to houses and shops over which physical possession is always possible and practicable. In such a case, the period of limitation will commence to run only when the physical possession is actually taken, whether the possession is taken at the time of sale or at some time later. Therefore, where a house was sold in 1921, but was in the possession of a trespasser at the time of sale, and the vendee had to sue him in ejectment and obtained possession in execution of the decree in the ejectment suit in 1922, the period of limitation in respect of a suit for pre-emption of the house commenced to run when the vendee obtained actual possession in 1922 by virtue of the decree in the ejectment suit, and not when the sale-deed was registered in 1921—Jagamaya v. Tulsa ,48 All. 12, 23 A.L.J. 885, A.I.R. 1926 All. 70, 89 I.C. 444; Mohanlal v. Satyabhama, 23 N.L.R. 178, A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 89.

An equity of redemption is not capable of physical possession; therefore, on a sale of the mortgagor's equity of redemption to the mortgagee in possession, the pre-emptor's cause of action arises on the date of the registration of the sale-deed—Shiam Sundar v. Amanant, 9 All. 234; Bhawani v. Attar, 68 P.R. 1884; Gaffarkhan v. Satar, 160 P.R. 1889; Sahadeo v. Kuber, 1950 A.L.J. 467, A.I.R. 1950 All. 632; Kaluram v. Bastimal, A.I.R. 1955 Ajmer 50.

The physical possession contemplated by this Article does not consist of formal statements by third parties but of physical control visible to other people, which gives notice of a decree. A sale deed contained a statement that "the immoveable property as above has been sold for the above amount and the possession has also been delivered". It was held that such a statement cannot be regarded as evidence for the purpose of showing that transfer of physical possession has taken place at the time of sale—Ganapat v. Chandrabhayabai I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 209, 1942 N.L.J. 567, A I.R. 1943 Nag 90.

Where the whole of the property is not capable of physical possession at the time of sale, the period of limitation commences from the date of registration of the sale-deed—Umar Baksh v. Choghatta, 156 P.R. 1882. The words 'takes physical possession' must be construed as meaning 'takes physical possession of the whole land'; where the vendee takes possession of the different portions of the property at different periods, time runs from the last date, when he obtains possession of the whole of the property—Dewa v. Dia Ram, 98 P.R. 1876. Where the purchaser cannot take physical possession of the whole of the property sold, the third column of this Article cannot be attracted and therefore, this Article becomes inapplicable—Govardhan v. Mukhram, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 465, 1949 N.L.J. 290.

Shymbolical possession is not tantamount to physical possession—Achutananda v. Biki Bibi, I Pat. 578 (581), A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 601, 4 P.L.T. 277, 69 I.C. 666.

When the property is not capable of physical possession, limitation runs from the registration of the sale-deed and not from any subsequent date on which the parties have by mutual consent rectified the wrong description given in the sale deed of the property sold—Ganga Ram v. Sardara, 64 P.L.R. 1916, 35 I.C. 278. Thus, where at the time of mutation, the parties to the sale-deed agreed that the khasra numbers different from those entered in the deed numbers were intended to be sold and mutation was accordingly effected, the starting point of limitation was the date of registration of the sale-deed, and not the date of the mutation—Ibid; Kali Shankar v. Raghubir, 9 I.C. 309 (All.).

269. Registered sale-deed:—A sale-certificate granted under sec. 316, C. P. Code (1882) is not an instrument of sale for the purposes of this Article, as it does not apply to a sale in execution of a decree; even if it be so regarded, still a copy of the certificate forwarded to the registering officer, in accordance with sec. 89 of the Registration Act, and duly filled in the register of non-testamentary documents relating to immoveable property prescribed in sec. 51 of the Act, is not a 'registered' document within the meaning of this Article—Fateh Singh v. Dropodi, 142 P.R. 1908. It is immaterial for the purposes of this Article whether the registration was effected with or without the consent of the vendor. In either case, the starting point of limitation is the date of registration—Nagina Singh v. Duni Chand, 62 I.C. 797 (Lah.).

Date of registration:—Limitation for a suit for pre-emption depending on registration begins from the date when the certificate required by sec. 60, Registration Act is signed and dated by the registering officer on the document, and not from the date on which the document is presented for registration, nor from the date when the registering officer signs under section 59 the endorsements made under secs. 52 and 58 of the Act embodying admission of execution—Karam v. Fazl, 10 P.R. 1881; Bhanjan Ram v. Gopal Ram, 92 P.R. 1906. A sale-deed was registered at G on 6th October 1921. Only a very small portion of the property sold was situated in G. The rest of the property was situated in B. After registration at G, the registration office at B was informed of the registration and an entry was made by the Sub-Registrar of B in his register on the 24th November 1921. Held that time began to run from 6th October, which was the date of registration, and not from 24th November 1921 on which a mere entry was made in the register of B—Sheopujan v. Mangu, 23 A.L.J. 104, A.I.R. 1925 All. 324, 86 I.C. 130.

270. Possession by vendee or pre-emptor before sale:—Where prior to the execution and registration of the sale deed, actual possession of land was taken by one of the vendees under a convenient arrangement, limitation for the purpose of the pre-emption suit ran from the date of the actual sale (i.e., execution of the sale-deed); and the prior possession of one of the vendees must in law be referred to the subsequent deed of sale—Ram Peara v. Rup Lal, 80 P.R. 1918, 48 I.C. 102. Where the pre-emptor had already been in possession of the land (originally under an agreement and afterwards as a trespasser), and there was no registered deed of sale, a suit for pre-emption was held to be governed by Article 120 and not by this Article—Velayudhan v. China Velayudhan, 40 M.L.J. 443, 62 I.C. 27; Mammali v. Kunhipakhi, 38 Mad. 67 (69). In the Punjab, if there is no registered deed of sale, and physical possession is not given because the vendee had already been in possession of the property, but there is mutation of names, the suit for pre-emption is not governed by Article 10 or 120, but by sec. 30 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, and time runs from the date of mutation—Tola Ram v. Lorindra Ram, 3 Lah. 261, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 210, 69 I.C. 715; Gurudas v. Qadir Baksh, 28 P.L.R. 192, 102 I.C. 423, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 388.

270A. Addition of transferee from vendee after limitation:—Where a purchaser under a sale deed in respect of which a cause of action for the suit for pre-emption has arisen subsequently transfers the property to another, the original cause of action for pre-emption is not thereby affected, for the subsequent transferee must take the transfer only subject to the right of pre-emption. Though such a transferee is impleaded in the suit more than a year after the date of transfer to him, the suit filed within a year from the original sale, is not barred by limitation—Sri Thakurji v. Sujan, I.L.R. (1939) All. 220, 1939 A.L.J. 35, A.I.R. 1939 All. 158.

271. Where Article does not apply:—Where the whole or a portion of the subject of sale is not capable of physical possession and there is no registered deed of sale, a suit for pre-emption is governed by Art. 120 and not by this Article —Ali Cauhar v. Jawahir, 30 P.R. 1892; Govardhon v. Mukhram, I.L.R. (1949) Nag. 465, 1949 N.L.J. 290. Thus, a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption against a mortgagee by conditional sale who has foreclosed under Reg. XVII of 1806 is governed by Art. 120, when part of the property sought to be pre-empted is a share in an undivided zemindari mahal, and there is no registered deed of sale—Batul v. Mansur, 20 All. 315 (321) (F.B.), affirmed in Batul v. Mansur, 24 All. 17 (P.C.). A suit for pre-emption in respect of an oral sale, the property sold being a share in an undivided holding not succeptible of physical possession is governed by Article 120—Kishen Chand v. Keher Singh, 14 P.R. 1904. Where the property does not admit of physical possession, and being under rupees one hundred in value, is conveyed by an unregistered instrument, this article does not apply. See Whiteley Stokes' Anglo-Indian Codes, Vol. II, p. 977. Where the purchaser has obtained only symbolical possession but not physical possession, and there is no registered deed of sale, the property having been sold in execution of a decree, this Article does not apply—Achutananda v. Biki Bibi, 1 Pat. 578 (581), A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 601, 69 I.C. 666.

A suit by one pre-emptor against another for the determination of the question as to whether the plaintiff or the defendant has the better right to pre-empt the property, is not governed by this Article but by Art. 120—Durga v. Haider, 7 All. 167; Ilahi Bux v. Muhammad Rab Nawaz Khan, 80 P.R. 1912, 14 I.C. 328; Ram Pershad v. Ganga Datt, 20 P.R. 1908; Mutsadda v. Hamira, 11 P.R. 1893. This Article applies to a suit by the pre-emptor against the vendee. A suit against a transferee of the vendee falls under Article 120 and not under this Article—Karamdad v. Ali Muhammad, 31 P.R. 1913 (F.B.), 18 I.C. 70, 61 P.L.R. 1913; Fazal Hussain v. Malik, 49 P.R. 1914, 25 I.C. 443; Hari Ram v. Allah Ditta, 17 P.R. 1915, 186 P.L.R. 1915, 28 I.C. 695; Razawand v. Dukchor, 1 O.L.J. 196, 24 I.C. 116 (117).

271A. Starting point of limitation:—Where physical possession can be obtained then that is the date whence the period of limitation runs, otherwise it runs from the date of the registration of the document of sale. (Starling, p. 158). Where physical possession is obtained by the vendee after the execution of the sale deed and before registration, in a suit for pre-emption time runs from the date of the delivery of possession and not from the date of registration—Ram Gopal v. Baikunth, A.I.R. 1947 All. 252. It is neither necessary nor this Article requires that the sale deed should be registered before the vendee is put to possession to enable the vendee to claim that he is put in possession of the property under sale deed——Ram Gopal v. Baikunth, 1950 A.L.J. 1, A.I.R. 1950 All. 290.

272. Right not extinguished—Defence of pre-emption:—A suit by a pre-emptor is not a suit for possession of property in respect of which he has the right of pre-emption, and therefore, the right is not extinguished by operation of section 28. Consequently, a defendant may plead his right of pre-emption by way of defence, though a suit by him to enforce such right would then be time-barred—Kanharam Kutti v. Uthotti, 13 Mad. 490; Krishna Menon v. Kesavan, 20 Mad. 305. Contra—Viswanathan v. Ethirajulu, 45 M.L.J. 389, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 57; Ramasami v. Chinnan Asari, 24 Mad. 449. The right of pre-emption is an incohate right and in order to be completed it must be exercised. If that right is not still enforceable, it cannot be a ground of a valid defence—Sabed v. Sahatulla, 42 C.W.N. 1028.

11.—By a person, against whom any of the following orders has been made to establish the right which he claims to the property comprised in the order: (1) Order under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (V of 1908), on a claim preferred to, or an objection made to the attachment of, property attached in execution of a decree; (2) Order under section 28 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882 (XV of 1882).	One year.	The date of the order.

This Article and the one following correspond to Art. 11 of the Act of 1877. The old Article ran thus:—"By a person against whom an order is passed under section 280, 282 or 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to establish his right to or to the present possession of, the property comprised in the order—One year—The date of the order."

273. Scope:—This Article is wider in its scope than the corresponding Article of the old Act. A suit contemplated by the old Article was a suit by a person against whom an order was passed under secs. 280—282 of the C.P.Code, 1882 (O. XXI, rr. 60—62 of the new Code). But article 11 of the new Act speaks of a suit by a person against whom an "order on a claim or objection has been passed, i.e., any order passed in claim proceedings, and is not restricted to an order passed under O. XXI, rr. 60—62. Therefore, where upon attachment of the properties of the judgment-debtor, a simple mortgagee of the judgment-debtor preferred a petition praying that the properties should be described in the sale proclamation as being subject to the simple mortgage in favour of the petitioner, and the petition being dismissed, he brought a regular suit to enforce his mortgage more than one year after the order of dismissal, it was held that although the objection did not purport to be put in under rule 58, and the order of dismissal was not under rules 60—62 still it was an "order on an objection" and therefore one contemplated by this Article; and the suit by the mortgagee to enforce his mortgage against the execution-purchasers and their representatives, brought more than a year after the order of dismissal, is barred by this Article—Lakshumanan,v. Parasivan, 37 M.L.J. 159, 52 I.C. 720 (721); Velu Padayachi v. Arumugam, 38 M.L.J. 397, 56 I.C. 481; Muthia Chetty v. Palaniappa, 45 Mad. 90, 41 M.L.J. 594, 70 I.C. 432; Debidas v. Maharaj Rupchand, 25 A.L.J. 609, A.I.R. 1927 All. 593, 102 I.C. 792. See also Nawal Kishore v. Khiyali, 11 Lah. 369, 31 P.L.R. 752, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 865 (866); Venkanna v. Brahmadu, (1944) 1 M.L.J. 438, 1944 M.W.N. 384, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 417. Contra—Ganesh v. Damoo, 41 Bom. 64, 26 I.C. 627 (decided under the old Act) in which under exactly similar circumstances it was held that the suit did not fall under Article 11. In Co-operative Credit Society v. Narasimma, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 402, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 77 it was held that such an order is not against the mortgagee and this Article does not apply. But this decision has been over-ruled in Cannanore Bank v. Madhair, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 336, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 41 (F.B.). But if such an objection is made before the Collector or Mamladar to whom the proceeding for execution is transferred and is dismissed without investigation, this Article has no application as the provisions of or. 21 r. 63 do not apply to such a case—Ganesh v. Gopal, I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 104, 44 Bom.L.R. 819, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 12.

A property mortgaged to A was attached and brought to sale by execution by the defendant, and after the sale had taken place, A preferred a claim petition that the sale proceeds should be kept in Court deposit to satisfy his mortgage and must not be paid over to the defendant. The Court dismissed the application holding that as the sale had taken place, it had no jurisdiction to hear the petition. In a suit by the plaintiff to enforce his mortgage and recover the mortgage money from the defendant, it was held that the suit did not fall under Article 11 but was governed by Article 132, because in this case there was no "order on a claim or objection" within the meaning of Art. 11. The claim was preferred after the sale had already taken place, so that the proceeding was not one under O. 21, and the Court had dismissed the claim on the ground that it had no jurisdiction to hear it—Abdul Kadir v. Somasundaram, 43 M.L.J. 467, 70 I.C. 648, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 76 [distinguishing 41 Mad. 985 (F.B), 37 M.L.J. 157 and 38 M.L.J. 397].

The word "attachment" in this Article means a de facto attachment and not a mere order of attachment. Of course, such an order is a necessary preliminary to an attachment, but until further steps prescribed in the Code have been taken in execution of it, the attachment cannot be said to have been accomplished. Unless there had been a completed attachment of this character, there can be no order on an objection made to it or a claim preferred to the property, such as is contemplated in this Article. Without such order, there is no terminus a quo for the running of limitation, and therefore no limitation at all. Thus, in execution of a money-decree the Court had ordered the attachment of the property of the judgment-debtor, but no attachment was actually made, and neither the Court nor the parties were aware of the absence of the attachment. The sale-proclamation was duly issued, and a mortgagee of the judgment-debtor preferred a claim-petition that the sale should be subject to his mortgage. The claim having been dismissed, he brought a suit for sale on his mortgage, more than one year after the date of dismissal, and contended that the claim-proceedings being illegal for absence of attachment, the order of dismissal of his claim was a nullity and was not required to be displaced by a suit under Article 11. Held that the order was a nullity, that Article 11 was not applicable, and that the suit was not barred—Muthia Chetty v. Palaniappa, 51 Mad. 349 (P.C.), 55 M.L.J. 122, 32 C.W.N. 821, A.I.R. 1928 P.C. 139, overruling Muthia Chetty v. Palaniappa, 45 Mad. 90.

Unlike Article 11 of the old Act, the present Article does not refer to any particular section (or Order and Rule) of the Civil Procedure Code, so that this Article is general in its scope and applies to all orders in claim-proceedings, whether they are passed after full investigation under the claim sections of the Code, or are passed summarily without any investigation at all. See Venkataratnam v. Ranganayakamma, 41 Mad. 985 (995) (F.B.); Gangadhar v. Abdul Majid, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 69, 69 I.C. 522, Ran Bahadur v. Salig Ram, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 1 (F.B.), 6 Luck. 461, 131 I C. 77. This Article read with Or. 21, r. 63, Civil Procedure Code shows that this Article covers a final order in a proceeding, whether it falls specifically under Or. 21 r. 60, 61 or 62 or not and whether it is made with or without investigation—Dwarika v. Mt. Anandi, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 25. Thus, it is applicable where the objection of the claimant was dismissed for default of appearance and there was no investigation—Gulab v. Mutsaddi, 41 All. 623; Debi Das v. Maharaj Rupchand, 25 A.L.J. 609, A.I.R. 1927 All. 593; Nagendra v. Phani Bhusan, 45 Cal. 785, 23 C.W.N. 357; Ponnuswami v. Samu Ammal, 31 M.L.J. 247, 38 I.C. 937 (938); Nawal Kishore v. Khiyali Ram, 11 Lah. 369, 31 P.L.R. 752, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 865 (866). The fact of the claim being dismissed for default and not on contest makes no difference whatever—Badri v. Chowdhury Mangaraj, 8 Cut.L.T. 93. It is applicable where the claim or objection was dismissed under the proviso to rule 58 of O. 21, C. P. Code (without investigation) as being filed too late. A suit brought by him more than a year after the date of the order dismissing his application is barred by this Article—Velu Padayachi v. Arumlgam, 38 M.L.J. 397, 56 I.C. 481 (483); Nagendra v. Phani Bhusan, 45 Cal. 785; Narasimha v. Vijiapala, 2 L.W. 206, 27 I.C. 944 (945); Gobardhan Das v. Mokundi, 45 All. 438; Narsayya v. Lakshminarayana, 19 N.L.R. 34, A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 187; Venkataratnam v. Ranganayakamma, 41 Mad. 958 (F.B.); Trimbak v. Ziparu, 57 Bom. 213, 35 Bom.L.R. 147, 144 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 190 (191). An action based on the rejection of a petition under Or. 21, r. 58, C. P. Code, is barred by limitation if brought after one year even where the petition had been rejected on the ground that the character with which the petitioner clothed himself was not one which would establish a right under O. 21, r. 58 or 59 to have the attachment set aside—Srikrishna Sahu v. Dhirja Mathu, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 31; Subedar v. Ramprit, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 116, 115 I.C. 703, followed. In a suit under Or. 21 r. 63, Civil Procedure Code to set aside an order passed in a claim petition, this Article is applicable—Andalamma v. Natesam, (1948) 2 M.L.J. 85, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 114, 1948 M.W.N. 493. The test to see whether an order is covered by Or. 21 r. 63, Civil Procedure Code is whether the order is against the claimant or the decreeholder, but does not mean that the order must involve an adjudication on the merits after investigation. If in substance and in effect it negatives the claimant's claim and refuses to recognise it the order is one which falls under Or. 21 r. 63, C. P. Code and this Article applies—Chet Singh v. Anjman, 51 P.L.R. 90, A.I.R. 1949 E.P. 318. Therefore, where the Order "Petition not pressed. It is dismissed" is passed on a petition which falls under Or. 21 r. 58, C. P. Code, and the petitioner does not seek permission to withdraw without prejudice to his rights it is obviously an order which is against him and requires him to file a suit within a year from the date of the order under this Article—Cannanore Bank v. Madhavi, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 336, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 41 (F.B.) over-ruling—Co-operative Credit Society v. Narasimma, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 402, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 77.

274. Suits under this Article:—It has been held in some cases that a suit under sec. 283, C. P. Code, 1882 (O. 21, r. 63) is not a suit to establish title. The words "the right which he claims to the property" has been interpreted to mean the right to have the property attached and sold or the right to have the property released from attachment. They do not mean the right or title to the property. Therefore a suit by an unsuccessful claimant to recover possession of the property on the strength of title, brought more than one year after the date of the order, is not barred by this Article—Morshia v. Elahi, 3 C.L.J. 381; Kedar Nath v. Rakhal Das, 15 Cal. 674. Rules 58 to 61 of O. 21, C. P. Code simply deal with the rights of the parties to attach the property in execution, and not the rights of the parties to the property itself. An adjudication under those rules has not the force of res judicata but it is only operative to conclude rights in execution. The nature of the inquiry is a summary one. Rights relating to property (which may be far beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of the executing Court) cannot be disposed of on the claim petition. The Legislature cannot have contemplated such far-reaching consequences to an order made under such circumstances as to conclude the right and title of the parties for all time to come—Vedalingam v. Veerathal, 37 M.L.J. 547, 54 I.C. 530 (533). If the order passed on the claim petition decides only the question about possession, and leaves the question of title open, it cannot be said that the decision as to possession concludes title as well. The 'possession' contemplated by O. 21, r. 60 is barre possession and not possession indicative of title. Consequently a suit by the unsuccessful party based on title need not be brought within one year—Vendalingam v. Veerathal, supra. On the contrary it has been observed by the Privy Council: "The policy of the Act evidently is to secure the speedy settlement of questions of title raised at execution sale, and for that reason a year is fixed as the time within which the suit must be brought"—Sardhari Lal v. Ambika Pershad, 15 Cal. 521 (526) (P.C.), followed in Najimunnessa v. Nachamuddin, 51 Cal. 548, 39 C.L.J. 418, 83 I.C. 233, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 744 (751), where it has been held (dissenting from 15 Cal. 674) that in a suit instituted under O. 21, r. 63, C. P. Code, the object is to establish the plaintiff's title to the property and not merely to establish his right to have the attachment released. See also the cases of Nilo v. Rama, 9 Bom. 35 (38), Khub Lal v. Ramlochan, 17 Cal. 260 (262), and Bibi Aliman v. Dhakeswar, 1 C.L.J. 296, where a suit to recover property on the basis of title was held to be governed by this Article.

In a suit against an order on a claim petition, the plaintiff is not confined to the relief which can be given by the Court which heard the claim, but is entitled to ask both for declaration of his title to the property, and for all consequential reliefs, e.g., recovery of its value where the property had been sold prior to the order on the claim-petition. A suit to "establish" a right means a suit to establish it effectively by obtaining appropriate relief for the infringement of his right. Therefore a suit for the recovery of the value of the property sold falls under this Article and must be broughut within one year—Basivi Reddi v. Ramayya, 40 Mad. 733 (736, 739) (F.B.); Shiboo Narrain v. Mudden Ally, 7 Cal. 608 (612); Sadu v. Ram, 16 Bom. 608 (614). A decree-holder, whose attachment was raised at the instance of the alienees from the judgment-debtor of the properties attached, sued to establish his right to proceed against the properties and for a declaration that the alienations were not binding on him. It was held that the suit was governed by this Article, and was in time if brought within one year of the order raising the attachment. The fact that there was a secondary relief prayed for in the suit (viz., a declaration) does not take the case out of this Article, as the Article is applicable to all cases in which the main relief (viz., to establish his right to proceed against the property) falls within its scope—Venkateswara v. Samasundaram. 1918 M.W.N. 244, 44 I.C. 551. Upon attachment of a property, the claimant preferred a claim that he was in possession of the property under a mokarari lease granted by the judgment-debtor. This claim was allowed, and the property was ordered to be sold subject to the mokarari. More than a year after this order, the decree-holder who purchased at the execution sale, brought a suit for a declaration that the mokarari was fraudulent and benami and for possession and mesne profits. Held that the order of sale being a judicial determination under sec. 280, C. P. Code, 1882, the present suit ought to have been brought within one year from the date of the order, and was barred under this Article —Rajaram v. Raghubansman, 24 Cal. 563. A claimant whose objection is disallowed is bound to bring a suit within one year notwithstanding the fact that he retains his possession; and if he fails to bring a suit, he is liable to be evicted by the auction-purchaser—Badri v. Muhammad, 1 All. 381 (F.B.). Claims founded on mortgages are as much within the purview of O. 21, r. 58 as any other claim. An order rejecting the claim of a mortgagee who applied to have the attached properties sold subject to his mortgage must be challenged within the period of limitation prescribed by Article 11—Ponnusami v. Samu Ammal. 31 M.L.J. 247, 38 I.C. 937 (938); Nemagauda v. Paresha, 22 Bom. 640 (643); Lakshumanan v. Parasivan, 37 M.L.J. 159, 52 I.C. 720 (721); Velu Padayachi v. Arumugan, 38 M.L.J. 397, 56 I.C. 481 (482). A certain property being attached in execution, a mortgagee of the property objected to it on the grround that the Court should allow his mortgage to the extent of Rs. 164.

The Court allowed only Rs. 64. It was held that the mortgagee was bound to establish his right to the full amount within one year from the date of the order—Yashwant v. Vithoba, 12 Bom. 231. When in execution of a decree against a widow in respect of a mortgage executed by her, the property was attached, and the reversioner's objection to the attachment of the property mortgaged by the widow was disallowed and he sued to have it declared that the mortgage was invalid as against his reversionary interest, it was held that this Article applied and the suit was maintainable —Sant Ram v. Ganga Ram, 1904 P.L.R. 122. But it should be noted that if the reversioner had brought no suit under this Article within one year, his right would not have been lost, because under Article 141 the reversioner's right to sue accrues only on the death of the widow. During her life-time he is not bound to make any application for possession, and the fact that he has made an unsuccessful application for possession in the execution-proceedings and has not sued under this Article, does not debar him from filing a regular suit after the widow's death—Tai v. Ladu, 20 Bom. 801. Where, on the date of hearing, the claimant failed to produce evidence and wanted time, but the Court refused to grant time and dismissed the claim petition, a suit to challenge the validity of the order of dismissal must be brought within one year under this Article; if this is not done, the order would become conclusive—Gokul v. Mohri Bibi, 40 All. 325; Rahim Bux v. Abdul Kader, 32 Cal. 537. Where after the issue of a sale proclamation by the certificate officer under the Public Demands Recovery Act, objections are preferred and an order is passed against the objector, the order is one passed under sec. 24 of the Public Demands Recovery Act. A suit by the objector is governed by this Article and must be filed within one year from the date of the order rejecting his objections—Jamuna v. Atma, 17 Pat. 446, 1938 P.W.N. 677, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 109.

275. Parties to suit under this Article:—Judgment-debtor:—This Article does not apply to a suit by a person who was not a party to the proceedings in which the order sought to be set aside was made; Sardar v. Harsukh, 42 P.L.R. 601, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 497. The judgment-debtor is not necessarily a party to the claim proceedings and unless he is a party to the proceedings, any order passed therein is not conclusive against him. Therefore, a judgment-debtor who was not a party to the claim-proceedings is not bound by the one year's rule of limitation of this Article in respect of any suit which he may bring for the purpose of establishing his right to the property—Imbichi v. Upakki, 1 Mad. 391; Kedar Nath v. Rakhal Das, 15 Cal. 674 (679); Narayan v. Umbar, 35 Bom. 275 (279); Moidin Kutti v. Kunhi Kutti, 25 Mad. 721 (723); Sadaya v. Amurthachari, 34 Mad. 533 (534); Gurava v. Subbarayudu, 13 Mad. 366 (368); Munshi Lal v. Bihsnu, 10 P.L.T. 581, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 604 (605), 120 I.C. 762; Shivapa v. Dod Nagayya, 11 Bom. 114. Nemagauda v. Paresha, 22 Bom. 640 (645); Karsan v. Ganpatram, 22 Bom. 875 (879). This view has been to some extent modified by a later decision of the Madras High Court where it has been held that a judgment-debtor will not be bound by an order on a claim petition unless he has been a party to it and unless the order in terms adjudicates upon his title—Vedalingam v. Veerathal, 37 M.L.J. 547, 54 I.C. 530 (534). The judgment-debtor is not a necessary party to a claim proceeding, and the proper parties to such proceedings are the decree-holder and the claimant. Of course if the judgment-debtor intervenes and actively opposes the claim along with the decree-holder, and the claim petition succeeds, he may be bound by the order unless he sets it aside within one year, as the order may be then said to be passed against him also. But ordinarily it is the decree-holder's right to bring the property to sale against the claim of the claimant, and the claimant's right to have the property released, which are litigated in the claim proceeding—Velu Padayachi v. Arumugam, 38 M.L.J. 397, 56 I.C. 481 (485). The judgment-debtor is not a party to the claim proceedings, but persons who are parties to such proceedings and persons claiming through them do not cease to be parties to the proceedings merely because subsequent to such proceedings they happen to stand in the shoes of the judgment-debtor—Ramu Aiyar v. Palaniappa, 35 Mad. 35 (37).

Claimants and decree-holders:—This Article applies to suits not only by claimants but by decree-holders as well. Where, after investigation under sec. 280 of the Code, the release of the property attached was ordered as against the decree-holder, he is limited to one year within which to sue for a declaration that the property is that of his judgment-debtor—Sardhari v. Ambika, 15 Cal. 521 (P.C.). Where the claim proceedings were decided ex parte by reason of the decree-holder's non-appearance notwithstanding that he was given opportunity to appear and produce evidence, and an order was made for the release of attachment after an investigation under section 280, it was held that there was an adjudication as to the merits, and a regular suit by the decree-holder for establishing that the property was that of his judgment-debtor must be brought within one year from the date of such order—Jiwani v. Nathumal, 28 P.R. 1910, 5 I.C. 890.

Auction-purchaser:—Although the auction-purchaser was not a party to the claim proceedings, still when the claimant's objection was disallowed (and the property was sold) and he afterwards brings a suit under this Article, more than a year after the date of the order passed in the claim proceedings, the auction-purchaser can come in and resist the suit. He is very much interested in obtaining a good title to his purchase, and, being a party to the suit, can take advantage of the fact that the claim was dismissed, and can raise any objection such as limitation that may serve as a bar to the maintenance of the suit—Velu Padayachi v. Arumugam, supra. But the auction-purchaser is not bound by the order passed in the claim proceeding, as he was not a party to that proceeding, and cannot be regarded as a representative either of the judgment-debtor or of the judgment-creditor—Narayan v. Umbar, 35 Bom. 275 (277).

Assignees:—A person who is an assignee of the judgment-creditor-purchaser in Court sale is bound by an order against the judgment-creditor in the claim proceedings, and a suit by him must be brought within the period prescribed by this Article—Ramu Aiyar v. Palaniappa, 35 Mad. 35 (37). An assignee from the claimant who has been successful in the claim proceedings in releasing the property from attachment, must be made a party in a suit to set aside the order of release, if it is intended to bind him by the result of the suit—Pratap Chandra v. Sarat Chandra, 25 C.W.N. 544, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 101, 62 I.C. 348, 33 C.L.J. 201.

Claimant as defendant:—The rule is that the unsuccessful objector or intervenor must himself bring a regular suit within a year, and if he fails to do so, and a suit is brought against him (e.g., by the auction-purchaser) he cannot assert his right to the property in that suit, even though it was filed within a year of the adverse order—Nemagauda v. Paresha, 22 Bom. 640 (644); Bailur Krishna v. Lakshmana, 4 Mad. 302 (308); Velayuthan v. Lakshmana, 8 Mad. 506.

276. "Property":—The word 'property' includes a debt and other intangible property. When a debt not secured by a negotiable instrument is attached, a claim can be preferred by a third party and investigated under sec. 278, C. P. Code, and an order disallowing the claim is subject to the operation of sec. 283, C. P. Code, and Art. 11, Limitation Act. The words "possess" and "possession" in the claim sections of the Code include constructive possession or possession in law of debts and other intangible property, and are not restricted to properties which are capable of tangible or physical possession—Chidombara v. Ramasamy, 27 Mad. 67.

277. Where Article does not apply:—This Article does not apply to a case where subsequent to the order disallowing the claim, the decretal amount is paid off by the judgment-debtor and the attachment released, so that the claimant's interests are not affected. The reason is that as soon as the attachment is removed, there is no longer an attachment or any other proceeding in execution in which the order disallowing the claim could operate to the prejudice of the claimant. As soon as the attachment is released, the parties are restored to their status quo ante. The claimant in such a case need not bring a suit under this Article to establish his right to have the property released, or a suit under Article 13 to set aside the order passed in the claim proceedings; he can sue to recover possession on ground of title within 12 years—Monilal v. Nathalal, 45 Bom. 561 (565); Krishna v. Bipin, 31 Cal. 228 (231); Umesh v. Rajbullabh, 8 Cal. 279; Ibrahimbhai v. Kabulabhai, 13 Bom. 72; Gopal v. Bai Divali, 18 Bom. 241. See also Rati Ram v. Berhmajit, 46 All. 45 (47), A.I.R. 1924 All. 302, 77 I.C. 82. The conclusiveness of an order in a claim case contemplated by Or. 21 r. 63, C. P. Code, is conditional on the continuance of the execution proceedings and the attachment issuing therefrom. Consequently, where a claim is dismissed, but the execution proceedings terminate and the attachment ceases in any manner to have effect, the parties are put back in the same position as before, and the failure of the defeated claimant to sue within one year does not preclude him from afterwards bringing a suit for a declaration of title in respect of the same property beyond one year. It makes no difference whether the attachment terminates within one year or beyond one year. This Article does not apply in such a case—Ramchandra v. Khodaijatul, 24 Pat. 462, 26 P.L.T. 245, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 369. Thus, a claim preferred to the attachment of property was dismissed for default in 1911. Nevertheless, the decree-holder took no further steps to bring the attached property to sale, and the execution proceedings were dismissed very soon afterwards for default, whereupon the attachment ceased. In 1918 the decree-holder issued execution against the same lands and purchased them at the auction sale. Thereupon the claimant brought the present title suit. It was contended that the suit was barred under Article 11 as it was not brought within one year after the order of dismissal of the claim case in 1911. Held that the object of making a claim in execution being to remove the attachment, that object was gained when the attachment was withdrawn, and if there existed no attachment or proceeding in execution on which the order in the claim case could take effect, the claimant was not bound to bring a suit complaining of the order of dismissal of the claim, within a year after the order of dismissal. This Article did not apply and the present suit was not barred—Najimunnessa v. Nacharuddin, 51 Cal. 548, 39 C.L.J. 418, 83 I.C. 233, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 744. Whether the decree is satisfied or set aside or reversed, or whether the decretal amount is paid into Court under O. 21 rule 55, or whether the attachment is voluntarily withdrawn by the decree-holder, or whether the order of attachment is discharged, in all these cases the same result follows, viz., the attachment of the property is released and the parties are put back in the same position in which they were before the execution proceedings were lodged, and the claimant is not bound to institute a suit under rule 63 within a year after his claim has been rejected, when the object sought by him in making the claim has been attained by the release of the property from attachment within the time limited by this Article—Ibid.

The dismissal of a claim petition preferred under Or. 21, r. 58, C. P. Code on the ground that it is not tenable after the execution sale has taken place, is not an order falling under Or. 21, r. 63, C. P. Code, and the failure to file a suit within one year as provided by this Article will not debar the claimant from setting up his rights afterwards. This principle applies even in cases where the claim petition is filed before sale but the order is passed after sale—Ningouda v. Nabinsahib, I.L.R. (1942) Bom. 636, 44 Bom. L.R. 543, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 263.

Where a mortgagee having attached the mortgaged property in execution of his decree the property was released under sec. 280, C. P. Code at the instance of a third party who alleged to have purchased the property prior to the mortgage, and then the mortgagee, more than a year afterwards, brought a suit against such third party and the mortgagor, to have his lien over the mortgaged property declared, to bring it to sale in execution of his decree alleging that the title set up by the third party was fraudulent and made in collusion with the mortgagor, and to have the order under sec. 280 set aside; held that the right that was in litigation in the proceeding under sec. 280 was the right to attach and sell the property in dispute in execution of the decree which the plaintiff had obtained against the mortgagor, and so far as that right is concerned, the present suit is barred under Art. 11, but as regards the other rights upon which the plaintiff brought the present suit, viz., that he held a mortgage prior to the purchase of the claimant, and that the purchase of the claimant was not real, the suit is not barred, as it is not a suit contemplated by sec. 283, C. P. Code, and therefore does not fall under this Article—Bukshi Ram Pergash v. Sheo Pergash, 12 Cal. 453 (457). Where a Court refuses to investigate the claim on the ground that the proper Court for its adjudication is a Court of a higher grade, and dismisses the claim petition, such an order is not one under Or. 21, r. 63, and need not be set aside by a suit brought within one year—Lakshmi Ammal v. Kadersan, 41 M.L.J. 198, 63 I.C. 431, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 488. A debt due to A from B was attached before judgment and A was thereafter adjudged an insolvent. The attached debt was paid into Court and the Official Receiver of A's estate applied to the Court for payment of the money to him and to the attaching creditor by virtue of sec. 34 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (1907). The application was dismissed. More than a year afterwards the Offcial Receiver filed a suit to recover the money. Held that at the time of attachment the Official Receiver had no interest in the money within the meaning of O. 21, rule 58; his application therefore was not a claim petition under rules 58 to 63 of order 21, nor was it an application under any other provision of the C. P. Code, but was a statutory claim under sec. 34 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. Article 11 therefore did not govern the present suit—Official Receiver v. Veeraraghavan, 45 Mad. 70. It should also be noted that Article 11 was inapplicable on the further ground that the Official Receiver's cloim was made in proceedings before judgment and not in proceedings "in execution of a decree."

Where a proceeding for execution is sent to the Collector, the Collector or a Mamlatdar executing the decree is not a court and hence Or. 21, r. 58 and 63, C.P. Code will not apply, and r. 63 of Or. 21, C. P. Code, cannot be invoked so as to make the order passed by the Collector or Mamlatdar final. Though the Collector or Mamlatdar may be said to act under the code when exercising the powers conferred by the Code, he has no power to consider objections to an attachment. Thus, where a person applies to the Collector or Mamlatdar to make a sale subject to a mortgage in his favour and the application is dismissed by the Collector or Mamlatdar without investigation, the order is not one against the applicant under r. 63 of Or. 21 C. P. Code, or within the meaning of this Article. The applicant is not therefore bound to bring a suit under Or. 21, r. 63, C. P. Code, within one year of the order as prescribed by this Article—Ganesh v. Gopal, I.L.R. (1944) Bom. 104, 44 Bom.L.R. 819, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 12

Order 21, rule 63, C. P. Code, has no application to cases where a claim has not been disposed of on the merits or rejected as being too late. All other modes of disposal are treated as modes of disposal which do not entail on the party on whom an adverse order is made the duty of filing a suit to set it aside. Hence where a claimant applies for withdrawal of claim stating that he will bring a suit and the claim is dismissed, a suit need not be filed within one year under Art. 11 as the order does not fall under Or. 21, r. 63—Kandasami v. Sivagurunatha, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 328, 1935 M.W.N. 831, 41 L.W. 500 (41 Mad. 985, F.B., Expl.)

This section does not apply to a case where the claimant (who is a purchaser from the judgment-debtor), having failed to set aside the attachment of the property claimed by him, subsequently brings a suit not against the auction-purchaser for the recovery of the property but against the judgment-debtor for refund of the consideration money paid by him (claimant) for its purchase—Rati Ram v. Berhamajit, 46 All. 45, A.I.R. 1924 All. 302, 21 A.L.J. 770.

This Article does not apply unless there has been an attachment in the manner prescribed by the C. P. Code. In cases where the property has been, or is sought to be, sold under a mortgage-decree, there can be no attachment, and a suit to contest an order passed or an objection to such a sale need not be filed within one year—Mathra Das v. Amin Chand, 33 P.L.R. 1033, 141 I.C. 252, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 75 (76).

Claim in attachment before judgment:—This Article applies only to an order passed on a claim to property which is attached 'in execution of a decree' and not attached before judgment. Such an order on a claim (passed before execution) falls under O. 38, rule 8 and need not be set aside like an order under O. 21, r. 63, and the party against whom such an order is passed is not precluded from asserting his rights to the property in any other proceedings. Neither Art. 11 not Art. 13 has any application to such an order—Ramanamma v. Kamaraju, 41 Mad. 23 (this case has been overruled by 41 Mad. 849 on another point). So, this Article does not apply to a suit brought by an unsuccessful claimant whose claim to property attached before judgment has been preferred and rejected before the decree has been passed; Dhan Bibi v. Mrinalini, 49 C.W.N. 111, 79 C.L.J. 181, A.I.R. 1945 Cal. 449. The rule in Art. 11 is expressly limited to claims or objections made to the attachment of property attached in execution of a decree. There being no special provision of limitation of suits arising out of objections to attachment before judgment, Art. 120, Limitation Act must be applied to such suits—Mt. Babbalkumari v. Mulchand, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 580, 152 I.C. 297. But if the property is attached before judgment in a suit and is ordered to be sold in execution of the decree subsequently passed in the suit, the property may be said to be "attached in execution of the decree," and a suit to contest an order passed on a claim preferred in the execution proceedings falls under this Article—Arunachalam v. Periasami, 44 Mad. 902 (F.B.), 70 I.C. 439, 41 M.L.J. 252. On an attachment before judgment being ordered, a claim petition was put in but dismissed on the 28th Feb. 1914. Subsequently the proceedings, in which the attachment was obtained ended adversely to the attaching creditor in the Court of first instance on the 22nd January 1915 but was reversed on appeal in 1918; thereupon he again attached the property in 1921. Again an objection to the attachment was put in and being dismissed on the 2nd August 1921, a suit was filed on the 3rd August 1921 challenging the order. Held that the suit was not barred. The attachment before judgment was withdrawn upon the dismissal of the proceedings by the Court of first instance, on the 22nd January 1915, and the reversal of the judgment of dismissal on appeal in 1918 did not operate to revive the attachment which had been cancelled in 1915. And therefore, when in the execution proceedings of 1921 a fresh attachment was effected, the plaintiff had a right to prefer a fresh claim which was dismissed on 2nd August 1921, and the period of one year should be counted from this date, and not from 28th February 1914—Saliesh v. Joy Chandra, 87 I.C. 756, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1147.

278. Starting point of limitation:—The period of limitation runs from the date of the order. A suit by the claimant for declaration of his title to the property and for recovery of the value of the property, when it has been sold prior to the order on the claim petition, is in time if brought within one year from the date of the order, though after more than one year from the date of the attachment and sale of the property—Basivi Reddi v. Ramayya, 40 Mad. 733 (F.B.), 36 I.C. 445. Where there has been an appeal against an order passed on the claim petition, and the appeal has been dismissed, time runs from the date of the order passed on appeal. The word 'order' should be construed as meaning the only subsisting order in the case, which is the appellate order when there has been an appeal—Venugopal v. Venkatasubbiah, 39 Mad. 1196 (1201). In this case, the following observations have been made (at p. 1202), though by way of obiter: if there has been a petition for review and the Court refuses to interfere with the order sought to be reviewed, the original order is and continues to be the subsisting and final order. In this respect an order rejecting a review petition stands on a different footing from a decision passed on appeal confirming the lower Court's judgment and dismissing the appeal. If the Appellate Court dismisses the appeal on the ground that the appeal is not entertainable, the lower Court's order is the subsisting order. If the order passed on a review petition or revision interferes with the order of the lower Court, the order passed on review or revision becomes the only subsisting order and will become the starting point for limitation. The starting point should be taken to be the date of the final order whether that order is passed on appeal or passed in a civil revision petition from that order—Venkataswami v. Sara, (1943) 2 M.L.J. 41, 1943 M.W.N. 455, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 633.

A suit in respect of an adverse order passed under O. 21, r. 63 against a minor must be brought within one year after attaining majority. If however, the guardian files a suit within one year of the order, and that suit is dismissed, it cannot extend the period of limitation for a suit by the minor—Subbia v. Arunachela, 80 I.C. 992. A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 379.

Effct of bar of limitation:—If the unsuccessful party in the claim proceedings does not bring a suit within one year as prescribed by this Article, he cannot assert his right even as a defendant after the expiration of the year—Badri Prasad v. Muhammad Yusuf, 1 All. 381 (387) (F.B.); Nilo Pandurang v. Rama, 9 Bom. 35 (39); Velayuthan v. Lakshmana, 8 Mad. 506; Nemakauda v. Paresha, 22 Bom. 640 (644).

11A.	By a person against whom an order has been made under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, (V of 1908), upon an application by the holder of a decree for the possession of immoveable property or by the purchaser of such property sold in execution of a decree, complaining of resistance or obstruction to the delivery of possession thereof, or upon an application by any person dispossessed of	One year.	The date of the order.

such property in the delivery of possession thereof to the decree-holder or purchaser, to establish the right which he claims to the present possession of the property comprised in the order.

In the Act of 1877, this Article was included in Article 11; in the present Act, it has been separated from that Article and framed more elaborately. See the old Article cited under Article 11 ante.

279. Application of Article:—It has been held by the Patna High Court that the language of Article 11A is more comprehensive than that of the old Article 11, that this Article is sufficiently wide to cover cases in which the order is passed without investigation, and there is no justification for restricting the operation of this Article only to those cases where investigation has taken place. Therefore, where an application under Or. XXI, rule 100 has been dismissed (without investigation) on account of the applicant's failure to adduce evidence on the date of hearing, a suit for declaration of title falls under this Article—Saiyid Raziuddin v. Bindeshri Prasad, 5 P.L.J. 652 (655), 58 I.C. 37. The same High Court has held in Dwarika v. Anandi, A.I.R. 1950 Pat. 25, that this Article has no application where, in the summary proceedings arising out of the claim in the execution case, there has been no investigation. The case of Saiyid Rajiuddin v. Bindeshri Prasad, supra has been explained and distinguished on the ground that Art. 11A was not considered at all.

But the Calcutta High Court is of opinion that although Article 11A of the Limitation Act does not refer to any section or rule of the Civil Procedure Code and is general in its terms, still the order referred to in this Article must be an order under Order XXI, rule 103 of the C. P. Code. That rule expressly refers to rules 98, 99 and 101, and these rules provide for investigation into a petition of objection. The right of suit is given by rule 103 only when there is any order under rules 98, 99 and 101, and Article 11A provides for limitation applicable to such suits. Article 11A therefore does not apply where the petition of objection had been dismissed for deafult of appearance, without any investigation, for an order of dismissal of such petition without investigation is not contemplated by rules 98, 99 and 101 of the O. XXI of the Code—Nirode Barani v. Monindra, 26 C.W.N. 853 (856), 35 C.L.J. 537, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 229, 68 I.C. 524. In this case the Judges further pointed out (at pp. 856, 857) that although the language of O. XXI, rule 63 of the Code of 1908 has been altered from that of sec. 283 of the Code of 1882, the language of secs. 332 and 335 of the old Code has been retained in O. XXI, rule 103 of the Code of 1908, and therefore although Article 11 governs a case in which the claim petition had been dismissed for default of appearance (45 Cal. 785), Article 11A cannot apply where the petition of objection made under rule 100 had been dismissed for default of appearance. See also Sarat v. Tarini, 34 Cal. 491 and Kunj Behary v. Kandh Prasad, 6 C.L.J. 362 (both decided under the old Act) in which it was similarly held that this Article did not apply to a suit brought by the unsuccessful applicant whose application for possession had been dismissed for default of appearance. See also Meeruddin v. Rahisa Bibi, 27 Mad. 25 (under the old Act) where this Article has been held to be inapplicable where the Court has refused to investigate the matter of resistance. But where on the day of hearing of an application made by an auction-purchaser under O. 21, r. 97, the auction-purchaser adduced no evidence but a witness was examined by the opposite party, and thereupon the Court dismissed the application, held that the order made after investigation, and a suit by the auction-purchaser under O. 21, r. 103 fell under Art. 11A—Hari Saday v. Mahendra, 39 C.W.N. 164 (165), A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 267, 155 I.C. 702.

Where the decree-holder gets possession under the decree and is then dispossessed by reason of an order under sec. 332, C. P. Code, a subsequent suit by him for recovery of possession is governed by Article 142 and not by this Article as it contemplates only an order passed under sec. 335, C. P. Code—Maindi v. Gora Chand, 16 C.W.N. 971, 14 I.C. 92.

The suit contemplated by O. 21, r. 103 is not confined to a suit for possession of the property. It is a suit to establish a right which the plaintiff claims to the present possession of the property. And this right may be established either on account of his right to possession or on account of his title. And so, even if the suit contemplated by r. 103 is brought on the strength of title, it must be brought within one year under this Article—Lakshman v. Dattatraya, 53 Bom. 668, 31 Bom.L.R. 765, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 379 (380, 381), 120 I.C. 362. Where a purchaser at an auction sale instituted proceedings under O. 21, r. 103, C. P. Code, against the defendant who resisted to his taking possession of the property, and the proceedings were dismissed on the ground that the property belonged to the defendant, a subsequent suit to establish the title must be brought within one year under this Article—Bai Jamna v. Bai Ichha, 10 Bom. 604. Under similar circumstances a suit to recover possession must also be brought within a year after the order—Ganpat Rai v. Husaini, 19 A.L.J. 53, 60 I.C. 905.

A purchaser of a coparcener's share at a Court sale, having been obstructed, applied for removal of the obstruction and for possession and his application was rejected. More than a year after the order of rejection, he filed a suit praying that the order in the miscellaneous proceedings might be set aside and that a partition might be directed, and that the whole of the plot of land which he purchased might be allotted to the share of his judgment-debtor and that he might be placed in present possession of it. Held that the suit though in name a suit for partition was in substance a suit for possession of that very property under the self-same right put forward without avail in the miscellaneous proceedings, and so it was a suit to establish his right to the same property covered by the order, and having been brought more than a year after the date of the order in the miscellaneous proceedings, which he asked to have set aside, it was barred—Bhimappa v. Irappa, 26 Bom. 146. But the Madras High Court holds, under similar circumstances, that the suit for partition is not barred by the one year's rule of Article 11A, because the claim for partition asked for in the suit is different from the claim for declaration of his title to actual possession which was asked for in the miscellaneous proceedings. The plaintiff in the present suit is exercising the equitable right of the coparcener whose share he has purchased to demand a partition at any time. The Bombay case was distinguished on the ground that in Bombay even before partition the purchaser of the interest of one coparcener is a tenant-in-common with the others, but in Madras the purchaser is not a tenant-in-common but has only an equity to enforce his rights by partition—Shanmugan v. Panchali, 49 Mad. 596, 50 M.L.J. 681, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 683, 95 I.C. 209; Lakshmipathiraju v. Venkataswami, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 104, 1946 M.W.N. 128, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 324. The Calcutta High Court has also taken the same view in Satya v. Mukhram, I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal. 685, 66 C.L.J. 537, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 384. Where the basis of the claim in the suit is the same as that put forward in the miscellaneous possession proceedings, Article 11A would apply; but where the basis of the claim in the suit is distinct and different, and the possession claimed is not present possession but only by way of consequential relief to the decree being set aside, the Article cannot apply. Thus, R and F had a dispute about a house and the matter was referred to an arbitrator. He decided that R should pay Rs. 200 and retain possession of the house. The compromise decree was passed in December 1920. R paid the money in Court, but in seeking to obtain possession, was obstructed by F. On proceedings being taken, the obstruction was removed in October 1921. F thereupon field a suit for a declaration in 1923, that the award and the decree had been vitiated by fraud. Held that the suit did not fall under Art. 11A because what is sought to be set aside is the original decree of 1920, and not the order in the possession-proceedings—Rukhmabai v. Fakirsa, 51 Bom. 158, 101 I.C. 40, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 184. See also, Jnanendra v. Atansenajit, A.I.R. 1951 Assam 145.

If an execution-purchaser asks to be put in actual possession when he is not entitled to such possession, and his application is dismissed under O. XXI, r. 99, C. P. Code, a suit for actual possession must be brought within one year under this Article —Baldeo v. Kanhaiya Lal, 16 N.L.R. 103 (P.C.), 24 C.W.N. 1001, 58 I.C. 21.

This Article applies only to a suit to recover present possession. If an objection under section 335, C. P. Code, preferred by a mortgagee of the property sold in execution is rejected, a suit by the objector to enforce his mortgage lien over the property does not fall under this Article but under Article 132. Such a suit is not a suit to establish the plaintiff's right to the property, but only to recover a debt which is owing to him and as security for which he has got a charge upon the property—Bhiku v. Shujat Ali, 29 Cal. 25 (29). This Article applies to a suit by a person who has been disturbed in his possession by reason of the auction-purchaser taking possession of the property. If his possession has not been disturbed, and the auction-purchaser has obtained only a symbolical possession of the property, he is not required to make an application under Or. XXI, rule 100 asking for possession of the property (when as a matter of fact he remains in possession thereof) and on the dismissal of the application, to bring a suit under this Article—Atormoni v. Ramananda, 50 Cal. 311, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 601, 84 I.C. 876. This Article applies where the plaintiff had been dispossessed in the course of the delivery of possession to the decree-holder or auction-purchaser. The terms of this Article go to show that it applies only to cases where a person who has been actually dispossessed of the property and who made an application under Or. XXI, r. 100 and whose application has been dismissed, then brings a suit. Where the plaintiff was actually dispossessed long after the date of the order dismissing his application under O. XXI, r. 100, limitation for a suit to establish his title and recover possession is that provided under Art. 142 and not Art. 11A—Satyanarain v. Jinsi, 10 P.L.T. 872, 117 I.C. 634, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 553 (554, 555). Dispossession under Or. 21, r. 100 must be in course of the execution proceedings. Where the alleged dispossession is not in the course of the execution proceedings but subsequent to the alleged delivery of possession in course of the execution case, this Article does not apply. The words "to the delivery of possession thereof" in this Article put the matter beyond the shadow of any doubt—Hare Krishna v. Jamini, 85 C.L.J. 155, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 555. (The contrary view expressed by Guha J. in Rajendra v. Asir, 65 C.L.J. 416, A.I.R. 1948 Cal. 192 has been dissented). The plaintiff having purchased certain property in execution of a decree, the defendent applied under Or. XXI, rule 100 that the property belonged to him, and objected to the plaintiff's taking possession. This application was dismissed for default on two different occasions and was ultimately allowed on the 5th August 1916. In 1920, the plaintiffs brought a suit for possession of the property and urged that as the order of 5th August 1916, allowing the plaintiffs' application after it had been previously dismissed for default was without jurisdiction and a nullity, they could disregard that order and bring a suit for possession within 12 years.

Held, overruling the contention, that Or. IX, rule 4, which provides for restoration of suits dismissed for default of appearance, was applicable to a proceeding under Or. XXI, rule 100 and the order restoring and allowing for default was not a nullity and could not be ignored and that therefore the present suit fell under this Article and was barred—Sheonandan v. Debi Lal, 2 Pat. 372, 4 P.L.T. 93, 71 I.C. 484, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 239.

The words 'resistance or obstruction' in this Article imply that it applies to those cases where an order has been passed (under O. XXI, rules 98, 99 and 101) on an application made by the decree-holder or purchaser under rule 97, and not where an order has been passed on an application made under rule 95. In an application by the purchaser under rule 95 for delivery of possession of property, there can be no allegation and complaint of obstruction or resistance, and if he is prejudiced by an order passed under rule 95, his suit for possession does not fall under Article 11A, and is not governed by the one year's rule of limitation—Sobha Ram v. Tursni Ram, 46 All. 693, 22 A.L.J. 626, A.I.R. 1924 All. 495, 83 I.C. 923. The suit contemplated by O. XXI, r. 103 is a suit by a person who is kept out of possession of the property purchased in execution of the decree and claims possession under his auction purchase.. The plaintiff in execution of a rent decree against his tenants, purchased and took possession of the holding in suit. Meanwhile the tenants had sold away their holding to the defendants, who made an application under O. XXI, r. 100 for restoration of possession. In 1917, an order was passed in their favour under O. XXI r. 101. The plaintiff instituted the present suit in 1920 for ejectment of the defendants on the ground that the tenants had parted with the holding wrongfully. Held that the present suit was not one under O. XXI, rule 103, because it was brought by the plaintiff not in his character as auction-purchaser but as landlord. The present suit is totally unconnected with the possession proceedings and does not fall under Article 11A—Ambica Charan v. Rama Proad, 30 C.W.N. 163, 42 C.L.J. 578, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 377.

Before this Article applies there must have been an act of dispossession by the decree-holder or the auction purchaser. An order for delivery of possession of land in the actual possession of tenants made in favour of the decree-holder purchaser under Or. 21, r. 96, C. P. Code, does not amount to dispossession within the meaning of this Article—Bisweswar v. Naba Kumar, 44 C.W.N. 251, 70 C.L.J. 111, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 16. Where a person has not been dispossessed of the property when the order under Or. 21, r. 99, C. P. Code is passed against him and the application under Or. 21, r. 99, C. P. Code is held to be incompetent the suit is not covered by this Article—Mohammad Jamil v. Kewal, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 349, 191 I.C. 160.

Before this Article can be invoked, it must be shown that there was a decree for possession of immoveable property, or that immoveable property was sold in execution of a decree. A decree, as defined in sec. 2 (2), C. P. Code, presupposes a suit. A proceeding taken under Ch. VII of the Presidency S. C. C. Act cannot be said to be a suit, and the decision of the Court therein is not a decree. Consequently Article 11A does not apply to a suit for recovery of possession of moveable property after proceedings under Ch. VII of the Pres. S. C. C. Act have failed—Hyder Ali v. Aminuddin, 56 M.L.J. 199, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 69 (70), 115 I.C. 504; Madhavprasad v. Chandavarrkar, 50 Bom.L.R. 747, A.I.R. 1949 Bom. 104.

280. Parties:—The suit contemplated by this Article is a suit instituted only against the person in whose favour the order was made. Therefore, where a suit was filed in time against the party in whose favour the order was made, the mere fact that other persons were added as defendants after the period of limitation on the representation of the defendant that he was only a benamidar for those persons, would not make the suit liable to be dismissed as barred by limitation—Aiyyam v. Poongavanam, 18 M.L.J. 464. Similarly, where the suit was brought in time by the person against whom an order under sec. 335 was made, and at the hearing it was found that he was only a benamidar, and the second plaintiff was brought on the record as the real owner after the expiry of the period of limitation, it was held that the suit was not barred, and that the first plaintiff, though a benamidar, was entitled to sue as the person against whom the order under sec. 335, C. P. Code was made—Venkatachala v. Subramania, 1910 M.W.N. 633, 8 I.C. 264. So also, where a suit as originally instituted is brought within one year from the date of order under Or. 21, r. 101, C. P. Code but the prayer for amendment, whereby a person, who after the institution of the suit obtains possession of the property in suit, is sought to be brought on record, is made at a time when the period of one year is already passed, the relief against such person is not barred by limitation—Sekandar v. Joychand, 85 C.L.J. 208, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 566.

The words "any person against whom an order has been made include the decreeholder (either in his capacity as decree-holder for khas possession or as purchaser in execution of his own decree)—Bhikhari v. Abdulla, 44 All. 607, 20 A.L.J. 578, 68 I.C. 241; Ganpat Rai v. Husaini Begum, 19 A.L.J. 53, 60 I.C. 905, A.I.R. 1921 All. 92.

280A. When time runs:—Time runs ordinarily from the date of the order. If there has been an application for revision and that application has been dismissed, time does not run from the date of the order of dismissal passed in revision. There is a clear distinction between an appeal and an application for revision. Whereas the right of appeal is a substantive right created by statute, interference by the High Court by way of revision is entirely discretionary; and when the High Court dismisses an application for revision, it is not as if the order of dismissal is the only subsisting order in the case. It only amounts to the High Court abstaining from exercising jurisdiction and allowing the order of the subordinate Court to stand—Laxman v. Chunni Lal, 27 N.L.R. 251, 130 I.C. 145, A.I.R. 1931 Nag. 17 (18); Meghmala v. Saday, 42 C.W.N. 1051, 68 C.L.J. 261, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 577.

But if the petition for revision is accepted by the High Court, the order passed in revision is the subsisting order and gives the starting point for limitation—Venugopal v. Venkatasubbiah, 39 Mad. 1196 (1202) (by way of obiter). See this case cited in Note 278 under Art. 11; Meghmala v. Saday, supra.

280B. Effect of bar of limitation:—The terms of Or. 21 r. 103, C P. C. by themselves do not lead to the conclusion that the title of the person affected by the order passed under Or. 21 r. 98 or r. 99 is extinguished if he does not bring his suit within one year as provided in this Article—Gobardhan v. Sukhamoy, I.L.R. (1949) 1 Cal. 378, 83 C. L. J. 373, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 481.

12.—To set aside any of the following sales:—
(a) sale in execution of a decree of a Civil Court;	One year.	When the sale is confirmed, or would otherwise have become final and conclusive had no such suit been brought.
(b) sale in pursuance of a decree or order of a Collector or other officer of revenue;

(c) sale for arrears of Government revenue, or for any demand recoverable as such arrears;

(d) sale of a patni taluq sold for current arrears of rent.

Explanation.—In this article "patni" includes any intermediate tenure saleable for current arrears of rent.

281. Application of article:—This Artocle applies only to those cases in which the sale would be binding on the plaintiff if not set aside—Vishnu v. Ram Chandra, 11 Bom. 130 (132); Payidanna v. Lakshminarasamma, 38 Mad. 1076 (1081); Paregh v. Bai Vakhat, 11 Bom. 119 (123). The true criterion is to determine whether the sale is merely voidable or void ab initio.

Article 12 does not therefore apply to void sales. Where a sale is in its inception void, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to have it set aside as he is not bound by it—Ram Narain v. Brij Nath, 29 Cal. 36 (42); Purna Chandra v. Dinabandhu, 34 Cal. 811 (819) (F.B.); Ahmed Yar Khan v. Dinath, 42 C.L.J. 69, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1148; Khiarajmal v. Daim, 32 Cal. 296 (315) (P.C.); Bhulaki v. Kesri, 50 All. 686, A.I.R. 1928 All. 363 (365); Amjad v. Ejaz, 17 Luck. 456, 1941 O.W.N. 1328, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 120; Karashiddayya v. Gazanan Urban Co-operative Bank Ltd., I.L.R. (1943) Bom. 400, 45 Bom.L.R. 553, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 288; Ram v. Hari, 52 Bom.L.R. 358, A.I.R. 1950 Bom. 346. The words "set aside" are inapplicable to the case of a sale which is null and void. That which is a nullity cannot from its very nature be set aside—Shirin Begum v. Aghastikhan, 18 All. 141 (145). Arts. 12 and 14 refer to orders and proceedings of a public functionary, to which by law is given a particular effect in favour of one person or against another, subject in the regular course to a further judicial proceeding having for its object to quash them or set them aside. When an order does not fall within the authority of an official who makes it, it is legally a nullity, and, therefore, need not be set aside—Shivaji v. Collector, 11 Bom. 429 (432). Thus, where the Court or officer ordering the sale had no jurisdiction to do so, as for instance, where the Collector brought to sale any property in excess of that which was covered by the decree, the sale of the excess share was null and void, and the plaintiff's suit for possession of the excess share would not be governed by this Article—Mazar Ali v. Kedar, 19 All. 308; Bulaki v. Kesri, supra. Where a property was sold in execution of a decree in 1882 and there was no interest left to be sold to another purchaser, but still it was sold again in execution, and thereupon the first purchaser brought a suit for a declaration that the second sale was invalid, it was held that there was no occasion for setting aside the second sale which did not at all affect the right of the first purchaser, and that therefore Article 12 had no application. This Article does not apply where the suit is brought not to set aside the sale, but to declare that it does not affect the rights of the plaintiff. Between setting aside a sale and holding that the plaintiff's rights are not affected by it, there is a wide difference—Moti v. Karrabuldin, 25 Cal. 179 (186) (P.C.); Fazalar v. Khorsed,

I.L.R. (1941) 1 Cal. 339, 45 C.W.N. 277, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 333; Banarsi v. Bhawani, 23 Pat.L.T. 364, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 386, 202 I.C. 52; Nahal v. Felu, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 490. The debtor having died, the creditor sued the debtor's mother in the character of heiress; whereas the real heiress was the debtor's widow In 1878 the creditor obtained a decree ex parte upon which execution took place and the debtor's property was sold. Afterwards in 1881, the son adopted by the debtor's widow brought a suit to recover the land. Held that the sale being a nullity, there was no necessity to set it aside, and the suit did not fall under Article 12—Baswantappa v. Ranu, 9 Bom. 86. Where a Hindu father executes a mortgage of ancestral property without any consideration and a suit is brought by the mortgagee, the sons are brought on record as the legal representatives of the mortgagor on his death after preliminary decree and a final decree is passed against them without allowing them to question the existence and binding nature of the mortgage and the property is sold and the sons are dispossessed a suit by the sons for possession on the gound that the mortgage, the decree and the execution sale are void is not hit by this Article as the sale being void it is unnecessary for them to set aside the sale—Lakshmadu v. Ramudu, I.L.R. (1940) Mad. 123, 1939 M.W.N. 918, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 867. See, however, Neelakanta v. Narayana, A.I.R. 1956 T.C. 262. Under sec. 49K of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the right of an aboriginal tenure-holder or raiyat in his tenure or holding cannot be sold in execution of any decree or order; the sale of such a tenure is a nullity and an application to set aside such a sale is not governed by Article 12—Jogeshwar v. Jhapal, 51 Cal. 224, 28 C.W.N. 556, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 638, 82 I.C. 848. Where a sale takes place under the Public Demands Recovery Act (Bengal) without any previous notice to the defaulter, the sale is an absolute nullity, and a suit to set aside the sale and to recover possession of the property sold is governed by Art. 142, and not by this Article or Art. 120.In such a suit the plaintiff need not ask that the sale should be set aside; he is entitled to recover possession upon the footing that the sale has not affected his title—Purna Chandra v. Dinabandhu, 34 Cal. 811 (821) (F.B.) (practically overruling Hari Charan v. Chandra Kumar, 34 Cal. 787); see also Syam Lal v. Nilmoney, 34 Cal. 241, where the suit was held to be governed by Article 95 or 120, and not by Article 12.

This Article has no application where the suit is to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud. Such a suit is governed by Art. 95, which is more specific than Article 12 —Rameshwar v. Mahabir, 5 Pat. 759, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 401, 96 I.C. 529; Madho Saran v. Manna Lal, 14 P.L.T. 441, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 473 (480); Venkatapathi v. Subramanya, 9 Mad. 457; Bhoobun Chunder v. Rani Sunder, 3 Cal. 300; Syam Lal v. Nilmoney; 34 Cal. 241; Bajaji v. Pirchand, 13 Bom. 221; Parekh v. Bai Vakhat, 11 Bom. 119; Natha v. Jodha, 6 All. 406. But see Raj Chunder v. Kinoo Khan, 8 Cal. 329 where it has been held that a suit to set aside a sale falls under this Article even though fraud is alleged. Where the sale is only voidable at the instance of the plaintiff, he cannot avoid the application of this Article by seeking reliefs which though different are inconsistant with the validity of the sale—Gauri v. Jaishi, A.I.R. 1950 H.P. 1. In this case the suit was brought for a declaration that the sale was null and void on the ground of fraud practised on Court.

Where the plaintiff, a puisne mortgagee, did not seek to set aside the sale held at the instance of the first mortgagee, but only sought to participate in the sale proceeds on the ground that the first mortgagee was not entitled to draw the whole amount, the suit did not fall under this Article—Sivarama v. Subramanya, 9 Mad. 57.

This Article does not apply if the plaintiff was not a party to, and therefore not bound by, the proceedings in which the sale was held—Venkata v. Subbamma, 4 Mad. 178; Sadagopa v. Jamunabhia, 5 Mad. 54; Amjad v. Ejaz, 17 Luck. 456, 1941 O.W.N.

1328, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh. 120; Abdul Hameed v. Provident Investment Co. Ltd., I.L.R. 1954 Mad. 1039, (1954) 2 M.L.J. 416, A.I.R. 1954 Mad. 961 (F.B.). The Court has not jurisdiction to sell the property of persons who are not parties to the proceedings or properly represented on the record. As against such persons the decrees and sales purporting to be made will be a nullity and may be disregarded without any proceedings to set them aside—Khiarajmal v. Dain, 32 Cal. 296 (312) (P.C.). Thus, where property belonging to the plaintiff has been sold in execution of a decree against a third party, the sale was without jurisdiction and a nullity, which the plaintiff is not bound to have set aside before he can recover possession. A suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the property is not governed by Art. 12 but by Art. 144—Jwala v. Masiat, 26 All. 346 (353); Narasimha v. Ramasami, 18 Mad. 478; Natha v. Badri, 5 All. 614; Kadar Hussain v. Hussain Sahib, 20 Mad. 118 (F.B.) (overruling Suryanna v. Durji, 7 Mad. 258); Sarfuddin v. Hansraj, 15 P.R. 1912, 11 I.C. 76, 203 P.L.R. 1911. Where the plaintiff had been a minor at the time of the sale, and had not been properly represented in the proceedings in which the sale was held, a suit by the plaintiff after attaining majority to set aside the sale and to recover the property does not fall under this Article —Vishnu v. Rama Chandra, 11 Bom. 130; Daji v. Dhirajram, 12 Bom. 18; Payiddanna v. Lakshminarasamma, 38 Mad. 1076. See also Rashidunnissa v. Muhammad Ismail, 31 All. 572 (P.C.); I. Ebrahim v. M. Cheriyan, I.L.R. (1955) T.C. 341, A.I.R. 1956 T.C. 70. Where a suit was brought to recover money from the defendant who was the karnavan of a tarwad, but it was not alleged in the plaint that the defendant was sued as karnavan or that the debt was a tarwad debt, a sale of the tarwad property in execution of the decree was not binding on the members of the tarwad, and this Article does not apply to a suit brought by them to recover the land sold in execution of the decree—Haji v. Atharaman, 7 Mad. 512.

A sale held under sec. 112 of the Madras Estates Land Act is not held in pursuance of an order or a decree of the Collector or other officer of revenue within the meaning of clause (b) of Article 12, because the scheme of sec. 112 and the subsequent section of that Act does not contemplate that the Collector shall pass an order directing the sale; and consequently this Article cannot apply to a suit to set aside such a sale—Kootoorlingam v. Sennappa, 61 M.L.J. 203, 134 I.C. 184, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 724 (726); Venkatasubbayya v. Narayan, 1927 M.W.N. 174; Subbayya v. Kristayya, 52 M.L.J. 390, 100 I.C. 1007, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 488; Satyanarayana v. Rayalamma, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 386, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 501, 213 I.C. 255; Venkataswarlu v. Veeraswami, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 291, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 461, 226 I.C. 411 (case of sale after notice of relinquishment). The sales in disregard of the absolute provisions of any of the sections of the Estates Land Act such as secs. 116 and 117 apart from cases where there is no jurisdiction to sell at all, relate only to illegalities which make the sale voidable and in such cases the sale must be got set aside within the time fixed by this Article. It will not be open to the plaintiff where it is necessary to set aside the sale before he can get the relief for possession simply to ignore the sale and ask for possession, after the expiry of the period to set aside the said sale—Avudainayagam v. Pitchiah, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 43, 1950 M.W.N. 84, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 358.

Voidable sales:—As observed before, this Article will apply to cases in which a sale would be binding on the plaintiff if not set aside, i.e., where the sale is merely voidable and not void ab initio. Thus, it applies to a suit to set aside a sale on the ground that the decree-holder purchased the property without the permission of the Court, such sale being voidable only and not void—Chinnakannu Padayachi v. Paramasiva, 101 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 1135; or to a suit to set aside a sale, when there was a defect in the sale notification—Baijnath v. Ravaneswar, 6 C.L.J. 163; or where the sale took place within 30 days from the sale proclamation—

Tasadduk v. Ahmed, 21 Cal. 66 (P.C.); Kokil v. Edal, 31 Cal. 385; or where the plaintiff's lands were sold by the Revenue Court for arrears of assessment whereas in fact the lands were exempt from payment of assessment—Mahadev v. Sadashiv, 45 Bom. 45, 22 Bom. L.R. 1082, 59 I. C. 118. If a Court erroneously holds that an application for execution is not barred and orders a sale, such order though erroneous and liable to be set aside is not a nullity, but remains in full force until set aside, and a sale held thereunder would be valid till set aside. A suit to annul such a sale falls under this Article—Mahomed Hossein v. Purundur, 11 Cal. 287 (292). Where a decree was passed against the judgment-debtor, and after his death an application for execution was made against his estate and against a person as heir who was in fact not the heir, but the Court erroneously decided that he was the heir, and the property was sold without notice to the proper heirs, held that though the execution proceeded against a wrong person, still since it was made 'against the estate' of the deceased judgment-debtor, and since the Court decided, though wrongly, that the person proceeded against was the real heir, the sale was not a nullity, and could not be treated as invalid, notwithstanding this material irregularity. Therefore, the sale was merely voidable and a suit to set aside the sale falls under this Article —Malkarjun v. Narhari, 25 Bom. 337 (P.C.), 27 I.A. 216. A suit brought by the son to set aside a sale of his share which has been sold in Court-auction in execution of a decree against his father, falls under this Article. The sale is not void but voidable only, and if the son does not challenge it by a suit, the auction-purchaser would get a good title to the extent of the son's share purchased by him—Narayana v. Venkataswami, 51 M.L.J. 845, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1190, 98 I.C. 31. If a decree-holder having been refused permission by the Court to bid for or purchase the property to be sold under his decree, nevertheless purchases it through a benamidar, its effect is to render the sale voidable and not void. Consequently, a suit to set aside the sale must be brought within one year under this Article—Rai Radha Krishna v. Bisheshar, 1 Pat. 733 (P.C.), 3 P.L.T. 529, 67 I.C. 914. Where a house not included in the mortgage was sold by mistake in execution of a decree on the mortgage, the sale is not an absolute nullity, but voidable only, therefore a suit to set aside the sale falls under this Article—Nagabhatta v. Nagappa, 46 Bom. 914, 25 Bom.L.R. 423, 67 I.C. 857, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 62. Where, notwithstanding the attainment of majority pendente lite by the minor defendant, the suit was continued as if he was still a minor, and a decree was passed against him and his property was sold in execution, it was held that neither the decree nor the sale was a nullity, and a suit to set aside the sale was governed by this Article—Seshagiri v. Hanumantha Rao, 39 Mad. 1031. Where in a certificate issued under the Public Demands Recovery Act, the blank spaces in the form were not filled up, although it contained all the necessary information as to the specific sum due and the particulars thereof, and the notice issued under sec. 7 of that Act bore only the lithographic signature of the certificate officer, held that the certificate could not be held to be invalid or void, and a suit to set aside the sale under the Act is governed by Article 12—Hara Prasad v. Gopal Chandra, 31 C.W.N. 299 (301, 304), 100 I.C. 997, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 315. A suit for possession by setting aside the execution sale and the decree passed on the basis of an award given by the arbitrator on a reference by Court without giving permission to the guardian of the minor a party to the suit to enter into the agreement to refer the case to arbitration—Nahar v. Tekchand, 1951 A.L.J. 751, A.I.R. 1952 All. 184.

281A. In execution of a decree:—The language of Art. 12 (a) is wide and there is no reason to restrict the application of the expression "in execution of a decree" to cases of simple money decrees. The article applies to the case of sales on the basis of mortgage decrees also—Mohamad v. Allahdin, 17 Luck. 1, 1941 O.W.N. 1077, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 33, Dunichand v. Ram, A.I.R. 1949 E. P. 20.

281B. Demand recoverable as such arrears:—An award under section 59 (1) (b) of the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act is recoverable as arrears of land revenue and a suit to set aside a sale by the Collector in execution of the award must be brought within the period prescribed in this Article—Laxman v. Bhut Ashte Co-operative Credit Society, 48 Bom. L.R. 610, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 144, 231 I.C. 131.

281C. "Order of a Collector":—An 'order' of a Collector means an order in the nature of a decree or made by the Collector in his judicial capacity—Sakharam v. Collector of Ratnagiri, 8 Bom. H. C. Rep. 219

282. Suit for declaration, possession or other relief:—The one year's limitation prescribed by this Article is not confined only to suits brought to set aside a sale, but applies also to suits where other relief (e.g., declaration, possession) is sought which can only be granted on annulment of the sale. A sale, if it is a reality at all, and not a nullity, can be legally and literally set aside, and anybody who desires any relief which is inconsistent with it may and should pray to set it aside; and even when there is no such prayer, the suit will be governed by Art. 12, if the objection is to obtain a relief which is inconsistent with the validity of the sale—Malkarjun v. Narhari, 25 Bom. 337 (350, 352) (P.C.). Where the sale is operative as against the plaintiff though liable to be set aside for want of jurisdiction or other just cause, the suit to set aside the sale must be brought within one year, even though it is framed as a suit for possession—Baldeo Das v. Lal Nilmoni, 8 Pat. 122, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 615 (618), 113 I.C. 681, following 25 Bom. 337 (P.C.). If a suit is not expressly brought for setting aside a sale, but if it is of such a nature that it cannot succeed without the sale being set aside, it will be governed by this Article, e.g., a suit by an auction purchaser for refund of the purchase money—Mohamed v. Novroji, 10 Bom. 214 (217). A suit for possession of property sold in execution of a valid decree is governed by this Article, because the plaintiff cannot ignore the decree but must get it set aside before he can recover possession—Imam Din v. Puran Chand, 1 Lah. 27, 84 P.L.T. 1920, 55 I.C. 833; Parshadi v. Mohammad Zainulabdin, 5 All. 573. A property was sold by auction in execution of a decree; but before confirmation of sale the judgment debtor sold the property to another (the plaintiff) who paid the decree-money and got the sale set aside. In appeal the sale was confirmed and the auction-purchaser obtained possession. Thereafter the plaintiff sued the auction-purchaser for possession of the property. It was held that this Article governed the suit because he must first get the sale set aside—Nagina Singh v. Puran, 11 P.R. 1906, 4 P.L.R. 1906. Where plaintiff's land having been sold by the revenue authorities for default of payment of assessment due thereon, he instituted a suit for possession, held that the sale being in pursuance of an order of a Revenue Officer, the plaintiff was bound by that sale unless and until it was reversed. His suit for possession was governed by this Article, since he could not get possession without setting aside the sale—Bajaji v. Pirchand, 13 Bom. 221. A decree was obtained upon a mortgage against a Mitakshara father (mortgagor), but his sons were not made parties in the suit. The mortgaged property was purchased by the mortgagee who obtained possession in 1900. In 1911, the mortgagor's sons sued for accounts and for redemption. It was held that as the suit for redemption was not maintainable without first getting a declaration that the sale should be set aside, and the limitation for the latter suit was one year under this Article, the present suit was barred—Bhola v. Lala Kali Prasad, 1 P.L.J. 180, 34 I.C. 288, following Ram Taran v. Rameswar, 11 C.W.N. 1078. See Kishori v. Suraj, A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 386. Where the mortgagee purchases the mortgaged property at an execution sale held under a money decree of a third person, and the sale is liable to be set aside for some irregularity, a suit for redemption of the mortgagee is not maintainable before getting the sale cancelled by a suit under this Article—Malkarjun v. Narhari, 25 Bom. 337 (P.C.). Where the plaintiff's interest in a certain land has been sold under the Madras Rent Recovery Act, a suit for possession of the same cannot succeed without setting aside the sale, and would therefore fall within this Article—Ragavendra v. Karuppa, 20 Mad. 33.

283. "When the sale is confirmed":—If the sale is not confirmed, this Article does not apply—Narasimha v. Ramasami, 18 Mad. 478 (479).

An execution sale is confirmed when the Court makes an order under O. 21, r. 92; the language of r. 92 is clear on this point. Even if an appeal is preferred against the order of confirmation, the time nevertheless runs from the date of confirmation and not from the date of dismissal of the appeal—Mahomed Hossein v. Punundur, 11 Cal. 287 (292); Prosunno v. Kali Das, 19 Cal. 683 (686). But the law is otherwise in the case of revenue-sales. Thus, where the Board of Revenue discharged an order of the Commissioner, dated January, 1884, which had confirmed a sale by the Collector held in 1882, but afterwards in 1886, reversed its own order and revived that of the Commissioner, it was held that the confirmation of sale dated only from 1886, and that a suit to set aside the sale brought within one year from that date was not barred —Baijnath v. Ramgut, 23 Cal. 775 (P.C.). Where subsequent to the confirmation of a sale held under the Public Demands Recovery Act an application was made to the certificate-officer to set aside the sale, and it succeeded and the sale was set aside, and thereupon an appeal was taken to the Collector who reversed the above order and restored the sale, held that the period of limitation for a suit to set aside the sale ran from the date of the Collector's order in appeal, because the suit could be brought only after the sale was confirmed by the Appellate Court, and no suit to set aside the sale could have been brought between the date of the order of the certificate officer and the date of the order of the Collector—Hara Prasad v. Gopal Chandra, 31 C.W.N. 299 (305), 100 I.C. 997, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 315. A sale having been effected by order of a Deputy Collector, an appeal was made to the Collector who set aside the sale. The Commissioner, however, set aside the order of the Collector. Held that the sale did not become final and conclusive before the date of the Commissioner's order—Pran Nath v. Troylucko, 14 W.R. 284.

Under this Article, time begins to run from the date of the confirmation only in those cases in which such confirmation is required by the law under which the sale is held, and in other cases from the date on which the sale becomes otherwise final and conclusive by the law under which it is held. Thus, a sale held under the Bengal Patni Taluq Regulation (VIII of 1819) does not require confirmation; it becomes final and conclusive on payment of the full amount of purchase-money. Therefore time runs from the date of the payment of the purchase-money and not from the date of a superfluous order of confirmation, nor from the date of issue of a certificate of payment—Bhuban v. Girish, 13 C.L.J. 339, 10 I.C. 87. In the Madras Estates Land Act, there is no provision for the confirmation of a sale held under that Act; consequently the period of limitation is to be counted from the date when the sale 'would otherwise have become final and conclusive.' A sale under the Madras Estates Land Act becomes final 30 days after the date of sale, in the absence of any application made under sec. 131 of that Act to set aside the sale—Kamalammal v. Chokkalingam, 45 M.L.J. 840, A.I.R. 1924 Mdd. 278, 76 I.C. 840.

284. Effect of bar of limitation:—Though the right of a person to set aside the sale of a property (which is still in his possession) may be time-barred under this Article, still there is nothing to prevent him from setting up the invalidity of the sale as a defence to a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover possession of the property from him—Venkatachalapathi v. Robert Fischer, 30 Mad. 444; Mahadev v. Sadashiv, 45 Bom. 45 (50), 22 Bom. L.R. 1082, 59 I.C. 118. The Calcutta High Court, however, holds that such defence is not available—Ramsona v. Nabokumar, 16 C.W.N. 805, 13 C.L.J. 404, 10 I.C. 90.

13.—To alter or set aside a decision or order of a Civil Court in any proceeding other than a suit.	One year.	The date of the final decision or order in the case by a Court competent to determine it finally.

285. Application of Article:—This Article does not apply where the suit does not pray, and the plaintiff need not pray, for any relief by way of altering or setting aside a decision or order. But a suit which is virtually and substantially a suit to set aside a summary decision or order (e.g. a decision or order in a miscellaneous proceeding) is governed by this Article, even if the plaint, does not in terms seek to set aside such decision or order. The test is, whether the summary decision or order could be set up as a bar or impediment to the maintenance of the suit. If it could, then it must be said that the suit is brought in reality, though not in words, to set aside the summary decision or order—Durgaram v. Nundocoomar, 1 Shome, 26, cited in U. N. Mitra's Limitation, 5th Ed., p. 894. A suit for a declaration that the appointment, by the District Judge, of the defendant as a member of a Temple Committee is invalid, and for an injunction against his acting as such member, is in reality a suit to have the order of appointment set aside, and such a suit is governed by this Article and should be brought within one year from the date of the order sought to be impeached—Subramania v. Minakshi, 3 M.L.J. 128. Where the suit is framed as one for possession, but the plaintiff cannot get a decree for possession without first having the order set aside, the suit is really a suit to cancel the order and is governed by this Article—Kishori Lal v. Kuber, 33 All. 93, 7 A.L.J. 937, 7 I.C. 503. But if a Court passes an order releasing certain properties from attachment before judgment, a suit by the plaintiff for a declaration that the properties are liable to attachment is not governed by this Article, because it is not necessary for the plaintiff to set aside the order before he can sue for the declaration prayed for—Ramanamma v. Kamaraju, 41 Mad. 23, 39 I.C. 863. If the order is passed by a Court which is not competent to pass it, it is a nullity, and the plaintiff need not bring a suit under this Article for cancellation of the order, but may sue for a substantial relief—Ram Kishen v. Bhawani Das, 1 All. 333 (F.B.).

Where the order of the Court had already ceased to have any binding effect, no suit is necessary to be brought under this Article to set aside the order. Thus, during the course of an execution proceedings the Court decided that the attached property belonged to the defendant, that it was attachable in execution of a money-decree against the defendant, and that the claimant had no title to the property as his purchase of the property was invalid. Then the claimant deposited the decretal amount in Court and the property was released from attachment. Thereafter he instituted a suit for a declaration of his title to the property based on the ground that his purchase was valid and not void. Held that the suit did not fall under this Article; the decision of the Court ceased to have any valid and binding effect when the attachment was set aside by payment into Court of the decretal amount by the plaintiff; therefore it is quite unnecessary for him to have that order set aside, and the suit for a declaration is not barred by this Article—Lal Shaha v. Kado Mahto, 6 P.L.J. 85 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 1, 60 I.C. 849, 2 P.L.T. 345.

A suit to set aside a sale of ancestral property, made by the plaintiff's guardian after taking the sanction of the District Judge, and for recovery of plaintiff's share therein, is not a suit to set aside an order of a Civil Court, under Article 13 (because the sanction of the Judge is not an order), but is governed by Art. 144—Sikker v. Dulputty, 5 Cal. 363. A suit not to set aside an order but for an injunction restraining the defendant from enforcing the order, on the ground of error and illegality in the proceedings, is not governed by this Article—Dhuranidhar v. Agra Bank, 5 Cal. 86.

A certificate of heirship only confers the right of management of the property and does not determine the title to the property; therefore if the person to whom such a certificate has been refused seeks to recover the property on the basis of his title, he need not bring a suit under this Article to set aside the order granting the certificate for the possession of the property, and the suit will be governed by the rule of limitation respecting the possession of property—Bai Kashi v. Bai Jamna, 10 Bom. 449. If the party who fails to get a succession certificate seeks to set aside the order granting the certificate to the defendant, he must bring his suit within one year from the date of that order. But if he does not care to disturb that order, a suit to obtain possession of the property of the deceased upon proof of his title need not be brought within one year from the date of the order—Kalee Prosunno v. Koylash Monee, 8 W.R. 126. The same remarks apply also to orders passed under Act XIX of 1841. If a party seeks to set aside a summary order passed by a Civil Court under Act XIX of 1841, he must bring his suit within a year from the date of the Judge's order, but if he prefers to leave that order alone, he is not debarred from bringing a suit for possession upon proof of his title within the period prescribed for the institution of suits for immoveable property, viz., 12 years—Momeedunnissa v. Mahomed Ali, 1 W. R. 40; Lokenarain v. Rani Mayna Koer, 7 W.R. 199 (F.B.).

If a claim petition filed under O. XXI, r. 58 is allowed by the Court, a suit by the decree-holder to establish his right to attach the property is not a suit to set aside the decision of a Civil Court under this Article, but is covered by the specific provisions of Art. 11—Venugopal v. Venkatasubbiah, 39 Mad. 1196 (1198).

A Receiver appointed by the Court under the provisions of the Provincial Insolvency Act is not a Court; he is merely an officer of the Court; consequently this Article does not apply to a suit to set aside the Receiver's order—Basodi v. Lala Muhammed, 13 N.L.R. 210, 42 I.C. 799.

An order passed under Ch. VII of the Presidency S. C. C. Act cannot be regarded as a decision or order on the question of title. In a subsequent suit against any order under that chapter, there is no necessity to set aside or alter any such decision or order; consequently this Article has no application. The Article may be Art. 120 or 144—Hyder Ali v. Amiruddin, 56 M.L.J. 199, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 69 (72), 115 I.C. 504.

Though this Article in terms applies only to a "decision or order of a Civil Court in any proceeding other than a suit" it must be deemed to apply to decision or orders of a certificate officer also by virtue of sec. 65 (2), Bihar and Orissa Public Demands Recovery Act which says clearly that the provisions of the Limitation Act shall apply to all proceedings under that Act as if a certificate were a decree of Civil Court. Hence a suit under sec. 37, Public Demands Recovery Act to set aside an order of the Certificate Officer under sec. 35 of that Act will be governed by this Article—Mani v. Lokenath, A.I.R. 1950 Orissa 140.

286. Proceeding other than a suit:—All proceedings in execution are proceedings in suit; this Article is therefore inapplicable to a suit to set aside an order passed in such proceedings—Ayyasami v. Samiya, 8 Mad. 82; Sital v. Mohan, 3 O.C. 84; Official Receiver v. Veeraraghavan, 45 Mad. 70 (76) (dissenting from Kishori Lal v. Kuber Singh, 33 All. 93 where an execution proceeding was held to be a proceeding other than a suit). Orders passed in miscellaneous applications in the course of execution proceedings are not governed by Article 13. This Article relates to orders passed in disputes which did not begin with the filing of plaint in a suit, such as disputes initiated by applications under the Guardians and Wards Act, the Succession Certificate Act, and so on, such applications and the proceedings connected with such applications being not proceedings in suit—Shankur v. Mejo Mal, 23 All. 313 (P.C.). A suit by the plaintiff to recover the sale-proceeds paid to the defendant under an order of the Court passed under section 295, C. P. Code, 1882 (section 73, C. P. Code, 1908), is not governed by this Article, because the order for distribution is an order in the suit itself and therefore a proceeding in a suit—Shankur v. Mejo Mal, 23 All. 313 (P.C.); Vishnu v. Achut, 15 Bom. 438 (dissenting from Gauri v. Ram Ratan, 13 Cal. 159); Sivarama v. Subramaniya, 9 Mad. 57; Sohan Lal v. Boldeo 65 P. R. 1895.

287. Final decision of a competent Court:—"Order by a Court competent to determine it finally" means the final decision of a Court which has competent jurisdiction to decide the case finally, and does not include the order of an Appellate Court rejecting an appeal on the ground of want of jurisdiction—Oleunissa v. Buldeo, 7 W.R. 151.

14.—To set aside any act or order of an officer of Government in his official capacity, not herein otherwise expressly provided for.	One year.	The date of the act or order.

288. Void act or order:—The Article refers to orders and proceedings of a functionary to which by law is given a particular effect in favour of one person, or against another, subject in the regular course to further judicial proceedings to quash them or set them aside—Shivaji v. Collector of Ratnagiri, 11 Bom. 429. This Article does not apply to a case where the order of the officer is null and void. This Article refers to acts or orders done in the exercise of powers legally exercisable by the executive; in other words, the Article applies to those acts or orders which require to be set aside. It has no application where jurisdiction has been usurped, and the order is ultra vires. An order made without jurisdiction is a nullity and need not be set aside; to an order of this description Article 14 has no application—Peary Lal v. Secretary of State, 39 C.L.J. 454, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 913, 83 I.C. 446; Laxmanrao v. Shrinivas, 51 Bom. 830 (P.C.) A.I.R. 1927 P.C. 217 (223); Shivaji v. Collector, 11 Bom. 429; Dhanji v. Secretary of State 45 Bom. 920; Rasulkhan v. Secretary of State, 39 Bom. 494, 29 I. C. 490; Balvant v. Secretary of State, 29 Bom. 480 (489); Malkajeppa v. Secretary of State, 36 Bom. 325; Secretary of State v. Gulam Mahabub, 42 Mad. 673; Ananda Kishore v. Daiji Thakurain, 36 Cal. 726; Birbar Narayan v. Secretary of State, 14 C.L.J. 151, 11 I.C. 899; Wasif Ali Mirza v. Saradindu, 29 C.W.N. 839, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 953, 89 I.C. 193; Mallappa v. Tukko, I.L.R. (1937) Bom. 464, 39 Bom. L.R. 288, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 307; Bruusgoarel v. Secretary of State, 42 Bom. L. R. 532, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 294. Therefore where a Collector, who can, under sec. 48 of Bengal Act VI of 1870, only settle Chaukidari Chakran lands with the Zemindar within whose estate the lands lie, ordered the lands to be settled with the defendant who was the Zemindar of adjacent lands, and the plaintiff who was the proprietor of the estate in which the lands lay brought a suit for possession, it was held that this Article did not apply, as the order was an absolute nullity and need not be set aside—Bijoy Chand v. Kristo Mohini, 21 Cal. 626. The power of a Criminal Court with regard to property dealt with under section 524 of the Criminal Procedure Code is limited to making arrangements for the custody and production of the property. That section does not empower the Government to confiscate the property. Such an order of confiscation being illegal and without jurisdiction, the plaintiff's suit for recovery of possession is not barred by reason of his omission to institute a suit under this Article within one year of the order for the purpose of setting it aside—Secretary of State v. Lown Karan, 5 P.L.I. 321, 56 I.C. 507, 1 P.L.T. 451. An order passed by the requisitioning authority under R. 75A, Defence of India Rules (1939) without forming the opinion required by the rules or acquiring for purposes other than mentioned in the rule is null and void from its inception. This Article does not apply—Dinbai v. Dominion of India, 53 Bom. L.R. 229, A.I.R. 1951 Bom. 72.

Where a person who was entitled to the possession of a village, in pursuance of an order of the Collector, was put into possession of a wrong village, by reason of a mistake having been made as to the village mentioned in the order, the act done under a mistake of fact was a nullity, and a suit by the plaintiff for possession of the right village was not governed by this Article—Maharaja of Vijianagram v. Satrucherla, 30 Mad. 280. Where land belonging to the plaintiff was entered as Government waste land in the Revenue Survey Register by order of the Revenue Commissioner who afterwards gave the land to the defendant, proporting to act under section 37, Bombay Land Revenue Code, a suit by the plaintiff to recover possession was not governed by this Article, as the order was ultra vires (because sec. 37 does not give power to dispose of lands of private individuals) and the plaintiff was not bound to set it aside—Surannanna v. Secretary of State, 24 Bom. 435. Where a Collector passes an order under section 37 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code with reference to land which is prima facie the property of a private individual, and not of the Government, the order is a nullity, because sec. 37 of the Land Revenue Code does not give power to deal with the lands of private individuals. The Collector is acting ultra vires and there is no occasion for this Article to apply—Malkajeppa v. Secretary of State, 36 Bom. 325, 15 I.C. 517. Where the relief sought is primarily a declaration that the plaintiffs are entitled to succeed a deceased Hindu female owner as her next reversioners, and where for such a declaration the setting aside of the order of a Sub-Divisional officer would not be necessary, Article 14 has no application, even though the plaint may contain a prayer for the setting aside of the order of the Sub-Divisional Officer—Haro Mandol v. Dhiranath, 7 P.L.T. 67, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 784, 90 I.C. 691. Where the notice required under sec. 10 of the Bengal Act VII of 1880 (Public Demands Recovery Act) was not served, and in execution of the certificate the judgment-debtor's property was sold, it was held that the whole of the proceedings which resulted in the sale was invalid and that a suit to set aside such a sale did not come under this Article but was governed by Art. 120—Saroda v. Kisto, 1 C.W.N. 516. A Collector in a partition proceeding under the Bengal Estates Partition Act (VIII of 1876) can only adopt one of two courses, if an objection is taken that a certain plot of land does not appertain to the estate under partition; he may either strike off the partition, or proceed with it treating the disputed land as part of the estate. So where a Collector merely passed an order excluding the disputed lands from the partition, the order of the Collector was ultra vires, and therefore a nullity, and a suit brought by the plaintiff for a declaration of his right to those lands was not subject to the limitation under Art. 14—Alimuddin v. Ishan, 33 Cal. 693. Where a Collector purporting to act under the Bengal Estates Partition Act (V of 1897) passed an order refusing to put a party to a partition in possession of the land allotted to him, held that the order was one for which there was no provision of the law, and consequently Article 14 did not apply to a suit to set aside the order and recover the land—Wasif Ali Mirza v. Saradindu, 29 C.W.N. 839, A.I.R. 1925 Col. 953. A temporary alienation of a portion of the inam lands by a trustee, although it is beyond the power of the trustee, does not amount to a violation of the conditions of the grant, and does not justify an order of resumption of the grant by the Government. Such an order of resumption is a nullity and does not require to be set aside under this Article, and a suit by the trustee for a declaration that the resumption is invalid and for recovery of possession of the inam property from the Government would be governed by Art. 144—Secretary of State v. Gulam Mahabub, 42 Mad. 673, 51 I.C. 366. Where the order of the Collector, not being referable to any statutory provision or any rule which has the force of law, is ultra vires, the plaintiff need not bring a suit for setting aside the Collector's order, but may sue for a declaration or other relief, and this Article does not apply—Patdaya v. Secretary of State, 48 Bom. 61, 26 Bom. L. R. 1160, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 273, 82 I.C. 577.

An order by which a land belonging to the plaintiffs was given by the Collector to others without any warrant of law, is an absolute nullity, and need not be set aside under this Article. The plaintiffs can bring a suit for possession of the land—Rajani Kant v. Ram Dulal, 17 C.W.N. 55, 17 I.C. 881.

289. Suits under this Article:—Where the act of the Government in respect of which a declaration or injunction is sought is an act which is illegal or ultra vires and the declaration is sought on that basis, Article 14 does not apply. But if the ground of such a suit is not that the act of Government was ultra vires or illegal, but a mere irregularity which does not vitiate the main proceedings but merely relates to some question of detail (such as the exact amount to be collected under the Madras Revenue Recovery Act) or something of that kind, which does not make the proceedings ultra vires, Article 14 will apply—Thiruvenkatacharyulu v. Secretary of State, 57 Mad. 501, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 147 (154), 66 M.L.J. 715; Sadhu Singh v. Chandra Singh, A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 108. This Article applies only to orders which require to be set aside in a regular suit before any relief inconsistent with the order can be obtained—Bhopisketti v. Bhat, 42 Bom.L.R. 223, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 188. In considering the applicability of this Article one has to look to the real object of the suit. If the plaint as a whole is really with regard to the title to the land and does not seek to set aside any order of the Revenue Court, this Article has no application—Kunjbehari v. Buni, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 50, 190 I.C. 817. Where the act or order of the Government officer is not a nullity, but is binding on the plaintiff unless and until it is set aside so that it is necessary for the plaintiff to get rid of that order before he can obtain a certain relief, a suit by the plaintiff to obtain that relief, even though it is framed not as a suit to set aside the order but as a suit for possession or for declaration, would be governed by this Article—Gangu v. Mahanraj, 15 Lah. 389 (F.B.), 149 I.C. 661, 36 P.L.R. 337, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 384; Province of Sind v. Kalomal, I.L.R. (1943) Kar. 404, A.I.R. 1944 Sind 44, 210 I.C. 513. Thus, a suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to hold the land free of the assessment and for recovery of the assessment collected by the Government, is governed by this Article, as the plaintiff is not entitled to the declaration without getting the Collector's order set aside—Subanna v. Secretary of State, 1915 M.W.N. 915, 31 I.C. 267. So also, where a Municipal Corporation sues for possession of land resumed by Government under an agreement on the ground that it was not resumed for public purpose, it must have the impedement of the order resuming the land removed within one year under this Article. It cannot get round the act of the Government resuming the land by contending that the suit is not one for setting aside the Official act, but for recovery of possession —Municipal Corporation, Karachi v. Province of Sind, A.I.R. 1947 Sind 69, 230 I.C. 311. In a partition proceeding before the Collector under the Estates Partition Act, the plaintiff contended that certain land measured as part of the estate under partition was not part of the estate but appertained to his howla. The Revenue authorities enquired into his contention under sec. 116 of the Act and decided it against him. More than a year afterwards, the plaintiff brought a suit for a declaration that the disputed land was part of his howla. Held that as the Revenue authorities had jurisdiction to enquire into his plea, the plaintiff was bound by their order; and the present suit being in effect a suit to set aside that order should have been brought within one year from the date of the order, as provided by this Article—Parbati v. Raj Mohan, 29 Cal. 367. Certain Bhagdari lands were lost by diluvion. The Commissioner ordered them to be treated as Government waste lands. Subsequently, the submerged lands were reformed by alluvion. The occupants filled a suit claiming them as part of their holdings. Held that the suit was governed by this Article and must be brought within one year of the date of the Commissioner's order—Surajlal v. Secretary of State, 28 Bom.L.R. 641, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 467, 95 I.C. 950. A suit for cancellation or modification of rent settled by a Settlement Officer having jurisdiction to settle the rent, is governed by this Article, although the suit is in the guise of one for the modification of the certificate of rent granted by the officer—Ashutosh v. Abdul, 28 Cal. 676. A suit for a declaration that the order of the Commissioner under sec. 178 of the Bombay District Municipalities Act is illegal, is governed by the one year's rule prescribed by Article 14, and time runs from the date of the Commissioner's order—Manibhai v. Nadiad City Municipality, 51 Bom. 105, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 55, 100 I.C. 98. Where on an application by the plaintiff for redemption under the Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act (II of 1913) the Collector passed an order that the mortgage had ceased to exist and redemption was barred, a suit by the plaintiff to redeem the mortgage is eventually a suit to set aside the Collector's order and falls under Article 14; therefore it is barred if brought more than a year after the date of the Collector's order—Kaura v. Ram Chand, 6 Lah. 206, 26 P.L.R. 383, 88 I.C. 945. Where an auction-purchaser at an execution sale held by a Collector, which was subsequently ordered to be set aside, brought a suit for a declaration that the order seting aside the sale be declared ineffectual, and for possession of the property, it was held that the suit was in effect one to set aside the order, though there were not the precise words in the prayer, and that it was governed by Art. 14—Raghunath v. Kaniz, 24 All. 467. A suit under sec. 83 of the C. P. Land Revenue Act for the amendment of settlement entries is not a suit for a declaration that the entries are erroneous but a suit for nullifying something which an officer of Government has done, and is governed by Article 14 and not by Article 120—Onkar Lal v. Shaligram, 5 N.L.J. 199, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 76. A suit for possession of land on the ground that it was plaintiff's property and that the grant of a lease thereof by the Collector to the defendant for building purposes under section 37 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code was not proper, is governed by this Article, because the Collector's order leasing the land to the defendant is binding on the plaintiff unless it is set aside— Nagu v. Salu, 15 Bom. 424.

290. Suits not under this Article:—This Article has no application when it is not necessary for the plaintiff to set aside the act or order in order to obtain the relief which he claims—Bimalendu v. Shebaits of Deity Gopal Deb, I.L.R. (1945) 1 Cal. 466, 49 C.W.N. 117, 80 C.L.J. 252, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 480; Dhani v. Bishun, 20 P.L.T. 136, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 524, 178 I.C. 633. So where a plaintiff does not ask to set aside any act or order of an officer of Government in his official capacity but only seeks a declaration that his dismissal was no dismissal in the eye of law, this Article has no application—Abdul v. Secy. of State, 19 Luck. 163, 1943 O.W.N. 118, A.I.R. 1943 Oudh 368, 207 I.C. 178.

A suit for a declaration that an order of dismissal from service passed against the plaintiff, a Government servant, is wrongful, illegal and ultra vires with a claim for arrears of pay is governed by Article 120 and not by this Article—Jagdish v. U. P. Government, A.I.R. 1956 All. 114. But a suit lies under this Article for a declaration that the distinction of the Order of British India which was a military honour conferred on the plaintiff has been unlawfully taken away from him by the Government and that he is entitled to the award of monetary allowance attached to that distinction —Chandra Van v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1956 Bom. 601.

If the act or order of the Government officer is a mere nullity, so that no suit is necessary to set it aside (Note 288 above) and the suit is one for declaration of the plaintiff's proprietary right to a land and for possession, Art. 14 has no application Such a suit is not barred if not brought within one year of the date of the order—Balvant v. Secy. of State, 29 Bom. 480 (488, 489); Agin Bindh v. Mohan Bikram, 30 Cal. 20 (27). Thus, a suit under section 109 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for a declaration that an undisputed entry in the Khawati and Khatian is erroneous does not fall under this Article—Agin Bindh v. Mohan Bikram, supra. Art. 14 does not apply to an order of enhanced assessment which is a nullity or in excess of authority —Secy. of State v. Faredoom, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 434, 36 Bom.L.R. 761.

Where the plaintiff was not a party to the order of the Collector passed under sec. 116 of the Bengal Estates Partition Act, he will not be affected by the order, and is not bound to set it aside by a suit brought under this Article; he can sue for possession of the land—Laloo Singh v. Purna Chander, 24 Cal. 149. Where the Revenue Officer rejected the plaintiff's application for partition of a shamilat, a suit for a declaration of his title to a share therein is governed by Art. 120. As the Revenue Officer had no jurisdiction to decide the question of title, and as this suit is not one for setting aside his order, Art. 14 is not applicable—Kalu Khan v. Umda, 47 P.R. 116, 34 I.C. 546, 150 P.L.R. 1916.

This Article does not apply if the plaintiff's claim is independent of the order of the Government officer. Thus, where a Commissioner passed an order directing payment of a cash allowance (toda giras hak) to the 1st defendant, and the plaintiff thereupon brought a suit to recover his share of the allowance, more than one year from the date of the order, the suit was not barred, as the plaintiff's claim was entirely independent of the order of the Commissioner. It is not necessary for him to set aside the order so long as he gets his share. It is a matter of indifference to him if the Commissioner had directed payment in the first instance to the 1st defendant or to any other person—Dolatsingh v. Joravarsingh, 33 Bom.L.R. 783, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 474 (478), 133 I.C. 851.

This Article does not govern a suit for possession against another person to whom Sanad under sec. 133 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code has been granted, as it is not necessary for such a person to obtain an order setting aside that sanad before he can obtain an order for recovery of possession as the order granting sanad is not an act or order of a Government Officer within the meaning of this Article—Narbheramji v. Vivekramji, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 564, 41 Bom.L.R. 939, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 425.

The Civil Court has no power to set aside an order passed by the Revenue Authorities under the Land Registration Act; therefore no suit lies in a Civil Court to set aside such order. If, however, a suit is brought to have such order set aside and for a declaration of the plaintiff's right and title to a certain property, the prayer to have the order set aside must be treated as a surplusage, and the suit is one simply for a declaration of the plaintiff's title in respect of the property, and therefore outside the scope of this Article—Luchmon Sahai v. Kanchun, 10 Cal. 525. A suit which is essentially one for declaration of title under sec. 66 (2), C.P. Land Revenue Act, though its effect is to set aside an order passed by a Settlement officer, does not come within the purview of Art. 14, but falls under Art. 120—Rao Sardarsingh v. Rao Vishalsingh, 26 N.L.R. 94, A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 92 (95), 120 I.C. 321.

Where an application for redemption of land under the Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act is dismissed by the Assistant Collector not on the merits but on the ground that the dispute is of a complicated nature and that parties should have recourse to the Civil Court, the substantive part of the order is not against the applicant and he need not, therefore, sue to set it aside. In such circumstances this Article is inapplicable. Accordingly a suit brought by the applicant for possession of the land by redemption more than one year after the date of the order of the Assistant Collector, is not barred by this Article—Prabhu v. Chandan, 40 P.L.R. 245, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 512, 181 I.C. 63.

In a partition proceeding under the Bengal Estates Partition Act a dispute arose as to whether certain plots of land were included in the property to be partitioned, and upon enquiry the Collector passed an order under sec. 115 of that Act, directing that the partition proceedings be struck off. Four years after, the plaintiffs brought a suit for possession of certain plots of land on declaration of title thereto. Held that the suit was not governed by this Article, as it was not a suit to set aside the order of the Collector but to obtain possession of certain lands. The order of the Collector striking off the partition proceedings until the parties had had the matter in dispute between them decided by a Court could not be regarded as in any way standing in the way of the plaintiffs' obtaining the relief which they claim in the suit, and it was therefore unnecessary for the plaintiffs to have that order set aside—Rajchandra v. Faizuddin, 32 Cal. 716. Where a property which did not fall in any way within the estate which was being partitioned under the Bengal Estates Partition Act 1897, was allotted to one of the persons who was a party to the partition proceedings, the owner of that property can bring a suit for declaration of his title and if necessary for recovery of possession, within 12 years. Article 14 cannot apply. In such a case there is no act or order of an officer of Government in his official capacity. Moreover, it matters not whether the plaintiff in such a suit was a party to the partition proceedings or not—Ajodhya Prasad v. Ram Khelawan, 6 Pat. 73, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 421, 96 I.C. 632. See also Kedar Nath v. Naresh Chandra, 52 C.L.J. 247, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 29 (32), 130 I.C. 232 (following 6 Pat. 73 and 5Pat 735 P.C. cited below); Rao Sardar Singh v. Rao Vishal Singh, 26 N.L.R. 94, A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 92, 120 I.C. 321. The plaintiff attempted to take possession of certain lands allotted to him in batwara proceedings (under the Bengal Estates Partition Act, 1897) but he was resisted by the defendant who was in possession of those lands, and this led to criminal proceedings in the Magistrate's Court. The plaintiff was referred to assert his right in the Civil Court and he brought a suit for possession of those lands. Held that the suit did not fall under this Article, as it was not a suit to set aside any order of the Revenue Officer (on the other hand it was a suit based on the order of the Revenue Officer alloting certain lands to the plaintiff). It was simply an action in ejectment, its main purpose being to recover possession of certain lands allotted to the plaintiff—Dhakeshwar v. Gulab Koer, 5 Pat. 735 (P.C.), 7 P.L.T. 483, A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 60, 97 I.C. 217. Where during partition proceedings under Bengal Estates Partition Act an objection is disposed of without deciding the real point at issue and a suit for declaration is filed, this Article has no application—Gopaldas v. Satindra, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 749.

This Article does not apply to a suit to set aside an order of mutation and for possession of immoveable property brought less than eight years after the order of mutation and within twelve years of the death of the last owner—Asa Ram v. Fatima, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 135, 183 I.C. 853. So also, this Article has no application to a suit filed under sec. 36, proviso (3) of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, for a declaration that the plaintiff is the nearest heir of the deceased last holder of a watan as against the defendant who has been recognised by the Government as the representative watandar without any express prayer for setting aside the order of the Collector entering the defendant's name as the successor to the watan—Basangowda v. Fakirgowda, I L.R. (1939) Bom. 123, 40 Bom.L.R. 1288, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 56.

The Article applies to acts or orders done in the exercise of powers legally exercisable by the Executive. It has no application in cases where jurisdiction has been usurped or the order was passed not by an officer of Government but by the Ruler himself—Chintamoni v. Paika, I.L.R. 1956 Cut. 174, A.I.R. 1956 Orissa 136. See also Bhura v. Ghandu, I.L.R. 1956 Pepsu 33.

291. Act or order of Government officer:—A Judge exercising his judicial functions is a Civil Court, and not a Government Officer acting in his official capacity within the meaning of Art. 14—Gobindabala v. Ganu, 10 Bom.L.R. 749. The words "act" or 'order' means an 'act' or 'order' made by an officer of Government in his official capacity, purporting to act under the law, which is of a quasi-judicial character—Bruusgaard v. Secy. of State, 42 Bom.L.R. 532, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 294; Satyanarayana v. Rayalamma, (1943) 1 M.L.J. 386, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 501, 1943 M.W.N. 445. The 'act' is not that of an executive officer carrying out the will of the land-holder, acting as his agent and permitting his department to be used for the purpose of conducting sale—Satyandrayana v. Rayalamma, supra. Where a statutory duty viz., the preparation and submission of a liquidation scheme in pursuance of sec. 17 (1) of the Sind Incumbered Estates Act, is performed it is neither an 'act' or 'order' within the meaning of this Article—Manager, Encumbered Estates in Sind v. Kanyalal, I.L.R. (1947) Kar. 168, A.I.R. 1948 Sind 14. Where an objection under sec. 103A of the Bengal Tenancy Act, to an entry in the Draft Record of Rights has been rejected by the Revenue Officer, such rejection has no finality and cannot be said to be an order of a Government Officer within the meaning of this Article—Ram Golam v. Bishnu, 11 C.W.N. 48. So also, an order of the Collector under sec. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act is temporary or provisional order, and no finality is given to it. The order will ipso facto be vacated whenever a Civil Court pronounces on the rights of the contending parties, and need not be set aside within one year under this Article—Vannisami v. Chellasami, 1921 M.W.N. 193, 62 I.C. 276. Certain lands in a village were held on khoti tenure by the defendants and the plaintiffs were the khots of the village. A Survey Settlement Officer decided in 1882 that the lands held by the defendants were dhara lands of the defendants and in 1889 an entry to that effect was made in the Survey Register. Meanwhile in 1887 the plaintiffs brought the present suit for a declaration that the lands in dispute were their khoti lands. Held, that the decision of the Survey Settlement Officer in 1882 was not an order, because sec. 21 of the Khoti Settlement Act (Bombay Act I of 1880) does not contemplate an "order" being made by the Survey Officer between the parties. Even if the framing of the register be regarded as an 'act' of the Survey Officer, that act was not done until 1889, nearly two years after the suit. The suit is not therefore affected by Article 14 of the Limitation Act. It falls under Article 120 and is not barred, being brought within six years from 1882—Faki v. Sajnak, 18 Bom. 244.

The following persons are officers of Government acting in official capacity:—Collector holding proceedings under the Bengal Estates Partition Act, see Parbati v. Raj Mohan, 29 Cal. 367; Collector acting under the Bombay Land Revenue Code, see Nagu v. Salu, 15 Bom. 424; Commissioner, see Manibhai v. Nadiad City Municipality, 51 Bom. 105; Settlement Officer, see Ashutosh v. Abdul, 28 Cal. 676; Manager under the Sind Encumbered Estates Act, see Sufan v. Khem Chand, 124 I.C. 369, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 150. Assistant Collector of customs under the Sea Customs Act, see Bruusgaard v. Secy of State, 42 Bom.L.R. 532, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 294, 191 I.C. 867.

292. When time runs:—Time runs from the date of the order, and not from the date of the final order in appeal confirming the original order—Ctaturbhuj v. Secretary of State, 22 Bom.L.R. 146, 55 I.C. 591. On the 6th May 1911 the Collector ordered that a survey number belonging to the plaintiff be forfeited to Government for arrears due on the khata. The plaintiff appealed to the Commissioner against this order, but the appeal being dismissed, the plaintiff filed a suit on the 14th October, 1915 to get the order of forfeiture set aside. It was contended that the time taken up in appealing to the Commissioner be excluded in reckoning the period of limitation. Held, overruling the contention, that the suit was barred by limitation as it was not brought within one year from the date of the Collector's order of forfeiture—Ganesh v. Secretary of State, 44 Bom. 451, 57 I.C. 587.

15.—Against Government to set aside any attachment, lease or transfer of immoveable property by the revenue authorities for arrears of Government revenue.	One year.	When the attachment, lease or transfer is made.

292A. When a ghatwal becomes a defaulter, the Government can transfer the tenure to some other person. A suit to set aside the transfer in such a case is governed by this Article—Chittra Narain v. Assistant Commissioner, 14 W.R. 203.

16.—Against Government to recover money paid under protest in satisfaction of a claim made by the revenue-authorities on account of arrears of revenue or on account of demands recoverable as such arears.	One year.	When the payment is made.

293. Application of Article:—Where penal assessment was levied for unauthorised occupation of Government land, and this amount had been paid under coercion, a suit to recover the amount so paid would be subject to the one year's rule of limitation under Art. 14 or Art. 16—Meera v. Secretary of State, 13 M.L.J. 269. A suit for refund of a certain amount paid as village service cess (under sec. 27 Madras Proprietary Estates Village Service Act, II of 1894) by the plaintiff under protest is governed by this Article—Gopalaswami v. Secretary of State, 61 M.L.J. 754, 132 I.C. 130, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 525 (529).

Where a person pays water-cess under protest on a demand being made by the Government for alleged unauthorised use of water belonging to Government, and then brings a suit for the recovery of the water cess illegally levied by the Government, the suit does not fall under sec. 59 of the Madras Revenue Recovery Act, because the mere demand of the water-cess by the Government does not amount to a proceeding under that Act, and the person making the payment cannot be said to be a person 'aggrieved by a proceeding' within the meaning of sec. 59 of that Act. The suit falls under Article 16 of the Limitation Act.—Secretary of State v. Venkataratnam, 46 Mad 488 (501, 502), 45 M L.J. 12, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 652 (dissenting from Orr v. Secretary of State, 23 Mad. 571); Secy. of State v. Nagaraja, 44 M.L.J. 645, 74 I.C. 281, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 665; Ravula Vengala Reddi v. Secy. of State, 46 Mad. 502 (Footnote); Puchalapalli Pichi Reddi v. Secretary of State, 70 I.C. 884, 46 Mad. 503 (Footnote); Rawal Nagamma v. Secretary of State, 1913 M.W.N. 75, 18 I.C. 699; Secretary of State v. Ranganayakamma, 12 L.W. 334, 59 I.C. 98; Pitchayya v. Secretary of State, 21 L. W. 155, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 474; Thiruvenkatacharyulu v. Secretary of State, 57 Mad. 501, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 147 (153).

Actual formal protest is not necessary every time the payment is made. An objection to the Collector against payment of Revenue assessment, followed by a fruitless appeal to the Commissioner, would constitute sufficient protest; and subsequent payments, though made without any further protest, would fall within the description of "money paid under protest"—Kebul Ram v. Government, 5 W.R. 47 (per Seton-Kerr. J.). But. Macpherson, J. held in this case that the subsequent payments did not amount to payments made under protest.

Where a person has paid several years' assessment under protest, he can only recover the payment for the last of such years under this Article—Bhujang v. Collector of Belgaum, 11 B H.C.R. 1; Kebul Ram v. Government, 5 W.R. 47; Secretary of State v. Ranganayakamma, 12 L.W. 334, 59 I.C. 98. But he may sue to set aside the order of the Collector within six years under Article 120—Kebul Ram v. Government, supra; or he can bring a suit to establish his right to hold the land free of assessment, within 12 years from the time when his right was first interfered with—Bhujang v. Collector, supra.

'Recoverable as such arrears':—Article 16 requires for its application that the demand, if not for arrears of revenue, should be recoverable as such arrears. To show that it is recoverable as a 'public demand' is not to the point. Rents "settled" by Revenue Authorities under sec. 104 of the Bengal Tenancy Act are not arrears of revenue and unless it can be shown that by some enactment they have been made to come under that description or have been made recoverable as arrears of revenue, this Article cannot be applied to them—Secy. of State v. Midnapore Zemindary Co., Ltd., 61 I.A. 281, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 769, 66 C.L.J. 145, 41 C.W.N. 1061, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 834, A.I.R. 1937 P.C. 244; 1957 Raj. 396.

17.—Against Government for compensation for land acquired for public purposes.	One year.	The date of determining the amount of the compensation.

294. Article 17 has no application where the amount of compensation has not been determined. Where the Collector refuses to award any compensation for the land acquired, on the ground that the plaintiff is not entitled to any compensation, a suit to recover compensation would be governed by Art. 120 and not by this Article—Rameswar Singh v. Secretary of State, 34 Cal. 470. This Article is confined to a suit against Government; it does not apply to a suit by a person who is entitled to compensation awarded by Government against a person who has wrongfully received it —Nund Lal v. Mir Abu, 5 Cal. 597. Article 62 would govern such a suit.

Where the Government has acquired the land and has paid the money to one who was apparently entitled to it a suit by a person who has also got interest in the land and claims the money paid by the Government is governed by Art. 120, and not by Art. 17, or Art. 62—Soma Singh v. Jaigobind Pande, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 42.

The old Land Acquisition Act X of 1870 did not provide for or contemplate an award for compensation being enforced against the Collector by execution proceedings, and there was no general law which enabled a Civil Court to enforce the award by means of execution proceedings. The ordinary mode of enforcing an award was by a suit against the Collector and such suit was governed by Art. 17 of the Limitation Act—Nilkanth v. Collector of Thana, 22 Bom. 802 (807) (F.B.).

18.—Like suit for compensation when the acquisition is not completed.	One year.	The date of the refusal to complete.

295. Article 18 applies to suits for compensation for damages suffered by the owner by reason of the Government's withdrawing from the acquisition (see section 48 of the Land Acquisition Act I of 1894). But where the acquisition has been completed, and the Collector refuses to award any compensation, a suit to recover compensation is governed by Art. 120—Romeswar v. Secretary of State, 34 Cal. 470. The plaintiffs' land was taken by the Government for railway purposes and the Collector took possession of it before an award was made. He, however, refused to pass an award in as much as he held that the land was Government land and that in consequence no compensation was payable to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs brought a suit for declaration of title, and for possession or in the alternative for damages for the wrongful refusal of the Collector to make an award, stating the amount of compensation payable to them. Held that as the land had already vested in the Government, the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover possession or to a declaration of title; but that they were entitled to claim damages for breach of statutory duty on the Collector's part (viz., refusal to make an award), the measure of damages being such compensation as would have been recovered by the plaintiffs if the Collector had made an award, and the suit was governed by Article 120. Article 18 which applies to a suit for compensation when the acquisition is not completed, could not apply, as in this case the acquisition had been completed in this sense that the property had absolutely vested in the Government—Mantharavadi v. Secretary of State, 27 Mad. 535.

19.—For compensation for false imprisonment.	One year.	When the imprisonment ends.

296. Imprisonment:—Imprisonment amounts to total restraint of liberty for some period however short. A partial restraint as the prevention from going in one direction or in all directions but one, will not constitute an imprisonment—Bird

v. Jones, (1845) 7 Q.B. 742. Nothing short of actual detention and complete loss of freedom will support an action for false imprisonment. A person who is released on bail can no longer be regarded as under imprisonment so long as he is on bail; his imprisonment ceases to run from the date on which he was liberated on bail. And a suit for compensation for false imprisonment must be brought within one year of such release—Mahammad Yusufuddin v. Secretary of State, 30 Cal. 872 (P.C.).

In a case of false imprisonment, the question arises, who is liable for the imprisonment?—the party who takes out the warrant, or the Court which issues the warrant? The principle is that when a Court acts within its jurisdiction, but erroneously, then the party who takes out the warrant is not liable; but when the Court has no jurisdiction to issue the warrant, the whole proceeding is coram non judice, and the party is liable. In this case, two officers of the Court by mistake, inspite of the decree having been already completely satisfied, issued a certificate of non-payment of the judgment-debt and a writ of arrest of the judgment-debtor. The Court has jurisdiction over the matter; and therefore the liability fell upon the two officers (and consequently upon the Court), because the proceedings which ended in the wrongful arrest arose from some fault on their part—Fisher v. Pearse, 9 Bom. 1.

A suit for damages for false imprisonment or malicious prosecution, even though it is brought against several joint tort-feasors is governed by the one year's rule under Article 19 or 23. The fact that there are several tort-feasors and that there was a conspiracy between them does not constitute a distinct cause of action by itself so as to take the case out of this Article. A tort when committed by several individuals is not different from the same tort committed by a single individual. A malicious prosecution is a malicious prosecution, whether it is brought about by one person or by more. The combination in such cases may be an element of aggravation in the assessment of damages, but does not make it a different tort. The Legislature has made a general provision that suits for damages for false imprisonment or malicious prosecution must be brought within a certain period, and no distinction is made in respect of the number of persons by whom the wrong may have been perpetrated—Weston v. Peary Mohan Das, 40 Cal. 898 (949, 951, 952), 18 C.W.N. 185.

Limitation runs from the time when the imprisonment ends, and not from the date of imprisonment, as erroneously remarked by Scott, J. in Fisher v. Pearse, 9 Bom. 1 (at p. 9).

20.—By executors, administrators or representatives under the Legal Representatives' Suits Act, 1855 (XII of 1855).	One year.	The date of the death of the person wronged.
21.—By executors, administrators or representatives under the Indian Fatal Accidents Act, 1855 (XIII of 1855).	One year.	The date of the death of the person killed.

297. The word 'representative' in this Article and in Act XIII of 1855 does not mean only executors or administrators but includes all or any of the persons (e.g., widow, children) for whose benefit a suit may be brought under that Act, and it makes no difference whether the deceased was a European or a Eurasian—Johnson v. Madras Railway Company, 28 Mad. 479 (481).

22.—For compensation for any other injury to the person.	One year.	When the injury is committed.

298. This Article has no application to proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Act, because such proceedings are not treated as suits, and also because that Act makes special provisions for limitation—Hagan v. Gafur, 58 Bom. 128, 35 Bom.L.R. 1142, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 28 (29), 149 I.C. 247.

The word 'injury' in this Article has a wider connotation than physical hurt. Assault even though it causes no hurt is an offence to the human body, and wrongful obstruction to a person by preventing him from entering into a temple is an 'injury' to his person —Manikyaswami v. Lakamma, 35 L.W. 392, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 432, 138 I.C. 84. According to the Allahabad High Court injury to person in this Article means physical injury to the plaintiff—Sobha v. Tika, 58 All. 903, 1936 A L.J. 574, A.I.R. 1936 All. 454.

A suit for damages or compensation for injury caused to a person's reputation and for mental pain arising out of an assault is governed by Art. 22 and not by Art. 36, because the cause of action is the injury to the person caused by the assault, and the insult arising from assault does not constitute a separate cause of action. Assault itself is the cause of action, though damages may be awarded for the resulting insult—Arhat v. Baldeo, 5 I.C. 124 (125). A suit for damages for personal injury caused by throwing sulphuric acid on the face is governed by this Article and not by Article 36, because the case is specially provided for by Article 22. Time begins to run from the date of the injurious act done, and the continuance of the effect up to a later time does not make the wrong a continuing wrong giving rise to a continuous cause of action under sec. 23; sec. 24 also would not extend the period, because the cause of action arose as soon as the sulphuric acid was thrown, irrespective of any subsequent specific injury—Abdulla v. Abdulla, 25 Bom.L.R. 1333, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 290, 84 I.C. 796.

23.—For compensation for a malicious prosecution.	One year.	When the plaintiff is acquitted, or the prosecution is otherwise terminated.

See Watson v. Peary Mohan, 40 Cal. 898 cited under Art. 19.

299. Prosecution:—The word 'prosecution' means in strict technical language a proceeding either by way of indictment or information of the Criminal Court in order to put an offender on his trial, the exhibition of a criminal charge against a person before a Court of justice, and in general language the institution and carying on of legal proceedings against a person (Murray's English Dictionary). The word 'prosecution' has not been defined in any statutory enactment. It is a word of very wide significance and does not merely mean an actual trial or an inquiry which may result in a conviction and the imposition of imprisonment and fine. An application in revision under section 436, Cr. P. Code for ordering a further inquiry or retrial is a prosecution—Madan Mohan v. Ram Sunder, 52 All. 553, 1930 A.L.J. 885, A.I.R. 1930 All. 326 (327), 125 I.C. 464. The word 'prosecution' in this Article is used in the general and not in the technical sense. It is used in a wider sense than a trial and includes criminal proceedings by way of appeal or revision before a District Magistrate, a Sessions Court or a High Court—Sheikh Mehtab v. Bolaji, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 358, 1946 N.L.J. 113, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 46, 221 I.C. 666. Malicious prosecution means the setting of the machinery of the criminal law in motion without reasonable or probable cause—Bishun Narain v. Phulman, 19 C.W.N. 935, 27 I.C. 449. The word "prosecution" in this Article relates to a case where the criminal law is set in motion. This Article has no application to a suit filed for damages for maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause presenting the insolvency petition—Nagappa v. Trojan & Co., I.L.R. (1949) Mad. 29, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 173, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 446. An application for binding down a person under sec. 107, Cr. P. Code amounts to a prosecution—Md. Nizullah v. Jai Ram, 41 All. 503, 50 I.C. 140; Crowdy v. Reilly, 17 C.W.N. 554, 18 I.C. 737. A statement made to the Police against the plaintiff, which is afterwards found to be false, in consequence of which no action is taken by the Magistrate, is not a ground for an action for malicious prosecution but may constitute libel or slander—Ishri v. Muhammad, 24 All. 368; Nagendra v. Basanta, 57 Cal. 25, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 392, 125 I.C. 667; Harnamsingh v. Doolasingh, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 709. When proceedings are taken against a person under the Bengal Disorderly Houses Act, it cannot be said that he has been prosecuted; therefore a suit for damages in respect of the proceedings is not one for malicious prosecution under this Article. The suit falls under Article 24—Dhirajbala v. Gopalchandra, 18 C.L.J. 352, 20 I.C. 768.

Suit against police-officer:—A suit against a police-inspector for damages for malicious prosecution falls under this Article and is not barred if brought within one year as prescribed herein. Section 42 of the Police Act (V of 1861) which provides a period of three months must be deemed to have been repealed by the general law of limitation contained in the Limitation Act, and ceases to be operative —Muhammad Sharif v. Nasir Ali, 1930 A.L.J. 1443, A.I.R. 1930 All. 742 (744).

Suit against Municipality:—An action against the municipality for malicious prosecution falls under sec. 206 of the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act and this Article has no application to such a suit as sec. 206 of the Act is a specific section which covers the case on the point of limitation—Parvetappa v. The Hubly Municipality, 39 Bom.L.R. 881, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 491, 172 I.C. 430 But the Assam High Court has held in Tinsukia Municipal Board v. Bankim, A.I.R. 1950 Assam 101 that section 320 of the Assam Municipal Act has no application to a suit for damages for malicious prosecution in as much as malicious prosecution is not something done under but outside the Act. Such a suit is governed by this Article.

300. Starting point of limitation:—If the prosecution ends in acquittal, then according to the clear language of the third column of this Article, the period of limitation for a suit for damages for malicious prosecution begins to run from the date of the acquittal, and not from the date of dismissal of a revision petition preferred before the District Magistrate against the order of acquittal. It could not be said that by reason of the complainant's moving the District Magistrate for making an order of reference to the High Court, the order of acquittal had ceased to be final and the prosecution had not terminated—Narayya v. Sheshayya, 23 Mad. 24 (25). If an order of discharge is passed, and no further proceedings are taken, the prosecution must be deemed to have terminated on the date of discharge, and limitation for a suit for damages for malicious prosecution would run from that date—Madan Mohan v. Ram Sundar, 52 All. 553, 1930 A.L.J. 885, 125 I.C. 464, A.I.R. 1930 All. 326 (328); Purshottam v. Ravji, 47 Bom. 28 (30). The Bombay High Court further holds that even if proceedings by way of revision petition are taken against an order of discharge, the plaintiff's cause of action for a suit for damages for malicious prosecution would arise immediately on the Magistrate's order of discharge (since the discharge of an accused person is the termination of the prosecution) and would not be suspended because further proceedings might be taken by way of revision petition to the High Court either by the Government or by the complainant in order to get the order of discharge set aside. No fresh cause of action would arise on the dismissal of the revision petition—Purshottam v. Ravji, 47 Bom. 28, 24 Bom.L.R. 507, A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 209. The Madras High Court is of opinion that where the Magistrate passed an order of discharge and the complainant moved the District Magistrate in revision who directed further inquiry, but on further application the High Court set aside the District Magistrate's order and altered the order of the first Court into an order of acquittal, whereupon the accused brought a suit for damages for malicious prosecution, held that time ran from the date of the order of the High Court and not from the date of the first Court's order, because owing to the proceedings resulting in an order for further inquiry, the prosecution was revived and did not terminate until the passing of the order of the High Court—Tanguturi Sriramulu v. Viresalingam, 57 I.C. 635 (636). This Article provides that time shall run when the plaintiff is acquitted or when the prosecution comes to an end in some other manner. The words "when the plaintiff is acquitted" cannot be divorced from the words "or the prosecution is otherwise terminated." If the acquittal is followed by other proceedings by way of revision etc., the prosecution is terminated not by the acquittal but by the order passed by the subsequent proceedings —Kulasekara v. Tholasingam, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 675, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 344, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 349, 174 I.C. 428 (F.B.). According to the Allahabad High Court also, if proceedings are taken up in revision against the order of discharge, the prosecution cannot be said to have finally terminated; it must be deemed to be continuing while the revisional proceedings are pending; its final termination would be only when the proceedings in revision have come to an end in favour of the discharged person. If this view were not to be accepted, the result would be that the discharged person would be compelled to institute his suit for damages even though the matter is still subjudice and is being considered by the Revision Court—Madan Mohan v. Ram Sundar, 52 All. 553, 1930 A.L.J. 885, A.I.R. 1930 All. 326 (328), 125 I.C. 464 (dissenting from 47 Bom. 28); Bhagat v. Garai, I.L.R. (1938) All. 89, 1937 A.L.J. 1281, A.I.R. 1938 All. 49. The same view has been taken by the Nagpur and Oudh Courts in Sheikh Mehtab v. Bolaji, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 358, 1946 N.L.J. 113, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 46, 221 I.C. 666; Bhikhan v. Darshan, 1942 O.W.N. 446, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 489, 204 I.C. 429. The Bombay High Court has drawn a distinction between cases in which the revision petition is dismissed and cases in which a revision petition made to the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge is successful but is finally unsuccessful in the High Court. If the revision petition is dismissed, the cause of action arises on the Magistrate's order of discharge, but if a revisional application is successful, and the criminal proceedings are directed to be continued, then there is no longer any cause of action because the plaintiff is no longer a discharged person, and he has to wait until the prsecution terminates in his favour (by a final order of the High Court) before his cause of action arises again—Pusshottam v. Ravji, 47 Bom. 28 (30), A.I.R. 1922 Bom. 209.

If the plaintiff (accused) is convicted by the Magistrate, but is acquitted on appeal, limitation will run from the date of acquittal on appeal—Huri Mohan v. Naimuddin, 20 Cal. 41. Limitation runs from the date of actual acquittal or discharge by the Magistrate as it appears from the records of the case, and not from any earlier date on which the Court expressed an opinion that there was no case to put the accused on trial and that he should be discharged—Shuppu v. Sivarama, 1912 M.W.N. 951, 16 I.C. 584. If there is an appeal by the Government against the order of acquittal, the prosecution cannot be said to have terminated while the appeal is pending—Madan Mohan v. Ram Sundar, supra; Narayya v. Sheshayya, 23 Mad. 24 (25). Where an accused is discharged in the middle of the case before the prosecution as a whole terminates, without any formal order of acquittal or discharge, the date of the judgment afterwards pronounced and not the date of the discharge, would be the starting point of limitation —Venkataramana v. Swami Naik, 17 M.L.J. 60. Where, however, a formal order of discharge is passed against one accused and charge is framed as against the other accused and no mention is made in the final order as to the accused discharged by previous order, it should be deemed that so far as he is concerned, the matter is closed when the order of discharge is passed and a suit filed after one year from the date of discharge is barred by limitation—Subbayya v. Kesavalu, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 287, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 288, 58 L.W. 238. Under Art. 23 the limitation for filing a suit for compensation for malicious prosecution is one year from the date when the plaintiff is acquitted—Shankar Prosad v. Sheo Narain, A.I.R. 1935 Oudh 392, 1935 O.W.N. 392, 155 I.C. 706.

24.—For compensation for libel.	One year.	When the libel is published.

See 24 All. 368 and 18 C.L.J. 352 cited under Article 23.

301. Limitation runs from the date when the libel is published. But since each publication gives a fresh cause of action, it is not necessary that all or the first of the publications (e.g., in a newspaper) should have been within a year; it is sufficient if any one publication is proved to have been within one year—Duke of Brunswick v. Harmer, (1849) 14 Q.B. 185. Thus, where the President of the Union Bench sends a report to the Magistrate in connection with an application for transfer of a case pending before the Bench, a suit for damages for libellous matter contained in that report may be brought within one year of the publication of the report to the Magistrate—Hem Chandra v. Tarapada, 40 C.W.N. 500.

A suit for damages against the defendant for making a false accusation against the plaintiff to the police, when no prosecution was instituted, is a suit for libel or slander and the limitation applicable to such a suit is that prescribed by this Article or Article 25—Harnam v. Doola, 39 P.L.R. 686, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 709, 169 I.C. 640.

25.—For compensation for slander.	One year.	When the words are spoken, or, if the words are not actionable in themselves, when the special damage complained of results.

302. Slander—special damage:—The English law under which slanderous words are generally not actionable per se and are actionable only when special damage results, is not applicable to this country; the law of India recognises personal result conveyed by abusive language as actionable per se without proof of special damage—Dawan v. Mahip, 10 All. 425; Parvati v. Mannar, 8 Mad. 175; Shoobhagee v. Bokhari, 4 C.L.J. 390; Jogeswar v. Dinaram, 3 C.L.J. 140; Ibin v. Haidar, 12 Cal. 109; Troilokya v. Chundra, 12 Cal. 424.

But in Girish v. Jatadhari, 26 Cal. 653 (F.B.), it was held that if there was no defamation or intent to defame, mere abusive and insulting language was not actionable, even though it caused pain and distress of mind to the plaintiff.

The words in the third column "if the words are not actionable.....results" are words of English law, and should be applied only to Presidency Towns where the English law is generally applied. Thus, in a case arising within the local limits of the town of Calcutta, it was held, following the English law, that slanderous words alone, (e.g., imputation of unchastity to women) without proof of special damage are not actionable—Bhoomi v. Natobar, 28 Cal. 452. But in a mofussil case, where A used words imputing unchastity to the wife of B, it was held that the words were defamatory not only of the wife of B, but also of B himself and B was therefore entitled to sue on his own account—Sukhan v. Bipad, 34 Cal. 48.

26.—For compensation for loss of service occasioned by the seduction of the plaintiff's servant or daughter.	One year.	When the loss occurs.

303. If the daughter had been married but deserted by her husband, and was under her father's protection and performing household duties for him, he had by law and custom a right to the service of the daughter, and a suit by him was maintainable for the loss of his daughter's service through seduction—Ram Lall v. Tula Ram, 4 All. 97 (per Stuart, C.J.). But Oldfield, J. held in this case that such a suit was not maintainable by a Hindu father.

27.—For compensation for inducing a person to break a contract with the plaintiff.	One year.	The date of the breach.

303A. The plaintiff and defendant were rival transport contractors to the British Government in connection with certain military operations; the defendant improperly enticed the jamadars of the plaintiff into breaking their contracts by putting the camels, which they had contracted to supply to the plaintiff, at the disposal of the defendant. Held, that a suit for compensation against the defendant was governed by this Article—Haveli v. Shaik Panda, 96 I.C. 887 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 88, 31 C.W.N. 174.

28.—For compensation for an illegal, irregular or excessive distress.	One year.	The date of the distress.

304. For a full discussion as to the meaning of the word "compensation," see Note 305 under the next Article. It has been held in a Bombay case that where the suit was to recover the amount that was illegally levied in excess, the suit was not governed by this Article but by Art. 62—Ladji v. Musabi, 10 Bom. 665. No reason has been stated for the inapplicability of this Article, but probably the learned Judge interpreted the word 'compensation' in its narrower sense (i.e., in the sense of damages). A suit against a Municipal Board for compensation for illegal or excessive distress is governed by the specific provisions of this Article and not by Article 2 (which is more general)—Municipal Board v. Goodall, 26 All. 482 (487, 488). A suit against a landlord for compensation for illegal distraint of crops is governed by Art. 28 or 29—Jagatjiban v. Sarat, 7 C.W.N. 728. Where an illegal distraint was made by a landlord under the Madras Rent Recovery Act VII of 1865, a suit for compensation brought within one year of the distraint was in time—Yamuna Bai v. Solayya, 24 Mad. 339. This Article applies even when the seizure is without jurisdiction as such a seizure is an illegal distraint covered by this Article; Shridhar v. Godulal, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 721, 41 Bom.L.R. 1223, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 20.

29.—For compensation for wrongful seizure of moveable property under legal process.	One year.	The date of the seizure.

304A. Scope:—To apply Art. 29 the suit must be one (i) for compensation, (ii) for wrongful seizure, (iii) of movable property, (iv) under legal process.

305. Compensation:—In Murugesa v. Jattaram, 23 Mad. 621 (626) it has been held that the word "compensation" must be interpreted in its wider sense, so as to include a claim to recover the value of the goods seized, as well as a claim by way of damages independent of the value of the goods, and is not restricted to the latter class of claim alone; and that this Article does not contemplate any such distinction. See also Yellammal v. Ayyappa, 38 Mad. 972 (at p. 984, per Sadasiva Aiyar J.) and Narasimha v. Gangaraju, 31 Mad. 431 (433) where the same opinion was expressed. Similarly, in Jagjivan v. Gulam Jilani, 8 Bom. 17, it was held that a suit simply to recover the money wrongfully taken under a decree was a suit for compensation under this Article; and so in Venkatachellum v. Nagappa, 23 M.L.J. 519, 16 I.C. 914, this Article was held to be applicable to a suit for refund of sale-proceeds realized by sale of plaintiff's property by wrongful attachment.

But the Calcutta and Allahabad High Courts are of opinion that the word 'compensation' presupposes that the plaintiff must have been damnified, and the suit must be by way of damages; a suit by the plaintiff merely to recover the money wrongfully attached and taken away by the defendant in execution of the latter's decree against a third party is not a suit for compensation under this Article but is governed by Article 61—Lakshmi Priya v. Ramakanta, 30 Cal. 440 (dissenting from 8 Bom. 17); Nadar Singh v. Ganga Dei, 38 All. 676 (dissenting from 8 Bom. 17; Md. Mozaharal v. Md. Azimaddin, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 507. See also Rajputana Malwa Railway Stores v. Ajmere Municipal Board, 32 All. 491, and Municipal Board v. Deokinandan, 36 All. 555 (cited under Article 2) and Yellammal v. Ayappa, 38 Mad. 972 (per Sundara Aiyar, J. at p. 976), where the word has been applied only to a claim for damages.

306. Wrongful seizure:—Seizure or possession of property belonging to a party to a suit under an order of Court is not wrongful although the order was erroneous and was afterwards set aside—Dakhina v. Saroda, 21 Cal. 142 (148) (P.C.), Drawing out money from the Court under the terms of a subsisting decree is not wrongful seizure of property, even though the decree is afterwards set aside—Narayan v. Narayan, 13 Mad. 437. Where money belonging to the plaintiff, which was deposited in the Collectorate was wrongfully attached and drawn out by the defendant, a suit to recover the money does not fall under this Article (but under Art. 62), because the plaintiff is damnified by the wrongful taking out and not by the wrongful attachment or seizure of the money—Lakshmi v. Ram, 30 Cal. 440. Wrongful attachment of money deposited with the Collectorate is wrongful seizure of moveable property—Jagjivan v. Gulam Jilani, 8 Bom. 17. Where a warrant of attachment was executed by affixing the Court seal to the outer door of the warehouse where the goods were stored, without breaking open the door and taking physical possession of the goods inside, this was held to be in effect an actual seizure, and a suit for damages for such seizure fell under Art. 29—Multan Chand v. Bank of Madras, 27 Mad. 346.

The word 'seizure' means the taking of something out of the possession of its owner. Where the moveable property (money) was in the custody of the Court, and the Court distributed it among the judgment-creditors of the owner, there was no 'seizure' within the meaning of this Article—Ram Narain v. Brij Banke, 39 All. 322 (329), 15 A.L.J. 295, 39 I.C. 532; Rupabai v. Audimulam, 11 Mad. 345; Rajaram v. Mulchand, 7 N.L.J. 140, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 248. Where a certain amount deposited in court by the receiver appointed under Or. 40, r. 1, C. P. Code, is attached and paid to a person a suit to recover back such amount is not governed by this Article, as the attachment is neither seizure within the meaning of this Article nor wrongful —Baldev v. Moolchand, 40 P.L.R. 685, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 493, 176 I.C. 731. Money paid by order of Court is not money seized by order of Court—Rupabai v. Audimulam, 11 Mad. 345 (355). This Article does not apply to a suit to recover money paid to the decree-holder out of the sale proceeds of the goods wrongfully attached in execution of a decree. The cause of action arises when the attached goods are sold and the money realised from the sale proceeds is paid to the decree-holder—Ojha Bros. v. Volkart Bros., A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 602.

An attachment of a debt is not a seizure. Seizure involves something in the nature of a transfer of possession. The attachment of a debt is made by a written order prohibiting the creditor from receiving the debt and the debtor from making payment thereof, until the further order of the Court (see O. XXI, rule 46, C.P. Code). No transfer of possession is contemplated by the prohibitory order—Yellammal v. Ayyappa, 38 Mad. 972 (988). Not only in the case of debts, but also in the case of ordinary moveable property, where the attachment is made not by actual seizure but by prohibitory order under O. XXI, r. 46, C. P. Code, Article 29 does not apply. A suit for compensation for attachment of a moveable property by prohibitory order falls under Article 36—P. Veeramma v. Subha Rao, 31 M.L.J. 257, 35 I.C. 98 (100, 101).

The word 'seizure' means taking hostile possession, and not taking possession of what another voluntarily gives. Therefore where a debt is attached and the debtor makes a voluntary payment of the debt into Court, such payment does not constitute a seizure. Hence if the amount of debt is paid by the Court to the decreeholder, a suit by the claimant of the debt against the decreeholder is governed by either Art. 62 or 120—Yellammal v. Ayyappa, 38 Mad. 972 (974, 987), 26 M.L.J. 166, 22 I.C. 870. In this case it has been further held (at page 974) that a debt not being a moveable property, the attachment of a debt is not a seizure of moveable property under this Article.

The words "under legal process" in this Article cannot be interpreted as meaning according to law and there is no justification for holding that any process taken according to law is legal process. By "legal process" is meant by some sort of Court. The Collector acting under sec 154 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code is not acting as a Court, but is really acting as a ceditor. This Article applies to a seizure under a process issued by a Court, and does not apply to a seizure by the Collector under sec. 154 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code—Shivrao v. Secy. of State, 44 Bom. L.R. 668, A.I.R. 1942 Bom. 300, 203 I.C. 611. Where the defendants had brought a suit against the plaintiffs for sums due to them on account of maritime necessaries supplied to the plaintiffs' ship, and obtained an warrant of arrest of the ship, but the suit was afterwards dismissed for want of jurisdiction, held that the arrest of the ship was a seizure under legal process. The fact that the suit was dismissed for want of judrisdiction did not render the order for arrest a nullity. The seizure was therefore under a 'legal process'—Madras Steam Navigation Co., Ltd. v. Shalimar Works, Ltd., 42 Cal. 85 (108), 28 I.C. 463. This Article would apply both to cases of seizure under orders passed by a Court without jurisdiction, and cases of seizure under orders passed by a Court having jurisdiction but on insufficient grounds—Pannaji v. Senaji, 53 Mad. 621, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 635 (642), 126 I.C. 721. This Article governs those cases only where there has been attachment which is found to have been wrongful, because the Court had no jurisdiction or because the attachment was obtained on insufficient grounds and in which there were no additional factors such as misappropriation or theft or conversion of the attached property—Venugopal v. Gopala, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 241, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 453, 226 I.C. 464. In Muthuswami v. Dhanushkodi, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 799, 1950 M.W.N. 345, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 734 it has been held that where the property wrongfully seized from the plaintiff is alleged to be in possession of the defendant and the suit is for recovery of the said property coupled with a prayer for price thereof, Art. 49 applies. But where the goods wrongfully seized from the plaintiff has been sold and thereby passed into the hands of third parties, a suit against the defendant for the loss caused to the plaintiff by such wrongful seizure and sale, being the price of goods so sold, will be governed by this Article. Article 29 is not limited in its application to cases in which the seizure is intrinsically wrongful, as for instance, whether it is made without jurisdiction; it applies also to cases where the foundation of the claim is that the defendant procured the seizure of the plaintiff's property under a perfectly legal process but by misrepresentations to Court—Sakkalinga v. Krishnaswami, 38 M.L.J. 324, 55 I.C. 786 (790), 1920 M.W.N. 192. Where a seizure is under a writ of Court, it is prima facie not wrongful, and unless it is shown that the Court issuing the writ had no jurisdiction over the subject matter, a suit for compensation for the seizure would not fall within Art. 29. A mere improper attachment is not wrongful attachment—Arjan Biswas v. Abdul, 35 C.L.J. 480, 64 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 774.

The attachment by the decreeholder of the properties of his judgment-debtor is not 'wrongful' by reason of the fact that the vendor of those properties has got a lien on them for his unpaid purchase-money. The judgment-creditors are not under any obligation to enquire at the time of attachment whether the purchase-money due to the vendor has or has not been paid. The seizure is perfectly lawful—Ram Narain v. Brij Banke, 39 All. 322 (328).

This Article applies only to seizure and not to any suit arsing out of what happens later at the time of the sale. Where the suit is brought on an undertaking given by the defendants in a suit under Or. 21, r. 63, C. P. Code that they would indemnify the plaintiff if he succeeds in the suit, this Article has no application—Haji v. Abdul, 39 P.L.R. 948, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 196, 175 I.C. 630.

Attachment before judgment.—The attachment of the debtor's property by the creditor before judgment is a lawful seizure, if a decree is afterwards passed in favour of the creditor. The seizure is not wrongful by reason of the fact that it has been effected before the decree. Since the suit is subsequently decreed, the attachment, to all intents and purposes, must be deemed to have been effected in execution of the decree—Ram Narain v. Brij Banke, 39 All. 322 (328); Manga v. Changa Mal, 22 A.L.J. 977, A.I.R. 1925 All. 131. An attachment before judgment is not wrongful merely because the suit in which the attachment has been made, is dismissed, if it appears that there were sufficient grounds for applying for the attachment—Manavikraman v. Avisilan, 19 Mad. 80 (81). If the suit in which the attachment before judgment takes place is decreed by the Court of first instance but is dismissed on appeal, the attachment was none the less a lawful seizure and not a wrongful one; the order of attachment might have been on insufficient grounds, but it was not intrinsically wrongful, that is, there was no wrongful attachment on the day on which the attachment was made. In such a case, Article 39 or 49 applied—Manga v. Changa Mal 22 A.L.J. 977, 81 I.C. 1038, A.I.R. 1925 All. 131. But in a recent Madras case it has been held that this Article would apply to all cases of attachment before judgment, where the seizure is wrongful either because the Court had no jurisdiction or because the attachment was made by a Court having jurisdiction but on insufficient grounds; it is not restricted to seizures which are wrongful because made under the order of a Court without jurisdiction or in excess of the order of the Court—Pannaji v. Senaji, 53 Mad. 621, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 635 (642), 59 M.L.J. 859.

Attachment of property of defandant:—It has been said in some cases that a distinction should be drawn between cases where the property of the defendant (in the previous suit) was attached, and cases where the property of a third person was attached. If the property that was attached did not belong to the defendant (in the previous suit) but to a third party, a suit brought by that party for wrongful seizure of his property falls under Article 29—Narasimha v. Ganga Raju, 31 Mad. 431; Ram Narain v. Umrao, 29 All. 615; Murugesa v. Jattaram, 23 Mad. 621 (626); Multan Chand v. Bank of Madras, 27 Mad. 346; P. Veeramma v. Subba Rao, 31 M.L.J. 257, 35 I.C. 98. But if the property that was attached belonged to the defendant, there was no wrongful seizure, and the present suit for compensation for the attachment does not fall under Article 29, but falls under Art. 36. See Manavikraman v. Avisilan, 19 Mad. 80; Arjun v. Abdul, 35 C.L.J. 480, 64 I. C. 513, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 774; Sakkalingam v. Krishnaswami, 38 M.L.J. 324, 55 I.C. 786 (790). In a recent Madras case, however, the learned Judges after reviewing all these cases, have disapproved of this distinction, and have laid down that Article 29 (and not 36) should apply even though the property of the defendant had been attached—Pannaji v. Senaji, 53 Mad. 621, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 635 (641), 126 I.C. 721, approving Madras Steam Navigation Co. v. Shalimar Works, 42 Cal. 85, in which Art. 29 was applied to a case where the property that had been attached in the previous suit belonged to the defendant.

307. Distraint and removal of crops:—A suit for damages for illegal distraint of standing crops is governed by Art. 36, and not by Art .29, because standing crops are not 'moveable property' within the meaning of this Article—Hari Charan v. Hari Kar, 32 Cal. 459 (462); Mohesh Chandra v. Hari Kar, 9 C.W.N. 376. Growing crops until severed from the soil are treated as immoverable property. The definition of moveable property in sec. 2 (13) of the C. P. Code which includes standing crops will not prevail in the Limitation Act—Devarasetti v. Devarasetti, 18 M.L.T. 532, 31 I.C. 769; Surat v. Umar, 22 Cal. 877 (885); Pandah v. Jennudi, 4 Cal. 665 (667); Hari Charan v. Hari Kar, supra; Murlidhar v. Mulu, 11 N.L.R. 18, 27 I.C. 935 (936, 937). If the crops are, after the wrongful distraint, cut and carried away by the defendant, they become moveable property, and a suit for damages for wrongful distraint and removal of the crops is governed by Article 48 or 49 (which is more specific) and not by Art. 36, which is a general Article on torts. Article 29 cannot apply because this Article applies only to the act of wrongful distraint and not to the act of cutting and carrying away the crops—Jadu Nath v. Hari Kar, 17 C.W.N. 308 (311), 18 I.C. 253 (overruling Jadunath v. Hari Kar, 36 Cal. 141, 12 C.W.N. 1090). See Notes under Arts. 36 and 39.

307A. Starting point of limitation:—Limitation runs from the date of the wrongful seizure, and not from the time when the seizure is declared to be wrongful and the plaintiff obtains restoration of the property. A wrongful seizure is wrongful ab initio, and the starting point of limitation is the date of the seizure; it is not correct to say that the wrongfulness or otherwise of the seizure depends upon any declaration of the Court. It is not rightful when the Court makes an order on allegations, which are subsequently found to be unproved, and becomes wrongful only when the Court on investigation of the facts holds that the defendant had no jurisdiction in attaching the properties. Nor is it correct to say that the period of limitation runs when the seizure terminates. It should be noted that in other Articles where termination of proceeding is necessary to give the plaintiff a cause of action, the Act specially provides for that contingency. For instance, under Art. 19, time runs from the date when the imprisonment ends; under Art. 23, the period runs when the accused is acquitted or the prosecution is otherwise terminated; under Art. 42, the period commences from the time when the injunction ceases. But in Art. 29 the Legislature has not made any such provision but has fixed the period as one year from the date of the seizure. Compare also Art. 28 under which the period similarly commences from the date of the distress—Pannaji v. Senaji, 53 Mad. 621, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 635 (637), 126 I.C. 721. The words "date of the seizure" are explicit; and it would be doing violence to the language used, if the words are interpreted as meaning the date when the seizure is declared wrongful by a competent Court—Ibid.

A wrongful seizure is not a continuing wrong within the meaning of sec. 23; hence time runs from the date of seizure and not when the attachment ceases—Pannaji v. Senaji, supra; Ram Narain v. Umrao, 29 All. 615. But see Manga v. Changa Mal, 22 A.L.J. 977, 81 I.C. 1038, A.I.R. 1925 All. 131; Eng. Gim Moh v. Chinese Merited Banking Com. Ltd., A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 276, 1941 R.L.R. 1 (F.B.) The date of the seizure, and not the date of the attachment, is the date from which time begins to run—M. C. Firm v. S. Bholat, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 329.

Time runs from the date of the wrongful seizure of the property; and the sale of the property after seizure does not give a new cause of action—Krishna v. Sitaram, A.I.R. 1931 Nag. 47, 130 I.C. 157.

30.—Against a carrier for compensation for losing or injuring goods.	One year.	When the loss or injury occurs.

[N. B.—The period of limitation under Articles 30 and 31 of the Act of 1877 was originally two years, but by the Amendment Act X of 1899, it was reduced to one year; and this reduced period has been maintained in the present Act.]

308. Carrier:—A'carrier' in its general sense means a person or a company who undertakes to transport the goods of another person from one place to another for a hire. It is not necessary for the purposes of Articles 30 and 31 that the carrier should be a 'common carrier' within the meaning of the Carriers Act, 1865—Mylappa v. B. I. S. N. Co., 34 M.L.J. 553, 45 I.C. 485; Alamgir Footwear Co. v. Secretary of State, 1933 A.L.J. 796, 144 I.C. 703, A.I.R. 1933 All 466 (468); Secy of State v. Golab, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 614, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 298, 175 I.C. 196. A landing agent is a carrier within the meaning of these Articles—Mylappa v. B. I. S. N. Co., supra. Sea-going merchantships are carriers within the meaning of these Articles though they are not 'common carriers' as defined in the Carriers Act (III of 1865)—B. I. S. N. Co., v. Haji Mahomed, 3 Mad. 107 (110). Railways owned or controlled by Government, which take upon themselves to carry goods belonging to the public from one place to another are carriers—Secy of State v. Golab, supra. In a subsequent case the same High Court has held that this Article does not apply to a suit against the Government relating to carriage by Railway, the reason being that the law relating to common carriers in India is contained in the Carriers Act and the definition of "common carrier", in sec. 2 of the Act excludes the Government from that category—Golab v. Secy. of State, I.L.R. (1941) 2 Cal. 160. The Governor General in Council can come within the meaning of "carrier" in Articles 30 and 31—Rahim v. Governor General, (1955) M.L.J. 406.

309. Suit based on contract:—It was held in some earlier cases that where there was a contract to deliver, a suit for compensation for breach of the contract was governed by Art. 115. This Article applied to suits for compensation for loss or damage to goods arising from malfeasance, misfeasance or nonfeasance independent of contract—British India Steam Navigation Company v. Hajee Mahomed, 3 Mad. 107; Kalu Ram v. Madras Ry. Co., 3 Mad. 240; Danmull v. B. I. S. N. Co., 12 Cal. 477; Mohan Singh v. Henry Conder, 7 Bom. 478. But these decisions were given at a time when the word "non-delivery" did not exist in Article 31, and the Courts had therefore to apply Art. 115 to suits for compensation for non-delivery of goods, treating them as suits for breach of contract to deliver. Article 30 was confined to actions in tort, and Art. 31 to actions ex contractu. In G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Raisett, 19 Bom. 165, Farran, J. however remarked (at p. 188) that "the Courts would have better fulfilled the intention of the Legislature by treating all claims against a carrier which would fairly be deemed to arise out of the loss or injury to goods as coming within the purview of articles 30 and 31, than by confining the general words of the former Article to a claim for compensation for loss of goods arising otherwise than out of contract."

Since then the Legislature has added the word "non-delivery" in Article 31 (by the Amendment Act X of 1899) so that that Article is now made more comprehensive and self-contained, and there is no longer any necessity for bringing Article 115 into a case of non-delivery. It is now settled law that under Articles 30 and 31 it is immaterial whether the liability of the defendant arises out of contract or of tort. Therefore Article 31 would apply to a suit against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of goods irrespective of the question whether the suit was laid in contract or in tort—Venkatasubba Rao v. Asiatic Steam Navigation Co., 39 Mad. 1 (12) (F.B.); Secretary of State v. Dunlop Rubber Co., 6 Lah. 301, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 478, 88 I.C. 979, 26 PL.R. 490; B. N. Ry. Co. v. Hamir, 5 Pat. 106, 6 P.L.T. 565, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 727; Moti Ram v. E. I. Ry. Co., 2 P.L.R. 1907, 108 P.R. 1906 (F.B.); Chiranjilal v. B. N. Ry. Co., 52 Cal. 372, 29 C.W.N. 277. In an earlier case, (Radha Shyam v. Secretary of State, 44 Cal. 16 at p. 26) however, Chatterjee, J., of the Calcutta High Court expressed the opinion that a suit by the consignor against a railway company for compensation for non-delivery of goods would be governed by Article 115, as it was a case of breach of a written contract, the invoice being the contract (see Note 311 under Art. 31). The learned Judge in this case followed the old and obsolete rulings of 7 Bom. 478 and 12 Cal. 477. This decision seems to be of doubtful authority.

310. Loss:—A suit against a railway company for compensation for loss of goods, alleging the same to have been due to the wilful negligence or theft by the company's servants is governed by this Article—E. I. Ry. Co. v. Ram Autar, 20 C.W.N. 696, 38 I.C. 502. Article 30 is inapplicable to a case where the goods are not lost but are lying in the lost-property office of the railway company because delivery of them has not been claimed by any one. The case is one of non-delivery, and covered by Artible 31—Mutsaddi Lal v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co., 42 All. 390 (392), 18 A.L.J. 377, 58 I.C. 547. So also, this Article has no application to a suit against the Railway Administration in respect of loss of goods deposited by a passenger in a cloak-room—H. K. Roy v. Governor General in Council, 53 C.W.N. 406, A.I.R. 1949 Cal. 591. This Article does not apply where the defendant does not plead or prove any loss, but on the other hand pleads that no goods were given to them for consignment—Radha Shyam v. Secretary of State, 44 Cal. 16 (26).

If the plaintiff sued the railway company for non-delivery of goods within three years as provided by Article 115 (which was the law before the amendment of 1899) the defendant could not set up a case that the goods were lost in order to bring the case within the shorter period of limitation under Art. 30. The defendant could not ask the Court to infer from the mere non-delivery that the goods were lost; if he sought to avail himself of the shorter period of limitation prescribed by this Article, the burden lay on him to prove, as an affirmative fact, that the goods were lost—Mohan Singh v. Henry Conder, 7 Bom. 478 (488). This decision is no longer of any importance, because under the present law loss and non-delivery are governed by an equal period of limitation under Articles 30 and 31.

So also, the burden of proving the time when the goods were lost, lies on the defendent—Madras & South Marhatta Railway Co. v. Bhimappa, 23 M.L.J. 511, 17 I.C. 419; E. I. Ry. v. Gopilal, A.I.R. 1941 Cal 304, 199 I.C. 437; Jainarain v. Governor General in Council, 4 D.L.R. (Cal) 225, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 462; Setharama v. Hydrabad State, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 298, 1949 M.W.N. 599, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 30.

The words "against a carrier for losing or injuring goods" obviously suggest not a loss of the goods to the owner but an actual losing of the goods by the carrier himself; and the words "when the loss or injury occurs" in the third column mean that the period of limitation begins to run form the time when the carrier lost or injured the goods, and not from the time when the consignee may be said to have suffered loss. Therefore, the burden of proving when the goods were lost is decidedly on the carrier company. Where the railway company did not prove or admit that the goods were lost but on the other hand they had been continually assuring the plaintiff that the matter was under inquiry and was receiving their special attention up to a period within a year of the suit, the claim of the plaintiff was not barred by Article 30, although the suit was brought more than a year after the despatch of the goods—Jugal Kishore v. G. I. P. Ry., 45 All. 43 (45), 20 A.L.J. 792, 68 I.C. 981, A.I.R. 1923 All. 22; Jainarain v. Governor General in Council, 4 D.L.R. (Cal.) 225, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 462.

The term 'loss' does not include misdelivery. The word 'loss' in this Article contemplates actual losing of the goods by the carrier himself, and therefore when the carrier delivers the goods to a wrong person, it cannot be said that he has lost the goods. Neither does Article 31 apply because misdelivery is not the same as non-delivery. The case of misdelivery therefore falls under Article 115—Fakir v. Secretary of State, 170 P.L.R. 1913, 19 I.C. 477, following Changa Mal v. B. & N. W. Ry. Co., 6 P.R. 1897. The Allahabad High Court has held that the correct article of limitation applicable to a suit for misdelivery of goods consigned is Art. 31—Secy. of State v. Daulat Ram, 1937 A.L.J. 794 A.I.R. 1937 All. 632, 171 I.C. 532. In a Full Bench case of the Lahore High Court, however, it has been held that the word 'loss' in sec. 80 and other sections of the Railway Act should not be interpreted in the restricted sense of losing of the goods by the carrier, but should include loss to the owner as well, and therefore it clearly contemplates a case of misdelivery—Hill Sawyers & Co. v. Secy. of State, 2 Lah. 133 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 1, 61 I.C. 926, overruling 6 P.R. 1897. But as it is a case under the Railway Act, it is doubtful whether it should be applied in construing Article 30 of the Limitation Act, since the two Acts are not in pari materia. (See 2 Pat.

Short delivery of goods does not amount to loss of goods. The loss or injury referred to in Article 30 is the loss or injury to the goods and not loss or injury to the consignee. And therefore it cannot be said that a case of short delivery falls under Article 30 on the ground that it amounts to loss to the consignee to the extent of the goods short delivered. The case is governed by Article 31—B. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Kameshwar, 12 Pat. 67, 141 I.C. 813, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 45 (48). The Calcutta High Court has held that this Article applies to cases of short delivery. Article 31 is limited to cases of non-delivery and has no application to cases of short delivery—Gangadhar v. Dominion of India, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 394. The view has been taken in The Dominion of India, v. B. R. C. & Sons, A.I.R. 1951 Mysore 68.

310A. Starting point of limitation:—Under Art. 30 time begins to run from a perfectly definite date that is when the loss or injury occurs—Secy. of State v. Neaz Ali, A.I.R. 1935 All. 407, 1935 A.L.J. 398, 157 I.C. 46; and not from the date of plaintiff's knowledge—E. I. R. v. Gopilal, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 304, 199 I.C. 437; Seetharam v. Hydrabad State, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 298, 1949 M.W.N. 599, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 30 or on account of correspondence with the Railway—The Dominion of India v. B. R. C. & Sons, supra. Where on the date on which the consignee went to the railway station to take delivery of the packages, they were missing and there was nothing to show that the goods were lost prior to that date, time ran only from that date—G. I. P. Ry. v. Radhey Mal, 47 All. 549, 23 A.L.J. 398, A.I.R. 1925 All. 656. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary the Court is entitled to assume that the loss occurred on the date on which the plaintiff was permitted to remove the goods and not earlier—Sitaram v. G. I. P. Ry., I.L.R (1947) Nag. 726, 1947 N.L.J. 540, A.I.R. 1947 Nag. 224; Gangadhar v. Dominion of India, supra. See also Union of India v. Gujrat Tobacco Co., 59 C.W.N. 278, 95 C.L.J. 119, A.I.R. 1955 Cal. 448.

31.—Against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of, or delay in delivering, goods.	One year.	When the goods ought to be delivered.

311. Scope of section:—This Article applies not only to a suit brought by the consignee but also to a suit brought by the consignor. It provides for a suit for compensation for non-delivery, i.e., a suit by a person who by reason of non-delivery has sustained loss. There may be cases in which it is not the consignee who sustains loss but the consignor. In such cases it would be a suit by the consignor for compensation for non-delivery. Thus, where the consignor (who had purchased a quantity of salt from the Salt Superintendent at Sambhar) despatched at Ramnagar station certain empty gunny bags through the railway company to be delivered to the Salt Superintendent at Sambhar who was to send back the bags filled with the salt to the consignor, but the bags were not delivered, it was held that in this case it was the consignor who would suffer loss by reason of non-delivery as he would not get the salt, and he would be the person to sue under Article 31. The consignee had nothing to do with the bags and would suffer nothing for non-delivery—Mutsaddi Lal v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co., 42 All. 390 (393); Chiranjilal v. B. N. Ry. Co., 52 Cal. 372, 29 C.W.N. 277, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 559. In Radha Shyam v. Secretary of State, 44 Cal. 16 (26)), 20 C.W.N. 790, Chatterjee J. has laid down the narrow proposition that Article 31 seems to contemplate a suit by the party who is entitled to the delivery, namely the consignee, and does not apply to a suit by the consignor.

312. Non-delivery:—The word "non-delivery" means the failure to deliver the unit number mentioned in the consignment either as a whole or in part and not to the details of its contents—The Dominion of India v. B. R. C. and Sons, A.I.R. 1951 Mysore 68. A suit against a carrier for compensation in respect of goods not delivered is governed by this Article and not by Art. 115—I. G. N. Ry. Co. Ld. v. Nanda, 13 C.W.N. 851; Mutsaddi Lal v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co., 42 All. 390; Ali Mahmad v. G. I. P. Ry. Co., 11 N.L.R. 174, 31 I.C. 474; Moti Ram v. E. I. Ry. Co., 2 P.L.R. 1907, 108 P.R. 1906; G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Ganpat Rai, 33 All. 544; Haji Ajam v. Bombay & Persia S. N. Co., 26 Bom. 562 (570); Venkata Subba v. A. S. N. Co., 39 Mad. 1; E. I. Ry. Co. v. Sagar Mull, 4 Pat. 482, 6 P.L.T. 559, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 611; B. N. Ry. Co. v. Hamir Mull, 5 Pat. 106; A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 727, 90 I.C. 374.

The word "non-delivery" was introduced into the Act of 1877 by the Amendment Act, X of 1899. Previous to 1899, a suit for compensation for non-delivery of goods was treated as a suit for compensation for breach of an implied contract to deliver and was governed by the three year's rule of limitation under Art. 115—Mohan v. Henry Conder, 7 Bom. 478; G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Raisett, 19 Bom. 165; Hassaji v. E. I. Ry. Co., 5 Mad. 388; Danmull v. B. I. S. N. Co. 12 Cal. 477. These decisions are no longer of any authority. See Note 309 in Article 30 under heading "Suits based on contract". It has been pointed out in that Note that it is now settled law that a suit against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of goods is governed by Article 31, whether the suit is laid in contract on ground of non-delivery, or in tort; therefore this Article applies to a suit for compensation for non-delivery, where the suit is grounded on tort, viz., where in addition to non-delivery the plaintiff alleges that the railway company has wrongfully converted the goods. The suit would not be governed by Art. 48, because Article 31 is more specific than Art. 48—Secretary of State v. Dunlop Rubber Co., 6 Lah. 301, 26 P.L.R. 490, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 478, 88 I.C. 974. A suit against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of goods is governed by Art. 31 whether the non-delivery is due to conversion or any other reason. There is a definite Article, namely Art. 30, for compensation for loss or injury, and a general article, namely Art. 31, for non-delivery or delay in delivery. A suit for compensation for non-delivery must be brought within one year, no matter what the circumstances are which occasion the non-delivery. Article 31 applies even where the plaintiff sues the carriers as tort-feasors for the detention of his property. So, this Article applies even if the goods are detained for non-payment of the carrier's charges for wharfage—Ramlal v. B. N. Ry. Co., A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 21, 161 I.C. 867, 31 N.L.R. (Supp.), 79. A carrier is not entitled to set up a loss, whether or not such loss amounts to a tort to the goods, to bring a suit within the shorter period contemplated by Art. 30 when it clearly falls within this Article—National Swadeshi Stores v. G. G. in Council, I.L.R. (1947) Kar. 144, A.I R. 1948 Sind. 26.

Starling thinks that all suits against carriers in respect of goods delivered to them for carriage fall under one or the other of these two articles, (187). Rustomji considers this proposition to be too widely stated.

Where goods sent through a Railway Company were not taken delivery of by the consignee, and were not sent back to the consignor owing to defect in his address, and were therefore sold by the Company as unclaimed goods under sec. 56 of the Railways Act, a suit by the consignor to recover the sale-proceeds is not a suit for compensation for non-delivery under this Article but is governed by Art. 62—Tara Chand v. M. & S. M. Ry. Co., 44 Mad. 823, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 362. A suit for damages for wrongful conversion is not for compensation for non-delivery but one for damages for tort and as such Art. 31 is not applicable—Firm Nawab Boot House v. Secy. of State, A.I.R. 1935 All. 156, 1935 A.L.J. 61, 159 I.C. 40. Where goods had reached their destination and had never been lost from the possession of the railway company but were in the lost property office and were sold by public auction against the express direction of the plaintiff, it was held that the suit for damages against the railway company was not governed by Art. 31, but by Art. 48—Secy. of State v. Simla Footwear Co., A.I.R.

1935 All. 601, 1935 A.L.J. 793, 157 I.C. 1080. Where the plaintiff, on being informed by the Railway Company of the arrival of the goods, did not take delivery of the goods and asked the Company to keep them till further instructions, it was held that the plaintiff's delay in taking delivery of the goods did not convert the carrier (Railway Company) into a bailee, so as to extend the period of limitation; the liability of the Railway Company continued as carrier, and the suit was governed by this Article, and not by Art. 48 or 49—Alamgir Footwear Co. v. Secretary of State, 1933 A.L.J. 796, 144 I.C. 703, A.I.R. 1933 All. 466 (467). This Article does not apply to a suit, in respect of loss of goods deposited by a passenger in a cloak-room—H. K. Roy v. Governor General of India, 53 C.W.N. 406. A.I.R. 1949 Cal. 591, 4 D.L.R. (Cal.) 209.

Short delivery amounts to non-delivery of the things short delivered, and therefore falls under Article 31. See Haji Ajam v. Bombay & Persia S. N. Co., 26 Bom. 562; Venkatasubba Rao v. A. S. N. Co., 39 Mad. 1; B. & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Kameshwar, 12 Pat. 67, 141 I.C. 813, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 45 (48). In a previous case, the Patna High Court held that short delivery meant loss of the portion of the consignment undelivered and fell under Article 30; or it might fall either uner Art. 30 or Art. 31—Rameshwar Dass v. E. I. Ry. Co. 4 P.L.T. 331, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 298 (299). The Calcutta High Court has held that such a suit falls under Art. 30 and not under this Article—Gangadhar v. Dominion of India, A.I.R. 1950 Cal. 394. The same view has been taken in The Dominion of India v. B. R. C. & Sons, A.I.R. 1951 Mysore 68.

312.A. Starting point of limitation:—As to the starting point of limitation under Article 31, the burden lies on the carrier defendant to show when the goods ought to have been delivered—Radha Shyam v. Secretary of State, 44 Cal. 16 (26). This Article, which lays down the starting point to be the time when the goods ought to have been delivered, cannot apply to a case where it is impossible to show or prove as to when the goods ought to have been delivered—Ibid. In a suit against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery the burden of proving when the goods consigned to him for carriage ought to have been delivered lies upon the carrier of goods—Manasarovar Agencies v. Governor General in Council, A.I.R. 1955 Mys. 123. Where on the date on which the consignee went to the railway station to take delivery of the goods the station master refused to give delivery, the period of limitation for a suit under this Article ran from that date as being the date on which the railway company ought to have delivered but failed to deliver the goods—G. I. P. Ry. v. Radhey Mal, 47 All. 549, 23 A.L.J. 398, A.I.R. 1925 All. 656. Time runs from the date on which the goods ought to be delivered, and the question as to when the recovery of the plaintiff's goods became hopeless is immaterial—Secy. of State v. Dunlop Rubber Co., 6 Lah. 301, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 478, 88 I.C. 974. The expression "when the goods ought to have been delivered" in the third column of this Article must be construed as meaning when the defendant company finally said that "the goods would not be delivered". Time would begin to run under this Article from after a definite refusal, or a declaration of inability, to deliver by the Railway Company—Palanichami v. Governor General of India, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 448, 58 L.W. 592, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 133; Raigarh Jute Mills Ltd. v. Commissioner for the Port of Calcutta, A.I.R. 1947 Cal. 98; G. G. in Council v. Khadi, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 210, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 438; Jainarain v. G. G. in Council 4 D.L.R. (Cal.) 225, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 462; Union of India v. Adam Hajee, A.I.R. 1954 Trav. Co. 362; Muhammadi Steamship Co. v. V. K. Vallabdas, A.I.R. 1957 Trav. Co. 133; Oudh Trihut Ry. v. Mrs. Karam Chand, A.I.R. 1958 All. 234. It has, however, been held in the recent Full Bench decision in Dominion of India v. Amin Chand Bhola Nath, A.I.R. 1957 Punj. 49 overruling its previous decisions in 1951 Simla 254 and 1955 Punj. 83 that the Court must decide the reasonable time within which the consigned goods ought to have been delivered having regard to all the circumstances of the case and fix that date as the date from which limitation under Art. 31 should start. See also Chand & Co. v. Sree Ambica Steam Navigation Co. Ltd., 100 C.L.J. 45. Time runs under this Article, from the date when goods should have been delivered; but the difficulty it raises is that it fixes no specific time for the delivery of the goods, the ordinary rule being that goods have to be delivered by a carrier within a reasonable time specially when the railways are afflicted by war conditions and congestion of traffic—Seetharama v. Hydrabad Estate, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 298, 1949 M.W.N. 599, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 30; Raigarh Jute Mills Ltd. v. Commissioner for the Port of Calcutta, supra. Where the plaintiff made over certain goods to the Railway Company in August 1918, but the goods not having arrived at their destination, there was continuous correspondence between the parties up to February 1920, and the plaintiff was being assured that the matter was being inquired into, and ultimately he instituted a suit in March 1920, held that since the plaintiff had all along been assured that inquiry was being made and he had even hopes of getting delivery of the goods within one year of the suit, it cannot be said that his claim was filed more than a year after the date when the goods ought to have been delivered. There is no inflexible rule that time must begin to run from the expiry of the ordinary period of transit—Jugal Kishore v. G. I. P. Ry., 45 All. 43 (46), 20 A.L.J. 792, 68 I.C. 981; G. G. in Council v. Kasiram, 29 Pat.L.T. 477, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 268, 4 D.L.R. (Pat.) 24; Jainarain v. G. G. of India, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 462, 4 D.L.R. (Cal.) 225. G. G. in Council v. Ahmed, 1951 N.L.J. 254, A.I.R. 1952 Nag. 77; Dominion of India v. Ahmad, A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 115, I.L.R. 1954 Nag. 46; Chhote Lal v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1952 V. P. 83; Mutsaddilal v. Governor General, 1952 A.L.J. 451, A.I.R. 1952 All. 897 (F.B.). But when a suit is filed more than one year after dates of letters from railway authorities asking for full description about goods or saying that the goods will be rebooked as soon as they are received the suit is barred under this Article—P. C. Varma & Sons v. G. G. in Council, A.I.R. 1950 E.P. 160. In a suit falling under this Article, where no portion of the consignment has been delivered, it is sometimes necessary to take evidence on the question as to when the consignment ought to have been delivered, which must in any case be regarded as a question of fact; but where a great part of a consignment has been delivered on a certain day, there is ordinarily no necessity to enter into evidence on the question as to when the balance of the consignment ought to have been delivered, because the time when the consignment as a whole ought to have been delivered is manifestly the time when the greater part of the consignment arrived at its destination—Gopi Ram v. G. I. P. Ry. Co., 8 P.L.T. 767, 103 I.C. 383, A.I.R. 1927 Pat. 335, The date on which a substantial portion of the consignment was delivered would be the date when the remaining portion ought to be delivered. A suit filed more than one year after such date would therefore be barred by limitation—Darjeeling Himalayan Railway Co. Ltd. v. Jetmull Bhojraj, 60 C.W.N. 683, A.I R. 1956 Cal. 390. Shamburam v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1958 Pat. 118. Where the consignee, to whom 4 packages had been consigned, found on inspecting the consignment that although three of the packages were a portion of the consignment as consigned, the fourth was not a portion of the consignment, and he refused to take ordinary delivery and demanded open delivery, whereupon the Railway Company permitted him open delivery on a subsequent date, but on opening the consignment he found that the goods therein contained were not the goods which had been consigned to him, and instituted a suit against the Railway Company for damages, held that time began to run when the Company permitted open delivery of the packing in question, and not from the date when he had taken delivery of the other three packages—Bala Prosad v. B. & N. W. Ry. 3 Luck. 102, 106 I C. 311, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 478 (480).

Misdelivery:—See Note 310 in Article 30 under heading "Loss."

Part V.—Two years.

32.—Against one who, having a right to use property for specific purposes, perverts it to other purposes.	Two years.	When the perversion first becomes known to the person injured thereby.

313. Suits under this Article:—This Article should not be restricted to a suit for compensation. The present Article is independent of the nature of the remedy, and applies equally to all classes of suits brought upon the cause of action referred to in this Article—Soman Gope v. Raghubir, 24 Cal. 160 (162). Thus, from the undernoted cases it will be evident that this Article applies to suits for injunction, ejectment, etc.

A suit by a Zemindar for removal of certain structures erected by the mortgagees of an occupancy-holding, upon the holding, without the Zemindar's consent, is governed by this Article, as the defendants are persons who have a right to use the land of the plaintiff for certain specified purposes, and they have perverted it to other purposes—Lach Ram v. Jangi Rai, 8 A.L.J. 914, 12 I.C. 108. A suit by a Zemindar against certain occupancy tenants who have converted arable land into a grove or wood by planting trees thereon, for an injunction directing them to remove the trees is governed by this Article—Gangadhar v. Zahurriya, 8 All. 466; Jaikishen v. Ram Lall, 20 All. 519. But where trees were planted upon the waste lands of the village by certain trespassers, a suit for removal of the trees would be governed by Article 120 and not by this Article, because the trespassers were not "persons having a right to use property for specific purposes" within the meaning of this Article—Mushaiaf Ali v. Iftkhar Hussain, 10 All. 634 (635). If the suit against the trespasser is one for removal of the trees and for possession, Art. 144 applies—Muhammad Shafi v. Bindeswari, 46 All. 52, 75 I.C. 266, A.I.R. 1924 All. 443. Article 32 deals with the case of a person having legal right to use certain property. It has no application to cases where in substance the plaintiff seeks a greater relief—Lachman v. Lal Ratnakar, I.L.R. (1937) All. 623, 1937 A.L.J. 515, A.I.R. 1937 All. 472. A suit by a landlord against tenants for possession of land by removal of trees grown on it by the tenants—they having no legal right to use the land, is governed by Art. 142, and not Art. 32—Gurcharam v. Jai Narain, A.I.R. 1935 All. 964, 159 I.C. 521. Where a tenant without landlord's consent builds upon the abadi land which is no part of his tenancy lands, he, by such act takes exclusive possession of such land to the ouster of the landlord, and a suit by the landlord for the demolition of the building is not a suit falling under this Article—Lachman v. Lal Ratna Kar, supra.

A suit instituted under sec. 155 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to eject a tenant who had allowed a portion of his holding to be encroached upon by a stranger and had exchanged another plot of land of the tenancy in contravention of the terms of the kabuliyat, is governed by this Article and not by Article 143—Taher v. Tarafdi, 20 C.W.N. 661, 33 I.C. 923. Where the defendant, who had by virtue of a right of easement formerly placed a number of beams on the plaintiff's wall and constructed a thatched roof on them, subsequently placed on the wall heavier and more numerous beams and built a masonry roof on them, a suit by the plaintiff for removal of the beams does not fall under this Article. There is no perversion of use in this case; the use remains the same, namely, placing beams on the wall; but the defendants have carried out the purpose in a different way by placing heavier and more numerous beams. Article 32 does not apply, but probably Art. 120—Mohan v.

Bishambhar, 46 All. 68, 78 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1924 All. 450 reversing Bishambar v. Janki, A.I.R. 1922 All. 320, 69 I.C. 819.

This Article applies to a suit brought under secs. 25 (a) and 155 of the Bengal Tenancy Act for the ejectment of a tenant and for removal of trees planted by him on land leased out for agricultural purposes. Article 120 does not apply to such a case —Soman v. Raghubir, 24 Cal. 160. This Article applies to a suit by a landlord for ejectment of an occupancy tenant on the ground that he has diverted his holding to non-agricultural purpose—Gulab Singh v. Devendra, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 286, 229 I.C. 528, 1947 N.L.J. 25, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 20, or, to an unauthorised purpose thereby rendering it unfit for the purpose for which it is held—Rabul v. Ghulam, 26 L.L.T. 31. A suit against a tenant for mandatory injunction to fill up a tank excavated by him on a land leased out for agricultural purposes, and in the alternative for ejectment, falls under this Article, and not under Art. 120—Sharoop v. Jogessur, 26 Cal. 564 (F.B.) practically over-ruling Kedarnath v. Khetterpaul, 6 Cal. 34 and disapproving Gonesh v. Gondour, 9 Cal. 147. So also, a suit for ejectment as well as for compensation against a tenant who has broken the conditions of the lease by making excavation on agricultural land, is governed by this Article—Krishna Das v. Mohendra, 25 C.W.N. 930, 62 I C. 779, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 62.

Where the Mahomedan community of a certain village had been allowed by the Hindu proprietor to use a portion of his land as a public grave yard, and the defendants who were some of the Mahomedan residents of the village, appropriated it to their own use by planting trees thereon, and the proprietor of the land sued for removal of the trees, held that the suit was governed by Article 32. It was contended that Art. 32 could not apply until and unless some particular person (and not the public generally) was in possession of the property and that property had been given to him for a specific purpose. This contention was overruled—Ismail v. Thakur Lal, 13 O.L.J. 428, A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 341, 93 I.C. 89.

Appropriation of common property:—Where a property (e.g., a village pond) was reserved for the common use of all the owners of the village, but the defendant took possession of the property and appropriated it to his own use, it has been held in some cases that a suit for an injunction restraining the defendant from cultivating the land is governed by this Article, in as much as the defendant has perverted the property to purposes other than those for which it was intended; this Article is not restricted to the case of a defendant who was, before the encroachment, in actual and exclusive possession of the property for a specific purpose and subsequently perverts it to other purposes—Ghulam Muhammad v. Abdul Sattar, 89 I.C. 405, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 653; Bhagwana v. Bhagawana, 31 P.L.R. 14, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 283 (284), 121 I.C. 186. A person, who in common with other persons, has a right to use a public property (e.g., a public pathway) may be said to be a person having a right to use property for specific purposes; and if he builds on the land, a suit for removal of the building is governed by this Article—Dewa Singh v. Qarum, 30 P.L.R. 399, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 535, 118 I.C. 447; Bhagwan v. Ramanand, 115 I.C. 73. But in several other cases of the same High Court it has been held that the word "property" in this Article means the property of a particular person or persons and does not include a public property (e.g., a public road), and that a person who has a right to use a public property (e.g., a public thoroughfare) in common with the general public cannot be said to be a "person having a right to use property for specific purposes." That expression applies to persons who have a specific right of some kind peculiar to themselves (i.e., an exclusive right). If persons having only a right to use a public road in common with others appropriate the road to themselves by erecting huts, etc., on it, a suit for removal of the obstruction falls under Article 120, and not under Article 32—Main Pirthi v. Hans Raj, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 794 (795), 112 I.C. 381; Gurdit Singh v. Hari Singh, 29 P.L.R. 308, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 792, 110 I.C. 517; Achar Singh v. Badhawa, 2 P.L.R. 1913, 124 P.R. 1912, 15 I.C. 285 (286). See also Ganda Singh v. Nathu Ram, 151 P.L.R. 1912, 13 I.C. 660; Lal Singh v. Hari Singh, 3 Lah.L.J. 128, 60 I.C. 20, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 242; Chandu v. Gajju, 26 P.L.R. 283, 88 I.C. 176, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 455. But where before the perversion the defendants had a real right in the land itself, parts of which any of them could time to time temporarily appropriate and use (e.g., to cremate a dead body), a suit against the defendants for building on the ground is governed by this Article—Nand Ram v. Jaichand, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 186 (187), 112 I.C. 844 (following 13 O.L.J. 428, supra, and distinguishing A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 792 and 794, supra).

In a later Full Bench case, the Lahore High Court has reviewed all the cases cited above, and expressed the opinion that the suit does not fall under Art. 32. The language of the present Article shows that it is applicable to those cases in which the plaintiff seeks the assistance of the Court merely to get rid of the perversion But where the defendant's act, though amounting to a perversion of the user from the original purpose, really amounts to an ouster of the plaintiff from the property and the object of the suit is not to get rid of the perversion simpliciter, but to have the dispute as to the title settled, Art. 32 can have no application, but Art. 144 or 120, according as the relief claimed is one for possession or injunction—Mastan Singh v. Sant Singh, 14 Lah. 267, 34 P.L.R. 618, 145 I.C. 553, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 705 (708, 709) (F.B.).

As a result of this decision, the cases of Ghulam Muhammad v. Abdul Sattar, Bhagwana v. Bhagawana, Dewa Singh v. Qarum, and Bhagwan v. Ramanand, cited above, must be deemed to be overruled.

A landlord has no right to settle Jaimazrua-am lands and if he purports to do so, the person with whom he purports to settle them acquires no tenancy right by virtue of the settlement. If such a person brings the land under cultivation, his act amounts to an ouster of the public, and the period of limitation for a suit to recover possession is twelve years from the ouster. This Article has no application to such a suit—Lachman v. Shankar, 21 Pat.L.T. 109, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 106, 184 I.C. 493.

313A. Starting point of limitation:—It should be noted that time for limitation does not run until the plaintiff has knowledge of the perversion. The time of perversion is not the time from which limitation runs—Probhati v. Taraknath, 46 C.W.N. 786; Ram Narain v. Shirpal, A.I.R. 1938 All. 20, 173 I.C. 40. When a suit is brought two years after the date of knowledge of perversion, the suit is barred—Shib v. Panchanan, 64 C.L.J. 71.

33.—Under the Legal Representatives' Suits Act, 1855 (XII of 1855), against an executor.	Two years.	When the wrong complained of is done.
34.—Under the same Act against an administrator.	Two years.	When the wrong complained of is done.
35.—Under the same Act against any other representative.	Two years.	When the wrong complained of is done.

314. The Legal Representatives' Suits Act permits the exerutors, administrators of the deceased, etc., to be sued for any wrong committed by him in his lifetime for which he would have been subject to an action, provided such wrong was committed within a year before his death.

Articles 33—35 provide for suits against executors, etc., whereas Article 20 provides for suits by executors, etc.

[Arts. 33-35 of the present Act correspond to Art. 33 of Act XV of 1877. Arts. 34 and 35 of the old Act have been omitted for reasons stated in the notes below; and to preserve the numbering of the old Act, Art. 33 has been split up into three Articles.]

Arts. 34 and 35 of Act XV of 1877 ran thus :—

34. For the recovery of a wife.	Two years.	When possession is demanded and refused.
35. For the restitution of conjugal rights.	Two years.	When restitution is demanded and is refused by the husband or wife, being of full age, and sound mind.

315. Under the Act of 1877, there was a conflict of opinion as to the applicability of these Articles and as to the application of sec. 23 to the suits contemplated by these Articles.

Thus, where a suit for recovery of wife was brought by the husband against a person who detained the wife, it was held in one case that the cause of action arose when the husband demanded possession of his wife and was refused, and section 23 did not apply. The suit was barred unless brought within 2 years after demand—Ghizni v. Mehram, 60 P.R. 1879. In another case it was held, however, that a third person who harbours a run-away wife does a continuing wrong, and in a suit by the husband against such person for the recovery of his wife a fresh period of limitation runs at every moment of the time during which the wrong continues, under sec. 23—Khairuddin v. Budhi, 80 P.R. 1892.

So also, in respect of suits under Article 35, it was held in some cases that the refusal of a wife to return to her husband and to allow him the exercise of conjugal rights was a continuing wrong giving rise to constantly recurring causes of action, so that the suit though governed by Article 35 was not excluded from the operation of section 23. The suit was therefore practically exempt from limitation—Bai Sari v. Sankla, 16 Bom. 714; Hem Chand v. Shiv, 16 Bom. 715 (Note); Ghizni v. Mehram, 60 P.R. 1879. In an Allahabad case it was held that since the personal law of Hindus and Mahomedans did not require an antecedent demand in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, Article 35 was inapplicable to such a suit; but Article 120 would apply as read with section 23, and the suit was practically never barred—Binda v. Kaunsilia, 13 All. 126. In several other cases it was laid down that if a demand and refusal were in fact made, the suit would be governed by Article 35 and would be barred if brought more than two years after demand, notwithstanding the provisions of section 23—Dhanjibhoy v. Hirabai, 25 Bom. 644 (F.B.); Saravanai v. Poovayi, 28 Mad. 436; Asirunnessa v. Buzloo Meah, 34 Cal. 79, 11 C.W.N. 437. In Fakirgauda v. Gangi, 23 Bom. 307, the Judges were in doubt as to whether section 23 would apply.

To avoid this conflict of decisions, the Legislature has omitted those Articles from the present Act, so that the suits contemplated by those Articles are now altogether exempt from the bar of limitation.

But when a right to restitution has already been barred under the Act of 1877, it cannot be revived by reason of the fact that it is saved from the bar of limitation by the present Act—Muhammad v. Sakina, 37 Bom. 393, 14 Bom.L.R. 908, 17 I.C. 629 (632). The Allahabad High Court holds on the contrary that in the absence of a provision in the present Act to the effect that "nothing herein contained shall be deemed to revive any right to sue barred under the old Act" the plaintiff's remedy though barred under the old Act subsists under the new Act of 1908—Ayesha v. Faiyaz, 34 All. 412. This view, it is submitted, is incorrect. The provision 'Nothing herein.....Act" has not been reproduced in the present Act for the obvious reason that a similar provision exists in sec. 6 of the General Clauses Act of 1897.

36.—For compensation for any malfeasance, misfeasance or non-feasance independent of contract and not herein specially provided for	Two years.	When the malfeasance, misfeasance or non-feasance takes place.

316. Application of Article:—Art. 36 is a general Article. It refers to action which may be taken on account of the commission of some act which is in itself unlawful, or being the improper performance of some lawful act, or the omission of some act which a person is by law bound to do. It is a general Article for suits for compensation for all acts and omissions amounting to torts which are not provided for elsewhere—Kripa Ram v. Kunwar Bahadur, 54 All. 467, 136 I.C. 809, A.I.R. 1932 All. 256 (258), 1932 A L.J. 241.

Malfeasance, misfeasance and non-feasance:—These words are equivalent to, and have the same significance as, the word 'tort'. They have the widest import and embrace all possible acts or omissions commonly known as 'torts' by English lawyers—Esso v. Steam Ship "Savitri," 11 Bom. 133 (135). These terms are generally applied to some wrongful acts committed by persons standing in a fiduciary or quasi-fiduciary character, such as executors, trustees and directors of companies—per Maclean, C.J. in Magnum v. Dolhin, 25 Cal. 692 (699).

317. Suits not under this Article:—Article 36 is a general or residuary Article governing suits for compensation for torts to whom no special Article applies—Esso v. Steam Ship "Savitri," 11 Bom. 133; Magnum v. Dolhin, 25 Cal. 692; Jadu Nath v Hari Kar, 36 Cal. 141; Surat v. Umar, 22 Cal. 877; Ram Narain v. Umrao, 29 All. 615; Veeramma v. Subba Rao, 35 I.C. 98 (102), 31 M.L.J. 257; Panna Lal v. Adjai Coal Co. Ltd., 31 C.W.N. 92 (95); Ghulam v. Iqbal, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 118, 184 I.C. 130. Thus, a suit for compensation for wrongful attachment of moveable property before judgment is a suit for compensation for "wrongful seizure under legal process" under the specific Art. 29, rather than a suit under Art. 36—Ram Narain v. Umrao Singh, 29 All. 615 (617); Pannaji v. Senaji, 53 Mad. 621, 126 I.C. 721, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 635 (637). A suit for compensation for the wrongful seizure of a ship under an order of Court is governed by the more specific Art. 29, rather than by this Article—Madras Steam Navigation Co. Ltd., v. Shalimar Works Ltd., 42 Cal. 85 (108). The judgment-creditors' act of attaching the property of their judgment-debtor and asking the Court to distribute the sale proceeds among them, or their act of withdrawal of this money under the orders of the Court, cannot be regarded as "misfeasance" or "malfeasance" within the meaning of the section—Ram Narain v. Brij Banke, 39 All. 322 (330).

Where the malfeasance, etc., amounts to a trespass upon land, this article would not apply, but Article 39 which is more specific—Narasimmacharya v. Raghupathia, 6 Mad. 176. Plaintiff mortgaged his house to defendants who sold the same by a power contained in the deed, and possession was given to the purchaser. Some timber (which was not mortgaged) was stored in the house, and was not returned or accounted for to the plaintiff, for which he brought the present suit, alleging that the defendants had converted it to their use. Held that the plaintiff could recover the timber or its value, and the suit for such reocvery was governed by the more specific Art. 49 than by this Article, as the suit was for recovery of the specific moveable property or for compensation for wrongfully taking the same—Passanha v. Madras Deposit and Benefit Society, 11 Mad. 333. Where the compensation-money awarded by Government for land acquired by them had been withdrawn by a tenant representing himself to be the owner, and a suit was subsequently brought by the landlord against the tenant for the recovery of his share of the compensation money, held that the suit came more properly under Article 62 or 120 than under this Article—Khetter Kristo v. Dinendra, 3 C.W.N. 202.

A suit for damages against the defendant for making a false accusation against the plaintiff to the police, when no prosecution was instituted, in a suit for libel or slander, and the limitation applicable to such a suit is that prescribed by Art. 24 or Art. 25 and is not governed by this Article—Harman v. Doola, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 709, 39' P.L.R. 686, 169 I.C. 640.

This article applies to tortious acts independent of contract. If a suit arises out of tort, and if it arises both from tort and contract and there is no waiver of tort, it has to be brought within the period prescribed by this Article—Court of Words, Muzzafurnagar v. Ajodha, I.L.R. (1938) All. 454, 1938 A.L.J. 328, A.I.R. 1938. All 305; C. Rai v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1955 J. & K. 36. If the suit for damages for malfeasance or misfeasance or negligence is based upon a liability ex contractu (whether the contract be express or implied), the proper Article applicable is Art. 115 (but not Art. 120)—Jagannath v. Kalidas, 8 Pat. 766, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 245 (247), 10 P.L.T. 191. If the case really arises out of a contract (e.g., pledge of jewels), though technically the defendant's act amounts to a conversion, Art. 36 cannot apply—Ramaswamy v. Palaniappa, 30 L.W. 898, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 364 (371), 122 I.C. 37. Where the defendant borrowed from the plaintiff his car for private use, and while it was in his use it met with an accident which resulted in considerable damage to the car, a suit, by the plaintiff to recover the repairing charges and damages was governed by Art. 115 as it was a case of contract of bailment, and not by Art. 36—Holloway v. Holland, 10 O.W.N. 1105, 145 I.C. 1001, A I.R. 1933 Oudh 518 (519). A suit by an auction-purchaser against the decree-holder for compensation on account of a misdescription of the boundaries of the land in the proclamation of sale is not governed by this Article, is as much as the liability of the decree-holder, if any, is based on the contract of sale—Mahomed v. Navroji, 10 Bom. 214 (218). But quaere whether a Court-sale can be called a contract.

Where the defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff certain goods of another person on the representation that he (defendant) had authority to sell those goods when in fact he had none, and afterwards failed to sell those goods, a suit by the plaintiff for compensation is not one arising in tort but one connected with a contract and arising out of the incidents of a contract. The suit is governed by Article 115 and not by this Article—Vairavan v. Avicha, 38 Mad. 275 (277). Where some of the joint tenants of certain lands took the use and occupation of part of the joint lands to the exclusion of the other joint tenants, a suit by the latter for compensation for such use and occupation by the former was governed by Article 120; Article 36 could not apply, for when the defendants, being tenants in common with the plaintiffs, exclusively occupied a portion of ijmali lands, they could not be regarded as doing any act of misfeasance, malfeasance or non-feasance within the meaning of this Article —Robert Watson & Co. v Ram Chand, 23 Cal. 799 (804).

An application under sec. 214 of the old Indian Companies Act, 1882 (sec. 235 of the Companies Act, 1913) by an official liquidator praying that the directors of the company in liquidation be ordered to pay over to him a sum of money which had been improperly distributed among the shareholders, was not a suit, and therefore this or any other Article in the first division of this Schedule could not apply to it—Ramasami v. Sreeramulu, 19 Mad. 149. In another case it was held that a proceeding under sec. 214 of the Companies Act (1882) was not subject to the limitation provided by Article 36, as such proceeding was not a suit—Connell v. Himalaya Bank, 18 All. 12 (15). But sec. 235 (3) of the Indian Companies Act of 1913 expressly lays down that an application under sec. 235 of that Act is to be treated as a suit for the purposes of the Limitation Act. The question is as to which Article of the Limitaiton Act is applicable. The Lahore High Court holds that this application is governed by Article 36—Bank of Multan Ld. v. Hukum Chand, 71 I.C. 890, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 58; Daulat Ram v. Bharat National Bank, 5 Lah. 27 (30), A I.R. 1924 Lah. 435, 79 I.C. 740; Bhim Singh v. Basheshar, 8 Lah. 167, 100 I.C. 907, A I.R. 1927 Lah. 443. But the Allahabad High Court is of opinion that Article 36 cannot apply, because the liability of the directors is not a matter independent of contract; the directors are not men in the street or trespassers, but they are bound by the Articles of Association, which contain the contract between the company and the directors. Moreover, if Article 36 were to apply, a fraudulent director has only to keep the shareholders and others in ignorance of his mischievous acts for two years and he would then be immune. Article 120 applies to the case—In re Union Bank, 47 All. 669, 23 A.L.J. 473, 88 I.C. 785, A.I.R. 1925 All. 579. The Bombay High Court is also of opinion that the relation between a bank and its directors are in part governed by numerous clauses in the Articles of Association which constitute part, though not the whole, of the contract between the bank and its directors. A claim against the directors for breach of trust is clearly not independent of contract. Article 120 governs the suit—Govind v. Rangnath, 54 Bom. 226, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 572 (582), 32 Bom.L.R. 232. The Madras High Court is of opinion that a suit (application), under sec. 235, Companies Act, for compelling the directors to pay certain amounts by way of compensation in respect of their acts of misfeasance may fall under Article 36 or 120—Narasimha v. Official Assignee, 54 Mad. 153, 128 I.C. 477, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 58 (60). The Sind Court holds that misfeasance dealt with in proceedings under sec. 235 of the Companies Act is not independent of contract, and Art. 36 is not applicable (but Art. 115)—Karachi Bank v. Shewaram, 143 I.C. 713, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 103 (107, 108). As to applicability of this Article to suits for damages for loss sustained on account of misleading prospectus by the directors see Note No. 318 "Suits under this Article."

This Article does not include wrongs committed by trustees in respect of trusts. Article 120 and not this Article is the proper Article applicable to a suit filed against a trustee or ex-trustee by a co-trustee or a succeeding trustee of a trust, to make good the loss sustained by the trust by reason of the defendant's omission to collect monies due to the trust—Subbiah v. Samiappa, I.L.R. (1938) Mad. 586, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 334, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 353 (F.B.). See also O. Rm. O. M. Sp. Firm v. Nagappa, 67 I.A. 448, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 175, 45 C.W.N. 385, 73 C.L.J. 166, 43 Bom. L.R, 440, A.I.R. 1941 P.C. 1, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 393 (P.C.); India Sugars v. Estate of Ramalingam, I.L.R. 1953 Mad. 1097, (1953) 1 M.L.J. 577, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 694.

318. Suits under this Article:—A suit by the plaintiff to recover damages for the loss of his ship caused by collision with the defendant's steamer is an action on tort founded upon the negligence of the defendant or his servants in the management of his steamer, and must be brought within two years under this Article—Essoo v. Steam Ship "Savitri", 11 Bom. 133 (138). During the tenure of office of the Chairman of a Municipal Council the manager embezzled sums of money. The Council sued the Chairman to recover the amount, on the ground that the Chairman, as the agent appointed by the Municipality was bound to collect the dues and see that proper accounts were kept, and that he was liable to pay the loss which had occurred by the said embezzlement; it was held that the relation of principal and agent did not exist, that Arts. 89 and 90 did not therefore apply; and that the case was governed by Art. 36 —Srinivasa v. Municipal Council of Karur, 22 Mad. 342. A suit claiming compensations for damage said to have been caused by the failure of a local body to maintain its water system in proper order, is governed by this Article—Mahomed Saadat v. Administrator, Corporation of City of Lahore, I.L.R. (1945) Lah. 523, 47 P.L.R. 302, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 324 (F.B.). A suit brought by the son of a deceased shebait of a debutter estate, for the recovery of money advanced by the deceased on account of the debuttor estate at a time when he had been wrongfully kept out of office by the defendant, who had claimed the office as against the deceased and realised money out of the estate, was held to be governed by this Article, if the suit was brought against the defendant personally; but if it was against the defendant as representing the debuttor estate, it would be governed by Art. 120—Peary Mohan v. Narendra 5 C.W.N. 273. A suit for damages on the ground that the defendant had maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause presented a petition in insolvency, as a result of which the plaintiff was adjudicated insolvent is governed by this Article—Nagappa v. Trojan & Co., A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 446, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 173. A suit for damages for wrongful seizure of goods by the Official Receiver acting at the instance of a creditor and not under the orders of the Insolvency Court is governed by this Article—Jhamdumal v. Janki, 1942 A.L.W. 599. A suit for damages for wrongful attachment of moveable property before judgment falls under Article 29, but if the attachment is not wrongful, the suit may fall under Article 36—Manavikraman v. Avisilan, 19 Mad. 80 (82). See this case cited in Note 306 under Art. 29. A suit for compensation for injury done to plaintiff's stock-in-trade caused by persons who made the attachment before judgment treading on it, falls under this Article—Sokkalinga v. Krishnaswami, 38 M.L.J. 324, 55 I.C. 786 (790). Where the Collector of Customs detained the plaintiff's goods on representations made by the defendant company maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, a suit for damages for such detention against the defendant is governed by Article 36. Article 49 cannot apply because the defendant company never had possession of or control over the goods and the Collector cannot be looked upon as the defendant company's agent—Albert Bonnan v. Imperial Tobacco Co., 30 C.W.N. 465, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 757, 94 I.C. 444; Imperial Tobacco Co. v. A. Bonnan, 46 C.L.J. 455, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 1, 106 I.C. 277. A suit by a temple servant who has been suspended from service for compensation for the loss of perquisites during the period of suspension, is governed by this Article—Bharadwaj v. Arunchela, 41 Mad. 528. A suit for damages for wrongful deposit of silt on the plaintiff's land by the defendant falls under this Article—Monumal v. Gobindram, 27 S.L.R. 41, 144 I.C. 452, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 176 (178). Where the claim is for damages in respect of removal of clay it is not a mere claim for compensation founded on trespass so as to attract Art. 39 of the Act but it is a claim in respect of a tortious act which comes within the scope of this Article—Hirdey v. Babu Ram, 1940 O.W.N. 1318. A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 172, 191 I.C. 885. See Union of India v. Muralidhar, A.I.R. 1952 Assam 141. Where a suit for damages is brought against an objector who persists in retaining attached cattle even after the dismissal of his objection and the declaration of the right of the judgment-debtor to them, it is governed by this Article as the retention of the cattle by the objector amounted to misfeasance—Ghamandi v. Murli, 1943 A.L.W. 38.

A suit for damages in respect of ex-communication from caste is governed by Art. 36—Devchand v. Ghanashyam, A.I.R. 1935 Bom.. 361, 37 Bom. L.R. 417, 153 I.C. 414. Where a person dissuades other persons from taking a certain building on rent by making false statements as to habitability and safety of the building, the person so representing is liable in tort, the tort being analogous to slander of title and falling within the broader description of injurious falsehood. The action is one for misfeasance independent of contract and this Article applies to such action—Hargobind v. Kikabhai, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 348, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 84, 176 I.C. 257.

Where the contract between the plaintiff and the defendant was that the defendant was to take water from the plaintiff's tank only for the purpose of raising a second crop on his land, but the defendant took water not for the second crop but for the purpose of watering the field to facilitate the ploughing for the next season; and wasted the water of the tank thereby causing loss and diminution of water supply to the second crop already planted by other ryots of the village, and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover damages for the unauthorised use of the tank water, it was held that the suit was barred as having been brought three years after the alleged act of unauthorised user. The action was one in tort because the wrongful act complained of was the illegal use of water. Article 36 and not Art. 115 would apply to such a case—Manga Reddi v. P. Venkata Raghava, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 250, 40 M.L.J. 255, 161 I.C. 538.

This Article applies to an action against the directors of a company for compensation for loss suffered as the result of misleading prospectus. In such a case the tort is independent of the contract. The liability of the directors is confined to something which preceded the contract—Dwarkadass v. Menavedan, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 325, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 286, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 5; Raja of Nilambur v. Amirchand, 57 L.W. 312, A.I.R. 1944 Mad. 431.

319. Attachment and removal of crops:—A suit for damages for wrongful attachment, cutting and carying away of plaintiff's crops is governed by either Article 48 or 49, and not by Art. 36 which is a general Article in respect of suits on torts. Jadu Nath v. Hari Kar, 17 C.W.N., 308 (311), reversing Jadunath v. Hari Kar, 36 Cal. 141 (=Sripati v. Hari Kar, 12 C.W.N. 1090). A suit for damages for wrongful distraint of standing crops is governed by Article 36, and not by Art. 29, because standing crops are not moveable property within the meaning of the latter Article —Hari Charan v. Hari Kar, 32 Cal. 459 (462); Mohesh Chandra v. Hari Kar, 9 C.W.N. 376. But the Madras High Court is of opinion that a suit for damages for wrongful distraint of plaintiff's standing crops is really a suit for compensation for trespass upon the plaintiff's land, and falls under the specific Article 39, and the general Article 36 does not apply—Venkataramanujan v. Basavayya, 25 M.L.J. 447, 21 I.C. 213 (215, 216).

320. Wrongful removal of crops without attachment:—A suit for cutting and carrying away crops without any process of attachment falls under the specific Article 48 and not under Article 36, which is a general Article for torts—Surat Lal v. Umar, 22 Cal. 788 (882). In the Calcutta Full Bench case of Mangun v. Dolhin, 25 Cal. 692 (699, 700) also, the majority were in favour of the application of Article 48 or 49, and decided against the application of Article 36. This decision practically overrules Pandah v. Jennuddi, 4 Cal. 665.

321. Cutting away trees:—Where land with trees planted thereon was hypothecated, and afterwards the mortgagors sold the trees to the defendants, who cut and carried away the trees, a suit instituted by the mortgagees against the defendants for compensation for cutting and carrying away the trees and thereby impairing the value of the security is governed by Art. 36 or 49—Muniappa v. Seshayya, 3 L.W. 341, 32 I.C. 901. A suit by the mortgagor against the mortgagee (usufructuary) for damages in respect of certain trees wrongfully cut by the mortgagee during the time he was in possession of the mortgaged property, is governed by this Article—Sivachidambara v. Kamatchi, 33 Mad. 71. According to the Bombay High Court a suit for compensation for the loss occasioned to the mortgagor by the wrongful act of the mortgagee in possession is a suit which would not be governed by Article 36 but would be governed by Article 120, and the cause of action would arise on the day the mortgagor would demand redemption and is refused—Genuji v. Murlidhar, A.I.R. 1954 Bom. 417. The Calcutta High Court holds that a suit by a landlord for compensation for the removal of trees cut down by a tenant is not governed by Art. 36 but by Art. 48 or 49—Mahomed Hamidar v. Ali Fakir, 10 C.L.J. 25, 2 I.C. 955. For a case in which a suit for entering on the plaintiff's land and cutting away trees was held to be a suit for compensation for trespass upon immoveable property, see 20 N.L.R. 80 cited under Art. 39.

322. Starting point of limitation:—The time from which limitation begins to run is the date of the alleged misfeasance or malfeasance, and not the date when the plaintiff comes to know of the misfeasance. The knowledge of the plaintiff has nothing to do with the question—Sivachidambura v. Kamatchi, 33 Mad. 71 (74).

In a suit for compensation governed by Art. 36, section 23 would be applicable if there is a continuance of the injury caused by the defendant. Limitation will run when the injury ceases—Suhajmal v. Maneksha, 6 Bom.L.R. 704. In this case the misfeasance complained of was the issue of a prohibitory order which was allowed to continue in force for five years. See also Manga v. Changa Mal, 22 A.L.J. 977, A.I.R. 1925 All. 131. If the suit for compensation for malfeasance arises out of some specific injury, sec. 24 will apply, and limitation will run from the date when the injury results—Jagannath v. Kalidas, 8 Pat. 776, 10 P.L.T. 191, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 245 (246).

But where the acts of the defendant do not constitute a continuing cause of action, e.g., where the defendant has been depositing silt on the plaintiff's land for the last 15 years, and each act of depositing silt affords a separate cause of action, the plaintiff can claim compensation for damage sustained by him in consequence of silt deposited during two years prior to suit—Morumal v. Gobindram, 27 S.L.R. 41, 144 I.C. 452, A.I.R. 1933 Sind, 176. Under Art. 36 time begins to run from the date when the non-feasance takes place—Tavoy Municipality v. Khoo Zun, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 312.

The starting point of limitation in a suit for damage for malicious insolvency proceedings resulting the adjudication of the plaintiff is the date of the order of annulment—Nagappa v. Trojan & Co., A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 446, (1948) 1 M.L.J. 173.

Part VI.—Three years.

37.—For compensation for obstructing a way or a water-course.	Three years.	The date of the obstruction.

323. An obstruction to a watercourse being a continuous act of wrong, as to which the cause of action is renewed de die in diem, so long as the obstructions continue, section 23 applies; and a suit brought after three years from the date of the obstruction would not be barred—Rajrup v. Abdul, 6 Cal. 394 (P.C.). Compensation for obstructions and diversions can be recovered at any time within three years from any date at which there has been an obstruction, provided that compensation cannot be recovered for a period exceeding three years before the filing of the suit. (See Starling, 191). Where the obstruction caused by closing the main sluice of a tank continued and the plaintiff was prevented from removing the same by threat of violence, it was a continuing wrong under this Article read with sec. 23, and the suit was in time if brought within three years of the last day to which the wrong continued —Sona Patil v. Laxman, 82 I.C. 482, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 189.

38.—For compensation for diverting a water-course.	Three years.	The date of the diversion.
39.—For compensation for trespass upon immoveable property.	Three years.	The date of the trespass.

324. This Article has reference only to suits for damages on account of trespass, and not to suits to recover immoveable property from a trespasser, for which the period of limitation is 12 years under Article 142—Joharlal v. Municipality of Ahmednagar, 6 Bom. 580 (582).

'Trespass' includes the mischief which the trespasser commits after entering on the land. Therefore a suit for damages for unlawfully setting fire to and destroying pepper vines on the plaintiff's land is governed by this Article—Moideen v. Koman Nair, 23 M.L.J. 618,, 17 I.C. 605. Where the defendants trespassed upon the land of the plaintiff and in the course of the trespass cut plaintiff's valuable lac-producing trees on the land, and removed the same, and thus caused damage to him, and the plaintiff brought a suit for damages sustained for wrongfully cutting the lac-producing trees and for removing the trees, held that the suit was one for compensation for trespass upon immoveable property within the meaning of this Article, and not a suit under Article 36. The suit is one for damages sustained on account of the lac crops of which the plaintiff was deprived by reason of the defendants' illegal act of trespass in cutting down the trees and in removing them. If the trees had not been cut but only the lac crop had been enjoyed by the defendant, plaintiff's claim would have been governed by Article 109. If the claim had been purely for compensation for removal of trees cut, the case would have fallen under Article 48 or 49. What the plaintiff complains of is not merely the removal of the trees, but also the cutting itself as having involved the infringement of his right, and he claims compensation with reference to such infringement; as this infringement has been made by a trespasser, Art. 39 applies to the suit as a whole—Narbada Prasad v. Akbar Khan, 20 N.L.R. 80, 80 I.C. 769, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 125. The plaintiff and defendants were lessees of contiguous coal lands. The plaintiff sued the defendants for damages (including the value of coal) alleging that the latter had trespassed into the plaintiff's underground land, and extracted large quantity of coal therefrom. The High Court held that the suit fell under this Article or Article 49, and time ran from the last act of trespass; the claim was very much like a claim for damages for crops cut and carried away from the plaintiff's land, and to such a claim Art. 39 or 49 was applicable—Panna Lal v. Adjai Coal Co. Ltd., 31 C.W.N. 82 (95), 101 I.C. 62, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 117. But the Privy Council reversed this decision and held that Art. 48 was more appropriate—Adjai Coal Co. Ld.

v. Panna Lal, 57 Cal. 1341 (P.C.), 34 C.W.N. 483 (487), A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 113, 123 I.C. 726. The Patna High Court held that if the suit was only for compensation for under-ground trespass upon the plaintiff's colliery, it was governed by Art. 39 only; if the suit was only to recover the price of coal extracted and removed by the defendant from the plaintiff's colliery, and converted to his use, the suit fell under Art. 48—Lodna Colliery Co. Ld. v. Bepin Behari, 1 P.L.T. 84, 55 I.C. 113 (133, 134). This decision has been approved of by the Privy Council in Pugh v. Asutosh, 8 Pat. 516. Where the defendant enters on the plaintiff's land and receives the profits, a suit by the plaintiff for such profits received by the defendant is governed by Article 109; but if the defendant does not actually receive any profits and the land remains waste, a suit by the plaintiff for mesne profits (i.e., the profits which he might have received from the land) is a suit for damages for trespass, and falls under this Article (not under Article 109)—Ramasami v. Authi Lakshmi Ammal, 34 Mad. 502 (dissenting from Abbas v. Fasuhuddin, 24 Cal. 413). Where the claim is for damages in respect of removal of clay it is not a mere claim for compensation founded on trespass so as to attract this Article—Hirdey v. Baburam, 1940 O.W.N. 1318, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 172, 191 I.C. 885. See also Union of India v. Muralidhar, A.I.R. 1952 Assam 141. This Article has no application to a suit for damages for use and occupation after notice to quit. The reason is that the suit is not for compensation for trespass upon immoveable property. The defendant's remaining in possession of the property after the notice to quit does not constitute a trespass upon the property in the required sense—Sukhdei v. Lachmi, 1946 A.L.J. 305, A.I.R. 1947 All. 31, 231 I.C. 58.

A trespass is a continuing wrong, continuing from its inception until the possession of the trespasser comes to an end; therefore a suit may be brought within 3 years from the date on which the defendant's possession ceased, and compensation may be claimed for damages suffered within three years preceding the suit—Narasimmachaya v. Raghupathiacharya, 6 Mad. 176.

Removal of crops:—A suit for damages for cutting and carrying away crops may fall under this Article, because the act of cutting and carrying away the crops is coupled with the act of trespass on plaintiff's land, and clearly he is entitled to recover damages for trespass. But the case would fall more properly under Article 48 or 49—Mangun v. Dolhin, 25 Cal. 692 (699, 700); Surat Lall v. Umar, 22 Cal. 877 (885); Jadu Nath v. Hari Kar, 36 Cal. 141 (145, 147) (per Doss J.).

Wrongful attachment of crops:—The Madras High Court and the Nagpur Court are of opinion that standing crops being immoveable property for the purpose of the Limitation Act, a suit for illegal attachment of standing crops is a suit for trespass upon immoveable property, and is governed by Article 39 which specifically provides for suits for compensation for such trespass, and not by the general Article 36 which provides for suits for compensation for torts not provided for elsewhere—Venkata-ramanujan v. Basavayya, 25 M.L.J. 447, 21 I.C. 213, (216); Nagoba v. Madholala, 4 N.L.R. 49; Suraj Mal v. Prolhad, 18 N.L.R. 96, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 212 (213). But the Calcutta High Court holds that such a suit is governed by Article 36—Hari Charan v. Hari Kar, 32 Cal. 459 (462); Mohesh Chandra v. Hari Kar, 9 C.W.N. 376.

40.—For compensation for infringing copy-right or any other exclusive privilege.	Three years.	The date of the infringement.

325. This Article applies to a suit for an account of profits obtained by the infringement of an exclusive privilege—Kinmond v. Jackson, 3 Cal. 17. The right to a trade-name or trade-mark is an exclusive privilege and a suit for damages for infringing the privilege is governed by this Article—Vercados v. Macleod, 45 P.R. 1919, 51 I.C. 434.

41.—To restrain waste.	Three years.	When the waste begins.

326. A suit by the reversioner not only to restrain the waste of moveable property by the widow but also praying that the property be handed over to a receiver appointed for such purpose and that the donees from the widow be directed to replace any part of the property which can be traced in their hands falls under Article 120—Venkanna v. Narasimham, 44 Mad. 984. The words "when the waste begins" in the third column indicate that a new cause of action does not arise from successive acts of waste of the same kind, and that sec. 23 will not govern a case after the waste has once begun. 'If, however, a new form of waste should begin to be committed, a new period of limitation would naturally commence.' (See Starling. 192).

42.—For compensation for injury caused by an injunction wrongfully obtained.	Three years.	When the injunction ceases.

327. In Mohini Mohan v. Surendra, 42 Cal. 550 (at p. 556) Fletcher J. expressed doubt as to whether a suit contemplated by this section was at all maintainable, and disapproved of the ruling in Nand Coomar v. Gour Sankar, 13 W.R. 305, in which such suit was held to be maintainable. See also Narendra v. Bhushan Chandra, 31 C.L.J. 495, 57 I.C. 375. In a Calcutta case also, it has been held that the existence of Article 42 of the Limitation Act is in itself no argument that a suit is maintainable for damages for an injury caused by an injunction wrongfully obtained, because an Act cannot create a cause of action if it does not already exist independently—Albert Bonnan v. Imperial Tobacco Co., 30 C.W.N. 465, 94 I.C. 444, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 757 (761). In Bhutnath v. Chandra Binode, 16 C.L.J. 34, 16 I.C. 443 (445), a suit for damages for an injunction was held to be maintainable. See sec. 95 of the C. P. Code 1908 which provides for an application to recover compensation for injunction.

The defendant judgment-creditor attached certain property of his judgment-debtor; the plaintiff intervened and claimed the property as his own. The defendant applied for and obtained an injunction directing that the property should not be made over to the plaintiff. The claim-proceedings terminated in plaintiff's favour, and thereupon the plaintiff sued for loss of a part of the property while it was under the defendant's attachment. It was held that the suit was governed by this Article, and not by Art. 29—Idu v. Rahmat, 24 All. 146; Haji Pir Muhammad v. Thakur Das, 40 P.R. 1881 An attachment by a prohibitory order under O. 21, r. 46, C. P. Code does not amount to an injunction—Veeramma v. Subba Rao, 31 M.L.J. 257, 35 I.C. 98 (101).

Time begins to run as soon as the injunction is at an end. When an injunction is granted in a suit but the suit is dismissed by the Court of appeal on the 3rd July 1905, and the order of dismissal is affirmed on appeal to the High Court on the 22nd December, 1905, the injunction is said to terminate on the 3rd July 1905—Bhutnath

v. Chandra, 16 C.L.J. 34, 16 I.C. 443. Where a temporary injunction was at first granted in a suit, and the Court afterwards passed a decree granting a perpetual injunction, the period of limitation in respect of a suit for damages for the temporary injunction began to run from the date when the Court passed the decree for perpetual injunction, that being the date when the temporary injunction ceased and was replaced by the perpetual injunction—Mohini Mohan v. Surendra, 42 Cal. 550, 18 C.W.N. 1189.

43.—Under the Indian Succession Act, 1925, (XXXIX of 1925) section 360 or section 361, to compel a refund by a person to whom an executor or administrator has paid a legacy or distributed assets.	Three years.	The date of the payment or distribution.

The words "Indian.....361" have been substituted for "Indian Succession Act, 1865, section 320 or section 321, or under the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, section 139 or section 140," by the Repealing and Amending Act VIII of 1930. This is consequential to the re-enactment in the Indian Succession Act 1925 of the corresponding provisions of the Old Acts.

44.—By a ward who has attained majority, to set aside a transfer of property by his guardian.	Three years.	When the ward attains majority.

328. Change:—This Article corresponds to Art. 44 of Act XV of 1877, the words "transfer of property" being substituted for the word "sale" occurring in the old Act.

It was suggested by Dr. Whitley Stokes in his Anglo-Indian Codes, Vol. II, page 950 that this Article should be extended to mortgages and leases. As a result of this suggestion the word 'sale' has now been changed into "transfer of property" in the present Act.

329. Scope of Article:—Article 44 is an embodiment of the result of the general principles of sections 6 and 8 as applied to a suit to set aside a transfer made by a guardian of property belonging to the minor, brought by him after attaining majority. Ordinarily, in such a suit the statute begins to run from the date of the alienation; but section 6 says that where a person is a minor at the time when period is to be reckoned, he may institute the suit within the same period after the disability has ceased as would otherwise have been allowed; and section 8 limits the period of extension to three years. These two sections, as applied to the above case (suit by minor to set aside a transfer made by a guardian) would yield the rule in the exact form embodied in Art. 44—Ramaiah v. Brahmiah, 59 M.L.J. 196, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 821 (823), 127 I.C. 801; Doraisami v. Nondisami, 38 Mad. 118 (121).

The use of the term "ward" in this Article is peculiar, and there seems no reason why the word "minor" should not have been used. But the use of the term 'ward' does not mean that this Article is restricted to transfers made by guardians appointed or declared under the Guardians and Wards Act; it applies to transfers made by natural guardians as well—Fakirappa v. Lumanna, 44 Bom. 742 (761, 763), 22 Bom L.R. 680, 58 I.C. 257. The definition of the word "guardian" in section 4 (2), Guardians and Wards Act indicates that the word is of general import, and includes natural and testamentary guardians as well as guardians appointed by the Court—Dip Chand v. Munni, 1929 A.L.J. 1248, A.I.R. 1929 All. 879 (880); Ramaswami v. Govindammal, 56 M.L.J. 332, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 313 (316), 118 I.C. 481. The word 'guardian' must be interpreted as meaning only a lawful or 'dejure' guardian and not as including a 'defacto' manager or guardian of the property of a minor—Palaniappa v. Nallappa, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 265, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 817. The mother of a Christian minor is his natural guardian, after the death of the father, and a suit to set aside an alienation made by the mother is governed by this Article—Bangarammal v. Lydia Kent, 57 Mad. 1062, 152 I.C. 546, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 605 (607), 67 M.L.J. 322.

This Article is not confined to an assignment of absolute ownership only but also refers to an assignment of the ward's interest, whatever that interest might be. It therefore applies to a suit by the ward to set aside an assignment by his guardian of his right as mortgagee—Madugula Latchiah v. Pally Mukkalinga, 30 Mad. 393 (395).

One condition precedent to the application of this Article is that the property alienated should be the property of the ward. Where it is found that the property on the date of the sale was held by a Hindu daughter for her life-time, and her minor son had no right, title or interest in the property at that time, a suit brought by the son after his mother's death to set aside the sale is not governed by this Article —Iqbal v. Bankey, 7 O.W.N. 150, 128 I.C. 72, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 82 (83). Article 141 would apply.

Where a sale was effected by the minor's father not in his capacity as guardian but in his capacity as executor under a will (under which the minor was a legatee), held that this Article did not apply to a suit to recover the property sold—Ganapathi v. Sivamalai, 36 Mad. 575. This Article has no application where the alienation was made by a person not as guardian of the plaintiff but in his capacity as manager of a joint Hindu family—Sheo Raj v. Ajudhiya, 4 Luck. 503, A.I.R 1929 Oudh 284, 116 I.C. 196. If the Karnavan alienates the immoveable property of a tarwad, some of whom are minors, and the alienation is made by the Karnavan not only as the guardian of the minors but also in his capacity as Karnavan, this Article does not apply, and a suit for possession by the minor after attaining majority is governed by Article 144 —Kanna Pannikkar v. Nanchan, 46 M.L.J. 340, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 607, 78 I.C. 564.

The expression "transfer of property" means actual transfer followed by delivery of the property to the transferee. It implies that the property has changed hands. But if the erstwhile minor has been in possession in spite of a deed of transfer having been executed by his guardian during his minority, there was no transfer of property, and this Article has no application. The ex-minor can bring a suit for a declaration that the sale-deed is void and ineffective, more than three years after he attains majority —Mahomed Raza v. Zahoor Ahmed, 52 All. 979, 1930 A.L.J. 1416, 132 I.C. 21, A.I.R. 1930 All. 858 (859). A surrender by a guardian of a minor widow under the Hindu Law does not operate as a transfer of property from the widow to the surrenderee and therefore this Article has no application—Ethilavulu v. Pethakkal, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 76, 1950 M.W.N. 69, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 390. So also an agreement to sell along with the possession does not amount to a transfer within the meaning of this Article—Amroo v. Babaras, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 25, 1950 N.L.J. 30, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 403.

If the ward dies after attaining majority, a suit by his legal representative for recovering the property alienated by the guardian will fall under this Article—Ramaswami v. Govindammal, 56 M.L.J. 332, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 313 (321), 118 I.C. 481. If the minor had died before attaining majority the provisions of sub-section (3) of section 6 would come into play and must be read with this Article; that is, the period of limitation (three years) prescribed by this Article must be counted not from the time of the ward's attaining majority (which does not happen here) but from the date of the minor's death; therefore a suit by the minor's heir to set aside an alienation made by the minor's guardian must be brought within three years of the death of the minor—Ramaliah v. Brahmiah, 59 M.L.J. 196, 127 I.C. 801, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 821 (823). The remark made in Ramaswami v. Govindammal, supra, that if the minor died before attaining majority a suit by his legal representative for recovering the property alienated by the guardian would not fall under Art. 44, was only by way of obiter and does not seem to be correct.

This Article does not apply to a suit, brought by the sons to set aside alienation by the father, who has executed the sale deed for himself and as guardian of his minor sons. Article 126 applies to such a suit—Basave v. Basave, A.I.R. 1952 Mysore.

This Article has no application to a suit for possession of properties sold in execution of a decree passed on the basis of an award on a reference made by the court without the court giving permission to the guardian of the minor, a party to the suit, to enter into the agreement to refer the case to arbitration. The reason being that though the decree is voidable and can be set aside yet the right to possession can not be established without asking for the setting aside of the execution sale—Nahar v. Tex Chand, 1951 All.L.J. 751, A.I.R. 1952 All. 184.

If the minor fails to bring a suit within three years after attaining majority, such omission will also bar a suit filed by a person who claims under him—Fakirappa v. Lumanna, 44 Bom. 742 (764). See also Sundrammal v. Rangasami, 18 Mad. 193 (200).

It is open to the minor as defendant to challenge the transfer of property made by guardian and this Article will be no bar to such a defence. This Article only bars the remedy of the plaintiff to get the transfer set aside but is not fatal to his title—Jagarnath v. Chunni, I.L.R. (1940) All. 580, 1940 A.L.J. 511, A.I.R. 1940 All. 416, 191 I.C. 647.

330. Void transfers:—Where a minor's property is sold by another person, even though he be his guardian, claiming it to be his own, the minor's interest is not affected by such transfer, which is void. Art. 44 has no application to a suit to set aside such transfer—Bhagwandas v. Kashiprasad, A.I.R. 1935 All. 417, 157 I.C. 118. Where the alienation made by the guardian is an absolute nullity, it is unnecessary for the minor to get it set aside under this Article; he can sue to recover possession within the longer period allowed by Art. 144. Thus, an alienation by a de facto guardian, i.e., a person who is not a lawful guardian and who has no authority to act as guardian (e.g., a mother or a step-mother or brother under the Mahomedan law, or a step-mother, or paternal aunt, under the Hindu law) is void (and not merely voidable) and need not be set aside; this Article does not apply to such a case. The plaintiff can bring a suit to recover possession under Art. 144—Matadin v. Ahmed Ali, 34 All. 213 (222, 223) (P.C.), 9 A.L.J. 215; Balappa v. Chandasappa, 17 Bom. L.R. 1134, 33 I.C. 444; Anandappa v. Totappa, 33 I.C. 441, 17 Bom. L.R. 1137 (Foot note); Laloo Karikar v. Jagat Chandra, 25 C.W.N. 258; Thyammal v. Ruppanna, 38 Mad. 1125; Purushottama v. Brundavana, 33 L.W. 664, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 597 (alienation by natural father of an adopted minor); Sundara v. Annammal, 60 M.L.J. 695, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 529 (alliention by de fcto guardian of a Christian minor); Krishnadhan v. Brojendra. 34 C.W.N. 642 (645); Sheikh Rajah v. Sheikh Wazir, 1 P.I.R. 188, 34

I.C. 85; Satrohan v. Inder Bikram, 10 O.C. 367; Sadulla v. Sulaiman, 6 Lah.L.J. 516, 84 IC. 923; Ghandu Lal v. Anant Ram, 135 P.R. 1892; Sardar Shah v. Haji, 182 P.L.R. 1908, 1 I.C. 545, 28 P.R. 1909; Tajjad v. Mohammad Zulfikar, 83 P.R. 1916, 33 I.C. 943; Uttam Singh v. Gurmukh Singh, 15 P.R. 1913, 19 I.C. 235; Husen v. Rajaram, 10 N.L.R. 133, 26 I.C. 813; Ethilavulu v. Pethakkal, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 76, 1950 M.W.N. 69, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 390; Vitu v. Debidas, 15 N.L.R. 55, 51 I.C. 943; Panjab Rao v. Atmaram, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 124; Janardan v. Nilkantha, A.I.R. 1952 Orissa 31. To a suit by a ward on attaining majority, for possession of property transferred by his guardian, a pardanashin lady, under a transfer void ab initio, this Article has no application. To such a suit it is Art. 142 that applies—Hirdey v. Baburam, 1940 O.W.N. 1318, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 172, 191 I.C. 885. ".....this Court has been consistently holding that in case of improper or unauthorized alienations by de facto guardians, the minors when they come of age, need not get the alienations set aside, and that Art. 44, Limitation Act, would not apply"—Ponnammal v. Gomathi, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 884, 71 M.L.J. 366, 165 I.C. 287. Though under the Hindu law, it is well-settled that an alienation by a defacto guardian, if for necessity, is binding on the minor, it does not follow that an alienation by a defacto guardian not supported by necessity, is voidable in the sense that it is binding on the minor until set aside, so as to attract the application of this Article—Kailash v. Rajani, 24 Pat. 273, 1945 P.W.N. 323, 27 P.L.T. 93, A.I.R. 1945 Pat. 298. So also, where a defacto guardian of a minor executes a sale deed in his own capacity and not as the guardian of the minor along with the minor, it is not necessary for the minor to get the sale deed set aside as the sale deed is ineffective and the vendee does not acquire any interest in the property. This Article has no application in such a case—Amateppa v. Sanganbasappa, 41 Bom. L.R. 867, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 427, 186 I.C. 235.

Where a sale-deed executed by a guardian in respect of properties in one district was registered in another district by fraudulent inclusion in the deed of a small item of property situated in the latter district which neither the vendor intended to sell nor the purchaser to buy, held that the sale-deed was not duly registered; and the sale being therefore totally inoperative, this Article did not apply but Art. 144 —Narasimha Rao v. Papunna, 43 Mad. 436, 38 M L.J. 227, 56 I.C. 519.

In a joint Hindu Mitakshara family, there can be no "guardian of property" of a minor, since the interest of a member of such family is no individual property at all. Consequently an ilienation made by a person calling himself such a guardian is not binding on the minor, and no suit is required to be brought by him under this Article to set aside the sale. He can bring a suit for possession under Art. 144—Kalyan Singh v. Pitambar, 13 AL.J. 94, 27 I.C. 687; Asaram v. Ratan Singh, 12 N.L.R. 12, 33 I.C. 242; Veerasami v. Sivagurunath, 21 L.W. 111, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 793; Appanna Prosada v. Apana Mahapatra, 5 L.W. 374, 40 I.C. 145; Kala v. Faquir Chand, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 601, 35 P.L.R. 722, 152 I.C. 633; Hanmantappa v. Dundappa, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 234, 36 Bom. L.R. 474, 151 I.C. 1043; Chhaju v. Muttan, A. I. R. 1936 Lah. 996 (the relief for cancellation of the deed of alienation by the manager is a relief ancillary to claim for possession). And so, where several brothers constitute a joint Hindu family, the elder brother is undoubtedly the manager of the family, but he is not the guardian of his minor brothers, because there can be no guardianship in such a case. Even assuming that he was a de facto guardian, still this Article cannot apply, as it does not contemplate a de facto guardian—Dnyanu v. Vishnu, 27 Bom.L.R. 495, 87 I C. 721, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 372. A sale-deed executed by the manager of a joint Hindu family for other than necessary purposes is void from its inception, and a suit to set it aside is not governed by Art. 44—Sheo Raj v. Ajudhiya, 4 Luck. 503, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 284, 116 I.C. 195. Where the property of a minor is transferred by a wholly unauthorised person, the transaction is void ab initio, and it is not necessary for the minor in order to recover possession, to have the transfer set aside. In such cases Art. 144, and not Art. 44, applies—Dipchand v. Munni Lal. 1929 A.L.J. 1248, A.I.R. 1929 All. 879 (881); Banku v. Banku, 47 C.W.N. 288, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 203, 206 I.C. 599; Abdul v. Anwari, 53 C.W.N. 258. A lease which amounts to a clog on the equity of redemption is void; such a lease, executed by a guardian, need not be set aside by a suit within three years under Art. 44—Parashram v. Lakshmibai, 53 Bom. 360, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 186 (188), 115 I.C. 405.

331. Voidable transfers:—Where the alienation is not void but voidable only and would bind the minor until it is set aside, he cannot ignore the transaction but must sue to set it aside within the period prescribed by this Article. Even though the suit is framed as a suit for possession still it will be treated as a suit to set aside the sale, under this Article, because he cannot establish his right to possession without first setting aside the alienation. It is not the form of the relief claimed which determines the real character of the suit for the purpose of ascertaining which Article is applicable to the suit—Ramaswami v. Govindammal, 56 M.L.J. 332, 118 I.C. 481, A.I.R. 1929, Mad. 313 (317); Labha Mal v. Malak Ram, 6 Lah. 447, 89 I.C. 602, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 619. Thus, an alienation by a natural or lawful guardian who goes beyond the scope of his authority or alienates without legal necessity is voidable at the option of the minor and not void altogether, and a suit to set aside such alienation and to obtain possession is governed by this Article and not by the twelve years' rule—Laxmana v. Rachappa, 42 Bom. 626; Fakirappa v. Lumanna, 44 Bom. 742 (764); Brojendra v. Prasanna, 24 C.W.N. 1016, 59 I.C. 589; Madugula Latchia v. Pally Mukkulinga, 30 Mad. 393; Satyalakshmi v. Jagannatham, 34 M.L.J. 229, 42 I.C. 939; Ranga Reddi v. Narayana Reddi, 28 Mad. 423; Labha Mal v. Malak Ram, 6 Lah. 447, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 619, 89 I.C. 602, 26 P.L.R. 531; Khushia v. Faiz Md., 9 Lah. 33, 103 I.C. 365, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 115; Tara Chand v. Murlidhar, 3 Lah.L.J. 280, 61 I.C. 384; Arumugam v. Pandian, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 425, 62 I.C. 630, 40 M L.J. 475; Bangarammal v. Lydia Kent, 57 Mad. 1062, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 605 (607); Sham Chandra v. Godadhar, 9 I.C. 377, 13 C.L.J. 277; Kolhu v. Belsingh, A.I.R. 1922 Nag. 201, 17 N.L.R. 183; Ram Bharahey v. Ram Bahadur, 1947 O.W.N. 558, A.I.R. 1948 Oudh 125; Lok Nath v. Rohlu, A.I.R. 1951 J.&. K. 25. Where a person (a manager of a joint Hindu family) executed a mukhtarnama providing for the management of the family estate, both during his life-time and after his death until his eldest minor son attained majority, and the mukhtear was given the power to manage the estate as he thought fit including the power of sale, held that a sale by the mukhtear was binding on the minor sons and could not be treated as a nullity, and a suit to challenge the sale was governed by this Article—Mahableshyar v. Ramchandra, 38 Bom. 94, 21 I.C. 350. An alienation by a guardian appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act, without the sanction of the Court is voidable and not void (see section 30 of the Guardians and Wards Act); consequently a suit by the minor to set aside the alienation after attaining majority falls under this Article—Sivanmalai v. Arunachala, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 428, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 822, 182 I.C. 862; Mir Ghulam v. Ayesra, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 775, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 800, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 481 (F.B.). So also, a permission obtained by a certificated guardian by means of fraudulent mis-representation is a nullity, but a transfer ostensibly made in pursuance thereof is only voidable. Consequently, a suit by the minor to set aside the transfer falls under this Article and not Art. 144—Ram Charitter v. Suraj, 53 All. 738, 1931 A.L.J. 997, 136 I.C. 71, A.I.R. 1932 All. 108 (109).

In an Allahabad case it was held that a suit to set aside an alienation of the plaintiff's property made during his minority by his mother as guardian, brought after his mother's death, was governed by Article 141—Bachchan v. Kamta Prasad, 32 All. 382 (396) 7 A L.J. 337, 5 I.C. 585. This view, it is submitted, is not correct; although the suit was brought after his mother's death, still the plaintiff did not sue as a reversionary heir, consequently Art. 141 could not apply. The proper Article was Art. 44. This ruling has been disapproved of in Brojendra v. Prasanna, 24 C.W.N. 1016, Tara Chand v. Murlidhar, 3 Lah.L.J. 280; and in the later Allahabad case, Dip Chand v. Munni, 1929 A.L.J. 1248, A.I.R. 1929 All. 879 (881).

Where a property had been mortgaged by the minor's father, and after his death the natural guardian (e.g., mother) of the minor sold the equity of redemption to the mortgagee, without any legal necessity, a suit by the minor after attaining majority to redeem the mortgage is governed by Article 44, because the plaintiff cannot redeem without suing to set aside the sale of the equity of redemption—Fakirappa v. Lumanna, 44 Bom. 742 (overruling Bhagvant v. Kondi, 14 Bom. 279). But if the equity of redemption was sold by a person acting as guardian but without any authority to act as such (e.g., a step-mother who is not a guardian under the Hindu law, the sale is void and need not be set aside, and a suit by the minor after attaining majority to redeem the mortgage is not governed by this Article—Balappa v. Chanbasappa, 17 Bom. L.R. 1134, 33 I.C. 444.

A deed executed by a guardian of a minor mortgagee releasing from operation of mortgage the sub-soil rights of the mortgage land in favour of lessee of the mortgagor in consideration of certain sum is a transfer of the equity of redemption and is a voidable transaction and requires to be avoided or set aside within the period of limitation prescribed by this Article—Jagadamba v. Anadi, 17 Pat. 460, 19 Pat. L.T. 594, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 337, 176 I.C. 273.

When the senior member of a coparcenary dies leaving only minor co-parceners, the mother of the minors is their de jure guardian. And a suit brought by the minors to set aside alienations made by the de jure guardian during their minority is governed by Art. 44, and not by Art. 144, and consequently a suit brought within 12 years of the alienations but more than 3 years after the plaintiff had attained majority is barred by limitation under Art. 44. Art. 144 applies to cases where the possession of the purchaser is adverse to the plaintiff and a purchaser from the guardian of a minor does not hold the land under a title adverse to the minor, but on the contrary he derives his title from the minor and has a good title until it is shown that in selling the land to him the guardian exceeded his powers. A transfer by a guardian, however improper it may have been, is not a void transaction but only a voidable one. and when property cannot be recovered without avoiding the transfer it is settled that Art. 44 applies—Koya Ankamma v. Kanaganchi Kameshwaramma, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 346, 59 Mad. 549, 70 M.L.J. 352, 161 I.C. 797; Palaniappa v. Nallappa, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 265, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 817.

But Art. 44 does not apply to suits to set aside alienations made by de facto guardian of minors—Palaniappa v. Nallappa, supra.

A suit under this Article must be brought within three years after the minor attains majority; and the burden lies on the minor to prove that his suit is in time, if the date of attaining majority is disputed—Prolhad Chandra v. Ramsaran, 38 C.L.J. 213, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 420, 81 I. C. 680.

Suit against alienee from purchaser :—When the purchaser from the guardian has alienated the whole or portion of the property purchased by him, the ward if he wants to dispossess the second alienee, must bring the suit against him within the period prescribed by this Article. The reason is that the second alienee cannot be bound by the adjulication in the suit by the ward against the original purchaser and the question of the validity of the alienation must be re-tried—Kasim Ali v. Ratna, 1938 M.W.N. 403, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 677, 181 I.C. 697.

Suit by minor's transferee:—Where a minor's property was sold by the minor's guardian, and the minor after attaining majority transferred the same property to another, and then the transferee as principal plaintiff (plaintiff No. 1) and the transferor as the second plaintiff sued to set aside the sale within three years of the minor attaining majority, held that so far as plaintiff no. 2 was concerned, the suit was clearly within time because he brought the suit within three years of his attaining majority, under Article 44. And the suit was in time as regards plantiff no. 1 also, although Article 44 could not apply to his case. No doubt this suit is substantially by plaintiff no 1, and plaintiff no. 2 is joined only to save limitation; but the fact that plaintiff no. 2 has conveyed his interest in the property to plaintiff no. 1 does not mean that he has no interest in maintaining the suit to set aside the alienation. In order to make his transfer to plaintiff no. 1 effective and to save the right of the transferee from being barred by limitation, plaintiff no. 2 was entitled to sue to set aside the sale, in spite of the transfer in favour of plaintiff no. 1, and to join in the present suit brought by the latter. As the suit by plaintiff No. 2 is maintainable and not time-barred, the suit by plaintiff no. 1 is also saved from limitation, although a suit, brought by plaintiff no. 1 alone would have been barred by limitation, as more than 12 years have elapsed after the date of the sale by the guardian of plaintiff no. 2—Hanmant v. Ramappa, 49 Bom. 309, 27 Bom. L.R. 211. 86 I. C. 879, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 292. This decision, which lays down that Art. 44 does not apply to the transferee of an ex-minor, leads to the anomaly that a suit by the transferee would be barred though his vendor is not barred. Such interpretation of Art. 44 would lead to another anomaly under the following circumstances: Suppose the guardian makes the alienation shortly before the ward attains majority, and the ward does not sue within 3 years of his attaining majority, but transfers the property before the end of three years. Now, after the lapse of three years, the minor's right to the property will be extinguished, by the operation of sec. 28, but the transferee will be entitled to institute a suit for possession within 12 years from the date of possession taken by the guardian's alienee; and if he brings a suit within that time he will not be barred although his vendor is barred. See Ramaswami v. Govindammal, 56 M.L.J. 332, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 313 (319). Such an anomaly could not have been contemplated by the Legislature, and so it has been held in several cases that a suit by the transferee of the ex-minor is governed by the same rule of limitation as a suit by the ex-minor himself (viz., 3 years' rule under Art. 44)—Ramaswami v. Govindammal, supra (dissenting from 40 Bom. 309); Chandra v. Maruti, 5 N.L.R. 50, 2 I.C. 229. If the suit is brought by the minor's transferee alone, and it is found that at the time when this suit is brought, a suit brought by the ex-minor to set aside the sale made by the guardian would have been barred by Art. 44, the ex-minor's right to the property is extinguished, and consequently his transferee has no right and his suit is likewise barred—Laxmana v. Rachappa, 42 Bom. 626, 46 I.C. 22. 20 Bom.L.R. 408, explained in Jhaverbhai v. Kabhai, 34 Bom.L.R. 1512, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 43 (44), 141 I.C. 806; Natha v. Thakur, 1939 O.W.N. 241, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh. 122, 180 I.C. 329. If after a suit has been brought by the ex-minor and his transferee jointly, the former withdraws from the suit, the effect is that he elects not to set aside the sale and the sale becomes binding on him; consequently, the transferee has then no right to continue the suit—Jhaverbhai v. Kabhai, supra. In this case it has been observed (by way of obiter) that Article 44 applies only to a suit brought by the minor after attaining majority and not to the suit by the minor's transferee.

Effect of bar of limitation:—A suit under this Article is virtually a suit for possession of property. And therefore if the minor fails to bring a suit to set aside the sale within 3 years after attaining majority, his right to the property will be extinguished by operation of section 28—Kandasami v. Irusappa, 41 Mad. 102 (105); Gnanasambanda v. Velu Pandaram, 23 Mad. 271 (279) (P.C.); Dip Chand v. Munni, 1929 A.L.J. 1248, A.I.R. 1929 All. 879 (881); Palaniappa v. Nallappa, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 265, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 817. The Calcutta High Court has taken a contrary view in Lalit v. Nogendra, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 589, where it has been held that this Article has nothing whatever to do with suits for possession. The only thing which becomes barred at the expiry of the period prescribed by this Article is the ward's right to set aside a transfer. The failure to sue within the time prescribed does not extinguish the right to the property under sec. 28 of the Act. The fact that in a previous suit by the alienee against the ward, to recover some properties which had not passed to his possession under the transfer, the alienation was found invalid, will not relieve the ward from the consequences of his failure to have the transfer set aside within the period allowed by law with regard to properties which had passed to the possession of the alienee. When at the time such previous suit was brought, the ward's right to such property had been extinguished under section 28, the decision will not have the effect of reviving the extinguished right—Madugulu Latchia v. Pally Mukkalinga, 30 Mad. 393 (397).

But if the minor had been all along in possession of the property inspite of the execution of a sale-deed by his guardian during his minority, a suit by the ex-minor to have the sale set aside is not a suit for possession and sec. 28 does not apply. Consequently, if the minor fails to bring such suit within the period limited by this Article his remedy by way of cancellation of the sale-deed is lost, but his right to the property is not extinguished under sec. 28, and he can bring a suit for partition of the property with his co-sharers—Mahomed Raza v. Zahoor Ahmad, 52 All. 970, A.I.R. 1930 All. 858 (860), 132 I.C. 21, 1930 A.L.J. 1416.

332. Section 7:—This Article should be read subject to the provision of section 7. Thus, two brothers brought a suit to set aside a sale effected by their mother as guardian during their minority. The suit was brought within three years of the younger brother attaining majority but more than three years after the elder brother came of full age. Held that the claim being a joint claim and the suit having been brought more than 3 years after attainment of majority of the elder brother, who as manager of the family was competent to give a valid discharge under section 7 as soon as he became a major, the claim was barred by limitation even in respect of the share of the younger brother—Doraisami v. Nondisami, 38 Mad. 118 (F.B.); Mahableshwar v. Ramchandra, 38 Bom. 94, 21 I.C. 350; Kuppuswami v. Kamalammal, 43 Mad. 842; Babu Tatya v. Bala Raoji, 45 Bom. 446. But if the elder brother does not act as the manager (e.g., in a case where the father is still living) he cannot give a valid discharge on behalf of his minor brothers; and so in such a case, a suit brought by the younger brothers within three years of their attaining majority, to set aside an alienation made by their father is not barred, although their eldest brother had long before three years reached majority—Jawahir v. Udai Perkash, 48 All. 152 (P.C.), A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 16, 30 C.W.N. 698, 93 I.C. 216; followed in Narayana v. Venkataswami, 51 M.L.J. 845, A.I.R. 1926 Mad. 1190, 98 I.C. 31. See also Nahar Singh v. Tek Chand, (1951) A.L.J. 751, A.I.R. 1952 All. 184.

45.—To contest an award under any of the following Regulations of the Bengal Code:— The Bengal Land-revenue Settle-	Three years.	The date of the final award or order in the case, ment Regulation, 1822 (VII of 1822).

The Bengal Land-revenue Settlement Regulation, 1825 (IX of 1825).
The Bengal Land-revenue (Settlement and Deputy Collectors) Regulation, 1833 (IX of 1833).

333. Scope of Article:—This Article would apply even though the plaintiffs were not parties to, and did not appear in, the Settlement proceedings—Tulsiram v. Mohamed, 10 W.R. 48. Under this Article, any person who wishes to contest an award, whether bound by it or not, must bring his suit within three years. But Article 46 applies only to those persons who are bound by the award, and relates to suits for recovery of property.

This Article does not apply unless the award is a valid one and made in accordance with the provisions of law. Where the Assistant Collector not being able to come to any decision as to the possession and rights of the parties in an estate, refers the whole matter to the Collector, and he without hearing the parties and after only reading the evidence taken by the Assistant Collector, passes an order, such an order has no element of a judicial character and has not the authority of an award; it need not be contested within 3 years, but the party may bring a suit for possession within 12 years—Bhaoni v. Maharaj Sing, 3 All. 738. Regulation VII of 1822 does not empower the Collector to decide disputes as to title between raiyats, but only to decide disputes in regard to the nature of any tenancy. A decision by the Collector as to the title between two raiyats is not an 'award' under the Regulation or within the meaning of this Article—Rajani Kant v. Ram Dulal, 17 C.W.N. 55, 17 I.C. 881. A suit not to set aside an award but to obtain possession of land from which the plaintiff has been dispossessed by virtue of an order under sec. 145, Criminal Procedure Code which was to the effect that the defendants were in occupation of the disputed land on the strength of a settlement made in their favour, does not fall under this Article —Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Naresh Narayan, 49 Cal. 37, 33 C.L.J. 497, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 345. The "award" contemplated by this Article presupposes a contest between the parties and a decision after proper investigation into the points at issue. Where there is nothing to indicate that there was any contest or a decision on any investigation, but the only object of the suit is that the plaintiffs may be confirmed in their possession of the lands if they succeed in it, and the settlement by the Revenue authorities, in so far as it determined the amount of the revenue payable in respect of the disputed property, would in no way be affected, the only result being that the plaintiffs would in that case obtain the benefit of a settlement which a third party obtained from the Government, Article 45 does not apply—Latifa Khatun v. Tofer Ali, 55 Cal. 201, 104 I.C. 655, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 902.

334. Limitation:—In a suit to contest an award of a Survey Deputy Collector, the period of limitation begins to run, where there has been an unsuccessful appeal to the Commissioner and then to the Board of Revenue, from the date of the order of the latter—Kishen Chunder v. Mahomed Afzal, 10 W.R. 51. Where A and B were similarly affected by a survey award, and A appealed but B did not, the period of limitation in respect of B's suit to set aside the award would run from the date of the award, and not from the date of the order on A's appeal in which B did not join—Tulsiram v. Mohamed, 10 W.R. 48. A settlement award under Regulation

VII of 1822 in favour of a mortgagee in possession becomes binding upon the mortgagor if he allows it to remain unchallenged for three years; and the mortgagor is thereafter debarred from bringing a suit for redemption—Sreechund v. Mullick, 9 W.R. 564.

46.—By a party bound by such award to recover any property comprised therein.	Three years.	The date of the final award or order in the case.

335. Scope of Article:—The 'award' referred to in this Article is an award under the Regulations mentioned in Art. 45. An award passed in a civil suit it not one coming under this Article—Lachman v. Atma, 25 P.R. 1883. This article applies only to parties 'bound by the award.' A person who was not a party to an award or order, is not bound by it, and is not therefore debarred from bringing a suit for possession under the twelve years' rule of limitation—Pureeag v. Shib, 3 W.R. 165; Kanto v. Asaa, 5 C.L.R. 452. A suit for the reversal of a survey award and for recovery of possession, alleging dispossession on a date subsequent to the date of the award, is not governed by Article 45 or 46 but by the 12 years' rule of limitation (Art. 142)—Mozaffur v. Girish, 10 W.R. 71.

This Article will not enable a person to come in within 3 years from the date of the award and recover possession of lands in respect of which his suit is barred by other provisions of the law of limitation—Beer Chand v. Ramgutty, 8 W.R. 209; Maula Baksh v. Keshoram, 10 W.R. 249.

In a thakbust map, a land was demarcated as belonging to A. B claimed that it belonged to him jointly with A. On 18th November 1858 the map was rectified by demarcating the land to A and B jointly. On 11th December 1865, A brought a suit against B for a declaration of his sole right and confirmation of possession, and alleged that he had been in possession ever since. It was held that a suit by a person in possession to have his title confirmed was not a suit to recover property within this Article and was not barred by reason of its not being brought within three years from the date of the award—Mohima v. Rajkumar, 10 W.R. 22.

47.—By any person bound by an order respecting the possession of immoveable property made under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, (V of 1898), or the Mamlatdars' Courts Act, 1906 (Bom. II of 1906), or by any one claiming under such person, to recover the property comprised in such order.	Three years.	The date of the final order in the case.

336. Change:—The word "'immoveable" has been added in 1908. Under the Act of 1877 Article 47 referred to immoveable as well as moveable property—

Kangali v. Zomurrudonnissa, 6 Cal. 709. But the Act of 1908 confines this Article to immoveable property alone.

337. Application of Article:—This Article is not confined in its operation to orders passed under Ch. XII of the Cr. P. Code. An order restoring possession under sec. 522, Cr. P.Code is an order respecting the possession of property within the meaning of this Article, and must be brought within 3 years of the order—Pakki Adinarayana v. Surmma, 48 M.L.J. 372, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 799, 86 I.C. 744.

Where the plaintiff had no legal right to possession at the time the order under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code was made against him, but subsequently acquired that right, this Article would not apply to a suit for possession brought by him after he acquired such right; Art. 144 would apply to the case—Bolai Chand v. Samiruddin, 19 Cal. 646; Subbalakshmi v. Narasimmiah, 52 M.L.J. 482, 102 I.C. 360, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 586.

This Article does not apply to a person claiming against both of the parties between whom the order is made.

Art. 47 applies only to those cases in which the magistrate has declared one of the parties to be entitled to possession until evicted therefrom in due course of law or has restored possession to a party found to have been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed within two months of his initial order—Partab Bahadur Singh v. Jagatjit Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 387, 1936 O.W.N. 714, 164 I.C. 118.

This Article has no application where the order of the Magistrate was passed without jurisdiction. Thus, in a case under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, the Magistrate has to decide as to which party is in possession; but if the Magistrate goes beyond this, and decides the mode of possession or how that possession is to be exercised, or makes an order for joint possession, his decision is without jurisdiction, and Article 47 does not apply to a suit by one of the parties to establish his rights. Moreover, this Article has no application where the Magistrate's order does not dispossess the plaintiff or maintain the defendant's possession to the exclusion of the plaintiff—Rohini Nandan v. Jadunandan, 30 C.W.N. 873, 97 I.C. 73, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1022. But every defective or erroneous order of the Magistrate should not be considered as passed 'without jurisdiction.' Thus, in a proceeding regularly initiated under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, the Magistrate passed an order as to possession, but the provisions of subsection (4) of that section were not complied with. It was held that the order of the Magistrate might be defective or irregular, but it was not passed without jurisdiction, and a suit to recover the property comprised by the order fell under Art. 47. Before want of jurisdiction can be pleaded, a vice must be clearly established which infects the whole proceeding. When an inquiry has been duly entered upon under section 145, Cr. P. Code, it is not every error that makes the result invalid—Ear Mahamed v. Heyat Mahamed, 22 C.W.N. 342 (345, 346), 42 I.C. 768; Rani Abadi Begam v. Ahmad Mirza, 11 O.L.J. 757, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 190. So also, the mere fact that the Magistrate acting under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code did not make the proper inquiries which he ought to have made before he passed the order, or did not serve any notice on the plaintiff in accordance with law, does not make the order illegal or without jurisdiction, especially when the plaintiff had notice of the proceedings and put in a written statement before the Magistrate. A suit to recover possession of property comprised in such order falls under this Article—Parasuramayya v. Ramachandradu, 38 Mad. 432, 21 I.C. 564. See also Gangaram v. Sankarappa, 9 M.L.J. 91.

This Article does not apply where there was no order by the Magistrate as to possession of property under sec. 145 Cr. P. Code, but the proceedings under that section have been consigned to records by the agreement of the parties—Jagatjit v.

Partab, 44 Bom.L.R. 868, 47 C.W.N. 38, A.I.R. 1942 P.C. 47, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 384 (P.C.). Thus, an order by a Magistrate attaching the property under sec. 146, Cr. P. Code is not an order 'respecting the possession of property' because such an order is passed when he is unable to determine who was in actual possession of the property. Therefore, where a Magistrate attaches certain lands under sec. 146, Cr. P. Code, and places them in charge of a Sub-Magistrate, a suit to recover the property does not fall under this Article—Akilandammal v. Periasami, 1 Mad. 309; Raja of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli, 26 Mad. 410 (413); Goswami v. Girdhariji, 20 All. 120; see also Deo Narain v. Webb, 28 Cal. 86 (88). Where a person was a party to a litigation in a Civil Court, and an order is made by the Magistrate with regard to possession of immoveable property as the result of the adjudication in the Civil Court, such a person cannot be properly described as a person bound by the order of the Magistrate, but as a person bound by the order of the Civil Court, because the Magistrate is merely carrying out the order of the Civil Court. The Magistrate's order is not one promulgated under the Cr. P. Code and Art. 47 cannot apply—Alagarswami v. Ramabadra, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 38 (40), 111 I.C. 152.

This Article applies although the order was passed summarily without investigation. Thus, where a suit was dismissed by the Mamlatdar for the non-appearance of the plaintiff, he must bring his suit for possession in the Civil Court within three years under this Article—Ramachandra v. Bhikibai, 6 Bom. 477; so too, if the suit was dismissed by the Mamlatdar for non-appearance of both parties—Purushottam v. Chatagir, 25 Bom. 82. An order of the Mamlatdar dismissing the plaintiff's claim for possession on account of lack of proof is tantamount to an order confirming the defendant's possession, and is therefore an order 'respecting the possession of property' under this Article—Chinto v. Ganenh, 1883 P.J. 131.

Where a plaintiff against whom an order was passed by the Mamlatdar in 1885, continued in possession inspite of the adverse order, up to 1887, when he was dispossessed in execution of a decree in another proceeding, a suit brought by him to recover possession in 1890 was not barred by this Article, because there was no necessity for the plaintiff to bring a suit to recover possession under this Article within 3 years from the order of 1885 if he continued in possession in spite of that order—Krishnacharya v. Lingama, 20 Bom. 270.

This Article has no application to a suit for possession by a successful party in a proceeding under sec. 145 Cr. P. Code. So where in a proceeding under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, possession of both co-sharers is confirmed, this Article has no application. Its applicability is restricted to cases where a party is held to be out of possession—Ranga v. Raju, A.I.R. 1950 Orissa 64. Thus where a co-sharer brings a suit for possession of his separate share or for partition of joint properties in respect of portion of which an order under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, was passed in his favour, this Article has no application—Ranga v. Raju, supra.

This Article does not apply where the plaintiff brings the suit in a different capacity from that in which he sued before the Mamlatdar. Thus, where a suit instituted by the plaintiff in his private capacity as the heir of the deceased manager of a Math was dismissed by the Mamlatdar for non-production of certificate of heirship, a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiff in his representative capacity, describing himself as the manager of the Math, is not governed by Art. 47—Babajirao v. Laxmandas, 28 Bom. 215. Where after the order of the Mamlatdar in a possessory suit, the parties entered into a contract for sale in respect of the property in dispute, such a contract dissolves the order of the Mamlatdar; it is unnecessary to bring a suit to set aside the order; and a suit based on the contract of sale is not barred by reason of not having been brought within three years from the date of the order of the Mamlatdar —Sagaji v. Namdev, 23 Bom. 525 (527).

"Person bound by the order":—A person will not be bound by an order made in a proceeding under sec. 145 Cr. P. Code, to which he is not a party—Shankhta v. Sm. Govindi, A.I.R. 1950 All. 693; Main Sharif v. Said Gal, 196 I.C. 444, A I.R. 1941 Pesh. 65. Where the manager of a joint Hindu family in his capacity as such is a party to proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, the joint family as a whole is a party, and the proceedings will bind any member of the joint family in his capacity as such. Consequently, a suit by a member of a joint family to recover possession of properties from the defendant whose possession had been confirmed by an order under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code to which the manager of the joint family was a party and not the other members of the family, is governed by this Article. All persons who, though not parties to an order under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, had actual notice of the order are "bound" by that order within the meaning of this Article—Venkatasomaraju v. Varakalaraju, 52 Mad. 787, 57 M.L.J. 228, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 48 (49, 51), 122 I.C. 171. Compare 45 All. 306, cited in the next note.

338. "Any one claiming under such person":—This Article applies to all persons who are bound by or parties to an order under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, as well as to any other person who may claim the property through any such person under a title derived subsequent to the order—Jogendra v. Brojendra, 23 Cal. 731 (F.B.). The words "claiming under such person" mentioned in the article refer to those persons who claim from the person bound by the order under a title created subsequent to the order and not those who claim under a title created prior to the order—Munga Lal v. Sagarmal, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 629, 15 Pat. 481, 17 P.L.T. 726. If a party defeated in the proceedings before the Mamlatdar's Court fails to bring a suit to set aside the Mamlatdar's order within three years, as provided by this Article, a suit brought by the assignee of such party will be barred. The assignee cannot be in a better position than the original party—Bapu v. Mohadaji, 18 Bom. 348. If an order is passed in respect of a property under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code against the managing member of a joint Hindu family, it is binding on the whole family, and a suit brought by the surviving members of the family, after the death of the managing member, to recover the property, will be governed by this Article—Ram Sahai v. Benode Behari, 45 All. 306 (308), 21 A.L.J. 102, 71 I.C. 402. Cf. 52 Mad. 787, supra.

339. Suit to recover property:—This Article does not apply to a suit for possession based on title. Thus, the Mamlatdars' Courts Act gives the Mamlatdar no power to decide upon the rights of the parties, and his order rejecting a suit or dis-allowing a claim involves no decision as to the title of the plaintiff. Consequently, he is not bound to sue within three years under this Article for recovery of possession based on title. This Article has been prescribed for suits to set aside orders respecting possession only—Tukaram v. Hari, 28 Bom. 601 (F.B.). Where a Mamlatdar has made an order respecting the possession of a joint property, and the plaintiff who has been dispossessed by the order brings a suit to establish his right to and to recover a fourth share of the property, held that this Article does not apply for the suit is in substance a suit for partition though nominally it is one for recovery of the property comprised in the Mamlatdar's order—Bhaguji v. Aniaba, 5 Bom. 25; Shivram v. Narayan, 5 Bom. 27; Parashram v. Rakhma, 15 Bom. 209 (305). But the Calcutta High Court dissents from this view, being of opinion that a suit for partition is another name for a suit for recovery of possession, and must be held to be barred if not brought within the period of three years prescribed by this Article

—Atab Sunarhi v. Talik Husain, 51 C.L.J. 461, 128 I.C. 106, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 612 (614).

Where a suit is not one to recover any property but for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to put up dams in a river and to irrigate their lands by means of such dams. Art. 47 does not apply—Eshan Chunder v. Nilmoni, 35 Cal. 851. On the other hand if the suit is really one to recover a property in respect of which an order has been passed under sec. 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the plaintiff can not evade the provisions of this Article and claim an enlarged period by describing his suit as one for declaration of the title—Ram Sahai v. Benode Behari, 45 All. 306 (308), 21 A.L.J. 102, A.I.R. 1923 All. 151.

If a Mogistrate attaches a property under sec. 146, Cr. P. Code and appoints a receiver thereof, the property is, in the eye of the law, in custodia legis. It is held in the custody of the Court for the benefit of the person who may eventually and finally succeed in establishing his title to the property. In such a case no party is under any obligation to bring a suit to recover the property, but can only sue to establish his right to the property. To 'recover' means to recover property from the possession of another party to whom possession has been given—Alagarswami v. Ramabadra, A.I.R. 1929 Mad 39 (41), 111 I.C. 152. A suit for a declaration of a right of way over the land of the defendant need not be instituted within three years of the date of the Magistrate's order passed in favour of the defendant under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, in as much as this Article contemplates a suit respecting the possession of the soil and involving no question of right of way—Kalachand v. Jatindranath 57 I.C. 852 (Cal.).

340. Starting point of limitation:—It was held that the period of limitation ran from the date of the Magistrate's order, and not from that of a confirmation order by the Sessions Judge—Kangali v. Zomurrudonnissa, 6 Cal. 709. It was also held that time ran from the date of the Magistrate's order and not from the date on which a rule issued by the High Court under sec. 15 of the Charter Act against the Magistrate's order was disposed of; because an order of the Magistrate under sec. 145 of the Cr. P. Code was a 'final order' within the meaning of this Article since it was not subject to appeal, review or revision, and the Charter Art was not contemplated by the Legislature when they drew up the provisions of Art. 47—Jagannath v. Ondal Coal Co., Ltd., 12 C.W.N. 840. But these two rulings are no longer good law, because under the Criminal Procedure Code as amended in 1923, orders under sec. 145 passed by a Magistrate are not final, but are open to revision under the Code itself. According to the Patna High Court an order passed by the High Court in the exercise of its power of revision under sec. 439 of Cr. P. Code, is the 'final order' within the meaning of this Article. Whether the High Court ultimately interferes in revision or not, its order is none the less a 'final order'—Rampal v. Mansukh, 20 Pat. 735, 22 Pat.L.T. 202, A.I.R. 1941 Pat. 372, 193 I.C. 501. The Madras High Court has, however, held that if the High Court interferes in revision, then the order passed by the High Court in revision is the 'final order'. But if the High Court does not interfere in revision, the order of the Magistrate is the 'final order'—Nagabhushanayya v. Kotayya, I.L.R. (1947) Mad. 179, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 398, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 444. Where after the Magistrate passes his order in the proceedings under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code against the plaintiff the latter makes an application to the Sessions Judge in revision for making a reference to the High Court but the application is dismissed by the Sessions Judge and the High Court is not moved in revision, the order of the Magistrate and not of the Sessions Judge is the "final order" within the meaning of this Article—Pitambar v. Achoki 29 Pat. 311, A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 325.

When once limitation has begun to run by reason of an order being passed as to possession of the property, the plaintiff will not be entitled to a fresh starting point from the date of a subsequent atachment of the property under sec. 146, Cr. P. Code —Jurawan v. Ram Sarekh, 12 Pat. 261, 14 P.L.T. 113, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 224 (228); Deo Narain v. Webb, 28 Cal. 86.

Effect of bar of limitation:—It has been held in a Bombay case that if the defendant against whom an order has been passed by the Malatdar fails to bring a suit under this Article for the recovery of the property within three years, his title to the property is not extinguished. Consequently, if he gets into possession again, such possession should be referred to his then subsisting title, and any one, who after his re-entry disputes his title, will have to prove his own as against the title of the defendant, independently of any question of limitation arising under this Article—Parashram v. Rakhma, 15 Bom. 299 (304). It can not be said that mere failure to sue within the period of three years from the date of an adverse order under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code, bars the owner from suing unless it be shown by the person in whose favour the order under sec. 145, Cr. P. Code was passed that he had in fact set up a hostile title in those proceedings. The latter fact has to be clearly proved. The order of restoration implies nothing except that the person was in possession. It does not imply that he was in adverse possession. The limited right would not ripen into full ownership—Anjadi v. Syed Hasan, 19 Luck. 531, 1944 O.W.N. 217. A.I.R. 1944 Oudh 250. But the Calcutta High Court dissents from this view and is of opinion that if a person against whom an order has been passed under sec. 145. Cr. P. Code fails to bring a suit within the period prescribed by this Article, his right to the property is extinguished by operation of sec. 28—Atab Sunarri v. Talib Hussain, 51 C L.J. 461, 128 I.C. 106, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 612 (614), (dissenting from Parashram v. Rakhma, 15 Bom. 299); Khaleque v. Labibuddin, I.L.R. (1942) 2 Cal. 332, 76 C.L.J. 342, 46 C.W.N. 817, A.I.R. 1943 Cal. 67. The Nagpur J. C, Court holds the same view as the Calcutta High Court—Jagatram v. Pitai, 26 N.L.R. 160, 122 I.C. 270. A.I.R. 1930 Nag. 142 (143).

After the expiry of the period of limitation the law declares not simply that the remedy is barred but that the title is extinct in favour of the possessor.

Section 28 provides in clear terms that after the expiry of the period prescribed for institution of a suit for possession of any property, the person who should have instituted any such suit but has failed to do so shall cease to have any right to the property—Nando Kahar v. Sri Bhup Narain, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 164, 16 P.L.T. 183

48.—For specific moveable property lost or acquired by theft, or dishonest misappropriation or conversion, or for compensation for wrongfully taking or detaining the same.	Three years.	When the person having the right to the possession of the property first learns in whose possession it is.

341. Scope of Article:—This Article is a special one, whereas Article 49 is a general provision, and the well established rule is that where the special provision applies, the general provision does not apply. Article 48 deals only with specific moveable property which falls under one of two classes, viz., (1) such property as has been lost, or (2) as has been acquired by (a) theft, (b) dishonest misappropriation, or (c) conversion. No other kind of moveable property is affected by this Article. If the case is not covered by this Article, then Article 49 will apply—Lodna Colliery v. Bepin Behary, 1 P.L.T. 84, 55 I.C. 113 (133), approved of in Pugh v. Ashutosh, 8 Pat. 516 (P.C.), 33 C.W.N. 323 (327). This Article contemplates suits by plaintiffs who have right to possession, that is, where they are entitled to immediate possession. Article 49 applies to a case where the plaintiff has no right to immediate possession at the time when the cause of action pleaded by him arose and on which he succeeds—Pattakumari v. Nirmal, 51 C.W.N. 544, 82 C.L.J. 173, A.I.R. 1948 Cal. 97, 229 I.C. 373.

See also, Kripa Ram v. Kunwar Bahadur, 54 All. 467, 1932 A.L.J. 241, 136 I.C. 809, A.I.R. 1932 All. 256 (258); Manakchand v. Samsingh, A.I.R. 1950 Raj. 4 where the distinction between Arts, 48 and 49 has been pointed out.

This Article has no application in case of a suit by a trustee against the beneficiaries to recover certain moveable property belonging to the trust for the trust. The reason is that the defendants are co-beneficiaries under the trust and the nature of their possession is the same as that of the plaintiff—Jagodev v. Sibkanto, A.I.R. 1949 Assam. 10. An action of the nature contemplated by sec. 38, Companies Act does not fall within the purview of this Article. It is governed by Art. 120—Jawahar Mills v. Sha Mulchand & Co., (1949) 2 M.L.J. 88, 1949 M.W.N. 424, 62 M.L.W. 635, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 572, and on appeal, Sha Mulchand & Co. v. Jawahar Mills, 1953 S.C.R. 351, 1953 S.C.J. 68, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 98.

Article 48 provides a period of limitation, both for the recovery of the property itself, and for compensation for its wrongful taking or detention.

Specific moveable property:—'Specific moveable poperty' means property of which you may demand the delivery in specie—Surat v. Umar, 22 Cal. 877 (882); Essoo v. Steam Ship "Savitri," 11 Bom. 133 (137). It means property which can be specified by the delivery of the identical subject, and does not cover money—Agandh Mahto, v. Khajah Alijullah, 11 C.W.N. 862 (dissenting from Rameswar v. Mata Bhik, 5 All. 341); Lala Gobind v. Chairman, 6 C.L.J. 535; Sankunni v. Gobinda, 37 Mad. 381; Jagjivan v. Gulam Jilani, 8 Bom. 17 (19). In some cases, however, money has been held to be included in 'specific moveable property'. See Ram Lal v. Ghulam Husain, 29 All. 579; Tula v. Mohri, 7 I.C. 5; Rameswar v. Mata Bhik, 5 All. 341; British India Steam Navigation Co. Ltd., v. Sandara, (1944) 2 M.L.J. 340, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 60. According to the Assam High Court, the words "specific moveable property" in this Article have not the same meaning as identifiable moveable property—Union of India v. Muralidhar, A.I.R. 1952 Assam 141.

G. P. Notes and title-deeds are specific moveable property—Gopal v. Surendra, 12 C.W.N. 1010; Subbakka v. Moruppakkala, 15 Mad. 157. Crops when standing on the land are immoveable property; but when severed from the land, they become moveable property—Surat Lall v. Umar, 22 Cal. 877 (883); Mangun v. Dolhin, 25 Cal. 692 (699) (F.B.).

Conversion:—"An act of conversion may be committed—(1) when property is wrongfully taken, (2) when it is wrongfully parted with, (3) when it is wrongfully sold in market overt, although not delivered, (4) when it is wrongfully retained, and (5) when it is wrongfully destroyed or changed in nature. Anyone who without authority takes possession of another man's goods with the intention of asserting some right or dominion over them is prima facie guilty of conversion"—Clark and Lindsell on Torts, 6th Edition, p. 252. And so where the defendant committed an underground trespass into the plaintiff's colliery and extracted and carried away a certain quantity of coal, a suit by the plaintiff for the value of coal so removed is governed by this Article, as the defendant has taken possession of the coal belonging to the plaintiff with the intention of asserting some right or dominion on it; and his act therefore amounts to conversion—Lodna Colliery Co. Ld. v. Bepin Behary, 1 P.L.T. 84, 55, I.C. 113 (133, 134); approved of by the Privy Council in Pugh v. Ashutosh, 56 I.A. 93, 8 Pat. 516, A.I.R. 1929 P.C. 69, 114 I.C. 604, 33 C.W.N. 323 (328); Adjai Coal Co. Ld. v. Panna Lal, 57 Cal. 1341 (P.C) 34 C.W.N. 483 (487), A.I.R. 1930 P.C. 113, 123 I.C. 726, overruling Panna Lal v. Adjai Coal Co. Ld. 31 C.W.N. 82, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 117, 101 I.C 62 (where Article 49 was applied and Art. 48 was held to be inappropriate). The word "dishonest" does not qualify the word "conversion." The word "dishonest misappropriation or conversion" should be read as "dishonest misappropriation or by conversion." Otherwise there is no provision in the Article for simple conversion. Moreover, there is ground for splitting up conversion into two classes, one dishonest, and the other not dishonest. This Article would apply even though the defendant converted the thing to his own use under an honest belief—Pugh v. Ashutosh, supra. Article 48 applies to all conversions, whether dishonest or not, and whether the trespass is due to mere inadvertence or to inadvertence without reasonable care—Adjai Coal Co. Ld. v. Panna Lal, supra (overruling 31 C.W.N. 82). A failure to deliver up goods on demand is not a cenversion if at the time of the demand they are no longer in the power or possession of the defendant. as for instance, when they are already destroyed or consumed or have already got into the possession of some other person. No one can convert a chattel by refusing to give it up when he no longer has it. He may be liable in trover and to pay compensation, but it is difficult to see how an action for recovery of specific property can lie against him—Kaikhusroo Manekshah v. Gangadas, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 322, 38 Bom L.R. 712, 165 I.C. 184.

342. Limitation:—Limitation runs from the time when the plaintiff first learns in whose possession the property is. The onus is on the plaintiff to prove that he first learnt within three years of the suit that the property which he is seeking to recover was in the possession of the defendant. In other words, he has to prove that he obtained the knowledge of the defendant's possession of the property within three year's of the suit, and that is all. If he proves this, then to succeed in the plea ot limitation the defendant has to prove that the fact that the property was in his possession became known to the plaintiff more than three years prior to the suit—Kaikhusroo Manekshah v. Gangadas, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 322, 38 Bom. L.R. 712, 165 I.C. 184; Kalyani v. Borrea Coal Co., 49 C.W.N., 810,, A.I.R. 1946 Cal. 123; Lodna Colliery v. Bholanath, 58 C.W.N. 227, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 233; Kanji & Co. v. Jatashankar, A.I.R. 1956 Pat. 526. Where plaintiff entrusted a certain jewel to a person for sale, and the latter pledged it for his own use, a suit by the plaintiff to recover the jewel or its value from the pawnee is governed by this Article, and would be in time if brought within three years from the date on which the plaintiff knew that the jewel was in the possession of the pawnee—Seshappier v. Subramania, 38 Mad. 783, affirmed on appeal in 40 Mad. 678. Where a person claiming to be the true owner of certain moveable property which was taken possession of by the Official Assignee on the ground that it belonged to an insolvent, does not take steps to establish the claim for 3 years from the date of knowledge of the possession by the Official Assignee, his claim to the property is, even if true, barred by limitation—Balammal v. Official Assignee of Madras, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 72, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 437. It is for the plaintiff to prove the facts which would bring the claim within time; it is for him to show that he had first had the necessary knowledge within three years prior to the suit—Bank of Bombay v. Fazalbhoy, 24 Bom.L.R. 513 (per Shah, J.), 68 I.C. 761. The principle is clear that when there have been successive conversions of the same property by different persons, each of these conversions is an independent cause of action, and the barring of one of them by the statute of limitation has no effect on the others. After all, the effect of the law of limitation in respect of injuries to moveable property is merely to destroy the plaintiff's right of action but not to divest his ownership of property. Therefore, if A converts goods belonging to B, it is no defence that formerly and more than three years before suit was brought they were converted by C also—Kaikhusroo Manekshah v. Gangadas Dwarkadas, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 322, 38 Bom.L.R. 712, 165 I C. 184. The knowledge referred to in Art. 48 is the knowledge of the taking away of the property. A mistaken belief by the plaintiff that the property removed was not his, will not affect the running of the period of limitation unless, of course, the knowledge of the fact was kept back from him by the fraudulent conduct of the defendant—Sirischandra Nandy v. Ramji Bechar Das, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 179, 161 I.C. 855.

343. Cases:—The brother of the defendant had appropriated to his use certain goods of the plaintiffs and after his death the defendant sold the goods and held the sale proceeds as agent for his deceased brother's widow. The plaintiffs brought a suit to recover the money. Held that the case did not come under Article 48, because there was no dishonest misappropriation or conversion by the defendant; the defendant sold the goods on account of his brother; he held the proceeds on account of his brother's widow. There was no dishonest conduct on the part of the defendent, although the plaintiffs had a right, finding the money in his hands, to make him responsible for it. The suit fell under Article 120—Gurudas v. Ram Narain, 10 Cal 860 (864) (P.C.). A 5 per cent. G. P. Note for Rs. 3,800 was deposited in Court, and was lost by the Court. Many years afterwards, it was traced and it was found that it stood in the name of one who had converted it into a 3½ per cent. G. P. Note for Rs. 4,100. Thereupon the plaintiff instituted a suit against him. The defendent pleaded that he purchased the Note in good faith from one since deceased. Held that the suit did not fall under this Article as there was no proof of theft or dishonest conversion—Chandra Kali v. Chapman, 32 Cal. 799 (814). This Article applies where the plaintiff is entitled to possession of the property for the recovery of which he is bringing the suit. But if a decree-holder brings a suit alleging that a claimant in the execution proceedings has misappropriated the property of the judgment-debtor which was attached by the decree-holder, the suit does not fall under this Article, because the plaintiff is a mere attaching creditor and has no right to the possession of the property, his only remedy being to put it up to sale in execution of his decree. For the same reason Art. 49 cannot apply. The suit falls under the general Article 36—Kripa Ram v. Kunwar Bahadur, 54 All. 467, 1932 A.L.J. 241, 136 I.C. 809. A.I.R. 1932 All. 256 (258).

A suit for damages for misappropriation of crops grown on plaintiff's land on the allegation that the defendants had wrongfully and forcibly cut and carried away the crops, falls under Article 48 or 49, and not under Art. 36, which is a general Article for action on torts—Surat Lall v. Umar, 22 Cal. 877 (882, 883); Mangun v. Dolhin, 25 Cal. 692 (699) (F.B.); Jadu Nath v. Hari Kar, 17 C.W.N. 308.

A suit to recover the price of materials of a house removed and misappropriated by the defendants must be brought within the period prescribed by this Article—Tafazul v. Mahomed, 52 I.C. 360 (Pat.). A suit against an innocent person to recover stolen property or its value as damages falls under this Article, and time runs from the date the plaintiff knew that the property had came into the defendent's possession —Sohan Singh v. Mull Singh, 229 P.L.R. 1911, 11 I.C. 446. A suit for return of a machine in the condition in which it was attached before judgment and entrusted to sureties or for damages, it being found that certain parts of the machine have been removed while in possession of the sureties, falls under this Article or Article 49—Venugopal v. Gopala, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 241, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 453, 226 I.C. 464. Where in pursuance of the directions of a will, the executors deposited a number of G. P. Notes in a Bank to accumulate until the minor legatee attained majority, but some time before that event, they got the G. P. Notes sold by the Bank and drew out the amounts, held that a suit by the legatee against the Bank for the amounts thus drawn out must be treated as one for conversion, to which Art. 48 would apply. If it is to be treated as a suit for money received by the defendant as sale-proceeds and properly payable to the plaintiff, Article 62 would apply—Bank of Bombay v. Fazalbhoy, 24 Bom. L.R. 513, 67 I.C. 761, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 155.

48A.—To recover moveable property conveyed or bequeathed in trust, deposited or pawned, and afterwards bought from the trustee, depositary or pawnee for a valuable consideration.	Three years.	When the sale becomes known to the plaintiff.

This Article and the next have been added by the Indian Limitation Amendment Act I of 1929. Article 48A is the same as Article 133 (now omitted), which ran as follows:—

133.	To recover moveable property conveyed or bequeathed in trust, deposited or pawned, and afterwards bought from the trustee, depositary or pawnee for a valuable consideration.	Twelve years.	The date of the purchase.

Thus, the first column of Article 48A is the same as that of Art. 133; the period of limitation is reduced from 12 years to three years and time runs when the sale becomes known to the plaintiff, instead of from "the date of the purchase." The reason of the amendment has been thus stated:—"We consider that the date when the plaintiff obtains knowledge of the transfer he seeks to attack is the most suitable date from which limitation should run. If limitation runs from the date of the transfer itself, it is a simple matter for a dishonest trustee and a colluding transferee to conceal the fact of the transfer until the period of limitation has expired... If this point is ceded, then there is no reason to maintain such a long period as 12 years in the case of the sale of moveable property under Article 133 (48A). We consider that in these cases a period of 3 years is quite sufficient"—Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, 1927, Part V, p. 258).

344. Article 133 (now 48A) is an abridgment in favour of the purchaser for valuable consideration of the period provided in Art. 145 in cases of deposit and pledge, and an enactment of a special period of 12 years (now 3 years), in the case of a purchaser from a trustee, when under sec. 10 there would be no limitation at all in a suit against the trustee himself—Gangineni Kondiah v. Gothipati Pedda, 33 Mad. 56 (58). This Article uses the words "bought" and "purchase" and does not therefore apply to a mortgage—Bank of Bombay v. Fazalbhoy, 24 Bom.L.R. 513, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 155.

48B.—To set aside sale of moveable property com-	Three years.	When the sale becomes known to the plaintiff.

prised in a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist religious or charitable endowment, made by a manager thereof for a valuable consideration.

This Article has been added by the Indian Limitation Amendment Act I of 1929. The suits contemplated by this Article were not previously provided for in any Article. There are suits by persons interested in the endowment to set aside alienations of the endowed property made by the manager. In these cases the plaintiff is not entitled to possession, and cannot therefore claim to recover the property; but he may sue to have the transfer set aside and for any consequential relief which may be adapted to the circumstances of the case. For this class of cases the Legislature has provided Article 48B in respect of moveable property, and Art. 134A in respect of immoveable property—Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, 1927, Part V, p. 258).

49.—For other specific moveable property, or for compensation for wrongfully taking or injuring or wrongfully detaining the same.	Three years.	When the property is wrongfully taken or injured, or when the detainer's possession becomes unlawful.

345. Scope:—This Article applies to a case where the plaintiff has no right to immediate possession at the time when the cause of action pleaded by him arose and on which he succeeds. This Article would therefore apply to a suit against a defendant who has wrongly detained moveable property to which the plaintiff has reversionary right and which the defendant, in spite of a prior suit, has on a false pretext, refused to produce and hand over to a receiver when asked to do so—Pattakumari v. Nirmal, 51 C.W.N. 544, 82 C.L.J. 173, A.I.R. 1948 Cal. 97. This Article has no application to a suit under sec. 38 Companies Act. Such a suit falls under Art. 120—Jawahar Mills v. Sha Mulchand & Co., 1949 M.W.N. 424, (1949) 2 M.L.J. 88, 62 M.L.W. 635, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 572, and an appeal, Sha Mulchand & Co., v. Jawahar Mills, 1953 S.C.R. 351, 1953 S.C.J. 68, A.I.R. 1953 S.C. 98.

345A. Specific moveable property:—See Notes under Art. 48. Art. 49 must be read along with Art. 48. The word "other" in Art. 49 is a significant word. Reading the two articles together, it is clear that Art. 49 would apply to a suit for recovery of specific moveable property which is other than the specific moveable property described in Art. 48; and if the property in suit falls within the description under Art. 48, it is clear it would be excluded from the operation of Art. 49, which seems to be a residuary article. In other words, specific moveable property in Art. 49 must be the property which is not lost to the owner as a result of theft, or dishonest misappropriation, or conversion—Kaikhusroo Manekshah v. Gangadas Dwarkadas, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 322, 38 Bom.L.R. 712, 165 I.C. 184; Harnam v. N. W. F. Province, 202 I.C. 218, A.I.R. 1942 Peh. 57. Specific moveable property means property of which one can demand the delivery in specie. If a half-share in a certain moveable property is sought to be recovered on declaration of title, it is not a suit for specific moveable property. Art. 120 governs the suit—Swarnamoyee v. Probodh, 36 C.W.N. 758 (763), 143 I.C. 402, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 253.

Legacy:—A suit to recover specific moveable property from one who is in unlawful possession thereof, is governed by this Article, even though the property is the subject of a legacy. Art. 123 does not apply to such a suit—Issur v. Juggut, 9 Cal. 79.

Idols:—A suit for recovery of the Thakurs of a temple from the possession of the defendants is not governed by this Article, in as much as the Thakurs (idols) are not specific moveable property but are considered as juridical persons, specially in a suit like the present where the Thakurs are themselves made plaintiffs—Bali Panda v. Jadumani 38 Cal. 284.

Accounts books and mortgage-deeds are specific moveable properties—Durga Devi v. Ram Nath, 85 P.R. 1919, 52 I.C. 580.

346. Wrongful taking:—The word "wrongfully" appearing in this Article has not been defined in the Act and in its plain meaning, it would be synonymous with "not rightful". The element of dishonest misappropriation or conversion need not exist—Manakchand v. Samsingh, A.I.R. 1950 Raj. 4. Article 49 applies not only where the property is wrongfully taken, but also where the original possession of the defendant is lawful but it becomes unlawful by reason of certain facts, e.g., where the plaintiff demands the moveable property from the defendant and the latter refuses to deliver it up—Bhupendra v. Goonendra, 32 C.W.N. 133 (138), 106 I.C. 885; Bulakidas v. Radhakishan, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 498, 1939 N.L.J. 190, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 177, 183 I.C. 386. Where, under the erroneous order of the Magistrate, the defendant took possession of the property, he was guilty of wrongful taking which gives the true owner a cause of action. In such a case, time runs under Art. 49 from the date when the property is wrongfully taken—Ramasamy v. Muthusamy, 30 Mad. 12. But Quaere whether the receipt was wrongful. Compare 3 C.L.J. 182, cited in Note 463 under Article 109. Where trees are wrongfully cut down and subsequently the wood so lying on the ground is wrongfully taken, the suit for compensation will be in time under this Article, if brought within three years of the wrongful taking—Aiyappa Reddi v. Kuppusami, 28 Mad. 208. The plaintiff was the owner of a house which was mortgaged to defendant. In August 1885 defendant took the key of the house from the plaintiff and sold it under a power of sale contained in the mortgage-deed. In the house there had been stored a certain quantity of timber not mortgaged, which was not returned to the plaintiff after the sale. The plaintiff brought a suit in September 1887 to recover the value of the timber, alleging that the defendant had taken it and converted it to his own use. Held that the suit was one for compensation for wrongfully taking specific moveable property, under this Article, and not governed by Article 36—Passanha v. Madras Deposit and Benefit Society, 11 Mad. 333.

347. Injury:—This Article applies only to suits in respect of plaintiff's property in the hands of some other person, and not to suits in respect of property in the plaintiff's own possession; and the injury to property mentioned in this Article is limited to cases of injury to property while in the custody of some person other than owner. Therefore a suit for compensation for damage done to a ship of the plaintiff (while it was in his possession) by collision with the defendant's ship on the high seas does not fall under this Article but under Article 36—Essoo v. Steam Ship 'Savitri', 11 Bom. 133 (137).

348. "When the detainer's possession becomes unlawful":—The defendant's possession of the plaintiff's property does not become unlawful until the property is demanded by the latter and refused by the former. Mere detention is not unlawful—Maganlal v. Thakurdas, 7 I.C. 447; Kalicharan v. Ganeshi A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 47. Where the plaintiff had made over a certain quantity of gold to the defendant to be made into ornaments, but no time was fixed, and the latter put him off from time to time until being pressed by the plaintiff he promised to make and deliver the ornaments on the 8th April, but failed to do so, held that a suit for recovery of the gold deposited was governed by Article 49 or 115 or 145. Under Article 49, the detainer's possession became unlawful when he wrongfully refused to apply the gold to make ornaments as he had originally agreed to do, viz., from 8th April—Gangahari v. Chandra, 20 C.W.N. 232 (233), 34 I.C. 959.

Mere silence on the part of the defendant on demand of the moveable property being made does not constitute refusal to deliver up the property. Time runs when there is a definite refusal to do so—Gopalasami v. Subramania, 35 Mad. 636 (639); Hemendra v Indo-Swiss Trading Co., A.I.R. 1955 Pat. 375. Where moveables are entrusted to any person on the condition that they will be returned on the expiry of a specified period, the mere fact that they are detained beyond that period does not render the detainer's possession unlawful. It is only when a demand is made and there is a refusal to comply with the demand that the defendant's possession becomes unlawful, and limitation runs from the date of such refusal —Laddo Begum v. Jamaluddin, 42 All. 45, 17 A.L.J. 907, 52 I.C. 382. Where the possession of a jewel by the defendant was originally permissive, the character of that possession would not be changed by the fact that he subsequently set up a claim to the jewel as his own property. His bare assertion that the jewel is his own property does not make his possession unlawful. His possession becomes unlawful only when there is a formal demand for return of the jewel and a refusal to comply with it. Under this Article, time would begin to run from the date of his formal refusal to comply with the demand—Ma Mary v. Ma Hla, 2 Rang. 555 (557), A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 146, 85 I.C. 10. The proper way of applying this Article to a suit for recovery of jewels from the daughter-in-law on her remarriage owing to disappearance of her husband for more than seven years is only to hold that it has not been shown that the retention of the jewels was unlawful at any time prior to three years before the institution of the suit—Venkunaidu v. Appanna, (1951) 1 M.L.J. 167, 1951 M.W.N. 484, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 704. The mere non-payment of the rent of a machine taken on hire-purchase system does not amount to a wrongful taking or detaining of it; there must be some overt act of demand by the plaintiff and refusal by the purchaser; and the cause of action arises only when the machine is demanded back and refused—Singer Manufacturing Co. v. Felyun, 13 A.L.J. 81, 27 I.C. 637 (638, 639). A testator bequeathed certain specific moveable property to A, which A sold to C. B obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 and took possession of the property. The certificate was cancelled and B was ordered to hand over the property to A or his vendee C on the 19th August 1873. C instituted his suit on the 22nd March 1878. It was held that the suit fell under this Article and time began to run from 19th August 1873, the date of the Court's order, from which time B's possession became unlawful —Issur v. Juggut, 9 Cal. 79. B sold moveable and immovable properties to A, but instead of putting him in possession, sold the properties to C and put him in possession. A brought a suit for specific performance against B and C in which he obtained a decree; but as C still continued in possession of the moveable property, B brought a suit against him to recover it. Held that C's detainer became unlawful from the date of the decree for specific performance—Dhondiba v. Rama Chandra, 5 Bom. 554. After the redemption of a mortgage, the title deeds of the mortgaged premises remained with the mortgagee, who on demand for their return refused to give them up. A suit for recovery of the deeds was held to be governed by this Article and time began to run from the date of demand for the deeds, after which their retention became unlawful—Subbakka v. Maruppakkala, 15 Mad. 157.

A suit for return of property which has been wrongfully attached and subsequently released from the attachment is governed by Art. 49. Such a suit is not governed by Art. 29 as it is not one for compensation for wrongful seizure. Time for such suits begins to run from the time when the property is wrongfully taken or injured or when the detainer's possession becomes unlawful, i.e., after the property was released from attachment—Parshadilal v. Chandan, A.I.R. 1935 All. 915, 1935 A.L.J. 1010, 158 I.C. 1014; Muthuswami v. Dhanushkodi, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 799, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 734. This Article also applies where portion of attached property is removed during attachment—Venugopal v. Gopalla (1946) 1 M.L.J. 241, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 453, 226 I.C. 464; Krishna v. Sudalal, I.L.R. (1945) Mad. 784, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 265, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 33; Ojha Bros. v. Volkart Bros., A.I.R. 1951 Pat. 602.

349. Deposit:—Where the transaction amounts to a deposit, the more specific Article 145 (and not the general Article 48 or 49) applies. Thus, a suit to recover moveable property deposited with the defendant for safe custody, or in the alternative for its value, is governed by Article 145 which is more specific than Article 48 or 49. Even the fact that there has been a demand for the return of the deposit and a refusal to return by the depositary, which makes the defendant's possession wrongful, does not attract the provisions of sec. 49 so as to make the suit as one "for specific moveable property or for compensation for wrongfully detaining the same"—Narmadabai v. Bhavanishankar, 26 Bom. 430 (432), 4 Bom.L.R. 72; Gangineni Kondiah v. Gottipati Pedda, 33 Mad. 56. But in an exactly similar case, where the plaintiff handed over some jewellery to the defendant for safe custody, the Allahabad High Court held that a suit for recovery of the jewellery or its value was governed by Article 49—Laddo Begam v. Jamaluddin, 42 All. 45, 17 A.L.J. 907. No reference was made in this case to Article 145 or to the Bombay and Madras cases cited above. The matter has been settled by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Habibul v. Haq Tikam, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 110, 173 I.C. 612, 1938 M.W.N. 390 where it has been held that where certain promissory notes remain with defendant, having been left by the plaintiff as security or at any rate for safe custody, then on either view, not this Article but Article 145 is the relevant article applicable to a suit in respect of such notes.

Where the defendant who was entrusted with a jewel to pledge it and raise loan on it on behalf of the plaintiff, did so, but after the plaintiff repaid the loan, the defendant got back the jewel from the pledgee but did not return it to the plaintiff though demand was made for its return, it was held that as there was no agreement that the jewel should remain in deposit with the defendant after the repayment of the loan, Article 145 would not apply to a suit to recover the jewel, but Art. 49—Gopalasami v. Subramania, 35 Mad. 636 (638).

See Administrator-General v. Kristo Kamini, 31 Cal 519 cited in Note 628 under Art. 145. See also Note 630 under Art. 145 where the distinction between Arts. 145 and 49 has been pointed out.

349A. Starting point of limitation:—The starting point of limitation under Art. 49 is, when the property is wrongfully taken or injured or when the detainer's possession becomes unlawful. The cause of action in the case is conversion. The detention of property amounts to conversion only when it is adverse to the owner or other person entitled to possession, that is to say, the defendant must have shown an intention to keep the property in fraud of the plaintiff. The usual method of proving that the detention is adverse within the meaning of this rule is to show that the palintiff demanded the delivery of the property and that the defendant refused or neglected to comply with the demand and if a suit is brought within three years from the date of refusal it is not barred even though it is beyond three years from the date of demand—Kuppuswami v. Pannalal, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 187, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 306, 205 I.C. 307.

350. Where Article does not apply:—This Article does not apply if the suit is covered by a more specific Article. See Pannaji v. Senaji, 53 Mad. 621, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 635 (637). Thus, a suit for compensation for wrongful seizure of a ship under an order of Court is governed by the more specific Article 29 rather than Article 36 or 49—Madras Steam Navigation Co. Ld. v. Shaliman Works Ld., 42 Cal. 85 (108).

This Article is inapplicable where the plaintiff has not strictly speaking a personal claim to the property, as for instance, where he claims it in a representative capacity as the shebait of a temple—Gossami Sri Gridhariji v. Ramanlalji, 17 Cal. 3 (P.C.); Jagodeb v. Sibkanta, A.I.R. 1949 Assam 10. A suit by an heir of a Mahomedan to recover a fourth share of certain specified moveable properties left by the deceased is really a suit for partition of those properties, and falls under Article 120, not under this Article—Bashirunnisa v. Abdur Rahaman, 44 All. 244 A.I.R. 1922 All. 525, 64 I.C. 974. A suit by a Mahomedan widow against the brother of her deceased husband, for a declaration of her life-interest in the estate of her husband according to local custom, is not governed by Article 49, as this Article is not applicable to a suit to establish a right to inherit the property of a deceased person; nor is it a suit for distributive share of property under Art. 123. The suit falls under Art. 120—Mahomed Riasat v. Hasin Banu, 21 Cal. 157, (163) (P.C.). A suit against a Navigation Company for compensation for non-delivery of a timber which is not in the possession of the company, is governed by Article 31, and not by this Article since the property is not in the detainer's possession—Venkatasubba v. Asiatic Steam Navigation Company, 39 Mad. 1 (F.B.). Even if Article 49 were applicable, its operation would be excluded by the provisions of Article 31, which is more specific —Ibid. Where in consequence of a quarrel arising between the plaintiff (a fruit seller) and the ijaradr of the market about the payment of tolls, the latter informed the police and the result was that the boat of oranges brought by the plaintiff was detained at the thana for some days, and while so detained the oranges deteriorated, and then the plaintiff brought a suit against the ijardar for compensation, held that Article 49 did not apply because the plaintiff did not bring this suit to recover any specific moveable property, and it was the police and not the defendants who took the oranges to the thana and detained them there. The suit falls under Article 36—Ananda Charan v. Barada Kanta, 42 C.L.J. 203, 90 I.C. 509, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 177. Where the plaintiff handed over certain ornaments to the defendant to be used by the latter in a religious procession (Ram Lila procession) but the ornaments were stolen from the defendant, a suit to recover the ornaments does not fall under this Article, because the property was not wrongfully taken by the defendant from the plaintiff, nor was it injured; nor was it detained by the defendant, because it was stolen from his possession before he had opportunity of returning it to the plaintiff. The suit falls under Art. 115—Chaturgun v. Shahzady, 7 O.W.N. 769, 126 I.C. 682, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 395 (396).

A suit for compensation for wrongful attachment before judgment falls under Article 29 and not under Article 49. The latter Article applies to a case in which moveable property is wrongfully taken or detained by the defendant (i.e., by a private person), and not by the Court in execution of a legal process—Ram Narain v. Umrao

Singh, 29 All. 615 (617); see also Narasingha v. Gangaraju, 31 Mad. 431 (438). In Manavikraman v. Avisilan, 19 Mad. 80 (82) such a suit was held to fall under Article 49; the Judges remarked that since the attachment was made at the instance of the defendant, the attachment might be said to have been made by the defendant, and it was immaterial that it was effected through a process of the Court. It was further held in this case that Article 36 might also apply.

Removal of crops:—As to whether this Article governs a suit for wrongfully cutting and carrying away crops, see Notes 319 and 320 under Article 36.

50.—For the hire of animals, vehicles, boats, or household furniture.	Three years.	When the hire becomes payable.
51.—For the balance of money advanced in payment of goods to be delivered.	Three years.	When the goods ought to be delivered.

351. If there be no date specifically fixed for the delivery of the goods, evidence must be taken as to the time when the goods ought to be delivered—Baiddonath v. Lalunnissa, 7 W.R. 164.

52.—For the price of goods sold and delivered, where no fixed period of credit is agreed upon.	Three years.	The date of the delivery of the goods.

352. A suit for payment of a bill of goods supplied in retail by an ordinary trader is governed by this Article—Shama Churn v. Collector, 1 W.R. 308. A suit for price on account of goods supplied to defendant is governed by this Article when there is no allegation in the plaint of any writing signed by the defendant—Shambhoo v. Firm Dindayal Deokaran, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 464, 1950 N.L.J. 150, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 228. A suit to recover price of goods supplied by a tradesman on credit, for which payments were to be made on presentation of the bill, is governed by this Article, and not by Art. 85, and the period of limitation is three years from the date of delivery—Dansford v. Shaw & Co., 88 I.C. 747, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 806; Sukhdeo v. Michæl, I.L.R. (1939) Nag. 137, 1938 N.L.J. 157, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 266, 178 I.C. 50. Where the plaintiff supplied goods to the defendant on various occasions, and the defendant made part payments, but these payments never showed a balance in favour of the defendant, a suit to recover the balance of the price did not fall under Article 85 but was governed by the present Article—Lalji v. Ghazi Ram, 7 O.W.N. 420, 128 I.C. 276, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 287 (288); Kahan v. Hadayat, 42 P.L.R. 272, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 307. The limitation will start from the date of the delivery of goods on each occasion and not from the date of the last supply—Lakshmanan v. Nalla, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 337, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 13, 207 I.C. 133. There is, in such a case, one single cause of action for the whole amount due for the goods sold and delivered and the starting point of limitation is the date of delivery and deliveries made more than three years before the filing of the suit are barred by limitation—Atmaram v. Lalji, I.L.R. (1940) Bom. 127, 42 Bom.L.R. 227, A.I.R., 1940 Bom. 158; Narayana v.

Narayanan, A.I.R. 1957 Kerala 93. Where a tradesman supplied goods from time to time on credit to a customer who made payments from time to time on account, no fixed period of credit being agreed upon, the cause of action in respect of each supply must be taken to arise under this Article on the date when each item of goods was supplied. But if there be an implied contract that all the goods supplied within a certain period are to be paid for after the expiration of that period, then limitation would run from the expiry of the period of credit (Art. 53)—Satcowree v. Kristo, 11 W.R. 529. The starting point of limitation under this Article is "the date of the delivery of goods." Where there are several deliveries, each delivery gives an independant cause of action—Gulabrai v. Ilahi, I.L.R. (1945) All. 200, A.I.R. 1945 All. 185.

Where a suit is brought against the son for the price of goods sold and delivered to the deceased Hindu father, this Article would apply; but if a decree was obtained against the father, a suit against the son on the cause of action arising from the decree against the deceased father—the decree being a debt which the son is, according to Mitakshara Law, under an obligation to discharge—is governed by Article 120—Periasami v. Seetharama, 27 Mad. 243 (F.B.) A suit for recovery of the price of fruits standing in a garden and sold to the defendant is governed by this Article, the word 'goods' being wide enough to include fruits even before they have been gathered—Wasu Ram v. Rahim Baksh, 66 I.C. 120 (Lah.). Articles in tins which do not require immediate consumption are "goods" even though they are held by the proprietor of a store who has a restaurant department—Pershad v. The Firm of Unica, 1939 Rang.L R. 626, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 17, 186 I.C. 582. Electric energy is 'moveable property' and therefore 'goods' within the meaning of this Article. So a claim for electric charge for more than three years is barred under this Article even though on account of mistake of metre reader wrong bills were issued—Nainital Hotel Co. v. Municipal Board, Nainital, I.L.R. (1946) All. 476, 1946 A.L.J. 195, A.I.R. 1946 All. 502; Attar v. Municipal Committee, Amritsar, 40 P.L.R. 143, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 338, 180 I.C. 510. Where grain is advanced on a contract that it should be repaid in kind, it is not a case of goods being "sold" within the meaning of this Article. The word 'sold' in this Article refers to a case in which the contract is to pay for the price in money. A suit for the recovery of the value of the grain in kind falls under Art. 65 or 115—Md. Din v. Sohan Singh, 65 I.C. 691, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 271. This Article does not apply to a suit based on contract by which the plaintiff firm agreed to act as commission agent for the defendant. Such a suit is not for goods sold and delivered—Mamraj v. Muhammad Hasim, A.I.R. 1941 Cal. 245, 194 I. C. 827. A suit to recover arrears of subscription of a newspaper is governed by this Article—Hormasji v. Kharsetji, 7 Bom.L.R. 190. A suit by a medical practitioner for recovery of price of medicines supplied to his patient falls under this Article—Baroda Kant v. Court of Wards, 1931 A.L.J. 949, A.I.R. 1931 All. 752 (753), 133 I.C. 537.

A suit to recover the balance of the price of a motor-car sold and delivered to the defendant falls under this Article—Bhima Lal v. Rahmatullah, 130 I.C. 574, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 309. A suit for the price of work done and goods supplied under some contract entered into by the plaintiff with the defendants for the supply of labour and material for repairing and constructing certain buildings is governed by Article 52 so far as the price of goods is concerned, and by Article 56 in respect of the price of work done. If the plaintiff has a lien on the buildings for the money due, a suit for the enforcement of that lien is governed by Article 132—Daulat Ram v. Woollen Mills, 95 P.R. 1908. But where the claim for the price of work done and for the price of goods supplied is inseparable and indivisible, the suit is neither governed by Article 52 nor by Article 56 but is governed by the comprehensive Article

115. Thus, the defendant employed the plaintiff as a contractor to do the work of flooring in a building; the plaintiff was to supply marble and other stones required for the flooring and was also to do all the work necessary for constructing the floor, and was to be paid a certain sum of money for every square foot of the flooring done by him, which rate included both the price of materials supplied and the work done by the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued for a sum of money due to him on the basis of this contract, and the plaint made no mention of the price of the materials as distinct from the price of the work. Held that the claim as laid in the plaint was an indivisible one; it could not be split up into two portions; consequently it fell neither under Article 52 nor under Article 56, but was governed by Article 115, which is a general provision applying to all actions ex contractu not specially provided for otherwise—Md. Ghasita v. Serajuddin, 2 Lah. 376 (381, 382), 66 I.C. 490, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 198 (F.B.). In an earlier case, viz., Radha Kishen v. Basant Lal, 103 P.R. 1913, 22 I.C. 576, it was held that a suit for the recovery of a sum of money alleged to be due for the price of work done and goods supplied was governed by Article 120, because no single Article (52 or 56) covered the entire claim; Article 56 did not cover the price of goods supplied and Article 52 did not cover the price of work done. This decision is impliedly overruled by the Full Bench case cited above.

Where the goods sold remain in the custody of the vendor as security for the unpaid price of the goods, and the vendor sues the vendee for a personal decree against him and not for enforcement of any charge on the security, the suit is governed by this Article, and not by Art. 120—Mukat Lal v. Gulab Singh, 1931 A.L.J. 363, 132 I.C. 422, A.I.R. 1931 All. 229 (231).

53.—For the price of goods sold and delivered to be paid for after the expiry of a fixed period of credit.	Three years.	When the period of credit expires.

353. Where the contract was that the plaintiff would supply wood to the defendants and further that he would indemnify the defendants for loss arising by failure on his part to supply wood, it was held that the intention of the parties having been that the price of wood was not claimable as of right on the date of its being supplied but rather when the contract was completed by the whole wood being supplied or when the contract came to an end, a suit for the price of the wood was not governed by Art. 52 but by this Article—Pragi v. Maxwell, 7 All. 284. A vendor sent to his vendee a bill for some piece-goods purchased, and at the top of the bill appeared the words "debit interest at ¾ per cent. per month after 60 days thavanai." In a suit for money due the question arose whether it was a credit sale or a cash transaction. Held that the word thavanai meant credit period, and the suit was governed by Art. 53—K. M. P. R. N. M. Firm v. Somasundaram, 48 Mad. 275, 47 M.L.J. 844, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 161, 85 I.C. 299.

Under Art. 52 limitation runs from the date of the delivery of the goods whereas under Art. 53 limitation runs from the expiry of the period of credit even though the goods may not have been then delivered.

54.—For the price of goods sold and delivered to be paid for by a bill of ex-	Three years.	When the period of the proposed bill elapses.

change, no such bill being given.
55.—For the price of trees or growing crops sold by the plaintiff to the defendant where no fixed period of credit is agreed upon.	Three years.	The date of the sale.
56.—For the price of work done by the plaintiff for the defendant at his request, where no time has been fixed for payment.	Three years.	When the work is done.

354. "For Art. 54 to apply, it must be alleged that the hundis were not executed as promised"—Northern Forest Co. v. Ram Singh Kabuli & Co., A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 328, 162 I.C. 302. A suit by a goldsmith to recover the price of his labour in making ornaments falls under Article 56—Vishnu v. Gopal, 1885 P.J. 252; Laximinarayan v. Shri Ram, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 592, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 286, 177 I.C. 345; so also, a suit by a printer to recover costs of printing—Ambica v. Nitya Nand, 30 Cal. 687. A suit by a Zemindar to recover sums expended by him at the defendants' request for the repair of a tank for the irrigation of lands held by them in common with him, is a suit for work done at the defendants' request, and governed by this Article —Sunddram v. Sankara, 9 Mad. 334. As regards a suit by a contractor for recovery of price of work done for constructing and repairing certain buildings as well as for price of materials, see Notes under Article 52. Where the plaintiff, a contractor, was engaged by the defendant to do some work for the defendant's principal who was a Ruling Prince, and the plaintiff was refused permission by Government to sue the Prince, a suit against the agent (defendant) was maintainable, and it fell under this Article—Abdul Ali v. Von Goldstein, 43 P.R. 1910, 14 P.L.R. 1909, 4 I.C. 902. A suit by a medical practitioner to recover his fees from a patient cannot be said to be a suit for price of work done, within the meaning of this Article but falls under Art. 115; and a suit to recover the price of medicines supplied to the patient falls under Article 52 —Baroda Kant v. Court of Wards, 1931 A.L.J. 949, A.I.R. 1931 All. 752 (753), 133 I.C. 537. A suit by an Advocate for his fees when there is no contract, is governed by this Article—Sachindra v. B. N. Ry. Co. Ltd., 75 C.L.J. 7, A.I.R. 1942 Cal. 444, 201 I.C. 650.

In an action for work done, the cause of action arises when the work is completed; and the rule applies even though the work is done for a public body, and no steps have been taken to raise funds for payment—Emery v. Day, (1834) 1 Cr. M. & R. 245.

57.—For money payable for money lent.	Three years.	When the loan is made.

355. Scope:—Art. 57 is applicable to loans payable at once or what is technically called payable on demand; it applies to cases where no time is fixed for repayment of the loans. If there is an agreement fixing a certain date for repayment, and the agreement is in writing, Art. 66 or 115 applies. But if the agreement is verbal, the case falls under Article 115. Thus, a suit to recover money lent with interest upon a verbal agreement that the loan should be repaid within one year is not governed by this Article but by Art. 115—Rameshwar v. Ram Chand, 10 Cal. 1033; Ramasami v. Muthusami, 15 Mad. 380 (381).

This Article governs a suit in which the lender transfers to the borrower a cheque which had been drawn by another person and endorsed in his favour by the payee—Manmathan v. Baldeo, 65 I.A. 132, I.L.R. (1938) All. 326, 42 C.W.N. 514, 19 Pat.L.T. 222, 67 C.L.J. 176, 40 Bom.L.R. 752, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 785, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 66.

Where a person took a loan and a surety guaranteed payment by a letter of the same date, a suit for recovery of the money brought against the principal and surety fell under this Article; the loan became payable at once on the date of the loan, and the liability of the surety also began to run from that date—Diyalu v. Nandu, 132 I.C. 590, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 691. A suit for recovery of money on a bahi account, in which the dealings between the parties were simple money transactions as between creditor and debtor, in the sense that the defendant borrowed money from the plaintiff from time to time, made payments to him occasionally and struck balance in his favour, the account not being mutual, is governed by Art. 57 and not by Art. 85—Ram Dhan v. Malik Mahomed Dost, 12 Lah. 420, 134 I.C. 513, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 241 (243); Milkhi Ram v. Rup Chand, 32 P.L.R. 65, 131, I.C. 292, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 233 (235). See Abdul Aziz v. Niaz Ullah, A.I.R. 1934 All. 126, 147 I.C. 295.

Where the transaction between the parties starts as a deposit, and subsequently there are several items of deposits and withdrawals in the handwriting of the depositor, the transaction is not a loan under Article 57, but one between banker and customer within the meaning of Art. 60—Gulab Rai v. Sandhi, 15 Lah. 242, 151 I.C. 712, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 42 (43).

Where a customer of a bank draws cheques on it knowing that the funds to his credit are not sufficient to meet them but expecting the bank nevertheless to honour them, he impliedly applies to the bank for an overdraft or loan. A suit for recovery of the amounts due by the customer in such a case is governed by this Article and must be instituted within 3 years from the date on which the earliest of the various sums paid to the customer or to his orders in respect of the cheques so drawn—Uma Shankar v. Bank of Behar Ltd., 1941 P.W.N. 638, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 201, 197 I.C. 449; each payment made by the customer over his signature goes to extend limitation in regard to the particular overdraft which it goes to repay and which would be the earliest item outstanding on the debit side. The payment would therefore be of no avail to save limitation in respect of general balance of account. The fact that part of the floating balance is secured would not make any difference—Basanta v. Choto Nagpur Banking Corporation, 26 Pat. 231, A.I.R. 1948 Pat. 18.

356. Pledge:—A suit for money lent under Article 57 would not be less so, where the money lent is secured by a pledge; the period of limitation for such a suit would be three years from the date of the loan. Thus, in a suit by a pawnee to recover the balance due on his debt after accounting for the proceeds of the sale of the articles pledged, it was contended by the plaintiff that the time ran under this Article from the date of the sale, because it was only then ascertained that any balance was due on the original loan, but the Court held that time ran from the date of the loan. The suit was one to recover the unpaid balance of a loan, and the fact that moveable property had been pledged did not change the nature of the suit—

Sayid Ali v. Debi Prosad, 24 All. 251; Yellappa v. Parasharamappa, 30 Bom. 218. Where the suit on a pledge of certain moveable property is to recover the amount due by sale of the property pledged as also for a personal remedy against the defendant for recovering any balance which may remain due after such sale, the suit will be governed by Art. 57 so far as the personal remedy is concerned, and by Art. 120 so far as the remedy by sale of the pledged property is concerned—Nim Chand v. Jagabandhu, 22 Cal. 21; Madan Mohan v. Kanhai Lal, 17 All. 284; Mahalinga v. Ganapathi, 27 Mad. 528 (F.B.); Sailendra v. Keshab, 41 C.W.N. 783, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 347. If the personal remedy is barred, a right to enforce the charge against the property will still exist—Nim Chand v. Jagabandhu, 22 Cal. 21 (dissenting from Vitla Kamti v. Kalekar, 11 Mad. 153).

A suit for recovery of money secured by pledge is really a suit for money lent and advanced, and a suit to recover the balance due after the sale of the pledged property is none the less a suit for money lent and is governed by Art. 57—Percy Fischer v. Ardeshir, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 213, 37 Bom.L.R. 165, 156 I.C. 531.

"When the loan is made"—'the terminus a quo is the date on which the loan is made'—Babu Manmohan v. Baldeo, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 66.

Thavanai accounts:—A suit for money lent on a thavanai account is governed by Art. 60 and not by this Article. See Note 362 under Art. 60.

58.—Like suit when the lender has given a cheque for the money.	Three years.	When the cheque is paid.

357. This Article follows the English Law. When the advance is made by cheque, it is deemed to be made when the cheque is presented at the lender's bank and cashed, and not when it is given; and the reason for the law is that if the loan was considered as made when the cheque was given, the lender might sue for it at once before the cheque was presented, and on presentation the cheque might be dishonoured—Garden v. Bruce, (1868) L.R. 3 C.P. 300; Babu Manmohan v. Baldeo, A.I.R. 1938 P.C. 66.

59.—For money lent under an agreement that it shall be payable on demand.	Three years.	When the loan is made.

See Notes under Art. 60.

358. Loan:—Where one person acts as managing agent of two companies, and uses money belonging to one principal for the benefit of the other principal, without the knowledge of either of them, there is no advancing of loan by one principal to the other, and a suit by one company to recover the money from the other does not fall under this Article. For a loan to come into existence, there must be a borrower and a lender; but here the lender and the borrower being the same person, no loan came into existence—Jaunpur Sugar Factory v. Upper India Rice Mills, A.I.R. 1927 All. 173, 98 I.C. 1010. The words "on demand" have been used in this Article in the legal sense of the term, i.e., forthwith and without demand—M. Chetty v. Palaniappa, 13 Bur.L.T. 21, 57 I.C. 908. According to the Law of England, when money is payable "on demand" and nothing further is said, it is payable at once and without demand, and time under the statute of limitations begins to run at once—Jackson v. Ogg, (1859) Johns, 397. The most common instances of the application of this principle are of money lent repayable on demand or at request, and promissory-notes payable on demand. This principle has been applied under Arts. 59 and 73 to cases of money lent and bills of exchange and promissory-notes payable on demand—Secretary of State v. Radhika Prosad Bapuli, 46 Mad. 259 (288), 44 M.L.J. 685, 74 I.C. 785, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 667.

A promise that the loan shall be payable "at any time within six years on demand" is not equivalent to "payable on demand" and this Article cannot apply—Sanjivi v. Rama, 6 Mad. 290.

60.—For money deposited under an agreement that it shall be payable on demand, including money of a customer in the hands of his banker so payable.	Three years.	When the demand is made.

The words "including money of a customer in the hands of his banker so payable" did not exist in the Act of 1877. For reason of this addition, see Note 361 below.

359. "Money":—This Article deals with deposit of money, which does not include a deposit of things to be returned in specie, because no one ever entertains the idea of the return of the identical coins (or currency notes) deposited. The word "payable" excludes such an idea. The case of deposit of goods to be returned in specie is provided for by Art. 145—Ishur Chunder v. Jibun, 16 Cal. 25 (29); Chandiprasad v. Jugal, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 340, 1948 N.L.J. 513, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 377. In an Allahabad case, however, Walsh J. was inclined to the view that specific coins, e g., gold mohurs, entrusted to a bailee for a given purpose to be returned in specie might be treated as "money" within the meaning of this Article—Kalyan Mal v. Kishen Chand, 41 All. 643 (645), 17 A.L.J. 888, 55 I.C. 45.

360. Deposit and loan:—There is a good deal of difficulty in ascertaining whether a suit comes under Article 59 or Article 60. It is not clear what the Legislature meant by the word 'deposited' in Article 60, but there must be some difference between 'money lent' and 'money deposited'; and a plaintiff relying upon Article 60 must prove that something took place between the parties at the time the money passed which would constitute the handing over of the money 'a deposit' and not 'a loan.' It has been suggested that the difference between 'a loan' and 'a deposit' is that the borrower who takes money on deposit stands in a fiduciary relationship to the lender. That might either arise from a direct agreement, or might be implied from the circumstances in which the money came to the hands of the borrower. Ordinarily, when A hands over money to B on the understanding that it is not a gift, but has to be repaid when demanded, that would be considered in law 'a loan,' and when the plaintiff seeks to prove that the money so handed over was 'a deposit,' the onus would lie upon him to prove that there were additional circumstances which turned the 'loan' into 'a deposit.' There is no distinction in this Act between a money lent and money deposited as regards the agreement to repay; so that it is not the agreement that the money should be payable on demand that distinguishes a deposit from a loan. There must be something further proved, and it is not possible to define exactly what that something further must be—Chintaman v. Kuchubhai, 25 Bom.L.R. 503, 73 I.C. 978, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 28. Whether the transaction is a deposit or a loan is clearly a question of fact to be decided according to the evidence in each case—Perundevi v. Nammalvar, 18 Mad. 390 (394). It is true that the mere use of the term "deposit" cannot alter the substance of the transaction, but as the dividing line between a loan and a deposit is so fine and as the difference must to a large extent depend upon the intention of the parties, the fact that the parties agree to regard their act as a deposit is of importance—Kashinath v. N. A. C. G. & Co., I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 562, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 255. If there is any doubt as to whether a transaction is a deposit or a loan, the presumption is that it is a deposit and not a loan—Murugiah v. Pakkiria, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 499, 107 I.C. 290. The distinction between a loan and a deposit is that in the case of a loan it is ordinarily the duty of the debtor to seek out the creditor and to repay the money according to the agreement. In the case of a deposit it is the duty of the depositor to go for the money to the banker or the depositee and to make a demand for it. Article 60 applies to a transaction of deposit on the stipulation that it shall carry interest at a specified rate and shall be payable to the depositors on demand and with a further stipulation that a demand shall not be made within three years. The agreement spoken of in Article 60 need not be expressed; it may be implied—Gurcharan Das v. Ram Rakna Mall, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 81. The test to determine whether a particular transaction is one of loan or one of deposit is to ascertain whether the money paid or deposited was in the nature of an advance of loan so as to create the relationship of creditor or debtor between the parties or was merely a deposit without bringing into existence such relationship—Gulzarilal v. Manzoor, A.I.R. 1939 All. 378, 184 I.C. 559. The most obvious distinction is that a deposit not for a fixed period, does not impose an immediate obligation on the depositee to seek out the depositor and repay him. He is to keep the money till asked for it. A demand by the depositor will therefore be a normal condition of the obligation of the depositeee to pay—Chandrabhagabai v. Tiku, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 462, 1944 N.L.J. 83, A.I.R. 1944 Nag. 101. The Privy Council has recently held that in order to determine whether a bailment of a certain sum of money is a deposit for safe custody or a loan, the test to be applied is whether the bailee is to keep the monies till the bailor asks for it or whether there is an obligation on his part to seek out the bailor and repay him—Suleman v. Haji Abdulla, I.L.R. (1940) Kar. (P.C.) 277, 44 C.W.N. 1041, 72 C.L.J. 435, 1940 A.L.J. 612, 42 Bom.L.R. 971, 1940 M.W.N. 1000, 1940 P.W.N. 715, A.I.R. 1940 P.C. 132, 189 I.C. 444 (P.C.). See also Jagannath v. Ram Dularey I.L.R. (1956) 1 All. 156, A.I.R. 1956 All. 63; Nawaneetdas v. Gordhandas, A.I.R. 1955 M.B. 113.

In Balabux v. Inder Kumar, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 541, 15 Pat. 709, 165 I.C. 593 Rowland, J., in delivering the judgment of the Court remarked: "In the absence of a legal definition I think we may say, following the Calcutta and Madras High Courts, that regard will be had to the popular meaning attached to the expression "deposited" rather than to the technical meaning which the word "deposit" has for certain legal purposes; that is to say, we ought to see whether what happened between the parties was of the nature of that sort of current account which a customer keeps with his banker."

A deposit is a loan and something more, i.e., the depositee stands in a fiduciary relation to the depositor; therefore where the plaintiff claimed to recover from the defendant, who was his grand-father, a certain sum which was the amount standing to his credit in the defendant's books, and it was found that these sums were presents which had been made to him on his birthday and from time to time paid over to the defendant by the plaintiff's mother (defendant's daughter) and that these sums were carried over from year to year in the defendant's books, the interest being added each year; it was held that the defendant stood in a fiduciary position to the plaintiff, and therefore, there was a deposit within the meaning of this Article and not a loan, and limitation did not commence to run until demand—Dorabji v. Mancherji, 19 Bom. 352, affirmed on appeal in Mancherji v. Dorabji, 19 Bom. 775. Following those two cases it has been held in Kanhayalal v. Hiralal, 48 Bom.L.R. 795, A.I.R. 1947 Bom. 205 that where money is deposited in confidence the transaction is a deposit made in trust and the depositee stands in a fiduciary relation to the depositor and is liable to render an account to the depositor. But a mere deposit of money does not necessarily create fiduciary relation. That is to be determined from the circumstances of each case. Similarly, where the grand-father of one P intended to make a gift to her of Rs. 1,000 and in fact made the gift and asked the defendant who was a relation of his to hold the money for her and to give it to her when she attained her majority, or when she might demand it, with interest at a certain rate, it was held that the transaction was clearly in the nature of a deposit of money in the hands of the defendant, and this Article applied—Narayanan v. Vellayappa, 1916 M.W.N. 206, 34 I.C. 347. Where one M entrusted his nephew S, a rich money-lender, with some money for investment, and the latter accordingly first deposited the amount with a third party, but subsequently withdrew it and invested it in his own firm, there being no evidence as to the exact terms on which the money was handed over, held that the presumption was that the money was deposited on terms that it should be payable on demand and the suit for its recovery fell under this Article—Ramanathan v. Subramanya, 28 M.L.J. 372, 28 I C. 688. The plaintiff from time to time kept money with the defendants for safe custody. The defendants were at liberty to employ the money in their own business and in case they did so they were to pay a certain interest on the money so employed. Held that the relation between the parties was not that of lender and borrower, as the defendants did not take the money for their own benefit and did not agree to pay interest for it themselves. The transaction was in the nature of a deposit under Article 60—Jogendra v. Dinkoo Ram, 25 C.W.N. 981, A I.R. 1921 Cal. 644, 66 I.C. 752. Where the plaintiff bailed 400 gold mohurs with the defendant for specific purposes, and on demand being made, the delivery was refused, it was held that the suit for the return of those mohurs or for their value was a suit for 'money deposited under an agreement that it should be payable on demand' and that this Article governed the case—Kalyan Mal v. Kishen Chand, 41 All. 643, 17 A.L.J. 888, 55 I.C. 46.

Money belonging to one can be said to be in deposit only with another person or authority. It can never be a "deposit" in the hands of the very person to whom the money belongs—Joseph v. Official Assignee, A.I.R. 1956 Mad. 283 (F.B.))

Deposit does not imply trust:—The word 'deposit' cannot have been used to mean 'trust,' i.e., the word cannot point to cases in which money is lodged with another under an express trust or under circumstances from which a trust may be implied; because, in the first place, it would be giving a wholly new meaning to the word for which there is no sanction in popular usage or in the ordinary terminology of the law, and in the second place, to apply Art. 60 to express trusts might lead to great confusion and might curtail very seriously the beneficial effects of section 10—Ishur Chunder v. Jibun, 16 Cal. 25 (31), dissenting from the dictum of White, J. in Ram Sukh v. Brohmomoyi, 6 C.L R. 470. Deposit does not necessarily involve the creation of trust—Chandrabhagabai v. Tiku, I.L.R. (1944) Nag. 462, 1944 N.L.J. 83, A.I R. 1944 Nag. 101. Where stridhana moneys belonging to a Natukottai Chetti woman were converted into a hundi for that amount and invested with a firm of Natukottai Chettis in the name of her husband, held that the transaction amounted to a deposit under this Article and not to a trust under section 10—Subbiah v. Visalakshi, 63 M.L.J. 232, 139 I.C. 164, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 685 (686).

361. Banker and customer:—There was a conflict of opinion as to whether the relationship between a banker and a customer was that of depositee and depositor under Article 60 or of borrower and lender under Article 59. In Ishur Chunder v. Jibun, 16 Cal. 25 (29) and Perundevitayar v. Nammalvar, 18 Mad. 390, it was held that the transaction was in the nature of a deposit; but in Ichha v. Natha, 13 Bom. 338, Dharam v. Ganga, 29 All. 773 and Chandu v. Chanda, 95 P.R. 1885 the relationship was held to be that of borrower and lender. This conflict has been set at rest by the addition of the words "including ....payable" in Article 60; so that a banker is now regarded as a depositee—Juggi Lal v. Kishen Lal, 37 All. 292.

The word 'banker' in this Article does not necessarily mean a professional banker. It is not necessary to prove that the defendants were carrying on business only as bankers. A man might become a banker or place himself in the position of a banker with regard to a particular customer—Chandiprasad v. Jugal, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 340, 1948 N.L.J. 513, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 377; and if the dealings between the lender and the borrower are such that the Court is satisfied that it could be said that the borrower is in the position of a banker to the lender, then the money so lent could be considered as a deposit. Where the evidence shows that the plaintiff was lending money to the defendants at a low rate of interest, and the defendants were lending out that money and other money deposited in a similar fashion at a higher rate, held that it was exactly in the nature of a banker's business—Bhimanna v. Venichand, 28 Bom.L.R. 73, 93 I.C. 215, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 168; Motigavri v. Naranji, 29 Bom L.R. 423, 102 I.C. 408, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 362.

Money left in the hands of a trader who is not a banker, under circumstances such as would make it the money of a customer if the depositee were a banker, will be considered as a deposit and a suit to recover money so deposited will fall under this Article—Subramanian v. Kadiresan, 39 Mad. 1081 (1084), 30 M.L.J. 245, 32 I.C. 965. Really there is no distinction between a deposit and a loan, because they are both moneys lent by the customer to the banker, but it is necessary, for the purpose of considering whether Article 60 applies, to see whether the relationship of customer and banker arose between the parties. Where the books of the firm began in plaintiff's favour with a balance, and the account was made up every year and interest added to it, and the balance carried forward to the next year, and it also appeared that payments were from time to time made and withdrawn and interest allowed on the said amounts and there was no period fixed for repayment of the moneys, held that the transaction was not a loan but a deposit, being moneys of a customer in the hands of a banker payable on demand—Hirabhai v. Dhanjibhai, 29 Bom.L.R. 427, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 433, 102 I.C. 145.

The word 'deposit' in this Article covers all payments of the customer's moneys made to the banker which make up the credit balance in favour of a customer in the banker's hands—Motigavri v. Naranji, 29 Bom.L.R. 423, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 362, 102 I.C. 408; Kantichandra, Official Receiver v. Badri Das, A.I.R. 1936 Lar. 718, 17 Lah. 481, 165 I.C. 699.

An overdraft in the hands of a banker is a loan and not money deposited with the banker, and Article 59 would apply to such overdraft and not Art. 60—Motigavri v. Naranji, supra. So also, Article 60 would not apply to a banker suing his customer on an overdraft—Bengal National Bank v. Jatindra, 56 Cal. 556, 33 C.W.N. 412 (417).

Where money is deposited by a customer with a banker, the death of the banker does not change the character of the sum. It cannot be said that the liability of the heirs of the banker is in any way different from that which existed between the original debtor and the depositor. The money does not become a loan in the hands of the banker's heirs, so as to make Article 59 applicable—Nripendra v. Arun, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 129, 185 I.C. 339.

Where on the annulment of adjudication of a banker with whom money was deposited by a creditor, the property is handed over to the banker, the property so far as regards the creditor's claim is his deposit and that deposit cannot lose its character as such—Daw Hrit v. Anamalai, 1938 Rang.L.R. 468, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 335, 179 I.C. 428.

The character of a deposit with a banker is not altered by the fact that the person in whose name the money is deposited agrees in writing with another person that a part of it should belong to that other from the date of the agreement. The money still remains as a deposit, and suit to recover it by the respective parties is governed by this Article—Ramaswami v. Maikkam, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 56, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 236, 1937 M.W.N. 1249, 176 I.C. 236.

In banking transactions the following rules are now settled: (1) the obligation of a bank to pay the cheques of a customer rests primarily on the branch at which he keeps his account and the bank can rightly refuse to cash a cheque at any other branch; (2) a customer must make a demand for payment at the branch where his account is kept before he has a cause of action against the bank. The rule is the same whether the account is a current account or whether it is a case of deposit—Delhi Cloth & General Mills Co. v. Harnam Singh, (1955) I.S.C.R. 402, (1955) S.C.J. 645, A.I.R. 1955 S.C. 590.

362. Thavanai account:—The caustom of thavanai transaction among Natukottai Chetties is that the deposit is made for a fixed and certain period of two months at the rate of interest which is fixed weekly by members of the Chetty community, the depositor cannot demand repayment before the end of two months for which he has deposited the money. If the depositor does not demand it at the end of the term, and the depositee does not elect to repay it then, the deposit, is taken to be extended for another period of two months, the rate of interest to be fixed by the weekly meeting of the community, and so on until the money is repaid.

A suit for money due under a thavanai transaction is governed by Art. 60 or 115 (and not Art. 57). It is not clear whether the money deposited on a thavanai account is repayable at once upon demand, or is repayable only after the expiration of the current thavanai period when the demand is made. In the former case, Art. 60 would apply, and time would begin to run from the date of demand; and in the latter, time runs under Art. 115 from the expiry of the current thavanai period when the demand is made—Muthia v. Ramanathan, 1918 M.W.N. 242, 43 I.C. 972; Vellayappa v. Unnamalai, 1917 M.W.N. 858, 42 I.C. 573; Annamalai v. Annamalai, 10 L.W. 67, 52 I.C. 456. In a Burma case, it has been held that money deposited on a thavanai account is not repayable until the end of the period of deposit when the demand is made, and a suit to recover money deposited on a thavanai account is governed by Article 60, and must be brought within three years from the time when the demand is made—M. Chetty v. Palaniappa, 13 Bur. L.T. 21, 57 I.C. 908. In Chellappa v. Subramanian, 1918 M.W.N. 564, 47 I C. 948, it has been held that the suit is governed by Article 60 and no other, because the money deposited on the understanding that it is to be paid on demand after the expiry of a fixed period does not cease to be a deposit payable on demand within the meaning of Art. 60.

It is clear that Art. 57 cannot apply, because under that Article time runs from the date of the loan, whereas in thavanai accounts time runs, ex hypothesi, from the expiry of the thavanai period; besides the transaction is more in the nature of a deposit than a loan, and the Notukottai Chetties are 'bankers' within the meaning of Art. 60—Vellapappa v. Unnamalai, 1917 M.W.N. 858, 42 I.C. 573.

In case of deposit on thavanai where the agreement is that interest is not to be paid until demand but should be added to the principal, the whole amount being treated as a fresh deposit at the end of each thavanai, held that the proper Article applicable to a suit for recovery of the principal and interest is Art. 60 and not that the claim for interest is governed by Art. 63—Narayanan v. Subbiah, 43 Mad. 629, 58 I.C.639.

363. "Payable on demand":—It is not sufficient for the application of this Article that there should be a deposit; but it is also necessary to show that the deposit was under an agreement—Ammalu v. Narayanan, 51 Mad. 549. A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 509 (511), 111 I.C. 210. Advance money deposited by the vendee with the vendor under a contract of sale is not money payable on demand, but is repayable to the vendee in the event of the vendor failing to perform his part of the contract. To a suit to recover the money Article 60 does not apply but Article 97—Galstaun v. Sahebzadi Mamoodi, 56 Cal. 455, 33 C.W.N. 115 (116), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 216, 117 I.C. 700. In Article 59, the term 'on demand' is used in its legal sense, i.e., forthwith and without demand; but Article 60 applies to cases of deposit of money repayable 'on demand' in the popular sense of the term, i.e., after actual demand is made—M. Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty, 13 Bur.L.T. 21, 57 I.C. 908; Jagannath v. Ram Dularey, I.L.R. (1956) 1 All. 156, A.I.R. 1956 All. 63. The demand must be a legal demand. It must be made by a person capable of giving a valid discharge in the event of payment being made. If the deposit is payable to more persons than one it equally follows that the demand must be made by them all or at least by one of them duly authorised by others and in a position to give a valid discharge on behalf of himself and the others. The demand must be made directly on the party with whom the deposit lies in his capacity as depositee—Gopal v. Metharam, I.L.R. (1939) Kar. 602, A.I.R. 1939 Sind. 173, 182 I.C. 718. Therefore a claim to deposit not addressed to the depositee but put forward in a written statement in a suit in which both the claimant and the depositee are co-defendants is not a demand of the nature contemplated in this Article—Gopaldas v. Lakamal, supra. So also, proof of debt and claim made in insolvency is not a demand within the meaning of this Article—Daw Hnit v. Anamalai, 1938 Rang. L.R. 468, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 335, 179 I.C. 428. The demand must be for repayment of the whole amount of the deposit due, and not a demand for partial payment— Gopaldas v. Lokamal, supra; Daw Hnit v. Anamalai, supra; Subbiah v. Visalakshi, 63 M.L.J. 232, 139 I.C. 164, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 685; Ramaswami v. Jeevarathnammal, A.I.R. 1957 Mad. 106; (1956) 2 M.L.J. 508. The necessity for a demand may, however, be got rid of by special contract or waiver. The repudiation by the depositee of the depositor's right to be paid any particular sum will be a waiver of any demand in respect of such sum—Nripendra v. Arun. A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 129, 185 I.C. 339.

Whether a transaction is a transaction of loan or deposit does not depend merely on the terms of the document but has got to be judged from the intention of the parties and all the circumstances of the case.

Even though the transaction is a transaction of deposit the deposit can be coupled with an agreement that it will be payable on demand. Such an agreement can be express or implied and if an express agreement in that behalf is recorded in the document the transaction of deposit cannot be thereby converted into a transaction of loan and the words "we shall pay the said sum" cannot convert the document into a promissory note. The promise to pay will be involved in a promissory note as well as in a deposit within the meaning of Article 60 and the court will have regard to the intention of the parties and the circumstances of the case in order to arrive at the conclusion whether the document is a promissory note—Annamalai v. Veerappa, A.I.R. 1956 S.C. 12.

Money payable under a fixed deposit in a Bank is not money payable on demand; it is money payable by the Bank at a specified time namely, upon the expiry of the fixed period of deposit—Bank of Upper India v. Arif Husain, 1930 A.L.J. 1157, 128 I.C. 772, A I.R. 1931 All 59 (62); and consequently not governed by this Article—Kashinath v. N. A. C. G. & P. Co., I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 562, A.I.R. 1951 Nag. 255.

Article 60 not only applies to deposits made by a customer with a banker where the money is payable on demand from the beginning, but also applies where the money is payable on demand after the termination of a fixed period—Murugappa Chetty v. Ramanathan Chetty, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 734, 157 I.C. 274. 1935 M.W.N. 559, 41 L.W. 536; Nokhlal v. Mojiban, 20 Pat. L.T. 84, 1939 P.W.N. 344, A.I.R 1939 Pat. 261, 182 I.C. 831.

It is not necessary that the agreement to pay the amount due on demand must be express; this Article will apply even if the agreement is to be implied from the course of dealings between the parties or other circumstances of the case—Gulab Rai v. Sandhi, 15 Lah. 242, 151 I.C. 712, A.I.R. 1914 Lah. 42 (43); Kantichandra, Official Receiver v. Badri Das, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 718, 17 Lah. 481, 165 I.C. 699; Ram Rakha Mal v. Harnarain, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 587, 28 P.L.R. 506, 164 I.C. 50; Ramanna v. Abdul, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 42, 180 I.C. 300.

The starting point of limitation is the date when the demand is made. Such a demand must be an unqualified demand for the whole sum due. Where the person demanding stated that he was in need of money and asked for the payment of the whole if it suited the convenience of the depositees, but in any case he asked them to send such money as they might be able to collect, it was held that a qualified demand like this would not cause time to run for the whole amount due—Subbiah v. Visalakshi, 63 M.L.J. 232, 139 I.C. 164, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 685 (687). See also Shamrao v. Saraswatibai, A.I.R. 1954 Nag. 38 and Daw v. Annamalai, A I.R. 1938 Rang. 335.

"So payable":—The words "so payable" mean payable on demand—I. S. Seema v. R. Banerjee, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 338.

61.—For money payable to the plaintiff for money paid for the defendant.	Three years.	When the money is paid.

The suits contemplated by this section are suits covered by sec. 69, Contract Act.

364. Contribution suits:—A contribution suit brought against the co-parceners by the managing member of a family who was compelled to pay the whole family-debt is governed by this Article—Tirupatiraju v. Rajagopala, 8 M.L.J. 271. Where a loan is raised by one of the joint owners of an under-tenure to pay off certain decrees for rent and revenue in arrears to save the estate from sale, a suit by him for contribution against the other owners falls within this Article—Sukhamoni v. Ishan, 25 Cal. 844 (851) (P.C.). This Article applies where the plaintiff pays money which is payable by both the plaintiff and the defendant in satisfaction of a liability which arose before the payment (e.g., liability to pay rent, etc., but where the plaintiff filled up a tank and settled tenants on the filled-up ground, and the defendant derived benefit by way of receiving rents from the tenants, whereupon the plaintiff sued for contribution, it was held the plaintiff's act of filling up the tank was not done in satisfaction of any previous liability, but the plaintiff's right to contribution arose by reason of the defendant deriving benefit from the plaintiffs act, (sec. 70, Contract Act), and the suit did not fall under this Article but under Art. 120—Upendra Krishna v. Naba Kishore, 25 C.W.N. 813 (815); Radheyshiam v. Md. Nasir, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 394; distinguishing Sukhamoni v. Ishan, 25 Cal. 844 (P.C.). A suit by the plaintiff to recover the money which he has paid in excess of his own moiety, for the expenses of certain temple held jointly by him and the defendant, which excess the defendant ought to have paid, is governed by this Article; and the fact that it may be necessary to examine certain accounts, cannot by itself render the suit one for account—Raman Lalji v. Gopal Lalji, 19 All. 244. Under an award, the plaintiff was to clear a canal common to himself and the defendant, and to recover a certain share of the costs from the defendant. Plaintiff cleared the canal and brought the present suit to recover from the defendant his share of the sums expended in such clearing. Held that the suit fell under this Article—Tulsidas v. Wardero, 60 I.C. 971, 14 S.L.R. 219. A suit for contribution by a partner of a firm who has paid the whole or more than his share of the amount due from all the partners falls under this Article—Walaiti Ram v. Ram Kishen 5 Lah.L.J. 210, 72 I.C. 385, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 112, Kunju Naina v. Eapen Chacko, A.I R. 1954 T.C. 499. A suit by a quondam receiver to recover the amount spent by him in instituting a suit on behalf of the estate is governed by Art. 61 and not by Art. 83 or 120, Limitation Act. The expenses incurred by the receiver of an estate in instituting a suit to recover money due to the estate are incurred by him on behalf of and for the person who owns the estate and they are money payable to the plaintiff for money paid for the defendant within the meaning of Art. 61—Cheerath Veetil v. Narayan Ayyar, A.I.R. 1953 Mad. 594, 69 M. L.J. 539, 42 L. W. 680, 1935 M.W.N. 598, 157 I.C. 746-

The plaintiff and the defendant, who jointly owned a well, entered into a registered agreement to the effect that the necessary repairs were to be made by both the owners. In 1911, the plaintiff alone repaired the well at his own cost, and in 1916 brought a suit for contribution. Held that the suit was barred under this Article; it was not covered by Article 116, because although the original indebtedness arose out of the registered contract, yet the claim upon which the action is based rests not upon the registered contract but upon the promise which the law implies on the part of the co-owners to share equally the expenses of the repairs—Suraj Prasad v Karamali, 44 Bom. 591 (594), 57 I.C. 532.

A suit for contribution in respect of half share of the amount spent for stamps for a sale certificate issued in respect of properties jointly purchased is not governed by this Article but by Art. 130—Meyappa v. Ramaswami, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 494, 1940 M.W.N. 982.

This Article applies only to a "suit" for recovery of money payable, but an application by a past receiver for payment of such sums as have been allowed to him on passing of accounts is not a suit and is therefore not hit by this special limitation —Ali Ismail v. Momin Bibi, 92 C.L.J. 287, A.I.R. 1954 Cal. 386.

Charge:—As to whether the plaintiff gets a charge on the property of the defendant for the payment made on his behalf, compare the cases cited in Note 443 under Art. 99. In a Madras case it has been held that the plaintiff who satisfies a money decree which was hanging over the head of the defendant, does not thereby acquire any charge on the defendant's estate, even though the money decree might be realised in execution by sale of the immoveable properties of the defendant —Muthuswami v. Ponnayya, 51 Mad. 815, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 820 (822), 55 M.L.J. 436, 110 I.C. 613.

365. Other suits:—Where the contract of agency is contained in a registered deed, but the contract does not contain any promise on the part of the principal to indemnify the agent for advances made by him on account of his principal, a suit by the agent for recovery of money paid by him for the principal in meeting the expenses of the principal's litigation is not governed by Article 116, because the principal's obligation to indemnify the agent cannot be treated as part of the contract in writing registered. The right of suit is conferred by section 70 of the Contract Act, and the suit is governed by Art. 61. This Article is not confined to cases where the defendant is under a legal liability to make a payment, but cases falling under sec 70, Contract Act are covered by the language of this Article—Kandasami v. Avayambal, 34 Mad. 167 (170, 172). A suit to recover revenue paid by the plaintiff while he was in possession of immoveable property under an order of Court but of which he was subsequently dispossessed by reason of the order being reversed, falls under this Article and not under Article 97, and time runs from the date of the last payment —Alayar v. Bibi Kunwar, 42 All. 61, 17 A.L.J. 1025, 52 I.C. 632.

Where the mortgagor leaves a specified portion of the consideration money with the mortgagee to pay off certain creditors, and the mortgagee fails to make such payments, in consequence of which the mortgagor, to save his property, makes the payment himself, a suit by him to recover the money so paid from the mortgagee falls under this Article and time runs from the date of actual payment and not from the date of the mortgage—Sarju Misra v. Ghulam Hussain, 63 I.C. 87 (89) (All.). Art. 116 may also apply. See 19 A.L.J. 81 cited in Note 485 under Art. 116. Where a prior mortgagee sues upon his mortgage impleading the puisne mortgagee and obtains a decree for sale, and the puisne mortgagee pays off and discharges the decree, he thereby acquires on the principle of section 74 (now 92) of the Transfer of Property Act a charge upon the property which he can enforce within 12 years (Art. 132). But he is also entitled under the provisions of sec. 69 of the Contract Act to be reimbursed the money by the mortgagor, and can sue to recover it from the mortgagor personally, and such a suit must be brought within three years of the date of his payment, under this Article—Shib Lal v. Munni Lal, 44 All. 67, A.I.R. 1922 All. 153. The right of a person who becomes subrogated to the rights of a mortgagee by redeeming the mortgage is the same as that of the mortgagee. When the said right is considered as merely a right to re-imbursement of the money, this Article applies, and a suit must be brought within three years from the date when the money is paid—Perumal v. Suppiah, (1945) 1 M.L.J. 341, A.I.R. 1945 Mad. 500, 1945 M.W.N. 319. Where a property was mortgaged to two persons, and upon a suit being brought and a decree obtained by the first mortgagee, the 2nd mortgagee paid off the decree, held that the second mortgagee's claim to recover the amount, when viewed as a claim for re-imbursement, falls under this Article—Kotappa v. Raghavayya, 50 Mad. 626, 102 I.C. 316, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 631 (following Sibanand v. Jagamohan, 1 Pat. 780, at p. 788, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 409, 68 I.C. 707); Shafiqullah v. Samiullah, 52 All. 139, 1930 A.L.J. 57, A.I.R. 1929 All. 934 (947).

This Article has no application to a suit by a partner against the sub-partner for contribution of the loss sustained by the plaintiff, as a partner paying his share of the firm's loss could not be deemed to be paying it for or on behalf of his sub-partner but should be taken to have made the payment on his own behalf. The fact that he could recover a proportion of what he had paid from the sub-partner is no reason for holding that he had paid it on the latter's behalf—Seenayya v. Ramalingayya, 57 Mad. 347, 148 I.C. 204, 65 I.C. 789, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 12.

A suit for re-imbursement by a purchaser, whose purchase has been set aside as a sham transaction, of the sum of money which he had paid for the redemption of an undisclosed mortgage on the property, is governed by this Article—Raghunath v. Lahanu, 32 Bom.L R. 1376, 128 I.C. 907, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 39.

A suit to recover money paid twice over owing to another's action falls under this Article—Jiwan v. Radha, 18 Lah. 623, 40 P.L.R. 300, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 99. Thus where a person borrows from two persons jointly and makes payment to one of them and a suit is brought against him by the creditors jointly and a decree is passed, a suit to recover the amount paid twice on account of the action of one of the creditors is governed by this Article—Jiwan v. Radha, supra.

366. Involuntary payment:—It is immaterial whether the party seeking contribution made the payment voluntarily or involuntarily, i.e., whether he made the payment of his own accord and averted any coercive process, or whether the amount was realised by seizure and sale of his property under legal process—per Bhashyam Aiyanger, J. in Rajah of Vizianagram v. Raja Setrucherla, 26 Mad. 686 (693) (F.B.). The word 'paid' in Articles 61 and 99, includes payments made or derived out of the sale-proceeds or income of the property of the person seeking contribution, just as under sec. 20 the receipt by a mortgagee of the produce of land mortgaged to him is a payment made to him by the debtor for the purposes of that section—Ibid (at p. 694). This is also the view of the Calcutta High Court in Gotinath v. Chandra Nath, 26 C W.N. 340, A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 814. But in an earlier Calcutta case it was held that where money was realised by coercive process, i.e., by sale of the plaintiff's property, a suit for contribution fell under Art. 120—Kumar Nath v. Nobo Kumar, 26 Cal. 241 (244).

367. Starting point of limitation:—The cause of action for a suit under this Article arises when the money is actually paid, i.e., when the plaintiff is actually out of pocket—Torab Ali v. Nilrutton, 13 Cal. 155. See Jiwan Singh v. Radha Kishan, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 747. The expression "when the money is paid" means actual payment and not merely notional payment which a renewal implies—Achutanand v. Chandrabhai, I.L R. (1945) All. 871, 1945 A.L.J. 488, A.I.R. 1946 All. 142. Any suit for contribution implies a detriment to the plaintiff and a benefit to the defendant. The Legislature in deciding arbitrarily the chosen point from which limitation should begin to run in such suits, chose the most easily determined point, namely, the date upon which the plaintiff suffered detriment by making the payment. If in the circumstances of the case there is interval of time between the date on which the plaintiff makes the payment and the date on which the defendant receives the benefit, the wording of the statute makes it clear that it is the former date which is the governing factor for purposes of limitation and not the latter—Meghavarnam v. Md. Mohideen, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 78. Thus, where money which was deposited with the plaintiff by T in the name of and to the credit of one A was withdrawn by T in May 1873, and the plaintiff was subsequently sued by A and had to pay the decretal money into Court in January 1883, held that the period of limitation for a suit by the plaintiff against T and A to recover the sum so paid into Court, began to run from the date of such payment, i.e., January 1883, and not when the money was withdrawn from him by the depositor (May 1873)—Ibid. Where two persons being under a joint liability to pay a sum of money to a third, both made payments, but one of them paid more than what was legally due for his share, and brought a suit for contribution, the suit was governed by this Article, and limitation ran from the date of the last payment made by the plaintiff, and any later payment made by the defendant towards the joint liability would not enure for the benefit of the plaintiff or save limitation—Marudai v. Chinnakannu, 1919 M.W.N. 429, 52 I.C. 243. If the payment is made by a Hindu widow who is in possession of the estate otherwise than as heiress to the last male holder, the period of limitation begins to run from the time when she has made the payment or at least when the rightful person claims the estate, and her act in keeping possession of the estate will not enlarge the period—Muthuswami v. Ponnayya, 51 Mad. 815, 55 M.L.J. 436, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 820 (823), 110 I.C. 613. In a suit by an agent to recover from his principal the moneys spent by him on account of the expenses of his principal's litigation, time runs from the date when the agent makes the payments, and not from the date of the termination of the agency. The fact that the agent has a right of retainer, out of all sums received by him on account of the principal in the business of the agency, of all moneys due to himself in respect of expenses properly incurred does not entitle him to wait till the termination of the agency, nor is it a ground for holding that the statute does not run till the agency ceases—Kandaswamy v. Avayambal, 34 Mad. 167 (171, 172).

When the payment is involuntary, e.g., where the plaintiff's property is attached and sold and the sale-proceeds paid over to the decree-holder, time will begin to run from the date when the sale-proceeds were drawn by the decree-holder from Court, and not from the date of the sale of the property of the plaintiff—Patabhiramayya v. Ramayya, 20 Mad. 23 (following Fuckorudden v. Mahima Chunder, 4 Cal. 529).

A suit by a de facto guardian against his ward to recover the expenses incurred by him on behalf of the ward is governed by Art. 61, and the suit must be brought within three years of the advance made by him. There is no valid reason for holding that limitation must commence from the date of the ward's attaining majority—Piarelal v. Lajjia Ram, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 437, 37 P.L.R. 246, 159 I.C. 203. Where a guardian of minor's person and property appointed by Court advances monies to estate for expenditure without obtaining the sanction of the Court as regards some items and thereafter hands over the possession of the property to the minor on his attaining majority by the order of the Court before recouping himself with the entire amount spent, a suit by him to recover the amounts due from the estate is governed by this Article and must be brought within three years of his handing over possession of the property. The cause of action does not arise from the date of each advance, but from the date when he hands over possession of the property under orders of the Court —Radhi v. Namdeo, 41 Bom.L.R. 585, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 394, 184 I.C. 611.

62. For money payable by the defendant to the plaintiff for money received by the defendant for the plaintiff's use.	Three years.	When the money is received.

368. Article 62 applies to suits falling under the category well known in English law as "suits for money had and received." Such suits arise where money paid into the hands of the defendant is payable forthwith to the plaintiff—U Sein v. U Phyu, 7 Rang. 540 The language of this Article is borrowed from the form of count formerly in vogue in England under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852. This count was applicable where a defendant had received money which in justice and equity belonged to the plaintiff under circumstances which in law rendered the receipt of it a receipt by the defe.dant to the use of the plaintiff. It was a form of suit which was adopted when the plaintiff's money had been wrongfully obtained by the defendant, as for example when money was exacted by extortion or oppression or by abuse of legal process or when overcharges were paid to a carrier to induce him to carry goods, or when money was paid by the plaintiff in discharge of a demand illegally made under colour of an office. It was a form of claim which was applicable when the plaintiff's money had been wrongfully obtained by the defendant, and the plaintiff in adopting it waived the wrong and claimed the money as money for his use—Rajputana Malwa Railway Stores v. Ajmere Municipal Board, 32 All. 491 (496). See Moses v. Macfarlane, 2 Burr. 1005 (1010); Morgan v. Palmer, (1824) 2 B. & C. 129: 26 R.R. 537; Neate v. Harding, (1851) 6 Ex. 349: 86 R R. 328; Biman v. Promotha, 49 Cal. 886 (889), 36 C.L.J. 295, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 157. This Article is not confined to an action for money had and received in the strictest sense of the term as understood in the English Common Law Courts and cannot be held to be inapplicable when the action is based not only on an implied contract but on the principle of ex acquo et bono this Article is intended to apply to all actions for money had and received to the use of the plaintiff whether they be actions which may be deemed strictly to be based on implied contracts or whether they be merely to enforce an equitable claim to the return of money had and received—India Sugars and Refineries Ltd. v. Municipal Council, Hospet, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 521, (1942) 2 M L.J. 663, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 191.

In an action for money had and received there must be privity of a legally recognizable nature between the plaintiff and the defendant—Rama ami v. Muthusami, 41 Mad. 923. This Article applies if there exists such privity between the plaintiff and the defendant, so that the defendant may be said to have held the money in trust for the plaintiff—Nihal Singh v. Secretary, Gurudwara, 92 I.C. 731, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 228. This Article applies when the defendant has received money as distinct from profits into his hand. So, a suit for recovery of profits of property entrusted to the defendant by the plaintiff for safe custody and management is not governed by this Article but by Article 120—Shi Mahadeoji v. Baldeo, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 92, 1941 N.L.J. 184, A.I.R. 1941 Nag. 181.

A suit by a purchaser for refund of purchase money deposited by him in Court when a third person obtains a decree setting aside the sale, is governed by Art. 62 of the Limitation Act and not by Art. 120 as the suit is in substance one for money had and received—Sivaramaraju v. Secy. of State, A I.R. 1935 Mad. 354, 68 M.L.J. 630, 1935 M.W.N. 338, 41 L.W. 305, 159 I.C. 750. Where the purchaser files a suit against the decree-holder to recover the purchase money the Article applicable is 96 and not this Article as the fundamental basis of the claim was the existence of a mistake as to the true state of affairs regarding the property and its title—Rudrayya v. Subba, 1941 M.W.N. 484, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 742. A suit by the purchaser for refund from creditors who were paid by the sale proceeds on a decree passed in a suit by a third party claiming that property sold was not judgment-debtor's property, is governed by Article 120 and not by this Article—Shamchand v. President, Anjuman Imdad Qurza of Panj Gurain, 228 I.C. 489.

Where the understanding between the plaintiff and the defendant was that the defendant be allowed to retain a certain sum of money as a stake-holder till it was judicially decided as to whether the plaintiff was entitled to it, a suit to recover the money instituted within three years from the date of the decision is within time—Kailash Nath v. Chandra Bhan, 156 I.C. 970.

369. Scope:—This Article would apply where the money was received by the defendant for the plaintiff himself: if the receipt had been for somebody else, whose shoes the plaintiff had stepped into, this Article would not apply—Chana v. Angan, 13 All. 468.

A suit to enforce an equitable claim against a trustee liable to account, in which the relief sought is to have an account taken of the trust property and to recover what is ascertained to be due is not governed by Art. 62 or 89 but by Art 120—Guru Das v. Ram Narain, 10 Cal. 860 (P.C.); Annamalai v. Muthukaruppan, 8 Rang. 645 (P.C.), 130 I.C. 609, 35 C.W.N. 145 (151), A.I.R. 1931 P.C. 9; Habibulla v. Sabdar Hussain, 7 All. 25 (28). So also, a suit to enforce an equitable claim to recover money withdrawn by the defendant contrary to agreement is not governed by this Article but by Article 120—Fakir v. Shamrao, 1941 N.L.J. 665. See India Sugars and Refineries Ltd. v. Municipal Council, Hospet, cited in Note 368 where a contrary view has been taken. Plaintiff entrusted certain goods to the defendant's brother, who however appropriated the goods to his own use, and after his death the defendant also sold the goods, and held the proceeds as agent of the widow of the deceased. Plaintiff thereupon sued to recover the money from the defendant. Held that this Article did not apply, for when the defendant sold the goods, he received the money not for the use of the plaintiff, but for the use of the widow of his deceased brother. The suit fell under Article 120—Gurudas v. Ram Narain, 10 Cal. 860 (864) (P.C.).

It was held in an Allahabad case that this Article would only apply where the amount was received for the plaintiff's use by the defendant himself; if the amount had been received by the predecessor of the defendant, this Article would not apply. Therefore a suit by the client against the pleader's legal representative, for money which had been received by the deceased pleader from Court on behalf of the plaintiff was held to be governed by Art. 120, and not by this Article—Bindraban v. Jamuna, 25 All. 55. But in this case the learned Judges have taken no account of the definition of 'defendant' given in sec. 2, which includes the defendant's legal representatives. In a later Calcutta case it has been rightly held that a suit by the plaintiff against the pleader's son and legal representative for recovery of a sum of money received by the pleader out of Court for the use of the plaintiff is governed by this Article and not by Article 120—Ramhari v. Rohini Kanta, 35 C.L.J. 330, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 499. The same view has been taken by the Patna High Court in Rameshwar v. Narendra, 5 P.L.T. 355, 71 I.C. 916, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 259 (following 35 C.L.J. 330. A suit brought against the legal representative of an agent for recovery of a definite sum only is governed by this Article—Ashutosh v. Arun, A.I.R. 1950 Dacca, 13. But where the suit against the legal representative involves taking of accounts and is not a suit for a specific sum of money, Article 62 cannot apply. See Rao Giraj Singh v. Raghubir, 31 All. 429; Fatima v. Imtiazi, 1 P.R. 1912, 12 I.C. 930. But where in a suit for recovery of certain sums from the sons of a deceased karpardaz or agent, it is found that the karpardaz was under no liability to pay over sums received by him to the principal directly on receipt and there was a running account the proper Article applicable to the suit is not this Article. Article 89 or 120 will apply—Sadhu v. Krishnamani, 23 Pat.L.T. 457, A.I.R. 1942 Pat. 181.

370. Where a suit was brought by one co-sharer of a jaghir to recover his share of the net income from another co-sharer who was also appointed as the manager of the jaghir, held that the suit was not governed by Article 62. This Article only applies to cases where a definite sum of money has been received by the defendant and which the law says he must hold for the use of the plaintiff; it does not govern cases where the suit is really one for account and it is sought to recover from the defendant not only the money which he actually received, but also moneys which he ought to have received but failed to receive for his default—Subba Rao v. Rama Rao, 40 Mad. 291 (293); Vidya v. Shahdev, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 139, 182 I.C. 426. Such a suit is governed by Article 120. Where one daughter files a suit for rendition of accounts against another daughter who under the terms of her father's will is appointed manager, this Article does not apply for the money or profits received by the managing daughter was not money received by her for the use of the plaintiff and it is only Article 89 that can apply—Asrarafi v. Ram, I.L.R. (1939) All. 594, 1939 A.L.J. 428, A.I.R. 1939 All. 442, 183 I.C. 584. This Article applies where the defendant is bound to pay over the specific sum of money to the plaintiff as soon as it is received by him and not where it is payable after a particular period—Ahmed v. Yehiga, A.I.R. 1950 Hyderabad. 52. Thus a suit to recover the surrender value of a life insurance policy which grows from year to year and does not even begin to accrue until a certain number of premia has been paid, is not governed by this Article—Annapuranabai v. Hindusthan Co-operative Insurance Co. Ltd., I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 253, 1942 N.L.J. 380, A.I.R. 1943 Nag. 9, So also a suit for rent against an assignee of a lease in respect of period subsequent to assignment is not governed by this Article as at the date of assignment these amounts were not due at all and consequently it could not be said that the money was received by the assignee from the assignor for the plaintiff landlord's use—Dwijendra v. Promode, 54 C.W.N. 673, A.I.R. 1951 Cal. 251.

This Article applies where whole of the money received by the defendant belongs to the plaintiff. Where however, one of two co-mortgagees realises the mortgage-money from the mortgagor, a suit by the other co-mortgagee against the first-named co-mortgagee to realise his share of the mortgage-money is in the nature of a suit for account, and falls under Article 120 and not under the present Article—Mahomed Ibrahim v. Rahim, 5 Lah. L.J. 111, 79 I.C. 294, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 196 (197).

It is not necessary to prove that the defendant intended to receive the money for the use of the plaintiff; whether he intended to receive the money on behalf of the plaintiff or he intended to appropriate it to his own use, this Article applies all the same if the money actually belongs to the plaintiff— Durga Devi v. Ram Nath, 85 P.R. 1919, 52 I.C. 580; Lachmi v. Dhanukdhari, 17 I.C. 351 (352); Harihar v. Syed Mohamed, 1 P.L.J. 374 (375), 20 C.W.N. 983, 37 I.C. 30. But where the receipt by the defendant is on his own account and is not or cannot be regarded as one on behalf of the plaintiff, this Article can have no application—Peria Negamam v. Varalakshmi, (1942) 1 M.L.J. 274, 1942 M.W.N. 129, A.I.R. 1942 Mad. 386.

This Article would apply to a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover from the defendant the money received by the latter to the plaintiff's use, even though at the time when the defndant realised the money a suit by the plaintiff to recover the money from the person originally liable would have been barred by limitation—Mohabir Prasad v. Parsandi, 45 All. 410, 21 A.L.J. 345, 74 I.C. 939, A.I.R. 1923 All. 532.

371. Surplus sale proceeds:—A suit for recovery of the surplus proceeds of a sale held for arrears of revenue wrongfully taken away by the defendant comes under this Article—Harihar v. Syed Mohamed, 1 P.L.J. 374 (376); Bhagwan v. Karam Hussain, 33 All. 708 (726) (F.B.). Similarly, this Article governs a suit to recover the surplus proceeds of a sale of a patni tenure held for arrears of rent, which were wrongfully withdrawn from Court by the defendant—Niranka v. Atul Krishna, 28 C.W.N. 1009, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 67. Just after the purchase of the mortgaged property, by the mortgagee, the property was sold for arrears of Government revenue; after payment of the arrears a surplus was left with the Collector, who paid it to the defendant, the previous owner; a suit by the mortgagee to recover the surplus sale-proceeds from the defendant was governed by this Article—Lachmi v. Dhanukdhari, 17 I.C. 351 (Cal.).

But the surplus proceeds of a revenue-sale remaining in the hands of the Collector under the statutory provisions of sec. 31 of Act XI of 1859, are not money had and received for the use of the proprietor of the estate; and a suit to recover the proceeds from the Collector is governed by Article 120 and not by this Article—Secretary of State v. Guru Prosad, 20 Cal. 51 (F.B.) (overruling Secretary of State v. Fazal Ali, 18 Cal. 234).

372. Suit to recover share of family property:—If the members of the family are separate, a suit by one member to recover his share of money received by another member is governd by Article 62, even though some of the property is left joint. If, however, the family is joint, Article 62 cannot apply. Thus, at the separation of the members of a joint family, the unrealised debts as well as other properties of the family left undivided. The debts and the rents of the properties were subsequently realised by one or some members of the separated family. In a suit brought by the other members for their shares in the moneys so realised. it was held that this Article applied and time ran from the date of the realisation of the moneys. Article 127 cannot apply because the family is not joint—Banco Tewari v. Doona Tewari, 24 Cal. 309 (315); Ramalagu v. Solai, 41 M.L.J. 274, A I.R. 1921 Mad. 283, 69 I.C. 274; Arunachala v. Ramasamya, 6 Mad. 402 (403); Vaidyanatha v. Aiyasamy, 32 Mad. 191 (196); Thakur v. Partab, 6 All. 442; Gajraj v. Sadho, 15 O.C. 397, 16 I C. 882 (883). But if the family is joint, Article 62 is inapplicable, for until separation one tenant in-common cannot maintain an action for money had and received against his co-tenant, for recovery of the money received by the latter in excess of his share. but can only bring a suit for account, and the only Article applicable would be Art. 120, unless an agency can be presumed in which case Article 89 will apply—Yerukola v. Yerukola, 45 Mad. 648 (F.B.), 42 M.L.J. 507, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 150 (following Thomas v. Thomas, (1850), 5 Ex 28 and Subba Rao v. Rama Rao, 40 Mad. 291); Suraj Narain v. Narbada, 4 Luck 265, 115 I.C. 99, A.I.R. 1929 Oudh 83 (85), 5 O.W.N. 1122; Sitaram v. Narayan, 45 Bom.L.R. 424, AII.R. 1943 Bom. 216, 208 I.C. 340. Until there has been a separation, one co-sharer cannot claim a share in each individual collection, nor can he claim any particular sum at the time of collection, from the defendant. All that he is entitled to is an account technically so called. The Article governing the suit is not therefore Art. 62—Subha Rao v. Ram Rao, 40 Mad. 291 (295), 32 I C. 899. A suit for accounts between one co-owner and another is governed by Article 120 and not by this Article—Abu v. Abdul, I.L.R. (1940) 1 Cal. 110, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 363, 189 I.C. 642. Where the family is separate, but the whole family property is managed by one member of the family, who occupies the position of manager, the family is nevertheless a separate family, and a suit by one of the members to recover his share of the money received by the manager (defendant) is governed by Art. 62. If however the suit is framed as a suit for recovery of the money as well as for partition of the whole moveable and immoveable property of the family managed by the defendant, Art. 120 applies—Parsotam v. Radha Bai 37 All 318 (323). So also, where after partition one brother recovers joint family property and mesne profits from a third party, a suit by the other brother for recovery of half share and an account of the amounts received is governed not by this Article but by Article 120—Naganna v. Venkatarayulu, (1950) 2 M L.J. 459, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 234.

If on partition of the joint family property a portion of the family property is left joint in the hands of one or some members by a family arrangement, the member or members in whose possession it is left will be agents of the other members. A suit by the other members for an account of such property (moveable) and for recovery of their shares is governed by Aticle 89 and not by Article 62 or 120. Limitation begins to run from the date when an account is demanded and refused, or if no demand is made, when the agency is terminated—Gabu Naroba v. Zipur Ramsingh, 45 Bom. 313; Yerukola v. Yerukola, 45 Mad. 648 (663), 42 M.L.J. 507, 71 I C. 177; Kishen Devi v. Banwari, 10 Lah. L.J. 355, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 688 (689), 111 I.C. 635. Even though there was no family arrangement, still if after partition one brother was realising the outstandings originally due to the joint family, as he had been doing before partition, there must be an implied contract of agency between him and the other brothers, and a suit by a brother to recover his share of the collections would be governed by Art. 89, and not by Art. 62 or 120—Bur Chand v. Ganpat, 30 P.L.R. 275, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 407 (408), 116 I.C. 327. In Pt. Narsingh v. Mathura Nath, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 159, 156 I.C. 887 the action was against defendant 3 who was for sometime the Karta when the family of which the plaintiff was a member was joint and who received payment with respect to a mortgage bond. This was in 1922 and then in 1929 a partition took place and the present plaintiff had assigned to him this very mortgage bond which had been repaid. He brought the action on the mortgage and an alternative claim against defendant 3 who had been the Karta of the family, that if the Karta had received the money, then there would be a money decree against him. It is a case of conversion by the defendant, or a case where having held the money for many years from the date of the partition he must be said to hold it in trust for the plaintiff in which event Art. 120 will apply. "Art. 62 cannot be held to be the Article applicable... ... ...or, if Art 62 applies, the money can be said to have been received to the plaintiff's use only in 1929." Where two persons jointly purchase a property in the name of one of them, and the person in whose name the property is purchased sells the property and keeps the sale proceeds with himself, he is a trustee for the share of the proceeds belonging to the other. So a suit by the beneficiary for the recovery of his share of the proceeds is not governed by this Article but by Art. 120—Venkataseshayya v. Subrahmanyam, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 611, A.I.R. 1951 Mad. 547.

Where a debt due to two brothers jointly was realised before partition by one brother, who afterwards fradulently represented to the other brother's representative at the time of partition that the debt was still outstanding, a suit by the latter to recover his share of the money was governed by this Article and limitation would run according to section 18 from the time when the plaintiff was aware of the fraud—Lakshminarasamma v. Lakshmamma, 25 M.L.J. 531, 21 I.C. 394.

373. Suit for money received by agent or ex-agent:—A suit by the plaintiff against his ex-agent for money realised by the latter after the termination of the agency falls under this Article—Hansraj v. Ratni,, 13 A.L.J. 494, 29 I C. 986. The plaintiffs were the proprietors of a brick-making business at Muttra, where the defendant was employed as their agent. The defendant, however, in course of time started a brick-making business of his own at Brindaban, close to Muttra, and all order for bricks arriving at the plaintiffs' firm at Muttra were forwarded to and executed by the defendant's own firm at Brindaban. Thereupon the plaintiffs dismissed the defendant, and more than three years after, brought a suit against him to recover the profits made by the defendant from his brick business. It was held that the profits which the defendant made in his own firm out of the plaintiffs' firm in the manner mentioned above, and which he was bound in his capacity as agent to pay over to his employers, must be regarded as money had and received for the use of the principal; the suit was therefore barred under Art. 62. As this cause of action arises out of mixed consideration the suit may come within Art. 90; but even applying that Article, the suit is also barred, as the plaintiffs had knowledge of the defendant's misconduct more than three years before suit—Puran Mal v. Ford, 41 All. 635, 17 A.L.J. 805, 52 I.C. 373. This Article applies to a suit by a deshmukh of a village against ajahat gumashtas appointed by Government for realisation of collections made by them for the deshmukh—Malojirao v. Keshai, I.L.R. (1939) Bom. 154, 41 Bom.L.R. 215, A.I.R. 1939 Bom. 126.

374. Suit for refund of consideration money:—Where the consideration ailed ab initio, the transaction being in its inception void, the suit is governed by this Article and not by Article 97; the latter Article applies to suits for refund of money paid upon an "existing consideration which afterwards fails" (i.e., where the transaction is not in its inception void, but afterwards turns out to be invalid)—Ratanbai v. Ghasiram, 55 Bom. 565, 134 I.C. 1157, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 36 (37); Buta Ram v. Gurdas, 44 P.R. 1918, 46 I.C. 26; Ardeshir v. Vajesingh, 25 Bom. 593; Basivi Reddi v. Tallapragada, 35 Mad. 39; Madhavdas v. Jan Mahomed, I.L.R (1941) Kar. 495, A.I.R. 1942 Sind 37, 199 I.C. 438; Panchoo v. Ram Sunder, I.L.R. (1943) All. 604, 1943 A.L.J. 250, A.I.R. 1943 All. 294. If there never was any consideration for the sale, then the price paid by the purchaser was money had and received to his use, and Art. 62 would apply—Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 Cal. 123 (126) (P.C.). A suit for the return of money paid in advance under a contract of sale is governed by this Article and not by Article 97 as it is difficult to regard such money as money paid upon the existing consideration—Labh Singh v. Court of Wards, 47 P.L.R. 174, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 210. An amount paid by the plaintiff under a void agreement is recoverable as money had and received A suit to recover the money is governed by Art. 62, and time runs from the date on which the agreement is discovered to be void—Hans Raj v. Official Liquidators, 54 All. 1067 (P.C.), 37 C.W.N. 379 (388), 142 I.C. 7, A.I.R. 1933 P.C. 63. A contract of sale negotiated by a minor (the minor having settled the terms, paid consideration and received the sale-deed) is void ab initio. A suit for refund of the consideration money is governed by Art. 62 and not by Art. 97—Munni Lal v. Madan Gopal, 13 A.L.J. 185, 27 I.C. 733. Where there is a total failure of consideration with regard to a lease, a suit for refund of the consideration money is governed by this Article and not by Art. 97—Biswanath v. Surendra, 19 C.W.N. 102, 29 I.C. 429. When the mortgage being void, the consideration failed ab initio, a suit by the mortgagee to claim repayment of money advanced to the mortgagor is a suit for money had and received, and is governed not by Art. 97 but by this Article—Bai Diwali v. Umedbhai, 40 Bom. 614, 36 I.C. 564. 18 Bom.L.R. 773; Javerbhai v. Gordhan, 39 Bom. 358, 28 I.C. 442. Similarly, a suit by a lessee for a refund of part of the premium paid for a lease, proportional to the portion of the land of which possession could not be obtained by him, it having been previously leased out by the lessor to another, is governed by this Article, and not by Article 97 because the consideration failed ab initio in regard to that portion of the land—Mahomed Ayub v. Elahi Baksh, 49 I.C. 258 (Cal.).

But where the sale was valid at its date and the purchaser took possession but subsequently a judgment creditor of the vendor sought to execute his decree against the lands and ultimately ejected the purchaser, a suit by the purchaser to recover the purchase-money is governed by Article 97 and not by this Article, because the sale being valid at its date the consideration did not fail ab initio, but it subsequently failed by reason of dispossession—Venkatanarasimhulu v. Peramma, 18 Mad. 173. Where a sale by a member of a joint Hindu family governed by the Mithila law went off objection being taken by the other co-sharers when the purchaser attempted to take possession, the sale was voidable and not void, and a suit by the purchaser for recovery of money paid by him is governed by Article 97 (not by Art. 62) because there was an "existing consideration which subsequently failed" by reason of the purchaser not getting possession—Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 Cal. 123 (126) (P.C.). Where the plaintiff who had entered into a contract with the defendant for the sale of certain property and paid earnest money, sued the defendant for specific performance of the contract, but the suit was dismissed, whereupon he again sued the defendant for the return of the earnest money, held that the present suit was governed by Art. 97 and not by Art. 62, because the consideration had not failed ab initio, but had failed subsequently by reason of the dismissal of the previous suit for specific performance—Munni v. Kunwar Kamta, 45 All. 378 (379), 21 A.L.J. 265, A.I.R. 1923 All. 321. Where one of the joint tenants under a registered lease containing a covenant to refund nazarana in case of dispossession enters into possession knowing the defective title of the lessor and is subsequently dispossessed, a suit for refund of nazarana is governed by Article 116 and not by this Article—Ashan v. Suraj, 17 Luck. 289, 1941 O.W.N. 1182, A.I.R. 1942 Oudh 82, 196 I.C. 888. In Saraswatibai v Madhukar, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 467, 1950 N.L.J. 145, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 229 it has been held that this Article has no application to a suit for refund of consideration money for a contract void ab initio as the same is not a suit for "money had and received." Where the contract, found void ab initio is embodied in a registered document Article 116 is applicable, otherwise Article 97 applies. The same view has been taken in Punjab Government v. Baijnath, 47 P.L.R. 122, A.I.R. 1945 Lah. 164. A suit by the purchaser to recover a portion of the purchase-money on account of the vendor's failure to give possession of a portion of the lands sold, by reason of the vendor's not having any title to that portion, is governed by Article 97 and not by this Article, the sale being voidable only and not void—Tulsiram v. Murlidhar, 26 Bom. 750. Where the vendor sold the property in good faith believing it to be his own, and the vendee obtained possession but was subsequently ousted by the true owner, it was held that although the sale was void ab initio, still as there was good faith on the part of the vendor there was consideration so long as the vendee remained in possession. A suit for refund of the purchase-money is governed by Art. 97 and not by this Article—Narsing v. Pachu, 37 Bom. 538, 20 I.C. 254. A suit for return of the consideration by the vendee of the mortgagee rights against his vendor on the dismissal of a suit on mortgage on the ground of want of consideration is governed by Article 97 and not this Article—Bajeet v. Shudarsan, 1942 A.L.W. 50. So also this Article does not apply to a suit for recovery of part purchase price paid on sale which afterwards goes off by reason of the failure of the buyer to complete payment. The test for the applicability of this Article is whether when the money was paid it was recovered immediately—Madhavdas v. Jan Mahomed, I.L.R. (1941) Kar. 495, A.I.R. 1942 Sind 37, 199 I.C. 438.

In Babu Ram v. Amba Prasad, I.L.R. (1946) All 72, 1945 A.L.J. 473, 1945 O.W.N. (H.C.) 295, A.I.R. 1946 All. 159 the Allahabad High Court has held that the provisions of this Article might have been applied before the enactment of section 55 of the Transfer of Property Act to cases where there was no covenant and the suit was merely on the allegation that the vendor had purported to transfer some property to which he had no title. Now, that sec. 55 of the Transfer of Property Act has imported into all transfers, unless the parties agree to the contrary, a covenant warranting the title of the vendor, it would seem that a suit to recover the consideration would be on the basis of that specific covenant and the time would begin to run from the date of the deed after it had been established that there never had been any title. But in the case where there is an express covenant, it must be construed according to the intention of the parties and no general rule can be laid down about the date when the cause of action arises. Such suits would be on the basis of a covenant and the provisions of Article 97 would apply if there was no registered deed and the provisions of Article 116 if there was a registered deed.

According to the trend of recent decisions, however, all these suits fall under Art. 116 and not under Art. 97. See Note 436 under Art. 97.

Where the sale is void ad initio and the purchaser does not obtain possession under the deed, the starting point of limitation for a suit for refund of consideration (Art. 62) is the date of the sale-deed—Ardeshir v. Vajesingh, 25 Bom. 593. If the sale was not void ab initio but voidable, but the vendee did not obtain possession, the period of limitation for a suit for refund of consideration (Art. 97) ran from the date when the vendee endeavoured to obtain possession but, being opposed, found himself unable to obtain possession—Hanuman v. Hanuman, 19 Cal. 123 (P.C.) See Note under Art. 97. But if the vendee has been put in possession, the cause of action does not arise until the vendee is dispossessed—Ratanbai v. Ghasiram, 55 Bom. 565, 134 I.C. 1157, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 36 (37).

Where a patni taluq was sold for arrears of rent, but the sale was reversed on 24th August 1905 by reason of the Zemindar's (who brought the taluq to sale) not having the right to make the sale, and the decree reversing the sale was affirmed on appeal on 3rd August 1906, a suit brought by the purchaser in September 1908 against the Zemindar to recover so much of the purchase-money as the latter had received, is really a suit for money had and received by the defendant to the plaintiff's use, within the meaning of Art. 62 and not a suit under Article 97, because the Zemindar not having the right to bring the taluk to sale, the sale was void ad initio, and there was no "existing consideration" for it. The suit was time-barred, as time ran from the date of the sale. Even assuming (but not holding it to be correct) that the suit was one under Article 97, time ran from August, 1905, and the suit was like-wise barred —Juscurn Boid v. Prithi Chand, 46 Cal. 670 (P.C), 23 C.W.N. 721, 50 I.C. 444.

375. Suit by one heir for money received by another:—The plaintiff claimed as an heir to N, deceased, a moiety of monies which at the time of N's death were deposited with a banker, and which the defendant, the other heir of N, had wholly received from such banker; the suit was governed by this Article—Kundun v. Bansi, 3 All. 170. A suit by persons entitled to a portion of the money left by the deceased against the holder of a succession certificate who has received the whole amount is governed by this Article—Najmunnissa v. Amina, 38 All. 188; Amina v. Nujmunnissa, 37 All. 233, 13 A.L.J. 255, 27 I.C. 712. Where one of two brothers obtained a succession certificate in respect of certain debt due to their deceased uncle, and realised some money on the strength of the certificate, a suit brought by the widow of the other brother, who died after the certificate was obtained, for an account of all sums received by the defendant as holder of the certificate and for recovery of her husband's share, would fall under this Article—Abdul Ghaffar v. Nurjahan Begum, 37 All. 434; Ahidannissa v. Isuf Ali, 50 Cal. 610, 27 C.W.N. 941, 74 I.C. 1010.

A suit to recover share of sale proceeds by one heir against another with whom the sale proceeds of a certain property are handed over with instructions to distribute the same amongst the heirs according to their shares, is governed by this Article—Hussain v. Baquir, (1945) 2 M.L.J. 422, 1945 M.W.N. 671, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 116

376. Assignment of debt:—Where the plaintiff assigned a mortgage-debt to the defendant, and the latter under clour of the assignment received money from the mortgagor, but the assignment was subsequently declared void, a suit by the plaintiff to recover from the defendant the amount received by the latter from the mortgagor fell under this Article—Shanmuga v. Govindasami, 30 Mad. 459. Where a mortgagee assigned the mortgage for consideration, and afterwards received the mortgage-money from the mortgagor, a suit, by the assignee to recover the money from the assignor (mortgagee) fell under this Article—Sriramulu v. Chenna, 25 Mad. 396. See this case cited under Art. 97. Certain G. P. Notes standing in the name of A was assigned to B, and were afterwards attached in execution of a decree obtained by A's creditors against A. B after vainly objecting to the attachment brought a suit against A and the decree-holders, to establish his right to the Notes; and was successful in that suit. While it was pending, A realised interest on the Notes. In a suit by B to recover the interest so realised, held that this Article applied—Chand Mal v. Sansar, 36 P.R. 1913, 17 I.C. 311.

376A. Assignment of decree:—Where a decree is assigned by a person before adjudication as an insolvent and the assignment is annulled at the instance of the Official Receiver after adjudication, a suit by the Official Receiver against the assignee to recover the money collected under the decree both before the annulment of the assignment and after the annulment is governed by this Article—Shanmugan v Official Receiver, (1938) 1 M.L.J. 682, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 532, 1938 M.W.N. 290, 178 I.C. 448. One of the holders of a decree for money assigns his share to a third party and the other decree-holders bring a suit against the assignor and the assignee for specific performance of contract of sale in their favour and obtain a decree declaring them to be entitled to the whole amount of the decree and they realise the entire amount in execution. Subsequently the decree in the specific performance suit is reversed on appeal. In a suit by the assignee against the decree-holders for recovery of his share in the decretal amount already realised by them, this Article is applicable and not Article 120—Murlidhar v. Ram Saran, I.L.R. (1946) All. 633, 1947 A.L.J. 170, A.I.R. 1947 All. 256, 228 I.C. 493.

377. Compensation money:—A suit against the tenant by the landlord to recover his share of compensation money awarded by Government and withdrawn by the tenant who falsely represented himself to be the real owner, falls under Art. 62 or Art. 120—Khetter v. Dinendra, 3 C.W.N. 202. But where at the time when the defendant (lessee) drew out the compensation money, the plaintiff had not yet established his title to the property acquired by Government but did it subsequently, the money when taken out by the defendant could not be said to have been received for the plaintiff's use, and consequently a suit by the plaintiff to recover the money from the defendant after he established his title to it does not fall under this Article but under Article 120—Nund Lal v. Meer Aboo, 5 Cal. 597; Krishnan v. Perachan, 15 Mad. 382.

378. Other suits:—Where there is a mortgage decree, a payment made out of Court after the preliminary decree and before the final decree should be brought into account when the final decree is passed (Sital v. Baijnath, 44 All. 668). But if this is not done, that money becomes money in the hands of the mortgagee to the use of the mortgagor—Mahbub Ali v. Md. Hussain, 50 All. 111, 25 A.L.J. 823, A.I.R. 1927 All. 710 (711), 104 I.C. 419. A suit by the plaintiff for recovery of money received by the defendant, his co-mortgagee, in satisfaction of a mortgage in which both were interested, though the deed stood in the name of the defendant alone, is a suit governed by this Article—Mahomed Wahib v. Mahomed Ameer, 32 Cal. 527.

Before the present amendment of sec. 10, a shebait of an idol was not treated as a trustee under that section; whatever sum he received for and on behalf of the idol was treated only as sums received to the use of the idol, and a suit to recover the money so received was held to be governed by this Article—Jaisth Madhu Acharyaji v. Thakur Sri Gat Ashram, 50 All. 265, 25 A.L.J. 1047, A.I.R. 1928 All. 134; Rangacharya v. Guru Revti Ramanacharya, 1929 A.L.J. 229, 114 I.C. 734, A.I.R. 1928 All. 689 (695). But this is no longer good law in view of the amendment of sec. 10.

A suit for money received by the pleader of the plaintiffs out of Court for their use is governed by this Article—Ramhari v. Rohini, 35 C.L.J. 330, A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 499. A suit to recover money paid by the plaintiff to the defendant by mistake in excess of the amount legally due is governed by Article 96 which specially provides for the case, rather than Article 62—Tofa Lal v. Moinuddin, 4 Pat. 448, 93 I.C. 129, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 765 (767). Pannalal v. Union of India, A.I.R. 1956 V.P. 26.

A suit for recovery of rent received by a joint lessor falls under this Article—Gopal Rao v. Ambabai, 16 N.L.R. 183, 59 I.C. 455. See also Venkatarama v. Kuppuswami, A.I.R. 1955 Mad. 643. A suit by the real claimant against a benamidar in whose name a bond stood and who had realised the money due upon it, is governed by this Article—Sundar v. Fakir, 25 All. 62; Subbanna v. Kunhanna, 30 Mad. 298; Narayanna v. Rangasami, 1915 M.W.N. 215, 28 I.C. 495. The Madras High Court has however, held in Devarajulu v. Jayalakshmi, (1941) 2 M.L.J. 222, 1941 M.W.N. 727, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 727 and in Karanamurthi v. Ramanatha, I.L.R. (1946) Mad. 306, (1946) 1 M.L.J. 140, A.I.R. 1946 Mad. 248 that the relationship between a benamidar and the real owner is in the nature of a trust and the claim against a benamidar is an equitable one and the proper Article to govern such a suit is Article 120 and not this Article.

An attaching creditor is not entitled to the sale proceeds as against the holder of a decree charging the lands attached, on the ground of the priority of his attachment, if the charge had been created prior to the attachment. Where in such a case the Court had wrongly ordered the holder of the decree charging the lands to refund to the attaching creditor the sale proceeds paid to him, and he brought a suit to recover the money by the establishment of his prior right to the same and to cancel the order of the Court compelling him to refund the money,, as it was made without jurisdiction, held (by the majority of the Full Bench) that the suit fell under this Article, (but the other two Judges were of opinion that Art. 120 applied)—Ram Kishen v. Bhavani, 1 All. 333 (F.B.). "It is very doubtful whether the decision of the majority of the Full Bench in this case is correct, as the money in this case was paid under an order of a Court which was still in existence at the time of the suit"—Starling, 5th Edn., p. 255.

One B. & Co. were the managing agents of two companies J. & Co. and U. & Co. which did business other than money-lending or banking business. The money of J. & Co. was employed by B. & Co. to continue the business of U. & Co. of which the directors of either company were ignorant. Held that U. & Co. is liable for the money so employed, either for having received the money through their agents rightfully and applied to their purpose, or for having received it wrongfully by secret and deceitful misapplication by their agents. In the latter case, the money is recoverable as money had and received to the use of the true owner, and time begins to run from the date of actual payment—Upper India Rice Mills v. Jaunpur Sugar Factory, 49 All. 520 (F.B.), 101 I.C. 224, A.I.R. 1927 All. 161, overruling Jaunpur Sugar Factory v. U. I. Rice Mills, A.I.R. 1927 All. 173, 98 I.C. 1010. A suit by a company for the recovery of money due to it, but which had been realised by a decree holder against the company during the pendency of an application for the winding up of the company is governed by Article 120 and not by this Article; Gorakpur Electric Supply Co. Ltd. v. Nariman & Co., I.L.R. (1947) All. 203, 1947 A.L.J. 319, A.I.R. 1948 All. 75.

Money paid under a void authority or under a void judgment to a person not entitled to receive it can be recovered from him by the rightful owner in an action for money had and received—Ram Narain v. Brij Banke, 39 All. 322 (331). Where in execution of a decree a certain debt is attached and the amount of the debt is paid by the debtor into Court and received by the decree-holder, a suit by the claimant of the debt against the decree-holder is governed by Art. 62 or 120—Yellammal v. Ayyappa, 38 Mad. 978. In execution of a decree against A, certain money due to A was attached. Before that date, A had transferred his property to B and the money was legally due to B. The debtor of A paid the money to the bailiff, who deposited it into Court, and it was paid to A's decree-holder. Subsequently B brought a suit for the recovery of the money within three years of the date when it was paid. Held that this Article governed the suit and not Art. 29, since the suit was one for money had and received for the plaintiff's use—Naidar v. Ganga, 38 All. 675. A decree held by the plaintiff was sold in execution of a decree against him. The auction-purchaser realised the amount of the decree he purchased; but subsequently the sale was set aside. The plaintiff sued the auction purchaser for the recovery of the money realised by him under the decree; held that the suit was not one for damages, but was one for money payable by the defendant for money received by the defendant to the plaintiff's use, and fell under this Article—Bhawani v. Rikhi Ram, 2 All.. 354. Where a mortgaged property was sold for arrears of revenue and the surplus sale-proceeds were withdrawn by the mortgagor from the Collectorate, a suit by the mortgagee to recover his mortgage-money out of the sale-proceeds is governed by either Article 132 or 120, but not by Article 62 or 97—Kamala Kanta v. Abdul Barkat, 27 Cal. 180. A suit for the recovery of money wrongfully withdrawn by the defendant from Court by setting up an adverse title to the claim of the plaintiff is governed by Article 120 and not by this Article—Kanji v. Kalidas, 69 C.L.J. 108, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 413, 182 I.C. 860.

A suit by the plaintiff to recover his share of a Government allowance received by the defendant is subject to the limitation of three years under this Article—Chamanlal v. Bapubai, 22 Bom. 669; Raoji v. Bala, 15 Bom. 135. Where a Municipal Board has assessed taxes on plaintiff's goods at a higher rate than that sanctioned by the Government, a suit for refund of the amount realised over and above the sanctioned rate would fall under this Article—Rajputana Malwa Railway Stores v. Ajmere Municipal Board, 32 All. 491; or on the ground that tax was illegally levied by the Municipality —City Municipality, Bhusawal v. Nusserwanji, 42 Bom.L.R. 491, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 252; 189 I.C. 678. So also, a suit to recover license fees and profession tax alleged to have been wrongfully levied by the Municipality is governed by this Article—India Sugars and Refinaries Ltd. v. Municipal Council, Hospet, I.L.R. (1942) Mad. 521, (1942) 2 M.L.J. 663, A.I.R. 1943 Mad. 191. But a suit by the Municipality for recovery of house tax and sanitary charge imposed in the form of rate on lands or building is not governed by this Article but by Article 132—Shidrao v. Municipality of Athni, 44 Bom.L.R. 849, A.I.R. 1943 Bom. 21. Where the price of a consignment of goods was paid by the plaintiff in advance on 15th November, but when the goods were delivered on 22nd November, certain of the goods were found missing, and then the plaintiff sued for recovery of the sum overpaid, held that limitation ran from the failure of consideration, i.e., 22nd November, the date when the short delivery took place, and not from 15th November, the date when defendant received the money—Atul Kristo v. Lyon, 14 Cal. 457 (460). But it is curious that in this case the Judges held that Art. 62 was applicable while they computed the period of limitation from the date of "failure of consideration" using the language of Article 97.

A suit to recover money under section 73 (2) C. P. Code, on the ground that the plaintiff and not the defendant was entitled to receive the same in proceedings in execution of a decree for rateable distribution, is governed by Art. 62, and not by Art. 120, the cause of action arising on the date of the wrongful payment to the defendant—Baijnath v. Ramadoss, 39 Mad. 62; Vishnu v. Achut, 15 Bom. 438.

Where a person has lost money by theft he can sue the thief for the recovery of the money, quite apart from the crime, but if he does, the suit must be framed as one for money had and received, and the suit then falls under this Article—Gaffar v. Syed

Noor, I.L.R. (1941) Mad. 414, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 27, 1941 M.W.N. 24, A.I.R. 1941 Mad. 391

A suit for recovery of money realised by a defacto guardian as such is governed by this Article even though in the receipt granted by him the amount is shown as amanat to him—Shaikh Golam v. Najafunnessa, 4 D L.R. (Cal.) 141.

Disputes having arisen between the heirs of one G deceased, the defendant was appointed to sell his stock-in-trade and pay up the creditors pending certain arbitration proceedings. The defendant sold certain property and paid up certain debts. The arbitration proceedings fell through. In a suit brought by G's sister for recovery of her share, held that this Article applied—Masihuddin v. Imtiazunissa, 37 All. 40. On a dispute between owners of contiguous properties, some lands were attached under section 146 of the Criminal Procedure Code and the income was deposited in the collectorate. Thereupon several suits were instituted by the defendant (one of the owners) for the establishment of his right and the dispute was then compromised. In the meantime, the defendant withdrew a portion of the money alleging that it represented his share of the profits, whereupon the other owner sued him for the recovery of that money on the ground that the lands attached belonged to him Held that the suit was not governed by Article 62. The defendant when he withdrew the money from the collectorate took the money as owner, and had good reason for believing at the time that the money was really his; it could not therefore be said by any process of reasoning that the defendant received the money for the use of the plaintiff. The suit fell under Article 120—Anantram v. Hem Chandra, 50 Cal. 475, 72 I.C. 1041, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 379; Lingangouda v. Lingangouda, I.L.R 1953 Bom. 214, 54 Bom.L.R. 829, A.I.R. 1953 Bom. 79 See contra—T.S.H.W. Co-operative Society Ltd. v. Sundaram, A I.R. 1957 T.C.. 61. Where an association not having been registered, the members brought a suit against the promoter for repayment of their subscriptions by converting the property of the association into cash, held that the suit was not governed by Art. 62, because the money (subscription) when it was received by the promoter was not received by him for the plaintiff's use, but was received for other specific purposes (viz., to start a business), and became payable to the plaintiffs to the extent to which it is payable (after paying off all debts), by reason of happening of subsequent events, viz., failure to register the partnership as a company The suit is, though not in form, in substance a suit for an account, governed by the residuary Article 120—U. Sein v. U. Phyu, 7 Rang. 540, A.I.R. 1930 Rang. 21 (25, 27), 120 I.C. 902. The starting point for computing limitation would be the date on which the money was paid and there would be no recurring cause of action—Kumaraswami v. Chinnethambi, (1950) 2 M.L.J. 453, 1050 M.W.N. 655, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 291. A debt due to K. from B was attached before judgment in a suit by V. K. was thereafter adjudged an insolvent. The attached debt was paid into Court and the Official Receiver of K's estate claimed the money and applied to the Court for the payment of the money to him and not to V, by virtue of sec. 34 of the Prov. Ins. Act (1907). The application was dismissed and the amount was paid to V. The Official Receiver then filed a suit to recover the money from V. Held that this Article applied and not Article 11—Official Receiver v. Veeraraghavan, 45 Mad. 70 (see this case cited under Article 11).

63. For money payable for interest upon money due from the defendant to the plaintiff.	Three years.	When the interest becomes due.

379. A suit by the depositor against a banker for the difference between the higher rate of interest claimed by him and the lower rate paid by the banker is governed by this Article—Makundi v. Balakishen, 3 All. 328. This Article applies where the interest is actually payable. If in a thavanai transaction money is deposited with the understanding that at the end of each thavanai period the interest for the period is not to be paid but is to be added to the principal, and both are to be treated as a fresh deposit, a suit to recover principal and interest is governed by Article 60. The claim as to interest will not be treated as falling under Article 63—Narayanan v. Suppai Chetty, 43 Mad. 629, 28 M.L.J. 417.

Where a mortgagee, not being entitled to claim post diem interest as such under the mortgage, claims such interest by way of damages for the non-payment of the mortgage-money, such a claim is governed by Article 116 of the Limitation Act—Mathura v. Narindar, 19 All. 39 (P.C.) See also Gudri v. Bhubaneswari, 19 Cal. 19, and Mati v. Kumhari, 24 Cal. 699 (F.B.) cited under Art. 116.

A suit for recovery of interest is barred when a suit for recovery of the principal is barred when there is no independent contract to pay interest and the interest is a mere accessory to the principal. But where there is a special contract to pay interest at a specified rate this principle does not apply—Hazi Nathu v. Nikki, 204 I.C. 509, A.I.R. 1942 Pesh. 85.

64. For money payable to the plaintiff for money found to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff on accounts stated between them.	Three years.	When the accounts are stated in writing signed by the defendant or his agent duly authorised in this behalf, unless where the debt is, by a simultaneous agreement in writing signed as aforesaid, made payable at a future time, and then when that time arrives.

380. Account stated:—An account is said to be stated only when there have been reciprocal demands between the parties and the balance struck then becomes the consideration for the discharge on either side. Such an account stated amounts to a new contract and is substantive cause of action—Ishar Das v. Harkishan, 1916 P.W.R. 148, 35 I.C. 577. A mere statement of the balance which is due on a particular date cannot be called an account stated within this Article. An account stated is a transaction in which several cross items are set off one against the other and the balance is struck in favour of one of the parties. In such a case, the law implies a new promise by the other party to pay the balance in consideration not merely of past debts, but also of the extinguishment of the old debts on each side, and hence it is not necessary that the balance should be struck within the period of limitation applicable to any of the items in the account—Suraj v. Bourke, 5 P.L.J. 371 (372), following Hargopal v. Abdul, 9 B.H.C.R. 429. In other words, an account stated, signed by the defendant, will be the basis of a suit, even though at the date of the statement some of the items adjusted are barred by the ordinary rule of limitation.

The bare striking of a balance consisting largely of barred debts in the defendant's account book in the plaintiff's handwriting which is not signed by the defendant and which does not contain words acknowledging liability by the defendant or stating account on his behalf, is neither an acknowledgment under sec. 19, nor an account stated under Art. 64, nor a promise to pay under sec. 25 (3) of the Contract Act—Gulzari Mal v. Kishan Chand, 132 P.R. 1907.

In an account stated it is necessary that there should have been reciprocal demands between the parties. Therefore when a sum of money was deposited with the defendant's firm, and long after a suit for the money was barred by limitation, a balance was struck calculating the amount of interest and principal, and was signed by the defendant, acknowledging the same to be "due for balance of old account," it was held that the transaction did not amount to an account stated as there was no reciprocal demand, but was only an acknowledgment, which, as the suit had then long been barred by limitation, was of no avail—Nathanibai v. Nathu, 7 Bom. 414. Where there are no cross demands to be set off against each other, but the account consists merely of debts on one side of the account and payments made by the debtor on the other side, the account is not mutual. Hence a mere acknowledgment signed by the debtor showing a balance standing against him on such an account is not an account stated. So, a khata consisting of one item on one side only and bearing the mark of the debtor, is merely an acknowledgment and not an account stated—Tribhovan v. Amina, 9 Bom. 516. Where the defendant after having examined the accounts acknowledged the balance due by him and signed the entry of the same in the defendant's account-book, it was held that the acknowledgment being a mere acknowledgment of a balance struck, and the account not mutual, there was neither an account stated to which Art. 64 applied, nor an evidence of a new contract which could be the basis of a suit—Ganga v. Ram Dayal, 23 All. 502; Shankar v. Mukta, 22 Bom. 513. Chithas having no reciprocal debts and credits but consisting of only one-sided debts all of which were taken by the defendants from the plaintiff cannot be said to be accounts stated Each of the items is a separate debt in itself and each of them will be barred in different dates—Deoraj v. Indrasan, 8 Pat. 706, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 258 (260). The striking of a balance in an account, the items of which are all on one side, does not amount to an account stated—Jamun v. Nand Lal, 15 All. 1.

In other words, where the account is not mutual, an acknowledgment by the debtor in the account book of his creditor, is not an account stated within the meaning of this Article. If it were, then the provisions of sec. 19 (which requires the acknowledgment to be made before the expiry of the period of limitation of the suit) may be evaded, for it would be unnecessary to inquire whether the acknowledgment was made before the expiry of the period. Therefore in cases where the account is not mutual, Article 64 must be read with sec. 19, and this Article would be inapplicable except where at the time of stating the account all the several items of the account were unaffected by limitation. See U. N. Mitra, 5th Edn. p. 953; Rustomji, 3rd Ed., p. 343. This is the gist of the rulings cited above. But the Calcutta High Court has in a Full Bench case assumed that Art. 64 applied to accounts stated, even if there were no reciprocal or cross demand—Dukhi v. Mahomed, 10 Cal. 284 (F.B.). The same opinion was expressed in a Madras case—Manjunatha v. Devamma, 26 Mad. 186. So also according to the Lahore High Court, in a case of accounts stated, it is unnecessary to decide whether there are reciprocal demands between the parties. Such a question arises under Art. 85 and not under Art. 64. If the accounts have been adjusted and the balance struck, and the statement of account has been examined and accepted by the defendant, and signed by him, the requirements of Art. 64 are complied with. The acceptance of the account amounts to an acknowledgment of liability, and according to the Privy Council ruling in Manikram v. Seth Rupchand (33 Cal. 1047) an unconditional acknowledgment always implies a promise to pay and can form the basis of a suit—Kahan Chand v. Dayaram, 10 Lah. 745, 115 I.C. 764, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 263 (264); see also Fateh Mahomed v. Ganga, 10 Lah. 748, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 264, 115 I.C. 863; Dalip Singh v. Jawahir, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 421 (422), 116 I.C. 464. In these three cases it has been said that the contrary view taken in Shankar v. Mukta, 22 Bom. 513 and Pala Mal v. Tulla Ram, 119 P.R. 1908 (where it was laid down that a striking of balance by the defendant merely amounted to an acknowledgment of liability and not a promise to pay so as to constitute the basis of a suit) must be deemed as overruled by the above Privy Council case (33 Cal. 1047). See also Chunilal v. Laxman, 46 Bom. 24 (28), A I.R. 1922 Bom. 183 where 22 Bom. 513 is held to be no longer good law.

Where money is placed in deposit with another person, who after some time submits accounts showing a credit balance in hand, the transaction is really a deposit (Art. 69) and the statement of account will not alter its nature and bring the case under the present Article—Lazarus v. Krishna Chunder, 28 Cal. 393. (Distinguished in Lachminarayan v. Murlidhar, A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 538). The parties who were partners in certain business had gone into the accounts of the partnership and as a result of the scrutiny an entry was made in the plaintiff's bahi signed by the defendant, which ran as follows:—"After the scrutiny of the accounts of this firm I have struck a debit balance against me of Rs. 4017 on account of losses and advances of every kind." The plaintiff sued the defendant for recovery of the sum on the basis of the entry. Held that the entry being an account stated between the parties, the suit was governed by Article 64 and not by Art. 106—Nand Lal v. Partab Singh, 3 Lah. 326, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 425, 69 I C. 502; Jai Ram Singh v. Sardari Mal, 29 P.L.R. 219, 108 I.C. 600, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 459 (460). In a suit by a commission agent, if it is found that the accounts were stated and balance struck, the proper Article applicable is Art. 64 and not Art. 85—Karam Chand v. Dayanand, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 51 (52), 100 I.C. 874.

Where accounts have been taken from the agent and adjusted and a specific sum has been found due from the agent to the principal, the latter becomes entitled to sue forthwith for recovery of that money. A suit to recover the money is governed by Article 64 or 115, and not by Article 89 because that Article refers to a suit in which accounts have to be taken and not a suit where an account has been rendered—Kesho Proshad v. Sarwan Mal, 25 C.L.J. 335, 40 I.C. 359.

A suit for accounts and profits of dissolved partnership is not governed by this Article but by Art. 106—Meera Pillai v. Yegnanarayana, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-Co. 177.

Starting point of limitation:—The period of limitation runs when the accounts are stated and balance struck. But if the balance becomes an item in a new account, that is, if after an account stated the balance appearing due on it to either of the parties is not paid but is afterwards thrown into a new account between the same parties, it passes out of the operation of the statute of limitation—Farrington v. Lee, (1677) 1 Mad. 270.

380A. "Accounts stated"—Meaning of—Bishun Chand v. Girdharilal, 56 All. 376 (P.C.)—Present law:—Under sec. 19 an acknowledgment gives a fresh starting point only if it is made before the expiry of the period of limitation: after the expiry of the period nothing short of a fresh contract to pay the barred debt will revive the debt. Under sec. 25, Indian Contract Act, a mere acknowledgment of the debt is not sufficient, there must be a promise to pay the barred debt. Unlike sec. 25, however, Art. 64, Limitation Act does not require that there shall be any promise to pay. And even if some of the items are statute barred, a settlement of account including these items is none the less binding. The account stated may be reopened only on any ground which would justify setting aside any other agreement.

In common parlance any adjustment and acknowledgment of the amount due in respect of debt is treated as an 'account stated'. But such a mere acknowledgment of a debt cannot be treated as a 'real account stated' within the meaning of this Article. An account stated in the true sense "which is a very usual form as between merchants in business in which the account stated may be described in the words of Lord Atkin as an account which contains entries on both sides, and in which the parties who have stated the account between them have agreed that the items on one side should be set against the items upon the other side and the balance only should be paid; the items on the smaller side are set off and deemed to be paid by the items on the larger side, and there is a promise for good consideration to pay the balance arising from the fact that the items have been set off and paid in the way described." (Per, Lord Atkin in Siqueria v. Noronha, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 144).

"In Laycock v. Pickles, (1863) 33 L.J.Q.B. 43 the plaintiff was indebted to the defendants in the sum of £111. He had claim against them for labour and materials for £67, and it was agreed that in return for the transfer of certain property he should be credited with £70. A balance was then struck, and his final liability was agreed at £22, which sum the plaintiff was held entitled to recover as upon an account stated.* Blackburn, J. observed: "There is a real account stated when several items of claim are brought into account on either side, and being set against one another, a balance is struck, and the consideration for the peyment of the balance is the discharge on either side; each party resigns his own rights on the sums he can claim in consideration of a similar abandonment on the other side, and of an agreement to pay and to receive in discharge the balance found due." "It is not necessary in order to make out a real account stated, that the debts should be debts in praesnti, or that they should be legal debts." Particular reliance has been placed by the Courts in India on the language, as quoted above, of Backburn. J. But as to the true import of this decision the Indian Courts do not agree. On the one hand, it has been held in several cases (e.g., Kanhaivalal v. Stowell, 3 All. 581; Nahanibai v. Nathu Bhan, 7 Bom. 414; Jamun v. Nandlal, 15 All. 1; Rajnarain v. Ramsarup, 52 All. 480; Suraj Prosad v. W. Boucke, 5 P.L.J. 371), that in a purely loan transaction, even though there may be payment by the debtor from time to time, in as much as there can be no adjustment of reciprocal claims or demands. the final balance struck, even though with mutual, consent, can never amount to an account stated.

On the other hand, it has been held in some cases that it is not necessary that there should be mutual demands of claims but if there are debit and credit enitres in an account, though indicating only the advances made by one side and payments made by the other, the final settlement of accounts between the parties may amount to an account stated within the meaning of Art. 64. (Observations in Dukhu Sahu v. Md. Bikhu 10 Cal. 284; Manjunatha v. Devamma, 26 Mad. 186; Sarifun v. Feradoal, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. (578).

The weight of authority is however in favour of the former view. This conflict

* It was with reference to these facts that Blackburn, J., spoke of items of claim, but he also uses the phrase "This the same as if each item was paid and a discharge given for each, and in consideration of that discharge the balance was agreed to be due." Lord Cave uses the expression "items of debit and credit" and does not emphasise any distinction between 'mere items of debit and credit' and 'items of claim.' Moreover, in a sense partial payments by a debtor to his creditor might be brought within Blackburn, J.'s words as "items of claim," because in any action for the moneys due they might be relied on by way of a counter-claim or set off.

of opinion has been set at rest by the recent decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Bishunchand v. Girdharilal, 61 I.A. 273, 38 C.W.N. 691, A.I R. 1934 P.C. 147, 56 All. 376, 59 C.L.J. 535, 67 M.L.J. 110, 1934 A.L.J. 623, 36 Bom L.R. 723, 150 I.C. 6, by its pronouncement in favour of the latter view. This decision was given in May, 1934. But prior to this in February, 1934, the same point came up for decision before their Lornships in Siqueira v. Noronha, 38 C.W N. 813, 59 C L.J. 494, 151 I.C. 90, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 144. "That was on an appeal from the Court of Appeal from East Africa varying a judgment of the Supreme Court of Kenaya. The Limitation Act. 1877, which so far as is material is the same as the Act of 1908. had been applied to Kenaya by the Order in Council and the principal question discussed in the judgment of the Board delivered by Lord Atkin on 15th Feb., 1934, was whether there was an account stated within Art 64 of the Act. The plaintiff had for many years, from 1913 until 1928, been employed by the defendant. In the books of the business there were accounts of the plaintiff's drawing from time to time; there was no account on the other side in respect of his salary, because the salary had never been fixed, In 1928 an account was drawn up and signed by the defendant's manager showing credits for salary and debits for drawings, and ending, 'by balance in your favour, 42,458-84'. The account had started with a balance of 26,000 shillings in 1921. and appears throughout to have been in the plaintiff's favour. Lord Atkin held that it was an account stated involving a promise to pay the balance shown in the account for good consideration. He distinguished and put on one side that form of account stated which constituted a mere acknowledgment of a debt. Then he thus stated what would properly be described as a real account stated:—"But, on the other hand, there is another form of account stated which is a very usual form as between merchants in business, in which the account stated is an account which contains entries on both sides, and in which the parties who have stated the account between them have agreed that the items on one side should be set against the items upon the other side and the balance only should be paid; the items on the smaller side are set off and deemed to be paid by the items on the larger side, and there is a promise for good consideration to pay the balance arising from the fact that the items have been so set off and paid in the way described."

This decision was considered in Bishunchand v. Girdharilal, 61 I.A. 273, 38 C.W.N. 961, 56 All 376, 150 I.C. 6, A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 147. There the plaintiff-appellants before their Lordships of the Privy Council, who carried on business as money-lenders for 25 years had been lending money to the defenant-respondents, the rate of interest being 10 annas per cent. per mensem. The loans were in the appellants' books with charges for interest at intervals, and so also were the payments on account made by the respondents from time to time, the ledger set out the various items of debit and credit, and the suit was brought as on an account stated evidenced by entries as below described in the appellants' ledger. At the foot of the page of the ledger on the debit side there was written by or on behalf of the appellants: "Balance due to be received after adopting the account up to Kunwar sudi 9 Sambat 1982 (i.e., 26th September 1925), Rs. 16,043-8-9." Below this entry written in the writing of one of the respondents: "Balance due to be paid after adjusting the account up to Kunwar Sudi 9. Rs. 16,043-8-6." The latter entry was signed by the respondents who were literate. The last loan granted to the respondent was Rs. 1,000 on 9th August, 1921, and the last acknowledgment of the accounts by the respondent previous to that sued upon was on 10th December 1921. Considerable payments either on account of principal or on account of interest or of both. were made between 1921 and 1925. The respondents pleaded that they merely signed in reliance on the word of the appellants and did not go into the accounts with them and that the case was barred by limitation,

The trial Court found that there was in fact a settlement of account between the parties on 26th September, 1925, so that the balance then struck became itself a debt which was to carry future interest at 10 annas per cent. per mensem, and gave judgment for the appellants, halding that there was an account stated within the meaning of Art. 64, Sch. I. This judgment was reversed in appeal by the High Court of Allahabad. The learned Judges held that in law the words "account stated" cannot properly be applied to a money lending transaction where one party lent to the other and the other merely made repayments of the money lent, so that the borrower was always the debtor of the lender: such transactions, they held, were entirely unilateral and there could be no settlement of a mutual account, so as to satisfy the words in Art. 64, "account stated between them."

The plaintiffs appealed to the Privy Council from the decision of the High Court. Their Lordships of the Privy Council elaborately examined the relevant decisions, both of the English and Indian Courts, and allowed the appeal with costs and restored the decree of the trial Court. In delivering the judgment of the Board, Lord Wright points out that there can be account stated within the meaning of Art. 64, Limitation Act, where there are no cross demands between the plaintiff and the defendant in the strictest sense of the term. He says that where the relationship between the parties is that of a creditor and debtor and a loan is advanced by the creditor to the debtor either in one lump or on different occasions and if there is payment from time to time by the debtor and after certain intervals, the credit side and the debit side are squared up and the amount found due is calculated by addition and subtraction and the final result is stated and the debtor signs it, it would come within the meaning of Art. 64, Limitation Act. The Noble Lord observes: "Indeed, the essence of an account stated is not the character of the items on one side or the other, but the fact that there are cross items of account and that the parties mutually agree to the several amounts of each and, by treating the items so agreed on the one side as discharging the items on the other side protanto, go on to agree that the balance only is payable." Then there is this passage which is very important: 'Such a transaction is in truth bilateral, and create a new debt and a new cause of action. There are mutual promises, the one side agreeing to accept the amount of the balance of the debt as true (because there must in such cases be at least, in the end, a creditor to whom the balance is due) and to pay it, the other side agreeing the entire debt as at a certain figure and then agreeing that it has been discharged to such and such an extent, so that there will be a complete satisfaction on the payment of the agreed balance. Hence there is mutual consideration to support the promise on either side and to constitute the new cause of action. The account stated is accordingly binding, save that it can be reopened on any ground—for instance, fraud or mistake—which would justify setting aside any other agreement." The Noble Lord proceeds to point out that: "This rule does not depend on the character or origin of the debts or credits on either side..... Nor can it be material.....in determining whether there can be an account stated, whether the balance of indebtedness is throughout, as it must be at the end, in favour of one side. Equally it seems irrelevant whether the debt in favour of the final creditor was created at the outset by one large payment or consisted of several sums of principal and several sums of interest; nor can it matter, in this connection, whether the only payments made on the other side were simply payments in reduction of such indebtedness or were payments made in respect of other dealing. In any event, items must in the same way be ascertained and agreed on each side before the balance can be struck and settled."

Relying on these two Privy Council decisions it has been held in Prasanna Kumari v. Tripura Charan, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 470, that where on settlement of an account in respect of a debt on a promissory note a certain amount is found due on a particular date on calculation of interest at a reduced rate, and an endorsement to that effect made on the back of the promissory note is signed by the debtor, such an endorsement amounts to an account stated between the parties and a suit for recovery of the amount alleged to be due is governed by Art. 64. So also, where the amount mentioned in a hatchita is the balance due after setting off the payments against the amounts borrowed from time to time as shown in the account books and the parties agreed to this setting off, and accepted the balance as correct, and the account books and hatchitta are parts of the same transaction and the hatchitta is signed by the defendant, a suit for the amount mentioned in the hatchitta is for money found to be due on accounts stated within the meaning of this Article—Nabendra v. Shasabindoo, A.I R. 1941 Cal. 595, 197 I.C. 321.

The same view was adopted in Sohanlal v. Arya Megh Udhar Sabha, Sialkot, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 877, 37 P.L.R. 126, 159 I.C. 447. There the defendant had leased certain land from the plaintiff and a house thereon had been sold to him. An account was kept by the plaintiff in the defendant's name in which the rent due from him was debited and the amounts received from him were credited from time to time. Balances showing the amounts due from the defendant were also struck and admitted at intervals the first balance having been struck in March, 1927, and the last in February, 1930. The suit was based on the last balance. It was held inter alia that Art. 64 governed the case, and the suit was not barred by limitation. (A.I.R. 1934 P.C. 147 followed).

On the other hand, in Shamlal & Others v. Gulabchand, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 221, 159 I.C. 47, it was held that a document containing an entry signed by a creditor that on making account on a particular day in respect of the old sarkat and after deducting repayments, a certain amount is found due including interest, and also an entry signed by the debtor admitting the amount to be due cannot be regard as "accounts stated" within the meaning of Art. 64. Before a document can be used as an account stated, it must be shown that there were items on both sides of the account—Ramprasad v. Anandi, I.L.R. (1940) Nag. 441, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 180. But in Seth Bulakhidas v. Ganpatrao,, I.L.R. (1946) Nag. 21, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 112 it has been held that an entry in an account book showing the balance due signed by the debtor, amounts to an "account stated," though the account is not of mutual claims and there are only debit and credit entries showing calculation of interest and payments made.

According to the Allahabad High Court a mere statement of the balance which is due on a particular date can not be called an account stated. In order to bring a case under this Article, there must be something in the nature of a fresh contract—Gopinath v. Chameli, I.L.R. (1938) All. 741, 1938 A.L.J. 773, A.I.R. 1938 All. 504.

Where a document contains items showing realisations yearly made as credit against payments as debit and a balance is struck showing a certain amount in debit side and below this the defendant makes an endorsement "I admit and accept as correct," it is not a case of 'account stated' as there is neither agreement nor adjustment but merely a statement of account with an acknowledgment by the defendant; nor a fresh promise to pay is made by the endorsement—Satish v. Rampad, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 861, 182 I.C. 368.

N.B.—In view of the Privy Council decision in 56 All. 376 the decisions of the Indian High Courts in A.I R. 1930 All. 467, 7 Bom. 414, 15 All. 1, A.I.R. 1920 Pat. 161, 3 All. 581, 23 All. 502, in so far as they hold that the words "account stated" cannot be applied to a money lending transaction where one party lent to the other and the other merely made repayments of the money lent, so that the borrower was always the debtor to the lenders, are no longer good law.

It should be noted that where an account has been stated it is immaterial that some items were statute barred, but if the whole account is time-barred, then the ban imposed by sec. 25 (3) of the Contract Act would apply—Ganesh v. Rambar, I.L.R. (1942) Nag. 369, 1942 N.L.J. 248, A.I.R. 1942 Nag. 92.

381. "Signed":—This Article does not apply unless the account stated is in writing and signed by the defendant—Dukhi v. Mahomed, 10 Cal. 284 (F.B.) (overruling Shaikh Akbar v. Shaikh Khan, 7 Cal. 256); Murugappa v. Vyapuri, 32 M.L.J. 536, 38 I.C. 227; Thakurya v. Sheo Singh, 2 All. 872; Zulfikar Hussein v. Munna Lal, 3 All. 148 (F.B.). An account stated which is signed by one of several partners is binding on all—Manjunatha v. Devamma, 26 Mad. 186. See sec. 20, Partnership Act. If the account is not signed as required by this Article, the plaintiff can only succeed in respect of such items as are within the ordinary period of limitation—Thakurya v. Sheo Singh, 2 All. 872. Where the actual page of the account with the name of the defendant at the heading and the account is totalled up and the balance struck in pencil is also in the hand-writing of the defendant, it is not a statement of account signed by the defendant sufficient for this Article—Kanthasami v. Pethusami, (1940) 2 M.L.J. 334, 1940 M.W.N. 882, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 887. Where there is no allegation in the plaint of any writing signed by defendant this Article does not apply—Shambhoo v. Firm Dindayal, I.L.R. (1950) Nag. 464, 1950 N.L.J. 150, A.I.R. 1950 Nag. 228. But where a person goes through the account and signs an acknowledgment of his liability for a particular sum in the creditor's account book and affixes an anna stamp to that entry, the account is account stated within the meaning of this Article—Ramcharan v Nanhey, 14 Luck. 478, 1939 O.W.N. 176, A.I.R. 1939 Oudh 120. As between principal and agent an account, to be a settled account, need not be signed provided that it is submitted to the party sought to be made liable on it, and he has by words or by conduct, acquiesced in it—Sadik v. Bibhuti, 21 Pat. L.T. 41, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 71.

65. For compensation for breach of a promise to do anything at a specified time, or upon the happening of a specified contingency.	Three years.	When the time specified arrives or the contingency happens.

382. Cases:—A verbally became surety upon a bond executed by B for repayment in May 1872, to the plaintiff, of certain advances, promising, "if B does not pay eventually (shesh porjunto) I will." Default was made, and in April 1878 the plaintiff filed a suit against both B and A, which was clearly barred against B. It was held that the words "shesh porjunto" could not be taken as limited to the time specified in the bond, and that the lower Court, in order to determine whether the suit was barred against A, must find upon the evidence when a demand was made upon him for payment, and then apply this Article—Bishumber v Hungsheshur, 4 C.L.R. 34. In case of a promissory note payable on demand, the cause of action against the surety arises on the same date on which it arises against the principal debtor, viz., the date of the pro-note. The surety is not entitled to any further notice—Brojendra Kishore v. Hindusthan Co-operative Insurance Society, 44 Cal. 978, 21 C.W.N. 482; Raja Sreenath v. Raja Peary Mohan, 21 C.W.N. 479, 39 I C. 205. Where a deed of further charge provided that without payment of money due under it the mortgagor will not be entitled to redeem the property mortgaged, and the mortgagor paid off the mortgage amount without paying the further charge, held that a suit for recovery of the further charge fell under Art. 65, and time ran from the date of redemption of the principal mortgage—Brahmajit v. Dwaraka, 3 O.W.N. 976, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 53. Where a bond executed by the defendants contained a covenant that money would be paid either on a certain date, or in the event of default, on the date when a certain mortgage (executed by the defendants in favour of the plaintiff) would be redeemed, it was held that the cause of action for a suit to recover money due under the bond arose when the mortgage was redeemed without satisfying the bond—Mahabir v. Durbijai, 8 A.L.J. 233, 9 I.C. 482. Where there was an agreement by the vendor to refund purchase-money in case of land providing deficient, and the land actually proved deficient, a suit for refund of the purchase-money was a suit governed by this Article; if the sale-deed was registered, by Art. 116—Kishen v. Kinlock, 3 All. 712. The defendants sold by registered sale deed their shares in certain land to the plaintiff and had agreed that if the land sold should not fall to their share in the partition proceedings which were then pending, they would pay compensation. The vendors were allotted at partition a less area than the area sold to the plaintiff, and compensation was claimed accordingly. Held that the suit fell under this Article read with Article 116, and time ran from the date of the order of the Revenue Officer passed in the partition proceedings—Rukhan Din v. Hassan Din, 72 I.C. 897, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 24 A suit by the mortgagor against the mortgagee to recover the balance of the consideration payable by the latter to the former together with damages for non-payment of the amount in time is a suit governed by Article 65 read with Article 116 (the mortgage being registered)—Naubat v. Indar, 13 All. 200, (204). When grain is advanced to the defendant on a contract that it should be repaid in kind, a suit against the defendant for compensation for not having fulfilled the promise falls under Article 65 or 115, but not under Art. 52 or 120. Article 52 refers only to those cases in which the contract is to pay for the price of the goods in money and not in kind—Md. Din v. Sohan Singh, 4 Lah.L.J. 268. 65 I C. 691, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 271; Mengha Ram v. Hassu, 41 P.R. 1918, 49 I.C. 231; Labh Singh v. Rur Chand, 4 Lah.L.J. 64, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 122. Where the promisor before the arrival of the specified time intimates his intention of not performing his promise, still limitation will not commence to run until the specified time arrives—Mansuk Das v. Rangayya, 1 M.H.C.R. 162.

66. On a single bond, where a day is specified for payment.	Three years.	The day so specified.

383. Single bond:—"A bond merely for the payment of a certain sum of money without any condition in or annexed to it is called a simple or single bond. The term 'single bond' is sometimes used to signify a bond given by one obligor as distinguished from one given by two or more"—Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. III, p. 80. In Nihal Chand v. Khuda Baksh, 76 I C. 150, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 534, a bond executed by two persons (viz., principal debtor and surety) was held to be a single bond under this Article. The expression 'single bond' means a bill or written engagement for the payment of money, without an alternative condition or a penalty attached—Lachman v. Kesri, 4 All. 3; Gurditta Mal v. Singh, 26 P.R. 1892; Horilal v. Thamman, 26 O.C. 121, 70 I.C. 85, A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 19. A bond providing for repayment of principal and interest after a specified period with option to sue on failure to pay interest is a single bond, notwithstanding the default clause—Raghunandan v. Sheoroji, 16 Luck. 464, 1941 O.W.N. 361, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 210. Where a bond stipulates that on payment of certain amount by a specified date, the balance will be remitted by the creditor and on failure of payment the debtor will be liable to pay the entire amount with compound interest, it is not a single bond—Yeshwant v. Laxman, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 399, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 13, 173 I.C. 463.

Where in a debt-bond the debtor stipulated that if the principal and interest be not paid up at the specified period, the creditor would be at liberty to recover the amount by instituting a suit, "from my moveable and immoveable property, my own milk," it was held that the language was too vague to warrant the inference of the creation of a mortgage, and that the instrument was no more than a simple bond to which Art. 66 applied; if such instrument was registered, Art. 116 would apply—Collector of Etawah v. Beti Maharani, 14 All. 162 (164). The liability of the surety being co-extensive with the liability of the principal, a suit on a bond executed by the principal debtor and surety, against both of them, falls under this Article, and limitation runs as regards both from the date fixed for payment—Nihal Chand v. Khuda Baksh, supra.

It has been observed by the Privy Council that where a mortgagee sues on a personnal convenant contained in the mortgage making the mortgagor responsible for any deficiency in the realisation of the mortgage-debt out of the mortgaged properties, the claim is governed by the three years' rule of Art. 66, and not by the 12 years' rule under Article 132—Ganesh Lal v. Khetramohan, 5 Pat. 585 (P.C.), 31 C.W.N. 25 (31), A.I.R. 1926 P.C. 56, 95 I.C. 839. But it has been pointed out by the Madras High Court (as well as by other High Courts) that it is not clear whether the mortgage in this Privy Council case was properly and validly registered, and it was not necessary for their Lordships to decide whether the three years' rule (Art. 66) or six years' rule (Art. 116) applied, as the suit was barred in either case, having been brought 10 years after the date of the mortgage. If the mortgage is validly registered the suit on personal covenant would be governed by the six years' rule of Art. 116—Chengalamma v. Veeraraghava, 55 M.L.J. 506, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 1124 (1126), 114 I.C. 340; Ratnasabapathi v. Daivasigamoni, 52 Mad. 105 (F.B.); Umapada v. Haripada, 35 C.W.N. 1030 (1031), 53 C.L.J. 520. See Note 483 under Art. 116, where a large number of cases on this subject has been cited.

384. Specified date:—Where the bond stipulated for payment within two years or on certain contingencies the case was not one under this Article as no particular day was specified for payment—Gauri v. Surju, 3 All. 276. But in Narain v. Gouri Persad, 5 Cal 21, where a bond provided that the principal should become due within a certain specified time, e.g., within 6 months from the date of execution, it was held to be regarded as the "day specified" under this Article, and a suit brought within 3 years from that day was not barred. The same view has been taken in Gaya Prosad v Sher Ali, 15 A.L.J. 313, 39 I.C. 574; Sham Lal v. Tehariya, 18 A.L.J. 476, 58 I.C. 278; Ramia v. Sankaranarayana, A.I.R. 1958 Kar. 246. But where the creditor can demand the whole of the money due under a bond whenever default is made in payment of the interest for any two years consecutively, it is impossible to predicate of the bond that there is any certain day 'specified' for payment within this Article. The bond falls under Art. 80—Hori Lal v. Thamman Lal, 9 O.L.J. 416, A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 19.

It is settled law that where a deposit is for a fixed period, the money is payable at the specified time, namely at the expiry of that fixed period, and the Article applicable is not Art 60 but either Art. 66 or Art. 115—I. S. Seema v. R. Banerjee, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 338, 164 I.C. 412. Where in a simple bond it is provided, that, if the monthly interest is not paid or if the principal money lent is not paid at the end of a specified period, the creditor may sue, even though there is a breach of the condition for payment of the interest still that is a matter over which the creditor has a right of waiver and limitation will only begin to run from the period stipulated in the bond for payment. In such a case if no default in payment of interest is made then Art. 66 applies for limitation. If on the other hand, default is made in payment of interest then Art. 68 applies. Thus, limitation runs either from the date specified for payment of the bond or from the date when the condition as regards payment of interest is broken. The two Arts. 66 and 68 read together are tantamount to Art. 132 and the expression "when the money sued for becomes due" would apply to either Art. 66 or Art. 68—L. Naraindas v. Mannoolal, A.I.R. 1935 All. 405, 1935 A.L.J. 341, 157 I.C. 409; Raghunandan v. Sheoraji, 16 Luck. 464, 1941 O.W.N. 361, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 210.

(The reasoning in the Privy Council case of Lassa Din v. Gulab Kunwar, A.I.R. 1938 (P.C.) 207; 7 Luck. 442 applied).

The same view was adopted in Umrao v. Mangla, A.I.R. 1935 All. 443, 1935 A.L.J. 381. 154 I.C. 521.

Art. 66 provides for the case of a single bond where a day is specified for payment . It has no application to a case where the bond provides payment of interest month by month, and entitles the creditor to recover his money in case of default of payment of interest for every month—Shiva Narain v. Badal, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 279, 162 I.C. 459.

Applicability:—To attract the application of the article all that is necessary to show is that the suit is based on a single bond where a date is specified for payment. Whoever may be the person against whom the bond is sought to be enforced, Art 66 would apply if the suit is based on a single bond which specified a date for payment—Deosaran v. Loknath, A.I.R. 1937 All. 559.

67. On a single bond, where no such day is specified.	Three years.	The date of executing the bond.

385. Where a deed provided that if the obligee desired to recover his money, he should be at liberty to realise it whenever he wished, it was held that for the purpose of limitation, money became due immediately upon the execution of the bond —Gajraj v. Raghubar, 18 O.C 86, 27 I.C. 540. If a house is mortgaged, while under attachment, the mortgage is void altogether, under sec. 64, C.P. Code, and a suit to enforce the personal security is governed by Article 67. Article 97 does not apply to the case as the consideration failed ab initio—Ghulam Murtaza v. Fazal Hahi, 27 P.L.R. 801, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 101 (102).

68. On a bond subject to a condition.	Three years.	When the condition is broken.

386. This Article applies to bonds of the nature of security bonds—Raghunandan v. Sheoraji, 16 Luck. 464, 1941 O.W.N. 361, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 210. An administration bond executed under sec. 78 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881 (sec. 291 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925) is a bond 'subject to a condition' and a suit against the administrator and his sureties on such a bond is governed by this Article—Maung San v. Maung Kyaw, 1 Rang. 463, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 68 (69), 76 I.C. 802; Ramanathan v. Rangammal, 17 M.L.T. 61, 27 I.C. 849; Ahmed v. Fatima, 8 Bur.L.T. 69, 29 I.C. 505. But in Kanti Chandra v. Ali Nabi, 33 All 414 (420), 8 A.L.J. 199, 9 I.C. 935, and Ko Pu v. Ma Thein, 12 Bur.L.T. 225, 56 I.C. 968, the Judges are of opinion that a suit on an administration bond is governed by Article 120—Manubhai Chunilal v. G. A. F. Corp. Ltd., A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 363. A suit by an assignee of an administration bond under the provisions of sec. 292, Succession Act for its enforcement is a suit upon a bond subject to a condition to which this Article applies—General Acci- dent Fire and Life Assurance Corporation Ltd. v. Janmahomed, 67 I.A. 416, I.L.R. (1941) Bom. 202, 72 C.L.J. 497, 45 C.W.N. 429, 43 P.L.R. 138, (1941) 1 M.L.J. 88, 1941 P.W.N. 271, A.I.R. 1941 P.C. 6.

A bond executed by a guardian under sec. 34, Guardians and Wards Act, is a bond 'subject to a condition' under this Article, the condition of the bond being that the guardian shall render accounts and shall pay the balance found due by him from time to time—Krishna Chettiar v. Venkatachalapathi, 42 Mad. 302 (309). A suit to recover penalty imposed under section 165 of the Madras Local Boards Act (V of 1884) is governed by this Article—Kundapur Taluq Board v. Lakshmi Narayana, 17 M.L.J. 537.

Where a bond stipulates that on payment of certain amount by a date mentioned therein the creditor will remit the balance and in case of failure to pay the amount within the specified date the debtor will be liable to pay the entire amount with compound interest, the bond is one subject to a condition—Yeshwant v. Laxman, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 399, A.I.R. 1939 Nag. 13, 173 I.C. 463.

387. Starting point of limitation:—When the administrator dies, the condition must be deemed to have been broken at the latest on that date and time would begin to run from that date. Section 292 of the Succession Act has not the effect of conferring a new cause of action on the assignee and hence cannot provide a fresh starting point for the purposes of limitation—General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corporation Ltd. v. Janmahomed, supra. So also, where a surety dies, the condition of the bond executed by him is broken at the latest on his death, and the cause of action against his heirs therefore arises on the date of death under this Article—Mani Devi v. Anpurna, 22 Pat. 114, A.I.R. 1943 Pat. 218, 206 I.C. 126.

Where a debtor makes a part payment of the amount due on bond and makes an endorsement that the balance would be paid by a certain date, limitation will run on the expiry of the period mentioned in the endorsement—Harbans v. Sobha, 41 P.L.R. 352, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 236.

Limitation for a suit against an administrator and his surety runs not from the time when the alleged misappropriation took place, but from the date when the Court confirmed the Commissioner's accounts and the shortage was ascertained—Hamadanee v. Ma Shwe, 4 Rang. 358, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 28 (29), 98 I.C. 459. Limitation does not necessarily run from the date of the first breach of a condition of the bond. Where the bond contains several conditions, and a suit is brought for breach of one of the conditions, it must be filed within three years of that breach. The breach of each condition gives rise to a separate cause of action, and time begins to run from the date of the particular breach giving rise to the suit—Maung San v. Maung Kyaw, 1 Rang. 463, 76 I.C. 802, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 68 (at p. 69). Ordinarily, the administrator's work may be said to be completed when he files his final accounts, showing how he has dealt with the estate, and these accounts have been accepted by the Court; limitation will then begin to run. But it very often happens that there is litigation pending against the administrator, and in such a case the administrator (and consequently his sureties) cannot be absolved until the close of the litigation. If a decree is passed against him in that litigation, he is bound as administrator to pay money or deliver property as the case may be, and failure in this respect is a breach of the bond. Limitation runs from the date of this breach—Ibid (at p. 70). In cases where the administration bond contains successive covenants, each breach gives a separate cause of action; but the date of the last breach is the starting point of limitation in a suit on the bond when the bond is conditioned on the performance of several acts, and the obligation to pay is enforceable till the last of the conditions has been fulfilled—Ramanthan v. Rangammal, supra.

69. On a bill of exchange or promissory note payable at a fixed time after date.	Three years.	When the bill or note falls due.
70. On a bill of exchange payable at sight, or after sight, but not at a fixed time.	Three years.	When the bill is presented.
71. On a bill of exchange accepted payable at a particular place.	Three years.	When the bill is presented at that place.
72. On a bill of exchange or promissory note payable at a fixed time after sight or after demand.	Three years.	When the fixed time expires.
73. On a bill of exchange or promissory note payable on demand and not accompanied by any writing restraining or postponing the right to sue.	Three years.	The date of the bill or note.

388. The words "on demand" have been used in this Article in the sense in which they have been interpreted in English Common Law, i.e., at once and without demand—Secretary of State v. Radhika Prasad Bapuli, 46 Mad. 259 (288, 289). The words "on demand" do not constitute a condition precedent, but merely import that the debt is due and payable immediately, and it is for this reason that the period of limitation runs from the date of the instrument and not from the date of demand—Meghraj v. Johnsan, 11 N.L.R. 189, 31 I.C. 880 (882). A promissory note payable 'at sight' is a promissory note payable 'on demand' and is governed by this Article —Durga Prasad v. Kalicharan, 40 C.L.J. 84, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 1065, 84 I.C. 475. A promissory note payable at any time within six years on demand is not governed by this Article but by Art. 120—Sanjivi v. Kama Erappa, 6 Mad. 290. But, it is submitted, the case would fall under Art. 80, which is the residuary Article in respect of promissory notes.

The liability of an endroser of a promissory note arises only on the date of the endorsement; and a suit within three years of the endorsement, though beyond three years of the execution of the promissory note, is not barred by limitation—Moossan v. Kattyali, (1939) 2 M.L.J. 760, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 85, 50 L.W. 49.

389. Postponing right to sue:—Where a promissory note was accompanied with a letter in which the debtor stated that he would pay the principal and interest within one year, held that the letter amounted to a writing postponing the right to sue within one year, and the limitation would not run till at the expiration of the period mentioned in the writing, and the suit was governed by Art. 80, and not by this Article—Jwala Prasad v. Shama Charan, 42 All. 55. Where on the very date of execution of a promissory note payable on demand the defendant executes an agreement which recites that if he does not discharge the debt relating to the promissory note before discharging the debt due under a usufructuary mortgage executed in favour of the plaintiff previously, the defendant shall pay the entire amount due under the promissory note along with the debt due under the mortgage and then take delivery of possession of the mortgaged lands, the agreement has the effect of extending the time for payment of the promissory note and the plaintiff can file the suit under Article 80 within three years after the date of the discharge of the mortgage—Subbamma v. Venkanna, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 161, 1950 M.W.N. 118, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 749. Where the defendant executed a promissory note to the plaintiff payable on demand, and on the same date gave a writing to the effect that "ten months' thavanai (time for payment) from the date of the pro-note has been fixed for this note," it was held that the pro-note was accompanied with a writing postponing the period of payment; consequently Article 73 did not apply but Article 80, and time began to run from the expiry of the period mentioned in the writing—Annamalai v. Velayuda, 39 Mad. 129 (F.B.) overruling Simon v. Hakim Mahomed, 19 Mad. 368 and Somasundaram v. Narasimha, 29 Mad. 212. A promissory note payable after six months whenever the plaintiff shall demand the same, is a promissory note payable on demand with the right to sue restrained for six months, and limitation consequently begins to run on the expiry of the six months from its date—Jeaunnissa v. Manekji, 7 B.H.C.R. 26.

74. On a promissory note or bond payable by instalments.	Three years.	The expiration of the first term of payment as to the part then payable; and for the other parts, the expiration of the respective terms of payment.

389A. Where a bond stipulates that the principal amount thereunder would be paid back within a fixed period (e.g., 18 years) and the entire principal amount is divided into instalments payable annually and provision is also made for payment of interest, the bond is one payable by instalments, and as the bond contains no stipulation that if default be made in payment of one instalment, the whole sum shall be due, the case is governed by Art. 74, and not by Art. 75; the cause of action in respect of each instalment in default would arise on the date of the default. Consequently the plaintiff can recover only those instalments which fell due within three years before suit—Gaura v. Ram Charan, 4 Luck. 480, 4 O.W.N. 207, 100 I.C. 655, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 539; Sohanlal v. Lakshmichand, 42 C.W.N. 545.

There is a well-defined distinction between this Article and Article 75. This Article applies to an instalment bond which does not contain any default clause, and in such a case, therefore, the plaintiff is entitled by the very terms of the bond to sue only for such instalments as remain unpaid. No question of waiver of default can arise in such a case. But where the document provides that in the case of default the obligee has the right to sue for the whole of the sum then remaining due, Article 75 applies—Gokhul v. Sheo Prasad, 18 Pat. 459, 20 Pat. L.T. 443, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 433 (F.B.); Gaya Prasad v. Ahmad, 1941 O.W.N. 861, 194 I.C. 744, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 485.

75. On a promissory note or bond payable by instalments, which provides that, if default be made in payment of one or more instalments, the whole shall be due.	Three years.	When the default is made, unless where the payee or obligee waives the benefit of the provision, and then when fresh default is made in respect of which there is no such waiver.

390. Scope:—This article is applicable only to suit on bonds and promissory notes payable by instalments, and not to applications for execution of a decree payable by instalments—Ugra Nath v. Lagonmani, 4 All. 83. Those applications are governed by Art. 182 (7).

This Article does not apply to a suit brought on a verbal contract—Koylash Chunder v. Baykoonta, 3 Cal. 619.

391. Bond payable by instalments:—A covenant for payment of interest by instalments does not bring a bond under this Article. Thus, where by a bond the principal lent, was payable within a fixed time, but the interest was made payable half-yearly, held that this was not a bond payable by instalments—Ball v. Stowell, 2 All. 322; Shib Dayal v. Meherban, 45 All. 27 (41), A.I.R. 1923 All. 1, 69 I.C. 981; Narain v. Gouri Persad, 5 Cal. 21. Even if the bond provides that on default of payment of any instalment of interest the whole amount of principal would be payable at once, the case would not fall under this Article but under Article 66. Thus, where money lent on a bond was made payable on a certain date viz., 28th May, 1874, subject to the payment of interest every month and it was provided that if any monthly payment of interest should remain unpaid it should be lawful for the creditor immediately to call in and demand payment of the principal and interest, it was held that the cause of action accrued on the due date of the bond, i.e., 28th May, 1874, and not on the date when the first unpaid instalment of interest became due—Narain v. Gouri Pershad, 5 Cal. 21. But where a bond provided that the obligee should be put in possession of land, and out of the produce thereof pay himself certain sums annually, and the balance to the obligor, and that if the obligee's receipts of produce should in any way be interfered with, the obligor should pay certain sums annually, it was held that this was a bond payable by instalments—Ramchandra v. Gokalgiri, 1877 P.J. 309.

392. Option to sue for the whole amount—Election or waiver of option:—Where the bond provides that on default of payment of one instalment the entire amount shall become due, the creditor is at liberty either to sue for the whole amount as soon as a default is made, or to waive the provision and bring a suit for recovery of each instalment as it falls due (i.e., for recovery of those subsequent instalments as are not barred at the date of the suit). This is borne out by the third column of this Article. If the creditor elects to sue for the whole amount, the period of limitation runs from the date of the first default; but if he chooses to sue for the instalments that are not barred at the date of the suit, the period is to be counted from the date on which each of those instalments falls due—Ajudhia v. Kunjal, 30 All. 123 (124); Amolak v. Baijnath, 35 All. 455 (458); Mohan Lal v. Tika Ram, 41 All. 104 (107), 47 I.C. 926, 16 A.L.J. 929; Rajaram v. Narain, 22 N.L.R. 126, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 28. But if the creditor sues to recover the whole amount, and the claim is found to be barred by reason of the suit not having been brought within three years of the date of the default, the plaintiff cannot be allowed to fall back upon the claim to recover the instalments that fell due within three years before suit—Sarat Lakshi v. Narendra, 33 C.W.N. 250 (252), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 292; Gaya Prosad v. Ahmad, 1941 O.W.N. 861, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 485; Shahaji v. Tukaram, I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 955, 1945 N.L.J. 473, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 117.

In a recent case it has been decided that if the creditor chooses to wait for the full period of the bond, (instead of suing when the first default is made) time runs from the expiry of the term of the bond. Thus, where a bond provided that the debt was to be paid in four years, and interest was to be paid on the amount every six months, and the bond further provided that in case of default in payment of interest on any six-monthly period or the amount of principal in any year, the creditor had power to realise the entire amount in any way he liked, and default was made in the payment of interest from the very outset, it was held that the creditor could sue for the amount due before the expiry of the stipulated period, when the default was made, or he could waive the option and wait for the full period of 4 years before putting the bond in suit—Lalta Prasad v. Gajadhar, 55 All. 283, A.I.R. 1933 All. 235 (241), following the principle of Lasa Din v. Gulab, 7 Luck. 442 (P.C.)

The advantage of waiver described in Art. 75 can be taken by the creditor against the principal debtor only and not against a person standing surety for payment of the debt.—Gopi Chand v. Md. Umar Khan, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 179. Where a creditor waives his right to take advantage of the forfeiture clause with regard to first three instalments and brings his suit for recovery of the whole of the balance within three years from the date when the fourth instalment falls due his suit is within time—Gopi Chand v. Md. Umar Khan, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 179.

In an instalment bond it was recited that the amount borrowed by the debtor would be repaid by him in monthly instalments, and that if the debtor executant did not pay three instalments the creditor would be able to realise the amount of three instalments and interest thereon or to realise the entire balance by means of a suit. It was held that under the terms of this bond the creditor was competent to sue at any time for all those instalments which had become payable within three years of the institution of the suit—Fazu Ilahi v. Guddar Shah, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 1.

The rule of law prevailing in England is contained in Hemp v. Garland, (1843) 4 Q.B. 419; 62 R.R. 423 (426). In this case the terms of the instrument expressly provided that the creditor should be at liberty to enter up judgment for so much of the debt as should be unpaid at the time of the first default as if all the periods of payment had expired; and Lord Denman C. J. observed:—"If the plaintiff chose to wait until all the instalments became due, no doubt he might do so; but that which was optional on the part of the plaintiff would not affect the right of the defendant who might well consider the action as accruing from the time that the plaintiff had the right to maintain it." This case was followed by the English Court of Appeal in Reeves v. Butcher, (1891) 2 Q.B. 509. In this case money was lent for a fixed period of five years subject to the payment of interest quarterly but it was provided that if any quarterly payment of interest should remain unpaid for 21 days after the same would become payable, it should be lawful for the plaintiff immedately upon the expiry of such 21 days to call in and demand payment of the principal and interest then due. It was held that the cause of action arose on the first default in payment of interest, and that time began to run from the earliest time at which plaintiff could have brought his acton. See Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. XIX, p. 44.

In some Allahabad cases it has been said that the question whether the creditor has the right to waive the penalty clause upon default and to sue for those subsequent instalments which are not barred at the date of suit, has to be decided upon a construction of the terms of the bond. Thus, where a bond payable by instalments contained a provision that upon default of payment of any one instalment it would be in the power of the creditor to sue for the whole amount due under the bond without waiting for the period provided for the payment of other instalments, it was held that this provision did not mean that the creditor would be bound to sue for the whole on default of payment of one instalment; the creditor was at liberty to waive the provision and to sue for those instalments which fell due within three years of the suit—Ajudhia v. Kunjal, 30 All. 123 (125); Mohan Lal v. Tika Ram, 41 All. 104 (106), 16 A.L.J. 929, 47 I.C. 926. On the other hand, a bond might be so worded as to compel a creditor to sue for the whole amount immediately if any default occurred. Thus, under an instalment bond the creditor was to recover from the debtor a sum of Rs. 11 every year for eight years, and there was a stipulation in the bond by which the obligor agreed that in case of any default in the payment of any instalment, he would pay the entire amount due on the bond irrespective of the instalments. None of the instalments were paid. The plaintiff stated in his plaint that his claim in respect of two instalments was barred by time, and that he did not want to sue for the entire sum due, and thus leaving out those two instalments, he sued for three instalments which fell due within three years before the institution of the suit. Held that the terms of the bond did not give him an option to waive the penalty clause, but compelled him to sue for the whole amount upon default and that limitation ran from the date of the first default and that the suit was barred—Kanhai v. Amrit, 47 All. 552, 23 A.L.J. 424, 87 I.C. 162, A.I.R. 1925 All. 499 (500). A bond provided for payment of the sum in two instalments. The terms of the bond were that on the expiry of the term for payment of half the sum (first instalment) the creditor had a right to recover it (i.e., the amount of the first instalment) or to recover the entire amount after the expiry of the last term. Held that the bond nowhere said that in case of default of payment of the first instalment the plaintiff was entitled to recover the entire amount. The right to recover the whole amount did not accrue till after the expiry of the date fixed for the second instalment. And if he brings his suit within three years of the time fixed for the second payment, it is within time—Shiam Lal v. Jotia, 23 A.L.J. 896, 89 I.C. 383, A.I.R. 1926 All. 142. The Patna High Court has taken the same view. Thus where an instalment bond with a default clause provides that on default of payment of any instalment the agreement for payment by instalment shall be cancelled or invalidated, then on the happening of a default the whole unpaid balance becomes payable, and unless the obligor sues within three years of such default, his remedy gets barred, and he has no longer any option to waive the default and treat each subsequent default as providing a cause of action—Nalinaksha v. Suleman, 30 Pat. L. T. 11, A.I.R. 1949 Pat. 447. The Madras High Court has held in Ayyathurai v. Ibramsa, (1949) 1 M.L.J. 112, 1949 M.W.N. 325, A.I.R. 1949 Mad. 592 that reading Article 74 and this Article together, this Artcle is no bar to a suit on the instalment bond itself either after or before the expiry of the instalment period for the recovery of the instalments which the debtor has contracted to pay and which have not themselves time-barred under Article 74. The two remedies are co-existent and open to the creditor and he has his choice either to wait and sue for the instalments in default under Article 74 or to enforce, the default clause in a suit contemplated by Article 75. A suit falling under this Article may be dismissed on the debtor proving waiver by the creditor of the default which entitles the creditor to file such a suit, in which case the creditor can still fall back on his right to sue for the instalments within the time limit prescrbed by Article 74. He has also the other alternative of suing to enforce the default clause for a subsequent default which he had not waived within the period prescribed by this Article. The same view has been taken in Har Kaur v Court of Wards, A.I.R. 1952 Pepsu. 18. But the Calcutta High Court recognises no such distinction, and lays down that if a bond provides that in case of default of payment of an instalment the creditor will be at liberty to realise the whole sum and that the debtor shall pay interest on the sum defaulted, such stipulation has the same effect as a stipulation that upon default the whole sum shall become due. The condition as to payment of interest should not be interpreted to mean that the creditor had the option either to claim at once or to wait on the chance of payment with interest. Even though the debtor pays any interest on the sum defaulted, the limitation runs from the date of the default—Basanta v. Nabin, 53 Cal. 277, 96 I.C. 594, A.I R. 1926 Cal. 789 (790); Jadab v. Bhairab, 31 Cal. 297 (299). There is no distinction between a bond in which it is provided that on non-payment of an instalment the whole amount shall become due, and a bond in which it is provided that on non-payment of an instalment the whole amount may be sued for. In both cases, limitation runs as soon as a default is made in the payment of an instalment—Jadab Chandra v. Bhairab, 31 Cal. 297 (300).

Bar of Or. II r. 2, C. P. Code:—In an instalment bond where on a default it is provided that the creditor has the right to claim the whole amount, there is an option either to bring a suit on the whole amount relying on the default clause or to waive the default clause and claim each instalment as it falls due. Where it is clear from the plaint in such a suit that the suit is not based on the default clause but on the agreement to pay each instalment on the due date, no question of any bar of Or. II r. 2 C. P. Code, arises—Badri v. Bhartu, I.L.R. (1945) All. 105, 1945 A.L.J. 107, A.I.R. 1945 All. 119.

393. Waiver:—The word 'waiver' is not defined in this Act. But in Wharton's Law Lexicon it is defined as follows: "The passing by an occasion to enforce a legal right whereby the right to enforce the same is lost..... mere lying by is not waiver for this purpose; there must be some positive act, which act if done is a waiver in law." Waiver may be express or implied; thus, where one party consents, at the request of the other, to extend the time for performance or to accept performance in a different mode from that contracted for, there is a waiver—Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 7, p. 423. Waiver may be affected in a variety of ways and may be inferred from various circumstances. It must however always depend on some definite act or forbearance on the part of the plaintiff—Sarat Lakshi v. Narendra, 33 C.W.N. 250 (252), A.I.R. (1929) Cal 292; Abinash v. Bama, 13 C.W N. 1010 (1013), 4 I.C. 17; Gokhul v. Sheo Prasad, 18 Pat. 459, 20 Pat. L.T. 443. A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 433 (F.B.); Raghunath v. Warlu, I.L R. (1947) Nag. 947, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 225 (overt act on the part of the creditor communicated to the debtor). Where the waiver is not express, it might be implied from conduct which is inconsistent with the continuance of the right—Kanhai v. Amrit, 47 All. 552, 23 A.L.J. 424, A.I.R. 1925 All. 499, 87 I.C. 162. Delay is not waiver; inaction is not waiver though it may be evidence of waiver. Waiver is a consent to dispense with something to which a person is entitled—Selwyn v. Grafit, 38 Ch.D. 284.

Mere abstinence from bringing a suit as soon as a default is made is not sufficient to prove waiver of the condition that upon default of payment of an instalment the whole debt shall become due. The question of waiver does not depend upon the sweet will of the plaintiff—Kanhai v. Amirt, 47 All. 552, 87 I.C. 162, A.I.R. 1925 All. 499; Abinash v. Bama, 13 C.W.N. 1010 (1012); Girindra v. Khir Narayan, 36 Cal. 394; Jadab Chandra v. Bhairab Chandra, 31 Cal. 297 (299); Sarat Lakshi v. Narendra, 33 C.W.N. 250 (257); Sethu v. Narayana, 7 Mad. 577; Seshan v. Veera Raghwan, 32 Mad. 284; Gopala v. Paramma, 7 Mad. 583; Babu Ram v. Jodha Singh, 11 A L.J. 89, 18 I.C. 690; Amolak v. Baij Nath, 35 All. 455 (458); Khairuddin v. Atu Mal, 188

P.R. 1883 (F.B.); Nobadip v. Ram Krishna, 14 Cal. 397; Kanku v. Rustomji, 20 Bom. 109 (113); Kimatrai v. Sher Mahamed, 8 S.L.R. 63, 26 I.C. 938; Gopal v. Dhondya, 8 N.L.R. 44, 14 I.C. 685; Sewakram v. Basod, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 70 (72); Vishwanath v. Sadashiv, 28 N.L.R. 44 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 1 (2) (overruling Rajaram v. Narayan, 22 N.L.R. 126); Gokhul v. Sheo Prosad, 18 Pat. 459, 20 Pat.L.T. 443, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 433 (F.B.); Ram Kumar v. Baquidi, 22 Luck. 33, A.I.R. 1947 Oudh 128, Mangli v. Gayaprasad, 22 Luck. 299, 1947 O.W.N. 162 A.I.R. 1947 Oudh. 235, Raghunath v. Warlu, supra. There must be either an agreement between the parties, or such conduct as will itself afford clear evidence of a legal waiver—Kankuchand v. Rustomji, 20 Bom. 109. But in the following cases it has been held that abstinence from suing as soon as the default was made amounted to a waiver of the provision—Ajudhia v Kunjal, 30 All. 123 (125); Mohan Lal v. Tika Ram, 41 All. 104 (106), 47 I.C. 926.

The mere demand of an instalment does not amount to a waiver of the right to demand the whole sum—Kanku v. Rustomji, 20 Bom. 109 (115). The acceptance of interest after default, in a case in which the bond provides that upon default the creditor shall be at liberty to recover the whole amount and the debtor shall pay interest on the sum defaulted, does not amount to waiver—Basanta v. Nabin, 53 Cal. 277, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 789 (790), 96 I.C. 594; Gokhul v. Sheo Prasad, 18 Pat. 459, 20 Pat.L.T. 443, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 433 (F.B.).

The mere acceptance of an overdue instalment cannot constitute a waiver—Mohesh v. Prasanna, 31 Cal. 83; Srinivas v. Sheo Gobind, 20 I.C. 156; Balaji v. Sakharam, 17 Bom. 555; Mumford v. Peal, 2 All. 857; Ballabhdas v. Dalip Singh, 7 N.L.R. 147, 12 I C. 741; Sewakram v. Basod, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 70 (72). In some cases it has been held that the question whether the acceptance of an overdue instalment amounts to a waiver is a question of fact to be determined by the circumstances of the case. See Satrucherla v. Seetarama, 3 Mad. 61, and Kashram v. Pandu, 27 Bom. 1 (F.B.); Yohannan v. Geervarghese, A.I R. 1952 Tra-Co. 29. Thus, when an instalment is paid some days after it becomes due, and it is found that this payment is accepted as one made on account or in satisfaction of that instalment, and not as a mere part payment in reduction of the whole debt, and that the circumstances indicate an intention to waive the forfeiture though there is no express waiver, the acceptance of the amount of that instalment constitutes a waiver within the meaning of this Article—Nagappa v. Ismail, 12 Mad. 192. The Patna High Court has held that acceptance of an overdue instalment amounts to waiver of the default but acceptance of portion of overdue instalment or of the interest only on the overdue instalment does not amount to waiver of the default—Gokhul v. Sheo Prasad, 18 Pat. 459, 20 Pat. L.T. 443, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 433 (F.B.). Payment and acceptance of amounts equivalent to overdue instalments are not sufficient to prove waiver, when such payments are not appropriated to any particular instalments—Tukaram Appa v. Laxman Appa, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 43; 18 N.L.J. 104; 159 I.C. 96. But the payment by the debtor and acceptance by the creditor specifically made towards the satisfaction of a particular defaulted instalment amounts to a waiver of that default—Raghunath v. Warlu, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 947, A.I.R. 1048 Nag. 225; even in the absence of the fresh consideration, a fresh agreement or some thing amounting to an estoppel—Yohannan v. Geevarghese, A.I.R. 1952 Tra-Co. 29. The question whether there is waiver or not depends on the attending circumstances of the act claimed as a waiver in each particular case. Where there is no evidence either that the debtors requested the creditors to excuse the default or that the payment of the overdue amount was accepted as a consequence of waiver, the suit filed more than 3 years from the date of the first default cannot be saved from the bar of limitation by a plea of waiver—Sewakram v. Basod, 144 I.C.

211, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 70 (72), following Vishwanath v. Sadashiv, 28 N.L.R. 44 (F.B.), A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 1 (2). Contra—Chenibash v. Kadum, 5 Cal. 97; Maharaja of Benares v. Nandram, 29 All. 431; Jadab Chandra v. Bhairab Chandra, 31 Cal. 297 (299); Ram Jawaya v. Ram Singh, 2 Lah.L.J. 314. These latter decisions are in accord with the English law as laid down in Norton v. Wood, 1 R. & M. 178, where Lord Lyndhurst observes: "If the money be tendered after the period when it became due, and the person to whom it has been paid does not see fit to refuse it, it is a waiver of the obligation; it must be taken as a regular payment, if the person receives it the day after, without making any objection."

It the creditor pleads payment of an overdue instalment by the debtor, and the payment is found to be false, there is no waiver—Abinash v. Bama, 13 C.W.N. 1010 (1013), 4 I.C. 17. Similarly, if the creditor pleads payment of interest after default, and it is found that no interest has actually been paid by the debtor, there is no waiver. The fact of waiver would be absolutely inconsistent with the plea, when such plea of payment has been found to be false—Sarat Lakshi v. Narendra, 33 C.W.N. 250 (252) A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 292.

Where the plaintiff, who is entitled, in default of payment of a certain sum by the defendant, to receive a much larger sum, receives from the defendant on default being made by him a larger sum than that which was due at the prescribed time but one smaller than that which he was entitled to on default under the agreement, he cannot be said to have waived his right to the larger amount—Nanjappa v. Nanjalla, 12 Mad. 161. If the creditor accepted several irregular payments without objection, he must be taken to have waived his right to enforce the payment of the whole amount—Sakhawat v. Gajadhar, 28 All. 622. A consent not to sue for the bond on failure of payment of an instalment amounts to a waiver—Ram Chander v. Rawatmull, 19 C.W.N. 1172, 31 I.C. 672.

In the absence of waiver, if the creditor fails to sue to recover the whole amount due under the bond, upon the first default being made in the payment of an instalment, he will be debarred from bringing a suit for the later instalments which individually are not time-barred In other words, this Article contemplates that in the absence of a waiver, an instalment bond is to be treated as a bond not permitting instalments for the purposes of limitation—Bankey Lal v. Ram Lal, 12 O.L.J. 112, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 373, 86 I.C. 918.

A creditor cannot be compelled to waive the right he has acquired on the debtor's default—Raghu v Dipchand, 4 Bom. 97; nor can a person in default take advantage of his own wrong; Gulab v. Ganpat, I.L.R. (1943) Nag. 630, 1942 N. L. J. 296, A.I.R. 1942 Nag. 138.

Pleading:—In a case falling under this Article the plaintiff trying to get over the bar of limitation by pleading waiver has to make his pleading specially on the point and support it by cogent evidence. Waiver can not be presumed—Shahaji v. Tukaram, I.L.R. (1945) Nag. 955, 1945 N.L.J. 473, A.I.R. 1946 Nag. 117; Mangli v. Gayaprasad, 22 Luck. 299, 1947 O.W.N. 162, A.I.R. 1947 Oudh 235; Raghunath v. Warlu, I.L.R. (1947) Nag. 947, A.I.R. 1948 Nag. 225. It is a mixed question of law and fact—Mangli v. Gayaprasad, supra; Raghunath v. Warlu, supra and cannot be taken for the first time in revision—Shahaji v. Tukaram, supra, or in appeal—Mangli v. Gayaprasad, supra.

394. Starting point of limitation:—The terminus a quo provided by this Article is the date of first default in the payment of an instalment, and not the date of the last payment of an instalment. Thus, where a bond was payable by instalments with a proviso that the default in payment of one or more instalments shall render the whole debt due forthwith, and the plaint recited the payment of the first two instalments and a default of the third, held that the period of limtation ran not from the date of payment of the second instalment but from the date of non-payment of the third instalment in accordance with the stipulations in the contract. The plaintiff will be required to prove the fact of default of payment of the third instalment; and he will not be required to prove the fact of payment of the second instalment with reference to the provision of sec. 20—Nand Lal v. Akki, 6 Lah. 163, 26 P.L.R. 328, 89 I.C. 294, A I R. 1925 Lah. 394; Probhat Chandra v. Mohesh Chandra, 58 Cal. 615, 52 C.L.J. 591, 130 I.C. 571, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 157 (158). (The ruling in Jawand Lal v. Sharf Din, 35 P R. 1913, 16 I.C. 961 was dissented from in both the above cases). Where this Article applies the starting point of limitation is the date of the first default, or in case of waiver of its benefit, the next default, no matter whether the creditor is given by a contract an option to wait or not to wait. The principle underlying seems to be that the commencement of the period of limitation depends really upon whether the creditor is entitled under the terms of the bond to sue for the whole money due under it and it is not affected by the fact that he has the option not to do so if he likes—Munshi v. Sagar, 1943 A.L.J. 24; such a contract must be deemed to be void under sec. 23 of the Contract Act and cannot therefore alter the stating point of limitation—Bhagwati v. Chitrapal, I.L..R (1946) All. 711, A.I.R. 1947 All. 38, 225 I.C. 122. Where the plaintiff was unwilling to receive the instalments which the defendant was willing and ready to pay, it cannot be said there was any default in payment of the instalments on the part of the defendant—Sitharama v. Krishnasamy, 38 Mad. 374 (383).

Demand:—Where a bond stipulates for payment of a debt by instalments, and in default of payment of any one instalment, for payment of the entire sum on demand by the creditor, the cause of action for recovery of the entire sum would arise when demand is made by the creditor in terms of the stipulation; in such a case the words 'on demand' have the same meaning as "when you require" and do not mean that payment is to be made forthwith or immediately upon default—Karunakaram v. Krishna, 36 Mad. 63; Hanmantram v. Bowles, 8 Bom. 561. The insertion of these words ("on demand") in the instalment bond would imply that the parties deliberately used the expression and intended to make it a condition precedent that a demand should be made if the whole debt is to be paid at once—Seetharam v. Muniswami, 37 M.L.J. 613, 50 I.C. 87. Except in transactions connected with law merchant's words "on demand" have meaning, and there should be a demand before the cause of action arises—Ibid.. But when all the instalments had ceased to run, there could be no question of demand. Thus, where an instalment bond stipulated as above, and a suit was brought within three years of the date of demand, but seven years after all the instalments had ceased to run, it was held that the suit was barred—Kaliappa v. Grigori, 1919 M.W N. 550, 50 I.C. 916. The expression indul talab used in such a bond means 'on demand' and does not confer an option on the creditor to demand the whole amount if there was default in payment of any instalment—Bankey v. Puran, I.L.R. (1944) All. 224. 1944 A.L.J. 251, A.I.R 1944 All. 198.

395. Instalment mortgage bond:—A mortgage bond containing a stipulation for payment by instalments falls under Art. 132—Narna v. Amani, 39 Mad. 981; Lachakkammal v. Sokkaya, 1918 M.W.N. 586, 48 I.C. 191. It has now been authoritatively decided by the Privy Council that in case of instalment mortgage-bonds the mortgagee is at liberty either to sue wthin 12 years from the date of the default, or to wait till the expiry of the term of the mortgage—Lasa Din v. Gulab, 7 Luck. 442 (P.C.). See Note 554A under Art. 132.

Where a mortgage deed provides for payment by instalments with a default clause that in default of payment of any instalment the whole of the balance becomes payable, the mortgagee does not forfeit his right to recover the balance after the expiry of the term of the mortgage, though he might not have taken advantage of the default clause. A suit to enforce the personal remedy under such a bond is governed by this Article read with Article 116 and would be within time if filed within six years from the date fixed for the payment of the last instalment—Amrut v. Pahad, 1941 N.L.J. 649.

Instalment decree:—See Note 719 under Art. 182.

76. On a promissory note given by the maker to a third person to be delivered to the payee after a certain event should happen.	Three years.	The date of the delivery to the payee.

396. The third column of this Article is based on the English case of Savage v. Aldren, (1817) 2 Stark 232. In this case a promissory note was given to bankers to be be delivered to the payee upon his producing and cancelling another note; it was held that time did not run till the note was delivered by the bankers to the payee.

77. On a dishonoured foreign bill, where protest has been made and notice given.	Three years.	When the notice is given.
78. By the payee against the drawer of a bill of exchange which has been dishonoured by non-acceptance.	Three years.	The date of the refusal to accept.

397. Where the suit is really one to recover money alleged to be due on accounts taken between the parties, the circumstance that a hundi and a cheque sent by the defendant to the plaintiff were dishonoured on presentation does not attract the application of this Article—Padmalochan v. Giris Chandra, 46 Cal. 168.

79. By the acceptor of an accommodation bill against the drawer.	Three years.	When the acceptor pays the amount of the bill.

397A. Time runs only when the acceptor actually pays the amount of the bill. The acceptor of an accommodation bill of exchange has an implied engagement from the drawer that he will take up the bill at maturity and indemnify the acceptor; and there is no cause of action till the acceptor is damnified by actual payment—Reynolds v. Doyle, (1840) 1 M. & G. 753; Angrove v. Tippett, (1865)) 11 L.T. 708.

80.	Suit on a bill of exchange, promissory note or bond not herein expressly provided for.	Three years.	When the bill, note or bond becomes payable.

398. Cases:—A suit on an unregistered bond, whereby certain moveable property in the debtor's possession was pledged as security, is governed by this Article—Vitla v. Kalekara, 11 Mad. 153. A bond which stipulates for payment of principal within three years and of interest every half year and provides that in default of such half yearly payments of interest it shall be optional on the part of the creditor to claim full payment of the debt, is not an instalment bond under Art. 75 because a stipulation to pay interest in instalments does not bring a bond within that Article; it belongs to the category of bonds mentioned in Art. 80—Ball v. Stowell, 2 All. 322; Shib Dayal v. Meharban, 45 All. 27 (42) (F.B.), A.I.R. 1923 All. 1. A document which recites "I shall pay you whenever you may demand after you attain the age of majority" is a promissory note; and a suit on the note is governed by Art. 80. Limitation begins to run from the time when there has been a demand after the creditor has attained majority—Kattiassan v. Suppi, 3 M.L.J. 199. Neither Article 78 nor Art. 69 applies to a suit based on a dishonoured hundi payable at a fixed time after date, but which had never been presented for acceptance but only for payment. Such suit is governed by the general Article 80, and the period is to be computed from the time when the bill becomes payable—Ram Chand v. Shadi Ram, 19 P.R. 1888. A bond provided that the money was to be repaid in five years, that interest was to be paid every six months, that in case of non-payment of interest for four six-monthly periods, the creditor would have power to realise the whole of the amount due to him in a lump sum within the fixed period, and that if after the time fixed the amount remained unpaid with the consent of the creditor or for some other reason, then the same condition and rate of interest would be applied and maintained after the time fixed and up to the satisfaction of the amount in full. In a suit to enforce the bond it was held that time ran from the expiry of the period (5 years) fixed for payment and not from the non-payment of two years' interest—Sham Lal v. Theriya, 18 A.L.J. 476, 58 I.C. 278.

Where a bond payable in two years contains a clause providing that the creditor can sue for the full amount either on the failure to pay the monthly interest or on failure to pay the principal amount and default in payment of interest is made, the clause gives an option exclusively in favour of the creditor, who is entitled to the benefit of the investment for the full term originally provided, and need not sue until that term expires even if there is a default in the payment of interest—Mool Chand v. Chittar, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 948.

Where a bond provides that on payment of a certain amount by a fixed date, the creditor will give up the balance and in default of payment by that date the debtor will have to pay the entire amount with compound interest and the debtor fails to pay as stipulated, the starting point of limitation is the day following the date fixed for payment and this Article will apply—Yeshwant v. Laxman, I.L.R. (1938) Nag. 399, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 13, 173 I.C. 463.

A suit on a war-bond is governed by this Article. Time runs when the bond becomes payable; and as by the terms of the bond it is provided that the holder of the bond must present his bond at the place appointed for payment, time does not begin to run until presentment at the specified place has been made—Secretary of State v. Kunhi Krishna, 64 M.L.J. 172, 142 I.C. 286, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 376 (378).

Where a debt incurred on a bond was to be paid within seven years, but it was stipulated that upon failure to pay interest consecutively for two years it was to become payable at once, and there was a default in payment of interest for two years consecutively, held that under the term of the bond, the creditor was entitled to adopt either of the two alternatives, viz., either to recall the whole of the money due thereunder on the happening of default in payment of interest for two consecutive years, or to enforce the bond at the end of seven years; and if the creditor chose not to avail himself of the first remedy but only of the second, the bond became payable within the meaning of this Article, on the expiry of the period of seven years. The debtor has no right to compel the creditor to stick to the shorter term—Hori Lal v. Thamman, 26 O.C. 121, 70 I.C. 85, A.I.R. 1923 Oudh 19, following Durga v. Tota Ram, 16 O.C. 45, 19 I.C. 738. It should be noted that the learned Judge who gave the decision in 26 O.C. 121, gave it reluctantly, following 16 O.C. 45. He was really of opinion that the word 'payable' in Article 80 meant payable at the earliest time, and that the bond in suit became payable on default of payment of two years' interest. And this view has now been taken in a later case of the same Court. In this case a bond provided for repayment of the amount in six months but the interest was to be paid month by month, and in the event of failure to pay interest in one month the creditor was to have the right to file a suit at once for the whole amount, without waiting for the stipulated period of six months. Interest was never paid. Held that the bond became 'payable' on the occurrance of the default in the payment of first month's interest, and that a suit not brought within 3 years from the date of the first default was barred by limitation; the fact that the money was stated in the deed to be payable five months later did not entitle the creditor to ignore the earlier date as the starting point of limitation and select the later one because it suited his convenience better. He was not entitled to waive the right accruing on the first default, because the right of the creditor to waive such right is recognised only by Article 75 and not by any other Article—Pherai v. Pudai, 27 O.C. 318, 1 O.W.N. 647, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 502 (dissenting from 26 O.C. 121 and 16 O.C. 45). This decision has been recently followed in Shiva Narain v. Badal, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 279, 1936 O.W.N. 518, 162 I.C. 459, a remarkably similar case, where it has been pointed out that the starting point of limitation under Art. 80 is the date when the bond becomes payable. "It is clear from the terms of the bond that it became payable as soon as a default was made in the payment of interest. When once the amount becomes payable limitation must begin to run and it cannot be stopped because the bond provides an alternative starting point for limitation. The creditor cannot be allowed to ignore the earlier starting point of limitation because as soon as the money once becomes payable limitation must begin to run irrespective of the wishes and convenience of the creditor. The matter is one the determination of which rests on the terms of the statute and not on wishes or option of the creditor." (280). As regards the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Lasa Din v. Gulab Kunwar, A.I.R. 1932 P.C. 207 it was remarked: "...No doubt the language of the third column of Art. 132 which prescribes the starting point of limitation, is somewhat similar to the language of the correponding clause of Art. 80, yet obviously the consideration which arise in the case of mortgage are quite different from those which are applicable to this case. The mortgagor and the mortgagee have reciprocal rights in the matter of redemption by the mortgagor and enforcement of the mortgage by the mortgagee. But in the case of a bond an obligee may be able to pay up the bond at any time even though the obligor may have no right to enforce payment except after the stipulated period." These cases have been overruled by the same Court in a subsequent Full Bench case where it has been held that such a bond is a single bond, notwithstanding the default clause. The period of limitation does not run from the date of the first default in payment of interest and the whole amount of the bond does not become payable on that date so as there and then to induce the application of this Article—Raghunandan v. Sheoraji, 16 Luck. 464, 1941 O.W.N. 361, A.I.R. 1941 Oudh 210, 193 I.C. 481 (F.B.).

In case of a registered bond falling under this Article, the period of limitation would be six years from the date when the bond becomes payable. See Shib Dayal v. Meherban, 45 All. 27 (42) (F.B.).

If a promissory note is accompanied with a writing postponing the right to sue or postponing the date of payment, the suit is governed by Article 80, and not by Article 73. See 42 All. 55 and 39 Mad. 129 (F.B.) cited under Article 73. In a suit upon a promissory note executed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff Bank, it appeared that it was customary for the Bank to fix a period for payment and that the defendant's application for the loan was in a printed form in which he added the words "for six months' thavanai" and on which the officer of the Bank concerned made an endorsement to the effect that the amount might be lent to the defendant "for six months' thavanai." Held, that the application form with the endorsement therein formed part of the same transaction as the suit-note, and was receivable in evidence for fixing the date of payment of the amount of the note, and that the suit on the note was governed by Article 69 or 80, the starting point of limitation being six months after the date of the note—Ponnusami v. Vellore Commercial Bank, 38 M.L.J. 70, 55 I.C. 384. Where on the very date of execution of a promissory note payable on demand the defendant executes an agreement which recites that if he does not discharge the debt relating to the promissory note before discharging the debt due under a usufructuary mortgage executed in favour of the plaintiff previously, the defendant shall pay the entire amount due under the promissory note along with the debt due under the mortgage and then take delivery of possession of the mortgaged lands, the agreement has the effect of extending the time for payment of the promissory note under this Article within three years after the date of the discharge of the mortgage—Subbmma v. Venkanna, (1950) 1 M.L.J. 161, 1950 M.W.N. 118, A.I.R. 1950 Mad. 749.

81. By a surety against the principal debtor.	Three years.	When the surety pays the creditor.

398A. A suit by the surety against the principal debtor for recovery of moneys paid by the former on behalf of the latter is governed by Article 81 and not by Art. 61—Kunj Lal v. Gulab Ram, 55 P.L.R. 1922, 68 I.C. 365, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 335. A suit by a creditor against the surety being decreed in the Small Cause Court, the surety applied for review, and deposited the amount of the decree under sec. 17 of the Prov. S. C. C. Act. He made the deposit on the 5th September 1919. The application for review was dismissed and on the 21st of April 1920 the creditor withdrew the money. The surety then brought the present suit against the principal debtor on the 20th April 1923. Held that the suit was within time. Under this Article the date on which the creditor was paid was the date on which the creditor actually withdrew the money and not the date when the money had been deposited along with the application for review, because the creditor was not entitled to withdraw the money immediately it was deposited and before the application for review was dismissed—Mahammad Naqi v. Harqu Lal, 82 I.C. 1011, A.I.R. 1925 All. 164. A surety's right of action against the principal debtor is not barred on the ground that the creditor's action against the principal debtor is barred—Considine v. Considine, (1846) 9 Ir. L.R. 400.

82. By a surety against a co-surety.	Three years.	When the surety pays anything in excess of his own share.

399. The right of a surety against a co-surety for contribution can be asserted, notwithstanding that the creditor's right of action against him is barred—Wolmershausen v. Gullick, [1893] 2 Ch. 514. No action can lie by a surety against a co-surety until the latter has paid more than his share of the debt—Davies v. Humphreys, (1840) 6 M. & W. 153 (169).

83. Upon any other contract to indemnify.	Three years.	When the plaintiff is actually damnified.

400. Articles 81 and 83:—From a comparison of Articles 81 and 83 it would seem that Article 81 is confined to cases of loans of money, or where one person is liable for a definite sum which at the time constitutes, or which will at some future time constitute, a debt, and to suits by the surety against the principal debtor, where he (the surety) has himself paid the creditor—Madar v. Ahmed, 98 P.R. 1881. But where the security was given for the due performance of a contract (so that the promisee could only claim damages as distinguished from a debt) and the surety had been compelled to pay such damages, a suit by the surety against the principal debtor to be indemnified for the amount paid would fall under Article 83.

401. Contract to indemnify:—The word "contract" in this Article does not mean an express contract; it would include both express and implied contracts —Ram Barat v. Sheodani, 16 C.W.N. 1040, 16 I.C. 73; Mst. Mehdatunnisa v. Mst. Halimathunnissa, 17 Pat. 751, 1939 P.W.N. 361, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 194; Tilakram v. Surat, I.L.R. (1938) All. 500, 1938 A.L.J. 455, A.I.R. 1938 All. 297 (F.B.). See also Shanti Sarup v. Janak Singh, A.I.R. 1958 All. 170 (F.B.).

It has been held by the Madras High Court that the obligation of a principal to indemnify an agent under section 222 of the Contract Act is not a "contract to indemnify" within the meaning of this Article—Kandasami v. Avayammal, 34 Mad. 167 (171). But the Lahore High Court holds that the right of an agent to be reimbursed by his principal in respect of losses sustained or expenses incurred by the agent in transactions entered into by the agent on behalf of the principal is a direct consequence of the contractual relationship of principal and agent, and a suit to enforce that right is governed by this Article and not by Art. 61—Manghi Ram v. Ramsaran Das, 23 P.R. 1915, 100 P.L.R. 1915, 26 I.C. 415 (dissenting from 34 Mad. 167); Ganesh Das v. Narsingh, 30 P.L.R. 35, 115 I.C. 767; Bhagwan Das v. Mutsaddi, 12 Lah. 190, 31 P.L.R. 666, 128 I.C. 306, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 392 (393). The same view has been taken by the Calcutta High Court in Upendra v. Bimalendu, I.L.R. (1944) 2 Cal. 283, 48 C.W.N. 317, A.I.R. 1944 Cal. 302. A suit for the recovery of the money due on account of the value of goods supplied by the plaintiff as commission agent to the defendants is governed by Article 83—Sarab Dial v. Devi Ditta, 59 P.L.R. 1918, 46 I.C. 541 (542). Plaintiffs were commission agent. At the request of the defendants they purchased some goods for them and paid the price out of their own pocket. Subsequently they sold the goods at a loss and instituted the present suit for the recovery of the loss. Held that the suit was governed by this Article, and time ran when the plaintiffs purchased the goods and made payment on behalf of the principals, and not from the date when they sold the goods at a loss—Kripa Ram v. Sawan Mal, 29 P.L.R. 60, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 826 (827), 106 I.C. 40; Bhagat v. Harjas, 112 I.C. 719, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 424 (425); Kadari Pershad v. Har Bhagwan, 3 Lah L.J. 65, 66 I.C. 900, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 167. A suit to recover the losses alleged by the plaintiffs to have been sustained by them in certain dealings in some articles of trade which they undertook as commission agents on behalf of the defendants, is not a suit for money payable on accounts stated between the parties under Art. 64, but a suit governed by Article 83—Munshi Ram v. Bhagwan, 27 P.L.R. 32, 92 I.C. 595, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 152. An undertaking by a second mortgagee to pay off a prior mortgage cannot be held to be a contract of indemnity in the absence of an express provision in the deed of mortgage to the second mortgagee to indemnify the mortgagor—Keshwar v. Guni, 17 Pat. 338, 19 Pat.L.T. 198, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 275, 176 I.C. 269. Where, however, in such a case the prior mortgagee obtains a decree against the mortgagor and the mortgagor pays the amount of decree after the institution of his suit against the subsequent mortgagee for damages for breach of the covenant the mortgagor can not seek protection under this Article, he having suffered no actual loss on the date of the suit—Gauri v. Nathi, A.I.R. 1951 All. 589.

A man who is entrusted with a certain sum of money with instructions to pay it to another person to whom the person paying the money is liable, keeps the money at his peril. If he fails to pay it or delays payment beyond a reasonable time, he is liable for damages as for a breach of contract to the extent of the loss which the person depositing the money has suffered by reason of such failure or delay, and a suit to enforce the security or for damage resulting from the delay falls under Article 83, and must be filed within 3 years of the date of actual injury—Kedar Nath v. Har Govind, 24 A.L.J. 550, 95 I.C. 913, A.I.R. 1926 All. 605. Where a party by his contract undertook to pay money to a third person, and he not having paid, the person to whom the money should have been paid sued the original debtor and recovered the money, a suit brought by the last named (plaintiff) for loss or damage fell under this Article, and time ran not from the date of the breach of contract, (i.e., not from the date when the money ought to have been paid by the defendant to the third person), because the plaintiff was not actually damnified at that time; but time ran when the creditor recovered the money from the plaintiff, i.e., when the plaintiff suffered loss—Ram Ratan v. Abdul Wahid, 49 All. 603, 101 I.C. 691, A.I.R. 1927 All. 435; Rajbunshi v. Bishundeo, 10 Pat. 451, 132 I.C. 104, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 271 (273). Where the plaintiff vendor has actually been damnified in consequence of a breach of agreement by the vendee to a sale deed the suit comes under Art. 83. Thus, where a vendee who was required to pay off the vendor's incumbrances out of the purchase money, failed to do so, and the vendor had to pay off the incumbrances out of his own pocket, a suit by the vendor for relief against the vendee is governed by Art 83 read with Art. 116 (the covenant to pay off the mortgage being contained in a registered sale-deed), and time ran from the date when the vendor himself had to pay the money, that being the date when he was actually damnified—Gulzari v. Magho Mal, 14 Lah. 380, 141 I.C. 435, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 109 (111); Abdul Kadir v. Bilas, 14 Lah. 646, 144 I.C 362, A I.R. 1933 Lah. 793; Kunwar Unkar v. Kashi Prasad, 55 All. 490, 1933 A.L.J. 787, 143 I.C. 821, A.I.R. 1933 All. 386 (388); Valiyakath v. Govinda, A.I.R 1936 Mad. 655; Mst. Mehdatunnissa v. Mst. Halimathunnissa, 17 Pat. 751, 1939 P.W.N. 361, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 194; Tilakram v. Surat, I.L.R. (1938) All. 500, 1938 A.L.J. 455, A.I.R. 1938 All. 297 (F.B.); Kartar v. Sant, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 321.

The plaintiff executed a bond in favour of U and borrowed money of which the defendant had the whole benefit. A suit brought by U against the plaintiff for the money was compromised, and the plaintiff had to pay the money in terms of the compromise. A suit by the plaintiff against the defendant for the recovery of money paid by the plaintiff under the compromise was a suit on a contract to indemnify under this Article—Girraj v. Mulchand, 29 All. 627.

Where in a suit for declaration that the property attached in execution of a decree does not belong to the judgment-debtor an undertaking is given by the defendant (decree-holder) to indemnify the plaintiff after auction sale if it is found that the property belongs to the plaintiff, a suit by the plaintiff after his title has been found for price of the property sold is governed by this Article as the cause of action for the suit is the undertaking to indemnify—Haji v. Abdul, 39 P.L.R. 948, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 196, 175 I.C. 630.

Where the covenant to indemnify is contained in a registered instrument, the suit will be governed by Article 116 read with Article 83—Tilak v. Surat, supra; Mst. Mehdatunnissa v. Mst. Halimathunnissa, supra; Kartar v. Sant, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 321. Thus, A and B exchanged lands under a registered deed which contained a clause to the effect that there was no dispute in respect of the said lands, and that if disputes should arise, the respective party should be answerable to the extent of his private property. A was deprived of some of the lands he got by the exchange, and he sued B on the aforesaid covenant, for the value of the lands of which he was dispossessed. It was held that the suit fell within Article 116 read with Art. 83 of the Limitation Act (and not under Article 113), and was in time if brought within six years from the date of the deprivation, although more than six years after the date to the exchange—Srinivasa v. Rangasami, 31 Mad. 452. Similarly, one S sold certain immoveable property under a registered sale-deed. The consideration money was Rs. 3,900, out of which Rs. 2,000 was to be paid by the vendees to a mortgagee, and in the event of the mortgage money being in excess of Rs. 2,000, S was to be liable for such excess. The vendees were forced to sue the mortgagee for redemption, and obtained a decree on 21st July 1911 on paymnt of Rs. 3,100. This payment was made on 5th December 1911, and on 20th July 1916 the vendees brought the present suit against S for recovery of Rs. 1,000 as well as the costs of the redemption suit. Held that suit fell under Article 116 read with Article 83, and time ran from the date when the plaintiffs were actually damnified, i.e., on 5th December 1911, when the payment was actually made by the plaintiff, and that the suit was within time—Abdul Aziz v. Md. Bakhsh, 2 Lah. 316, A.I.R. 1921 Lah. 260, 64 I.C. 431. Where a major portion of the sale consideration is left with the vendee for payment to the various creditors of the vendor and the vendee commits default, a suit by the vendor against the vendee for loss occasioned by the default is in substance a suit for damages for breach of a contract of indemnity and is governed by this Article read with Article 116. Time runs from the date on which the vendor is actually damnified—Kartar v. Sant, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 321. As regards vendee's implied contract to indemnify the vendor under a registered sale-deed, see 14 Lah. 380, 14 Lah. 646, and 55 All. 490, supra.

This Article applies only to personal contracts of indemnity. Where in addition to the contract of indemnity, a charge is created, the suit will be governed by Article 132, and not by this Article—Rangasami v. Kuppusami, 1921 M.W.N. 472, 66 I.C. 554, A.I.R. 1921 Mad. 514. Where a property subject to a charge is sold in execution, the purchaser impliedly undertakes to indemnify the owner against the incumbrances affecting the property, and if by the default of the purchaser any loss is caused to the owner by any proceedings taken by the incumbrancer, then the purchaser is bound to indemnify him. A suit to enforce this implied contract of indemnity is governed by Article 132 and not by this Article—Rama Rayanimayar v. Venkatalingam, 57 Mad. 218, 66 M.L.J. 4, 149 I.C. 379, A.I.R. 1934 Mad. 1 (7).

402. Commencement of limitation:—Under a contract of indemnity, the the cause of action arises when the damage which the indemnity is to cover is suffered —Reynolds v. Doyale, (1840) 1 M. & G. 753; Shankar v. Laxman, 42 Bom.L.R. 175, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 161, 188 I.C. 663. Thus under an express contract to indemnify a party to litigation against costs, the cause of action arises upon the actual payment of costs by such party, and not when the costs were incurred or the solicitor's bill was delivered—Collinge v. Heywood, (1839) 9 A. & E. 633. Similarly, under an implied promise to indemnify, time runs from actual loss—Huntley v. Sanderson, (1833) 1 Cr. & M. 467. The assignee of a lease is under an implied obligation, in the absence of an express covenant, to indemnify the assignor for breach of covenants, and in a suit by the assignor against the assignee to recover the damages paid by him (assignor) to the original lessor, limitation runs only from the time when the plaintiff was actually damnified, i.e., when damages were actually recovered from him by the original lessor —Pepin v. Chunder Seekur, 5 Cal. 811. Where a portion of the mortgaged property was sold subject to the mortgage, but the buyer having failed to pay off the mortgage, the mortgagee sued on his mortgage and the whole of the mortgaged property was sold in execution of the mortgage decree, and the seller was dispossessed of the lands which had been retained by him, a suit by the seller for damages against the buyer was governed by this Article, and time ran from the date when the seller was actually damnified, viz., the date of dispossession—Ram Barat v. Sheodeni, 16 C.W.N. 1040, 16 I.C. 73. See also 49 All. 603 and 14 Lah. 380 cited in Note 401. Where a mortgage, which is not validly registered contains a covenant for payment by the mortgagee to a prior mortgagee and no date is fixed for such payment, the default in payment by the mortgagee must be taken to have occurred on the very day on which the mortgage is executed; and the express covenant to pay is turned, after its breach, into an implied covenant to pay to the mortgagor himself and a breach of it gives rise to the cause of action to the mortgagor at once—Gauri v. Nathu, A.I R. 1951 All. 589.

A suit by the Municipal Committee upon a bond executed by the defendant to reimburse the Committee in case of loss caused to it by the conduct of certain bill-collector is governed by this Article and the time runs from the date when the Municipal Committee is actually damnified, that is, the date of enbezzlement by the collector—Municipal Committee v. Vishnu, I.L.R. (1948) Nag. 350, 1948 N.L.J. 594, A.I.R. 1949 Nag. 48.

A suit for money by A against B was compromised under which B and another agreed to pay a sum of money to A, but as they had no money to pay on that date and as A was not prepared to accept a promise from B, it was arranged that one C, on behalf of B, should execute a promissory note in favour of A, which was accordingly done. C paid off the amount to A, and sued B for the amount. The suit was brought more than 3 years from the date of the promissory note, but within 3 years from the date of payment by C to A under the hand-note. It was held that the suit was not governed by Art. 61 but by Art. 83, and was consequently not barred by limitation—Rangappa v. Venkatasami, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 334, 70 M.L.J. 537, 163 I.C. 177.

Claim to indemnity by way of set-off:—When a suit is brought for the recovery of the price of goods supplied (the contract for supply of goods being evidenced by a deed containing a clause for indemnifying the defendants in case of default in supplying goods at the time fixed), and the defendants claim damages for irregular supply of goods, by way of set-off, limitation in respect of the set-off will run up to the date of the suit by the plaintiff, and not up to the date on which the set-off is claimed by the defendants—Pragi v. Maxwell, 7 All. 284.

84. By an attorney or vakil for his costs of a suit or a particular business, there being no express agreement as to the time when such costs are to be paid.	Three years.	The date of the termination of the suit or business, or (where the attorney or vakil properly discontinues the suit or business) the date of such discontinuance.

403. Scope:—This Article applies only to suits; it does not apply to an application by an attorney for enforcement of payment of costs by a summary order of the High Court, under the High Court Rules. Such an application is not governed by any other Article, so that it is exempt from the law of limitation; even Article 181 does not apply because it is not an application under the Civil Procedure Code —Abba Haji Ishmail v. Abba Thara, 1 Bom. 253; Wadia v. Purshotam, 32 Bom. 1; Narendra Lal v. Tarubala, 48 Cal. 817, 25 C.W.N. 800. 66 I.C. 209. But although such applications are not governed by any special rule of limitation, still a discretion should be exercised by the Court in allowing such applications, when a question of lapse of time is raised. Since the High Court Rule provides an alternative relief by suit, it is just and proper that the time limit of such applications should be the time allowed for such suit, viz., the time allowed by this Article—Lakhimani v. Dwijendra, 46 Cal. 249 (253), 23 C.W.N. 473, 51 I.C. 941; Attormani v. Ramesh Chunder, 52 C.L.J. 147, 129 I.C. 787, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 651 (652).

Though the word "suit" may include execution proceedings as well as an appeal also, this meaning cannot be imported into this Article where the word "suit" seems to be used in its ordinary and not technical sense in which a layman would understand it—Venkatarama v. Zamindar of Sivagiri, (1947) 1 M.L.J. 173, 1947 M.W.N. 151, A.I.R. 1948 Mad. 457.

An application under section 24 of Patents and Designs Act XV of 1859 is a "business" within the meaning of this Article—Watkins v. Fox, 22 Cal. 943 (949). So also the drawing up of a conveyance, the registering of a deed or will, the registering of a company,—these are instances of business done by an attorney or vakil.

404. Termination of suit:—A solicitor who is retained to prosecute or defend an action enters into an entire contract to carry on the proceedings until the action is finally terminated, and he cannot sue for his costs until that time has arrived—Harris v. Osborne, (1834) 2 C. & M. 629; Whitehead v. Lord, (1852) 7 Ex. 691. The termination of a suit is the date when judgment is given by the Court in which the suit was commenced—Balkrishna v. Govind, 7 Bom. 518; Watkins v. Fox, 22 Cal. 943; Rothery v. Munnings, (1830) 1 B. & Ad. 15. But in many proceedings in the High Court Original Side, of which administration suits are an example, the termination of the suit is not the date of the final decree; and the time from which the period of limitation for an attorney's suit for costs begins to run is the issue of the allocatur at the earliest—Attormani v. Ramesh Chunder, 52 C.L.J. 197, 129 I.C. 787, A.I.R. 1930 Cal. 651 (652). When an appeal is brought, and the same Vakil or Attorney continues to conduct the suit in appeal, that will be a cotinuation of the original suit, and time will not run until the deposal of the appeal—Harris v. Quine, (1869) L.R. 4 Q.B. 653 (658). See also 36 Cal. 609 (614) (where the attorney acted in the suit as well as in the appeal). But see Venkatarama v. Zamindar of Sivagiri, supra. An action for costs may be brought within 3 years of the termination of the suit, and the fact that certain items in the bill of costs are more than three years old, is immaterial. See Martindale v. Falkner, (1846) 2 C.B. 706.

Execution proceedings are not part of a suit. A suit can ordinarily be said to terminate when there is nothing more to be done in it except execution. The fact that the attorney may have to appear in execution proceedings cannot postpone his right of action for costs which arises as soon as the judgment is passed—Administrator-General v. Chunder Cant, 22 Cal. 952 (Note).

Proceedings taken in connection with the taxation of the costs are not part of the suit in which the attorney was engaged; the suit terminates as soon as the judgment is delivered, and the period of limitation for an action by the attorney for the recovery
